CONFRONTING IRAQ

U.S. races to Baghdad, meeting little resistance

BY RAJIV CHANDRASEKARAN AND PETER BAKER
WASHINGTON POST

KUWAIT CITY — Facing only light resistance, U.S. forces charged up to the outskirts of Baghdad Thursday and fought their way into Saddam International Airport, just 12 miles from the center of the blacked-out Iraqi capital.

Forward elements of the Army's 3rd Infantry Division, having captured the southern side of the vast facility stretching across flat suburbs southwest of the city, battled early this morning with Iraqi soldiers holding out with small arms in the northern part, U.S. military officials said. Iraqi officials, desperate to hold onto the airport and its modern terminal, used loudspeakers to exhort nearby residents to join in the defense, reports from the area said, but it wasn't clear whether anyone heeded the call.

Other units from the 3rd Infantry approached Baghdad from a more southerly direction, driving up a four-lane highway and plowing through the sandy desert before stopping approximately 10 miles from the edge, well within sight of the bomb-scarred skyline and sprawling outer suburbs. Regiments of the 1st Marine Division, meanwhile, closed in from the southeast, rushing up a highway along the Tigris River, decimating an Iraqi tank battalion, and eventually halting within 15 miles of the capital.

With thousands of U.S. soldiers and armored vehicles arrayed in an arc around the city's southern rim, the 15-day-old military campaign to destroy President Saddam Hussein's three-decade-old rule shifted into a crucial and dangerous phase — the battle for control of the capital, its 5 million residents, Saddam's seat of government, and his most loyal Baath Party defenders.

U.S. commanders, whose troops have sliced through southern and central Iraq with minimal resistance and relatively few casualties, now must decide whether to lay siege to the city in hopes that residents will rise up, push into the center to engage in urban warfare, or try a combination of encirclement and targeted raids to whittle down Saddam's grip on power.

Council receives draft of 21-bill

BY JESSE HELLING
THE DAILY IOWAN

City officials on Thursday released the long-awaited draft of an ordinance requiring all Iowa City bars to raise their entrance age to 21 by Aug. 1.

In another blow to underage drinkers, City Attorney Eleanor Dilkes also recommended that the fine for PAULA — possession of alcohol under the legal age — be raised from $100 to $250.

The Iowa City City Council, which will discuss the ordinance next week, could opt to increase the fine to as high as $500.

"I think the fine as set does not allow for a lot of general deterrence," said Dilkes, who was charged with drafting the ordinance by the council in February.

Last year, Iowa City police issued more than 2,000 PAULA tickets. With court costs, the price of the ticket comes out to $145.

Councilors plan to discuss the measure at their work session April 7, and they are expected to hold the first of three votes needed to pass the ordinance on April 8.

The proposed ordinance would make all venues that derive more than 50 percent of their revenue from alcoholic beverage sales off-limits to minors after 9 p.m. unless they are accompanied by a parent, guardian, or spouse of legal age. Underage employees of bars will also be exempt.

Under the proposal, bars could seek reprieve from the restrictions on an event-by-event basis by submitting written notice to the police outlining a plan to suspend alcohol sales.

Subjects in UI's infamous stuttering study sue state

BY AMY JENNINGS
THE DAILY IOWAN

Attorneys for five orphans who suffered speech problems after they were unknowingly used as subjects in a 1939 UI study of child stuttering filed a multimillion dollar lawsuit against the state of Iowa in District Court on Thursday.

The research, dubbed the "Monster Study," garnered national attention in 2001 when the San Jose Mercury News revealed that world-renowned speech pathologist Wendell Johnson, the eponym of the UI Wendell Johnson Speech and Hearing Center, sought to induce stuttering problems in normal-speaking children.

The lawsuit, which will request millions of dollars in victim restitution, comes after the Iowa State Board of Appeals failed to act within a six-month deadline on claims the five plaintiffs are required to submit before suing the state.

"The University of Iowa had a responsibility to tell these people what was done to them for 60 years, and it not only neglected to do so but purposefully omitted the study [from public records]," said Curt Krull, a Des Moines lawyer who is seeking roughly $2 million for study subject Mary Irene Nixon, 76.

Nixon was 12 years old when Johnson recruited graduate student Mary Tudor to test his theory that stuttering is a learned behavior. Subjects in the five-month study consisted of 22 children from the Iowa Soldiers and Sailors Orphans Home in Davenport.

"Mary [Nixon] is feeling outrage at what has been done and has a feeling of a lost lifetime," Krull said.

Nixon and Kathryn Meacham, 70, are the only plaintiffs still living. In addition, estate administrators for Phillip Spieker, Betty Romp, and Clarence Fifer are suing the state for intentional infliction of emotional distress, fraudulent misrepresentation, and invasion of privacy, among other counts.

Krull, who has been gathering evidence with other attorneys for two years, said Tudor admitted to aspects of the study in a November 2002 deposition.

The university will be represented by the Iowa Attorney General's Office, university General Counsel Mark Schantz said Thursday. Bob Brammer, an attorney general spokesman, said Director of Special Litigation Division Craig Kelinson would handle the case. Kelinson had not seen the lawsuit as of late Thursday.

The state has 30 days to file a response to the petition.

Court records filed by the plaintiffs show that Tudor, under Johnson's supervision, split the children into two groups — 10 actual stutterers and 12 normal speakers. Each group was split in half into an

Young Indians turning their backs on the 'arrangement'

BY LAUREN SMILEY
THE DAILY IOWAN

"Five feet, 4 1/2 inches. Convent education. Very amiable. ... Fair with copious hair and has the figure and gait of a dancer. She's even better than in the photograph."

The description of Rathi Ravikumar's mother in a letter and spreadsheet detailing 10 women was enough for her father to know she was the one — even before he flew home to India from the University of Oklahoma to meet the potential brides his parents had scouted out.

That was in 1982. The mementos of the arranged-marriage system that brought them together now sit on her parents' bedstand in Port Orange, Fla.

But for Ravikumar, the list, preserved in lamination, represents a custom that is equally sealed off in the past. That, and occasional material for teasing her father.

"They understand I'm too hardheaded to do something like that," the assertive 19-year-old UI sophomore said. "They wouldn't force me to do anything I didn't want to do."

With her parents' blessing, Ravikumar dates — a "faux pas" in traditional Indian culture. A white guy, no less.

Her mother Shanthini Ravikumar, 41, says she's fine that her daughter may be the first person in both sides of her family not to meet parent-approved marriage candidates, and she doesn't feel ascribing to an arranged marriage is synonymous with maintaining an Indian identity.

"I think being an Indian is not just in the marriage system but how you conduct yourself once you're married," the physical therapist said. "We fully support whomever [our daughters] want to marry. I don't see people as Indians or Americans. I just want them to be happy."

Ravikumar's decision — and her parents' acceptance of it — may well serve as a case study in the decline of an age-old custom, as second-, third-, and fourth-generation Americans grow up privy to a culture in which individual liberty is nearly synonymous with sexual

SHOULD DANGEROUS BELIEFS BE REPRESSED?

Joanne White/The Daily Iowan

He talked about instances in which repressing such freedoms have been justified in the past but quoted 19th-century philosopher John Stuart Mill in saying that repressing "dangerous" ideas can stifle truthful ones, too.

Officials try to fine-tune nuisance bill

BY ANNIE SHUPPY
THE DAILY IOWAN

City officials issued a proposal Thursday allowing tenants who violate a suggested nuisance ordinance to discuss their infraction with all parties prior to suffering any penalties.

The proposed ordinance states that if, within 12 months, tenants commit two violations — which could include criminal complaints, possession of alcohol under the legal age, disorderly house, controlled substance, or criminal mischief, among many other infractions — they and their landlords could face penalties.

Tenants could possibly face eviction; landlords could be sanctioned with reduced rental permits or suspension or revocation of rental permits.

Prior to any disciplinary action, according to a proposal released Thursday, tenants can meet with landlords, police representatives, and/or the Department of Housing and Inspection Services to obtain a Code Compliance Settlement Agreement.

Douglas Boothroy, the director of Housing and Inspection Services, said he felt it was more productive to bring tenants into discussions about nuisance violations instead of including only city officials and landlords.

"The settlement provides an opportunity for the parties to sit down in a more positive atmosphere," he said, adding that the meetings could allow the participants to discover solutions without penalizing tenants or landlords.

Although tenants may choose not to attend a code-compliance settlement, they could face "disincentives," which could include fines, Boothroy said.

Iowa City Mayor Ernie Lehman said he thinks such meetings are a step in the right direction. Any time the city passes a new ordinance, he said, some perceive it as imposing more regulations on citizens.

"I don't think the city is interested in fighting landlords or punishing tenants. We're just trying to make neighborhoods more livable," he said.

Lehman said he does not have a problem with making owners responsible for what happens on their property, adding that property managers who make efforts to control nuisance rentals would not necessarily be held liable.

If a property owner initiates one or more actions in response to nuisance problems, he or she would not be subject to enforcement penalties. New options for property owners include executing a property-management plan and undertaking reasonable means to avoid continuing violations.

Property owners could also use the current options: reporting violations to law-enforcement officials and evicting or attempting to evict tenants charged with one of the specified violations.

Brad Kosar, the coordinator for the UI Tenant-Landlord Association, said the ordinance, even with its proposed changes, will create frustration in the renting community. Two criminal complaints alone, prosecution notwithstanding, can still be grounds for enforcement.

"As it is right now, I don't see how city inspectors can give the time to this ordinance that would be necessary," Kosar said.

Requiring a property owner to execute a property-management action plan would "make a parent out of a landlord," he said.

The City Council will hold a work session discussing the issue on April 7.

12-year-old charged with assaulting mother

BY GRANT SCHULTE
THE DAILY IOWAN

A 12-year-old who allegedly attacked relatives was arrested Tuesday and charged with assault with a dangerous weapon.

The assailant allegedly threatened his mother and grandmother before attacking them, according to Iowa City police reports. Nobody was seriously hurt in the alleged April 2 incident, police said.

The boy, who was being held in a juvenile correctional facility Thursday afternoon, allegedly hit his mother's arm and back with a baseball bat and punched her in the face, police reported. The boy, described as "out of control," also pushed his grandmother into a table and threatened her with a pocket knife, records show.

To qualify as an assault, the alleged assailant doesn't actually have to use the bat or knife — he can merely threaten with it, said Iowa City police Sgt. Brian Krei.

When police arrived at the home in response to a neighbor's complaints, the boy had allegedly barricaded himself in his room and refused to let officers in. While police tried to persuade him to open the door, he banged on the door "with a lot of force," records show.

The boy allegedly opened the door halfway, then quickly tried to close it — but not before an officer wedged a foot in the doorway, records show. He allegedly became confrontational when police entered the room and began struggling when police tried to restrain him, records show. Authorities eventually restrained him against the bed so they could handcuff him, records show.

'Court TV' to air Nelson trial today

Phyllis Nelson's first-degree murder trial is set to run on television through most of today and part of April 7.

"Court TV" will air the 55-year-old's trial, Iowa v. Nelson, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. CDT, a producer said in an e-mail. The final hour will include commentary on the case.

Production staff for the national television show sat through most of Nelson's two-week trial, which experienced numerous delays to accommodate certain witnesses, evidence, and attorneys' schedules.

Nelson was charged Dec. 12, 2001, with first-degree murder after she stabbed her husband, Richard Nelson, a former UI medical-school executive dean, once in the heart with a paring knife. She was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter March 17, a verdict for which she will likely serve one to two years in prison. Her sentencing is set for April 21.

Show officials have also set up interviews with attorneys involved with the case, possibly for another airing at a later date.

Towing wars erupt over city's contract

BY INGA BEYER
THE DAILY IOWAN

A local towing company has filed complaints with the city, alleging that a competing towing firm has been overcharging the city.

Holiday Wrecker & Crane Service of Coralville, which formerly held the city's towing contract, also contends that Big 10 University Towing, 3309 Highway 1 S.W., is not operating in line with its original summer 2002 bid — in which the firm became the city's sole towing provider.

Jon Pearce, Holiday's lawyer, said Big 10 has been charging higher rates for accident calls dispatched by the city. He cited an October 2002 accident call dispatched to the city in which Big 10 charged the motorist a private tow rate of $50 rather than the contracted $35.

"We're not asking the city to give us the contract," Pearce said. "We are asking for a rebid so it will level the playing field."

Further, Pearce alleged that Big 10 has been ignoring other clauses in the contract, such as charging a $25 fee if called after hours, as well as shortening its operating hours by one hour — from 8 p.m. to 7 p.m. In other words, if the city calls at 7:13 p.m., the charge is now $25 more than originally agreed upon, according to the records filed by Pearce.

Big 10 President Matt Leonard had not heard about Holiday's allegations when The Daily Iowan contacted him.

"Sounds like a disgruntled person who is upset about not getting the contract," Leonard said, declining to comment further on the issue.

Holiday, which held the city's towing contract from 1983 to 1996 and again from 1999 to 2002, is asking the city to terminate the current contract awarded to Big 10 and offer a rebid.

The city, in turn, is reticent to discuss the issue publicly.

"We are looking into the issues raised," said Andrew Matthews, an assistant city attorney, noting that issues regarding contract interpretation and application would be talked about "internally" among city officials later in the week.

However, according to Pearce in a letter written to the city, Matthews had indicated in a previous meeting between the two that the city may not have done as good a job as it should have in administering the contracts.

Furthermore, the city denied Holiday a request for rebid.

But a former city employee, Catharine Eisenhofer, who served as the purchasing agent who administered the bidding-and-award process for the towing contracts from 1983-1999, wrote in a legal document dated March 19 that it appears the city changed the scope of the contract after the award had been made.

Because bidders were not advised of this change in policy, Eisenhofer wrote, "bidders did not have the opportunity to ... adjust their bids accordingly."

Knowing what Holiday knows now, "we would have certainly had a lower bid," Pearce said.

"All we're asking for is fairness."

Fearah, the once-lost pit bull, plays outside Thursday evening.

Lost-puppy saga ends with a lick

BY JAMES BAETKE
THE DAILY IOWAN

A missing puppy that escaped the same day her owner died was reunited with friends and family following a two-week search.

Danny Stafford's quest to find the lost pit bull that disappeared the day its owner, Mark Young, passed away ended last week with a tip from an anonymous caller.

"She grew a little," Stafford said, amazed at how different the puppy, Fearah, looked since he last saw her.

Stafford's close friend, Young, a resident of Iowa City, died on March 15 near Williamsburg when he lost control of his 2002 Honda motorcycle, driving it into a ditch and flipping several times. The Waterloo native and Kirkwood Community College student was pronounced dead at the scene, and his motorcycle was "totaled," the Iowa State Patrol said.

Speaking at an "incredibly difficult time," Young's mother, Cathy Young, said, "What brings me joy is that Fearah is back in the house."

"Mark absolutely loved that dog and took wonderful care of it," she said, emphasizing the fact this tragedy would have been a "double whammy" if Fearah had not been found.

The puppy apparently slipped out the front door of Stafford's shared apartment later in the day following Young's passing.

"The night Mark died, everyone was just coming in and out of the house," Stafford said. He realized Fearah was gone once the front door was discovered open.

After hanging several fliers, Stafford received many calls from an unknown female caller about the cash reward for the dog. The caller often referred to a male companion who seemed to know where Fearah was, Stafford said.

A separate anonymous caller contacted Stafford in the early morning of March 28 once she read the article published in The Daily Iowan that day. Though the caller was afraid at first to reveal exactly where Fearah was being held, Stafford finally persuaded her to give an address.

Stafford contacted the police and was reunited with Fearah, who was still in good health, he said.

Stafford said Coralville police surprised a man and a woman who had the dog in their Coralville apartment. Giving different stories on why they had Fearah, they eventually turned the dog over and no charges were filed, Stafford said.

Fearah is now under Stafford's care.

"I am 100 percent positive Danny is who Mark would want to take care of Fearah," Cathy Young said.

Green ready to take over the reins of UISG

BY TINA STEIN
THE DAILY IOWAN

A newcomer to UI Student Government will begin his one-year tenure as the group's president this weekend.

"I am kind of nervous because it's a lot of responsibility with a lot of issues to cover," said UI junior Nate Green, who will be ushered in as UISG president in a ceremony on Saturday. "It's a lot to handle, but I'm excited to get things accomplished."

The immediate agenda for Green includes attempting to persuade the Iowa City City Council to add a non-voting student member to heighten student influence on local government.

He said he also hopes to get academic-adviser evaluations online and add recycling bins in trash rooms, which would eliminate possible fire-hazards, among other projects.

At first, the political-science and business major says he will rely on Vice President Mayrose Wegmann's UISG experience. He has also taken advice from former presidents, and he says he is prepared for the upcoming school year.

"It's great to have Mayrose," he said. "She knows everything there is to know."

For her part, Wegmann, a journalism and political-science major, said she has conflicting views about her new role as UISG vice-president. She has served as a senator and public-relations executive this year.

"I have mixed feelings because I'll miss my role as a senator participating in the debates," she said. "It's basically a continuation of what I had already been doing; I'll just be wearing a bigger hat."

Green, a Republican from Fort Dodge, and Wegmann will replace Nick Herbold and Matt Blizek.

Herbold tapped Green, his fraternity brother, to run for president on the Giant Sloth Party ticket, which has dominated campus politics for the three years it has been in existence.

Green's inexperience will not hurt the organization, said Nick Klenske, a UI law student who started the Giant Sloth Party in 2001 and will serve on Green's ticket as a graduate student senator.

"Student government gets stuck in a rut when it's the same people each year, when they go based off of what has already been done," said Klenske, who also had no UISG experience before he served as president 2001-02. "It will be nice to have some new blood."

Green's ticket received 39 percent of the vote to win the March 4 election but drew complaints of unfair campaigning from one of the losing tickets. The accusations included illegal campaigning in the library, the Pentacrest, and on construction walls on election day. Such campaigning is prohibited.

The ticket now faces a $500 fine for campaigning on election day, an issue still being discussed by the Student Judicial Court, said Nik Karpen, the Student Elections Board chairman. Green said the fine concerns fliers that were passed out to residence-hall students on election day, which were intended to be distributed the Friday prior to the election.

Besides his new role of UISG president, Green will also take on the role of a newly wed. He will marry UI junior Andrea Rebman on July 5 in Glen Ellyn, Ill. He said his new presidency won't be a burden on married life.

"There will be a lot of obligations and meetings, school work, and being a newly wed, but I'm able to balance it all out," Green said. "I've been looking forward to this for a long time."

STATE

GOP lawmakers ready to remake taxes

DES MOINES (AP) — Majority Republicans announced plans to scrap the state's arcane and complex property-tax system, replacing it with one in which taxes are based largely on the square footage of a home.

At the same time, the GOP leaders said they've decided to delay until next year a similar effort to revamp the state's income-tax system, saying there wasn't enough time in a single legislative session to do both.

"Last fall during the campaign, the hot issue was property taxes and what we're going to do about it," said House Speaker Chris Rants, R-Sioux City. "People don't understand what they're taxed on."

If majority Republicans succeed in pushing the measure through the Legislature and persuade Gov. Tom Vilsack to sign it into law, it would mark the first significant of the state's property-tax system in decades.

Backers argued the new system is simple and easy to understand.

"It creates a highly transparent system," said Rep. Kent Kramer, R-Johnston, one of the authors of the measure.

Arranged marriages passe

freedom and in which dating is often done for dating's sake, with no goal of eventually making wedding bells ring.

In such a milieu, some Indian-American UI students say their parents are allowing them to trek out on their own in search of Mr. or Ms. Right, as long as they approve of the eventual partner — a 180-degree reversal of the tradition.

Saying she was raised on Disney and romantic comedies, UI junior Kavitha Thimmaiah said she won't have her parents find her marriage partners as their parents did for them because she doubts their ability to gauge which personalities would be compatible with hers.

"I can't dismiss the system because it worked so well for my parents, but I don't think it's right for me," she said. "Being born [here] and having grown up here, I've been so immersed in American culture and that idea of falling in love and finding Mr. Right that I find it hard to imagine marrying someone I don't love already."

Thimmaiah, 21, said the process will have to adapt to U.S. cultural norms in order to survive.

"I think it's going to become more of an exaggerated blind date," she said. "The initial meeting will be like, 'Hey, let's meet, date, and then get married,' rather than 'I'm gonna meet this guy and get married.'"

But some, such as UI junior Vikas Bhatt, aren't willing to negotiate the logistics at all.

He's told a flat-out "no" to his mother, who urges him to naturalize an Indian woman by marriage.

"Out of respect for the girl, I wouldn't," he said. "It's almost materializing them. It feels like a slap in the face to them to look at this girl and say, 'Do I want to marry her? Yes? No?' It's like going to the mall and buying a T-shirt."

But Bhatt may be considered an outsider to Indian-American culture. He hasn't lived in an Indian household since he was 9, when he was taken from his fourth-grade class by social services for arriving at school with bruises on his legs and neck inflicted by his abusive mother. Instead, the 21-year-old was whisked between Chicago group homes, attending 15 or 16 schools — he's lost track.

His mother's traditional influence on him dissipated until Vikas was 17, when she wanted to arrange his marriage. At that point, following the tradition would have been like picking a culture out of a hat, he said.

"I'm completely Americanized," he said. "She expects me to be like I'm back in India. It would be like expecting me to act like I was Chinese."

But the scene's becoming more liberal even in India, especially among the middle classes in urban areas, said Meena Khandelwal, a women's studies visiting assistant professor. Some couples find each other first and solicit their parents' approval second. Others even date American-style. As India modernizes, romance is gaining steam: Valentine's Day is celebrated by the middle classes "in a big way," although many resent the celebration, dubbing it a form of Western cultural imperialism, she said.

But for some in the United States, the process is still as rigid as ever. One 20-year-old UI junior who wished to remain anonymous said her mother called her in February, saying she hopes her daughter is engaged by the time she's 25 to a well-educated man from the Brahmin caste. But the permanent U.S. resident sees a husband as compromising her desire to attend medical school at Johns Hopkins and travel to Italy and Greece.

"They want to go and find this extremely traditional guy," she said. "I doubt the guy they would find would be so free. [He] would have a fit if a woman wanted to travel the world."

"I would like to marry a type of person not commonly married in my family — like someone with a funky attitude or a gold medalist."

Although arranged marriages continue to cause stress for some, for Bhatt, it's an "absurd" practice that cannot die out quickly enough. Visiting his 56-year-old mother in her Chicago apartment every two months, Vikas writes off his mother's incessant grumbling as the innocuous artifact of another time. He says she's gradually accepted his refusal to submit to an arranged marriage, although his dating Anglo women is still a generational roadblock.

"I let her go off on her spiel," he said. "I just let her know she has some misconceptions about my future. At her age, there's no changing her mind."

best-trained Republican Guard divisions, prompted triumphal comments from U.S. officials. Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said U.S. forces are closer to Baghdad's center "than many Americans are from their downtown offices," and President Bush, speaking at Camp Lejeune, N.C., proclaimed that "a vise is closing" around Saddam.

Conspicuously absent from the battlefield were significant concentrations of Republican Guard soldiers or any use of chemical or biological weapons as U.S. commanders had feared. The commanders said intense American and British air strikes had crushed two of the six Guard divisions guarding the capital and severely damaged two others, clearing the way for a relatively unobstructed push toward the capital.

Although some U.S. military officials asserted that the 70,000-soldier Republican Guard was a largely broken force, other American Defense officials warned that Guard units still could pose a threat to U.S. troops massing outside Baghdad. Elements of the four remaining Guard divisions have been trying to circle around the city in recent days to challenge frontline American units on the southern approaches, said officials at Central Command regional headquarters in Doha, Qatar. Many Guard soldiers also may have retreated into Baghdad with the intention of luring U.S. forces into urban combat, they warned.

There were no comprehensive casualty reports from Wednesday's advance. The Pentagon has identified 51 U.S. soldiers and Marines killed in action or missing in action since the invasion began March 20, but its tally often lags behind battlefield reports.

Reporters traveling with U.S. military units reported seeing large numbers of Iraqi soldiers' bodies lying on the wayside, apparently killed by punishing U.S. air strikes and artillery barrages that preceded the U.S. ground assault. Iraqi officials also have reported dozens of civilian deaths from U.S. bombing and missile strikes in Baghdad.

British troops in southern Iraq, meanwhile, advanced on Basra, moving into an industrial area on the edge of the city, after waiting on the outskirts for more than a week. In central Iraq, U.S. military officials reported that Kut and Karbala, two key cities bypassed by troops moving toward Baghdad, have been surrounded.

In Najaf, U.S. officials said a renowned Shiite cleric, Grand Ayatollah Ali Sistani, issued a religious decree calling on Iraqis to remain calm and not interfere with U.S. and British forces. As word of his appeal spreads, U.S. officials predicted, it was expected to influence the behavior of the Shiite Muslims who make up 60 percent of Iraq's 24 million inhabitants, particularly in the southern part of the country.

In the far north, meanwhile, U.S. Special Forces and Kurdish militiamen captured the town of Bardarash, which had been held by Saddam's military for 13 years and is one of few routes linking the city of Mosul with ethnic Kurdish areas. And north of Baghdad, Special Forces swooped into one of Saddam's palaces, seizing documents and clashing with guards. Green-hued videotaped images of the mission at the Tharthar compound, recorded with a night-vision camera, were played for journalists by the Central Command to embarrass Saddam.

Council to discuss 21-ordinance

Dilkes said she studied similar regulations in several Iowa cities, including Ames, Dubuque, Oskaloosa, and Mason City. The proposed ordinance is modeled after a similar measure in Des Moines, she said.

"If anything, our ordinance is more detailed than others in the state," she said.

Five of the seven councilors were in favor of drafting a 21-only measure in February, and three who were reached Thursday appeared not to have budged in their positions.

The current alcohol ordinance, which went into effect in June 2001, requires bartenders not to sell more than two drinks to one person. That has not been effective in curbing underage drinking, said Iowa City Mayor Ernie Lehman, who supports the new proposal.

"I think we gave it a good shot," he said. "[The new ordinance] is no silver bullet, but I think it will help."

He said that much of the opposition he has heard, including thousands of form letters signed by UI students, has come from people under 21.

"That's kind of like speeders telling you not to enforce the speed limit," he said. "The vast majority of communications I have received are supportive of the ordinance."

Councilor Mike O'Donnell, who plans to vote against the proposal, said a 21-only ordinance will cause an increase in fake IDs and house parties in the area.

"In my mind, we have enough laws on the books to handle underage drinking," he said. "I think we're assuming that every young person who goes downtown does so to get drunk," adding that many students go to bars to dance.

Councilor Connie Champion, who is in favor of the 21-only proposal, said she has been disappointed in efforts thus far to curb underage drinking in Iowa City bars.

"I'm not a prohibitionist, but I think we have a lot of alcohol abuse downtown," she said, adding that the ordinance would help keep downtown safer and make bars easier to police.

Acknowledging the complexity of the issue, Councilor Dee Vanderhoef said she has yet to decide which way she will vote.

"If I were an attorney, I could argue either side," she said.

Stepping-Up co-coordinator Jim Clayton, a supporter of a 21-only ordinance, said he believes that if bars are closed to minors, alternatives will "Do we want businesses in this community that prosper in illegal sales to minors? I don't think we do," said Clayton, who identifies the proposed ordinance as a "key component" to curbing underage and binge drinking in the area.

Leah Cohen, owner of Bo James, 118 E. Washington St., said she thinks the council is rushing to pass a proposal.

"There needs to be more research on the matter," she said. "At this point in time, we're blindly going forward. I don't think parents understand what goes on at house parties."

experimental group and a control group.

Tudor designated the children in each control group as normal speakers and provided positive therapy to improve their speech. Children placed in the experimental groups were labeled stutters and given negative therapy, whether they had a problem or not.

The five plaintiffs were members of a group of six normal speakers who were told they were in danger of developing a stuttering problem. Tudor also administered conditioning therapy designed to cause stuttering behavior.

At the conclusion of the study, plaintiffs claimed they suffered a loss of self-confidence, self-image, and self-esteem, as well as detrimental effects on their speech delivery.

Krull said the sixth group member filed an administrative claim against the state with the other plaintiffs and may join the lawsuit at a later date.

According to court documents filed by the plaintiff, Johnson, Tudor, and other university officials knew the study could cause permanent emotional and psychological harm to participants but never warned the children or orphanage administrators.

The plaintiffs also claim university officials deliberately concealed the study for 62 years by preventing the publication of Tudor's research and requiring confidentiality agreements from those who were given access to the study.

"Just as important as the acts that occurred in 1939 are the non-acts to reach out to people about this study," Krull said. "We are ready, willing, and able to present this to the public and the whole world in a trial if necessary."

House restores some education $

BY JEFFREY PATCH
THE DAILY IOWAN

The UI could receive $11.7 million as part of a education package negotiated by House Democratic leader Richard Myers.

The House unanimously passed the Education Appropriations Bill, 98-0, which includes a bipartisan amendment that restores a Republican-supported operational funding cut of $25 million to the three state Board of Regents' universities.

"I think this is a little bit of a positive sign that there's some better support for the regents' institutions in the Legislature," said Myers, D-Coralville.

Regent Amir Arbisser said he appreciates the funding, even though Legislature did not meet the regents' funding request.

"I don't know what could be negative about it," Arbisser said. "It reduces the pressure for further significant tuition increases."

The Legislature has four more weeks in its session to address an additional regents' request of $30 million to fund salaries.

"I'm very pessimistic," said Gregory Nichols, the regents' executive director. "I don't believe that [lawmakers] will [fund the request]."

He said he was pleased that the House reinstated the $25 million; however, "that does not mean that there will not be more cuts to come. Today was a good day. We're going to have some other days that won't be so good."

Senator Neal Schuerer, R-Amana, warned that despite unanimous approval in the House, "if it doesn't fit within our budget targets, we in the Senate couldn't support that."

Schuerer, the chairman of the Senate education appropriations subcommittee, said he will wait until revenue estimations are determined — April 10 — before he takes a position. "I wouldn't go out and spend the money," he said.

Myers said the decision to seek the appropriation now was fueled by the reality that the money might not be available later.

In mid-March, the Senate education appropriations subcommittee approved an education budget for fiscal 2004 that cuts $24.4 million from the state's three institutions, $11.7 million from the UI alone. The proposal is $28.9 million smaller than Gov. Tom Vilsack's proposed budget, which was released earlier this year.

Sen. Joe Bolckcom, D-Iowa City, said he thinks the appropriations bill will have an effect on reducing a likely tuition hike next year, which would come on the heels of two double-digit increases.

The measure will now move to the Senate Appropriations Committee before being debated by the Senate.

Mock Trial team members Travis McGivern, Beau Brindley, and Rachel Madden practice for nationals this weekend.

Mock Trial team gears up

BY PAULA MAVROUDIS
THE DAILY IOWAN

The reigning national champion UI Mock Trial team is diligently practicing its case for national competition, relying both on skill and the companionship of a lucky stuffed parrot.

The parrot, won a number of years ago by a past member of the squad, serves as a good-luck charm and motivation for the team. Eight of its members will travel to Des Moines this weekend to compete against 64 other teams from across the nation.

"The parrot has been dormant all year," said Joshua Jones, the Mock Trial team president. "But we're bringing him out for nationals."

The team has been spending up to five hours a day for the last two weeks preparing for the big competition.

"[The Mock Trial team is] ridiculously time-consuming," said Jones, a UI senior. "We lose 10-20 percent of our members throughout the season."

At Tuesday's practice, the first qualifying team stood in the front of Levitt Auditorium in the Boyd Law Building, setting up the stage for the hypothetical civil case of J.J. Thompson v. Derric Smith. Seven-year-old Smith's parents are suing Thompson for causing fatal injuries to their child after he allegedly ran him over with his vehicle. The team members play such roles as an attorney, witnesses, or judge with complete identities — often forgetting they are fictional, said team member Amanda Bryant.

"Sometimes, I will be telling my friends who aren't in mock trial a story about the people in the case, and they'll be like, 'Who are you talking about?'" said Bryant, who plays a defense attorney. "It gets a little weird."

"We've had students who have had to play elderly witnesses on the stand," said Jessica Shook, the team's public-relations representative. "They have to stay in character."

Bryant, a UI freshman, was hard at work practicing objections with fellow members Ryan Seelau and Andrew Thomas, both of whom have dyed their hair red to show their dedication to the team's unity.

"Objections are really tough, because you never know what the other teams will say," Bryant said. "Sometimes they say really crazy things."

The teams will present their case to three judges in an allotted three hours at nationals. Lawyers are judged on how well they present their cases, as well as the quality of the questions they ask the witnesses, said Shook. It is a judgment of how well the players can think on their feet, she said.

Seven busted in gambling crackdown

BY MIKE WILSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANOLA, Iowa — Seven Iowans, including several prominent businessmen, a high-school football coach and a county supervisor, were arrested Thursday as authorities cracked an illegal gambling ring involving college and professional sports.

"We're talking into the multiple millions of dollars, beginning in 1999," Warren County Attorney Gary Kendall said.

An eighth man from Minnesota also was arrested. Three of those arrested were charged with bookmaking and ongoing criminal conduct; five were charged with illegal gambling.

Three others, including the man authorities believe is the ringleader of the operation and his ex-wife, were still at large,

Kendall said.

Kendall said the investigation, which began in November 2002, led to contacts in Minnesota, Arkansas, Illinois, Nebraska, Nevada, and New York. He said he expects a second wave of arrests in a couple of weeks.

Authorities also made contacts in Wyoming, California, Arizona, South Dakota, Florida, Costa Rica, and Seoul, South Korea. Kendall said authorities had not known their investigation would be that far-reaching.

"We didn't know ... you never know. I don't think the agents even knew until they got into it," he said.

As of Thursday, Kendall said, authorities had seized $500,000 in cash and $160,000 in real estate — the suburban Des Moines home of suspected ringleader Robert Derryberry.

Derryberry, 59, of Norwalk was expected to turn himself in within a few days to face charges of bookmaking, ongoing criminal conduct, and money-laundering, Kendall said.

Derryberry's ex-wife, Diane Derryberry, 50, of Urbandale was being sought on a perjury charge, he said. Also sought was insurance agent Bill Westlund, 63, of Urbandale on an illegal-gambling charge.

Letters to the Editor

Reaction to Clinton

I am not a fan of Bill Clinton, and I never will be. However, I was thankful for the chance to hear the former president speak. I was not thankful for the people who chose to voice their disagreement with his opinions by shouting and yelling during his talk. I was embarrassed for them and for our university. These objections should have been saved until after Clinton was done speaking, out of respect for him and the 15,000 people who came to hear him speak and weigh his views objectively. I know the protesters were exercising their constitutional right to free speech. Nevertheless, giving constitutional protection to a behavior does not make that behavior courteous, polite, or socially acceptable. The interruptions were rude and out of line. Didn't their mothers teach them anything about manners?

There are plenty of better ways to initiate a debate and win people to your side of an argument. When a disagreement over an issue causes you to react with an emotional outburst, it doesn't reflect well upon your level of maturity. The people who yelled at Clinton during his speech made fools of themselves. Besides, an idea presented in a calm and rational manner will always top an idea screamed in a fit of self-righteous indignation by someone who has clearly lost control of her or his emotions. As I was leaving Carver-Hawkeye Arena on Wednesday night, my scorecard for the evening read: Clinton 2, Screaming Immature Idiots 0.

Eric Thompson
UI alumnus

I read a letter in the March 24 issue of The Daily Iowan titled "The Clinton standard." In it, Jeanne Bryson pointed out that nobody was mentioning former President Clinton's sexual indiscretions while people routinely protested the university's behavior in the Pierre Pierce fiasco. I'm not sure there are any who would claim Clinton's sexual history is perfect. In fact, it's quite the opposite. However, to say that these protesters are hypocritical for not taking issue with Clinton's sex life is absurd. The two cases are not comparable. On one hand you have a case of voluntary, although adulterous, sexual activity. On the other you have someone forcing himself on another. Clinton's sexual impropriety was immoral. Pierce's was violent.

Many will disagree with me that Clinton's sexual history is really none of our business. It had no effect on his abilities as a leader, and it has no effect on his abilities as a speaker. Pierce is everyone's concern, as any violent criminal should be.

Francis Klobucar

DI a liberal rag?

I think it's pretty dumb that The Daily Iowan prints all these stories about all those "courageous" peace protesters and how they somehow represent the majority of Americans regardless of contradictory opinion polls out there, but when some big pro-war rallies get going, the only thing this paper has to say about it is that it's a corporate scheme. I'm sorry, but this paper is pathetically biased. It's becoming more and more a waste of time to read because it is all liberal jargon. I guess if you're a liberal, then this paper is your pep talk for the day, but as for those of us with brains, it's nothing more than butt wipe.

Mike De Pew
UI student

Anti-antiwar thoughts

In the March 24 issue of The Daily Iowan, I read the article "Activists ready to protest." One particular quote in this article really upset me. In this article, David Goodner said, "It'll be a camp-out with tents and everything, so this will be a pretty big sacrifice for people who want to have their voice heard."

Let your voice be heard, but this is no sacrifice! To sit out on Pentacrest in a tent in Iowa City is no sacrifice. What about all of the soldiers and our friends who are engaged in Iraq? They are sacrificing their lives and their youth to serve our country. There are people dying in Iraq.

How on Earth can you say that staying in a tent on the UI campus is a sacrifice? There are people dying. Have a little respect.

Editorial

Students must be told about safety threats

News of a sexual assault on campus always puts students on edge — they're more aware of the potential to be raped, and hopefully, they take more precautions. Unfortunately, after the sexual assault on March 12 in Burge Residence Hall, few students were officially notified, and many others learned of the incident only through gossip. Such a method of information dispersal usually leads to inaccuracy and embellishment, and the resulting sensationalism detracts from the overarching message of increased personal safety.

It is easy to point fingers and lay blame in situations such as this, particularly because sexual assault is emotionally charged. However, it is important to remember that all people on campus bear certain responsibility for their actions and reactions to others. Specifically, the Department of Residence Services needs to step up its initiative.

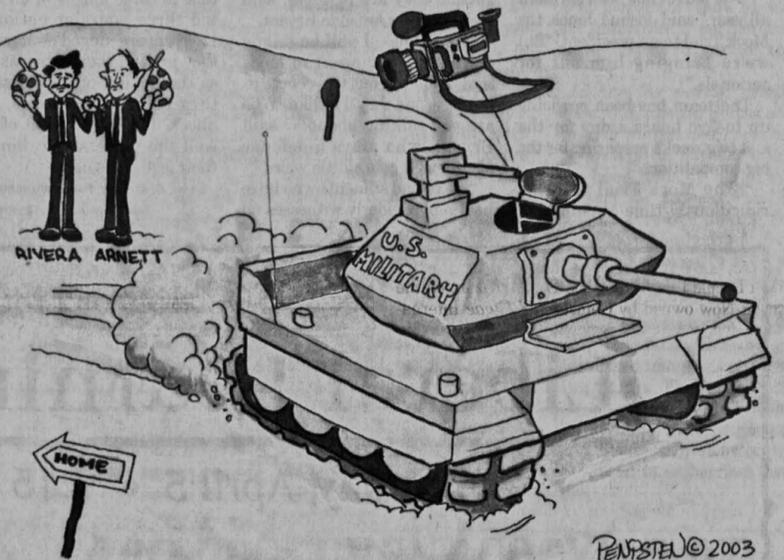

First, the importance of dealing appropriately with a sexual assault must be stressed to resident assistants. At all three state Board of Regents' universities, RAs are trained to help students receive professional help, such as reporting the incident to the police and referring them to counseling. Each assault is different, which may explain the UI's lack of a standard protocol regarding sexual assault, but this is no excuse to avoid action. The victim of any assault should always receive immediate, accurate, and helpful information, and if such information is not consistently available, then Residence Services should re-examine its policies and procedures to ensure that students will be helped.

Second, Residence Services must be consistent in notifying students. In February, a man posing as a drug inspector gained entrance to rooms in Rienow, and students living in residence halls received an e-mail shortly thereafter describing the incident. Following the March sexual assault, however, Residence Services claimed it notified some students, but not all; some students said they never heard any official information. The victim's privacy must be maintained, but that should not preclude the university from notifying students and reminding them to examine their own safety practices.

Finally, students need to have a heightened awareness of safety. Although this incident did not occur within a dorm room, a similar assault could happen easily in a private room. Students have a right to be safe, but they also must be vigilant and responsible about locking their doors and not permitting unwanted individuals to be in the residence halls. RAs and the university should inform and remind students about safety precautions.

In the case of this sexual assault, the system showed its myriad flaws. Changes within Residence Services should be effected immediately to ensure that it does not fail students again.

Was it something we said?

Yes, it's yet another column encouraging war protests

This war is unjust, unlawful, and misguided. But we can't pull out now.

We cannot. We pulled out at the end of Gulf War I, and what did it get the Iraqi people? Years of sanctions that led, among other things, to drastically lowered living standards and drastically high infant-mortality rates for Iraq's everyday populations — sanctions that, if our administration is correct, did not even do their job, removing weapons of mass destruction from Saddam Hussein's grasp.

That said, keep protesting. Keep protesting. Go to rallies. Camp out on the Pentacrest for a little while (I'm going to). Write signs, posters, T-shirts, letters to the editor, your state and national representatives; entries in your blog, on your message board — write! Talk! Explain as best you can to the five members of the We Support Bush Iowa Club that, if they really think you can be "pro-peace through war" (DI, March 26), they've misplaced the oxy- of oxymoron.

Yes, keep protesting. Even though we're already at war. Even though our protests dented our administration's (and Britain's) thrust to the gulf for, well, maybe a minute. Even though it would be a geopolitical murder-suicide for us to pull out now that we've engaged.

Do so because this war goes against international law. And because we hold a permanent veto on the U.N. Security Council (which imposes penalties for breaching international law), which makes it unimaginable that we'll ever be officially, multilaterally, penalized for this war. A fact suggesting that it might be time to reorganize that body so that no member holds veto power (as we, the UK, China, Russia, and France do).

Do so because even if our protests don't affect the war, they might affect Iraq's recovery, and because you never know what they might affect in the coming years; history's eyes are watching. Often (if not always) the import of a moment or an era can't be foreseen; it can only be caught after it's rippled out ... and rebounded.

As such, there's no telling how the anti-Americanism rampaging through many of our traditional allies, as well as other countries, will play out, or whether, in five or so years, the historical weight of sustained (American) antiwar protests before and during this engagement may help temper our current image of vampiric imperialism.

ALLISON HEADY

That image is partly due to the fact that Iraq is a predominantly Muslim country. While President Bush's religious views and intensities certainly unnerve me, if I believed that our military (and others') could be mobilized for those reasons, I'd secede. I'd defect. As I'm staying here and staying involved, instead I'll point to Kosovo and Bosnia, where we engaged in combat to protect Muslim populations whose land lacked Iraq's greatest geonational resource: oil.

Sadly, oil may very well be one reason we're at war, given how eager our administration is to pillage the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge for its (estimated) oil reserves — an eagerness that currently has been stymied in the Senate. Hence, I'd like to offer a shout-out to the senators who voted against that pillage, despite verbal ordnance such as "people who vote against this today are voting against me, and I will not forget it" from Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, the chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee (Newsweek, April 7).

The Senate defeated that with a two-vote margin (after the House had passed it) and in that spirit, keep protesting: never know whom you'll persuade, or at what eleventh hour. But don't pull dumb tricks, such as the "vomit-in" that Amanda Mittlestadt referenced in her March 31 column, or making a sign that says "whores not wars," as I saw on nerve.com the other day (the site was ridiculing it). Don't do those things, because those kinds of protests will make history want to shut its eyes and shake its head. And don't vandalize the ROTC offices or harass the cadets, because, as Samuel Grummons said, the office has "as much say in foreign policy as the post office" (DI, March 26); aiming at the foot soldiers is inhumane and ineffective.

Finally, keep protesting because you rightly disbelieve the aphorism that "History is written by the victors." That's never been true: History is not some solidified, univocal thing — its mainstream units are constantly being challenged, and reinterpreted, and subverted by assertive opposition histories (see: Germany, WWI, WWII), and they are constantly co-existing with a plethora of other, quieter, often grassroots, histories.

As Glenn Gould might say, history is contrapuntal — so keep singing.

Kicking the 'Asian' stereotype habit

BY MICHAEL DHAR
THE DAILY IOWAN

Crouching in a little-known niche of the film industry is a collection of movie treasures written, directed, and acted by Asians and Asian-Americans. Don't expect any kung-fu kicks, however, or crouching tigers, or dragons of any sort, in the seven feature films and six shorts showing today through April 6 in the Becker Communications Studies Building.

These diverse stories, part of the third annual UI Asian/Asian-American film festival, WAVES, buck the Hollywood martial-arts stereotype of "Asian" movies, said WAVES board member Jeff Floro, a UI alum.

The films range in topic from science fiction to social commentary to documentary, as WAVES presents a variety of stories to expose UI students to films they might otherwise never see, Floro said.

"Any film festival that focuses on any ethnicity gives you a better glimpse of film culture," said second-year law student Jamie Lai, the WAVES director of development. "Because we are a multi-ethnic culture, it's important to see where other people are coming from. And I think a good way to do that is to watch movies."

WAVES Film Schedule
Friday	7:30 p.m. Small Voices
Saturday	1:30 p.m. Banana Bad Company
	4:30 p.m. Miwon: Awakened Warrior Two Weeks Ago, I got a Tattoo Living In Color
	6:15 p.m. Cat Fight Tonight Robot Stories
	9:15 p.m. Homeland Insecurity Take Care of My Cat
April 6	4 p.m. She Wants to Talk to You Obaachan's Garden
	7:30 p.m. Shirts and Skins Unloved

This year's festival welcomes two guest speakers, Small Voices producer Ray Cuervo and Robot Stories writer/director Ray Pak. They will discuss the role of the Internet and cross-cultural cooperation in filmmaking.

Robot Stories, screening at 6:15 p.m. Saturday, shows humans coping with the unexpected emotional effects of technology. The four short films tell stories of android workers, robot babies and toys, and digitized minds.

Ethnicity and Asian-American identity play a central role in the movies, cast predominantly with Asian-American actors, Pak said. The director, of mixed Korean and European heritage, cast himself as the android in "Machine Love." The director's ethnicity works as a metaphor for the android's outsider status, he said.

In "The Robot Fixer," a mother tries to fix her comatose son's toy robot collection in an effort to get closer to him than she had been before his accident. Her relationship with him and her distant daughter captures the weak connection immigrant parents feel for their first-generation children, Pak said.

"The clipped language combined with sharp humor combined with hidden but deep love ... that to me is wildly Asian-American," he said.

In Small Voices, directed by Gil M. Portes and showing at 7:30 p.m. today, a teacher at a small Filipino school organizes her students into a singing group, inspiring the village to do something about its oppressive poverty.

"The movie tries to provide an answer to the prevalent social problem of the Philippines today, which is poverty," Cuervo said. "Our message is that education is a way out. You have to not lose hope, and you go to teach the children."

Festivals such as WAVES are essential to the success of such movies as "Small Voices," he said.

"Anything that helps us as Asian-Americans to promote our own films, that's great," he said. "In a state that's predominantly [white], WAVES is a very important festival for Asian-Americans."

On Saturday, WAVES will also screen Bad Company, the story of a rebellious middle-school student facing an authoritative father and teacher and Living in Color, a documentary about second-generation Asian-American kids in Los Angeles. Take Care of My Cat, the story of a stray cat passed around among five increasingly distant young adult women, rounds out the evening's screenings.

On April 6, the festival will screen Obaachan's Garden, in which a Hiroshima-born woman's family remembers her remarkable endurance, and Unloved, the story of a young woman torn between an ambitious man of business and a guitar-playing courier with equal, but more hidden, ambition.

Short films precede several of the feature-length movies. All screenings are free; they will take place in 101 Becker.

Guiding the empire of the waves

BY JENNIFER KAY

PHILADELPHIA — At age 50, TV Guide is showing signs of maturity. Circulation is down amid competition from newspapers that offer their own listings and TV shows that provide a steady stream of celebrity news.

TV Guide has also adapted to the changes in the media business in recent years, with online listings, an interactive program guide, and a television channel that make the most of its instantly recognizable name and logo.

Founded by Philadelphia publisher Walter Annenberg, the television viewer's bible debuted April 3, 1953, in 10 Midwest and East Coast cities with Lucille Ball's young son Desi Arnaz Jr. on the cover. Now owned by Gemstar/TV Guide International Inc., it has 209 regional editions nationwide and just over 9 million subscribers, according to the latest figures from the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

The magazine is now just one part of TV Guide's domain. The company estimates that it reaches approximately 100 million users each week, when all of its various formats are considered — the Web site, www.tvguide.com; the TV Guide Channel on cable, and the TV Guide Interactive digital program listings.

As more home technology develops around the television screen, TV Guide's mission is to help readers make the most of their leisure time, not just tell them what to watch, said John Loughlin, the president of the TV Guide Publishing Group.

To that end, the company plans a redesign of the magazine to make the listings easier to read. It will also have shorter stories and expanded coverage of home-entertainment products, such as DVDs and high-definition TV sets, he said.

Ed Bailey/Associated Press
John Loughlin, the president of TV Guide Publishing Group, is seen in his office in New York on Wednesday.

Two for the road

When two poets such as Julia Johnson and Cathryn Hankla travel together on a book tour, one might say that they have found the good life.

Professors at Hollins University in Roanoke, Va., Johnson and Hankla are similar in their studies, their professions, and their chosen art. And they have been traveling at a pretty fast pace to get the word out about their new collections of poems.

Johnson and Hankla will read from their poetry at 8 p.m. today at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St.

But that is where the similarities end. For Johnson, Naming the Afternoon is both her first collection of poems and the reason for her first book tour. For Hankla, Poems for the Pardoned comes after six collections of poems, a book of short fiction, and a novel.

Johnson spent one summer in Iowa City while waiting for her husband to graduate from law school. Evident in many of her poems, such as "Leaving Iowa," her time in Iowa City has influenced her style of writing and the setting of her poetry.

"My poems are not generally place specific," she said. "Actually, they take place more in the imagination than in any real environment."

While Johnson was in Iowa City she applied to the intensive writing programs offered during the summer and ended up taking the last writing class Jorie Graham offered.

"[It was] beyond intense, but I learned more from her in a couple of weeks than I had in some workshops ever," she said.

In Naming the Afternoon, Johnson's poems span 10 to 15 years of her life. The collection gently moves around the worlds of reality and imagination that can only be found in poetry.

Hankla's poems are tightly woven works. She said having a conceptual idea to center the work on and a more structured goal allows her to produce poetry more swiftly.

"There are some books, such as Emerald City Blues, that took me 20 years to write, and then there are some books, such as Poems for the Pardoned, which really just fell into place," she said. "There is a certain tonality, a music, that I am reaching for."

The language of justice, cultural identities, and what it means to be estranged interested Hankla the most while working on her collection.

"I wanted to try to understand what it means to be pardoned and to forgive; there is a lot of testing going on in these poems," she said. "A testing that challenges the language, the forms, and the relationships that can be found throughout this collection, the same way that life, in our everydayness, challenges us."

Life in Baghdad fading to black

BY ANTHONY SHADID
WASHINGTON POST

BAGHDAD — At 8 p.m., as a weary capital settled in for another night of explosions, electricity was cut to many of the 5 million residents, enveloping Baghdad in darkness for the first time since the concussions of U.S. bombing began two weeks ago.

The cause of the blackout was unclear. U.S. military officials in Qatar said American planes and missiles had not targeted Baghdad's electrical grid. Neither Iraqi radio nor television mentioned the outage, continuing almost blanket programming of patriotic music, nationalist speeches, and odes to President Saddam Hussein.

But Baghdadis responded to the darkness with foreboding. The streets emptied within minutes, and the quiet of the capital was interrupted only by a series of strong explosions near the city center, the sound of artillery from the southern suburbs, and the drone of generators that turned wealthy neighborhoods and some hotels into isolated beacons of light.

For a city that has endured apocalyptic scenes of bombing, asphyxiating smoke of oil fires, and a sandstorm that provoked warnings of divine intervention, the blackout seemed to announce a particularly ominous new phase of the war.

Memories of the 1991 Gulf War still resonate, when 43 days of U.S. air strikes knocked out electricity as part of the destruction of an urban infrastructure that had rivaled any in the Arab world. Many Iraqis went without power for weeks and without clean water and sewage treatment for far longer. Epidemics of typhoid and cholera followed, as Baghdad residents drank from the fetid Tigris River.

Thursday night, militiamen clad in green khaki and carrying AK-47 rifles patrolled some neighborhoods. But the city's commercial life, and its tenacious claim on normal, everyday routine, seemed extinguished with the lights.

The blackout followed a 15-minute artillery barrage on Baghdad's southern outskirts, where approaching U.S. forces were reportedly assaulting Saddam International Airport, approximately 10 miles southwest of Baghdad. One of Baghdad's key power plants is at Dora, near the airport.

For days, Iraqi officials have predicted a cataclysmic battle for Baghdad, and the blackout could be part of their defenses. By concealing the capital in darkness, they could hope to exploit the advantage of fighting on their own terrain.

But there were growing signs — from the nature of denials by Iraqi officials Thursday to the words attributed to Saddam — of creeping desperation within government ranks. Fighting was reported near the airport, just hours after journalists were escorted to see the largely deserted facility, complete with a tour of the departure lounge coated in dust. Residents from the poor village of Yusufiya, just 20 miles south of Baghdad, reported fierce artillery exchanges between U.S. forces and Republican Guard troops holed up under the canopy of palm trees in farms along the road. The village guards one of two strategic entries into southern Baghdad.

Those developments were omitted in the public statements of Iraqi officials, who have become far more reclusive this week. In what has become a refrain over the past two days, they entirely dismissed reports of American and British advances.

"We are giving them a real lesson today," Information Minister Mohammed Saeed Sahhaf told a news conference.

"They are not near Baghdad; don't believe them," he said, dismissing as a "chain of lies" reports that Army and Marine units were closing on the capital. "They are trapped everywhere in the country. We will keep them on the move. They are nowhere — they are nowhere, really."

Iraqi television, still on the air despite repeated U.S. strikes, broadcast footage of Saddam chairing a meeting with Baath Party officials. It quoted him as saying that anyone who is unable to fight U.S. and British forces "must withdraw and give the opportunity to someone else" — the first suggestion in 15 days of war that he was dissatisfied with his army's performance.

Bush rallies troops, predicts victory in Iraq

BY MIKE ALLEN
WASHINGTON POST

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. — President Bush set aside caution Thursday and repeatedly predicted triumph in the war as allied troops fought toward Baghdad.

In remarks to 20,000 Marines and families of deployed warriors, Bush reveled in the troops' swift progress of the past few days and delivered his most optimistic claims since the war began. "The regime in Iraq is now learning that we keep our word," he said on the parade field of the sprawling base here. "A vise is closing, and the days of a brutal regime are coming to an end."

Bush's eyes filled with tears during a meeting with widows and parents of several of the 13 Marines from Camp Lejeune who have been killed in the war, nine of them in one catastrophic firefight. Six other Marines from here are missing in Iraq, and more than a dozen others have been badly injured, many of those in a possible friendly fire incident. More than half of the base's 43,000 Marines and sailors are deployed, most of those in Iraq.

Brandy Sharpe, 24, is married to a Marine sergeant who is in combat, and she clutched one of his camouflage caps as she listened. She last heard from her husband 30 days ago.

Bush had chafed at the early second-guessing about the war plan by career military officers and the news media. With the allies sweeping past crippled Iraqi defenses, his speech

Thursday omitted his recent warnings about the possibility of a retaliatory terrorist attack on the states or about the daunting and unpredictable challenge ahead — both on the battlefield and in restoring Iraq after the war.

"Having traveled hundreds of miles, we will now go the last 200 yards," he said, using the Marines' lingo for the challenge of being at the tip of the spear. "We're on the advance. Our destination is Baghdad, and we will accept nothing less than complete and final victory."

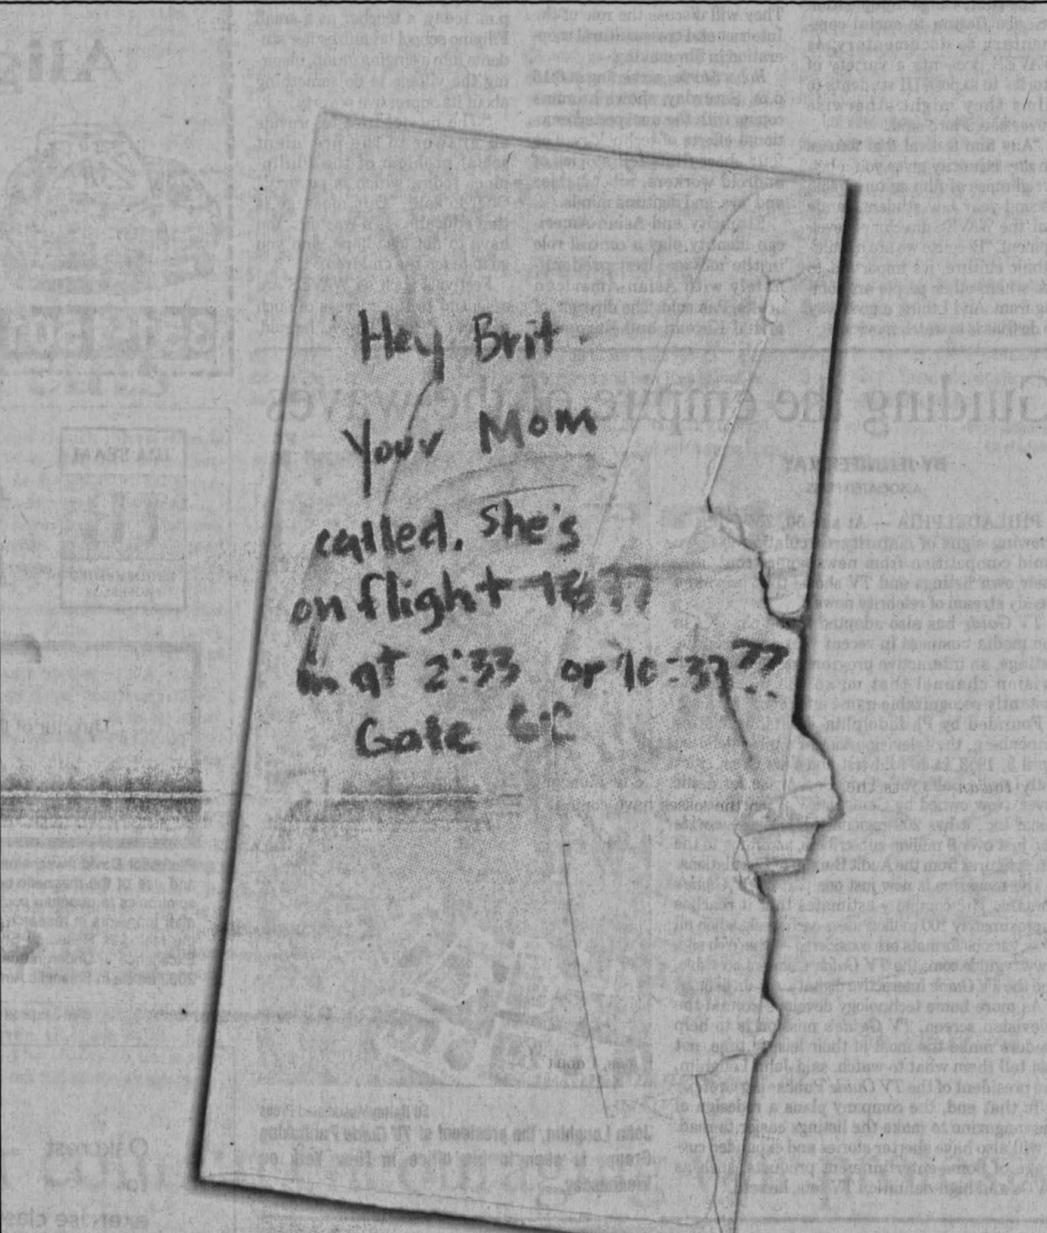

Bush even allowed himself his first public joke in weeks. "There's no finer sight — no finer sight — than to see 12,000 United States Marines and corpsmen," he said, pausing for applause, "unless you happen to be a member of the Iraqi Republican Guard."

White House officials weren't taking continued progress in the war for granted, and one said they were "guarding against irrational exuberance." Aides said Bush's remarks were intended both to boost the morale of allied troops and to reassure the people of Iraq that self-government is on the way.

Looking past the war to his vision for putting Iraq on a path to democracy, Bush said the Iraqi people "deserve a government that respects the rights of every citizen and ethnic group."

Bush will meet today with a dozen Iraq exiles who will help get out his message about torture and persecution by Saddam Hussein's government and about allies' plans for humanitarian relief.

TrailBlazers brawl during practice

TUALATIN, Ore. — Portland forward Zach Randolph punched teammate Ruben Patterson in the face during practice, the latest in a string of discipline problems for the Trail Blazers.

The fight Wednesday began with an argument between rookie Cyntel Woods and Patterson, and Randolph stepped in.

"This was pretty serious," Trail Blazers coach Maurice Cheeks said Thursday.

The Trail Blazers are a half-game ahead of Minnesota for fourth place in the Western Conference, playing for home-court advantage in the first round of the playoffs with nine games to go.

The Trail Blazers, troubled by assorted legal and drug matters this season, said disciplinary action against Randolph was hit in the face but would not elaborate.

Randolph, a reserve, did not attend Thursday's practice, and Patterson quickly left without speaking to reporters. The team acknowledged Patterson was hit in the face but would not elaborate.

"We have to find a way to stay together," Cheeks said. "My job is to make sure this team stays together. I need to find a way to make sure the team is not splintered. We have learned that when things happen, we have to deal with them."

Scottie Pippen said the fight followed a "heated practice."

Hawkeyes to renew feud against No. 14 Wolverines

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
THE DAILY IOWAN

When it comes to football and most other sports at the University of Michigan, there is no bigger rival than Ohio State. But on the softball diamond, the Buckeyes take a back seat to one team and one team only: Iowa.

The Hawkeyes (25-7, 4-0) will travel to Ann Arbor, where they will renew a long-standing feud with the No. 14 Wolverines (21-8, 3-1) in single games today and Saturday.

And though it is only the second week of conference action, it is safe to suggest this weekend's game will have Big Ten title ramifications.

Both programs are perennial favorites to claim the conference crown.

Michigan won the only meeting last season, 3-1, at Pearl Field. Including the single gathering in 2002, the last 10 meetings between the two schools have been a dead heat, with both the Hawkeyes and Wolverines taking five games each. Needless to say, anything can happen.

As if the Hawkeyes didn't understand that concept, they certainly arrived at that realization Tuesday in Cedar Falls when they were stunned by Northern Iowa, 9-7. The loss snapped a nine-game string of victories.

"Hopefully, we realize how important it is to come ready to play every day," a disappointed Iowa coach Gayle Blevins said.

"We can't just show up and expect to take care of the game the way we expect to."

The setback came on the heels of a perfect start to Big Ten play last weekend that saw Iowa sweep a pair of double-headers from Minnesota and Wisconsin, placing them atop the Big Ten standings.

Michigan, the defending conference champions, meanwhile, started league action with a loss to Illinois before rebounding with a victory over the Illini and a sweep of Northwestern. A second conference loss, especially if it were to come at the hands of the Hawkeyes, would knock the Wolverines off track early in the Team tries to rebound from four-game losing streak

BY KELLY BEATON
THE DAILY IOWAN

Baseball seasons are full of peaks and valleys. Throughout a long 51-game schedule, the 2003 Hawkeyes will probably experience many of these ups and downs.

Right now, Iowa (7-10) is mired in a season-high four-game losing streak. While its 1-3 conference mark isn't yet cause for panic, the fashion in which the losses have come is reason for concern.

In a span of three days from March 30 through Tuesday, Iowa's pitching staff surrendered 48 runs in three losses to Michigan and Northern Illinois.

"We talk about what we have to do to win all the time, and No. 1 is pitching," said Iowa coach Scott Broghamer. "Those guys are a solid group of pitchers, and the last couple of games, I don't think it's any secret we haven't got the kind of pitching we expect from them."

The Iowa pitching staff entered last weekend sporting a tidy 2.83 ERA. After their opponents were done wielding their weapons offensively, the Hawkeyes' ERA had ballooned to 5.16. Opponents are hitting a robust .295 against the Hawkeyes.

"As a pitching staff, I think we have to just chalk it up as a bad week, and put it behind us," said Iowa senior Reed Pawelk. "We have the talent; we just have to get back to doing what we do well, which is making pitches in the right spot."

Despite their recent downfall, Broghamer also expressed little doubt whether his moundsmen would bounce back quickly.

"I have great confidence in our pitching staff; they're going to come back," he said. "I think location is huge. I think that was the case [March 31] against Michigan and then [the next day] against Northern Illinois: The balls were up in the strike

Undefeated Hawkeyes to bring growing confidence to matchup

BY ADAM JACOBI
THE DAILY IOWAN

The No. 15-ranked Iowa Hawkeye rowing team is set to square off against the No. 21 Notre Dame Fighting Irish in a clash of solid rowing programs.

Notre Dame is coming off a stellar performance at the Indiana Classic, sweeping the varsity races against Indiana and Purdue. The Hawkeyes, meanwhile have started strong; they are still undefeated in varsity races, including wins at Texas, and against Kansas State and Clemson in Kansas.

"We're totally undefeated, and that gives us confidence and motivation to keep that up," said Iowa's coach Mandi Kowal.

Notre Dame is led by its two captains, seniors Ashlee Warren and Casey Buckstaff. According to Notre Dame head coach Martin Stone, Warren is "one of our strongest rowers."

While Buckstaff may not have the same power, "she brings a lot of leadership skills to the team," Stone said.

He also credited his entire senior class with their ability to lead the younger members of the team. Wendy Wisheart, the coach of Iowa's novice squad, expects success from her depleted corps as well.

"They have been getting faster, and skill development has been improving," she said.

Unfortunately, because of a family emergency, the novices will only be able to race their woman boat, as they no longer have enough members to race the 4+.

"We hope to race the 4 and the 8 in two weeks, in Minnesota," she said.

Even though Notre Dame, like Iowa, has cracked the Top 25, Kowal was not ready to call the Irish Iowa's toughest challenge to date.

"Texas was really strong, maybe stronger than Notre Dame," Kowal said. "We had only been on the water for a week, and half of that time was spent picking our boats, whereas Texas had been on the water for a month."

Despite the overwhelming disparity in experience, the Hawkeyes were able to take the victory.

This time, the tables have turned. According to Stone, the weather in South Bend kept the Irish out of the water until the middle of March, a scant three days before their first meet.

While the Irish have the disadvantage, Kowal isn't ready to mark down a "W" for Iowa yet.

"I definitely respect [Notre Dame], and we're doing whatever's possible to prepare for them," she said. "You don't take anything for granted."

Stone, too, is preparing his team for a showdown.

"I think it's going to be a great race," he said. "Iowa looks very strong this year. We think Iowa's a great team and we look forward to some great racing."

Michigan momentum carries team

BY KATIE LOW
THE DAILY IOWAN

Hoping to capitalize on momentum from its March 30 win over Michigan, the Iowa men's tennis team will hit the road to take on Wisconsin and No. 31 Northwestern this weekend.

Iowa ousted the Wolverines, 4-3, with help from exciting singles wins by redshirt freshman Johan Bergenas and senior Pete Rose.

However, the Hawkeyes (5-7 overall, 1-4 Big Ten) also suffered a disappointing loss last weekend at the hands of Michigan State.

The Spartans knocked off Iowa, 4-3, taking four of six singles matches.

This weekend, Northwestern will pose a great challenge to Iowa; the Wildcats enter the match 8-7 overall and 1-3 in the Big Ten.

Northwestern holds a 49-23 series history over the Hawkeyes; however, Iowa defeated the Wildcats, 4-3, last year in Iowa City.

Northwestern is led in singles by sophomore Thomas Hanus and seniors Jackie Jenkins and Josh Axler.

"On paper, Northwestern is probably the stronger of the two teams we're playing this weekend," Hawkeye coach Steve Houghton said.

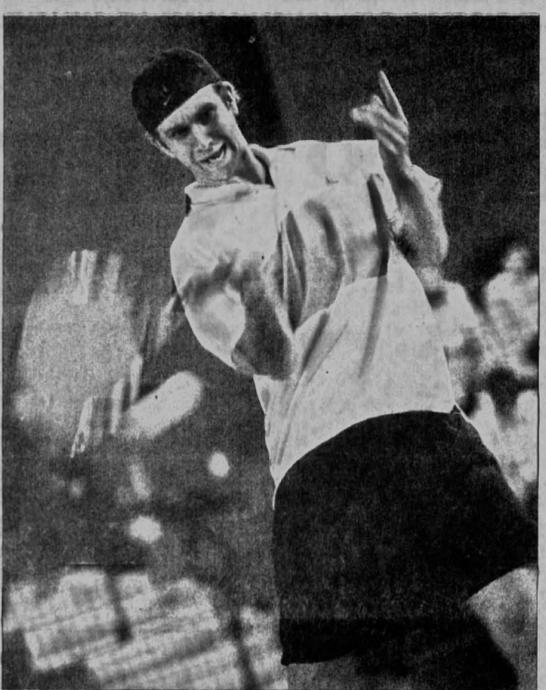

Wisconsin (3-12 overall, 0-2 Big Ten) will also be tough competition for Iowa as the Badgers search for their first Big Ten win.

Wisconsin's No. 1 doubles team of junior David Hippee and sophomore Alexander Kasarov are ranked 30th nationally.

"Wisconsin has lost close matches to some good teams," Houghton said. "Both of these matches will probably be close."

He said he thinks the win over Michigan has given his team some extra fortitude.

"At practice, the guys seem to be relaxed in a good way," he said. "That win especially gave the younger guys some confidence."

WOMEN'S GOLF

After tear, Bennett's golfing still going strong

BY JEROD LEUPOLD
THE DAILY IOWAN

Golf isn't often associated with injury.

But during Liz Bennett's effort in Tucson on March 2, a rock stopped her swing midway and the jarring force tore a joint in her rib.

"It happened during the last round," she said. "I swung my best three rounds strung together."

She finished the six-round tournament with 462 strokes, leading the Hawkeyes, and she hopes to compete this weekend at the Indiana Invitational. But the strain may prove to have been too much.

Bennett tried to practice Tuesday, but pain resulted with each impact. A visit to the hospital ruled out a stress fracture. Now, with the help of medication, she hopes to shelve the distraction.

"She's a tough kid," Hawkeye coach Bobbe Carney said. "She'll do anything to grit it out."

Fortunately for Carney, there are other things to smile about.

Megan George will compete in her first tourney after a team suspension and injuries. George led the Hawkeyes in the spring as a sophomore.

"She's working hard in practices," Carney said. "I'm happy to have her back."

Another shining spot for the Hawkeyes is improved play by Jennifer Reints, who shot her career-best score at Tucson. The junior tied for 43rd and hit a 77 in her lowest round ever.

"Practicing in the loft, well, sucks," Reints said. "But I've been working on my swing. I had confidence in hitting greens and putting. I felt I was at a good place with my life and my swing. It hit me — I can do this."

Iowa's second finisher, Laura Holmes, chipped in a 464-stroke tally and was the only other Hawkeye to shoot a sub 80 average at 77.3. Shannon Fleming carded a 490, the same as Reints. Marni Lundbohm ended with 510 and a 85.0 average per round, and Lauren Cole shot three rounds with a 86.3 average.

The Hawkeyes will need to focus on accuracy on the hilly and heavily wooded Bloomington course.

"The lack of level lies is a challenge," Carney said. "It might be difficult weather also. But everyone will be playing in the same stuff."

Indiana is going to be a good measuring stick for the Hawkeyes as they compete against five Big Ten opponents.

"We're getting towards the Big Ten [championships]," Carney said. "We'll get a feel for it. Purdue and Indiana are strong teams."

Other teams in attendance will be Wisconsin, Minnesota, defending champion Michigan, Arkansas-Little Rock, Illinois State, Kent State, Missouri, and Notre Dame.

The meet lasts from April 5-6.

MEN'S GOLF

Men hope to be competitive at Invitational

BY BRIAN TRIPLETT
THE DAILY IOWAN

After a two-week break from competition, the Iowa men's golf team is ready to travel to Huntington, W.Va., to compete in the Marshall Invitational today and Saturday.

In the third meet of the spring season, coach Terry Anderson is looking for his team to put everything together after two mediocre finishes in the first two tournaments of the year.

The Hawkeyes set a goal for themselves before the season to finish in the top five of every meet. So far, they are one for two.

"I believe we've underachieved," senior Aaron Krueger said.

In its most recent meet, at the Kauai Collegiate Cup in Princeville, Hawaii, Iowa got off to a solid start, but then the Hawks faded in day two of the competition en route to a fourth-place finish out of eight teams.

"We should have won the Hawaii tournament," Anderson said. "I would like to see us really start to gel and see us have three good solid rounds together."

Senior Bo Anderson led all Hawkeyes in Hawaii by scoring an even par over 54 holes, but Terry Anderson knows all five of his starters are capable of strong outputs.

"We should finish in the top five of every tournament, and it would be disappointing if we don't because we have players who are capable of finishing in the top 20 in the field themselves, and when you do that, it's almost automatic that you've got to be in the top five," the coach said.

The Hawkeyes traveling to Huntington this weekend include seniors Bo Anderson, Krueger, Mike Tapper, sophomore Luke Miller, and junior Erik Feldick.

Four of the five Hawkeyes competing, excluding Miller, know the course firsthand; this marks the fifth time Iowa has played in the tournament, held at the 6,456-yard, par 72 Guyan Golf and Country Club.

"We feel we can compete with all the teams there and compete for the win," Krueger said. "We'll be looking forward to using some of that experience to help us out."

Of the 16 teams in the field, Big Ten squads Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio State will also be in attendance.

The 54-hole tournament starts with 36 holes on today; it will conclude with 18 holes on Saturday.

MEN'S AND WOMEN'S AP ALL-AMERICANS

Taurasi, Beard rule All-America vote

BY CHUCK SCHOFFNER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Connecticut's Diana Taurasi and Duke's Alana Beard led their teams to the Final Four and now have something else to celebrate: Unanimous selections to the women's basketball AP All-America team.

Mississippi State's LaToya Thomas, Kansas State's Nicole Ohlde, and Penn State's Kelly Mazzante also were picked by the 44-member national media panel that votes on the weekly AP Top 25.

Each voter picked three teams and players received points on a 5-3-1 basis. The voting was done before the NCAA Tournament.

Taurasi and Beard were first-team choices on every ballot for a maximum 220 points. Thomas was the only other player on each ballot, getting 40 first-team votes and 212 points. Ohlde had 151 points, Mazzante 148.

Beard and Thomas made the first team for the second-straight year, while Taurasi and Mazzante moved up from last season's second team.

Taurasi became UConn's leader after four seniors graduated from last season's unbeaten national championship team. Despite a sore back and right ankle, Taurasi led Connecticut (35-1) to its fourth-straight appearance in the Final Four.

As usual, she did it with a flair rarely seen in the women's game, from no-look passes to finger rolls to NBA-range 3-pointers.

"It's all about having fun," Taurasi said. "Don't worry about plays and what people say. Just have fun."

She led the Huskies in scoring (16.3), rebounding (6.2), and assists (4.6) during the regular season. She has been even better in the NCAA Tournament, averaging 25.8 points and shooting 59 percent.

Beard, a left-hander with a textbook jumper, averaged 21.8 points in the regular season and is Duke's best defender. She averaged three steals a game and harassed opponents into numerous other turnovers.

"It shows that all the hard work I've put in has paid off,"

Beard said. "But I truly believe I wouldn't be at the level I am today if I didn't have my teammates and coaches around me. My teammates have never once taken it easy on me and I haven't taken it easy on them."

Thomas is expected to be one of the top picks in this month's WNBA draft. She can post up, beat a defender off the dribble or pull up for the perimeter jumper.

"We are really proud of her achievements this season," Mississippi State coach Sharon Fanning said. "When you look at her consistency and individual accomplishments, as well as the direction of our program during her career, you can see the impact she has made at Mississippi State."

Mazzante is a pure scorer, adept at taking the ball to the basket or shooting from outside. She averaged 24.1 points and needs 16 to become the top scorer in Penn State history.

"She has worked hard to have a great balance to her offensive game," Penn State coach Rene Portland said. "That made her one of the toughest players in the country to defend."

David West knows how to get the most, whether it's points on the court or votes off of it.

He became the first Xavier player to earn AP All-America honors Thursday as the leading vote-getter on the 2002-03 team.

The three-time Atlantic 10 player of the year was joined on the first team by fellow seniors Nick Collison of Kansas and Josh Howard of Wake Forest, along with junior Dwyane Wade of Marquette and sophomore T.J. Ford of Texas.

Collison, Wade, and Ford will play Saturday in the Final Four.

The 6-9 West, a second-team All-American last year, averaged 20.3 points and 12.0 rebounds for the Musketeers, leading them to a Top 10 ranking and a No. 3 seed in the NCAA Tournament.

West, the only preseason All-American to earn the postseason honor, received 64 first-team votes and 344 points from the 72-member national media panel that selects the weekly AP Top 25.

The 5-10 Ford averaged 15.0

points and 7.5 assists to lead the Longhorns to a No. 1 seed in the tournament and then to the Final Four, the school's first since 1947.

Howard was the Atlantic Coast Conference's player of the year, averaging 20 points and 8.1 rebounds to lead the Demon Deacons to their first outright regular-season league championship in 41 years and a No. 2 seed in the NCAA Tournament.

Collison gives Kansas an All-American for the second-straight year. The 6-9 Collison averaged 18.4 points and 9.3 rebounds, helping the Jayhawks win the Big 12 regular-season title.

Wade was the first Marquette player to make the first team since Butch Lee in 1978. The 6-4 Wade averaged 21.5 points, 6.3 rebounds, and 4.1 assists to lead the Golden Eagles to the Conference USA championship, and then to the school's first Final Four since coach Al McGuire's team won the national title in 1977.

Wade, an honorable-mention selection as a sophomore, had 273 points and received 43 first-team votes.

ATLANTA (AP) — Michael Jordan played another farewell game in Atlanta. This time, he was upstaged by Shareef Abdur-Rahim.

Abdur-Rahim made a desperation shot at the buzzer, giving the Hawks a victory over Jordan and the Wizards on Thursday night.

Jordan struggled most of the game before leading a frenetic comeback. He scored 12 of his 22 points in the fourth quarter and also grabbed a season-high 14 rebounds.

After Jordan missed a potential winning shot, the Hawks rebounded, called timeout, and were given six-tenths of a second to get off a shot.

Abdur-Rahim took a long inbound pass along the baseline and — with Jordan guarding him — threw up an off-balance shot that struck the rim, bounced high off the backboard, and dropped through.

The officials used a video review of the play to make sure Abdur-Rahim got off the shot in time.

zone, belt-high. Our kids need to go out now, and change speeds, and keep the ball down in the zone and we'll be fine."

The Hawkeyes' hitters fared somewhat better at the plate, garnering several hits throughout the skid, although they managed to drive in only four runs a game. Iowa has averaged 3.76 earned runs per game offensively to this point in the season.

Broghamer said his squad needs to get back to its roots. The sixth-year Iowa coach said his team needs to incorporate an aggressive attitude on the basepaths.

"That's our game," he said. "We've got some team speed, and I would like to be in the game so we can run."

Luckily for the Hawkeyes, they take on an Indiana Hoosiers squad this weekend that has had some trouble on the mound of late. The Hoosiers surrendered five homers in a 11-9 loss on April 2 to Indiana State in their last game.

Aside from that string of poor pitching, however, Indiana has experienced many positives in 2003. The Hoosiers enter this weekend's series at Duane Banks Field sporting a 16-6 overall record, 2-2 in conference play. The Hoosiers offer the Hawkeyes a welcome change of pace in the respect that offensively, they keep the ball inside the park. Indiana has hit only 10 long balls so far this season, eight fewer than Michigan brought to Iowa City a week ago. The Hoosiers possess a solid team batting average of .273 and give opponents fits on the base paths, having successfully stolen 35 bases on 41 attempts.

"Like most Big Ten teams, they're fundamentally sound," said Iowa left fielder Lance Guyer. "We know they have good pitching and good swingers."

The four-game series will begin today at 6 p.m. at Duane Banks Field.

ca Rush, and No. 98 Andrea Yung. Rush and Grier combine for the No. 13 doubles team in the nation.

"Northwestern won the last four Big Ten championships and is probably the best team in the Big Ten," Wardlaw said.

"It has a real strong top court and solid depth. We've always played [the Wildcats] pretty well."

Wisconsin's team is comparable with Iowa's. The Badgers (6-9 overall, 1-3 Big Ten) notched a victory over Indiana and fell to Northwestern, Purdue, and Illinois.

Shana McElroy leads the team in singles, and she is ranked No. 94 nationally.

"Wisconsin will be another close match," Wardlaw said. "This year in the Big Ten, you can pretty much predict a 4-3 score. There's a lot of parity in the conference."

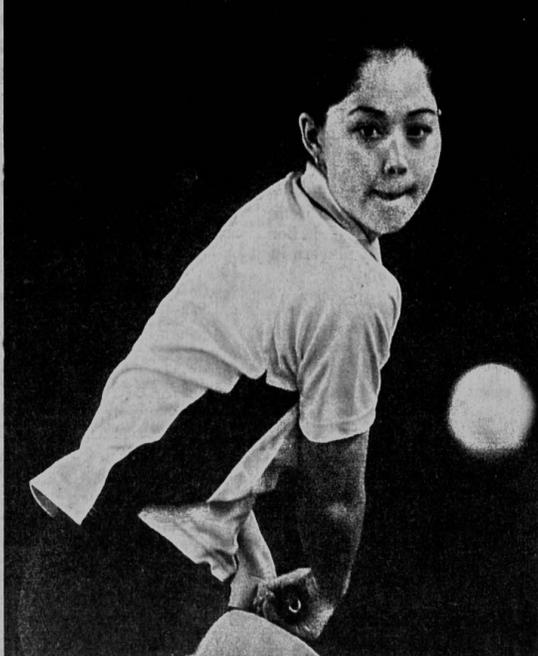

He said he's been focusing on improving each player's personal inconsistencies.

"Every week we try to chip away at little individual issues," he said.

"It's really more player-based than team-based."

The Hawkeyes will face off against Northwestern today at 2 p.m. and will take on Wisconsin at noon on April 6. Competition will take place at the Klotz Tennis Courts, weather permitting.

title race.

Pitching was Blevins' main concern following Tuesday's loss to the Panthers, one in which Iowa starter Lisa Birocci allowed five earned runs in only two innings of work.

"It hurts to struggle on the mound," Blevins said, adding that she was optimistic Birocci would return to her typically dominating form this weekend.

Both Birocci and fellow starter Ali Arnold will encounter a lot of offense in Ann Arbor. Four Wolverines in coach Carol Hutchins' lineup are batting over .300, including Monica Schock with a team-best .355 average. The Wolverines are hitting at a .284 clip as a team, while opponents have yet to post a composite .197 mark.

Much of the credit for those anemic numbers goes to Marissa Young, Michigan's ace in the circle. The senior hurler, whom the Hawkeyes are more than familiar with, totes a 1.38 ERA and 11-1 record in to this weekend's play as well as 106 strikeouts in 81 innings.

Following the two-day series with the Wolverines, the Hawkeyes will stay in Michigan and travel to East Lansing for a April 6 double-header with the Spartans (21-9, 3-1).

This week marked the first time this season the Hawkeyes have broken in to the national polls, debuting at No. 21 in the brand new ESPN/USA Softball rankings. However the Hawkeyes were not included in the conventional USA Today/NFCA Coach's poll, pulling in just 10 votes.

Chris DiMarco leads Bell-South Classic

DULUTH, Ga. (AP) — Chris DiMarco has done pretty well this season while battling a balky swing. So when that part of his game finally caught up with his putting Thursday, he went to the top of the leaderboard.

DiMarco shot a 5-under 67 in the first round of the BellSouth Classic, taking advantage of several short birdie chances after solid iron shots.

He narrowly missed two more birdie putts from close range. Six players were tied one shot back, including defending champion Retief Goosen, and another seven players were two shots behind.

The event is the final tuneup for the Masters, the first major of the year.

"I've been fighting my swing a little bit all year," said DiMarco, who has three top-10 finishes in nine starts.

"Today was one of the better swinging rounds I've had, where I was very consistent with my iron play and had a lot of really good shots at the hole.

"I was very much in control of my game, which I have not been that much this year."

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Sammy Sosa drove in three runs with a pair of singles and left Shea Stadium still looking for his 500th career homer.

Mark Prior pitched six sharp innings, Moises Alou drove in three runs, and Mark Grudzielanek scored three times in the Cubs' 6-3 win.

Sosa lined a sharp, two-run single in the first, then came up with the bases loaded and no outs in the third against Steve Trachsel. Sosa got an infield single — although replays showed he was tagged by first baseman Jay Bell.

St. Louis 6, Milwaukee 4

ST. LOUIS — Garrett Stephenson allowed one run in 6 1/2 innings, and Albert Pujols had three RBIs as the Cards completed a three-game sweep.

Scott Rolen had a two-run single, and Pujols and Edgar Renteria homered for the Cardinals.

Royce Clayton hit a three-run homer in the ninth off Cal Eldred. Steve Kline got two outs for his second save.

Kansas City 12, Chicago White Sox 6

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Brent Mayne hit a three-run homer in a seven-run eighth inning as the Royals rallied for a three-game sweep.

Jose Valentin hit a pair of two-run homers and also tripled for the White Sox.

Colorado 10, Houston 5

HOUSTON — Bobby Estalella homered twice, and Nelson Cruz pitched five innings to beat his former team as the Rockies avoided a three-game sweep.

Estalella hit a solo homer in the second inning against Jeremie Robertson (0-1) and a two-run shot in a seven-run fifth.

San Diego 6, Los Angeles 1

SAN DIEGO — Wearing camouflage jerseys to honor the military, the Padres looked like a totally different team.

Jake Peavy struck out a career-high 11 and combined with two other pitchers on a two-hitter. Mark Loretta hit a three-run triple to highlight the five-run fourth, when the Padres took their first lead of the season.

Boston 14, Tampa Bay 5

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Kevin Millar homered and drove in four runs.

Millar had an RBI single off Nick Bierbrodt (0-1) in a five-run third inning, a solo homer off reliever Jorge Sosa in the fifth, and a two-run double in the sixth. He flied out in the eighth.

Florida 8, Philadelphia 3

MIAMI — Mark Redman had a career-high 10 strikeouts in his debut for the Marlins. Juan Encarnacion, Alex Gonzalez, and Mike Lowell homered for the Marlins. Ivan Rodriguez added a two-run triple.

Redman allowed seven hits and two runs — one earned — in 6 1/2 innings.

Seattle 7, Oakland 6, 11 innings

OAKLAND, Calif. — Ben Davis hit a leadoff homer in the 11th inning as the Mariners blew two late leads but still got new manager Bob Melvin his first victory.

Seattle led, 4-3, in the ninth, but Scott Hatteberg tied it with an RBI single off closer Kazuhiro Sasaki. After Mike Cameron drove home pinch-runner Mark McLemore with a sacrifice fly off Keith Foulke in the 10th, Terrence Long hit a one-out homer to right off Jeff Nelson to tie it again.

Minnesota 3, Detroit 0

DETROIT — The Twins appear to have picked up where they left off last season.

Kyle Lohse allowed two hits in eight innings as the Twins completed a season-opening three-game sweep.

"Our fans have been waiting all winter to see us again — we finished the year on the road, and we started this one on the road," Twins manager Ron Gardenhire said. "It's going to be a lot of fun, especially going back with a 3-0 record."

Pittsburgh 7, Cincinnati 5

CINCINNATI — The first guests at Great American Ball Park made off with everything but the towels.

First homer. First win. First series sweep. The Pittsburgh Pirates left town with all of the ballpark's breakthrough moments packed away.

Reggie Sanders went 4-5 with a pair of homers, and the Pirates kept the Reds winless in their new ballpark.

Montreal 4, Atlanta 0

ATLANTA — The Braves don't look anything like the team that won 11-straight division titles.

Five-time Gold Glove winner Andruw Jones dropped a routine flyball to lead to Montreal's first run, and Brad Wilkerson hit a two-run homer off Braves newcomer Russ Ortiz.

Cleveland 3, Baltimore 0

BALTIMORE — Brian Anderson outdid his former teammate, and in the process showed why spring training statistics are virtually meaningless.

Anderson marked his return to the Indians by pitching eight innings of four-hit ball, and Matt Lawton hit a three-run homer.

The game drew a crowd of 18,470 — the lowest attendance in the 12-year history of Camden Yards. The previous low was 20,279, set last September against Toronto.

Maple Leafs win fourth straight

ASSOCIATED PRESS

TORONTO — Aki Berg scored the go-ahead goal with 3:53 remaining in regulation as the Toronto Maple Leafs won their fourth straight with a victory over the Minnesota Wild, 2-1, on Thursday night.

Toronto captain Mats Sundin didn't return after a puck hit him in the face in the first. Manny Fernandez made 24 saves.

Fernandez robbed Toronto's Jonas Hoglund of a goal with a glove save midway through the third. Just over two minutes later, Belfour made a spectacular save on Sergei Zholtok. Zholtok had an open net, but Belfour threw up his arm and blocked Zholtok's wrist shot.

New Jersey 1, Boston 1, OT

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Boston goaltender Steve Shields made five of his 28 saves in overtime and the Bruins skated to a tie.

Joe Thornton scored in the second period for Boston, while Joe Nieuwendyk tallied for the Devils in the first period and lost an apparent winner in overtime because of a controversial penalty.

Nieuwendyk beat Shields at 49 seconds of the overtime with a shot in close, referee Mick McGough immediately waved off the goal.

Ottawa 5, Washington 1

WASHINGTON — The Ottawa Senators clinched two titles Thursday night — one for themselves and one for the Lightning.

Peter Schaefer and Daniel Alfredsson scored two goals apiece.

Robert Lang managed Washington's only goal, which came 1:57 into a two-minute, five-on-three power play.

Chicago 6, St. Louis 4

ST. LOUIS — Nathan Dempsey and Chris Simon each scored twice, and rookie goalie Michael Leighton won his first career game.

Theo Fleury had three assists for the Blackhawks. Chicago scored on two of the first six shots against Chris Osgood and fought off a second-period rally by the Blues.

With the Blues trailing, 5-2, after two periods, Osgood was replaced by Brent Johnson. Martin Bell scored on the second shot Johnson faced at 2:18 of the third period for a four-goal lead.

Detroit 5, New York Islanders 2

DETROIT — Sergei Fedorov scored two goals, and the Red Wings defeated the Islanders, denying New York a chance to clinch the final playoff spot in the East.

Kris Draper, Mathieu Schneider, and Luc Robitaille also scored for Detroit.

Alexei Yashin scored both goals for the Islanders.

Fedorov opened the scoring 2:59 into the game on a breakaway, after taking a pass from Brendan Shanahan. Fedorov beat Rick DiPietro with a backhand shot through the pads. Draper made it 2-0 at 7:16 of the first period when he tipped in a pass from the corner.

quote of the day

There's an old military saying: If your attack is going well, it's an ambush.
— Col. Larry Brown,
the chief operations officer for Lt. Gen. James Conway, the top Marine commander in Iraq.

horoscopes

Friday, April 4, 2003 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may have some thoughts about your direction in life. If you aren't happy with your current position, look at your options. Find a position that will give you the challenge you are looking for.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may feel a bit emotional today, so keep a low profile, and wait until you are in a better position to deal with the issues that are bothering you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't get into deep conversations with people who want to argue. Your words will be twisted. Take a lighthearted approach to whatever you do today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't put your money into something that may or may not bring you returns. Invest in yourself instead, and you will get far better returns.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your future may be uncertain, so if you aren't happy with what you are doing, consider what else is available. It's never too late to learn something new.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take hold of your life, and make the changes you see fit. Make a checklist, and stick to it. It's up to you to take the initiative.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take better care of yourself. Minor health problems will escalate if you don't get sufficient rest. You may need to get a little help on the side in order to reduce your tension.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Personal issues will mount if you don't take care of them. You will have to make some hard decisions. Don't overreact to what's going on around you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Someone you trust may not be as honest as you think. Keep your personal thoughts to yourself. Mixing business with pleasure is probably a poor idea.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you've been working on something, let your friends and peers critique what you are doing. You'll be surprised by what you hear. Some new ideas will be formulated.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may have added responsibilities today. Be quick to respond to the requests being made so others can't saddle you with their tasks.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Join an organization that works for a cause you believe in. Your compassion and sensitivity toward others will put you in a good position with your peers.
