U.S. troops resume attack, hit Guard

'We're tightening the noose around Baghdad,' one top war planner declares

BY RAJIV CHANDRASEKARAN AND PETER BAKER
WASHINGTON POST

KUWAIT CITY — Behind a withering aerial assault on Iraqi defenses, U.S. Marines resumed their advance toward Baghdad from the southeast Tuesday.

A major clash erupted between Army troops and Republican Guard defenders around Karbala to the west, ending a week-long pause in the U.S. push toward the seat of President Saddam Hussein's government.

Columns of M1 Abrams tanks and armored vehicles from 1st Marine Division moved out of staging areas, where the Marines had rested and resupplied, and headed into the outer defenses of the Republican Guard's Baghdad Division around the city of Kut, approximately 100 miles southeast of the capital. "We're tightening the noose around Baghdad," Lt. Col. George Smith, a top war planner for the Marines, said as the troops began moving out.

To the west, north of Karbala and around 50 miles south of Baghdad, units from 7th Cavalry Regiment of the Army's 3rd Infantry Division were engaged in a "knock-down, drag-out" battle with elements of the Republican Guard's Medina Division, a Pentagon official said. The clash began as a "probing action" of Iraqi defenses, the official said, but grew into "an all-out battle."

Taken together, the Marine and 3rd Infantry Division movements appeared to represent a beginning of the battle with Saddam's main defensive deployments around the capital that U.S. officers have depicted as a decisive chapter of the war to dismantle Saddam's three-decade-old Baath Party government.

The troop movements, begun under cover of night, were preceded by a day of relentless air attacks and artillery and rocket barrages against the Iraqi troops arrayed in defense of Baghdad. All afternoon, the contrails of U.S. warplanes were seen hanging over the area around Karbala, white streaks across the clear sky over central Iraq.

F/A-18 Hornets and other warplanes from the 3rd Marine Air Wing struck Iraqi T-72 tanks in reinforced shelters as well as armored personnel carriers, fuel trucks, artillery batteries, bridges, missile canisters, radar systems, a cable-repeater station, and a building believed to be a Baath Party office, Marine officers said. "We're hitting everything we can," said Maj. Glindon Ashbrook.

Six large explosions were also heard in Baghdad early this morning, in a resumption of a bombing campaign against the capital that had subsided slightly. Several cruise missiles were fired Tuesday at sites in Baghdad and to the southwest of the capital. Among the targets in Baghdad, U.S. officials said, was a complex that serves as the office of the Iraqi National Olympic Committee, which has been run by Saddam's elder son, Uday. According to Iraqi exiles, it also houses a prison run by him.

The renewed U.S. troop movements were depicted by U.S. military officials as the first stage of an assault on the well-entrenched defenses ringing Baghdad and the largest ground offensive since the invasion of

They share their first and last name, wear glasses, and live in Iowa City.

The similarities stop there for Dave Michael Goodner, a 30-year-old veteran of the U.S. Army who supports the Iraq war, and Dave Anthony Goodner, a UI student who is one of the leading antiwar protesters on campus.

The elder Goodner has been receiving the other's phone calls ever since he moved to Iowa City in March 1999, but recent mix-ups over the name have become menacing.

"I got a call last week saying I was a communist faggot and I better not be seen in public," said Dave Michael, who served as a general mechanic in the Army from 1992-94. "They clearly had us confused."

He said the calls didn't bother him until recent antiwar protests. Since then, around a half dozen callers have erroneously threatened him and called him names.

Others who are sympathetic to the antiwar views call looking for guidance from the man who organized the 24-hour Peace Camp on the Pentacrest.

"Someone called me last weekend at 3:20 a.m. saying there were people throwing rocks at their tents and that I should go help," Dave Michael said. "That's when I knew this [had] become a problem."

And when he denies being the man they're looking for, some callers believe he's trying to hide his identity. He describes himself as "100 percent behind Bush" in supporting the war in Iraq and someone who would return to the Army to fight if needed.

The two have not spoken directly, except for a message Dave Anthony left on Dave Michael's answering machine apologizing for the inadvertent harassment. His parents also called the electrician for Advanced Electrical Services to apologize.

"I regret that he had to go through this," said Dave Anthony. "They should not be contacting him."

Threatening calls haven't been a problem for the real protester, who is not listed in the phone book.

Al Jazeera debuts on local cable TV

BY JOHN MOLSEED
THE DAILY IOWAN

A controversial Arabic television network debuted on UITSV and 200 other campuses and cable systems throughout North America on Tuesday.

Al Jazeera, the popular Arabic news network, will be aired Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5:30 p.m. on SCOLA, a nonprofit communications organization.

SCOLA appears on UITSV Channel 4 and Iowa City Channel 17 through local cable provider Mediacom.

Al Jazeera drew heavy criticism from the Pentagon for broadcasting footage of U.S. prisoners of war during the current war in Iraq. It is based in Qatar, also the site of the headquarters of the U.S. Central Command, which is directing the war.

The news source marks SCOLA's first modern Arabic media resource. Based in McClelland, Iowa, the organization runs unedited and untranslated broadcasts from more than 70 countries as an educational resource providing uncut native-speaking newscasts.

"We weren't looking for Al Jazeera specifically," said SCOLA spokesman Joe Kelly. "We were looking for modern Arabic content."

Kelly added that the organization has received numerous requests for Al Jazeera since the 9/11 terrorist attacks. A nonprofit group, SCOLA couldn't afford the Arab media outlet until Al Jazeera offered free access.

O'Connor skeptical as justices consider Michigan admissions

BY CHARLES LANE
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — A key member of the Supreme Court aimed a series of skeptical questions at opponents of ethnicity-conscious university admissions, as the court heard oral arguments Tuesday in the most important civil rights cases of the last quarter-century.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, widely viewed as holding the swing vote on an otherwise evenly divided court, seemed to take issue with the idea that University of Michigan admissions criteria intended to boost minority enrollment were necessarily to blame for the rejection of Barbara Grutter and other white students.

"How are we certain," she asked their attorney, "that there is an injury to your client that she wouldn't have experienced for other reasons?"

O'Connor said that their insistence on absolute colorblindness in admissions might be too inflexible. "You're speaking in absolutes, and it isn't quite that," she said. "I think we have given recognition to the use of race in a variety of settings."

Her remarks were among the most intriguing in a debate whose drama was commensurate with cases that could determine the consideration of ethnicity not only in college admissions but possibly in other realms as well.

As affirmative action faced its most important legal test since 1978, several thousand supporters of the concept rallied outside the Supreme Court building as the justices heard arguments in the two cases. Shortly after the arguments were done, the court itself took the unusual step of making an audio tape of the pro-

Group to push AIDS to forefront

BY MATTHEW MOSS
THE DAILY IOWAN

A UI student group vowed Tuesday to make HIV/AIDS a crucial issue in the 2004 presidential race by turning out in force at local campaign stops and the Iowa primaries.

The UI chapter of the Student Global AIDS Campaign, a group that formed in the wake of U2 lead singer Bono's visit during AIDS Awareness Week in December, plans to confront candidates about research funding for the disease that infects 1,123 Iowans and more than 40 million people worldwide.

HIV/AIDS is an affliction that cannot be forgotten, panelists told approximately 30 listeners at Tuesday's lecture, "AIDS 101." "The people with HIV are where the [treatment] drugs are not," said panelist Asia Russell, a member of ACT-UP, the largest grass-roots AIDS activist group in the United States. "The AIDS crisis is a political crisis that requires political action."

Sophomore Katie Finn, the vice president of the UI chapter, said only 5 percent of AIDS patients worldwide have access to treatment.

"There's too many things working against these people," she said.

The lecture drew attention to the HIV/AIDS pandemic that is spreading in countries, developed and undeveloped alike. Special attention was paid to the continent of Africa, where the life expectancy for HIV-positive patients is plummeting, while the life expectancy for their peers in Western nations steadily rise.

Asia Russell speaks in the IMU on the subject of HIV and AIDS funding on Monday evening. She is a member of ACT-UP, the largest grass-roots AIDS activist group in the United States.

"The United States has a large role in curtailing the epidemic," said panelist and UI senior Tuyet Nguyen, the president of the UI chapter. "It is not only our job to make sure [politicians] are making the correct promises, but that they will also follow through."

Panelists also stressed educating the public about HIV/AIDS, especially in a places such as Iowa, where, Nguyen said, "It's not a top priority because [people] don't see much of it."

The group is planning HIV/AIDS awareness programs April 28-30 in the IMU Wheelroom.

Tricia Kitzmann, the HIV/AIDS Program director for the Grant Wood Chapter of the American Red Cross, said that HIV/AIDS patients in the state suffer from more discrimination than those from more densely populated areas where the disease is more common.

Johnson County has reported 83 cases of HIV/AIDS. Ninety-one cases were reported in Iowa in 2002, while 28 deaths were reported from HIV/AIDS in the same period.

People living with HIV/AIDS, Russell said, have a "right to exist, the right to live and die in dignity."

STATE

In Germany, Vilsack courts businesses

DES MOINES (AP) — Gov. Tom Vilsack signed a memorandum of understanding with pharmaceutical interests in Germany on Tuesday, a move he said could lead to broader exchanges and trade with that country.

The memorandum calls for coordination of ideas and research between Iowa and the German National Association of Pharmaceutical Industries, an industry group of approximately 300 pharmaceutical companies, the governor said.

"There is an opportunity for scientific exchanges and biotechnology cooperation," Vilsack said in a conference call with Iowa reporters.

The governor left last weekend on a European trade mission aimed at pitching the state to potential investors, with a clear focus on the biotech industry.

Under the agreement, Vilsack said the state's trade office in Frankfurt could coordinate contacts among German companies and officials in Iowa, particularly Iowa's universities, where a lot of work on biotech issues is being conducted.

"We are hopeful for additional opportunities," the governor said.

After he returns, the governor said he'll meet with university officials to sketch out a method for coordinating programs with German companies.

He said the agreement, coupled with other steps he's taken, should illustrate that the state is serious about becoming a home for the biotech industry.

"This also sends a message to companies that are located within the state ... that we're interested in looking for ways to branch out," Vilsack said.

The governor also has proposed a $500 million "Iowa Values Fund" to lure biotech companies to the state, but legislative leaders haven't yet come up with the money for it.

Endowment loss causes foundation layoffs

BY CALVIN HENNICK
THE DAILY IOWAN

The UI Foundation confirmed Tuesday that the UI's private fund-raising arm will eliminate 10 positions, effective June 30, largely because of a $58 million loss in the endowment.

Alan Swanson, the foundation's senior vice president, said the cuts were necessary to balance the organization's budget, which is dependent upon endowment money invested in the poorly performing stock market. Despite the current recession, the stock market remains the best long-term investment for the endowment, he said.

Swanson said that because approximately 80 percent of the foundation's operating budget goes toward salaries, it would have been impossible to cut the money anywhere else and still be effective at raising funds, he said.

"We cut as many things as we could without damaging our mission, but it wasn't enough," he said. "Ultimately, we have to be smaller to be strong. And we have to be strong to fulfill our mission to the university, which is to raise money for it."

The 10 positions represent slightly more than 5 percent of the foundation's 185-person full-time staff. The organization also employs approximately 100 students, none of whom will be affected.

Swanson declined to comment on what specific positions were cut or what the salaries for the positions are. However, he characterized the cuts as "across the board," affecting support positions within various organization departments. The Swanson said it would be "unfair" to contrast the layoffs with New's salary increase, noting that the foundation's board of directors made the decision two years ago to bring New's salary in line with other Big Ten fund-raisers.

"It's an awkward juxtaposition," Swanson said. "But I work closely with Michael New, and future commitments, an improvement over 2001, which saw $64.8 million and $59.6 million respectively. Swanson expects the success to continue, despite the layoffs.

"I think we'll be able to operate as strongly as before, but it's going to require extra work from everybody," he said.

positions range "from entry-level to two or three times that," he said but refused to give the salary range for entry-level employees. All those laid off are "good people," he said.

The cuts come just months after The Daily Iowan learned that Michael New, the president of the foundation, had received a 32 percent — $55,000 — raise for the fiscal year that ended June 30, 2002.

Despite the loss to the endowment, donations to the foundation continue to roll in. Last year, the foundation secured $67.5 million in outright gifts and $101.5 million in

International dean takes Ky. post

BY ANNIE SHUPPY
THE DAILY IOWAN

A UI administrator who oversees International Programs has accepted a job as a dean at the University of Kentucky, leaving another job opening in the UI Provost's Office.

Steven Hoch, the associate provost for academic programs and the dean of International Programs, will begin work as the dean of the Kentucky College of Arts and Sciences on July 1.

As the international dean, the 52-year-old Massachusetts native oversees all international programs, the Office of International Students and Scholars, the Office for Study Abroad, and all international faculty initiatives. As associate provost, he is in charge of accreditation and collegiate and dean reviews for the provost.

"He puts in a lot of extra time," said his assistant, Evalyn

Van Allen-Shalash. "He goes beyond the call of duty when necessary."

Kentucky Provost Michael Nietzel said Hoch's experience as both a faculty member and a good scholar made him an appealing candidate. His administrative experience, specifically as a leader in international education and his program evaluations in the Provost's Office, also made him a strong contender for the position.

Hoch leaving UI

"He had a good record as a faculty member, and that's one of the first things you want when looking for someone to lead a faculty of 350," Nietzel said. "We want administrators to have experience at a good university, and I consider University of Iowa a top-flight school."

Kentucky's enrollment is roughly 25,000, and as a public research institution with a medical school and a number of professional schools, it is comparable with the UI, he said. Like the UI, Kentucky is facing a budget beset with education cuts and tuition increases, he said.

The provost, a native Iowan, said he looks forward to Hoch's arrival.

"I'm real happy he'll be here," Nietzel said. "I know he did a good job at Iowa."

Hoch, who was unavailable for comment because of surgery, served as the director of UI National Resource Center for Russian, East European, and Eurasian Studies from its inception in 1997 until 2000, when he was named associate provost and dean of International Programs.

Before coming to the UI in 1988, Hoch, who earned both his M.A. and Ph.D. from Princeton University, held appointments at Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., and Drew University in New Jersey. He was promoted to history professor at the UI in 1995.

UI Provost Jon Whitmore will oversee the selection of a replacement for Hoch, said Steve Parrott, the director of University Relations. Whitmore himself will leave his position this summer.

Hoch was announced as a finalist for the Kentucky position in February. He was also a finalist earlier this year for the executive vice chancellor position at Louisiana State University, a post he said he wanted to take to further his career.

Hoch's appointment will be submitted to the Kentucky Board of Trustees at its May 6 meeting.

Bill Shackelford of the Polk County chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving holds a graph showing the number of alcohol-related traffic fatalities since 1980 during a news conference Tuesday.

Tighten OWI measure, law enforcement says

BY MIKE GLOVER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Police and prosecutors on Tuesday warned against easing the state's drunken-driving laws, even as lawmakers consider toughening the blood-alcohol level that brings an automatic conviction.

"Drunk driving is a completely preventable crime that needlessly results in lost lives, injuries, and property damage," said Polk County Attorney John Sarcone. "Law-enforcement groups are in total agreement that this legislation should be passed immediately without any further weakening of the law."

The Iowa House has approved a measure that would lower the blood-alcohol level that brings an automatic conviction to 0.08 percent from the current 0.10 percent. The bill is pending in the Senate.

Some lawmakers say they are willing to lower the blood-alcohol level, but as a trade, they want to weaken the ability of police to suspend driver's licenses or make it easier for motorists to get permits to drive to work after a conviction. They say the laws are so tough, they are punitive.

Supporters at a Statehouse rally argued against such moves.

"One of the things we do not need is to weaken the laws that are on the books," said Bill Shackelford of the Polk County chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving. "It would be hard to start back up the hill to increased traffic fatalities," said Col. Robert Garrison, the head of the Iowa State Patrol.

Garrison said the issue comes as the state is beginning to see progress on highway safety. The 407 highway deaths in the state last year was the lowest number since 1945, he said.

In addition, roughly 28 percent of the fatalities in Iowa are alcohol-related, compared with approximately 40 percent nationally, he said.

"The innocent victims of drunk driving must continue to have the best protection available," Garrison said.

Gov. Tom Vilsack supports the proposal, which would toughen a drunk-driving law already considered among the toughest in the nation. Under state law, motorists who fail a field-sobriety test, or refuse to take one, can have their license lifted on the spot by police.

License revocations are handled administratively, separately from criminal proceedings. It's possible for a motorist to be acquitted of a drunken-driving charge and still face license revocation. The Iowa Supreme Court has upheld the procedure. Penalties and enforcement also are tough.

In 1982, when lawmakers began debating tightening the law, around 4,000 drunk drivers were arrested each year. There were 17,000 drunk-driving arrests last year.

Police adjust arrest stats after press inquiry

BY PHIL DAVIDSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

A media inquiry helped identify errors in the Iowa City police 2002 annual report that overstated arrests by more than 800.

Police now say they recorded 8,929 arrests last year, not the 9,758 that was released last week.

Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake said the errors can be attributed to a computer glitch that incorrectly recorded traffic citations as arrests in cases in which other charges were filed. He said the majority of these occurrences were in drunken-driving arrests.

The glitch started in 2001. Police now say there were 7,042 arrests that year, almost 300 less than the number originally released.

Winkelhake said the errors were discovered when a reporter from the Iowa City Press-Citizen asked to see the 2002 numbers to compare with those of 2001.

"In this case, the press did us a favor," Winkelhake said.

The department is unsure why the new computer system, which was installed in August 2001, recorded citations as arrests.

"It was one of those computer gremlins," Winkelhake said.

The corrected numbers show a jump of 1,887 arrests from 2001 to 2002, the largest hike in at least a decade. Winkelhake said the bulk of the increases were alcohol-related.

As of October 2002, the department had cited 1,741 people for underage drinking, up 43 percent from 2001.

Winkelhake said heightened enforcement is partially responsible for the upswing in arrests.

Using a $21,000 grant from the state's Highway Traffic Bureau, the department's 75 officers joined forces with UI police to strengthen their downtown alcohol enforcement, according to the report.

The grant also helped Iowa City police and other agencies step up efforts to fight vehicle-safety operations, including speeding control, accident reduction, and catching more drunken drivers.

Winkelhake said the report's errors will not affect the department's state funding.

He said the problem has since been fixed, and he expects the corrected numbers to be up on the department's Web site soon.

Chef leads move to give kids a green thumb

BY JESSICA REESE
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa City restaurateur Kurt Friese has a vision for improving the quality of education in area schools — one cabbage, carrot, and cucumber at a time.

Friese heads a project titled From the Ground Up, which aims to incorporate vegetable gardens at all Iowa City schools as a learning tool for students and teachers. With the backing of more than 70 community members, his venture has been gaining momentum since the approval of a multimillion-dollar school bond in February.

The proposed gardens would allow schoolchildren a hands-on opportunity to see important connections among soil, plants, and plate, he said.

"Boy, you really see the smile on kids' faces when they bite into a tomato they've just harvested," said Friese, the owner of Adagio, 325 E. Washington St., and Devotay, 117 N. Linn St. "There's nothing taught in school that can't be taught in a garden."

Friese began pursuing the garden idea when the recent $39 million school-bond issue was in its preliminary stages. Once the bond passed in February, he said, he was prompted to push even harder for the project.

"As long as we're going to be building new schools in the first place, it would be much easier to build the gardens in now rather than ... later," Friese said. "The architects should be looking at this the moment the pen goes to paper."

He has met with School Superintendent Lane Plugge to promote the gardens.

Plugge said the key for success would be interest at the school level, and he plans to present the idea to all the district's principals at a meeting today.

"I'm primarily interested because I think it could end up being a project where students are hooked up with adult mentors," Plugge said, noting the number of master gardeners in Iowa City. "It definitely has some exciting possibilities."

Four out of 17 district elementary schools currently have vegetable gardens, while a number have prairies or butterfly gardens.

Julie Busch, who helps coordinate the 120-by-25-foot vegetable garden at Twain Elementary School, 1355 DeForest Ave., said the garden supplies food not only to the school but also to Table-to-Table and the Crisis Center.

"There's certainly a valuable amount of outdoor education," she said. "The kids learn about gardening as well as learning about the importance of service."

As a professional chef of 25 years, Friese said, he first gained an appreciation for growing and using his own fresh ingredients during culinary school. After searching for other professionals nationwide who were doing the same, he came across the work of Alice Waters, the renowned chef at Chez Panisse in Berkeley, Calif., and founder of the Edible School Yard at Martin Luther King Jr. School.

Although there are a number of schools around the state with gardens, the proposed garden project here would be the most heavily integrated into the entire school curriculum, Friese said.

"Kids believe food comes from grocery stores and McDonald's," he said. "We've sort of lost some of our culture. It's not just Iowa City, it's nationwide."

House nixes tightening childcare checks

DES MOINES (AP) — The House voted Tuesday to reject an effort to increase inspections at registered childcare centers in the state.

Democrats sought to divert inspection fees on gambling equipment to pay for inspection of child centers, saying that Iowa's percentage of two-parent working families is among the highest in the nation and that up to 5 percent of all child-abuse cases occur in a daycare.

"There are thousands of registered childcare facilities in Iowa that are not inspected because the inspection system is underfunded," said Rep. Phil Wise, D-Keokuk.

The move came as the House considered slapping a $25 inspection fee on gambling equipment to pay for inspections of the machines. Legislative staffers said the measure would raise $250,000 to $800,000 a year.

Democrats sought to shift the money away from inspecting the machines to inspecting childcare centers.

"If the majority party can find a way to inspect gambling machines, it can certainly find a way to inspect our childcare facilities," said Rep. Janet Petersen, D-Des Moines, who has a 2-year-old in daycare. "Parents should know when they drop off their kids at daycare they are safe."

Troops face bewildering combat zone

BY DAVID ZUCCHINO AND GEOFFREY MOHAN
LOS ANGELES TIMES

WITH U.S. FORCES IN IRAQ — Soldiers of the U.S. military marching toward Baghdad are encountering a confusing form of war in which foes disguise themselves as civilians, women are used as human shields, and any vehicle driving down the road could be a suicide bomb.

For soldiers in the field, the main emphasis has become self-preservation in hostile territory, while trying to avoid accidentally killing innocent civilians. But it is difficult in an arena where traditional rules of war are ignored, and women and children find themselves in the midst of combat.

First Sgt. Reinaldo Ortiz, 39, of the Army's 3rd Infantry Division, described the time when Iraqi troops who had been fighting his company decided to surrender their bunker.

"There were six women," Ortiz said. "There were little children. We had one woman who was nursing a baby. There was a soldier coming out; he was in his underwear. He'd been trying to change his clothes. It's hard to know who is who."

On Tuesday, the day after seven women and children were killed when a vehicle they were riding in failed to stop at a military checkpoint, Lt. Col. Patrick Fetterman, a battalion commander with the 101st Airborne Division, was lecturing his company commanders on the rules of engagements.

Pfc. Dustin Jans of Phoenix, a member of the 101st Airborne Division, questions Iraqi women at a checkpoint in Najaf in central Iraq on Tuesday.

Jean-Marc Bouju/Associated Press

If a soldier anywhere is threatened by a weapon or a vehicle, he is to "eliminate the threat," Fetterman said.

"We do our very best to preserve the sanctity of these peoples' lives," he said afterward, referring to civilians. "But if they don't act with common sense, we have to defend ourselves. When you're told to stop in a war zone by heavily armed men, and you don't stop, those men will fire."

The colonel added: "You don't have the option of just letting a vehicle approach you."

The task of distinguishing between civilians and Iraqi gunmen has been complicated by paramilitaries who fire on U.S. forces at night and walk around unarmed and in civilian dress during the day. Intelligence officers with the 101st say some paramilitary fighters have been caught dressed as women.

U.S. soldiers are taught to open fire at anyone brandishing a weapon. If that person appears to be surrendering, soldiers are to keep their distance and order the individual to drop the weapon and get on the ground.

Missing Newsday journalists are safe

NEW YORK (Newsday) — Newsday journalists Matthew McAllester and Moises Saman, who had been missing in Iraq since last week, crossed the border into Jordan Tuesday and said they were safe and in good health.

McAllester telephoned Newsday Foreign Editor Dele Olojede to say they were safe.

"We are fine. We are well,"

McAllester said in a telephone conversation with Newsday editors as he and Saman waited at the border to enter Jordan on Tuesday.

A relieved Saman added, "We're in good spirits, and happy to be safe, and looking forward to a nice meal."

McAllester told Newsday editors that they were detained by Iraqi authorities early on March 25 in their room at the Palestine Hotel, handcuffed, and taken to a prison, where they were kept until Monday.

Once again, Saudis call for Saddam to quit

BY KIM MURPHY
LOS ANGELES TIMES

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Saudi Arabia repeated its call Tuesday for Saddam Hussein to sacrifice himself to end the war in Iraq, warning there is a danger that hostilities will escalate into a regional conflict whose outcome cannot be predicted.

"I've seen the destruction that looms ahead of us, and I've seen that whatever happens, the victor is the loser," Saudi Foreign Minister Saud al Faisal said at a news conference. "It is a time of action to stop something we see as catastrophic, before we reach that precipice."

Saudi officials have been pressing their ideas to resolve the conflict, but al Faisal has refused to give details.

"We have said we have ideas and proposals. But the ideas and proposals cannot be seriously tackled unless both sides agree to the cease-fire," al Faisal said. "This is absolutely essential, because to hold negotiations while everybody has his finger on the trigger will put in jeopardy anything that will be discussed."

Saudi diplomats sought before the war to negotiate an exile for Saddam, but when the United States didn't respond, the Saudis moved on, according to sources close to the government. The Saudis are now concerned with the post-war government in Iraq, which they strongly believe must not be led by the United States.

Saudi Arabia has urged "internationalizing" the interim government created after the fall of Saddam and has also pressed for an Israeli-Palestinian peace plan. "You've got to internationalize the post-war issue, and you've got to move very, very hard on the peace process, or it isn't going to work," said one source, who asked not to be identified.

According to the Saudi proposal, the U.S. military would remain to keep the peace and search for weapons of mass destruction. But the civil administration would be immediately handed over to international humanitarian organizations, probably under the auspices of the United Nations.

A new Iraqi government would be quickly put into place and would be responsible for post-war reconstruction.

The Saudis have said they will oppose a U.S. military-led occupation in Iraq, which the Bush administration envisions could last as long as two years to help the transition to a new Iraq.

Arab leaders have indicated that they might not recognize a military occupation and that they doubt whether Iraqi citizens will cooperate.

"A military occupation is not the way to solve the problem, and the government should be decided by the Iraqi people," the Saudi foreign minister said. "It behooves us all to put our trust in the judgment of the Iraqi people rather than make the judgment in their stead."

U.S. forces move on Baghdad

IRAQ

Iraq 13 days ago. U.S. military officials emphasized that the attack was made possible by the massive aerial bombardment of Republican Guard artillery, tanks, and barracks over the past few days. Although Iraqi commanders have shifted in reinforcements from the north, they said, the pounding from the air has left two of the divisions guarding Baghdad at below 50 percent of their normal ability to fight.

They "have been taking a pounding" for several days, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said at the Pentagon, adding: "They're being attacked from the air, they're pressured from the ground, and in good time, they won't be there."

The Pentagon reported the number of U.S. troops identified as killed in action or missing in action has risen to 62, with more than 100 wounded. The department's tallies, awaiting notification of families, often lags behind reports from the battlefield.

bat headquarters in the Iraqi desert said Tuesday's attack was intended to retake the initiative after the pause that began with debilitating sandstorms early last week and turned into an opportunity to bring men and equipment back up to standard after their swift, 250-mile charge from the Kuwaiti border that began March 20. While the commanders predicted a stiff fight from the beginning, Marine units that moved forward found abandoned equipment, indicating that Iraqi soldiers had retreated from the most forward of their positions.

where most of the media is state-run. It has gained popularity and respect as an independent voice in the region.

While it has received often broadcasts tapes purported to be from Osama bin Laden, it also regularly shows interviews with U.S. government officials.

Even if images are quite different from those run by the American media, the Al Jazeera content will not be edited.

"If we edit, we're determining the scope of someone else's understanding of a region of the world," Kelly said, adding that his organization doesn't have the resources to edit content anyway.

Reza Aslan, a UI visiting instructor of religious studies, said Al Jazeera isn't biased, it is just another news source that finds and disseminates stories.

"It's not dueling propaganda," he said. "It's dueling agendas."

Aslan pointed to the frequency with which Al Jazeera is cited by other media and an award it won for fighting censorship as evidence of the network's credibility.

Al Jazeera also offers a new perspective in news that has been, until recently, dominated by American and European media.

UI sophomore Asana Mohamad, who grew up in Saudi Arabia, said Al Jazeera is a credible source of information that should be just one of several news outlets used to gather information about the war.

"It's important for us to know how Arab countries see the United States," she said.

UI senior Erick Skogman said the potential for controversial content doesn't bother him because viewers have the ultimate choice in what they see.

"You absolutely have to be your own censor," he said, adding that any shocking content would be worth having a different perspective on the war in Iraq.

Many UI students agreed.

"Al Jazeera is better reporting than CNN," said UI junior Brian McDonnell. "CNN uses its reports."

Supreme Court looks at Michigan admissions

SUPREME COURT

ceedings publicly available. The last time the justices did that was in 2000, for the cases related to that year's presidential election.

At a time when the country's attention is occupied by the war in Iraq, several justices even implied that the country's national security might be affected by the outcome of the case.

Two different admissions policies at Michigan are at issue in the two cases that were argued Tuesday, Grutter v. Bollinger and Gratz v. Bollinger.

Grutter is a challenge to the university's law-school admissions program, which gives black, Latino, and Native American applicants loosely defined special consideration to ensure that there is a "critical mass" of such students in each new class.

Gratz is a challenge to the university's undergraduate college, which tries to ensure a "critical mass" of black, Latino, and Native American enrollment by giving such applicants an automatic 20-point bonus on the school's 150-point "selection index." Bonus points may also be given for such things as "legacy" and geographical origin.

The university argues that its programs, which are similar to admissions policies at many other selective institutions, are designed to create educationally beneficial "diversity" in its student population. It says that this rationale was endorsed by the Supreme Court in the 1978 Bakke case.

In that case, the court said universities could not set fixed numerical quotas for minority admissions as a remedy for past discrimination, but a separate opinion by the late Justice Lewis Powell left open the possibility that they could use ethnicity to achieve diversity in the hope of providing a better learning environment for all people, and universities have treated it as binding precedent ever since.

Opponents of affirmative action contend that it's far too vague and open-ended a notion to justify the violation of whites' clear constitutional right to equal treatment under the law. Admissions policies such as Michigan's are the practical equivalent of quotas, they argue.

Recent Supreme Court precedents have endorsed the notion that there's no constitutional distinction between discrimination intended to harm blacks or other minorities and programs intended to help them. Any ethnic classification, the court has held, must be carefully crafted to achieve a "compelling" government purpose, with the least possible harm to others' rights.

The Bush administration has attacked Michigan's programs on this "narrow tailoring" basis, arguing in a brief to the court that state universities must attempt ethnic-neutral methods of ensuring diversity.

But until now, the court hasn't squarely revisited the issue of college and professional-school admissions since Bakke.

The case will affect affirmative action not only at state universities such as Michigan but also private universities, because federal law forbids discrimination by any institutions that receive federal funding, as most universities do.

National-security considerations unexpectedly entered the debate Tuesday when Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg and John Paul Stevens, both clearly sympathetic to the Michigan program, pressed Solicitor General Theodore Olson about for his view of similar programs at the nation's military academies.

In a friend-of-the-court brief, Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf and other former top-ranking members of the armed forces argued that the fighting capability of the multi-ethnic U.S. military depends on minority officers produced through affirmative action at the service academies. Unstated, but obvious, was the broader context: the current battle for a Muslim country's future being waged by multi-ethnic U.S. Army and Marine platoons.

Speaking for an administration that both opposes the Michigan program and operates the service academies, Olson said that all institutions should seek ethnically neutral means to ensure diversity, playing down the officers' brief as "the opinion of certain individuals."

Ginsburg didn't seem satisfied, insisting that, by Olson's logic, the service academies' policies would be "illegal."

The court's opponents of affirmative action scored points of their own.

Letters to the Editor

Protesting is a right

I take great offense at Jason Burgmaier's letter in the March 31 DI. As a veteran of Desert Storm, I resent the implication that everyone opposed to the war is anti-American. Tell me, Mr. Burgmaier, how much blood and sweat have you given in support of this country? I notice you are not rushing to put your ass on the line for your ideals. I proudly served in the U.S. military, and I will never hesitate to defend my country. However, I now feel I must defend it against those in this country who equate nonviolent protest with anti-American sentiment. The rights and freedoms you enjoy are in jeopardy, but not because of Iraq or Saddam Hussein. They are being eroded by the same people who swore to defend them, your elected officials.

If people who don't agree with current policy are considered criminals, then freedom has gone the way of the dodo, and your license to shoot off your mouth will be revoked as soon as someone you don't agree with takes office. I fought for the freedom of all people, not just the people who thought like I did. Peace is possible and is best attained through nonviolence. Martin Luther King Jr. is a great example, as is Gandhi; perhaps you should take a second look at history. Before you condemn all protesters, remember some of them have actively fought for YOUR right to protest them.

Chad Faidley
Iowa City resident

It is extremely disheartening to witness students giving up on one of their fundamental rights as citizens of the United States. Protesting against a war is not about being a "hippie" or a "liberal" any more than supporting a war is about being a "warhawk" or "conservative." Labels, as demonstrated by Amanda Mittlestadt (DI, March 31), are inherently destructive to discussion about controversies. They simplify complex positions and foster hostility. The claim that "protest will never change anything" is false. Protest is about doing what each individual thinks is right. Using your voice to speak out is anything but "useless." The information we absorb through the media is biased; the government and media have a vested interest in keeping us uninformed. After all, George W. Bush said this would all be easier in a dictatorship. Protest is about community.

The Peace Camp on the Pentacrest is an example. Countless donations of time, work, and food have been made. Anyone at the Peace Camp is willing to talk about what is happening and possibilities for the future. Protest is about being patriotic. Blind acceptance of government policy does not further democracy. There is no better way to respect the contributions of veterans than to use the rights they fought for, the rights to assembly and free speech.

Protest is about creating a better world in which civilians are not in danger because of their leaders. A world in which international law is respected. A world in which economic interest does not determine military policy. A world in which violence is the last resort. A world in which international coalition is more than a brand name. A world in which people live without fear. To denigrate protest is to embrace hopelessness. I, for one, hope that the UI campus will not be without hope.

Samantha Evans
UI student

No, it's not

To the residents of 612 N. Dubuque St.: The sign on your house that reads "War is now, war is right, hope your tent is warm tonight, hippies" is childish, spiteful, and stereotypical. If you knew anything about the antiwar movement, perhaps you would hesitate to lump such diverse public figures as the pope, Nelson Mandela, Will Smith, the Dixie Chicks, Fred Durst, and Missy Elliott (to name a few), as well as the millions of clergy members, soccer moms, and political moderates who oppose this war under the convenient catch-all term "hippie." If you support this war, hang a pro-America sign and stop your ignorant protester-bashing. You are only making yourself appear hateful and grossly uninformed.

Breath-testing needs to be fixed — and fast

Local police officers must conduct urine tests on suspected drunk drivers after a judge ruled that breath-testing devices were being improperly used by law-enforcement officials. The procedural change, which went into effect March 28, could create a logistical nightmare for law-enforcement agencies, and it should spur those agencies towards refining the more convenient breath-testing method.

The new testing protocol requires police to take a urine sample from the accused, send it to Des Moines for testing, and then wait for the results. Both Iowa City and UI police will wait to press charges until test results come back, a wait that could last as long as three months. Rather than arresting drunk drivers on the spot, police will have to seek out suspects, and issue arrest warrants when necessary. The added step and potential long wait has two downsides: First, it makes it easier for accused criminals to avoid capture, and second, it forces police to devote more resources to finding suspects they've already nabbed once.

The long wait isn't the only downside of urine-testing. Naturally, such a procedure can't be conducted roadside, as the breath-tests were. Urine test must be done in private, and as the samples are legal evidence, an officer must be present when the accused is providing the evidence. Naturally, the officer must be the same sex as the suspect, which, Coralville police Lt. Ron Wenman said, could prove problematic. Again, the immediate logistical problems are only a part of the big picture; how many drunk drivers will go unpunished because police are too busy collecting urine samples to adequately patrol the streets?

Of course, accuracy is of primary importance, and for the moment, urine tests are the best option. But the breath-testing isn't inherently inaccurate — the device was simply being used wrongly. Officers were pressing a bypass button to get an immediate reading, not one measuring an eight-second flow of air, as is necessary for a correct reading. Local law-enforcement agencies should make it their top priority to train officers in the right way to use the breath-testing device and enforce proper use.

Using roadside breath-testing correctly provides law-enforcement with the best combination of convenience and accuracy for detecting drunk drivers. For their own benefit, as well as for the benefit of all those on the road, police should solve the breath-testing problem as soon as possible.

The new patriotism? Blocking War, Incorporated

During war, who benefits financially? Are the private bankers and their lobbyists trying not to grin after the United States went into even more debt with its $396 billion military budget for 2003? You and I are going to be working our whole lives paying off the $6.5 trillion debt (approximately half of this is owed to private investors) accrued by this government of ours. But of course, this is just another symptom of a sick system ensuring that rich lenders get richer and the poor get poorer.

Meanwhile, no one ever seems to publicly challenge the legitimacy of the Federal Reserve, an institution independent from the U.S. government. We owe it around $628 billion. Or no one asks where money even gets its value, for that matter. Think about it: When you pay off debt, just what are you paying off? But I'll save those censored questions for another time.

Or let's look at corporations such as Rockwell Collins, Lockheed Martin, and Boeing; during the last fiscal year, they had combined revenues of more than $75 billion. You don't have to be a financial wizard to understand why so many investment analysts are saying now is the time to buy their stocks.

Even the UI, like other publicly funded research institutions, benefits from a growing military budget. In 2002, we saw a 59 percent increase in funding for Pentagon projects. And since 1967, the UI has received $4.09 billion in external monies, with more than $1 billion coming in during the past four years. A lot of that comes from various branches of the military to support projects of all kinds to fund humanitarian projects that explore ways to reduce pollution on army bases to the health benefits of self-hypnotic relaxation.

And then consider how research universities across the country will sometimes sell patents to corporations for only a fraction of what it would have cost corporate buyers to develop on their own. The book Campus, Inc., edited by Geoffrey White, shows several examples of how taxpayer-supported research is going to increase the revenues of private corporations, adding even more billions to economic growth.

Or don't even get me started with how oil companies are involved in all of this.

It just goes on and on and on. You see, the war against Iraq cannot, and will not, be stopped. War, as a whole, is an industry. And like every industry, its first objective is self-preservation.

The war will continue, by any means necessary, regardless of the protesting. That's because war is ingrained in the economic growth (and therefore the self-esteem) of our country as well as the employment of millions of citizens.

A friend of mine in the military wouldn't even be able to go to college unless it was for the National Guard. And he's definitely not alone.

If you're a blind nationalist, then ignore what I'm writing here. Call yourself an American simply because you were born within the U.S. borders and accept on faith that this war in Iraq is the most effective and efficient way to bring about global security. And just leave it at that. No more questions.

Or, if you're a patriot, a person who has actually read the Constitution and the Bill of Rights and could pass a U.S. immigration test this very second, then take the question I'm asking to your representatives and start asking more. Do it because you love America for its ideals — and right now you see those ideals waning. Because you've probably read Thomas Paine's Common Sense, and you see the uncanny parallel between the tyrannical British back in 1776 and the small group of tyrannical corporations, investors, and politicians who are pushing for more military spending at the expense of the people.

And wherever you fall on this political spectrum, we can all agree that we need to support the troops. Send them letters. Pray. Keep writing the politicians. Get out there with the peace protesters on the Pentacrest if you like. Even if you don't think it'll make a difference, check it out because you believe we should have the right to assemble in order to respectfully form communities that talk about what our government is doing. Or if you really want to leave a legacy, start thinking of ways we can gradually restructure the economic and political system at large so that we create a world with peace and prosperity.

And make sure that your efforts also include giving a little more attention to the requests from our troops' commanders. According to an April 7 New Yorker article, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld is apparently rejecting advice from Pentagon leaders and commanding officers over in the Middle East suggesting that more aid and supplies need to be sent over immediately.

Write your representatives today, and tell them that this is just unacceptable.

DI columnist Alex Johnson is both an activist and investor who lives in Iowa City.

'Grandma Sex' hits the waves frankly

BY FRAZIER MOORE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Sue Johanson isn't trying to raise eyebrows on her TV show. She's just raising awareness about sex.

But when this gray-haired grandmother gives suggestions to a caller on how three willing partners might accomplish a sex act for which two are usually sufficient — well, at times like that, her plainspoken, often playful style can make your jaw drop.

"Let me get my dollies," Johanson begins as she reaches for visual aids. "We're short one dolly. We only have two."

It's the rare moment when Johanson is caught short.

Eight hours a week on cable's Oxygen network, she presides over some of the frankest, most edifying talk on television.

For the men and women who consult her, Johanson tackles practical questions about size, frequency, compatibility, gadgetry, and strange rashes (plus an old favorite, the "G Spot").

Here's Marie, a 43-year-old Boston woman who, admitting to minimal experience with sex, asks for help enjoying it solo.

And then along comes Courtney from Reno with her threesome inquiry — the sort of problem (however mind-expanding Johanson's solution) you will probably never face.

It's all the same to Johanson, who treats each caller with respect and good cheer.

"I'll never say you should or you shouldn't," she said. "I offer alternatives. It's about being safe, healthy, and comfortable with your body — and never doing anything you're not comfortable with."

Since 1996, Johanson has taken questions on a weekly hour aired live by Canada's W Network. It is called, with her typical directness, "Sunday Night Sex Show."

But in November 2002, her outreach was extended, courtesy of Oxygen. "Talk Sex with Sue Johanson," accepting calls exclusively from U.S. viewers, airs Sundays at 11 p.m. CST.

Though originating from different sets in the same Toronto studio, both shows are highly similar in format — and similarly fun to watch, thanks to Johanson's no-flinch, no-blush, no-bull approach. She makes sex a subject neither salacious nor lewd (despite the "explicit language" warning attached to both shows). Nor threatening.

"My age is a definite advantage," says Johanson, while refusing to pinpoint it. "If I was cute with big hair, I wouldn't have a great deal of credibility. I'd be seen as a sexy chicky-poo. And I'm not. I'm the grandma you can talk to."

Sue Johanson hosts "Talk Sex with Sue Johanson" and "Sunday Night Sex Show," advice shows aired late Sunday evenings on Oxygen.

No idolizing assault charges, Fox says

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "American Idol" finalist Corey Clark has been dropped from the Fox series because of an arrest last fall at his family's Topeka, Kan., home.

The 22-year-old singer withheld information about the arrest, which, had it been known, "might have affected his participation in the show," Fox said in a statement Monday. The statement didn't include a comment from Clark, and Fox declined to divulge information on how to contact him.

Full disclosure is required of all contestants, the network said. A misspelling of Clark's name in a police report allowed the arrest to go undetected during a background check, Fox said.

A Web site, The Smoking Gun, reported Monday that he faces trial next month on charges he assaulted his teenage sister and fought police officers while resisting arrest.

A three-count misdemeanor complaint filed by prosecutors in Kansas District Court charges him with resisting arrest, battery upon his sister, and criminal restraint, according to the Web site.

The complaint was filed Dec. 4, shortly after Clark was picked to compete on "American Idol."

He's not the first to be dropped because of his past. Contestant Frenchie Davis was bumped because she'd worked for an adult-oriented Web site, as was semifinalist Jaered Andrews, whom The Smoking Gun said faced a misdemeanor assault charge.

"Unfortunately, the search process is not perfect," the network said. "We regret the error, but the only thing we can do is learn from the incident, continue to improve the background check process, and move on."

Clark was one of nine remaining contestants on the program, and as of Tuesday morning, he was still featured on the show's Web site. No decision will be made on how his absence will affect this week's shows, which air Tuesday and Wednesday, the network said.

horoscopes

Wednesday, April 2, 2003 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You will be subject to minor mishaps and accidents if you don't slow down. Try not to argue today, even if someone picks a fight with you.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): This is a great day to learn all you can about the people around you. Someone you meet may not be upfront with you. Your strong point will come from your ability to listen and observe.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A serious group that is trying to make important changes will appreciate your input. You can meet some interesting people who can change the course of your life.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your best efforts will unfold through the hard work you put in today. You will find yourself involved in a bit of a feud if you are stubborn and unwilling to compromise.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Travel and getting involved in community events will all bring you high returns today. Do a little research in order to follow through with some business plans you have been thinking about.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take a step toward financial security. Look into your options, and prepare to make some changes to your portfolio. You should be able to start making some changes at home as well.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Partnerships will highlight your day. If you are in one already, you can take it to the next level. If you are single or looking for a business partner, get out and mingle.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will get a great deal done if you focus on your work today. You will have the drive and determination to finish what you start. New options will become available to you.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Both physical and mental alterations will lead to a sense of accomplishment. Research to find what is being offered that can help you make this transition perfect.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be feeling a little unnerved by what is going on around you. Chances are you need a change, and the outcome will be beneficial if you just let things unfold naturally.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will be the life of the party today. Others will gravitate to your side and listen to what you have to say. You can expect to receive something today.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You will get ahead if you work hard today and ask your peers for help. The more time you spend on detail, the better your project will turn out.

Women's gymnasts earn No. 3 seed

The Iowa women's gymnastics team earned a spot as the No. 3 seed in the NCAA South Central Regional, which will take place on April 12 at the University of Missouri.

The Hawkeyes, who finished the regular season ranked No. 13, will appear at regional competition for the third-consecutive season. Thirty-six teams are selected to compete in regional competition.

The top two finishers in each region advance to the NCAA championships on April 24-26 at the University of Nebraska.

Northern Iowa's Tanya Miller launched a three-run, walk-off home run to left field off Iowa pitcher Ali Arnold in the bottom of the seventh inning to give the Panthers a stunning 9-7 victory over Iowa in Cedar Falls on Tuesday afternoon.

"We just did not come to play today," said Iowa coach Gayle Blevins. "I could not give any better description than that."

The loss snapped a nine-game string of victories by the Hawkeyes and dropped Iowa to 25-7 this season.

Miller's game-ending blast came after Iowa added what it thought would be an insurance run in the top of the inning on an RBI single by Lindsey Bashor, which padded the Hawkeye lead. Bashor was 3-4 Tuesday, finishing the game with a pair of RBIs and runs scored. Her other RBI came on a double in the fifth inning that plated her older sister, Jessica. She then provided the tying run, crossing the plate on a two-bagger by Arnold that knotted the game at six runs apiece.

Pinch hitter Kylie Murray provided Iowa's most explosive offensive highlight with a grand slam to dead center in the top of the second when she entered the game to provide punch in place of the slap-hitting Katie Boney.

Murray's home run was one of 11 hits allowed by Northern Iowa starter Julie Gerdes in her seven innings of work. Just three of Iowa's runs came at Gerdes' expense as opposed to the Panthers' nine, all of which were earned.

Blevins replaced Iowa starter

Lisa Birocci in the middle of the third inning after the sophomore walked Rachael Rogers with the bases loaded. The Panthers pushed across four runs in the third, which would prove to be decisive later.

"It hurts to struggle on the mound," Blevins said, a reference to Birocci's starting effort. The Iowa ace struck out three but walked five batters and allowed two hits in just two innings of work before being replaced by Arnold. She also hit one batter and let loose with a wild pitch. Arnold allowed seven hits in 4<sup>1</sup>/<sub>3</sub>, striking out five and walking one.

Northern Iowa freshman Stephanie Stratton returned to the Panther lineup, going 3-3 with a pair of RBIs, both of which came as the result of a single up the middle in the third, to pace her team offensively.

Blevins said the Hawkeyes looked "sluggish" defensively and, when coupled with its struggles in the circle, the team could not overcome the Panthers' effort.

"We had a really disappointing approach out there," Blevins said, adding she hopes the Hawkeyes learn a valuable lesson from the loss as they prepare for their first Big Ten road trip of the year, to Michigan and Michigan State this weekend.

Quiet intensity

Iowa assistant coach motivated most by improvement in pitchers

BY MEREDITH MALONE
SPECIAL TO THE DAILY IOWAN

The same mental toughness Iowa baseball pitching coach and recruiting coordinator Travis Wyckoff expects from his pitchers is used when he wakes up at 5 a.m. to begin each day.

The 30-year-old, who has been a Hawkeye four seasons, makes his way to the second-floor office he shares with fellow assistant coach Tim Evans at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Over the course of the morning, Wyckoff surfs the Net and takes care of paper work. He starts preparations for two satellite camps this summer but then decides he needs to wait for his officemate to arrive before he proceeds.

By 10:25, Wyckoff is ready for practice, but he sticks around to take a few more phone calls. He comments on his missing office partner, but Evans calls to report that he is already working out at the indoor practice facility, "the bubble." These days, as the weather permits, the team is more often seen on the diamond of Duane Banks Field, behind the bubble.

Around 11, Wyckoff heads home to see his 17-month-old son, Trevor, for lunch before the afternoon practice begins. By noon, Wyckoff is in the bubble.

The pitching coach with a staff of 16 said the toughest challenge of his job is taking time away from his family. Wyckoff's wife, Cherice, is pregnant with the couple's second child, and Trevor still requires plenty of attention.

"With my family, that's tough to be away from them for four days at a time every other weekend and getting home late at night during the week," he said.

Even though it's difficult, players say Wyckoff takes the time to personally care about each one.

"He likes to make you feel confident about yourself," sophomore pitcher Austin Seward said. "He wants to really instill confidence in his players, so he does that by any means, basically."

Junior pitcher Chris Maliszewski described Wyckoff as an even-keeled coach who takes a laid-back approach, which Seward said he admired.

"I think coaches bring their personal attitudes into the job," Seward said. "If I were a coach, I'd be myself. I think he's himself."

Around 12:35 p.m., a few pitchers trickle in, and Wyckoff starts getting them ready. Half an hour later, practice is in full swing.

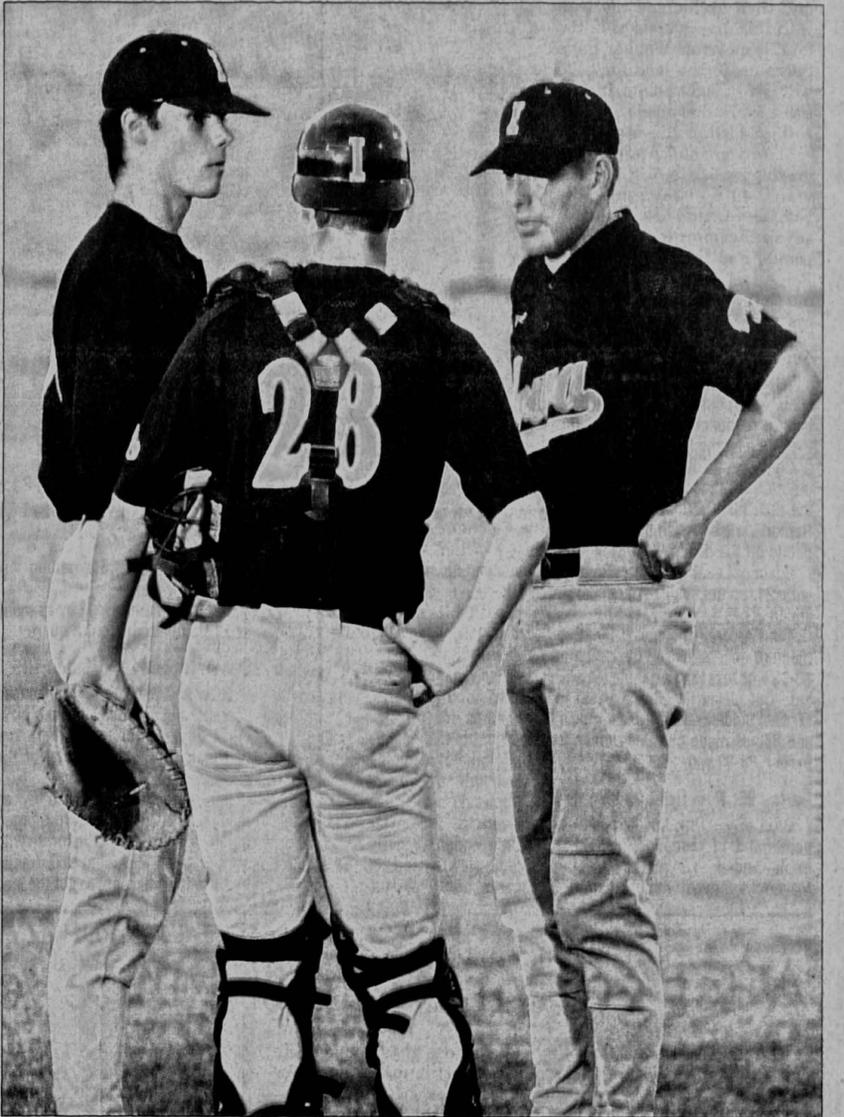

Wyckoff observes three pitchers switching off throwing to batters, and making sure the other pitchers are either shagging balls for hitters or playing catch with one another.

While he waits for the entire pitching staff to gather for sprints during practice, he chats with two freshman pitchers. The threesome jokes around about what happens if he has to get on them to work harder during practice and games.

"He likes to play mind games with you. Not only mind games but he physically likes to get you in shape," Seward said. "He's a

Bats break at Duane Banks Field during home-run derby

BY JEROD LEUPOLD
THE DAILY IOWAN

In the top of the third inning after the Iowa baseball team had made a dent in a six-run hole, Northern Illinois right fielder Mike Santoro shut the door with a three-run homer.

Santoro broke a Huskie record with three long balls in one game in the 15-7 Iowa loss.

"You've got to give them credit," Iowa coach Scott Broghamer said. "They swung the bats well."

In a game that stretched over three hours and saw eight pitchers, both teams had plenty of time to work on fielding.

"We had good defense tonight," Broghamer said. "We made plays. Our [pitchers] need to give quality innings. It's tough to play from behind when you need offense to run and steal."

In the first inning, Huskie batters knocked in two home runs, and Iowa batters stepped in and went right out.

The Hawkeyes did string together a few hits to gain some ground in the third inning, only to be stymied by a total of six Huskie home runs, which might have benefited from a stiff breeze directly toward the right wall.

"[CF Kyle] Thousand swung well tonight," Broghamer said. "We had five to six guys swing well and sting it. We needed to put the hits together."

Thousand went 3-5 from the box, Chris Steele and Jim Reid each added a stratosphere tester, and Andrew Lytle cranked two doubles.

"I felt better behind the plate," Lytle said. "I've been out front of the ball, so I started back to find the spot."

In hopes of jump-starting the Hawkeyes' offense Cliff Bruckner stepped in for catcher Brad Husz.

"I have confidence in my bench," Broghamer said. "If he gets a hold of it with the wind, who knows. I played the percentages."

Iowa hitting aside, pitchers Jeff Maitland and Andrew Hansen gave up 14 hits and 12 runs over five innings. After a two-game combined run total of 35-11 in favor of Iowa's opponents, the Hawkeyes are still looking at the silver lining.

"It's gut-check time," Broghamer said. "I have confidence in my team but saying it and doing it are different things."

Webber, Kings cruise to road win

ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Peja Stojakovic scored 26 points, and Chris Webber added 22 points and 14 rebounds as the Sacramento Kings defeated the Indiana Pacers, 103-98, on Tuesday night.

The Kings trailed by 13 early, staged a comeback in the third, and then exchanged the lead with Indiana eight times in the fourth quarter. Webber gave Sacramento the lead for good with six-straight points, including a tip-in that made it 88-86 with 2:44 left.

The Pacers pulled within one on Reggie Miller's 3-pointer with 1:44 remaining, but the Kings stretched the lead back to seven. Jermaine O'Neal's 3-pointer and two free throws by Ron Artest cut the gap to 99-96, but that was as close as the Pacers would get.

Detroit 92, Toronto 85

TORONTO — Richard Hamilton scored 20 points, and Ben Wallace had 20 rebounds to lead the Detroit Pistons past the Raptors.

Chauncey Billups scored 15 points, including six free throws in the final minute for Detroit. Former Raptor Corliss Williamson added 19 points off the bench.

Voshon Lenard led the Raptors with 21 points, while Vince Carter added 20.

The Raptors, who trailed by 22 in the third quarter, closed the deficit to 86-83 with less than a minute remaining. But Jelani McCoy's pass to Michael Bradley resulted in a turnover, and Billups made two free throws to make it 88-83 with 18.3 left.

Dallas 95, New Orleans 86

matching the most wins in franchise history.

Eduardo Najera and Raef LaFrentz added 11 points each for Dallas.

Baron Davis scored 18 points, George Lynch had 13, and Jerome Moiso contributed 12 points and 11 rebounds for the Hornets, who've lost four of their last five. Dallas held the Hornets' leading scorer, Jamal Mashburn, to 10 points.

Nowitzki and Nash carried the Mavericks in the third quarter, which ended with Dallas in front, 75-62. Nowitzki had 11 points in the quarter, and Nash added six to prevent the Hornets from getting any closer than five.

Dallas went on to lead by as many as 21 points in the fourth quarter.

San Antonio 118, Orlando 105

SAN ANTONIO — Tim Duncan scored 20 points to lead seven players in double figures, and the Spurs had their highest point total of the season in a victory.

San Antonio went ahead by as many as 18 late in the third quarter, but the Magic opened the fourth with a 14-5 spurt, including six straight by Darrell Armstrong, to cut the lead to 98-89 with 9:30 left. But that was as close as Orlando would get as San Antonio outscored the Magic 18-11 in the final six minutes.

Tracy McGrady led all scorers with 30 and grabbed 10 rebounds. Drew Gooden added 19, and Shawn Kemp was 7-of-7 from the field and 3-of-3 at the line to finish with 17 points.

Steve Smith sparked a 13-4 run with back-to-back 3-pointers midway through the second quarter to the Spurs up 55-48 after Orlando took its only lead of the game, 44-42.

MEN'S SWIMMING WRAPUP

After growing pains, future looks bright

BY DREW MANROE
THE DAILY IOWAN

There may have been some growing pains along the way, but men's swimming coach John Davey saw enough success from his 2002-03 squad to make him believe next year's team is poised for bigger and better things.

The Hawkeyes' 25-man team was composed of 15 underclassmen and just three seniors. The group's 3-5 record may not have been as good as desired, but Davey said significant progress was made, particularly at dual meets.

The team's three victories all came at dual meets, including victories on consecutive days against Missouri — a notoriously tough team — and Truman State.

The Hawkeyes also beat Drury during their winter-training trip in Hawaii, but this win wasn't counted toward their record.

"We made good progress at the dual meets — particularly against Missouri," Davey said. "We're looking to carry that success on to next year."

Junior diver Timo Klami enjoyed the Hawkeyes' greatest success this season. He placed first in nine events over the course of the season, including the 3 meter at the Big Ten championships. He won two Big Ten Diver of the Week awards and was Iowa's sole representative at the NCAA championships.

Davey said the rest of the team could gain from Klami's success.

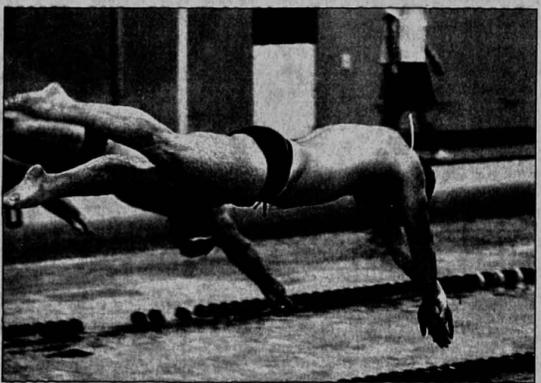

"Timo winning the 3-meter at the Big Tens was the high point of the season," Davey said. "We were a little disappointed there were no swimmers who qualified for the NCAAs, but they appreciate what Timo did at."

Iowa's swimmers did have their share of success, however.

Freshman Konrad Kazmierczak was particularly impressive, finishing with team-best times in the 50- and 200-free. Kazmierczak is one of a handful of swimmers — including sophomore Andrei Ciurca and junior Jason Snider — who Davey believes has a chance to qualify for the NCAAs next year.

"I definitely believe Kazmierczak could qualify," Davey said. "There was a chance he and Jason would do it this year."

Ciurca said the team grew closer over the course of the season, and he thinks the team has a great chance of improving on its ninth-place Big Ten finish.

"I think we accomplished a lot this season, and got to know each other," he said. "We're going to move up next year for sure. We had a lot of freshmen and sophomores this year, including me, and only three seniors."

"We're going to be better prepared."

As for now, the team is beginning its spring-training period, and Davey said he is emphasizing hard work in the summer so the team will be in better shape at the beginning of next season.

And with a group of what he believes will be five to seven freshmen, he sees a bright future.

"I don't see any reason we won't improve," he said. "We're going to have a better year next season, and I think the guys are excited about it."

Diamondbacks secure win with single

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — Junior Spivey's bases-loaded single in the 10th inning gave the Diamondbacks a 5-4 victory over the Dodgers. Arizona ace Curt Schilling allowed two hits through seven innings and took a 4-0 lead into the eighth. But he gave up a three-run homer to Dave Roberts, then Shawn Green hit an RBI single off reliever Mike Myers to tie it at 4.

Mark Grace, who entered in a double-switch to start the 10th, doubled off loser Paul Shuey with one out and was replaced by pinch-runner Quinton McCracken.

Tony Womack's grounder went through the legs of first baseman Daryle Ward for an error, and McCracken advanced to third. Shuey walked Steve Finley on four pitches to load the bases.

Spivey, who was 3-for-4 with two RBIs and a run scored, lined the game-winning hit over third base to bring home McCracken.

After Roberts' leadoff triple in the third inning, Schilling retired 14 in a row before Alex Cora led off the eighth with a single. Pinch-hitter Ward drew a one-out walk, then Roberts hit a 1-1 pitch into the right-field seats to cut Arizona's lead to 4-3.

N.Y. Yankees 10, Toronto 1

TORONTO — The New York Yankees managed just fine without Derek Jeter, getting two homers from Jason Giambi and seven shutout innings from Andy Pettitte. Jorge Posada homered and drove in three runs, Giambi hit a pair of solo shots, Alfonso Soriano had two RBIs, and backup shortstop Enrique Wilson had an RBI double.

Jeter was placed on the 15-day disabled list Tuesday; he will be out for at least a month.

Bernie Williams led off the second inning with a double and went to third on Hideki Matsui's groundout. Posada followed with a homer off Cory Lidle to make it 2-0. Alfonso Soriano added an RBI single in the inning.

The long balls spoiled Lidle's Toronto debut. Lidle allowed five runs and seven hits in six innings.

Pettitte allowed seven hits, one walk, and struck out seven.

Houston 10, Colorado 4

HOUSTON — Jeff Kent hit a home run in his first at-bat for Houston, and Jeff Bagwell homered twice as the Astros won their season opener.

Roy Oswalt pitched seven strong innings and the Astros roughed up Jason Jennings.

Kent scored twice. Bagwell hit a solo homer and a two-run shot, while Geoff Blum also homered and knocked in three runs.

The Astros piled up 14 hits, including six off Jennings in a six-run third inning.

Oswalt held the Rockies to four hits and two runs — one earned.

Jennings gave up eight runs and nine hits in four innings.

Kent homered off Jennings in the second inning.

Houston blew it open in the third with four-straight hits — singles by Oswalt and Craig Biggio, a two-run double by Blum and a two-run homer by Bagwell.

Puckett testimony

MINNEAPOLIS — The woman who accused former Twins star Kirby Puckett of dragging her into a restaurant bathroom and groping her denied Tuesday that she exposed her breasts to another man earlier that night.

At game time Wyckoff brings fire to bullpen hard worker, and it filters through his players. He pushes mental toughness, and he, himself, is mentally tough."

Maliszewski said Wyckoff pushes the pitchers a little harder than they would normally push themselves.

"He'll kid with you about certain things, so in return you're going to prove him wrong even though he's joking. He'll just kid you about stuff," said Maliszewski. "He doesn't come down upon guys or come at guys at a personal level, but he'll kid."

In his four seasons with the Hawkeyes, Wyckoff has lowered the team's ERA by 1.5 runs, from 6.35 in 1999 to 4.84 in 2002. Some players have even received national attention, including Ryan Mentkovski and Reed Powell. Each earned Louisville Slugger Freshman All-American honors.

He brings a bulk of experience to the job. He was drafted by the Florida Marlins in 1996 from Wichita State and worked in the organization until 1998. At Wichita State, Wyckoff was a pitcher and outfielder and was named MVP in 1996.

And despite his success, he said, he was most motivated by players who need to sharpen their skills.

"They're fun to work with," he said. "They want to get better. It's not like you're pulling teeth to get them to improve, so that's probably the best part about it."

Wyckoff finishes timing sprints around 2:30 p.m. and then leads his staff in a visualizing exercise, which includes pitches and game scenarios. He walks slowly among the seated group, throwing out new scenarios every few minutes.

Iowa assistant coach Travis Wyckoff instructs a pitcher during practice. Wyckoff has been a coach for the Hawkeyes for four seasons.

Afterwards, Wyckoff leads the group to the weight room, where pitchers do barbell sets and use mats for jumping, sit-ups, and push-ups and he does his own routine to make sure the guys stay on task. By 3:30 p.m., he either heads to the office for a few more minutes or heads directly home to his family.

So far, he says his biggest achievements spring from his players.

"It kind of goes back to guys getting better," Wyckoff said. "It's every time somebody gets something or improves. Whatever I'm talking about clicks with them and they get it, and they start putting it to use and having success."

As the 2003 season works its way into full swing, Wyckoff's calm intensity gives his players the added oomph they need come game time.

"There's almost a calm intensity about him," Seward said. "But he gets your blood flowing. He gives you that added little punch down in the bullpen when you're warming up for a game."

"He gets real intense. He starts to fire you up. He calls balls and strikes and kinda gets that fired-up attitude. It gets a little inspirational down there."

Kolzig shears Panthers in shutout

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Olaf Kolzig made 31 saves as the Capitals beat the Panthers, 3-0, on Tuesday night.

Sergei Gonchar, Michael Nylander, and Robert Lang scored the Panthers' goals.

The Capitals started slowly, giving up seven-straight shots to Florida. Then Steve Konowalchuk fired a diagonal pass to a cutting Gonchar, who deflected it in for his 18th goal at 11:45 of the first period.

Nylander made it 2-0 when he tipped in a shot from in front with 4:38 remaining. Lang deflected in his 21st less than three minutes later.

N.Y. Rangers 2, N.Y. Islanders 2

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — Alex Kovalev scored for the New York Rangers with 3:59 left to forge a tie.

Arron Asham and Alexei Yashin staked the Islanders to a 2-0 lead, but the Rangers rallied on third-period goals by Brian Leetch and Kovalev.

Garth Snow was solid in making 35 saves. Rangers counterpart, Mike Dunham, also was sharp, stopping 28 shots with little chance at the two that beat him.

Philadelphia 4, Columbus 0

PHILADELPHIA — Kim Johnsson had a goal and Keith Primeau added two assists. Roman Cechmanek stopped just 10 shots for his sixth shutout of the season. The Flyers already have clinched home-ice advantage in the first round of the playoffs.

Toronto 3, New Jersey 2

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Ed Belfour became the seventh NHL goaltender to win 400 regular-season games in overtime.

Belfour made 38 saves, including a great chance in close by Scott Gomez in the overtime.

Anaheim 2, Nashville 1

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Steve Thomas scored his second goal with 52.6 seconds left in overtime, and the Mighty Ducks extended the Predators' franchise-worst winless streak to 13 games.

Ottawa 3, Boston 2

OTTAWA — Marian Hossa scored twice and Martin Havlat had a goal and an assist, carrying the Senators.

Martin Lapointe and Glen Murray scored for Boston. Bruins captain Joe Thornton's assist on Murray's goal gave Boston a 2-1 lead 10:31 into the game.
