France, Russia pledge 'no' votes

BY KAREN DEYOUNG AND COLUM LYNCH
WASHINGTON POST

British officials sought urgently Monday to retool a U.N. Security Council resolution authorizing war against Iraq after a majority of council members indicated they would not vote for it in its current form, diplomats and Bush administration officials said.

Britain hopes that additions to the resolution, which declares Iraq has failed in its final opportunity to fully and immediately surrender its weapons of mass destruction, will garner nine of the 15 council votes necessary for passage. Diplomats engaged in near round-the-clock negotiations at U.N. headquarters in New York, in visits to capitals and in lengthy telephone consultations.

But it was not at all certain that the proposed changes, including an extension of the resolution's March 17 deadline and the addition of "benchmarks" to judge Iraqi disarmament, would win a council majority. The resolution appeared doomed in any case, as France and Russia, permanent council members with veto power, said Monday that no revision would satisfy them. "Whatever happens, France will vote no," President Jacques Chirac told reporters in a domestic television interview. In Moscow, Russian Foreign Minister Igor Ivanov said that the resolution contains "unfulfillable ultimatum-type demands" and that Russia would vote against it. But British Prime Minister

UI's plan on moving plants creates furor

BY JESSE HELLING
THE DAILY IOWAN

The presence of the UI Herbarium was a principle factor in sophomore Tom Madsen's decision to attend the university. A native of Iowa City, the environmental-science major has worked to locate populations of rare and endangered plants in Eastern Iowa for years. But now, the university's $3.75 million collection of 250,000 plant specimens — the oldest in the state — is being slated for a transfer to Iowa State University sometime next year, pending a grant to build shelving to store the specimens.

"Personally, I feel demoralized," said Madsen, who makes daily visits to the Herbarium. "I've donated so much time to gather specimens ... I feel like it's been thrown away." Area residents and researchers vexed by the vegetation relocation hope to persuade the new UI administration to revisit the issue, but President David Skorton said Monday he does not intend to overturn the decision made by his predecessor, Mary Sue Coleman.

Established in the late 1860s, the Herbarium is home to

'This project is more than just an academic exercise for me' Getting personal about child labor

Chivy Sok, the deputy director of the UI Center for Human Rights, speaks about child labor in the International Center on Monday.

BY ANNIE SHUPPY
THE DAILY IOWAN

Educating the world about the horrors of child labor is personal for one UI official, the director of a $1.2 million child-labor research project in Iowa City. Chivy Sok spent roughly three and a half years in a child-labor camp under the Khmer Rouge in Cambodia. Between the ages of 6 and 10, Sok was separated from her family and spent her days toiling in a rice field beginning at dawn, often coming home in the evening to just a small bowl of rice. Now the deputy director of the UI Center for Human Rights, Sok is overseeing an initiative to create a comprehensive database of legislation related to child labor in 25 countries. "This project is more than just an academic exercise for me," she said. "It's a culmination of my life within the past 20 years. It's easy to just sort of read statistics, but it's another thing to be in the markets and see face-to-face the reality of child labor," she said Monday in a presentation at the International Center. The project will also prepare a collection of essays on child-labor issues and develop a series of courses to advance understanding about child labor throughout the world. The U.S. Department of Labor has provided the project's funding, which Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, helped secure. According to an estimate by the International Labor Organization in 2000, approximately 246 million children between ages 5 and 17 work in exploitative and abusive conditions worldwide. Some of the countries targeted to study include China, El Salvador, and Sok's native Cambodia, where many poor families depend on their children for additional income, she said. At age 10, Sok was reunited with her family and relocated to a refugee camp for a year

Eckhardt to take over as next editor of DI

BY CALVIN HENNING
THE DAILY IOWAN

Student Publications Inc. announced on Monday it had selected Megan Eckhardt to be the next editor of The Daily Iowan.

The UI junior from Ankeny, a Daily Iowan metro editor, has previously worked as a reporter and paginator for the publication. Eckhardt, who has aspired to be editor since she came to the UI in the fall of 2000 on a Daily Iowan scholarship, said she is "very excited" to take the reins. She complimented current Editor Ryan Foley's work on the paper and said she looked forward to continuing and expanding on his focus on in-depth and issues-based coverage.

Eckhardt editor-select

"I have a good understanding of how a newsroom should work because of him," she said. In addition, Eckhardt plans some minor design changes as well as the creation of an advisory board composed of UI students, faculty, and Iowa City residents. Foley called the position "a pretty awesome responsibility" that Eckhardt is well-equipped to handle. "She's well-rounded," he said, singling out Eckhardt's experience with writing, editing, and page design.

Foley said the position will be especially important in the coming year as The Daily Iowan prepares to move into the new journalism building and world events continue to be tumultuous.

"It's an important time to be in journalism," he said. As editor, Eckhardt will work between 40-45 hours a week, heading a staff of approximately 75 part-time student employees. She will oversee an editorial budget of $326,000, including $210,000 in salaries and $22,000 in travel expenses.

The Daily Iowan is run by Student Publications Inc., a not-for-profit board made up of UI faculty, staff, students, and journalism professionals. Although The Daily Iowan is independent of the university, it does receive approximately $300,000 of its $2.1 million budget from student fees, which pays half of the annual printing bill. The Daily Iowan is the only college newspaper in the nation to deliver directly to students' doors. UI law student Kelly Wilson, the chairwoman of Student Publications Inc., said Eckhardt was not guaranteed the spot just because she was the sole applicant.

"Even though Megan was the only applicant, she demonstrated her commitment to The Daily Iowan," said Wilson, a former metro editor at the paper. "She possesses leadership skills and is truly committed to journalism." Before making its decision, the board asked Eckhardt a series of questions about how she would act as editor. "She showed us that she will not only be able to handle it, but she will excel at it," Wilson said. Eckhardt will assume her new duties, one of the most powerful student positions on campus, on June 1 and will be paid approximately $13,000 for her one-year term.

Family of implant patient gives back to UI

BY LAURA JENSEN
THE DAILY IOWAN

When Donna Dane received a cochlear implant at the UI Hospitals and Clinics in the fall of 2001, her parents decided it was time to give back. Iowa City residents John and Allie Dane donated a portion of their 235-acre Clinton County farm to the UI Foundation to benefit cochlear-implant research at the university. The Danes have five children, four of whom suffer hearing loss because of genetic auditory-nerve problems. Donna Dane is the only one who is profoundly deaf, but since the cochlear implant, she estimates her ability to discern words has shot up approximately 75 percent. John Dane said that he began talking to Bruce Gantz, the head of the UI otolaryngology department, about his research after his daughter's operation. "Dr. Gantz told me that he thought it might be possible to cure nerve deafness," John Dane said. "I was very excited and wanted to be a part of it." The 40-acre plot of land in Goose Lake, Iowa, was sold for $115,000 on Dec. 14, 2002, establishing the John Dane Family Cochlear Implant Research Fund. The remaining 195 acres of the land was donated to Iowa State Bank & Trust to set up a charitable remainder trust, money that will also eventually benefit auditory research at the university. Money in the fund will go toward the Iowa Center for Auditory Regeneration — a new research center being planned by Gantz and colleagues — at the UI Hospitals and Clinics. "I am pleased to be a part of what Dr. Gantz is doing, and I think this is a win-win situation," John Dane said. # Hillcrest misses a few in inspection

Health inspectors order facility to install new sink

BY JAMES BAETKE
DAILY IOWAN

UI officials say they are correcting procedures after a November 2002 health inspection at Hillcrest Marketplace revealed unsatisfactory food temperatures and problems maintaining the sanitary sink and hand-washing areas.

Documents from the Johnson County Department of Public Health show that the campus cafeteria needed improvement on three "critical items" and incurred four other less-significant infractions. However, officials note that Hillcrest has always passed twice-yearly health evaluations and now has a clean bill of health.

The Hillcrest Marketplace is continuing to complete required health corrections, said Rene Buck, the cafeteria's food-service manager.

"Hillcrest and Burge food service have outstanding records and have had near-perfect evaluations over the past years," said Campus Food Service Director Greg Black.

In November, health inspectors measured grated cheese and sour cream at 41 degrees Fahrenheit, falling into the "hazardous temperature range" and placing them under the "critical items" category, the report showed. Inspectors also witnessed an employee "using unwashed hands to handle clean utensils coming out of the utensil washer" located in the back area of the cafeteria. Utensils are classified as cookware, including pots and pans, health officials said.

The third "critical item" was an employee observed washing his hands with contaminated gloves on. Buck said the employee forgot to take off contaminated gloves before washing.

The health department warned that Hillcrest would lose its license if a new sink was not installed in the utensil-washing area by May 20. The purpose of the sink is to prevent the transmission of food-borne pathogens and to minimize cross-contamination.

Though details of its expense and installation have not been clarified, Black said the sink will be in place by the deadline.

In addition, inspectors found that a sanitation bucket blocked the use of a sink at the salad station and that soap was absent in a nearby dispenser. Paper towels were absent in the hand-washing sink in the salad prep room, and the automatic control on that sink was not operating properly, the report shows.

Buck said the inspection has been taken seriously, and since the findings, the Marketplace has made corrections to comply with health standards.

"[The report's findings are] nothing out of the ordinary, but it's something we have to be concerned about," he said.

David Wagner, a county environmental-health specialist who administered the report, said UI Food Service food is "always fresh" and is comparable with restaurants in Johnson County. He added that it is difficult to prevent everything and there has been no obvious increase in problems in the Hillcrest cafeteria. Food Service is very sanitary, partly because of the advanced equipment used to prepare food, he said.

Serving approximately 20,000 meals per week, Hillcrest Marketplace employs approximately 140 people. Employees, depending on their status, are subject to on-the-job training, are given an employee handbook, and view a video on food sanitation. Reports show that Burge cafeteria passed a December 2002 inspection with no infractions.

Woman charged with child endangerment

A Lone Tree woman who turned herself in to authorities Monday for allegedly smoking marijuana in the presence of her children said she used the drug to self-medicate.

Juanita Marie Walker, 48, was charged with child endangerment and possession of a schedule I controlled substance after her children reportedly told Lone Tree school authorities last month that their mom used drugs in their home.

Steve Hayslett of the Johnson County Sheriff's Office said Walker voluntarily came to the county courthouse Monday, 10 days after state Department of Human Services called the sheriff to her residence upon allegedly finding an undisclosed amount of marijuana.

Court records show the Feb. 28 investigation started after Lone Tree school authorities notified Human Services that Walker's children said she used drugs in the residence.

Walker allegedly admitted to authorities to buying and smoking the marijuana to alleviate an undisclosed medical condition, court records show.

Hayslett said he did not know the age or number of children who were living with Walker at the time of the investigation.

Med-school officials pitch new insurance plan

BY JOHN MOLSEED
THE DAILY IOWAN

The state Board of Regents will decide this week whether the UI's Carver College of Medicine will get the state's help in a self-insurance malpractice policy.

Under the proposed plan, the college would incur the cost of any claim up to $5 million, with the state providing coverage for a claim exceeding that amount.

Medical-school administrators contend that private insurance coverage is no longer affordable.

The college's previous carrier, St. Paul, stopped carrying malpractice insurance in January. The Minnesota-based firm provided coverage at less than a $700,000 premium, covering all 600 of the state-employed doctors at slightly more than $1,000 per physician. Dennis Domsic, the medical school's associate dean for finance, said similarly affordable coverage would be hard to find on the private market.

"Insurance in an affordable manner was not available," he said. "Insurance companies priced the product to play the odds and make a profit."

The college had a $1.5 million deductible when the St. Paul plan ended. No claims reached that level since 1976 — when St. Paul started covering the college.

Any claims against the medical school that were less than the $1.5 million were paid by the college's Faculty Practice Plan, a fund generated by patient care and research revenue at the school.

"We were basically self-insured anyway," Domsic said.

Money for doctors, support-staff salaries, and academic programs comes from the Faculty Practice Plan. Any insurance premium also comes from the fund. Paying claims directly from the fund would actually cost the college less than paying an insurance premium, Domsic said.

"St. Paul kicked in very little money over the last 10 years," said compliance officer Dan Fick. "Even though the premium was very low, we paid in about 10 times the amount what we got out."

The most reasonable plan administrators found charged an annual premium of $3 million — more than four times that of the St. Paul plan.

Under the self-insurance proposal, the state would protect the college's individual employees under the Iowa Code's tort-claims act, which provides liability protection to all state employees. Under tort laws, claims are normally handled directly by the Iowa Attorney General's Office.

When the medical school had private insurance, it retained malpractice lawyers who worked with the Attorney General's Office on any claims. The new plan allows the school to retain the attorneys, saving the state money and the hassle of dealing with malpractice cases.

Regents President Owen Newlin said the proposal looks like a good deal for both the state and the medical school.

If approved, the proposal would be retroactive to Jan. 1 and continue until June 2004. Regents will re-approve the plan annually after that, Fick said.

U.S. ready to revise troubled Iraq measure

BY BARRY SCHWEID
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Adopting a two-pronged strategy to avert a U.N. defeat, the Bush administration once again portrayed Iraq as in violation of international demands it disarm but signaled a willingness to revise its troubled resolution endorsing the use of force.

As new evidence to condemn Saddam Hussein as a deceptive cheat, Secretary of State Colin Powell and his spokesman cited the development of drone airplanes and cluster bombs, both capable of spreading chemicals. Powell said the world should be concerned.

Hoping to win the support of U.N. Security Council fence-sitters, U.S. and British diplomats consulted with them on extending the March 17 deadline proposed on March 7 for Iraq to disclose and eliminate all its hidden weapons of mass destruction.

In the process, a vote that had been planned for today was postponed at least until later in the week. White House spokesman Ari Fleischer described consultations on the March 17 deadline as "fluid."

President Bush and Powell pressed their diplomacy to secure at least the minimally required nine votes for adoption of the resolution. The foreign minister of Guinea, François Fall, said after a luncheon meeting with Powell that Guinea and other council members were "in intensive consultations in order to find a compromise."

State Department spokesman Richard Boucher confirmed that revising the tough resolution in a bid to gain support was being considered.

"We are obviously listening to other governments as we talk to them, and we'll see where we come out on this. At this point, I don't want to predict anything either way," Boucher said.

Still, opposition by France and Russia loomed as huge hurdles for the resolution, devised jointly by the United States, Britain, and Spain.

In Paris, French President Jacques Chirac said France was prepared to veto the resolution, if necessary, and he joined Russia in saying the two nations would vote against a March 17 deadline.

While today had not been officially set as the date for a vote on the resolution U.S. officials made clear it was the intention.

Signaling a change in timing, Fleischer declined to predict when the resolution would be taken up. "It certainly could be any day later than [today]," he said.

Powell, meanwhile, voiced concern over the discovery that Iraq has unmanned drone aircraft capable of dispensing chemical weapons.

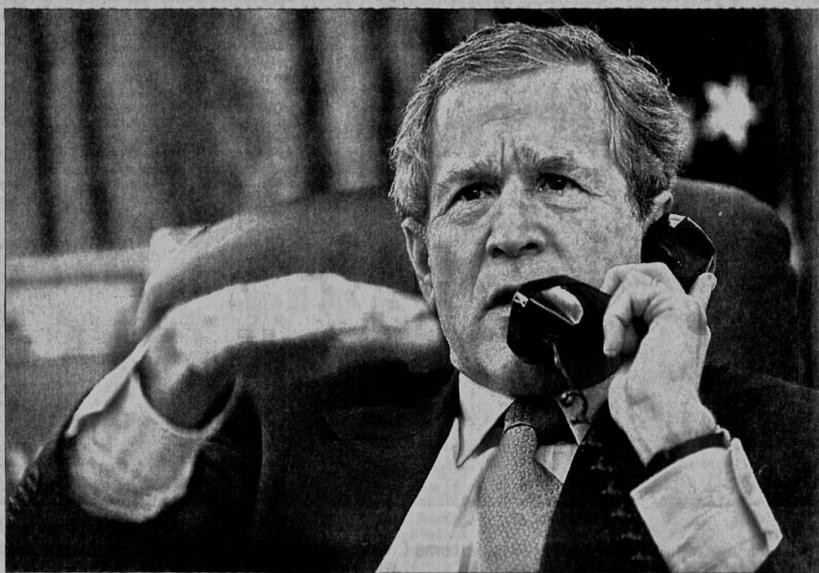

Disclosure last week by U.N. weapons inspectors that Iraq had such aircraft "should be of concern to everybody," Powell said. "This and other information shows Iraq has not changed."

Iraq also has developed a version of a South African cluster bomb that could disperse chemical weapons over a target, Boucher said.

Iraq has said that it has destroyed all chemical warheads.

Bush, meanwhile worked the telephone to stave off a U.N. Security Council defeat. He spoke by telephone to eight world leaders, the biggest burst of telephone calls since October 2001, when he marshaled support for the U.S. military campaign against the Taliban rulers of Afghanistan.

Bush talked to Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi, Chinese President Jiang Zemin, South African President Thabo Mbeki, Sultan Qaboos of Oman, Prime Minister Jose Maria Aznar of Spain, Turkish governing party leader Recep Tayyip Erdogan, President Abdoulaye

Eric Draper, White House/Associated Press

Wade of Senegal, and President Olusegun Obasanjo of Nigeria.

Besides Fall, Powell spoke to Presidents Pervez Musharraf of Pakistan and Jose Eduardo dos Santos of Angola, Foreign Minister Luis Ernesto Derbez of Mexico, British Foreign Secretary Jack Straw, and Spanish Foreign Minister Ana Palacio.

In Iraq, U.S. and British aircraft dropped 240,000 leaflets near Iraqi anti-aircraft artillery batteries warning "do not track or fire on coalition aircraft."

On the other side of the leaflets was a warning that "any hostile action by Iraqi air defenses toward coalition aircraft will be answered by immediate retaliation."

GOP takes aim at regulations

BY DAVID PITT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Republicans said the numerous regulatory changes they proposed on Monday will improve the state's business climate, but Democrats vowed to block them.

Included is a cap on damages awarded for pain and suffering in lawsuits, eliminating 13 weeks of unemployment automatically granted after factory closings, shortening Iowa's endangered species list, and limiting construction contracts on public projects.

"Any economic-growth plan we consider this year won't produce the high-paying jobs this state desperately needs unless we also make needed regulatory reforms," said Senate Majority Leader Stewart Iverson, a Dows Republican.

He said the state's regulations are outdated and a barrier to economic growth.

But Sen. Joe Bolkom, an Iowa City Democrat, called the plan "yesterday's approach to creating a positive business climate."

He said to improve the business climate the state needs to attract people who have left Iowa and stop young people from leaving.

"We need to create more livable cities and a more tolerant and diverse environment for our youngsters who want to go to Kansas City, St. Louis, or Minneapolis," he said. "Once we keep well-educated young people here, businesses will stay here, flourish, and come here because we'll have a skilled, happy work force."

The Republican plan would place a $250,000 cap on the amounts juries could award for non-economic damages in civil cases, including medical-malpractice cases. It would make an exception for "especially egregious conduct."

The Republican leaders said 23 states have such a cap.

"This comprehensive plan with help improve Iowa's business climate so that we're more competitive with our neighboring states," said House Speaker Christopher Rants, R-Sioux City.

The bill also would prohibit an employee from collecting worker's compensation benefits for a previous work-related injury if the worker applies for benefits for a more recent injury, a proposal that was vetoed last year by Gov. Tom Vilsack.

The Republicans also said they would end the automatic extension of 13 weeks of unemployment Iowa workers receive, saying workers would have to apply for the additional benefits individually. The plan also includes a one-week waiting period before unemployment benefits can start.

Many of the changes have drawn criticism from Democrats in past sessions.

Senate Minority Leader

Michael Gronstal, D-Council Bluffs, said the bill does little but restrict workers' rights and dredge up ideas that have been rejected before.

"What is the point? I thought this session was supposed to be about areas of agreement, not areas of disagreement. That bill is dead on arrival," he said.

Republicans countered that the proposals were geared toward ensuring that Iowa workers have a job to go to.

"Too many Iowa communities have seen major employers close their doors and take good jobs somewhere else," said House Majority Leader Chuck Gipp. "Over 14,000 good jobs left the state in the past three years because of Iowa's uncompetitive business climate."

Columbia astronaut laid to rest

BY EUN-KYUNG KIM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ARLINGTON, Va. — Her husband and their 8-year-old son would sprint past her in a race to the mountaintop, and Laurel Blair Clark would amble behind, absorbing each smell and sight nature could offer in the hikes she loved to take.

"She knew the journey was more important than the destination," Jon Clark recalled at her funeral Monday.

Laurel Clark's final journey ended Feb. 1 aboard the Columbia space shuttle, but not before she flashed a wide grin for the shuttle camera to show the world "she was loving life," her husband said.

On what would have been her 42nd birthday, Clark was laid to rest with military honors at Arlington National Cemetery. She will be buried beside two other Columbia crewmates and just a few feet from where the unidentified remains of Challenger astronauts are interred beneath a granite memorial.

Blustery winds ruffled the American flag draped atop Clark's coffin as it was taken by caisson to the cemetery. The graveside service began with a "missing man" formation flyover, in which one of four jets that roared above the crowd peeled away, soaring high out of sight into the nearly cloudless sky.

As the U.S. Navy Band played "America the Beautiful" and the honor guard folded the flag, Clark's husband leaned over to their son, Iain, and helped place the boy's right hand over his heart.

When an admiral leaned in toward him to offer his condolences, the boy reached up and fingered the shiny medallions dangling from the officer's uniform.

Iain rose quietly with his father, and each placed a single pink rose on top of Clark's silver casket. He squeezed his dad's hand when emotions threatened to brim into tears.

Clark worked as a submarine doctor for the Navy before she joined NASA in 1996. She was born in Ames, while her father studied at Iowa State University, and she lived there for two years before moving with her family to Racine, Wis., which she considered her hometown. She lived in the Houston area with her family before the fatal space mission. The Columbia flight was her first assignment in space.

Court to review Miranda rights

BY GINA HOLLAND
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court is revisiting its landmark 1966 ruling that led to the familiar refrain, "You have the right to remain silent." Justices said Monday they would consider an appeal by a man who claims he was duped into talking to officers.

John J. Fellers' case gives the high court a chance to clarify when officers must recite "Miranda rights" to suspects they've come to arrest.

Fellers provides an unlikely test case. He wrote his appeal without the help of an attorney, filing as a "pauper" without having to pay court costs. The Supreme Court receives thousands of such appeals a year but only rarely agrees to hear one. The justices will likely appoint an attorney to argue Fellers' case next fall.

The Bush administration had urged justices to reject the case.

Fellers was barefoot and sipping a mug of what appeared to be tea when he sat on his couch talking to officers who came to his door in Lincoln, Neb. One officer was familiar to Fellers because they both worked as hospital volunteers. Fellers talked freely about getting into drugs after the breakup of his marriage and business problems.

He had been indicted on drug charges before officers went to his house, but they did not specifically tell him they were there to arrest him. Fellers was sentenced to more than 12 years in federal prison after being convicted of conspiring to distribute methamphetamine.

University of Texas law Professor Susan Klein said the scene in Fellers' den is played out around the country as officers try to elicit a confession from an off-guard suspect.

If Fellers wins, Klein said, "police officers can no longer intentionally circumvent Miranda by questioning first, getting a statement, then saying, 'Oh by the way, now that you've spilled the beans, here [are] your rights.'"

If Fellers loses, officers will have more freedom to question suspects without bringing up Miranda, she said.

Fellers maintains that his constitutional rights were violated during the interview at his home and then again when he talked to police at the jail after being advised of his rights. He said the first questioning tainted the later jailhouse interrogation, during which he confessed.

The officers who went to Fellers' house said they always intended to arrest him on charges but first wanted to talk to him about his troubles.

Call-ups not spread equally

BY DAVID PACE

WASHINGTON — The buildup for possible war with Iraq has drained National Guard and Reserve troops unevenly across the country, with such states as North Dakota, Nevada, and Connecticut being hit much harder than Vermont, Alaska, and Hawaii, an Associated Press analysis shows.

The Persian Gulf mobilizations, coupled with the demands of the war on terrorism, have left communities with fewer prison Guards, firefighters, and police.

"Everybody's affected," said Bruce, Miss., Mayor Jesse Quillen, whose town of 2,097 had 75 men and women called up last month. "Employers lose workers, children lose a dad or a mom for the length of the deployment, and the impact of it is felt from one end of Calhoun County to the other."

Pentagon officials say the call-ups are based mostly on the needs of commanders in the field and on the training, specialties, and readiness of Guard and Reserve units back home. The effect on communities is considered but isn't a primary concern.

"We don't measure contributions by numbers alone," said Lt. Col. Dan Stoneking, a Pentagon spokesman. "All 54 states and territories are supporting the war on terrorism. ... Each of those contributions is equally critical and equally appreciated."

The AP analysis of Pentagon call-ups shows North Dakota has shouldered the biggest burden, per capita, of any state. As of last week, 36 out of every 10,000 North Dakotans age 18 or older was serving on active duty from a Reserve or National Guard unit.

Fewer than five of every 10,000 eligible people in New York, Michigan, and Hawaii were on active duty from a Reserve or Guard unit. In 19 other states, fewer than 10 of every 10,000 eligible people were under orders.

The Police Executive Research Forum in Washington surveyed 976 law-enforcement agencies nationwide last fall and found 44 percent had lost personnel to military call-ups.

"It puts some stress on the folks back here, but they see it as part of answering the call of duty," said North Dakota Gov. John Hoeven, citing the example of a local business that had four of its eight employees activated.

"A lot of them are in law enforcement, or first responders, and it just creates some effort on our part to make sure we help ... fill in those positions," Hoeven said.

In Alabama, officials are scrambling to replace 152 prison Guards who have been called to active duty. In West Virginia, state officials are revising emergency-response plans to reflect the absence of dozens of Guard and Reserve troops now serving overseas. And in Lincoln, Neb., four high schools are searching for new wrestling coaches to replace those called to active duty.

All three states ranked among the top 10 in Guard and Reserve rates calculated by AP.

North Korea test-fires 2nd short-range missile

BY CHRISTOPHER TORCHIA
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEOUL, South Korea — In an apparent attempt to push the United States into talks, North Korea test-fired a short-range missile Monday amid tension over its suspected efforts to develop nuclear weapons.

Analysts said the widely anticipated launch from a base on North Korea's east coast fit a pattern of unusual military maneuvers in recent weeks that seemed designed to pressure Washington into dialogue.

Those maneuvers include the March 2 interception of a U.S. reconnaissance plane by North Korean fighter jets in international airspace off the North's east coast. The North said the move was defensive. There was no hostile fire, and the U.S. plane returned to its base in Japan.

"In the big picture, North Korea is trying to draw the United States to the negotiating table," said Paik Hak-soon, a North Korea expert at Sejong Institute, a private research center in Seoul.

"In the short term, North Korea is trying to send a message to Washington saying, 'We are determined to defend our territory.' It's because of suspicion that North Korea is next after Iraq," Paik said.

North Korea wants a non-aggression treaty and economic aid from the United States, which is preparing for war against Iraq. Washington says the U.N. Security Council should handle the North Korean nuclear problem.

In Washington, top Bush administration officials said Sunday the time still isn't ripe for one-on-one talks with North Korea and any lasting solution to the nuclear dispute will need the support of Russia, China, and other nations.

"I think eventually we will be talking to North Korea, but we're not going to simply fall into what I believe is bad practice of saying the only way you can talk to us is directly, when it affects other nations in the region," Secretary of State Colin Powell said on CNN's "Late Edition."

Democrats are pressing the Bush administration to begin direct talks immediately.

National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice said on ABC's "This Week" that the United States isn't afraid to talk, "but we need to do so in a way that will bring maximum pressure on North Korea to actually this time not just freeze its weapons of mass destruction but begin to dismantle them."

The Pentagon had expected a missile launch, citing a North Korean warning to ships to stay out of a sector off the east coast from March 8 through today.

Maj. Kim Ki-Beom, a spokesman at the South Korean Defense Ministry, said the missile was believed to be an anti-ship missile similar to one that North Korea test-fired on Feb. 24, the eve of the inauguration of South Korean President Roh Moo-hyun.

Herbarium plan draws criticism

sively, and its removal ... would pose a hardship on them and undoubtedly would mean delays in completing or abandonment of projects," said Paul Christiansen, a professor emeritus of biology at Cornell College in Mount Vernon. He said he visits the facility several times each year to verify plant identifications as part of his research on the book An Illustrated Guide to Iowa Prairie Plants. Traveling to Ames is much more time consuming, he said. Merging the Herbarium with Iowa State's 435,000-specimen collection will result in a single, comprehensive, and strong state collection, said Linda Maxson, the dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. "A combined herbarium would make the state collection among the top 10 herbaria nationwide and would make the collection more likely to secure federal support for curation of national collections," she said. The creation of a central location to learn about Iowa's ecological history will benefit researchers, said Lynn Clark, a curator of the ISU Herbarium. "We would end up with a very strong collection of native Iowa plants," she said, adding that there is virtually no duplication of specimens in the two collections. Clark also said that specimens from the ISU collection can be loaned out upon request. But Diana Horton, a UI associate professor of biology and the curator of the UI collection, insists that regional herbaria are necessary for effective field research.

"People have a tendency to collect specimens from areas nearest to them," she said. Horton said such UI notables as Professor Thomas Huston Macbride, for whom Macbride Hall is named, dedicated their careers to augmenting the collection. "It's a wonderful historical archive," she said. "How can we go giving away what [Macbride] spent his whole life building as if it were nothing?"

Sok uses memories in child-labor battle

before moving to Berkeley, Calif., in 1980. She worked in her family's two restaurants while attending school, and eventually earned a political-science degree from the University of California-Santa Barbara and a master's in international affairs from Columbia University in New York City.

Although she recognizes the role of work in keeping a family together and that not all work is detrimental to education, Sok said, some forms of child labor are defined as unacceptable under international codes, including slavery, pornography, prostitution, drug trafficking, and activities deemed to be hazardous.

Girls as young as 5 often end up in brothels in Thailand, and some boys trafficked into the country end up in international begging schemes, Sok said. Children in Cambodia frequently make their living scouring landfills for recyclable goods, sometimes walking barefoot through garbage in their search.

On her last visit to Cambodia, in December 2002, Sok said she met with government officials responsible for child labor, non-governmental organization members, legal researchers, and other children's-rights activists.

Although they were forthcoming with information and seemed serious about their work, many of these departments lack both financial and human resources, she said. Another challenge of tracing child-labor violations is that most problematic practices occur in informal sectors, such as in agriculture or in households.

"Most us who do international work tend to think of New York and Washington, D.C., as the hub of international work," Sok said. "It's interesting that the UI is a major player on this international issue."

Britain scrambles to save resolution

Tony Blair said he believes that even a vetoed resolution, as long as it has a council majority, would help temper strong anti-war opposition in his country. The Bush administration, which has deployed more than 200,000 troops to the Persian Gulf region and is ready to move against Iraq, sees any delay as playing into the hands of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and further undermining flagging U.S. public and political support for an invasion. President Bush said last week that he does not need U.N. permission to go to war. On Monday, White House spokesman Ari Fleischer continued a line of argument that the administration began to use publicly last week, equating the "coalition of the willing" that Bush has said would join in U.S. military action against Iraq to the United Nations itself. "If the United Nations fails to act," he said, "that means the United Nations will not be the international body that disarms Saddam Hussein. Another international body will. ... So this will remain an international action." Even if the resolution ends up failing because of a permanent-member veto, Fleischer said, "from a moral point of view," the world was likely to see U.N. refusal to sanction military intervention in Iraq as akin to U.N. "failures" to stop tribal genocide in Rwanda in 1994 and ethnic cleansing in Kosovo in 1999. U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan saw the situation differently, saying at a news conference in the Hague on Monday that the United States lacks the legal authority to launch a military attack on Iraq. "The [U.N.] charter is very clear on the circumstance under which force can be used," he said. "If the United States and others were to go outside the council to take military action, it would not be in conformity with the charter." While the administration has gone along with Britain's diplomatic efforts out of recognition of the opposition Blair faces at home and has agreed to put off a vote it had hoped would take place today, it has made it clear there are firm limits on how far the concessions can go and how long discussions should continue. Officials said that Bush wants the resolution brought to a vote this week and that there is no chance of extending the deadline for final Iraqi compliance more than a week after that, to March 21 at the latest. As envisioned by the British, the proposed benchmarks would fall into five broad categories of specific actions required of Iraq: arranging a large number of unmonitored inspector interviews of weapons scientists and technicians, preferably outside Iraq; providing substantive information on alleged stores of VX gas in the category of chemical weapons; accounting for all outstanding stores of anthrax in the biological category; and providing all information on prohibited ballistic missiles and remotely piloted aircraft. "We are examining whether a list of defined tests for Iraqi compliance would be useful in helping the Security Council come to a judgment. What we're proposing is eminently reasonable. We are not expecting Saddam to have disarmed in a week or so," British Foreign Secretary Jack Straw said.

"But what we are expecting is that the Iraqi regime should demonstrate by that time the full, unconditional, immediate active cooperation demanded of it by successive U.N. Security Council resolutions."

the direct money from the 40 acres." The donation was part of the larger UI Foundation campaign known as "Good. Better. Best. Iowa: The Campaign to Advance our Great University," a campaign aimed at raising $850 million. The effort's public kickoff was in June 2002, but it has worked quietly since 1999 to raise just over $700 million. "This [donation] was meaningful because we were able to take an asset the donors have — in this case real estate — that is not a common gift and turn it into a source of support for a fund that is important to them," said David Triplett, the foundation's assistant vice president for gift planning. "When people who have benefited from the UI can turn around and give something back, it is good for the donors, and it will hopefully change the lives of people benefiting from the research the donors supported," he said. Jay Rubinstein, an associate professor of otolaryngology and a contributor to the research center, said UI is recruiting a top scientist in auditory regeneration to lead the regeneration project. A timeline has yet to be set because the group is still looking to fill the position and garner additional funding.

Rubinstein echoed Dane's optimism, saying there was "promising research suggesting that regeneration of auditory neurons is possible." Cochlear implants stimulate these neurons, which could enhance hearing if they could be regenerated. John Dane hopes that his donation will inspire others to contribute to the UI Foundation and to cochlear-implant and auditory-regeneration research. "I imagine everyone has a favorite charity, but I stress the importance of this one because if it is successful, it will benefit millions of people throughout the world," he said.

A few short notes about not writing about butterflies

BY DIANA ROFFMAN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Although it may take some writers years to finish a work because of a lack of discipline or other problems, for John Murray, a recent Writers' Workshop graduate and a doctor, there was no such problem. He finished A Few Short Notes on Tropical Butterflies, his new collection of short stories, in just two years.

Yet he accomplished more than just that with the book. He also managed to win a Prairie Lights Short Fiction Award for "The Hill Station," and the title story was selected by Joyce Carol Oates for the Best New American Voices 2003 fiction anthology.

Born in Australia, Murray arrived in the United States in 1990 to study international health at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore. His studies led him to work at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, where he worked in the Epidemic Intelligence Service. Eventually, he went into field work, traveling mainly in Africa and India.

While he was working in the field, he found writing, in almost any form, to be extremely difficult.

"I found that I switched off writing while in Africa," he said. "I was there to do a project, and it was very consuming. I kept journals, but I found that it was easier to write after I processed the experiences."

if he was going to try to do them justice. So Murray, following in the steps of Ethan Canin, a workshop fiction writer, long-time faculty member, and doctor, came to Iowa and sat down to write a collection of stories that ended up encompassing his life experiences as a doctor, an immigrant, and, quite simply, a person relating to and dealing with other people.

In Murray's Tropical Butterflies, his stories are about being caught between different cultures and countries, but there are many instances in which the politics of the country and the environment that the characters find themselves in seem to create what could be considered, in our post 9/11 society, somewhat political stories.

Stories such as "The Hill Station," "Watson and the Shark," and "Acts of Memory, Wisdom of Man," all balance on the thin line of fictitious narrative and political commentaries. But for Murray, the characters are the ones who have to deal with the politics, and the views are the characters' views alone.

"I was not aiming to put politics into my stories, but I do not expect readers to ignore the recent world experiences," he said. "9/11 is going to change the way people perceive everything, including my stories."

The stories were completed and sold to a publisher just a few days before 9/11 happened. The publisher's acceptance was, for Murray, a shock in itself.

"The workshop is like literary boot camp. It instills in you the notion that nothing you write is really worthy, so you come out believing you won't get published," he said.

All of his characters are weighed down by their past, especially in terms of their families. But, like his personal life, his characters all strive to find that one important thing in their lives.

"You cannot continuously put off the important things just to maintain your security needs," he said. "Whether it be an art or a sport or a particular type of job, you need to go for whatever you hold up as important."

Upon entering Public Space One, wavering falsettos, one liners, and subsequent laughter fill the air. Theater of a Glow in the Dark Skeleton is practicing, and when the troupe gets together, the casual audience members of PS One cannot help but be pulled into its chemistry.

The comedic theater troupe — composed of regular No Shame Theater participants Chris Stangl, Jamal River, and UI juniors Paul Rust and Michele Thompson — was formed to be an alternative creative outlet without the five-minute time restriction No Shame places on its skits. Whereas No Shame is largely unrehearsed, Skeleton functions as interconnected performances of memorized sketches complete with blocking and direction from producer and UI junior Spencer Griffin running approximately an hour to an hour and a half.

"While No Shame is exciting in that it's unrehearsed and unrealized in its spontaneity, Theater of a Glow in the Dark Skeleton is less about writing individually and more about the group experience," Thompson said. "It's interesting to sit with a group of writers and take your

UI students must balance class with involvement to end apathy

UI students are busy people — many juggle classes, jobs, and social lives, with little time left over for activities. At the same time, thousands find time in their schedules to volunteer at the hospitals, raise money for Dance Marathon, or be part of one of the hundreds of student organizations on campus. Clearly, it is possible to add involvement in the university and Iowa City community to one's life. Unfortunately, students' apathy about issues great and small has a major effect on their daily lives.

In a time of ever-rising tuition and fees, students are most affected by lawmakers' and regents' decisions about higher education. When students must drop out of school because of its cost, it is clear that a problem exists, and the Legislature should attempt to remedy it. Yet if students are unaware or skeptical that their participation could change legislators' minds, they won't make the attempt. A clear example comes from the paltry numbers of UI students who traveled to Des Moines to lobby the Legislature on March 5. Only eight UI representatives made the journey, and while the day was filled with classes, antiwar teach-ins, and snow, such a poor showing of student interest reflects the apathy of the students in general. They are quick to complain about rising costs, but when the time comes to act on

To further illustrate the problem of apathy, one need only examine the most recent UI Student Government presidential election. Although 5,523 students voted — more than in the past several elections — it is still only slightly less than a fifth of the total UI enrollment. A plethora of information was available about the candidates: fliers were ubiquitous, and The Daily Iowan covered each platform. Additionally, every time one logged on to ISIS, there was a reminder to vote. Despite this, only a minority of students bothered to take 30 seconds to cast their ballot for the next year's leaders, though no doubt the majority of students found time to check their e-mail several times over the two days of elections.

The endeavor to motivate students involves both groups such as UISG and the students themselves. Important issues, such as rising tuition and the 21-and-over bar ordinance, continue to crop up and demand student involvement, but until students feel the direct effects of these changes, they will continue to sullenly complain and do nothing. Instead, students should take a few minutes out of their lives to read the paper, become informed, write a letter, join a protest, or become part of an organization. Only then will the UI's diverse students make their significant voices heard.

Life as we know it on Planet Evangelical

Remember the good old days when gunslingers didn't run the country, March saw the onset of spring instead of the continuation of Arctic gales, and the Hawkeye men's basketball team generally finished near the top of the Big Ten and proceeded to receive what is affectionately known, in such places as Durham and Tucson and Lexington, as the customary invitation to dance?

Me, too. Grand days they were. Oh, well. You can't live in the past, as those ubiquitous "they" always say. (Of course, you have to wonder what all those millions of people are doing with their "Kodak moments" if not living in the past, but whatever.) And we can't do anything about the gunslingers or the weather — or, more accurately, we can do more about the weather than we can about the cowboys.

Which brings us, by commodious vicus of recirculation, back to Howth Castle and Hawkeye basketball.

Four years ago, when UI Athletics Czar Bob Bowlsby relieved Tom Davis of command and brought in Steve Alford, he said he wanted the basketball program to move in a new direction, mentioning, among other things, academics and citizenship. You would have thought that Dr. Tom was running an Animal House full of guys who never went to class. I don't recall any major citizenship problems in the late-90s, outside of Ricky Davis' disdain for defense (no "D" in Ricky Avis), and I seem to remember that the team GPA was reasonably good (led, of course, by Jess Settles and Kyle Galloway, who put up GPAs that most non-athlete/students would admire).

Four years later? Well, let's see. Academically, one recruit didn't make the grade, so's to speak, because of test scores, and one player was academically ineligible. Citizenship? Quite obviously, there was one severe lapse in citizenship, to put as polite a spin on it as possible.

Hmm. Guess we'd have to give Alford a "D." Maybe he can loan it to Ricky.

Another thing Bowlsby said four years ago was that he wanted the basketball program to move to the next level. Presumably, he meant that Hawk fans were no longer satisfied with merely getting to the NCAA Tournament. Four years later, most Hawk fans would consider "merely" getting to the Big Dance some kind of miracle.

Or, to put it another way, Iowa hasn't finished in the bottom half of the Big Ten in four consecutive seasons (a feat the Hawkeyes just accomplished) since the era of somebody named Dick Schultz back in the '70s, which is medieval times in basketball years. Some "next level."

Well, at least Alford has his Christian faith to fall back on.

And I am not belittling his beliefs; he's in some good company in this country. George W. Bush, for instance, refers to himself as an evangelical Christian, as do, according to a recent Gallup Poll, 48 percent of Americans.

That's fine. One of the main points about liberty is that people are free to believe what they will. Just as I'm free to think that 48 percent of my fellow citizens are nuts who believe in one of the world's major superstitions.

Letters to the Editor

Better off Republican

I liked Amanda Mittlestadt's column in the March 4 issue of The Daily Iowan. But would you really put it past the City Council to pass an ordinance that will result in "the proliferation of fake IDs, an increase in drunk driving, sexual violence, and residential disturbances?" This same group of people thought subsidized housing was a good way to make money for the city — which it was (after they recruited down-and-outs from Chicago). This low-income housing brought a slew of problems to Iowa City, including the burden of high rent on poor college students.

Sadly, this is all the result of hippie college kids (Democrats or likewise) being too naïve to understand the consequences of "branching out." These same people will be the protesters on the Pentacrest (who, by the way, I would like to protest against). They don't understand that by supporting these political parties because of a few ideas they think are "for the greater good of everyone," they're also supporting the idea that they shouldn't have the same access to alcohol they do now. Honestly, if this town were predominantly Republican, it would be the best city in the world. Instead, we're going to have 40 bars that are 21-and-over only and hundreds of kids flocking to Eagle to buy beer for FAC. But it doesn't really get much accomplished to have an opinion in this town when it isn't shared by the rest of the population or the City Council.

Mark Brown
UI student

Future leaders

I am writing in response to the outcry by some of our community against the efforts of others to encourage our student government to address issues of national and global import (most recently in a March 3 letter promoting certain UISG candidates). True, a poll has shown a 50/50 split in opinions about Bush, et al.'s pending war. But I happened to be in attendance at a fall 2002 UISG meeting that may have initiated such a poll.

I remember the language and parliamentary procedures that unfolded. There were those who claimed then, with no supporting poll, and in the face of a petition signed by hundreds of students and a significant presence of protesters at the meeting itself, that protesters represented only a fraction of our community.

It is true that student government may not be in a position to influence those that are currently shaping U.S. foreign policy. But do not forget that to concede this point is also to say that in the future, these student-government officials will have moved on, perhaps to pursue careers that will include national and international affairs. It is the nature of the university that it provides models for future roles and behaviors. In a few years, it is possible that the current Bush administration will have established what effectively could be a military/colonial regime in Iraq (and who knows where else). To deny current students and student-government officials the opportunity to address the political issues of the future is shortsighted.

Bryan E. Hebel
UI student

Power, not insanity

The statements made by Nick Lyons in his letter, "Losing our religion" (DI, Feb. 25), demonstrated a lack of insight and lack of information. Blaming "terrible atrocities" on religion alone should demonstrate this to anyone.

While I agree that some of the most appalling acts committed by human beings have despicably used the name of God for torment and destruction, you cannot use the all-encompassing term "religion," and you cannot accurately call all religion-embracing societies insane as Lyons has done.

I think it is important to distinguish between religions of culture and religions of true faith and devotion. Often times, those who only participate in religion of culture do not follow what is good and glorifies God but instead use a religion as a vehicle with which to carry out an act "in the name of ..." that has been accepted by the culture/environment. On the other hand, religion of true faith and devotion would not use acts of aggression to further political agendas by hijacking the name of God. Unfortunately, most of the religious news we hear about only deals with destruction of human life instead of the salvation of it.

So to you, Mr. Lyons, do not be so quick to generalize what equals insanity. If you ask me, the word you should be looking for is "power."

Promoting a civil society

Too many people fail to see the connection between personal liberty and personal responsibility, and university students seem to suffer from this myopia to a greater extent than the rest of the population. If you have any doubts, just look at a couple of the news items from last week.

JAMES EAVES-JOHNSON

Perhaps the best demonstration was the "student strike" last week. One cannot imagine the sheer idiocy of the idea of a student strike. It demonstrates the mass irresponsibility of students.

First, students cannot strike. We are not workers. If we skip class, it is not as if a production line shuts down. At best, we are consumers. However, as consumers, the only thing we can do is boycott. Last week did not qualify as a boycott because we were still paying for the classes.

Second, refusing to attend class sends a message only to the professors who teach these classes. Students who did not attend classes were likely preaching to the converted. Last time I checked, professors generally held the same opinion as students on the issue.

Finally, skipping class merely demonstrates a lack of personal responsibility. You, your parents, and taxpayers are paying for you to attend class. When you skip class, you are throwing away your own money as well as the money of others.

And for what? If students actually wanted to make a difference, we would vote, write our representatives, and be active in the political process. Most of us do not do that. When we skip class to scream on the Pentacrest, the people who make the decision to go to war do not hear us. Even if they did, the only thing that they would hear is that we are a bunch of slackers who would rather not be in class.

If you have any doubt whether demonstrating a lack of personal responsibility has real consequences for liberty, consider the poll released last week on underage admittance to bars.

Overwhelmingly, people in Iowa City support restricting access to bars. That is because too many students refuse to take responsibility for themselves when they exercise their rights to enter drinking establishments and consume alcohol.

It is my opinion that anyone should have the right to consume alcohol: 16-year-olds, 18-year-olds, or otherwise. However, when a large number of students drink and then litter the public streets, urinate in the doorways of private businesses, or commit acts of violence, is it any wonder that the residents of this city want to take away the rights of students?

In this context, it is no wonder that students are so consistently liberal. We want free schooling. We want a place to live without paying for it. We want our parents or taxpayers to subsidize our lives while we binge-drink on school nights. We expect complete liberty and little or no accountability.

Of course, if we were to succeed in our demands, we would be succeeding in making the rest of society our slaves. That is because liberty can only come with responsibility. If we do not take responsibility for ourselves, we can only obtain liberty by imposing responsibility for our choices on others. Too often, that is what we do. We do not pay for our education, so the government uses violence to take money from taxpayers on our behalf. When a man works while another enjoys the fruits of his labor, he is a slave.

Of course, conservatives also have it wrong. Those on the City Council who would restrict a student's liberty to drink would restrict the liberties of all younger students. For them, they believe in holding students accountable without respecting students' liberty. We should have no problem imposing restrictions on those who drink and then menace society. However, to so restrict everyone under 21 is to presume they are criminals. Presuming people are criminals has no place in a free society.

When you act, when you vote, and when you support a point of view, you should acknowledge the connection between personal liberty and personal responsibility. You have three options. Option one is the modern liberal option. Give some people liberty and make others into their slaves. Option two is the modern conservative option. Deny liberty across the board. All are to be punished before they can abuse their liberty. Option three is the classical liberal or libertarian option. Give all their liberty and hold them accountable only when they harm the liberty of others.

As students, we greedily choose liberalism. If we want to promote a civil society, where we respect the liberty of all people, we should start taking the libertarian option. If we do not, we risk losing to those who would oppress us with conservatism.

Letters to the Editor

Original work, please

I would like to point out a major error that I have noticed in the Opinions section of The Daily Iowan throughout this academic year. It appears that the paper has rerun the same antiwar column by Beau Elliot on a weekly basis. The column that I am referring to is the one in which Elliot starts by saying, "Well, it looks like King George II is riding us to war" and follows by criticizing reality TV before getting into the meat of the column. This one column The Daily Iowan keeps printing refers to Bush as a cowboy or as King George II; it also mainly contains historical anecdotes that occurred under other administrations, mostly Bill Clinton's, that have little to do with Iraq, and uses them as evidences of how the war in Iraq is wrong and how Bush is an idiot. This is the same column that butchers the English language through Elliot's excessive use of quotation marks and employs fragments, one-sentence paragraphs, and one-fragment paragraphs.

The Daily Iowan columns are powerful pulpits from which to preach one's opinions on anything, so we can believe that only a small-minded, unoriginal simpleton would say the same things on the same topic every week. I assume Elliot is not that, so I ask that you stop running this one column every week and start publishing the original pieces he writes each week.

More 'Campus Lies'

I was startled to open The Daily Iowan on March 3 to see a large "advertisement" with contrasting pictures of who Israeli and Palestinian schoolchildren supposedly see as "heroes." According to the pictures in the ad: Israeli children idolize smiling white athletes, while the Palestinian children idolize gun-toting terrorists.

The truth is that the Israeli military is by far the most popular institution in Israel today, and the Israeli government has been dominated by former generals such as the current prime minister, Ariel Sharon. In 1953, 25-year-old Sharon led an attack on the village of Qibya in Jordan. This attack took the lives of more than 50 civilians, destroyed 40 houses, the reservoir, and the local school. At the time, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Sharett wrote in his diary that Sharon's attack would be a "stain" that "would stick to us and not be washed away for many years." But this was just the beginning for Sharon. Almost 30 years later, Sharon deceived his own government and attacked the beautiful Lebanese port city of Beirut, destroying much of the city and taking the lives of more than 17,000 Palestinian civilians (far more than Saddam Hussein killed when he invaded Kuwait in 1990).

Yet, in the Israeli media and schoolbooks, Sharon is referred to as a hero.

What is even more disturbing is the Web site of CampusTruth.org. This site rightly condemns some Palestinian leaders and groups that use maps of "Palestine" that encompass all of present-day Israel. But the CampusTruth site also provides links to maps of "Israel" that include all of the occupied territories where 3.5 million Palestinians have lived under Israeli military rule for 35 years. Such hypocrisy!

This map of "Israel" resides on the official Web site of the Israeli Ministry of Foreign Affairs (www.mfa.gov.il) and is the same map that the Israeli military has been giving to all of its conscripts when they show up for military service. It is the Israeli military and the Israeli government that takes the position that the Palestinians "do not exist" and says that generals such as Sharon — who have a long history of committing atrocities against civilians and advocate ethnic cleansing — are heroes whom Israeli children should admire.

That's the truth ...

Over the past week, a series of ads was published by CampusTruth.org, an independent advertising organization. We at the Iowa Israel Public Affairs Committee are in no way affiliated with CampusTruth.org and the production of its ads. We are the campus-based pro-Israel student group at the UI.

The committee encourages the sharing and discussion of different views in diverse atmospheres. We affirm Israel's existence as a free and democratic state, within secure and recognized boundaries. We support and are a part of an open dialogue on Israel and celebrate all of the cultures existing in Israel. As members of a pro-Israel student group, we strive to educate and inform the students on this campus specifically about the situation in the Middle East.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You'll have a lot on your mind today; don't make decisions too quickly. Your involvement in educational pursuits and travel will result in a new friendship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Clear up any legal matters or overdue paperwork today. Don't let anyone slow you down or hold you back. Someone may try to force her or his opinion on you. Hold your ground.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't let your emotions lead you in the wrong direction. Just because someone you care about wants something doesn't mean that you have to provide it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Financial investments should be your concern today. You can make a profit if you make some changes to your portfolio. Financial extravagance due to emotional matters will cause difficulties.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can expect others to grant you favors. An opportunity to start a business or a personal relationship should be available. Don't be fooled by a sweet talker.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may find it difficult to agree with others today. Go it alone, and avoid a confrontation. If you have something you want to present to others, wait until later in the week.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Sign up for any courses that may benefit you in the future. Put your time and energy into finding out about different lifestyles or philosophies. You will meet someone prestigious at a function.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Limitations regarding your financial matters could crop up today. Don't dismay; chances are that the end result will actually be beneficial to you. Don't overreact.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You will be in the mood for love, and the opportunity to spend time with someone you care about looks good. Business partnerships will be conducive to financial prosperity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Getting along with those you work with may not be as easy as you think. Keep your thoughts to yourself, and stay out of trouble. If you meddle in the affairs of others, watch out.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lots can happen when it comes to partnerships, social activities, and being creative today. Try new things. If you can imagine it, you can do it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can expect to experience some changes at home, but change can be a good thing. Drastic changes regarding your place of employment may not be to your liking. Romantic opportunities could easily develop through work-related events.

Knight gives year's salary back

Texas Tech coach Bob Knight has told Athletics Director Gerald Myers that he will not accept his salary for the 2002-03 season because neither he nor his team have met his expectations, ESPN's Jay Bilas reports.

Knight told Myers that he was not satisfied that he had gotten the most out of his team and wants the university to have the money back to use for some other purpose.

Knight, who has been discouraged all season by his team's play, says he has two responsibilities as coach: 1) To make sure that his players have the best opportunity to be successful, and 2) to get the most out of his team.

Haas' perseverance shows at No. 1 singles position

BY KATIE LOW
THE DAILY IOWAN

Playing tennis has been Cassie Haas' main motivation since the tender age of 3.

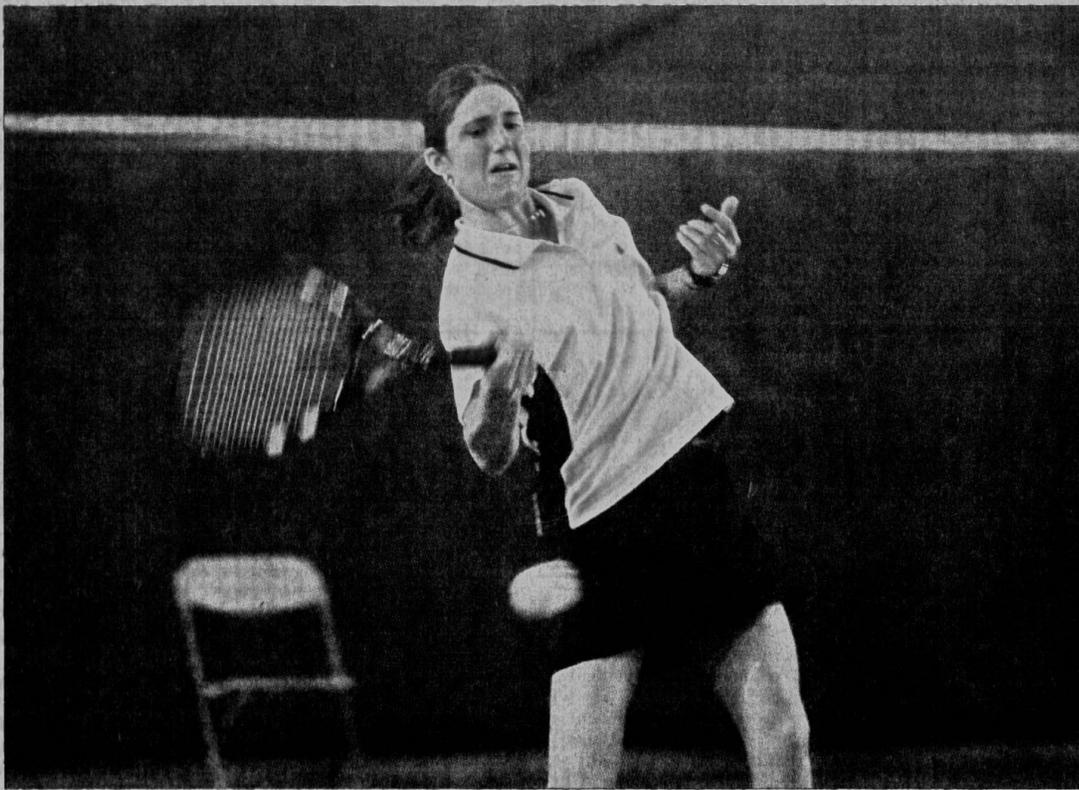

Now, the 21-year-old senior reigns atop the Iowa women's tennis team at the No. 1 singles position.

"I just always wanted to be the best — that's all I know," she said. "When I was little, I would cry every time I lost. I hated losing, and I just wanted to beat everyone."

The Dubuque native's passion for the sport has twice led her away from the Hawkeye state, but both times she returned home.

After playing the circuits as a youngster, Haas began to realize the true potential of her tennis talent. She also learned what it was to be determined and have perseverance.

Upon entering high school, Haas' abilities garnered her the No. 1 doubles spot at Dubuque Wahlert High School in her freshman and sophomore years. However, Haas knew if she seriously wanted to pursue her dream of being the best, she would have to take more extreme measures than the average high-school athlete.

Alford not worried about team's depth in Chicago

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
THE DAILY IOWAN

Alford

In the annals of sports clichés, it is the postseason equivalent of the very tired "one game at a time" mantra: "It's a new season."

Iowa coach Steve Alford trotted that far-from-original line out on Monday while discussing his team's outlook on this week's Big Ten Tournament. The Hawkeyes, the No. 9 seed, will meet No. 8 seed Ohio State in the tourney's first game at 11 a.m. Thursday.

It may indeed be a new season for the Hawkeyes, who at 15-12 need to win the tournament in order to reach the NCAA Tournament.

But Alford is only making slight variations in the team's preparation for the grueling task that lies ahead. As he has done all season, he planned to work the Hawkeyes over hard in practice on Monday before gradually tapering off the pace in time for the Buckeyes.

"We don't want to spend two hours on the floor Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday knowing we've got to play four games in four days," he said in an obvious reference to Iowa reaching the March 16 championship game.

"There's no reason to get the guys at a high emotional state" with the team's first game still three days away, he said, though Alford did plan to see how the team reacted and what the Hawkeyes "brought to the table" at Monday's practice.

Success in Chicago is not out of the realm of possibility for the Hawkeyes — Iowa won the tournament title in the United Center two years ago and reached the championship game in 2002 — but with a seven- to eight-man rotation, depth or lack thereof may become a hindrance quickly. Not so, says Alford, who noted while last season's squad had a deep bench, there were still only roughly eight players seeing the majority of playing time. He has no plans of handling things any differently this season, despite the inevitable lag the team may show playing on back-to-back days during the duration of the tournament.

"You've got to attack every game like it's your last," Alford said. "You have to do what you can to survive."

And for Iowa, that will likely depend on the performance of the junior class, which brings a nearly perfect 7-1 all-time record in postseason league play with it to Chicago. Other than Glen Worley, Sean Sonderleiter, Jared Reiner, and

Wells shells out more than fast balls

BY RONALD BLUM
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — David Wells accepted a $100,000 fine imposed by the New York Yankees on Monday for inflammatory revelations in his autobiography.

Kathy Willens/Associated Press

Yankee's David Wells was fined $100,000 for his tell-all book that discusses drugs and drinking.

The money will be split among three charities chosen by the team: the Boys and Girls Clubs of New York, the Baseball Assistance Team, and the Special Operations Warrior Foundation.

The amount of the fine was first reported Monday by the New York Times.

Yankees spokesman Rick Ceroni announced the agreement in Winter Haven, Fla., just after Wells completed his spring-training start against Cleveland.

The deal was negotiated by Yankees President Randy Levine and general manager Brian Cashman with Wells' agent, Gregg Clifton, union lawyer Gene Orza, and Rob Manfred, the executive vice president for labor relations in the commissioner's office.

In galleys of the book, Wells claimed he was "half-drunk" when he pitched a perfect game in 1998, discussed steroid and amphetamine use in the major leagues, and made unfavorable statements about some teammates.

Cashman said on March 8 that the team wouldn't release or attempt to trade Wells because of the book. The pitcher has said he wouldn't waive the no-trade clause in his contract.

Wells on accusations he was drunk on the day of his perfect game against Minnesota in 1998:

"When I took the mound the day of my perfect game, I was ready to pitch. I certainly wasn't drunk. Anyone who knows me understands that I only intended to write this book in the spirit of fun. I am sorry that the book hasn't been taken in that vein."

Stats on Wells' autobiography:

- He'll need to sell 28,203 copies of his book to pay for the $100,000 fine.
- Costs $25.95.
- He makes 12.5 percent per book for the first 5,000 copies and 15 percent for the rest; most authors make 10 percent per book.
- The book is ranked 53rd on the Amazon.com top 100 list.

point/counterpoint

Will this be the Cubs' year?

Next year has arrived, and it's time for Cubs fans to once again cheer those lovable losers.

But this year, things are different. The Cubs are still lovable, but they are no longer losers. Management took care of that by trading in the losers for actual good players.

The biggest loser to be traded in was manager Don Baylor. Baylor was fired midway through the 2002 season and was replaced by Bruce Kimm, who did not turn the season around.

This year, Jim Hendry got smart. He realized that a winning team must have a winning leader. Who better than Dusty Baker, the manager of the World Series runner-up? Baker not only brings experience, he brings talent to the Cubs' ailing dugout. Instead of sitting around looking angry like Baylor, Baker will actually get angry and inspire the team to live up to its potential.

Management also decided, smartly, to rework the infield. The trade for Eric Karros and Mark Grudzielanek not only dumped Todd Hundley, but it breathed life into the stagnant infield. Both will contribute greatly to the team. Karros will be especially helpful, having batted .301 with runners in scoring position last year. Any true Cubs fan remembers the frustration caused by Fred McGriff the last two years because of his inability to produce RBIs. Karros will bring back the Mark Grace-type atmosphere that the Cubs so desperately need.

Finally, this year will feature some of the strongest Cubs pitching in recent memory. With a steady starting rotation including Kerry Wood, Mark Prior, and Matt Clement already in place, a strong bullpen was all the team needed to cement the pitching staff. The signing of Alan Benes and Mike Remlinger will bring some much needed relief for the Cubbies.

Some might call me a hopeless optimist. However, no one believed in the Rally Monkey until the Angels won the World Series. This year, it's the Cubs' turn to raise some eyebrows and finally get some respect.

— by Katie Low

How many reasons do I have to convince you this won't be the Cubs' year? Let me count the ways. There are about as many as Chicago reliever Antonio Alfonseca has fingers.

In honor of Alfonseca's freakish, "Ripley's Believe it or Not"-worthy extra digit, I'll give you my top six reasons the Cubs won't break through in 2003.

1. First baseman Hee Sop Choi is not the next Ichiro. The 23-year-old slugger might be a good one eventually, but his .180 batting average in 2002 shows his emergence is still a couple of years off.
2. Dusty Baker won't be patient with the team's youngsters. Baker is, and always has been, a veteran's manager, so expect quick hooks for Choi and second baseman Bobby Hill, which would hamper the club's growth.
3. Lack of a solid closer. Alfonseca and the newly acquired Mike Remlinger, who figure to share the job in 2003, combined for 19 saves last year and 14 blown opportunities.
4. Lack of consistent hitting. The club batted .246 last year and did little to address the issue in the off-season, acquiring such over-the-hill veterans as Eric Karros and Troy O'Leary while letting Fred McGriff go.
5. The Cubs, and their owners, lack any sense of urgency as long as fans continue to fill Wrigley Field. The Tribune Co. is a business, and as long as it can achieve profits, it will minimize its expenses by passing on signing true superstars in the off-season as much as possible.
6. Let's be honest, it's never the Cubs' year. The club hasn't won the World Series since 1908. Why should this year be any different?

There you have it, Cubs fans. Look for 2003 to be another year where the phrase "Completely Useless By September" is more than just a humorous acronym. It will again be a reality.

Kentucky closes gap on Arizona

BY JIM O'CONNELL
ASSOCIATED PRESS

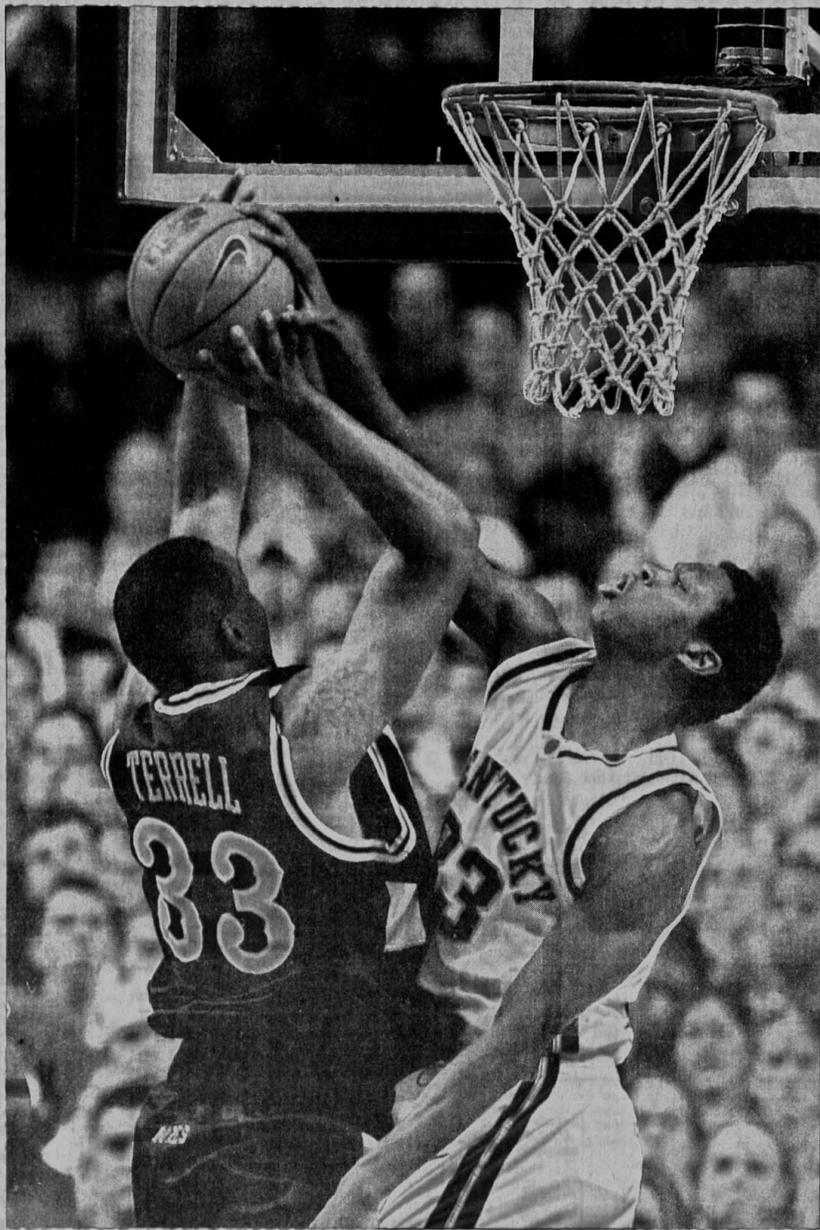

The Wildcats are gaining on the Wildcats.

Arizona and Kentucky were 1-2 in the Associated Press men's rankings for the fourth-straight week Monday, but the gap narrowed with one more poll remaining this season.

Arizona (25-2), the regular-season champions of the Pac-10 Conference, received 51 first-place votes and 1,779 points from the national media panel. Kentucky (26-3), which finished unbeaten in winning the Southeastern Conference, was No. 1 on 21 ballots and had 1,749 points.

Last week, Arizona led the first-place vote count, 59-13. Duke, which lost to St. John's and North Carolina on consecutive Sundays, dropped from No. 10 to No. 12, the first time the Blue Devils have been out of the Top 10 since Dec. 13, 1999. They were in the Top 10 for 68-consecutive polls and were No. 1 in 22 of those, including two this season.

Texas, which ended Oklahoma's 37-game home winning streak Saturday, moved up one place to third. Kansas and Pittsburgh improved two places to fourth and fifth, respectively.

Atlanta 95, LA Clippers 86

ATLANTA — After snapping their season-long eight-game losing streak on March 8, things got back to normal for the Los Angeles Clippers. Corey Maggette scored 14 of his 19 points in the first quarter and the Clippers led for just 12 seconds of their loss to the Atlanta Hawks.

Although his only basket in the final three quarters came with 2:37 left in the fourth, Maggette was still easily the Clippers' leading scorer as rookie Melvin Ely scored 13 and Lamar Odom had 12.

Ely got the Clippers within four points on a 17-foot jump shot with 5:39 left, but the Hawks scored the next five points to put the game away.

Shareef Abdur-Rahim hit 3-of-4 free throws during that decisive stretch and scored 11 of his 26 points in the fourth quarter. He also had 15 rebounds and five assists.

Theo Ratliff had 13 points and three blocks to extend his streak to 14 games with at least one rejection.

Utah 83, Miami 73

MIAMI — Karl Malone scored 29 points to lead Utah past Miami.

Matt Harpring added 17 points and John Stockton 14.

The Heat could not get closer than seven on Malik Allens hook shot with 1:43 remaining, making it 80-73. Harpring made two free throws with a minute left and Malone converted one of two free throws with 45 seconds remaining.

Coach Pat Riley was ejected by referee Mark Wunderlich, receiving his second technical foul of the game with 6:34 remaining in the third quarter. Riley was disputing a foul call on Brian Grant, who also was assessed a technical for arguing the call.

The Jazz spotted Miami the first two points of the game and didn't trail again. Malone scored 15 points in the first half, and his three-point play with 2:01 remaining in the second quarter gave Utah its biggest lead of the first half, 37-25.

SEC champion jumps 3 spots

BY CHUCK SCHOFFNER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LSU's upset of Tennessee lifted the Lady Tigers to third in the AP women's basketball poll Monday, while Ohio State rejoined the Top 25 after a surprising win of its own.

Connecticut and Duke were 1-2 for the sixth-straight week, with UConn getting all 44 first-place votes from a national media panel.

LSU (27-3) beat then-No. 3 Tennessee, 78-62, Sunday to win the Southeastern Conference Tournament and move up from sixth in the poll. Now LSU coach Sue Gunter thinks her team should get a top seeding in the NCAA tournament.

"We won a championship, and I think that makes a statement for us," Gunter said. "I really think this team has earned a No. 1 seed."

LSU won its first 15 games and was ranked No. 2 for seven weeks. The Lady Tigers dropped to sixth after an 82-72 loss at Arkansas on Jan. 19, then lost to Tennessee and Vanderbilt late in the regular season.

They reversed all three of those results in the SEC Tournament, beating Arkansas and Vanderbilt before their impressive performance against Tennessee (28-4).

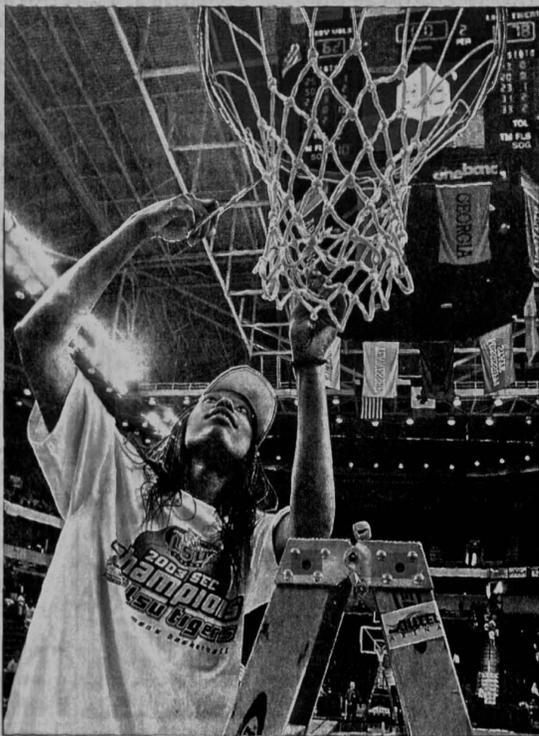

"I thought in all three games our team played with a great deal of poise and played very smart," Gunter said. "We struggled in the Arkansas game, and we struggled in the Vanderbilt game, but they kept their composure, and were very poised, and made plays when they had to."

Tennessee dropped to fourth in the poll and still will be a strong candidate for a No. 1 tournament seed.

Connecticut (30-0) ran its winning streak to 69 with a 70-47 victory over Seton Hall in the quarterfinals of the Big East Tournament. The Huskies have been a unanimous choice at No. 1 since replacing Duke there Feb. 3.

UConn had 1,100 points in the voting, Duke (30-1) had 1,052, and LSU 1,001. Duke beat Wake Forest and Georgia Tech to reach the championship game of the ACC tournament.

Ohio State (21-8) had been in and out of the poll twice before its return at No. 22. The Buckeyes beat No. 14 Penn State, 72-61, in the Big Ten semifinals Sunday for their fourth-straight victory.

OSU had been in the poll most recently the week of Feb. 10, when it also was 22nd.

Washington (22-7), 25th last week, dropped out after a 74-51 loss to Arizona in the Pac-10 semifinals.

The biggest change in the rest of the poll was Rutgers falling five places to 23rd after losing to Boston College in the regular-season finale and then falling to Miami, 77-74, at the Big East tournament. Miami made the go-ahead free throws with eight seconds left after Rutgers was charged with a timeout it did not have. An official called time while looking at Rutgers' Cappie Pondexter, who said she never signaled for a timeout.

No. 5 Texas and No. 6 Louisiana Tech held their positions from last week, and Kansas State fell three places to seventh after losing at No. 8 Texas Tech. Stanford stayed at No. 9, and Purdue jumped two places to 10th.

Georgia suspends coach, drops out of postseason tourney play

BY PAUL NEWBERRY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATHENS, Ga. — Georgia suspended coach Jim Harrick with pay and withdrew from the SEC and NCAA Tournaments Monday after an internal investigation showed three players took a phony class taught by an assistant.

Harrick's future is unclear while the school and NCAA look into allegations brought two weeks ago by a former player.

"The evidence and the findings presented to us indicated there was academic fraud," Athletics Director Vince Dooley said. "There's no evidence at all that Coach Harrick knew about what took place."

Georgia, ranked 21st in Monday's AP Top 25, was a lock to receive a third-straight invitation to the NCAA tourney, which would have been the longest such streak in school history.

The Bulldogs (19-8, 11-5 Southeastern Conference) were to play Arkansas on Thursday in the league tournament in New Orleans.

The news caps a recent spate of scandals in men's college basketball, including: suspensions of 12 players for using a school access code to make phone calls at Villanova, forfeits of six wins and boycotts of two other games at St. Bonaventure, and claims by a former student that he wrote papers for players for payment at Fresno State.

At Georgia, Tony Cole — kicked off the team last year — accused Harrick and his son, an assistant coach, of breaking NCAA rules. Cole said Jim Harrick Jr. paid his athletics director

bill, did schoolwork, and taught a sham class on coaching. Harrick Jr. was fired Wednesday.

Cole said he never attended the class but received an A. Two other players — starters Chris Daniels and Rashad Wright — were also in the class.

Dooley said Daniels and Wright were declared ineligible. Dooley said he and school President Michael Adams decided to drop out of the postseason because of the academic fraud.

Even if the team had played, it would have been difficult to win any games without Wright and Daniels, because the team usually uses only seven players.

Harrick Sr. has three seasons left on a $700,000 per year contract at Georgia. His career has been one of success on the court and trouble off it.

He is one of only three coaches — Eddie Sutton and Lefty Driesell are the others — to take four schools to the NCAA Tournament.

Harrick has a 470-235 record in 23 seasons as a college head coach, and he led UCLA to the 1995 national championship.

But this is the second time Har-rick has been disciplined because of ethical lapses. He was fired by UCLA in 1996 for lying about an expense report.

Harrick then went to Rhode Island and took that school to the regional finals of the 1998 NCAA tourney. And he also has been accused of improprieties during his two years there.

A former secretary there says Harrick had grades changed for players, had student managers write papers for players, and arranged for players to receive lodging, cars, and money from boosters.

In addition, Harrick Jr. was accused of falsifying hotel and meal reports for recruits when he worked for his father at Rhode Island.

The allegations at Georgia emerged Feb. 27 in an interview of Cole by ESPN.

Last week, Harrick defiantly defended himself against those who would portray him as a rule-breaker.

"I've never had a violation," he said then. "Go ask the NCAA."

Haas' determination rubs off on teammates

HAAS

With that in mind, she decided to attend the John Newcombe Tennis Academy in New Braunfels, Texas, for her junior year. Newcombe, an Australian, was a two-time Wimbledon champion in 1970-1971 and won two U.S. Open and two Australian Open titles.

"It was crazy," Haas said. "Looking back at it, it was pretty much like college."

She said the academy held the students to a rigorous schedule that included weights in the morning followed by four hours of school, then regular afternoon practices until dinner. After eating, the students were expected to do homework, with a one-hour break before being sent off to bed.

Haas said the warm weather, availability of facilities, and the great instructors at the academy were her primary reasons for attending a high school more than 1,000 miles from home.

"I guess I used it to try to get to the next level," she said. "I wanted to see how far I could take it because I had worked so hard up to that point. It's what all the good players do."

Haas returned to Dubuque the summer before her senior year, and she soon began receiving numerous letters from universities across the country asking her to join their program.

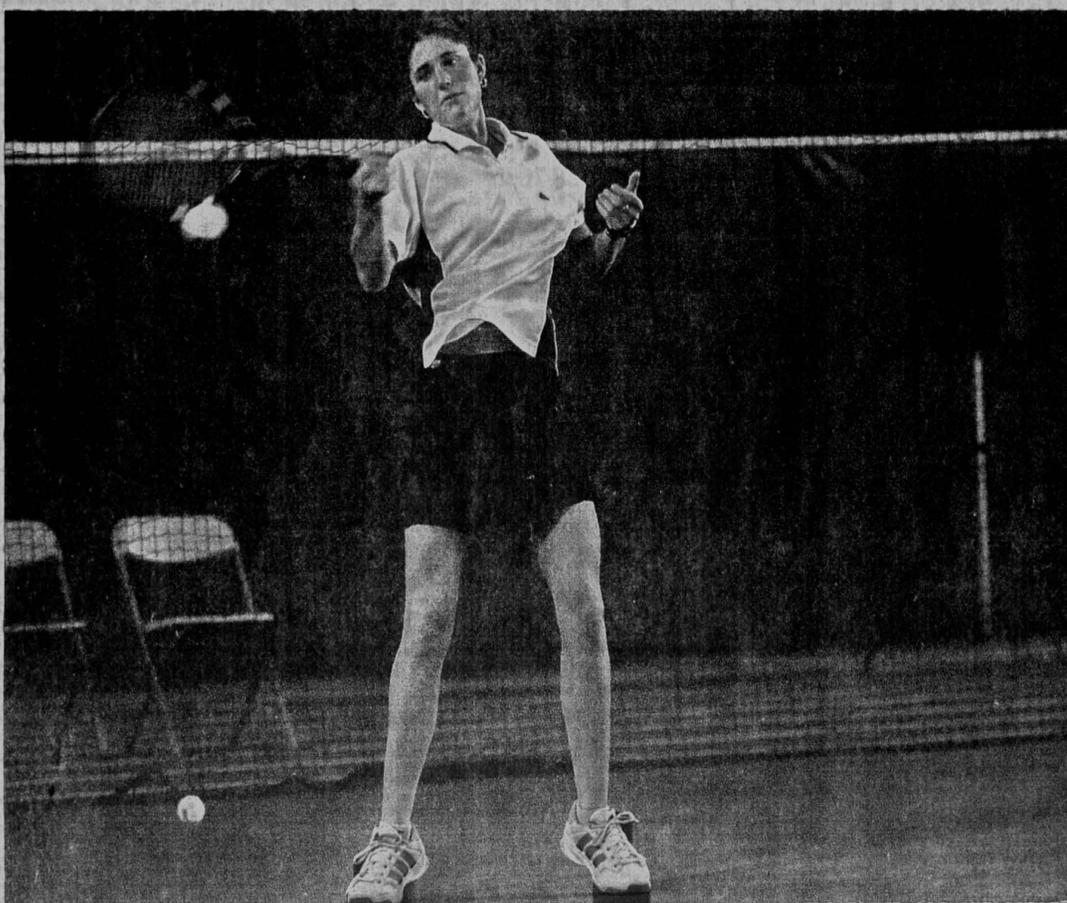

Haas said she took a list of 26 schools to her coach and asked him to narrow it down to five — the number of official visits that each prospective student-athlete is allowed.

At that point, Haas didn't really consider the University of Iowa and ended up choosing Texas A&M.

"When I went there, I immediately felt like I was at home," she said. "It was such a great atmosphere, and there is a lot of pride there. They're really supportive of their athletics, and they had a really great tennis program."

However, homesickness prevailed, and Haas knew she wanted to be somewhere closer to home.

"Every single time I got on the plane and said goodbye to my parents, it got harder and harder," she said. "They never really got to see me play, and that was hard because I'm really close to my family and I wanted them to be a part of my athletics career."

Haas said her decision to transfer to Iowa before her sophomore year was made easier because before she went to Texas A&M, Iowa coach Paul Wardlaw had told her parents that if anything were to happen or go wrong she should keep Iowa in mind.

"She's one of the first national-level tennis players from Iowa who came to the University of Iowa," Wardlaw said. "She legitimized the Iowa tennis program to other players. You always want to have the best players from Iowa because you can build teams around that. We didn't have to teach her what it means to be a Hawkeye, she already knew."

Haas' determination also helps her to act as a leader for the rest of her teammates.

"We look up to how hard she works, and she motivates the rest of us because of her drive," said Jenny Schulte, Haas' teammate and roommate. "She's definitely our senior leader. Cassie's probably the most respected person on our team."

However, since transferring, life has not been easy for Haas. In her first season, she suffered a shoulder injury, which she came back from only to play four matches and then be diagnosed with a stress fracture in her foot, which ended her season. In the 2002 season she began having knee problems and was forced to undergo surgery and sit out for six weeks.

"I was probably playing the best tennis of my life before the stress fracture," she said. "It was really frustrating because all I wanted to do was work, run and get back to where I was. It was really hard to deal with but I knew that I would come back."

Haas did make a comeback and has been injury-free since the fall 2002 season. She hopes that this will finally be her opportunity to meet her goal of playing in the NCAA tournament before she graduates in May.

Haas' notable dedication to her sport just might help her reach that goal.

"She takes care of all aspects," Wardlaw said. "She's in great shape. Mentally, she's an excellent competitor. She expects to do well and she has very high standards. She's willing to get out of her comfort zone to get what she wants."

Pujols agrees to $900,000, one-year contract

JUPITER, Fla. (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals left fielder Albert Pujols agreed Monday to a $900,000, one-year contract.

The deal for the 2001 NL Rookie of the Year is the highest one-year contract for a major-league player with less than three years of major-league service who was not eligible for salary arbitration.

In addition to his salary, Pujols would get a $50,000 bonus for making the NL All-Star team.

Pujols has a .321 average over the last two seasons with 71 homers and 257 RBIs, and he finished second to Barry Bonds last year in NL MVP voting after batting .314 with 34 homers and 127 RBIs.

Villanova Seven could create history

BY JIM O'CONNELL
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The Villanova Seven has a chance at some history this week:

No team has ever won four games in four days to win the Big East Tournament. No team has ever won one game in the tournament with just seven players available.

The Wildcats have been staggered by the suspension of 12 players because of an NCAA violation involving the use of a school access code to make phone calls. They will face Georgetown in the opening round at Madison Square Garden on Wednesday night with but seven players, two of them walk-ons.

"We're going to try to enjoy New York. I'm disappointed for our fans, alumni, and students going to the Big East Tournament because they're not exactly talking about winning the thing," Villanova coach Jay Wright said Monday, a day after his depleted team scared then-No. 7 Pittsburgh before losing, 56-54. "We're going to play those same guys against Georgetown."

That would include Randy Foye, Marcus Austin, Allan Ray, Derrick Snowden, and Curtis Sumpter, the five scholarship players who were allowed to play despite being among the 12 players affected. The other suspended players were on the bench for the final home game Sunday but not all will be there for the tournament.

"All the guys are practicing with us, and we are in the process right now of determining with more intense looks at the records and dollar amounts what their game numbers are," said Wright, referring to the suspensions that ranged from three to eight games depending on how much the calls were worth.

"We took a high number for everybody. [Senior] Ricky Wright got three games so he can travel with us by NCAA rules because the Big East Tournament could last longer than the games he was suspended. He can travel with the team and come to the banquet. The others, we have to work on their dollar amounts and see if they can travel with us."

Georgetown coach Craig Esherrick wants to make sure his team doesn't think an easy game awaits.

"I watched them several times this season, and the five they started are good players with mobile guards who can bring the ball up the floor," he said. "I think we're going to have our hands full. What I'm worried about is people, including our players, thinking Villanova won't be ready to play."

Villanova (15-14) could lose to the Hoyas (14-13) and still be eligible for a bid to the NIT, which requires a record of .500 or better for consideration.

Most of the teams in the Big East will be playing for that other postseason tournament, the NCAAs. The teams with byes to Thursday's quarterfinals — Boston College (17-10), No. 5 Pittsburgh (23-4), No. 11 Syracuse (23-4), and Connecticut (19-8) — don't have much to worry about as far as making the field of 65.

Neither does No. 17 Notre Dame (22-8), which plays St. John's (15-12) on Wednesday.

Fighting Irish coach Mike Brey said winning four games in as many days isn't his prime focus. His team snapped a three-game losing streak with a March 8 win over Georgetown.

"I'm trying to keep everyone healthy because we're going to play in that other tournament after this one," he said. "We haven't talked about the four games. After what we were in before Georgetown, just trying to get consistent and back to old habits is what I'm worried about."

Alford says juniors know how to win Big 10 tourney

Brody Boyd, the Hawkeyes don't have a ton of experience understanding" postseason play.

Reiner, who claimed the conference rebounding crown, said Iowa's 77-61 victory over Northwestern on March 8 coupled with the "one and done" mentality of tournament play should help pull the team together as it embarks for Chicago.

Iowa "didn't want to get beat" in Chicago two years ago and had that same attitude last season in Indianapolis, Boyd said, adding his fellow upperclassmen will do what they can to instill that attitude in the rest of the team.

"We need to show a lot of toughness among all of us upperclassmen," Boyd said.

Alford credited the leadership of seniors Dean Oliver and Jason Smith for Iowa's success in the tournament two years ago, and he hopes his veterans can somehow replicate that this week.

"The juniors know [what it takes]," Alford said. "They've got to do a good job with leadership [in Chicago]."
