CONFRONTING IRAQ

INSIDE

• 3A: Two American pilots are captured after Iraqis shoot down their Apache helicopter.

• 5A: Saddam Hussein appeals to Iraqis in a televised address, saying: "Those who are believers will be victorious."

• 5A: The war could have a $74.7 billion price tag, President Bush tells congressional leaders.

KUWAIT CITY — Forward elements of the U.S. invasion force pushed to within 50 miles of Baghdad on Monday, heading toward a potentially decisive battle with Iraq's Republican Guard despite hit-and-run attacks along the way.

U.S. planes bombed heavily to weaken Iraqi defenses, but a formation of high-tech Army helicopter gunships that joined the attack was forced to turn back after running into a hail of small-arms fire.

U.S. artillery joined the warplanes in raining down explosives throughout the day to soften up positions around Karbala, a city 100 miles from Baghdad, manned by President Saddam Hussein's best-trained and most loyal soldiers, Republican Guard divisions assigned to block approaches to the Iraqi capital. Troops and armor from the Army's 3rd Infantry Division and the 1st Marine Expeditionary Force moved toward the Guard units on both sides of the Euphrates River, getting in position for an assault that could open a path to Baghdad, the main target in the 5-day-old U.S.-British invasion.

Iraqi soldiers and militiamen responded to the advancing U.S. columns mostly with guerrilla tactics, hiding in residential areas and firing anti-aircraft guns, rocket-propelled grenades, and AK-47 assault rifles at the U.S. military's most advanced battle helicopters. One of the Army's Apache Longbows went down — Iraqi authorities said it was shot down by a farmer — and the others abandoned their targets.

Although ground forces continued their march northward beyond An Nasiriyah, a city with two strategic bridges across the Euphrates and the site of fierce battles Sunday, unconventional and unabated resistance hindered U.S. and British military activity across a wide swath of southern Iraq.

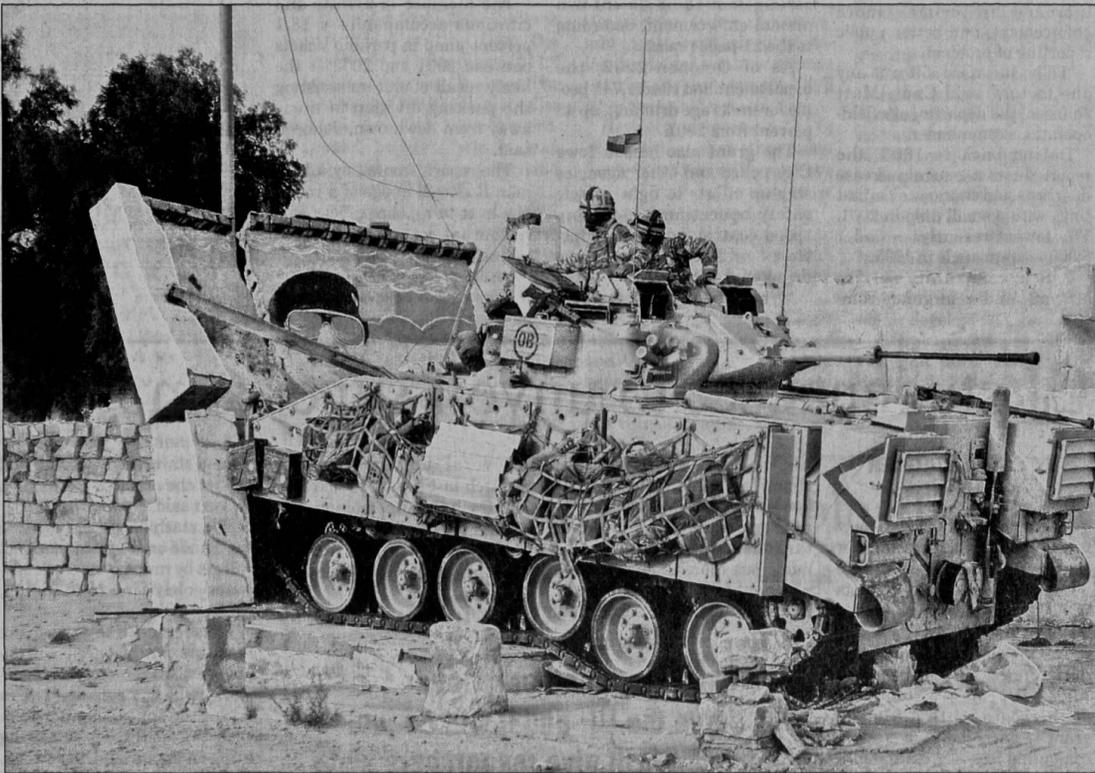

Iraqi soldiers and militiamen, basing their Soviet-era tanks and artillery in residential neighborhoods to discourage attack, held off British forces at the southern port of Basra, Iraq's second-largest city with more than 1 million inhabitants. Diehard guerrilla forces also persisted in sniping at British troops in Umm Qasr, the country's main port at the head of the Persian Gulf.

Elsewhere in the south, which U.S. forces have largely left behind in their advance, Iraqi troops armed with rocket-propelled grenades tried to ambush British outposts and U.S. supply convoys by laying land mines on roads, setting booby traps, and sniping from behind sand dunes, British officers said.

Saddam and his military strategists appeared emboldened by the capture of the Apache on Monday morning and two clashes on Sunday during which at least 16 Americans were killed and five were captured. Iraq's state-run television broadcast a speech by Saddam assuring Iraqis that "victory will be ours soon."

After vandalism, ROTC drops uniforms

BY AMY JENNINGS
THE DAILY IOWAN

An act of vandalism against a symbol of the U.S. military on the UI campus over Spring Break prompted leaders Monday to stop requiring cadets to wear uniforms to class.

Authorities are looking for a person who smashed two glass doors at the Reserve Officer Training Corps office in the South Quadrangle building and spray-painted such slogans as "Stop U.S. military research" and "Fuck all wars" on four other UI buildings between March 20 and 21, UI police records show.

"I am not concerned for the safety of the cadets, but I worry that their uniforms may provoke attention from a person who is looking to aim his anti-war sentiments at someone," said Lt. Col. Carol St. John, a professor of military science.

She said she dropped the requirement to wear the green-and-black camouflage uniforms to a field-training class in an e-mail to approximately 150 students enrolled in the ROTC program after last week's incident. Cadets now have the option of wearing the uniforms.

The U.S. Army Cadet Command advised military leaders on college campuses to be aware of their surroundings and to avoid public confrontations, St. John said.

Still, the vandalism startled at least one member of ROTC.

"I don't know why they did it or if it was connected with any geopolitical views, but targeting the ROTC for any protest is a bad idea because we have as much say in foreign policy as the post office," said Samuel Grummons, a UI senior who is enrolled in the ROTC.

Police reports indicate that patrol guards first observed graffiti on the east side of Jessup Hall and on a sidewalk near Macbride Hall at 2:43 a.m. March 21.

Duane Papke, the UI police associate director, said patrol officers at 5:11 a.m. found two glass entrances to the ROTC building bashed in with a "blunt-type object," which was not located by authorities.

No antiwar graffiti accompanied the vandalism, and the perpetrators did not appear to

University's smooth operators find a true calling

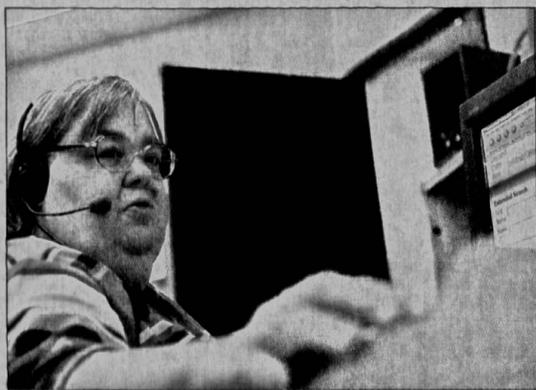

BY AMIR EFRATI
THE DAILY IOWAN

She wears a pink shirt, plays solitaire, and fondly recalls the time when chemical spills were frequent at the Chemistry Building — but Hannah Dreckman is not your grandmother. This UI employee answers to a higher calling.

Each day, the bespectacled university operator battles the never-ending torrent of phone queries — some easier than others — armed only with her black Dell, a headset, and a sense of humor.

"We're disembodied voices, and we appear to know things," said Dreckman, a 10-year veteran.

From a small room in the Information Technology Services section of the Lindquist Center, the Iowa City native works expeditiously, averaging between 25 to 28 seconds per call, next to her sidekick Donna, who preferred to keep her surname confidential. With 14

Joanne White/The Daily Iowan

Donna, a UI phone operator for 14 years, sits in her office answering phone calls Monday.

years of experience in the operator trenches, Donna handles a typical call in just over 20 ticks. There are three full-time operators who work 40-hours a week at the service, which began as an independent UI venture around 1970.

Four feet apart, the two receive the indiscriminate pelting of voices while in mid-conversation and resume their lines of thought seamlessly. Eerily, they often finish each other's sentences.

"People are entertaining ...," said Donna, interrupted by a caller.

"Older people call and give you their life story," Dreckman added, and both agreed they have lots to laugh about.

While most patrons ask for phone numbers to the Field House, Registrar's Office, in-demand UI professors, and such officials as President David Skorton or Dean Phillip Jones, some calls catch even the operators by surprise.

"Last month, a lady called from an out-of-state funeral home and asked me if my remains were ready to be picked up," Donna said, laughing. "She wanted my bones."

One caller, a farmer who thought Dreckman was the Iowa State University Veterinary School, began telling her what was wrong with his cows.

"Sometimes they keep right on talking," she said, shaking her head.

Dreckman, who worked the graveyard shift when the operating service ran around-the-clock six years ago, remembers nights when old ladies would call for "reassurance" and drunken men from the local tavern asked for phone numbers of women they had met.

"They'd tell me the girls' bra sizes," she said.

Between callers, the two operators engage in computer card games and reminisce about a time before the advent of the Internet, when 130 calls came in each hour. The number has since declined, hovering at around 60, according to an unscientific survey. For each call, operators use a specialized Internet search database to find obscure university numbers, though Donna and Dreckman said

Local arrests up sharply - 33%

BY GRANT SCHULTE
THE DAILY IOWAN

The number of people arrested or issued citations by Iowa City police leaped nearly 33 percent between 2001 and 2002, the largest increase in at least a decade, a report released Monday shows.

Authorities attribute the hike, from 7,339 to 9,758 arrests and citations, to a number of factors — a possible increase in crime, more enforcement, and better public reporting of problems.

"I'd be surprised if it was any one factor," said Capt. Matt Johnson, the department's field-operations commander.

Dating back to 1993, the report shows a general increase in arrests and citations over that time, with a small drop in 2001. The fewest recently — under 6,000 — were made in 1995.

Police, community service officers, and emergency-communications personnel took 12,682 reports, an increase of 3.7 percent from 2001.

Part of the increase in arrests and citations could be a result of officers more aggressively following certain beats, such as downtown patrols for alcohol enforcement, Johnson said. Using a $21,000 grant from the state's Highway Traffic Bureau, the department's 75 officers joined forces with UI police to strengthen their downtown alcohol enforcement, according to the 21-page report.

As of October 2002, the department had cited 1,741 people for underage drinking, up 43 percent from 2001.

The grant also helped Iowa City police and other agencies step up efforts to fight vehicle safety operations, including speed control, accident reduction, and catching more drunken drivers.

"When you've got more eyes out there, you tend to make more arrests," Johnson said.

John Stratton, the chairman of the Police Citizens Review Board, said he was surprised at the increase, but he agreed that it was probably caused by more crime, enforcement, and public reporting.

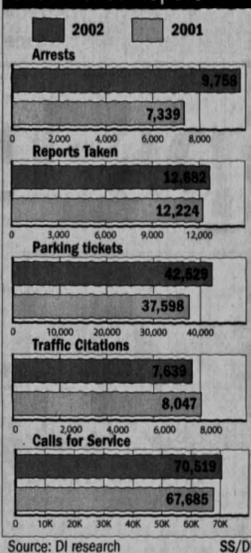

The police "often have to be reactive" to crime, waiting for public complaints to surface, he said.

The increase in arrests and citations accompanies a 13.1 percent jump in parking tickets between 2001 and 2002 — the likely result of officers assisting the parking division in areas away from downtown, Johnson said.

The report, fronted by a Norman Rockwell image of a young boy next to a police officer at a restaurant counter, is released annually by Iowa City police.

UI students set to unveil supercomputer

BY CASEY WAGNER
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI students say they expect to debut a new supercomputer that could possibly accelerate research while helping students from various disciplines learn about such machines.

The UI Student Supercomputer Project has purchased 12 high-performance computer motherboards with a $10,000 grant — garnered from student computing fees — from the university to create a cluster of computers connected through a network, said UI senior Joseph Bassett, the group's leader.

The result is a "cheap" supercomputer, a machine that performs at or near the highest operational rate of computers. Such systems are typically used for scientific and engineering projects that use very large databases and/or perform a great deal of computation.

After being connected, all 12 computers will act as one system open to the entire UI community, Bassett said. Depending on its use, the cluster could be up to 12 times faster than the normal household personal computer, he said. It will also be able to simultaneously run and execute numerous complex applications, which otherwise would have to run individually on a normal

We were told that it needed to serve the UI, and it will do just that. It will give researchers and students something they can't find in the classroom.

Joseph Bassett,
supercomputer group leader

computer, he added.

Jim Cremer, the chairman of the UI computer-science department, said the cluster of computers will give students the opportunity to experiment with and learn how to operate and program a supercomputer.

Several universities and research institutions around the country have supercomputers, he said, but lack the personnel who know how to operate and program such complex machines.

Supercomputers used for a jump start if they wish to find a job in the research community, Bassett said.

The machine's real benefit is the hands-on learning students will get by running the supercomputer solely for self-education, Cremer said.

Those who wish to use the machine for research will be able to do so remotely on a network, which means users can access the supercomputer from their personal computer using a log-in name and password. Researchers would be able to program applications to their liking.

The applications for the supercomputer are endless, Bassett said, adding that its uses would most likely encompass math, physics, chemistry, biology, and medicine.

"We were told that it needed to serve the UI, and it will do just that," he said. "It will give researchers and students something they can't find in the classroom."

Sex offender in area

Local law-enforcement agencies are informing the public that a sex offender is living in the area.

Cory James Ratliff, 21, is registered with the Iowa Sex Offender Registry and classified as a moderate risk to re-offend.

Ratliff, 210 Ninth St. Apt. 14, Coralville, is described as a 6-1 white male with brown hair and blue eyes, weighing 190 pounds.

He has tattoos on his left and right arms and a scar on his right arm.

Ratliff was convicted of third-degree sexual abuse on Dec. 13, 2002. His victim was a 15-year-old female.

Authorities said the notification is to serve only as a means for members of the public to protect themselves. Any action taken against Ratliff or his family can result in arrest and prosecution.

Iraqis capture 2 pilots

BY MARY BETH SHERIDAN
WASHINGTON POST

CENTRAL IRAQ — Advanced U.S. Army Apache Longbow helicopters making their first large-scale strike deep in Iraq on Monday cut the operation short in the face of intense fire from anti-aircraft guns, rocket-propelled grenades and rifles, said officers and pilots. One of the helicopters went down in a farmer's field, and its two pilots were captured.

The attack in pre-dawn darkness by a formation of Longbows was aimed at tanks and other weapons of President Saddam Hussein's elite Republican Guard around Karbala, south of Baghdad. Col. William Wolf, commander of the Army's 11th Aviation Regiment, said the air assault crippled four or five Iraqi tanks and several light vehicles.

But pilots said they were forced to abandon most of their targets because of a curtain of fire that rose from streets, roofs and backyards, hitting nearly all their aircraft. U.S. Defense officials in Washington said the mission involved 30 to 40 Apaches.

"It was coming from all directions. I got shot front, back, left and right," said pilot Bob Duffney, 41, a chief warrant officer from Springfield, Mass., who flew combat helicopters in the 1991 Persian Gulf War. "In Desert Storm, we didn't have a firefight like this."

Later in the day, Iraqi television aired footage of two men identified as the pilots of the downed Longbow. The two men, dressed in military flight suits, did not speak and appeared to be uninjured. The footage also showed their aircraft — still bearing missiles and appearing to be largely intact — on the ground surrounded by Iraqis waving rifles. It was not known whether the helicopter was shot down or suffered mechanical difficulties.

Army Gen. Tommy Franks, overall U.S. commander of the war, confirmed that one helicopter did not return from its mission Monday and that its two-man crew was missing. The Pentagon identified the men as Chief Warrant Officer Ronald Young Jr., 26, of Lithia Springs, Ga., and Chief Warrant Officer David Williams, 30, of Orlando, Fla.

Military officials said Williams has been in the service for 12 years and has a wife and two children who live on Fort Hood. Young, an Army man for three years, is single.

"He felt good about what they were doing, that they were going to get out there, and it was going to be a quick situation," his father, Ronald Young Sr., told CNN.

The $20 million Longbows, the new stars of the Army's helicopter fleet, have been depicted as a superweapon against Iraqi armor. They have infrared night-vision capability and carry radar-programmed Hellfire missiles that pilots "fire and forget" because there is no need for attacking helicopters to remain locked on to a target. The Hellfires can hit targets five miles away.

But Monday's engagement showed the weapons systems designed for conventional war can be vulnerable to unconventional tactics. "The Longbow is designed for going after armor and high-tech air defense," said one of the pilots, Chief Warrant Officer 3 Steven Kilgore, 34, of Gary, Ind. These weapons can be detected through radar and other sensor system. But with low-tech air defense, he said, "until they start firing, you don't know they're there."

GOP losing interest in funding higher education, Bolkcom says

BY ANNIE SHUPPY
THE DAILY IOWAN

Next year's state-education budget may call for further tuition increases and other financial adjustments for Iowa's three public universities.

The Senate education appropriations subcommittee last week approved an education budget for fiscal 2004 that will cut $24.4 million from the state's three institutions, $11.7 million from the UI alone. The proposal is $28.9 million smaller than Gov. Tom Vilsack's proposed budget, which was released early this year, said Sen. Joe Bolkcom, D-Iowa City.

Approval of the budget has sparked a heated debate over higher-education appropriations, which has developed into a divisive partisan issue.

"The Republican commitment to higher education has waned," said Bolkcom, referring to the majority of Republicans on the subcommittee.

Bolkcom said he and fellow

Democrats would offer amendments to restore funding to the State Board of Regents' universities when the budget goes to the Senate floor for debate in a few weeks.

"At a time when we need more educated workers in the work force, we are making education less accessible," Bolkcom said.

Sen. Neal Schuerer, R-Amara, the subcommittee chairman, said the universities are not losing funds, taking into account the regents' investments and other sources of revenue.

Regents' universities have an advantage that other state-funded institutions do not have because they can produce their own revenue, he said.

"The fact that we want them to have accountability shouldn't be interpreted as cutting their budget," Schuerer said.

Meanwhile, the regents' staff is analyzing the budget proposal and the implications it could have on the universities. Board officials hope to complete initial conclusions by Thursday, said Barb Boose, a regents spokeswoman.

"We've raised tuition about all we can raise it; we need to look at ways to reduce costs," Regent David Neil said at the March regents' meeting.

He said institutions have already cut costs to offset decreasing state appropriations; to compensate for cuts in the past three fiscal years, universities would have start cutting programs.

The proposed budget also includes cutting $1.2 million in funding for the regents' office and eliminating the state's $2.7 million work-study program.

Regents are trying to get their message out to the Legislature, but it doesn't sound like lawmakers are listening, Neil has said. However, state legislators also expect the universities to contribute to Iowa's economic development, he said.

"They're planning on financing economic development on the backs of students," Neil has said.

2nd Buffalo terrorist pleads guilty

BY RICHARD A. SERRANO
LOS ANGELES TIMES

WASHINGTON — A second Yemeni American pleaded guilty in federal court Monday to attending a Qaeda terrorist training camp the spring before the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks.

Prosecutors plan to use both men as key government witnesses against four others from suburban Lackawanna, N.Y.

Shafal Mosed, a 24-year-old telemarketer, acknowledged in a Buffalo, N.Y., courtroom that he had trained at the Al Farooq camp in Afghanistan to use weapons and explosives — and that Osama bin Laden spoke there, warning that 50 men were on a suicide mission against non-Muslim targets.

In pleading guilty, Mosed became the first person convicted of providing material support — in essence, himself — to a known terrorist organization since that law was passed in 1996.

He is likely to receive eight years in prison when he is sentenced in July. But he first must "truthfully and completely" cooperate with the government in pursuing convictions against his remaining co-defendants.

"Those who provide their money or services to support America's enemies, even if they are American citizens themselves, will face the full force of America's justice," Attorney General John Ashcroft said.

U.S. forces close in on Baghdad

Despite another series of punishing U.S. bombing attacks on Baghdad, a relaxed-looking Saddam mentioned the resistance of Iraqi forces in the south in an apparent attempt to dispel suspicions that he was killed or injured in a cruise missile attack as the war began March 20.

In another sign that may reflect confidence, U.S. officers have received preliminary reports indicating Saddam has ordered some Republican Guard troops out of Baghdad and toward the main lines of defense to the south and east of the city. Their mission, the officers said, would be to reinforce the elite forces charged with fending off the American invaders around Karbala, approximately 50 miles southwest of Baghdad, between Razzaza Lake and the Euphrates. With U.S. troops closing in on those positions, British Prime Minister Tony Blair warned that allied forces would face "a crucial moment."

So far, the initial Republican Guard units confronted by U.S. forces have used trickery and traditional defensive measures to hold their ground, U.S. officers reported. Commanders with the 3rd Infantry Division said they suspected Iraqis in civilian clothes were acting as spotters for artillery units. As a result, they ordered searches of suspicious cars that seemed to be dogging U.S. convoys. Soldiers reportedly found uniforms and weapons in some of the vehicles they searched.

the overall commander of the invasion, said his troops' progress "has been rapid and in some cases dramatic" despite the continuing clashes in the south. At the same time, additional troops began moving toward the theater, apparently for duty during what is expected to be an extensive U.S. and British occupation.

A Pentagon official said soldiers from the Army's 4th Infantry Division, which had planned to enter Iraq from the north via Turkey, instead began flying to the Persian Gulf region from their base at Fort Hood. The division, whose equipment was being transported aboard 35 cargo ships now in the Red Sea after being refused permission to unload in Turkey, is expected to be in Iraq by mid-April, the official said.

After Sunday's fighting at An Nasiriyah — an Army maintenance convoy was ambushed, and a Marine amphibious assault vehicle was hit by a rocket-propelled grenade fired by soldiers feigning a surrender — some U.S. military officials conceded that they may have underestimated the resolve of Iraqi troops and paramilitary units and overestimated the greeting U.S. troops would receive from the population.

"There is some dogged determination on the part of the Iraqis to get in and get fighting," one Defense official said. Another Pentagon official conceded that the military may have "oversold" to itself the effect of an information campaign urging Iraqi soldiers to surrender. To date, U.S. planes have dropped 28 million leaflets telling Iraqi troops to rise the white flag.

"We don't know if it was an act of protest or not," she said.

According to police reports penned between 8 a.m. and 10:40 a.m., officers found the words "Bomb Bush" scrawled in red spray paint on the northwest corner of the IMU and the words "USA = EMPIRE" with peace and anarchy symbols on the north side of the Becker Communication Studies Building.

Patrol guards also located the phrases "Freedom dies when bombs fall" and "Fuck war" in red paint on the exterior of the building. The words "USA: rogue state" also appeared in green paint on the building's electrical station.

"Ever since the war broke out, we've had some minor incidents, but it's continuing to escalate," Papke said.

In a separate incident on Sunday, Iowa City police officers arrested Dain Jubal Ring, 23, for allegedly spray-painting war slogans on the fence surrounding the Old Capitol.

Papke said the incidents are not connected.

"We're not going to put extra officers on watch, but we are going to put special emphasis on looking and watching for suspicious activity," Papke said.

Tab for Iraq war: $75 billion

BY ALAN FRAM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush is expected to ask Congress for $74.7 billion to pay for the war with Iraq, assuming a month of combat, and for strengthening counterterrorism efforts at home, lawmakers and aides said Monday.

The money measure, which the president planned to describe to congressional leaders he invited to the White House, was dominated by $62.6 billion for the Department of Defense. It presumed the military effort to oust Iraqi President Saddam Hussein would take 30 days, aides said.

The request was also expected to include $4.2 billion for domestic security, chiefly for police and other so-called first responders. And it was to contain $7.8 billion for aid to Israel, Afghanistan, and other U.S. allies, a down payment on humanitarian aid for Iraq and for rebuilding the country, and money to increase security for American diplomats.

At Monday's meeting, Bush was expected to ask congressional leaders to send him a completed version of the bill by April 11, when lawmakers are to begin their Easter recess. He is expected to send his recommendations to Capitol Hill as early as Tuesday.

Though lawmakers are eager to demonstrate their support for U.S. troops, Democrats and many Republicans are expected to have problems with parts of the proposal.

Of the $62.6 billion for the Defense Department, the administration is proposing setting aside $59.9 billion in an emergency reserve fund that the Pentagon could largely spend with limited input from Congress, said Democrats who said they were familiar with a preliminary version of the proposal.

"We need to provide every single dime the troops need, but I do think we need to know where it's going and for what purpose," said Rep. David Obey of Wisconsin, the top Democrat on the House Appropriations Committee.

Obey said that Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld "wasn't appointed to be the U.S. Congress with the power of the purse. ... We're supposed to know what we're doing before we open the purse strings."

Democrats were also expected to complain that Bush's request had only $543 million in humanitarian aid for Iraq, $1.7 billion to rebuild the country, and nothing for a peacekeeping effort after the war. Prior congressional and private estimates suggested the long-range expenses for those efforts would be many billions of dollars, though administration officials are hoping allied nations will help with the financing.

Democrats said they were also unhappy that the measure lacked additional money for other domestic programs such as tightening security at U.S. ports, borders, dams, and facilities that generate radioactive materials.

Bush was preparing to send the Republican-controlled Congress his request just as lawmakers write a $2.2 trillion budget for 2004. The House and Senate versions both excluded any funds for a war, though Senate Democrats last week — with support from three Republicans — added $100 billion for the war in their chamber's version, taking the money from Bush's tax cut.

Democrats have complained repeatedly that the fiscal framework — which controls new tax cuts proposed by Bush — cannot be written without knowing what the war will cost. Some Democrats believe that information might undercut support for Bush's proposed tax reductions.

The administration had refused to provide its war estimate until now, arguing that there were too many uncertainties on the battlefield.

The requested Defense funds will include $10.4 billion for the call-up of Reserves and National Guard troops and extra salary paid to troops in combat. It will include money for troops searching for terrorists in Afghanistan, the Philippines, and elsewhere, said one congressional aide speaking on the condition of anonymity.

Also included for the Pentagon will be $44.6 billion for operations and maintenance and $6.5 billion for new munitions and for research and development.

Saddam rallying Iraqis

BY HAMZA HENDAWI
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Faced with a fight for survival against a U.S.-led onslaught, Saddam Hussein is rallying Iraqis to fight for the land of their ancestors — seeking to portray the war as one pitting the faithful against evil.

A televised address by Saddam shown on state-run television Monday underlined his strategy to rally Iraqis through Islam. He mentioned "God" 28 times, "jihad" (holy war) seven times, and "faithful" four times. "It is a near victory that God promises the patient faithful with. Those who are believers will be victorious," Saddam said. "In these decisive days, the enemy tried not using missiles and fighter jets as they did before. This time, they sent their infantry troops. This time, they have come to invade and occupy your land."

Military communiqués issued daily in Iraq speak of troops as "God's soldiers," cite verses from the Koran about a small minority being able to defeat a larger force, and end with Islam's rallying cry of "Allahu akbar!" ("God is great!").

There's evidence his calls to patriotism and religion are resonating among a people that Washington had expected to welcome coalition forces as liberators rather than fight them as enemies.

U.S. and British forces are meeting unexpectedly stiff resistance in fighting in southern Iraq and, as coalition troops press toward Baghdad, militia-men loyal to Saddam are continuing to harass them with deadly ambushes and ruses.

In the southern city of Basra, the scene of some of the fiercest fighting, a hoped-for welcome from civilians had not materialized, British spokesman Col. Chris Vernon said.

Coalition forces sent radio broadcasts and leaflets to Basra to urge residents to oppose Saddam's militia from inside the city, Vernon said. Commanders have held off storming the city, hoping its Iraqi defenders would surrender, but they have held firm.

Elsewhere Monday, residents of the border town of Safwan stoned a passing U.S. military convoy.

Saddam and his propaganda machine have spared no effort in stoking anti-American sentiments among Iraqis in recent months and projecting an image of Iraq as the last and only Arab bastion of independence and anti-colonialism. They also have played on the widely accepted perception of the United States favoring Israel over the Arabs and the U.S.-led war on terror as a neo-Crusade against Islam.

Anti-American feelings also have their roots in the 1991 Gulf War, when a U.S.-led coalition routed Iraq's army, and from nearly 13 years of crippling U.N. sanctions imposed on Iraq for its 1990 invasion of Kuwait. Iraqis say the sanctions have been kept in place because of Washington and blame them for what they say is the death of hundreds of thousands of Iraqis, mostly children.

Iraqi officials also have been appealing to patriotism. They focus on the country's history as the birthplace of civilization and one that knew law and science when, according to Foreign Minister Najib Sabri, the ancestors of President Bush lived in caves.

URBAN AND REGIONAL PLANNING

What Is It?

Planning is a profession for people who want to improve the quality of life in cities and regions. Planners are concerned with issues such as affordable housing shortages, groundwater contamination, state economic growth, and transportation congestion.

Graduate Program Description

The University of Iowa offers a two-year Master's degree program in Urban and Regional Planning. Students come from all undergraduate majors, and develop analytic and professional skills for positions in government, private consulting firms, and non-profit organizations.

- Areas of concentration include:
- Economic Development
- Land Use & Environmental Planning
- Transportation Planning
- Housing & Community Development

Joint Degrees are available with Law, Health Management and Policy, Engineering, Environmental Health, and Social Work.

Editorial

Close-to-combat journalism essential in controversial war

With more than 600 journalists on the frontlines with American and British soldiers, viewers at home are the recipients of unprecedented coverage of the war in Iraq. They can watch battles as they happen across the world as well as get a flavor of life in a tank. While the military can stifle what the journalists report, the concept of placing journalists with the troops provides greater accountability and transparency in terms of military action and success.

During the 1991 Gulf War, few reporters were allowed into Iraq and Kuwait, and the Pentagon was responsible for providing updates on the progress of the war. After the conclusion of the war, Americans discovered that on many occasions, reality differed from what they had been told. The current strategy changes that for the better.

Having reporters accompany the troops was the brainchild of Victoria Clarke, the Defense Department assistant secretary for public affairs. Journalists are provided with helmets, protective suits, and training in case the Iraqis use weapons of mass destruction. They are allowed to film, record, and write anything they witness. The caveat, however, is that before journalists broadcast or publish their findings, the commanding officers of their divisions must approve it.

This war stands in stark contrast to 1991's Gulf War. Military personnel are in direct contact with the media, making them more transparent and accountable.

There have been criticisms of the policy: Journalists will be unable to be objective, the immediacy of the coverage glorifies war, and the hard truths of the war will be censored by the military. These are legitimate concerns, and the media will have to maintain their role as watchdogs to the greatest extent possible. Overall, the benefits of reporters on the frontlines outweigh the possible negative consequences.

As a result of the policy, the military will perhaps be more vigilant in its actions and will be held to a high standard of accountability in the eyes of the viewing public. This heightened level of transparency helps guarantee honest reporting of military successes and defeats. With the horrors of war broadcast via satellite, the U.S. military engagement in Iraq is available for anyone with access to a television, radio, newspaper, or magazine. A free press, even when restricted for security or privacy reasons, is one of the hallmarks of democracy, and it is vital in this controversial war.

Letters to the Editor

Convenient silence

Recently, Rep. Jim Leach was in Iowa. At a church forum, he said there were good cases both for and against war.

What's that? Leach offered a solution that "France, Germany, or Russia should offer Saddam Hussein asylum." In a deadly serious time, this wasn't a serious proposal by the former Foreign Service bureaucrat.

While hundreds of thousands march in the streets to protest President Bush's pre-emptive war, this is what our "antiwar" congressman offers as leadership?

I recently read Leach's 25-page tome, issued last September when, facing a difficult re-election bid for his 27th and 28th years in Washington, and with few American troops in the Persian Gulf, he safely voted against the Iraq resolution.

Leach propounded at length on the history of the "just war" theory, concluding that the resolution then "misfits the times." His position was casuistic and guarded.

It seems Leach's deafening silence and lack of leadership now "misfit the times."

He does not speak on the floor of Congress nor in the streets of Eastern Iowa against the war.

Instead, he is silent as the war begins, calling for support of our troops and a quick resolution to the fighting, hoping that what now is apparent — his politically calculated election-eve vote six months ago — will cover his lack of leadership. How convenient for his 2004 re-election bid.

Leach, a Republican in Congress since the 1970s, could speak the truth to a Republican president. If Leach is so "independent and moderate," why is he so silent?

We need leadership to oppose the war now with deeds, not empty and guarded words of last September. Leach's silent inaction speaks volumes.

Mayrose Wegmann
 UIISG vice president-elect

Let freedom ring

All across this state, thousands of Iowans — sons and daughters, mothers and fathers — have been answering their country's call to the march toward a war far from their homes.

Those of us who remain behind safely in our homes and workplaces must not forget these brave Iowa men and women in military uniform who guard and ensure that safety each day. We must also make sure they know — wherever they may be, whatever dangers they face — that we hold them firmly in our thoughts and prayers and await their safe return.

As a sign of our undivided, unwavering support for those valiant men and women called to arms, and their families, I am calling on Iowans across this great state to join in ringing bells in churches, schools, and other community buildings at noon each day until our troops return safely home, hopefully to a more peaceful world. The ringing of the bells will serve as a daily, somber reminder to each of us of the great sacrifices being made by our neighbors, friends, and co-workers.

As we here at home — at family dinner tables and in the halls of Congress — debate the course for our nation, we must remember that when called, Iowans in military uniforms ask neither why nor where nor when. They pack up their gear and go, leaving wives, husbands, children, parents, grandparents, and friends behind.

Let there also be no doubt whether, when the nation calls on Iowans to serve, the nation gets the very best — our engineers, our police officers, our doctors and nurses, our mechanics, our road and bridge builders. Our citizen soldiers.

We will need a cooperative effort by all Iowans to organize the bell ringing in towns and cities throughout the state. I call on community leaders to spearhead that effort.

Bells do not ring themselves. The ringing of a bell is an act of service, an act of kindness, an act of remembrance. Please join with me in this simple but powerful gesture of support for Iowans' sons and daughters in military uniform and their families.

Thomas J. Vilasack
 Iowa governor

Operation Iraqi Freedom, a friend says, gazing at MSNBC with that degree of disdain that only a Nordic female can properly muster in times of borderless lunacy. Fuck it. I'm going to the bathroom.

And then she does. Like it was the natural thing to do.

Data screaming across the small screen big screen in-between screen we all screen for I have seen the glory of the coming of the horde. Golden. Gilded. Bronzed from the tears of the sun.

Tomahawk cruise missiles smashing smartly across Baghdad. All this dust and boom, dust my boom, bombs bursting in air, rockets' green glare. Bye-bye, Mesopotamia. Bye-bye, cradle.

To the grave. Wondering about naming your weapons after Native American tools, which, in the end, didn't work very well against Winchester cruise missiles. In the end, of course, is where everyone gets it. Even Winchester.

Or, in the end, maybe nobody gets it. Just like in the beginning. Have at ya and borderless lunacy and this nameless growling beyond the circle of the campfire, the cave, dark among the stars.

Tomahawks smashing smartly across Baghdad, Apaches careening across the desert sky. Data screening across the scream. The power of babble, with wrinkled lip, and sneer of cold command, gazing across the sands south of Babylon.

Hang up those gardens, baby. We're turning these plowshares into mighty swift swords.

In a Baghdad living room cloaked in dust cloth, every pot, kettle, pan, jug filled with water for when the pumps stop working — when, not if — flour, sugar, rice, beans, powdered milk, biscuits, cheese, macaroni, wheat sandbagged against the coming deluge, a daughter-in-law says, "I don't even care about the leadership. But someone wants to take away what is yours. What gives them the right to change something that's not theirs in the first place? 'I don't like your house, so I'm going to bomb it, and you can rebuild it again the way I want it, with your money.'" The chattering class babbles on, determined men with steely voices riveting words into sentences, sentences into paragraphs, paragraphs into geo-policy.

And 200 years drop behind, two vast and trunkless legs of stone alone in the desert of imagination failed at last. A colossal wreck of idealism.

In the time of Gilgamesh, we glided in the skins of lions.

Wondering about Gap and Old Navy and the skins of petrochemicals as the Baghdad sky and the An Nasiriyah sky and the Basra sky and the Mosul sky turn green and burst in the camera's eye.

Wondering about all these skies and how they no longer shelter us.

Tomahawks and Apaches cavort and gambol in the moonless nights, serious men in serious rooms chart our dreams, our schemes, our shattered visages eyeless in the sand.

Beyond the desert, a wondrous jungle rises, full of chattering foreign birds and the slither of unknown snakes and the hump-hump-hump of destroying this village to save it.

The Nordic woman returns, finally, from the bathroom. Glancing at the small screen, the big screen, the in-between screen, disdain like pickled herring.

Can't we at least change the channel. This is America. We can always change the channel.

Yes, Virginia. There is a channel-changer. This is America, after all.

We can do what we please. And there's always something else on. It's called freedom.

Watching All the President's Men, as hubris turns into disaster and then disaster turns into hubris and then hubris turns into disaster, disaster, hubris, hubris, disaster, like a clockwork orange alert.

Or, in the end, borderless lunacy. All this nameless growling beyond the circle of the campfire, the cave, dark among the stars.

Tehran blinks on the horizon.

OPINIONS

Ten rules of the road (trip)

After a week-and-a-half road trip to the Northwest coast, I thought I would have come to some great philosophical theory regarding the meaning of life, love, and all that jazz. You know — a sort of Jack Kerouac revelatory reflection on our generation and times that would neatly fit into column form. But Kerouac has always bored me, and despite the many adventures and the 5,300 miles logged on my sturdy Buick, crystalline clarity has evaded me, especially in light of the war.

ERIN MCKEE

things to say and discover that lovingly insulting each other is an endless form of entertainment. Irreverence is the name of the game when it comes to road-trips.

"Your driving makes me nauseous."
"Yeah, well, you give bad head."

It does not matter if your mockery is based in truth or not, just as long as it is outrageously funny (and trust me, after 20-plus hours of no sleep, nearly everything is outrageously funny). Bonus points for being able to cleverly recycle old jokes.

No. 7: Embrace diversity in musical tastes. A huge CD collection is only slightly more important than being able to readily compromise on song selections. Only on a road trip can you get me to jauntily sing along to old school 2 Live Crew and other raunchy rap songs that normally make me go eww. I learned that if my friends can handle my Indigo Girls and strange love of Ozzy Osbourne, then I can take any Ludacris or Celine Dion thrown my way.

No. 8: Eat at a local dive, preferably one whose only sign says "COLD BEER" and that serves French fries in red plastic baskets. Spend too much time talking with the waitress about the weather and tip outrageously well.

No. 9: Avoid accidentally throwing away all the food in the car, especially if it's before discovering that Interstate 80 is closed and you are stuck in Wyoming with no cash for a motel. Trust me, your friends will not appreciate it.

No. 10: Never underestimate the power of cheap motels and gas-station restrooms to lower your standards of absolutely everything.

Day One: "I think that when I move to Portland, I'll apply for a job with a feminist magazine. How cool would that be!"

Day Three: "I'm sure I can at least get a waitressing gig at a bar. That'd be OK."

Day Six: "Maybe I could be a stripper. Hey, I could wear my new cowgirl hat!"

Despite the greasy hair and failing to suss out the meaning of life, my little trip west proved to be quite the educational experience. Especially in this frightening time of war and uncertainty, the opportunity and right to explore this country, meet the diverse folks who inhabit it, and get a little closer to those we already love should be held dearly and exercised frequently.

DI COLUMNIST ERIN MCKEE IS A RECENT UI GRADUATE.

All big questions aside, I did make a few invaluable discoveries regarding the art of road-tripping.

No. 1: Do not, I repeat, do not travel with anyone you are not prepared to share 99.9 percent of your life story and habits with. After 10 hours of driving, nothing is off-limits. Childhood phobias, sexual fantasies, cycles of bodily functions — hell, even pet names for an ex's penis — all of these will inevitably make their way into the conversation. So swallow your pride and modesty in the first mile, and I guarantee deliciously shocking rounds of confessions throughout the trip.

No. 2: Play intellectually stimulating and low-maintenance games, such as word association. Not only does this make time go surprisingly fast, but it also has the added benefit of digging into each other's psyches. For example, an average round for my two partners and I went like so: "Green." "Purple." "Grape." "Juice." "Bar." "Wench." "Erin." "Hey!" "Horses." "Sex." "Head." "Beer." "Erin." "Hey!"

No. 3: Be prepared to miss stuff from home.

"I miss my boyfriend."

"I miss my bed."

"I miss my vibrator."

No. 4: Have no attachment to results. As long as you're not devastated about being temporarily stranded, taking a sponge bath in a Tahoe casino bathroom at 6 in the morning doesn't seem that bad.

No. 5: Invest in at least one fun hat. I purchased a cowgirl hat in Wyoming that not only made me feel like an ultrasassy combination of Thelma and Louise but also masked the greasy-enough-to-fry-a-tostado-in-hairdo I sported for a good chunk of the trip. Plus, mustering the metaphorical balls to wear a cowgirl hat in public is an adventure in itself.

No. 6: Learn to be creative with your comebacks.

Eventually, even the nicest of friends run out of positive

Letter to the Editor

Save student life

The 21-only ordinance being considered by the City Council will only create an atmosphere in which underage students will binge drink in a higher-risk environment with less supervision. It seems like an attempt by Iowa City to permanently "ground" other people's children while doing very little to address the problem it purports to be solving.

If students are driven out of downtown, there will be many more of them at house parties. This is a far less-safe social situation for young students and a very threatening situation for young women.

I saw a man from Stepping Up being interviewed on television recently. He stressed that there are plenty of other things to do in lieu of going to the bars. The only examples he could provide, however, were "play cards" and "talk to someone." He may have inadvertently demonstrated just how dull student life would be if the 21-only ordinance passed. Iowa City has a vibrant downtown culture and many sources of entertainment.

It happens that many of the establishments that provide this entertainment serve alcohol because their over-21 clientele enjoy it. If the council is truly concerned about the health and well-being of underage people in bars, they should call for stricter enforcement of existing laws, not an overarching, vindictive ordinance against all people under 21.

That such an ordinance is being considered shows us that the students of the university need to participate more in local government. If you disapprove of this ordinance, tell the City Council: E-mail it at council@icgov.org.

Students: I urge you to register to vote in Iowa City. And, if this travesty of an ordinance is passed, I urge you to remember the names of the councilors who supported it and, when the time comes, vote them out.

The ash of the little laughs

BY DIANA ROFFMAN
THE DAILY IOWAN

The poems within Cal Bedient's new collection, The Violence of the Morning, "implode with the precision and extravagance of life, maintaining stunning levels of complexity only a consummate craft could sustain," said one published poet and professor.

The Violence of the Morning pushes Bedient's use of language to a more startling, sharper place, all while he responds to the mortality and grief that makes up the lives that we live.

Bedient, a professor at the University of California-Los Angeles, was a visiting instructor in the Writers' Workshop in the fall of 2001. He has written two works of criticism, He Do the Police in Different Voices: The Waste and Its Protagonist and In the Heart's Last Kingdom: Robert Penn Warren's Major Poetry, as well as one previous collection of poems, Candy Necklaces (1997).

Using history, both mythological and political, music, and eroticism, Bedient defies what is expected time and time again. With such images as "zoo faces and spectacles," he often primes us with ideas that we are more comfortable with before seeing what they are juxtaposed against. In his poem, "Was It Stella, or Was It Stella?," he writes, "and when the guard turns out the lights, you'll strain to hear his shoes/squeak like an after-hours sex doll/in the one-inch Christmas cotton."

His playfulness can also be found in the hidden humor within this poem's title, as Bedient is referencing both the painter, Frank Stella, as well as the painter's aunt.

This humor seems to strengthen many of the poems throughout the collection. In "Crushed Cargo," Bedient not only draws humor out through almost every stanza but also draws upon his knowledge of philosophy.

This new collection of poems uses the page as more of a canvas than ever before. Taking a turn from Candy Necklaces, The Violence of the Morning has such poems as "The Violin of a Little Monday," in which he skillfully brings us back to one of his recurring themes, the violin, not only with the images that he draws upon but also in the shape that the poem itself draws on the page. Although he does return to the form of the poem in many of his works, frequently using couplets, tercets, and quatrains, Bedient's style allows him to do so in a way that takes the order behind the poem and juxtaposes it with the vivacity and intensity of his freshness.

If there is one thing that can be said about his poetry, it is that it cannot be pinned down. Unlike the "love" being addressed in one of his more compact poems, "The Day Is Extreme When There Is No Frame," where "Space has identified you/you can be cornered now/in every corner/of the sea," to corner Bedient would be more than difficult. Indeed, it would be an unworthy venture, especially when the true reward in reading him lies not in pinning him down but in moving through his poetry with the accuracy and acceptance that binds his images together, sharply and shockingly, both to each other and to yourself as the reader.

Chicago on the go

NEW YORK (AP) — Chicago, the stage musical that inspired the Academy Award-winning movie, is going back on the road.

The show will begin a new tour June 10 at the National Theatre in Washington, D.C. It will then play San Francisco, Los Angeles, Chicago, Boston, Toronto, and other cities.

The film version of the Kander and Ebb musical won six Oscars on Sunday, including best picture and best supporting actress for Catherine Zeta-Jones.

The Broadway revival of Chicago, which opened in November 1996, shows no sign of slowing down, with box-office grosses improving after the movie version opened. The musical's first tour opened in Washington in the spring of 1997 and ran for several years.

Erin go movies

PARIS (AP) — The Irish were the top moviegoers in the European Union in 2001, and film attendance rose more than 10 percent over the previous year, an EU study said.

The Irish went to an average of 4.2 films each in 2001, followed by the Spanish, with 3.6 films each, and Finland and Greece, with 1.3 films per citizen, said Eurostat, the EU statistical office.

Two out of three films seen by Europeans in 2001 were American, representing approximately 80 percent of box-office receipts in Spain, Great Britain, Luxembourg, Greece, and Germany.

Fry inducted into Football Hall of fame

DES MOINES (AP) — Former Iowa football coach Hayden Fry's selection to the College Football Hall of Fame on Monday caps a career in which he ranks 10th on the all-time win list for Division I coaches.

Fry, 74, retired after the 1998 season with a career record of 232-178-10 and 143-89-6 at Iowa, where he coached for 20 years. He guided the Hawkeyes to 14 bowl appearances, including three Rose Bowl bids.

He coached at Southern Methodist and North Texas State before arriving at Iowa in 1978.

In an interview Monday with the Associated Press from his home in Mesquite, Nev., Fry said being chosen for the Hall of Fame is an honor.

"I appreciate that very much," he said. "It's a real tribute to my assistant coaches and all the great players I had in 37 years."

He said he fondly remembers his time at Iowa.

"Every place I went, we had to turn the program around, but the one at Iowa... that was probably my favorite," he said.

It's over

Georgia Tech's last-second bullet destroys Iowa's hopes of NIT Title

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
THE DAILY IOWAN

Georgia Tech's B. J. Elder drove to within eight feet of the basket, lofted a last-second shot that hit the rim, and it appeared that the Iowa Hawkeyes had advanced to play Texas Tech. Then the ball seemed to hang in the air, holding with it Iowa's postseason fate, before dropping through the cylinder with 0.3 seconds remaining to give the Yellow Jackets a 79-78 victory Monday night.

"I wanted to put the ball back into [Elder's] hands and let him make that shot," said Georgia Tech coach Paul Hewitt.

"We knew exactly what we wanted to do."

Elder, who missed a similar shot last season against North Carolina that cost the Yellow Jackets a victory, appeared to commit an offensive foul on the final drive, but no whistle was blown.

Iowa's Brody Boyd fell to the floor after he and Elder made contact, and Jared Reiner could not collapse on the Tech sophomore in time.

"That's the way things go," Boyd said matter-of-factly after the defeat, which ended Iowa's season at 17-14.

Iowa's effort against the Yellow Jackets mirrored its valiant run through the National Invitation Tournament; the Hawkeyes battled back from a deficit as large as 18 points. Iowa coach Steve Alford could not fault his team for a lack of effort, calling it "gallant" as well as "Herculean."

Senior Chauncey Leslie, playing in Carver-Hawkeye Arena for the final time, scored a game-high 27 points despite battling a virus that caused him to lose five pounds in the course of a day.

He also was experiencing pain with wisdom teeth, but he soldiered on in the manner his teammates and coach have come to expect from their leading scorer.

Alford summed up Leslie's senior campaign in one word: Brilliant.

"He's our scorer, our emotional leader," said freshman guard Jeff Horner. "He's just a great player. I learned so much from him."

Boyd finished with 17 points, and Sean Sonderleiter added 13. Being that both are juniors, their efforts gave Iowa fans a glimmer of hope for next season.

But the same could not be

Coach pleads not guilty

BY MIKE WILSON

DES MOINES — A former Iowa State assistant basketball coach was surrounded by supportive family and friends at his arraignment Monday on federal child-pornography charges.

Randall Alan Brown, 45, of Ames pleaded not guilty to the charges in U.S. District Court. He remains free on his own recognizance pending trial, which was tentatively set for a two-week period in mid-May.

Brown was indicted March 11 on one count of possession of child pornography and one count of receiving child pornography.

He resigned when charges initially were filed on March 3.

According to an affidavit filed in U.S. District Court, U.S. postal inspectors seized computers from Brown's home and office on Jan. 24. On the computers were pictures of minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct.

Brown also allegedly destroyed diskettes containing

Hawks get rematch against Creighton

BY MICHELLE YONG
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa women's basketball coach Lisa Bluder thinks that the Hawkeyes will have no problem preparing for the third round of the NIT against the Creighton Bluejays.

On Dec. 8, 2002, Iowa couldn't overcome a 16-point deficit against the Bluejays and lost, 89-82, in their first road game at the Omaha Civic Center.

"It won't take a lot to get them excited," Bluder said. "You don't get this opportunity to play a nonconference opponent whom you lost to very often, and I think we want to take advantage of it. We wished we could've had that one back. We weren't very prepared, focused, even though we played a good second half."

Three-point shooting proved to be a deadly weapon for Creighton and put the Hawkeyes in a deep hole. The Blue Jays made 12-18 3-point shots in the game.

The Hawkeyes want to take away Creighton's ability to shoot behind the arc.

"We definitely need to cover their 3-point shooters," Bluder said. "Before that game, they were not shooting well from 3-point range, but since then, they've become a very good 3-point shooting team."

A catalyst in Creighton's long-distance shooting is Laura Spanheimer, who killed the Hawkeyes, going 4-4 from behind the arc.

the floor — she has a great ability to score," Bluder said. "She can get to the free-throw line, score a variety of ways — great pull-up jump shot, very strong, hard to defend, mismatch problems. She's a very nice player."

As usual, Kristi Faulkner and Jennie Lillis led the way for the Hawkeyes in the first two rounds of the NIT against St. Louis and Marquette.

Bluder wants someone else to step up and help carry the load. She received a great performance from Jamie Cavey off the bench against Marquette. Cavey scored 21 points and went 9-9 from the field.

Iowa's coach would like to see more players follow in Cavey's footsteps.

"It always helps us if Reedy, Cavey, or Armstrong does well or anybody who comes in and gives added dimension," Bluder said.

Unlike the Hawkeyes, who have had the luxury of playing both NIT games at home, the Bluejays have picked up both of their victories on the road. When they played at Maine, they won, 74-67, and won their second-round game against Siena, 96-86.

"They play well on the road because I think the team is used to playing on the road," Bluder said. "They play sometimes at high schools, the civic center, so they're kind of used to that — they've grown up in it. I think they've definitely had a harder trail because they've had to travel, but at the same time, it's their Despite Spanheimer's not looking good in warmups, Bluder knows she is also a silent assassin on the defensive end.

"She has longer arms," Bluder said. "She's quick; it seems she can keep going forever. It's like she doesn't get tired. She's a person who really makes their press thick."

The Bluejays' press is another concern for the Hawkeyes. In their outing against Creighton, that press threw them off and forced them to turn the ball over 22 times.

Playing Creighton helped the Hawkeyes to adjust to the press in games that followed. Bluder said the Bluejays are the best pressing team the Hawkeyes faced all year.

"We'll be more prepared for the press," she said. "We'll be able to handle their press and lower our turnovers."

Along with having to watch Spanheimer, Iowa needs to contain the versatile Christy Nene-man, who scored 32 points in the two teams' last contest.

"She's unassuming when she gets on the floor; she can shoot the 3, penetrate, is the leading rebounder, play any position

NCAA COMMENTARY

Butler upset crashes Sweet 16 party

BY JIM LITKE
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

They are called "mid-majors," apparently because "floor mats" was already taken.
 Or because the college presidents in charge at those schools understand that alumni would not open their wallets for a basketball program that year after year is described as undermanned or overmatched.
 That's the reality that Butler and many other schools face at this time of year. Usually, they wrangle invitations to the NCAA Tournament as champions of second-tier conferences — hence the "mid-major" tag — and then they're supposed to clear out when the time comes to divvy up the serious spoils.
 "On paper, people think we're nothing," Butler's Joel Cornette said Sunday, remembering the buildup before the 12th-seeded Bulldogs tipped off against No. 4 Louisville. "We watched TV and could barely even tell we were going to play."
 There are a dozen reasons for that, beginning with the high-profile coach on the opposing sideline, Rick Pitino, and a talent deficit starting with Cardinals star Reece Gaines and extending all the way to the end of the Louisville bench. But as the Bulldogs' 79-71 victory proved, that doesn't count for as much as it once did.
 The truth is that the best basketball-playing seniors in the land are currently putting in their third season as pros. The same is true, essentially, about the best juniors, sophomores, freshmen, and any high schooler with half as much game as LeBron James. Comb the NBA's draft board from the past few seasons, then imagine how much wider the gap between the mid-majors and the top few teams in the big conferences would be if those kids were still in the NCAA mix.

Butler players celebrate after their 47-46 upset victory over Mississippi State in a first-round NCAA game.

 Because they aren't, the number of real powerhouses is down to a handful, and schools such as Butler get to hang around a little longer and talk a little louder than they used to. And being the only double-digit seed besides No. 10 Auburn left in the round of 16 has proved to be intoxicating stuff, indeed.
 "It's not our goal just to get to the Sweet 16," Darnell Archey said. "Our goal all along has been to be national champions."

"We're thrilled and excited, but we're not satisfied."
 Come Friday, Oklahoma figures to have something to say about that. The best games so far have been supposed mismatches on the order of Butler-Louisville — see Arizona's escape from Gonzaga — but everything suggests it's going to get harder from here on out.
 Butler slipped away from No. 5 Mississippi State in round one, the clear exception to the rule. At the Indianapolis suburb just down the road from the Bulldogs' classic gym, four of their brethren — Holy Cross, Southern Illinois, Western Kentucky, and Wisconsin-Milwaukee — were beaten by Marquette, Missouri, Illinois, and Notre Dame by a total of 11 points. It might be that coach Todd Lickliter was the only one in Butler colors who appreciated how lucky they were to draw the longer straw twice in a row.

 "The greatest thing is we get to stay together," he said. "I can't tell you how much fun it is to just be around these guys, to watch them prepare and compete. I just want to prolong this as long as possible."
 All sorts of improbable pieces fell in place to help Butler get this far. The talent drain of the last decade never hit the Bulldogs because they don't draw many stars to begin with. Six of this year's players are seniors, including Sunday's hero, Archey. And Lickliter, who has exactly as many tournament appearances as Pitino does national championships (one), is the third coach they've played for.

point/counterpoint

Should there be an age limit for the NBA?

Everyone knows LeBron James will be the NBA's first-round draft pick this year. However, it seems strange that no one has a problem with the fact that James hasn't even considered playing college basketball.
 To most regular kids, the opportunity to go to college — for five years if needed — for free seems like it would be a great opportunity. Has James become so consumed by the lure of stardom and riches that he hasn't even registered for college?
 Doubtful.
 James has probably considered playing college basketball, but it's obviously not so appealing as making millions. It's sad that the prospect of getting a college degree holds less water than playing professional basketball.
 The NBA is considering instituting an age limit that would require potential draftees to be at least 20 years of age before they could play in the league.
 Logically, this would force most prospects to play at least two years in college. There couldn't be a better suggestion.
 While it's easy to understand why a superstar would decide to bypass college for the NBA, it doesn't seem to be a very sound decision.
 It's important for players to experience college for many reasons. They are exposed to the type of work and practice they will have to put in. They are able to hone their skills and adjust to the intense media scrutiny in a somewhat more controlled environment.
 Finally, and most importantly, they are forced to get at least two years of a college education. While athletes are not usually renowned for academic prowess, it seems that they should at least give it a chance. If players can be put through school for free because of their abilities, they should take advantage of that opportunity.
 We should all take a look at our values and realize that putting professional basketball and money above education and knowledge is completely screwed up.

Putting an age restriction on players entering the NBA draft would be flat-out stupid.
 The NBA should be a league for the world's best players, not the world's best players 20 and older.
 NBA Commissioner David Stern wants to put this age limit into action by the 2004 draft because he thinks that there are too many young, inexperienced players in the NBA.
 Hey, David, if players didn't seem like they could cut it in the NBA, then the general managers wouldn't draft them. So don't put some silly restriction on how old players have to be to get drafted, because you would ruin it for those ready to make the transition.
 If the rule were currently in place, then Kobe Bryant, Kevin Garnett, and Tracy McGrady would each have two years less NBA experience, this year's leading Rookie of the Year candidate, Amare Stoudemire, wouldn't be around, and we would have to wait two more years to see how LeBron James will fare against the game's elite players.
 Granted, there are players who have come out of high school and failed to make it in the NBA, or still have a little adjusting to do, but who's to say that two extra years of college experience would change any of that? The NBA is different from high school, but it is also different from the collegiate game. Even players who are four-year college studs have trouble adjusting — or making it at all — in the NBA.
 Here's an idea: Take out the rule that automatically gives first-round draft picks a three-year contract and instead wait to see if they turn out, then sign them to their contracts. That makes a bit more sense.
 Forcing basketball stars to go to college for a year or two is not going to have a major effect on the NBA or the individual players themselves. If there are young players general managers want on their teams, then let them be drafted.

IOWA ROWING

Hawks place fourth in Novice regatta races

The Iowa men's rowing team traveled to DeLand, Fla., for its spring-training trip, departing March 15 and returning Sunday.
 While there, the team competed in Stetson University's Homecoming Regatta, placing third in the Novice 8-and-3 and fourth in the Novice 4 race.
 In each race the team lost to funded programs; unlike Iowa women's rowing, the men's team is not funded through the Athletics Department, and it receives less than $2,000 per year from the university.

said for the play of fellow classmates Jared Reiner and Glen Worley.

Reiner was just 3-6 from the field in 26 minutes of play, while Worley hit just two free throws in 24 minutes (0-4 from the field) before fouling out with just under one minute to play.

Alford issued an ubiquitous warning that playing time next season could be in danger for some of the upper classmen.

"We've got guys making mistakes as freshmen and still making them as juniors," he said.

"We can't have that."

The Hawkeyes fought back from a 44-37 halftime deficit to eventually tie the game with 15 minutes to play, one of four ties in the game's final half.

But poor rebounding and foul shooting hurt the Hawkeyes.

Iowa was out rebounded and shot just 50 percent from the free throw line (6-12) in the second half.

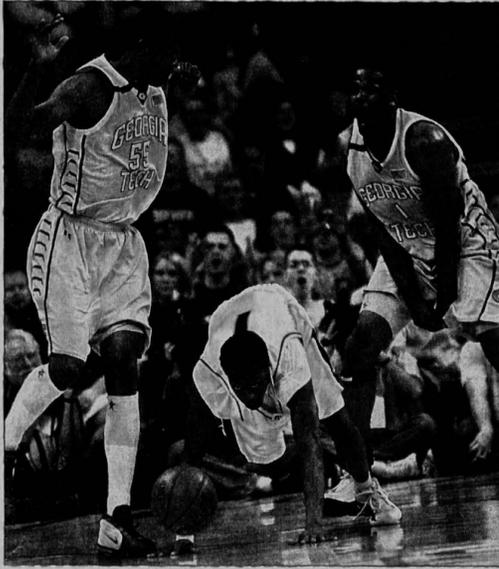

Alford credited most of that to Georgia Tech's athleticism and motivation.

With the season now over — a year that saw both internal and external distractions hamper the program — talk quickly turned to next season, one in which the Hawkeyes are confident will yield much better results.

"I and all my teammates don't expect to be playing in the NIT," said Horner, who scored six points and doled out eight assists.

The Hawkeyes will lose the services of Leslie and guard Josh Kimm while returning 11 players from this season.

They will also welcome three recruits and the return of Pierre Pierce for the Brown's lawyer, Timothy McCarthy, said he would likely ask that the trial be continued so Brown can continue treatment for depression.

He started treatment before the charges were filed, following the deaths several years ago of two of his four daughters. They were just 3 and 4 years old, McCarthy said.

"Randy has had a tough time the past few years," he said.

Brown and his wife, Mary Jo, have two surviving daughters, Claire, 11, and Jane, 6.

Brown's wife, parents, brothers, in-laws, and a few close friends were with him in the courtroom, and McCarthy said that is evidence of the support he is receiving.

"His wife stands by him, as does his family, 100 percent," he said.

Brown sat silent during the hearing, other than to acknowledge that he understood the charges against him, his rights, and the conditions of his release.

Afterward, he and his family were hustled off to the federal probation office to sign documents for his release.

He did not speak to reporters outside the courthouse.

NFL decides Europe season to proceed as scheduled

BY DAVE GOLDBERG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — NFL Europe is starting as planned, despite the war in Iraq.

The developmental league's players and coaches will leave for Germany, Spain, Netherlands and Scotland this week after the 32 NFL owners decided overwhelmingly Monday to proceed as usual.

"We're an American business in Europe," commissioner Paul Tagliabue said. "Like other American businesses, we have to continue on."

The decision came on the first day of the NFL's annual meeting, which is expected to focus on proposals to change the overtime system and expand the playoffs from 12 teams to 14.

The competition committee, which recommends rules changes, split 4-4 on a move to change overtime and allow each team at least one possession. The committee was against the proposal by New England and Kansas City to expand the playoffs.

Tampa Bay general manager Rich McKay, co-chairman of the committee, said he favored the change in overtime and opposed the expansion of the playoffs. He noted that the league had agreed when it expanded to eight divisions for last season that teams had agreed to give the format at least two years.

"This is one and we haven't had any problems with it in the first year," McKay said.

He also noted that the league is slow to make major changes.

"Historically these are not rules that pass the first year they're proposed," he said. "Sometimes you have to let them percolate into the second year."

The vote on those issues is expected Tuesday afternoon or Wednesday morning — after plenty of debate.

But there wasn't much argument about NFL Europe, which starts play April 5. Its season ends in June.

The NFL had already discussed the situation with the six teams, which have been practicing in Florida, and were told that neither players nor coaches were too apprehensive about playing.

Three of the teams are based in Germany: the Frankfurt Galaxy, Rhein Fire and Berlin Thunder. The other three are the Barcelona Dragons, Amsterdam Admirals and Scottish Claymores.

Tagliabue said there was relatively little concern about the safety of Americans playing in those four countries.

"We've had the same security procedures in effect as we had for the NFL after Sept. 11," he said, referring to searches of fans entering stadiums and increased police presence. "There was a strong consensus that we play the season."

The decision was not about money — the league has lost money, not made it, in an effort to develop players.

Many who have made it from NFL Europe to the big league are fringe or special teams players, although that league also produced two-time NFL MVP Kurt Warner.

The meetings began with Tagliabue's state of the league speech to the owners. He emphasized the importance of racial diversity in the league's hirings, including a new policy requiring every team to interview at least one minority candidate before hiring a head coach.

He said later that it was unlikely that there would be a decision at these meetings on what action to take against the Detroit Lions.

They hired Steve Mariucci after saying that five black candidates declined interviews because they believed the team already had decided to hire the former San Francisco coach.

Pittsburgh owner Dan Rooney, chairman of the diversity committee, also said there was no consensus on what to recommend to the commissioner, who will make the final decision.

Tagliabue did say that if the league were to discipline the Lions, the team wouldn't lose a draft pick.

"Those are reserved for competitive issues," he said.

Sanders among those honored in Hall of Fame

BY TOM COYNE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Barry Sanders, Joe Theismann, and Ricky Bell were among 11 players selected to the College Football Hall of Fame on Monday.

Sanders won the 1988 Heisman Trophy while playing for Oklahoma State and became one of the NFL's best running backs with the Detroit Lions before his abrupt retirement prior to the 1999 season.

The 5-8, 175-pound Sanders, who ran for a record 2,628 yards in 1988, set or tied 24 NCAA marks at Oklahoma State. In three years with the Cowboys, Sanders had 3,797 yards and 55 touchdowns.

Theismann quarterbacked Notre Dame to a 25-4-3 record in three seasons, and he was second to Jim Plunkett in the 1970 Heisman voting. Theismann threw for 4,411 yards and 31 touchdowns and ranked second in school history in passing when he was done. He set 19 school records and ranks seventh on Notre Dame's all-time passing list.

Theismann attended a news conference Monday announcing the new inductees. He said he cried when he learned he had been selected.

"I was very surprised. It was very unexpected. I never really had thought about it," he said.

"When you sit in the gallery and look at all the great college football players and all the men who have played college football, that's the thing that boggles my mind. It's a tremendous honor."

Bell, who starred at Southern California in the mid-1970s, was a two-time All-American. He led the nation in rushing in 1975 with 1,957 yards and finished second in the '76 Heisman balloting behind Tony Dorsett. Bell died in 1984 at 29 of cardiac arrest brought on by a rare skin and muscle disease.

Former coaches Hayden Fry and Doug Dickey were also selected to the hall Monday.

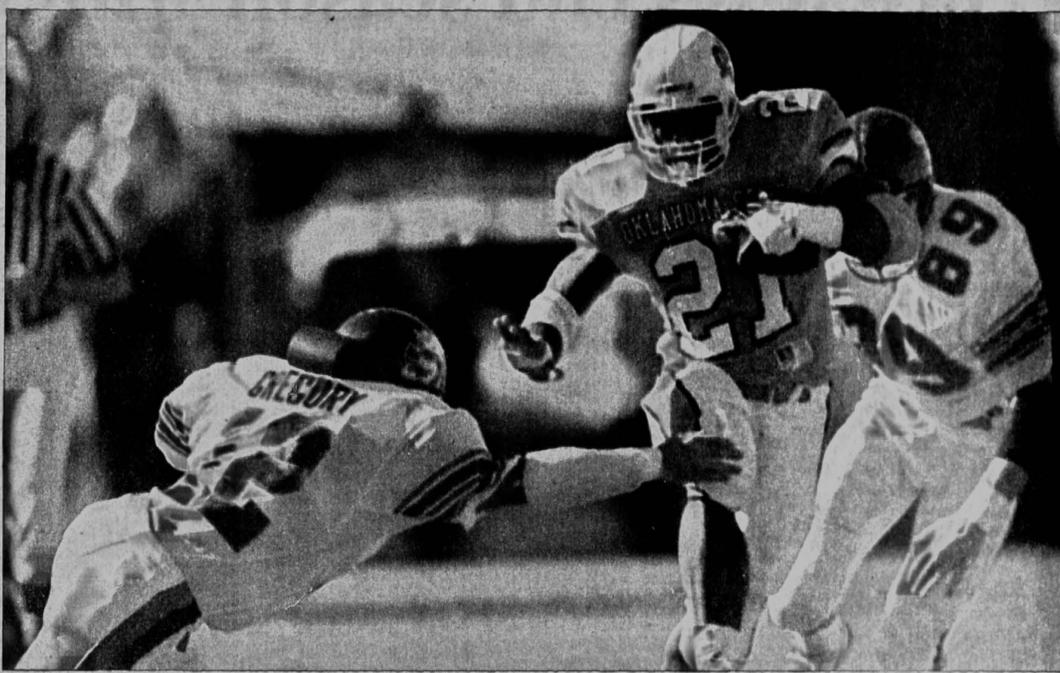

Fry was a head coach for 37 years, the last 20 at Iowa before retiring in 1998. He also coached 11 seasons at SMU and six at North Texas State, posting a record of 232-188-10 at the three schools.

Dickey, who coached at Tennessee from 1964-69 and Florida from 1970-78, had a combined record of 104-58-6.

Jimbo Covert, an offensive tackle at Pittsburgh from 1980-83, also was named to the hall.

"When I saw the classes coming up year after year and my name wasn't up there, I was hoping one day I would get in because it is such a special honor," he said.

The other players chosen

Kansas defenders try to tackle Oklahoma State tailback Barry Sanders during action in Stillwater, Oklahoma, in this Nov. 12, 1988 file photo.

Monday were Murry Bowden, a defensive back at Dartmouth from 1967-70; Tom Brown, a guard at Minnesota, from 1958-60; Jerry LeVias, an end at

SMU from 1965-68 and the first black to receive an athletic scholarship at the school; Billy Neighbors, a tackle at Alabama, 1959-61; Ron Pritchard, a linebacker at Arizona State, 1966-68; John Rauch, a quarterback at Georgia, 1945-48; and Roger Wehrli, a defensive back at Missouri, 1966-68.

The new class will be inducted into the Hall of Fame on Dec. 9 in New York. The new hall members will be enshrined in August 2004.

COMMENTARY

Pick Six perpetrators garner light sentence

BY ANDREW BEYER
WASHINGTON POST

Horse racing's worst scandal is over. The perpetrators of the Breeders' Cup Pick Six fix are going to jail, and the rightful winners are about to receive their money.

Yet the resolution of the case against the three fixers has outraged racing fans almost as much as the original offense. The central figure in the scheme will spend less than a year in a minimum-security federal prison after trying to pull off a multimillion-dollar fraud.

Of the three men involved, Chris Harn was the mastermind; the other two were accomplices. An employee of Autotote, Harn knew the vulnerability of the computer system for handling pick-six wagers; he penetrated his company's computers to alter wagers after four of the Breeders' Cup races had been run. His friends, Derrick Davis and Glen DaSilva, were willing participants, but they were Harn's pawns. Davis, who made headlines when he "won" $3.1 million on the Breeders' Cup Pick Six, didn't even place the wagers. Harn phoned them into Davis' telephone-betting account.

But when Judge Charles Briant handed down his sentences last week, he gave Harn the lightest punishment — a term of one year and one day. (Harn will in fact wind up serving approximately 10 months.) Davis got 37 months and DaSilva 24 months.

To laymen, this seems to be a perverse working of the criminal-justice system. According to the account of the Breeders' Cup scandal in Vanity Fair magazine, "Prosecutors sent out the word: the first man to cooperate would get the lightest sentence." Harn was not only the brains behind the crime, he was smart enough to be the first to cut a deal. But shouldn't the government pressure accomplices to confess so they can punish the real wrongdoer? If someone robs a bank, do prosecutors let him cut a deal and then throw the book at the driver of the getaway car?

The light sentence Briant imposed on Harn trivializes the offense he committed. The prosecutors, too, acted as if they were dealing with a victimless crime; during the course of the investigation, they suggested that the money seized after the Breeders' Cup belonged to the government. But Harn and his friends were stealing money from innocent people as surely as if they had robbed them at gunpoint. Had they succeeded, they would have defrauded 78 deserving bettors out of nearly $40,000 apiece.

I wrote last fall about one of those bettors, Woody Zais, a baggage handler at BWI Airport who made a $32 wager at Laurel Park on the Breeders' Cup Pick Six and picked five winners on one of his tickets. This was supposed to be the biggest win of his life as a horseplayer, and the notion that somebody was trying to steal $40,000 of his money was certainly no trivial matter to him. When he learned of the punishment for Harn, he said, "It seems like a slap on the wrist."

Zais should be getting his money in a few days. Because people who picked five winners had to fill out an Internal Revenue Service form to collect their consolation payoff, they can be identified and compensated. Arlington Park, the host of the 2002 Breeders' Cup, is sending letters to all the winning ticketholders and instructing them to contact the mutuels department at the track where they placed the wager. They will even collect interest accrued while the case was being resolved.

One aspect of the case still hasn't been settled. Three weeks before the Breeders' Cup, Harn and DaSilva engaged in a trial run on a Pick Six at Belmont Park on Oct. 5. Harn used the same system that he would apply on the Arlington races — altering wagers after four races had been run — but this fix didn't attract scrutiny because the payoff of $13,070 wasn't so dramatic. Nevertheless, Harn and DaSilva took more than $80,000 out of the pockets of winning bettors. These people deserve to collect their money, too.

The New York Racing Association has informed the court of this issue so the defendants' remaining assets can be distributed to the Pick Six winners. "Somehow, we have to get those people paid," said association Vice President Bill Nader.

"We'll find a way to get the money to the rightful winners."

The racing industry has not always been vigilant about protecting the interest of its customers, but it has acquitted itself well in the aftermath of the Breeders' Cup larceny. At the first sign that the Pick Six payoff looked suspicious, the National Thoroughbred Racing Association issued a public statement urging law-enforcement authorities to investigate. It never tried to deny or whitewash the scandal. The sport has moved aggressively to restore the public's confidence and to ensure its wagering systems are never again compromised.

Rose declines invite to the Great American Ball Park opening

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose turned down an invitation to be Cincinnati Mayor Charlie Luken's guest when the Reds open their new stadium next week.

Luken said Monday that Rose's agent contacted him to say the former Reds star would not be at the March 31 game against the Pittsburgh Pirates in the new Great American Ball Park.

Rose agreed to a permanent ban from baseball in August 1989 following an investigation of his gambling.

He applied for reinstatement in September 1997 and has been in discussions with baseball official the past year about being reinstated.

"I'm not surprised. It was clear Pete wanted to be here, but it was clear he wouldn't do anything that would interfere with his attempt to be reinstated into Major League Baseball," Luken said.

"He'll be here in spirit. I'm sure he'll be here sooner or later."

Rose's agent, Warren Greene of Plantation, Fla., did not return messages left Monday.

The Reds declined to comment on the exchange between Rose and Luken.

"This was between Mayor Luken and Pete Rose," Reds spokesman Rob Butcher said. "We were not involved in any way, shape, or form."

Puckett faces a year in jail if convicted

MINNEAPOLIS (Sports Illustrated) — Hall of Famer Kirby Puckett went on trial Monday, accused of dragging a woman into a restaurant men's room and assaulting her in September 2002.

Prosecutors said if the former Minnesota Twins star is convicted on all three counts, they will seek probation, fines, community service, and no more than a year in jail.

Prosecutors contend he grabbed the woman's breast before she escaped from the bathroom at the Redstone American Grill in suburban Eden Prairie on Sept. 6.

He is charged with false imprisonment, criminal sexual conduct, and assault. As proceedings began Monday, he pleaded not guilty to the misdemeanor assault charge, which prosecutors added last week. He made no comment to reporters.

Puckett was once one of baseball's most beloved players, but his image has lost much of its luster since reports of the breakup of his marriage and the filing of criminal charges.

Jury selection began Monday, and opening statements and testimony could begin late this week. The woman has been identified only by initials in court documents.

The woman's credibility will be at issue, the defense has said. Judge Stephen Swanson has not ruled on a request that could block the defense from presenting testimony that the woman bared her breasts in the restaurant that night. She has denied being drunk or exposing herself.

Johnson reaps 3-year $33 million deal

Diamondback's new contract makes him highest paid pitcher in history

BY BOB BAUM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Randy Johnson and Arizona agreed Monday to a $33 million, two-year contract extension that will keep him with the Diamondbacks through the 2005 season.

Johnson won four NL Cy Young Awards and one World Series title in the first four seasons of his current contract. The left-hander will be 42 when the deal ends.

"They want some return on what they're giving me, and I try to give them it back tenfold," Johnson said. "I suppose that if you continue to say that I'm old, you're eventually going to be right. But I'm looking at it as just a number."

Johnson's $16.5 million average annual salary will be the highest ever for a pitcher, topping the $15.45 million Roger Clemens averaged with the New York Yankees in 2001 and 2002.

Johnson is 81-27 since joining the Diamondbacks, raising his career record to 224-106.

"We're talking about one of the greatest pitchers of all-time," owner Jerry Colangelo said. "It's been a real pleasure for our fans, and it's a joy to say they're going to be able to see him continue on."

Last year, Johnson became the first major leaguer since Boston's Pedro Martinez in 1999 — and the first NL player since the New York Mets' Dwight Gooden in 1985 — to win a pitching triple crown. Johnson was 24-5 with a 2.37 ERA and 334 strikeouts, leading the major leagues in strikeouts for the ninth time.

In 2001, he won Games 2, 6, and 7 of the World Series, becoming the first pitcher with three Series victories since Detroit's Mickey Lolich in 1968 and the first ever with five victories in a single postseason. After throwing 101 pitches in Game 6, he came out of the bullpen the following night and pitched 1½ shutout innings, enabling Arizona to rally in the ninth inning for a 3-2 win.

Johnson agreed to a four-year contract with Arizona before the 1999 season, a deal that guaranteed him $52.4 million over four years and contained a $12 million option for 2003 with a $3 million buyout.

He already has earned $2.75 million in bonuses, raising his total under the current deal to a minimum $64.15 million over five years.

Johnson's extension will pay him $16 million in each of the 2004 and 2005 seasons, and contains a $1 million personal-services contract at the end of the deal.

Arizona is deferring $6 million in each year of the extension. Johnson already had agreed to defer $8 million a year in salary for 2001, 2002, and 2003, money that will be paid with 6 percent compounded interest.

AL and NL injuries raise questions for several teams

ASSOCIATED PRESS

With the start of the season less than a week away, many of baseball's top players are nursing nagging injuries.

Injured All-Star shortstops Alex Rodriguez and Miguel Tejada sat out Monday but hope to be ready for the start of the season.

Also, World Series MVP Troy Glaus was sent back to California to have his injured right hand examined, and pitchers Jarrod Washburn, Kazuhiro Sasaki, and Orlando Hernandez all might miss the openers.

Rodriguez will play today for the first time in two weeks in a minor-league game, but he won't play any more games for the Rangers this spring in case his sore neck acts up.

The AL home-run leader the past two seasons hasn't played since March 11 because of a herniated disk in his neck. If Rodriguez doesn't play in a major-league spring game, the Rangers could retroactively place him on the disabled list for the final 10 days of spring training.

Tejada will sit out at least two games for Oakland after getting hit on the left knee with a pitch. He was bothered by the knee for the past couple of weeks and then was hit by a pitch Sunday.

"The trainer told me to take it easy on him for a couple of days," A's manager Ken Macha said. "We're playing it on the safe side. He wanted to know if he was playing."

Washburn, an 18-game winner for the World Series champion Angels last year, probably won't start until the team's fifth game this season because of a sprained left shoulder.

Manager Mike Scioscia said Washburn will pitch in a minor-league game March 30, when the Angels face the Rangers to begin the season.

Glaus was sent back to Anaheim on Monday to be examined by hand specialist Dr. Norman Zemel. Glaus injured his hand before Sunday's game with San Diego and was scratched from the lineup minutes before the game.

Johnson appears to be getting better with age. Here's a look at his last five seasons:

	W	L	ERA	IP	SO
1998	19	11	3.28	248.2	329
1999	17	9	2.49	271.2	364
2000	19	7	2.64	248.2	347
2001	21	6	2.49	249.2	372
2002	24	5	2.32	260.0	334

NBA ROUNDUP

Knicks spurn Raptors with threes

NEW YORK — Howard Easley hit two 3-pointers as part of an 8-0 run to end the third quarter, putting New York Knicks in control for good in a victory over Toronto on Monday night, 100-90.

The Knicks went ahead by as many as 16 in the fourth quarter.

Kurt Thomas scored 23, and Allan Houston added 20 for the Knicks, while Easley and Latrell Sprewell scored 13 apiece.

Antonio Davis scored 23 and Vince Carter had 21 for the Raptors, although Carter was held to just five points in the second half.

The Knicks made five of their eight 3-pointers in the second half, and Easley's pair in a 69-second span of the third quarter took the Raptors out of the game.

The first gave New York a 66-64 lead and was followed by a 22-footer by Sprewell. Easley's next 3 made it a seven-point game.

Memphis 110, Orlando 104

ORLANDO — Pao Gasol scored 26 points, and Jason Williams added 17 points and 15 assists as the Memphis Grizzlies beat Orlando on Monday night.

Tracy McGrady had 34 points for the Magic, but hit only one of 10 shots in the second half when the Magic offense sputtered. Gordan Giricek and Pat Garrity had 19 points apiece for Orlando.

Lorenzen Wright had 17 points and 10 rebounds for the Grizzlies.

McGrady had 28 points in the first half when the Magic shot 60 percent (24 of 40) from the field.

Despite the accuracy from the field, Orlando never lead by more than eight. Memphis hung close by spreading the scoring around and hitting 54.3 percent of its shots.

McGrady missed his last six 3-point attempts and was 3-for-10 from that range for the game. The Magic shot only 37.5 percent in the second half, when they committed 11 of their 17 turnovers.

NHL ROUNDUP

O'Connell victorious in home debut

BOSTON — Mike Knuble scored the tiebreaking goal 15 seconds into the third period on Monday night to lead the Bruins to a victory over Toronto in Mike O'Connell's home debut as Boston coach, 3-2.

Steve Shields stopped 24 shots, including a glove save on Alexander Mogilny's wrist shot with 45.9 seconds left to preserve the win.

Rob Zamuner and Martin Lapointe also scored for Boston.

Darcy Tucker and Tomas Kaberle scored for Toronto and Ed Belfour stopped 30 shots.

Toronto twice took one-goal leads before the Bruins tied it.

The Maple Leafs led 2-1 when Lapointe took a pass from Jozef Stempel in the slot and wristed it past Belfour with 6:01 left in the second.

Knuble gave Boston the lead for good when he fought for the puck behind the net, brought it out to the side and fired a shot from a tough angle past Belfour.

had two goals, and the Flyers scored three times within 1:36 of the third period as Philadelphia beat Atlanta.

Tony Amonte added a goal and an assist, and Keith Primeau and Donald Brashear each had two assists.

Handzus gave the Flyers a 3-2 lead with 24 seconds left in the second period when he one-timed the rebound of Joe Sacco's shot past Milan Hnilicka.

Amonte gave the Flyers a two-goal cushion at 5:21 of the third period when he deked past three Atlanta players and fired a wrist shot past Hnilicka for his 18th goal.

Kim Johnsson finished the spurt 1:17 later when he ripped a shot from the right circle that struck the post on its way into the net.

Buffalo 4, Colorado 3, OT

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Jochen Hecht scored his second goal of the game with 44.8 seconds left in overtime as Buffalo rallied to beat Colorado.

Hecht skated down the right wing, deked Colorado goaltender David Aebischer and tucked the puck in the right side of the net to give the Sabres the win.

Peter Forsberg scored twice, once on the power play, and Milan Hejduk scored once.

Daniel Briere had tied the game at 3 when he scored a power-play goal with 7:19 left in regulation. Maxim Afinogenov also scored for Buffalo.

Aebischer, playing in his 22nd game, stopped 31 shots. Buffalo goaltender Martin Biron made 33 saves.

New Jersey 4, Florida 1

SUNRISE, Fla. — Brian Gionta's second-period goal held up as the game-winner in a New Jersey victory over Florida.

Jiri Bicek, Jay Pandolfo and Joe Nieuwendyk also scored for the Devils, who won their fourth straight and maintained a four-point lead over Philadelphia in the Atlantic Division.

Marcus Nilson scored a power-play goal for Florida.

Martin Brodeur made 19 saves for New Jersey. Jani Hurme, making his first start for Florida in seven games, had 33 saves.

Bicek gave New Jersey the lead at 14:12 of the first period when his slap shot from just inside the blue line deflected off defenseman Andreas Lilja's stick about 50 feet from the net.

horoscopes

Tuesday, March 25, 2003 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You could easily say something that will lead to trouble today. Be careful not to get too serious. Take a lighthearted approach, but remember to complete your work.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't let others disillusion you about what you can and can't do. Travel for knowledge rather than pleasure, and you will discover valuable information.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An investment made today may not be all that it's drummed up to be. Organize your financial situation before you make a financial promise.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may meet someone you think is special today. It doesn't matter if this person is a personal or business connection. You must not believe everything that you are told.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You or someone close to you may have some health issues to deal with today. Don't let a colleague or employer take you for granted. Emotional matters must not be revealed at work.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your practical nature coupled with your creative talents should amuse everyone you deal with today. A little socializing at the gym could lead to a good connection.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Expect things to crop up at home that will disrupt your normal routine. You may need to tend to the affairs of an older relative. Don't overspend in order to impress someone.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The more you interact with others, the better informed you will be. You can learn a great deal today if you listen and observe.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): This is not the day to gamble or overspend; luxury can wait for the time being. Focus on bringing more cash in through hard work.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Self-deception will be your worst enemy. Do not let false pride or jealousy stand in the way of saving a situation you cherish.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Try to keep your thoughts to yourself even if you are upset. You will have a much better chance of turning things around later in the week.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If you don't have the cash, don't make the purchase. Work-related matters should be taken care of before you do anything for free.
