Marines liberate seven POWs

Tip from Iraqis leads to rescue of soldiers; U.S. forces move into outskirts of Tikrit

BY PETER BAKER AND MARY BETH SHERIDAN
WASHINGTON POST

NUMANIYAH, Iraq — U.S. Marines rescued seven American soldiers held captive by Iraqi forces for the past three weeks and flew them to safety, bringing a successful end Sunday to a prisoner drama that had consumed senior military officers.

A light armored detachment of Marines on their way north to clear away holdouts in Tikrit, former president Saddam Hussein's ancestral hometown, burst in on the captured U.S. soldiers in a private house after being tipped off by local Iraqis. The seven were all in good condition, although three were recovering from bullet wounds suffered during their capture.

"We feel like we won the lottery of life," Chief Warrant Officer Ronald Young, 26, a helicopter pilot from suburban Atlanta held since March 24, exulted aboard a C-130 Hercules transport plane that evacuated the freed prisoners to Kuwait from a Marine base in Iraq.

The news exhilarated Army and Marine officers in Iraq and political leaders in Washington. "Today is a great day for the families, comrades, loved ones of the seven missing in action who are free," President Bush said during a brief, unscheduled talk with reporters at the White House. "I'm really pleased."

David Williams, 31, of Fort Hood, Texas, was also found Sunday.

The other recovered soldiers were from the Army's 507th Maintenance Company convoy that was ambushed in the southern crossroads city of An Nasiriyah on March 23: Sgt. James Riley, 31, Pennsauken, N.J.; Spc. Shoshana Johnson, 30, El Paso, Texas; Spc. Joseph Hudson, 23, Alamogordo, N.M.; Spc. Edgar Hernandez, 21, Mission, Texas; and Pfc. Patrick Miller, 23, Wichita, Kan.

Their colleague, Pfc. Jessica Lynch, 19, Palestine, W.Va., was rescued from an Iraqi hospital in a raid April 2.

The recovery of the seven prisoners came as a column of Marines stabbed into the southern outskirts of Tikrit, pounding away at paramilitary forces from the air and ground to seize control of the last stronghold outside U.S. or British control. Despite the battle with the irregulars, reports from within the city 90 miles north of Baghdad indicated that most organized military forces had fled and that tribal leaders wanted to surrender to U.S. commanders.

The Marines, organized in Task Force Tripoli, moved toward Tikrit after receiving orders to bring a swift and decisive end to any remaining organized opposition. "Movement up is faster than we thought," said

Anti-gay group meets resistance

BY JEFFREY PATCH
THE DAILY IOWAN

A small group of protesters from a Topeka, Kan., church picketed local houses of worship Sunday, condemning homosexuality and arguing with counter-protesters who turned out for a second day of vehement exchanges.

Approximately 10 members from the Westboro Baptist Church were met with nearly 300 counter-protesters this weekend when they arrived to decry the Riverside Theatre's production of The Laramie Project, a play that depicts Laramie, Wyo., residents' reactions to the 1998 murder of University of Wyoming student Matthew Shepard, a 21-year-old gay man.

Kevin Leicht, the treasurer for Trinity Episcopal, 320 E. College St., shrugged off the Westboro protesters, mostly family members of pastor Fred Phelps Sr., after they picketed his church Sunday for supporting homosexuality.

"My basic recommendation to them is, 'Read the Bible and try again,'" Leicht said.

The Phelps family preached what they call "God's grace," carrying signs that read, "FAG CHURCH," "FAG PRIEST," and "DYKE NUNS."

The most visible demonstration came before the April 12 performance of The Laramie Project, which sold out 10 of its 12 performances.

"[Homosexuals] absolutely will go to hell," said Westboro's attorney, Shirley Phelps-Roper, before the play's last show. "If you are living life in unrepentant sin, you have no outcome but hell."

Protesters from Phelps' congregation lined up at the intersection of Gilbert and Market streets from 7 to 8 p.m., hoisting signs that read, "God blew up the shuttle," "Matt in Hell," and "AIDS is God's cure." Across the both Gilbert Street and Market Street, a throng of approximately 300 Iowa City residents angrily contested the Westboro views and assertions that tragedies from 9/11 to the Columbia space shuttle explosion were God's punishment for homosexuality.

"I'm elated at the community participation and the variety of people here," said UI senior Cianán Russell.

Phelps' group also targeted the UI in news releases that called the university "fag-drenched" and a production of Laramie at Cornell University last month. The UI is not officially affiliated with Riverside Theatre or Laramie.

"The [UI] is a bastion of little perverts," Phelps-Roper said. "You get a bunch of young people who are pseudo-intellectuals and they start thinking that they are all that and a bag of chips."

Jonathan Phelps, 43, stood on the state of Iowa flag as he condemned homosexuals outside the theater. Meanwhile, 13-year-old Tim Phelps Jr., Fred Phelps' grandson, carried a sign that read, "Thank God for Sept. 11."

"If you're not out here doing the Lord's work, you're going to hell," said his brother, 15-year-old Jacob Phelps.

Counter-protesters wielded signs that read, "Hate can suck my dildo," "Hate is not an Iowa City value," and "Separation of Church and Hate."

BY GRANT SCHULTE
THE DAILY IOWAN

A murderer and a thief who escaped from Oakdale prison this weekend had apparently planned their getaway, relying on a third inmate's help to scale two security fences undetected, authorities said Sunday.

Omar Wilkins, 19, and Jeffrey Hershberger, 38, escaped from the medium-security prison around 12:30 p.m. April 12. They were last seen in a brown 1998 Dodge Caravan that they carjacked from a fisherman. Authorities consider them to be armed and dangerous.

The duo had carjacked two vehicles and remained on the run as of Sunday evening, eluding an intense manhunt for the second-straight day.

The men had been "having conversations with each other" while awaiting classification that would determine to which state prison they should be sent, said Oakdale Deputy Warden Greg Ort.

Authorities issued a bulletin through the National Crime Information Center, which in turn spread word of the escape to agencies nationwide, said Fred Scaletta, a spokesman for the Iowa Department of Corrections.

"A lot of it just depends on whether they have plans" beyond the escape, he said. "If they don't have any plans, they're probably going to get picked up pretty quickly. It's likely that these guys are going to get caught."

But, asked where the duo might be headed, he said: "We have no clue."

Wilkins is described as a black male, 5-7, 158 pounds with short black hair. Hershberger is 6-0, 148 pounds, and has blue eyes and long brown hair.

UI student living out 'every guy's dream' through Playboy job

BY LAUREN SMILEY
THE DAILY IOWAN

Lathe Toft's week just got a shot of testosterone.

The UI senior's cell phone rang last week: Would he mind scoping out bars for bunny T-shirt giveaways and helping at a Playboy photo shoot of UI females posing in varying degrees of undress?

Once the 22-year-old Playboy subscriber realized the callers weren't pranksters, he didn't hesitate.

"Isn't it every guy's dream to help with a Playboy photo shoot?" the nursing major said. "I can tell you I have a lot of jealous friends."

Toft will serve as Playboy magazine's UI representative when a photo team from perhaps the world's most famous name in peek-a-boo press sets up camp in Iowa City this week to shoot university women for its "Women of the Big Ten" pictorial. The 10-12 page layout will be released in the October issue, in stores Aug. 25, returning for the first time since 1997, when three UI students stripped for the camera.

The "very popular" issue sells 500,000 more issues than its average 3.5 million circulation, said Playboy spokeswoman Karen Ring Borgstrom.

Toft will assist Playboy photographer Kim Mizuno at interviews today and Tuesday at an undisclosed hotel suite to select

A satisfying career with some bite

BY CHOYON MANJREKAR
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI alumnus Jim Bramson has 3.2 billion teeth to look after. He keeps most of them in other mouths, but each white enameled gem is equally important to the 1979 UI College of Dentistry graduate. As chief executive officer of the American Dental Association, Bramson supervises how dental health is administered to millions of people in the United States, advocates for changes in dental policy and legislation, helps to provide corporate funding for dentists, and develops information for the profession. "It is a fabulous career," said Bramson, who now resides in Chicago. "I get to practice a wonderful healing art in one of the most compassionate professions." The Merville, Iowa, native supervises a staff of 450 in facilities in Chicago and Washington, D.C., oversees 545 dental societies, and works with a $100 million budget for research and activities. He also supervises a team of 30 scientists who review products and award the ADA's blue seal of approval to products that pass International Standard Organization tests. Bramson attributes his success to the quality of his education at the UI and his passion for the profession. "I have visited dental schools all over the country, and I do not find the [UI] dental school to be lacking in any department," he said. The married father of two said his time at the UI was spent buying 25-cent beers during breaks between night classes and being part of the Sigma Chi fraternity. Bramson said he always knew he wanted to be a dentist, a profession he later pursued after graduation in a private practice in Parkersburg, Iowa. But the experience of running a private dental practice for seven years was unfulfilling, he said, causing him to shift his focus to enacting changes in legislative dental policy and assisting dentists in setting up their own practice — his way of giving back to the community. Bramson's work led to his selection as ADA chief executive officer in 2001. The association's research department is working on such projects as panoramic X-rays, smart tooth fillings that prevent tooth decay, and bone cement, which Bramson predicts will have tremendous utility in the neurosurgery field. Bramson's role also facilitates publishing the association's flagship publication, The Journal of the American Dental Association. "I find it exciting that I have an influence over the health of millions of people," he said.

New health privacy rules go into effect today

BY CHRISTY B. LOGAN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Hospital officials say they are prepared to comply with a national mandate that imposes stringent guidelines for groups and individuals seeking information from a patient's personal health records. The Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act adds specific guidelines for releasing a patient's health information, including such vital records as age, date of birth, religious affiliation, and general health condition. The ruling, effective today, applies to physicians, hospitals, and any organization using health-care records, with exceptions made for family members, law-enforcement officers, and firefighters. Under the act, patients are given discretion once admitted to a health-care facility to sign a waiver granting them authority to decide if their records may be released to persons other than health-care providers, such as members of the media. Patients under age 18 may only have records with proper consent of a parent, acting on their behalf. Penalties for violation of the health-care act range from $50,000 to up to one year in prison. Officials at the UI Hospitals and Clinics say they are prepared to comply with the ruling, and they began training approximately 8,000 faculty and hospital staff members several weeks ago in nearly 250 training sessions. The UIHC has also notified all its patients and provided each with a copy and explanation of the law. "Protecting [a patient's privacy] is essential to the patient-caregiver relationship," said Debbie Thoman, the UIHC compliance/privacy officer. "The crafters of the rules wanted to make sure there would be a free flow of information. The idea is not to impose on patient care and treatment in any way." Members of the media will now receive a one-word condition statement of good, fair, or serious rather than a detailed summary if patient have agreed to allow their records to be released. To retrieve this information, media representative must ask for the patient by full name. "[The health-care act] will remind us all to be extra careful with charts and continue following good practices," said Daniel Fick, an associated professor of family medicine. "It's assurance that your information isn't shared with those you don't want it to be shared with." "From a provider standpoint, the privacy part of [the act] deals with administrative rules outside of health care. It's basic common sense." Thoman said the UIHC has always had measures in place to protect patient privacy. Complying with the health-care act is merely a part of the current system — stating that the hospital is "up, ready, and running." "We think we're in good shape," Thoman said. "We've always protected patient privacy. It's not a revolution in health care." E-MAIL: DI-REPORTER@UIOWA.EDU

CHRISTY-LOGAN@UIOWA.EDU

Health-act basics

- All patients are given the opportunity to restrict information such as name, religious affiliation, condition, and location in hospital from public release.
- Children under age 18 may have information released with the consent of a parent or legal guardian.
- If violated, the government may impose civil and criminal penalties of $50,000 and/or imprisonment up to 1 year.
- In the event of a major disaster, patient information may be released to a public or private entity authorized to assist in disaster-relief efforts.
- Representatives of the media will only be given a patient's general health condition if the patient has not objected to or restricted the release of the information.

County official pleads not guilty

The Johnson County deputy auditor entered a written plea of not guilty on April 11 to charges of possession of a schedule II controlled substance and child endangerment. John Charles Deeth, 39, 714 Brookside Drive, was arrested Feb. 27 at 418 Brown St. No. 21 after Iowa City police allegedly found a bag of cocaine in a dresser that he shared with his wife, Laura Renee Deeth, 50, in their Brookside residence, court records show. Laura Deeth, who was arrested the same night as her husband in their home, pleaded not guilty on April 10 to the same charges. According to police reports, John and Laura Deeth allegedly failed to properly administer medicine to their

13-year-old adopted daughter, who is suffering from a life-threatening disease that she was born with. Iowa City police began their investigation after Laura Deeth's 22-year-old daughter, Sara Poisel, told the state Department of Human Services in February that her mother and friend Michael Castor had been using marijuana, cocaine, and methamphetamines in the residence, court records show. According to a warrant, John Deeth told authorities that he knew his wife was using drugs in the house, but that he had to "look the other way" or she would kick him out. If the Deeths are found guilty of child endangerment, they could face up to two years in prison and a $5,000 fine. — by Amy Jennings

Iowa native killed in mosque battle

ASSOCIATED PRESS

OSSIAN, Iowa — An Iowa native and Marine has been killed during a seven-hour battle outside a mosque in downtown Baghdad.

Gunnery Sgt. Jeff Bohr, 39, of San Clemente, Calif., died April 10 from two gunshot wounds, said his father, Eddie Bohr of Ossian. Twenty-two others were injured in the battle.

Capt. Frank Thorp, a U.S. Central Command spokesman, said last week that Jeff Bohr's unit was acting on information that regime leaders were organizing a meeting in the area. During the operation, Thorp said, Marines were shot at from the mosque compound.

Jeff Bohr, a native of Ossian in northeastern Iowa, was a dedicated Marine who was ready to go to war, his father said Sunday. "We were darned proud of him," Eddie Bohr said. "When you make it up to the top end of the Marine Corps ... you know you're pretty good."

He described his son as a quiet person who liked running.

Jeff Bohr, who finished several marathons and ran 10 miles a day, spent a few years in the Army before joining the Marines. He was an instructor at Camp Pendleton Marine Corps Base, 38 miles north of San Diego, before heading to Iraq in January.

Eddie Bohr got a few letters from Jeff Bohr during his tour in Iraq. The final letter arrived just hours before Marines came to tell Bohr that his son was killed in action. In the letter, mailed approximately two weeks ago, Jeff Bohr said he had just been through a sand storm and battle in the desert.

Eddie Bohr said the news of his son's death has been difficult.

"We're doing 'about as good as can be expected,'" he said. "It's constantly on your mind. You don't sleep good at night; the first night you don't even sleep."

Jeff Bohr's younger brother, Richard, 36, of Minneapolis is expected to go to Iraq the first week of May, Eddie Bohr said. "It isn't a good feeling, but you don't get choices," he said. "Once you're in the military, you get told."

Still, Eddie Bohr is worried. "You lose one, and you know it can happen," he said.

Jeff Bohr's mother, Jeanette, was watching television on April 10 when she heard the news about the fighting outside the Baghdad mosque in Baghdad.

"I had a feeling," she told the La Crosse Tribune. "I was antsy all day."

Later that evening, two Marines knocked on the door of Jeanette Bohr's home in Lansing in northeast Iowa.

She said the military was her son's calling.

"You couldn't change his tune about going back in," she said.

"He had his years of service in and then he signed up for another three years," she said.

Jeff Bohr's wife, Lori Bohr, is a Cedar Rapids native. She learned of her husband's death Saturday after driving from California to Cedar Rapids to visit family.

Hattie Whitebreast helps her son Damon get ready to dance on April 12 at the Powwow in Carver-Hawkeye.

UI Powwow fêtes culture

BY CHRISTY B. LOGAN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Ehanamani Teton sat earnestly amid the sounds of American Indian dancers' thumping feet and the buzz of milling spectators, awaiting visitors to approach his table at the UI's 14th Annual Powwow.

Behind Teton's booth, drum groups beat their hide-covered instruments rhythmically on the floor of Carver-Hawkeye Arena as thousands of observers watched male and female dancers in regalia flowing with feathers, ribbons, and bells competing in a number of dance styles.

Teton, a member of the Lakota Sioux tribe of South Dakota, spent the past three days educating the public about the five books he wrote.

"We're such a small minority, we need to share and enjoy one another's company, history, culture, and spiritualism," he said. "In the process of doing that, people like me have books to educate non-Indians."

As a cultural gathering and celebration, powwows provide a platform for American Indians to share dance, music, art, and food. The powwow evolved from the Omaha Nation's tradition of gathering to exchange news and celebration of good fortunes and forge bonds among various tribes. This eventually led to modern-day celebrations.

A former professor and college dean, Teton took a 10-year hiatus from teaching students about his culture — one he describes as distorted and misrepresented.

"We never had dance contests," he said firmly. "That's modern and has to do with European influence. What has evolved is a whole new aspect to our culture."

UI Powwow-goers indulged in a mosaic of arts and crafts, hand-crafted jewelry, artifacts, and fry-bread — a flour-based staple served with honey and sugar or prepared taco-style — from nearly 100 vendors that ringed the upper level of Carver.

Like members of many indigenous cultures, some American Indians say they hope non-Indians will look beyond commercialized stereotypes and advertisements.

"We're no different from any other [people], simply human beings with the same type of emotions," said Ira Whitebreast of the Meskwaki Nation in Tama, who competed as a Men's Fancy dancer.

Iowa City resident Greg Thompson has attended the Powwow, which is hosted by the UI American Indian Student Association, for the past eight years.

"[The Powwow] shows us their ancient ancestors' ceremonies, but in present form," he said.

Kucinich rails against cost of war

BY MIKE GLOVER

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Ohio Rep. Dennis Kucinich said the collapse of resistance in Iraq and the potential of a relatively quick end to the war bolsters his hard-line opposition to the conflict.

"It makes it more compelling," said Kucinich, a Democrat who is vying for his party's presidential nomination. "That has enormous implications for the American people and is going to cost this nation heavily."

He spoke during a shortened campaign swing in Iowa, meeting on Sunday with church and community activists. His message was targeted directly at the war in Iraq.

"The American people are going to have to make a choice," said Kucinich, who argued that the soaring costs of the war coupled with tax cuts President Bush is pushing through Congress will rob the nation of the ability to deal with a long list of pressing domestic issues.

The war in Iraq became one of the only issues being discussed by a large and active field of candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination, but the relatively quick collapse of resistance has altered that debate.

Marines rescue 7

Col. Larry Brown, the Marines operations chief in Iraq. "Resistance is light."

Capturing Tikrit could close out large-scale military operations in Iraq and turn the attention of U.S. forces more fully to establishing security, repairing infrastructure, and rebuilding a working administration after the fall of Saddam's Baath Party. It would free U.S. troops to intensify their search for weapons of mass destruction and for Saddam and his top lieutenants, most of whom remain unaccounted for.

Some U.S. officials say they believe Saddam was killed in an air strike days before U.S. forces rolled into Baghdad. Army Gen.

Tommy Franks, the overall commander of U.S. and British troops in the Persian Gulf region, said on CNN's "Late Edition" that U.S. authorities possessed a DNA sample to help in an eventual identification.

U.S. officials disclosed that one top Saddam associate had been captured trying to flee to Syria. Watban Ibrahim Hasan, a half-brother of Saddam's, was in U.S. custody, the officials said. His apparent flight toward Syria served to escalate U.S. complaints about the government in Damascus.

Bush charged that Syria has chemical weapons and has been sheltering fugitives from Saddam's fallen government. "We believe there are chemical weapons in Syria," Bush told reporters. "Each situation will require a different response and, of course ... first things first. We're in Iraq now, and the second thing about Syria is that we expect cooperation."

In response, a Syrian official accused Bush of trying to distract from the looting and chaos brought on by the U.S. military campaign in Iraq. "It's been a campaign of disinformation and misinformation ... about Syria since even before the war started," Imad Moustapha, a deputy chief of mission in Washington, said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

While full-scale war appeared to be abating, small-scale attacks on U.S. forces persisted. Sixteen U.S. soldiers were wounded when a grenade was thrown into a compound in the southern Baghdad suburb of Mahmadiyah.

2 inmates escape from Oakdale

ESCAPE

Dressed in blue jumpsuits and possibly gray sweatshirts, Wilkins and Hershberger climbed two 12-foot fences topped with barb wire during an outside recreation period, Ort said. The lone guard watching approximately 60 inmates in the yard was distracted by a third inmate who was talking to him about an issue he had with the prison, he said. Ort would not name the third inmate but said staff members are trained to address prisoners' concerns.

The information came from prison officials' interviews with every inmate who was in the yard and the guard supervising them. Investigators on Sunday found a light gray jumpsuit with blood on it, said Ort, who caught news of the escape around 1 p.m. April 12.

"In this business, when you hear something like that, you start acting," Ort said. "You don't really have time to be surprised."

Wilkins was beginning a life sentence for a July 4, 2002, slaying in which he shot and killed a 50-year-old Sioux City man with an AK-47 assault rifle.

Hershberger had recently returned to prison after walking away from an Ottumwa halfway house last month. Convicted of theft and forgery, he has allegedly robbed banks in Iowa and Missouri.

The duo stole a visitor's car and later switched to the Caravan. They told the Caravan's owner, the fisherman, that they had a gun and forced him into the first car's trunk, police said. The man kicked out the car's back seat and was able to escape minutes after they left.

Hershberger, an aspiring artist who liked to draw in prison, worked construction and painting jobs while free, said Joyce Dehoedt, his sister who lives in New Sharon, Iowa. At one point, he attended Indian Hills Community College in Centerville, where he was studying to become an architect, she said.

"I heard from a friend he had escaped and couldn't believe it," she said. "I thought, 'No way.' It's just unreal."

Hershberger has not contacted her or their live-in uncle, she said — "he knows he'd better not call me." The two have not spoken since he allegedly robbed the banks, she said.

"He is a tenderhearted person, but he hurts me with what she does to other people," she said, adding that he always drifted back into trouble despite her help. "I'm worried about his safety."

The only other escape attempt in the current prison system happened 13 years ago, when a man scaled the first of the two fences. The man decided he did not want to try the second.

The prison, officially known as the Iowa Medical Classification Center, evaluates all prisoners in the state system to determine to which facility they should be sent. Typically, the process takes 30-40 days, Ort said.

The Oakdale facility, founded in 1967 with a capacity of approximately 540, held more than 800 inmates the day Wilkins and Hershberger escaped, Ort said. Prison officials check the number of inmates six times daily; immediately after the escape, they took a seventh emergency count to ensure nobody else had disappeared, he said.

The prison is operating as normal, but the recreation yard is off-limits to inmates until at least Tuesday, he said. "This was an incident where two guys got lucky," he said.

hour-long make-out session across the street from Phelps' group to send a message of love.

"It's just about combating hate with love," said UI senior and marathon kisser Erin Fleck.

Phelps Sr., 73, was Westboro's first preacher, and he still delivers anti-gay sermons weekly. He has raised 13 children and 52 grandchildren, most of whom are employed in propagating his church's anti-gay agenda. They also denounced homosexuality in Connecticut and Texas this weekend.

The church employs cautionary measures to record any acts of violence against it, videotaping each protest and threatening lawsuits if attacked. Eleven out of Phelps Sr.'s 13 adult children are lawyers and spend approximately 50 hours of legal legwork for each protest, said Jonathan Phelps.

Iowa City police Capt. Tom Widmer said Phelps' contingent, who notified police and Riverside Theatre nearly a month ago of its intent to protest, was "very upfront." No violent altercations were reported.

UI sophomore Veronica Castillo helped organize a fundraiser to collect change for each minute protesters were active. The donations, $742 from more than 50 people, will go to the Matthew Shepard Foundation, a nonprofit group raising awareness about discrimination and diversity.

"We're just trying to make a good thing out of a bad thing," she said. "It's not really the money that counts, it's the support of the people."

Phelps-Roper has assisted the church's effort by organizing more than 22,000 protests of gay-related issues in the last 12 years — including at least six daily protests in Topeka. The church, which has approximately 100 members, also runs Web sites that preach against homosexuality.

the female bodies they will photograph around town Thursday through Saturday. Borgstrom said that approximately 150-200 students will interview.

Regardless of whether the women chosen for the photo shoot are pictured in the magazine, they will be paid on a sliding scale — more money for more skin, Borgstrom said. Most women say they'd pay Playboy for the experience afterwards, she said, adding they face fairly little societal stigma for posing.

"In the homes they grew up in, their fathers read Playboy, their boyfriends, their brothers," Borgstrom said. "It's so mainstream."

One caveat: "I think if you're planning on entering politics, you might want to reconsider," she said.

Steve Parrot, the UI director of University Relations, said students wouldn't face any disciplinary action for posing in the magazine.

UI sophomore Julia Skinner, the president of the Feminist Majority Leadership, said the organization will set up a table to distribute pamphlets urging women to rethink their decision of posing for the magazine and solicit petition signatures, though she said she's not expecting many because people are desensitized to the sexual objectification of women.

"The ad has said, 'You can have a great career' instead of 'You are getting photographed for a bunch of people you don't know to stare at you,'" Skinner said, referring to Playboy's advertisement in The Daily Iowan. "... To say this will help their careers is a very strange twist to put on it."

Dale Arens, the UI director of trademark licensing, said Playboy does not need to ask the university's permission to use Hawkeye gear in the shoot.

"We should be happy if they happen to be wearing lots of Iowa merchandise because then they would be fully clothed," he said. "If Playboy was trying to say they were the official publication of the women of the University of Iowa, then we'd have some issues."

Toft said he doesn't feel he's complicit in exploiting women — it's their choice — and also not too distressed about missing work and his only class this week either — Human Anatomy.

"I'll learn a little different kind of anatomy," he said.

Fire at Ohio State party kills five

BY LIZ SIDOTI
ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A suspicious fire broke out in a three-story house early Sunday as a college student's 21st birthday party was breaking up, killing five students and injuring three others, authorities said.

One of the injured, a 20-year-old man, was in critical condition with burns and smoke inhalation, officials said.

Arson and homicide investigators were at the student-entertained house near Ohio State University, and police were investigating reports that a fight had started before the fast-moving fire ignited, said police Sgt. Dana Norman.

"The cause has been ruled suspicious," Fire Department spokeswoman Kelly McGuire said.

Party guest Richie Delmont, an Ohio State junior, said the argument started after another guest tried to lift a refrigerator on a dare and one of the residents told him to stop. He said the confrontation did not get physical.

The house is about a block from campus in a neighborhood of older homes popular with students. Approximately 80 people had been at the party, and 10 to 20 were still inside when the fire started around 4 a.m. in the front of the house, Norman said.

Firefighters found two men and three women dead inside; three of the five victims were Ohio University students and two others were students from Ohio State, OSU spokeswoman Elizabeth Conlisk said. It appeared some had been sleeping when the fire began, Norman said.

Drinking could have been a factor in the deaths and injuries, Norman said.

"The smoke and gases from the fire are extremely deadly, and when you're drunk or have been drinking, that also contributes to slowing down your reaction time," he said.

University President Karen Holbrook spoke with investigators outside the house after a private briefing with fire and police officials earlier in the day.

"We are clearly a community in mourning," Holbrook said.

Of the 12 Ohio State students who lived in the house, 10 had been located alive, said one of the residents, Zack Randol, 21, a sophomore from New York who said he wasn't home at the time of the fire.

He said the party was to celebrate the 21st birthday of one of his roommates. "This is the worst thing that could happen," Randol said.

Jennifer Lehren said she and her boyfriend had been asleep in his bedroom at the back of the house on the second floor, and she woke up while firefighters were carrying the two of them to safety.

"I didn't know what was going on until I was outside," said Lehren, 20. "I remember screaming that it was so hot and that my hair was on fire."

Lehren was treated for burns on her hands and released. Her boyfriend, Josh Patterson, 20, was in critical condition with minor burns and smoke inhalation.

Approximately a dozen students who said they knew the men who lived in the house gathered on a nearby street corner Sunday afternoon.

Darren Lundgren, left, of St. Louis talks with an investigator and a firefighter about damage to his bedroom and belongings outside his residence near Ohio State University, where a suspicious fire killed five students and injured three others Sunday.

"They're not wild. They don't have people over who would do this. They don't have enemies. They're not those kind of guys," said Tomomi Ono, 19. She said there were four kegs and at least a dozen cases of beer at the party.

60% oppose Bush's tax cuts, poll says

BY WILL LESTER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Six in 10 Americans say they are against more tax cuts when the country is at war and already faces budget deficits, according to an Associated Press poll. Still, half of all Americans say their taxes are too high.

The poll, taken in the days before Tuesday's tax deadline, found that 61 percent say it would be better to hold off on additional tax cuts right now to avoid making budget deficits worse and ensure that there is adequate money to pay for the war.

Half that many, 31 percent, said they think it is more important to pass more tax cuts to give people more money to spend and to stimulate the economy, said the poll conducted for the AP by ICR/International Communications Research of Media, Pa.

"I think they need to figure out how to pay for the war," said Joseph Ames, a 28-year-old cook from Boise, Idaho, who considers himself a political independent. "They need to broaden their search to see where and who is actually affected by these tax cuts. I hear a lot of talk about the little man getting stomped on."

A majority of those who think taxes are too high and a majority of Republicans, 56 percent, said they preferred holding off on additional tax cuts right now. Three of four Democrats said it would be better to wait.

This session in Congress, lawmakers are debating a possible tax cut, which could be around $350 billion, though lawmakers are still debating the appropriate size of a cut. Supporters of a larger tax cut say it would be a boon to the economy; opponents of the measure say it would worsen the federal deficit, which is expected to approach $400 billion this year.

The economy's continuing problems have convinced some that more tax cuts are needed.

Kathleen Blank, a 79-year-old conservative Republican from Palmdale, Calif., said she's convinced that more tax cuts will stimulate the economy. "People get scared and quit buying when things are too tight," she said. "If you can afford to spend money, then you spend it."

President Bush signed a $1.35 trillion, 10-year tax cut in 2001 with broad income tax reductions for millions of Americans.

The poll of 1,017 adults suggested the public has an outsized concern about the possibility that their own tax returns will be audited by the Internal Revenue Service. It was taken April 2-6 and has an error margin of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

One in five in the poll said they thought the chance of having their taxes audited was at least "somewhat likely," though few of those people put the chance of an audit at "very likely."

Families rejoice at U.S. POWs' rescue

BY LEE HOCKSTADER AND SHANKAR VEDANTAM
WASHINGTON POST

EL PASO, Texas — The first images on television were grainy and tremulous — gaunt young soldiers, some in striped pajamas, hustled from a helicopter to a waiting ambulance. But for the families of the American POWs released Sunday in Iraq, the pictures couldn't have been clearer.

"As soon as we saw his ears, we knew," said Kelly Lively of Temple, Ga., who glimpsed brother Ronald Young Jr., 26, the pilot of an Apache helicopter downed March 23, in the television footage. "He has pretty large ears — when he was little they took up his whole head."

For the seven soldiers freed from their Iraqi captors Sunday, it was the end of 21 days of captivity. For their exuberant families and friends at home, it was the end of 21 days of anguish and prayer, of yellow ribbons and clamorous requests for interviews — of waiting and waiting for news.

When news came Sunday, the relief and elation were explosive.

"Yeeee-hah!" hooted Ken Kruger, leaning from the cab of his 18-wheeler as he drove along the suburban street in El Paso that is home to the parents of Spc. Shoshana Johnson, one of the freed prisoners. Kruger, a friend of Johnson's father, Claude, let loose a blast from his truck's horn, hopped out, hugged, and kissed the Johnson family and jumped up and down with them. "Come on home soon, Shoshana," he belted to the TV cameras.

The Johnsons declined to be interviewed, but they issued a statement saying they are "ecstatic" that their daughter, known as Shana, a single mother who is an Army cook, is safe along with the other POWs.

Five of the seven Americans recovered Sunday are members of the 507th Maintenance Company, a rear-echelon unit from Fort Bliss, Texas, that apparently lost its bearings and was ambushed March 23 in southern Iraq. In that same episode, nine of the 507th's soldiers were killed, and five were injured, four of whom were rescued that day. The fifth was Pfc. Jessica Lynch, who was rescued by Special Forces troops April 1.

"Three weeks ago on Sunday, we received the first news of the ambush of the 507th Maintenance Company," said an uncharacteristically emotional statement issued by Fort Bliss. "Today on Palm Sunday, we received the joyful news that the five POWs from the 507th have been found ..."

The exuberance spread from family to family as they learned the news — some from watching TV.

"They were showing POWs going from the helicopter to the ambulance," recalled Mary Pickering, the mother of Pfc. Patrick Wayne Miller, 23, of the 507th. "They had their faces covered, but we could make out that it was him."

"He was the one looking out of the ambulance. I yelled out, 'That's him, that's him, that's him!' My heart jumped for joy."

Lively, Young's sister, said she was alerted to the news of freed Americans by a sister-in-law at 6 a.m., and she turned on her television. There was some initial confusion about whether the freed prisoners were POWs missing, but the moment Lively and her parents and siblings in Lithia Springs, Ga., saw Young's ears, they knew.

Sabina Louise Pierce/Associated Press
Jane Riley smiles and laughs on Sunday with Maj. Nathan Banks outside her home in Pennsauken, N.J., after hearing that her son, James Riley, 31 was safe. He was one of seven POWs rescued on Sunday.

U.S. captures several top Iraqis, officials say

BY MATT KELLEY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Several top officials of Saddam Hussein's regime in Iraq, including the president's half brother and a former science adviser, have been captured by U.S. forces.

The Iraqis are being interrogated about Iraq's suspected chemical, biological, and nuclear weapons, U.S. officials said Sunday. They also are being pressed for details on where Saddam is, if he is alive, as well as the whereabouts of other former Iraqi leaders.

The captured Iraqis include Watban Ibrahim Hasan, one of Saddam's three half-brothers, who once served as Iraq's interior minister. Hasan was the five of spades in the deck of playing cards the U.S. military issued with pictures of wanted Iraqi officials.

The war's commander, Gen. Tommy Franks, said Sunday that the United States was holding several high-ranking Iraqi prisoners in western Iraq. Neither he nor Pentagon officials would say how many leading Iraqis have been captured.

As the fighting in Iraq winds down, American forces are stepping up the search for the chemical and biological weapons that the United States accuses Saddam's government of having stashed away. So far, no caches of weapons of mass destruction have been confirmed in Iraq, military officials said Sunday.

U.S. forces have a list of 2,000 to 3,000 sites in Iraq that need to be checked, and weapons teams are checking up to 20 sites a day, Franks said. Iraqis ranging from common people to high-ranking officials have suggested other possible hiding places to be searched, Franks and other military officials said.

"There are so many sites, we are not able to get to all of them right away," a senior Pentagon official said Sunday, speaking on condition of anonymity. "It's fair to say there are a lot of places U.S. forces are adding to the list."

One former Iraqi official who could provide major help for the hunt is Lt. Gen. Amer al-Saadi, who surrendered to American forces on April 12. Al-Saadi, the seven of diamonds in the U.S. deck of cards, was Saddam's point man on weapons of mass destruction.

Pentagon officials said Sunday they did not know if al-Saadi was sticking to his prewar assertions that Iraq no longer had any chemical or biological weapons. Shortly before leaving his Baghdad villa on April 12 with his German wife, Helga, and surrendering to an American warrant officer, al-Saadi insisted that Iraq has no such weapons.

Also unclear was how helpful Hasan, Saddam's captured half-brother, could be. He was dismissed as interior minister, the official in charge of Iraq's domestic security, and was shot by Saddam's son Vday in 1995 amid one of the many squabbles within Saddam's family.

Saddam did not trust Hasan and was having him watched, a U.S. official said Sunday. He was captured near Mosul in northern Iraq, apparently as he tried to escape to Syria, the official said.

Another half-brother, Barzan Ibrahim Hasan, was targeted by a air strike April 11 on a building in central Iraq. Military officials said Sunday they had not confirmed Barzan Hasan's fate.

Other top Iraqi officials have escaped to Syria, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said. Some have moved on to third countries, he said.

"We certainly are hopeful Syria will not become a haven for war criminals or terrorists," Rumsfeld said.

President Bush also issued a vague warning Sunday to Syrian President Bashar Assad, saying the Syrians should avoid harboring "any people who need to be held to account."

Syria's government and Saddam's regime both belonged to the Arab Baath Socialist Party until a bitter split in 1960. In recent years, the two factions seemed to have worked out some of their differences.

A Syrian diplomat who followed Rumsfeld on NBC's "Meet the Press," Imad Moustapha, denied that Syria was giving Iraqis refuge.

Iraqis: U.S. hit wrong house

BY MICHAEL SLACKMAN
LOS ANGELES TIMES

BAGHDAD — Ask residents of Baghdad's Al Mansour district if they think Saddam Hussein's remains are at the bottom of a 60-foot pit blasted out of their neighborhood last week by U.S. bombs, and the answer will probably be no.

It's not that they believe the security-conscious president was hiding elsewhere. The United States just hit the wrong house, they say.

Right next to the rubble-strewn hole is a two-story white stucco home that has become the focus of intense speculation. Some neighbors believe Saddam was using it as a hide-out. No one knows for sure, of course, and it may well be a case of gossip run amok.

But neighbors say there is evidence to prove their suspicions. Chances that Saddam was there are "more than 90 percent, I think," said Saad Waali, 51, a retired general who lives nearby. Exhibit 1: The five telephone lines hooked into the house. This isn't gossip. Anyone can see the five black wires running off a pole on the street and into the first floor. Five lines may be extravagant even by Western standards for a residence, but here, no one has five lines.

"That's not just extraordinary; it's impossible in Iraq," said Gorgees Toma, 62, who lives next door.

Exhibit 2: The desk.

When the four, 2,000-pound bombs fell April 7 in what U.S. officials called a major strike on a "leadership target," residents focused their attention on the houses that were obliterated. But as days went by, and the shock began to fade, people realized that a house bordering the crater was empty.

So they looted it.

Once people got inside, rumors started swirling that this was the house Saddam was using and that the Americans had hit the wrong target.

The main reason was the desk.

Step inside the front door, into the modest, rectangular living room, and there is only one piece of furniture left. It is a large desk at the back of the room. It's not the kind of desk an ordinary person would put in the living room, or even in their home. It has a heavy wood top, about 6 feet long, on a rather gaudy wooden base. To the residents of Al Mansour, it looks just like the desk Saddam sat behind in televised broadcasts during the war.

Saddam is known to sleep in a different place every night and is believed to have told only a very small circle of loyalists of his location.

"It was known to everyone that he had a hide-out in ordinary houses," Toma said. "Nobody knew he was here. If we did, we could have left."

The evidence that he was in this particular house remains circumstantial, but to residents, it's convincing. In addition to the phone lines and the desk, there's the wood dining table that seems too large for the room it was in, the fancy sofa set (which was looted), and the pile of bread and potatoes on the floor. The bread, which appeared to be little sandwich rolls, looked like the kind served as military rations; Saddam traveled with military security.

Locals say that some months ago — two by one account, seven by another — the residents of this house sold it or rented it out. In the days and weeks afterward, people dressed in shabby clothing — perhaps disguises — were showing up in taxis, one neighbor said.

Another neighbor, a member of Saddam's Baath Party, said he had asked two men who had parked in the driveway to see their identification. He thought they might be criminals, but their documents indicated they were drivers for state general security, he said.

Guest Opinion

The idea of Peace Camp

The Bush administration may soon declare "victory" in Iraq. Few doubted whether the U.S. military would win the war, but the question remains open whether it will lose the peace.

Worse, the "victory" could be Pyrrhic and could be used to justify more war.

Thousands of lives have been lost in the war already. War and occupation in Iraq may cost more than $300 billion. It has divided old alliances. Anti-American sentiment worldwide is at an all-time high.

While U.S. troops were busy pulling down statues of Saddam Hussein on April 10 for a photo-op, not even a dozen could be spared to provide police protection to a single school or hospital. According to the International Red Cross, the medical system in Baghdad is in complete collapse because of the looting. The Geneva Conventions require occupying troops to provide police protection.

The tonnage of weapons of mass destruction that "justified" the U.S.'s pre-emptive attack found so far have totaled zero. And Donald Rumsfeld's already talking about phantom weapons of mass destruction being smuggled to Syria.

More vexing questions remain. What role should the United Nations play? Will the United States leave Iraq undemocratic, unstable, and chaotic as it has left Afghanistan? And tragically worse, will the United States continue to beat the drums for war once again in Syria, Iran, or North Korea?

In the last two years, the current U.S. administration has neatly divided the world into us and them, with us and against us, good and evil, patriotic and unpatriotic. Not since second grade has the world been so simple, our path so clear, our conscience so clean.

Somewhere on the high road from Kabul to Baghdad (to Tehran and Damascus and Pyongyang and fill-in-the-blank) we just might have lost our way.

Whether we have remains an open question.

Democracy is always an open question. Even our national anthem ends with a question. But we can't question our televisions, or find answers in sanctimonious speeches, sound bites, focus groups, or opinion polls. All we can do is question each other.

In almost three weeks at the Peace Camp, hundreds of people have come together to express their support by stopping by and talking with us, by donating food, and money, and literature, and a colossal amount of time. Others have come to the Peace Camp shouting, and left a few hours later with a respectful nod and a promise to return and talk some more. And they have.

At the Peace Camp, we make no claims to certainty. We have no ideology but the promise of tolerance. All we have are questions, a few answers, some facts (well-sourced), and even more questions to follow. Time never runs out on the possibility of peace.

We generally agree that war breeds terrorism and more war, and that racism and intolerance, unilateralism and imperialism, silent consent and unquestioned beliefs, all undermine the very foundations of democracy. We generally agree that trillions spent on bombs could be better spent on education and health care, on public assets such as our environment and infrastructure, on aid to impoverished nations, on battling AIDS and starvation, on waging peace. It's all very complicated, though. So much to talk about.

Our goal is to be there on the hill, in the open, in all weather, at all hours, ready to talk. It's the simplest, most difficult goal we can set.

So can you. Attend any of the Brown Bag Teach-ins on a wide range of interesting topics every weekday afternoon from noon to 1 p.m. for the rest of the semester (you can find the schedule at <http://www.uiowa.edu/~c008171/robspage/peacecamp-teachin.html>). Other events are announced at the Peace Camp.

The Peace Camp is admittedly a little odd, a little ad hoc. So be it. Where else in the United States can you find 50 people standing in small circles debating foreign policy in a cold drizzle at 2 in the morning? Everything about it is improbable. It's about as improbable as democracy, and just as fragile.

SUPPORTERS OF THE PEACE CAMP

Editorial

Student apathy means threats against Council have no weight

Much to the chagrin of many students, the Iowa City City Council finally took the first step toward increasing the age of entry at bars to 21. When it came to a vote, the council passed the measure with four councilors and the mayor in favor, and two councilors opposed.

Expressing his disgust at the council's feelings, UI junior and former UISG presidential candidate Bryan Stacy commented that he would make it his personal agenda that four councilors coming up for re-election be defeated. He was quoted as saying, "I tried to work with you, but it didn't work. I'm tired of this." While many students and some bar owners share Stacy's feelings, such overt threats to the City Council simply cross the line. Threatening city councilors solves nothing and will probably increase friction between students and the council.

While UISG President Nate Green, Mike Porter (the owner of One-Eyed Jakes and the Summit), and Stacy have all made similar statements regarding the council, a threat is only meaningful when someone has the power to back it up. If those threatening the councilors up for re-election really had the power to dictate City Council elections, then they would be a force to be reckoned with. Unfortunately, council elections do not ride on the whims of students. The councilors know that when it comes to winning re-election, their best bet is to court the voting segment of the population. Here in Iowa City, student apathy translates into very few City Council votes coming from students.

While students make up a large portion of the population, historically, they just have not put much effort into following and participating in local politics. Nor are most students registered to vote in Johnson County. Therefore, these threats really do not hold much water.

Furthermore, by threatening the councilors, these people are pushing the council toward an anti-student stance, and they really do not need any help there. Numerous council proposals have already shown that the councilors do not have a high regard for the student population. After being threatened with retribution, councilors will only feel more justified in punishing students in the future.

While Stacy and others may make it their personal agendas to keep the four council members from being re-elected, their words carry little weight. Their individual votes will not sway the elections either way, and recruiting enough students to make a difference would be a monumental task. In fact, unless other anti-student issues are being discussed around election time, most students will probably forget that Iowa City even has a City Council. Unfortunately, the next time an issue involving students comes before the council, the councilors will not forget that some leading students and community members threatened them.

Instead of making empty threats against the councilors, these leaders would do better to present viable and persuasive arguments about why a 21-ordinance will do more harm than good.

CORRECTION

The April 10 editorial, "U.S. should take every step to accommodate beliefs of Muslims" stated that the National Security Entry-Exit Registration System is required for "all foreign students and other visitors with temporary visas." In fact, registration is required only of those nonimmigrants either specifically chosen at the port of entry or from one of the countries in a designated call-in group that need to register. The Daily Iowan regrets the error.

Prepping for Playboy: the quest for perfection

April 7 — So, it occurred to me that people from Playboy will be here next week to look for some young, willing, college co-eds for their "Girls of the Big Ten" spread. I've been thinking about sending some photos to Playboy for a while, but faced with the reality of their immediate presence on the UI campus, I'm full of mixed emotions. Now I'm not really sure this is something I want to do. I mean, what if my dad sees it? What will my friends think? These are all things I have to think about.

April 8 — I think I could do it. Really, I think I could. I mean, it's Playboy — the tamest of all porn magazines. Ohh ... but then there's the whole issue of pornography. Is porn good or bad? Do I really want to contribute to the empire that has desensitized men to actual naked women and created the need for Viagra? Do I want to ruin my chances at being on "American Idol" if the producers find out I posed nude?

There are so many things to consider here. April 9 — As I was sitting in my feminism class today, I decided that I'm going to do it.

I'm going to try to pose for Playboy. There. I said it. You can SO be a feminist and be naked in a magazine.

I think what sealed the deal for me is that Playboy really is pretty tame. I mean, all the really raunchy stuff happens at the parties at the Playboy Mansion, and I'm not going to those. So I don't need to worry.

April 10 — Now for the preparation. There is so much to do over the next four days. I haven't been this stressed since senior prom. A list of things to do: 1) Tan like mad — the only way to cover up the flaws I can't fix is with a flawless tan. 2) Work out. Stairmasters, treadmills, elliptical machines — I'm gonna do it all. In fact I think I'll skip classes for the rest of the day to get a head start. Actually, maybe on Monday, too. 3) Relentlessly size myself up against the other women on the UI campus. I mean, if I'm not the prettiest, there's no sense in even showing up on Monday.

April 11 — All right. Today starts the way one breast sits just higher than the other. I'm SO not perfect. Playboy will never want me.

April 13 — I've started eating again, so I'm full of life again as well! I had an appointment with a local photographer today. For the most part, we just did head shots — some in black and white, some in color, some profiles, some straight on. But he wanted to dabble a little bit in some semi-nude photographs, which I should probably have, so I went along with it. I mean, I don't want to walk in to meet the Playboy people and be like, "I'm an amateur with no clue what I'm doing or what I need to have." Of course I need some seductive pictures. So, even though this photographer was pretty creepy, we did some topless photos. I'm just not sure that he was supposed to touch my breasts, though. He said he was "adjusting" them. I knew they were uneven ...

April 14 — Well, today's the big day. I've done all I can. My skin looks like I just walked off a Jamaican beach. My arms and ass are tight. My breasts are still uneven. Dammit. But I've been sizing up the potential competition around campus (it's been pretty easy with the nice weather — girls wear so little!), and I think I'm gonna be all right.

I am ready to be judged on my appearance and compared with other women based on their appearances. I am ready to be paraded before men — both the men who will judge me and those that will buy the "Big Ten" issue if I'm in it. I'm ready to be the naked feminist the world has been waiting for. Wish me luck!

FILM REVIEW

Stone Reader

★★★ out of ★★★★★

My dad lives to read. He reads at work all day and then comes home to continue in his reading room. Most people know someone like my dad — which is exactly the reason Mark Moskowitz's documentary, Stone Reader, succeeds.

Moskowitz is one of those people — a detail that is crystallized in the first five minutes, when we learn that the filmmaker has recently read the novel of the century. But he is unable to find any information on the publisher, the author, or the book itself.

Moskowitz takes on the arduous task of uncovering information about a novel and author that time forgot.

A political adman by trade, Moskowitz bought the Stones of Summer by Dow Mossman in 1972 after a rave review in the New York Times by John Seelye, who called it the voice of a new generation. A teenager at the time, he found the first 20 pages to be dense and cryptic, and he put the paperback down for another day, unaware that the other day would be a full 25 years later.

The film becomes more about the joy of reading than the search itself. Moskowitz interviews many authors, critics, and professors who sit on the periphery of the story. Many of them have either heard of Mossman or worked with him at the UI Writers' Workshop. None of them offer too much hope, but they do provide wonderful explanations on why we love to read, which is a more interesting conversation for Moskowitz.

A paying job and family illnesses sidetrack the dogged literary detective but never derail him.

Moskowitz decides he needs to focus and asks if there is anything in particular about one-shot novelists that might help him clarify his journey. Frank Conroy, the head of the Writers' Workshop, provides an answer: Writing a great novel takes a lot out of you, sometimes too much, and if it's too personal, sometimes the writer cannot bring himself to go through the same process again.

Once Mossman is finally located, back in Cedar Rapids, living in the house he grew up in, Moskowitz never condescends to ask why there wasn't more. He simply interviews him the same caring way he did the critics and professors.

This light tone is underscored by its contrast with the unintentionally funny interviews with the literary agent who now owns the rights to Stones of Summer. As this man gawks and guffaws at footage of Mossman living in a messy house and working as a welder for 19 years after he got out of a sanatorium, it becomes clear to the viewer why working with such a person would drive one there.

If the film has any shortcomings, it is that the audience never learns exactly what about Stones of Summer is so enthralling to Moskowitz until the final half-hour. We have to assume it's a humdinger if such an avid reader is compelled enough to take time out of his life to bug people about a novel written three decades ago.

Still, sometimes describing what makes a novel great is impossible, and trying does not help. In Moskowitz's case, he cannot avoid focusing the movie on himself. Slowing down to deconstruct would have taken away from the thrill of the hunt.

Monkeys, Pepsi, and summer

BY LYNN ELBER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — The evolution of television continues: A $1 billion prize will be at stake in a WB special and a monkey may help decide if there's a winner.

"Play for a Billion" will be the culmination of a Pepsi summer promotion in which contestants have the chance to play for the top prize on a live, two-hour show airing in September.

The program, to be produced by Michael Davies ("Who Wants to be a Millionaire"), represents a partnership between WB and Pepsi-Cola North America.

The two companies are also teaming on a summer variety show, "Pepsi Smash," which will feature performances by top musical acts, WB said in a release. The six-week series will begin airing in July.

"Play for a Billion" guarantees a $1 million winner and a shot at the grand prize for 10 contestants. The contest starts May 1 with the sale of Pepsi products that could lead to a chance to be on the TV special.

Details of the show are under discussion, executive producer Matti Leshem said on April 10. One proposal involves having a monkey put previously selected numbers in an order that must be matched for the $1 billion prize, he said.

"What could be more random than that?" Leshem said.

He's hoping to get a capuchin monkey to do the job. There was some controversy surrounding the idea, Leshem said, refusing to elaborate. There are also those promoting an orangutan as a better, more intelligent choice, he said.

There is a one-in-1,000 chance that the $1 billion will be awarded, according to WB and Pepsi. The winner could choose either a 40-year annuity or a lump-sum payment representing the annuity's present value.

Pepsi has taken out an insurance policy.

WB and Pepsi had previously announced plans for a variety show that would blend advertising into the program in place of commercial breaks. Plans for such a show are now on hold, a Pepsi spokesman said Thursday.

Guard leaves Iowa women's team

Iowa women's basketball player April Calhoun left the team April 11, citing personal reasons including being closer to her family.

The 5-8 guard started every game for the Hawkeyes in the last year during their 18-5 campaign which ended in the quarterfinals of the WNIT tournament.

Calhoun averaged 6.5 points and 3.9 rebounds and led the team with assists.

Iowa coach Lisa Bluder said the point guard would be hard to replace.

"April was a valuable member of our team, and we'll miss her talents on the floor," Bluder said in a statement. "We wish her nothing but the best in the future."

Forward commits to Iowa program

Alex Thompson, a 6-8 junior wing forward from Ames High School, has made an oral commitment to Iowa for the 2004-05 season.

Thompson, a two-year starter, was the leading scorer and rebounder for Ames this season.

He was selected to participate in the NBA Developmental Top 100 Camp in Richmond in June and the Nike All-American Invitational Camp in July.

"The opportunity to compete in the Big Ten is very exciting and I look forward to the challenge of NCAA Division I Basketball," he said. "I made this decision early, so I can focus on academics and my senior basketball season at Ames High."

Thompson selected Iowa after being recruited by Iowa, Kansas, Wisconsin, Kansas State, and Nebraska.

Ferentz suspends lineman accused in assault

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Offensive lineman Sam Aiello has been indefinitely suspended from the Iowa football team by coach Kirk Ferentz for "conduct detrimental to the team."

The suspension came April 11, the same day Aiello was charged with assault causing injury stemming from his involvement in an April 5 incident at the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St., in which he allegedly used a pool cue to attack another patron.

Ferentz

"Obviously, I was not pleased to learn this week of Sam's involvement in an incident this past weekend," Ferentz said in a statement. "Based on the information I currently have, I feel an immediate suspension is merited."

According to police reports, two men were playing a game of pool at the Sports Column when one left to use the restroom. When he returned to finish, the report shows, Aiello allegedly grabbed the man's cue, preventing further play.

Shoving ensued between Aiello, the man, and the other player before the football player shoved the man against a wall, "then jabbed the victim in the eye with the pool cue causing injury," the report shows.

A spokesman for the Iowa City police, Sgt. Brian Krei, said the man's immediate concern at the time of the attack was seeking medical attention and that charges were filed at a later date.

Calls to Aiello's residence went unreturned this weekend. He made an initial appearance on charges in District Court on April 11 and was released on his own recognizance.

Aiello was ordered not to have any contact with the alleged victim, a stranger at the time of the attack.

The incident marked the third time in the span of a week a member of the Hawkeye football team made his way into the police blotter. Just hours before the alleged assault by Aiello, teammate Chris Smith was charged with disorderly conduct after an altercation at another downtown establishment.

Defensive end Matt Roth was charged with public intoxication and using a false form of identification on April 4.

"Earlier this week, I requested that our team be judged on this year's accomplishments and conduct," Ferentz said in his statement on Aiello. "Up

Gymnast crowned individual national champion

 THE DAILY IOWAN

For one day, Linas Gaveika was king.

Gaveika capped off the No. 6 Iowa gymnastics team's weekend at the NCAA championships in Philadelphia by being crowned national champion in horizontal-bar competition.

His score of 9.7125 bettered all competitors on April 12 in the individual-event championships in the Liacouras Center, leaving the sophomore transfer from Vilnius, Lithuania, virtually speechless afterward.

"I'm super excited; I don't know what to say right now," he said. "I'm very happy it went that way. I didn't expect to win. I thought I had a chance, but I thought I'd finish in the top three, maybe."

Coach Tom Dunn said the feat is a rather rare accomplishment in Iowa history. "We were real pleased," he said. "We haven't had many national champs in the last 20 years. It really put a nice finish on the weekend."

Michael Reavis, the only other Hawkeye to compete in the April 12 individual-event finals, finished seventh on high-bar with a score of 9.025. The freshman's performance over the weekend was good enough to earn him All-American accolades in the event.

As a team, the Hawkeyes brought a very precise game plan into the weekend. They planned to simply garner a third-place finish in the April 11 qualifier, allowing them to move on to the next day.

Iowa's plan worked to perfection. The team finished second in the team event, behind UCLA, and earned a long-awaited bid to national competition in Lincoln, Neb., on April 24-26.

Women NCAA bound for first year

 THE DAILY IOWAN

Although Iowa coach Mike Lorenzen had trouble believing it at first, the dream came true for the Iowa women's gymnastics team, as the No. 13 Hawkeyes qualified for the NCAA championships for the first time in school history.

Iowa edged Oregon State by 0.025 in the South Central Regional, finishing in second place behind UCLA and earning a long-awaited bid to national competition in Lincoln, Neb., on April 24-26.

"It was more than we could have ever hoped or expected out of them," Lorenzen said. "They competed as tough as I've ever seen any team compete."

Despite being hampered by injuries the week before regional competition — a period Lorenzen labeled "the worst injury week of the season" — the Hawkeyes managed to overcome their troubles.

Sophomore Michelle Conway, a transfer from UCLA, replaced freshman Tiffany Kwan in two events and played a major role in Iowa's success.

Lorenzen said Conway was nervous going into the competition because she was going to compete in front of her former school for the first time, but that she overcame that.

"From the moment she came out on the floor, she looked like she was on a mission," Lorenzen said. "She showed what an inspiring competitor she is."

Freshman Bergenaseals upset victory for Hawkeye seniors

BY KATIE LOW
 THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa men's tennis team sent its seniors out in style with a 4-3 upset of No. 37 Indiana on April 12.

"This is probably our best win of the season," coach Steve Houghton said. "This was a nice way for our seniors to go out in their final home match."

The Hawkeyes started the match with momentum, securing the doubles point with wins at Nos. 1 and 3. Seniors Stuart Waters and Hunter Skogman easily defeated their opponents at No. 1. The victory gave Waters his 42nd-career doubles win in dual meet competition, moving him ahead of Tyler

Cleveland to rank No. 10 in school history for dual-meet doubles wins. Waters is the only player in the top 10 to compete in every doubles match at No. 1.

At No. 3, senior Pete Rose and freshman Chaitu Malempati held out for a narrow win over Indiana's Jakub Prabis and Petr Novotny (9-8 [1]).

In singles, Iowa grabbed three of the six matches to notch the win. Skogman endured a three-setter to declare victory at No. 2. Rose dropped his first set at No. 2 but came back strong to take the match. But freshman Johan Bergenaseals the win, pulling out a three-setter over Indiana's Zach Held.

"Even though it came down to me, it's still a team win," Bergenaseals said. "I was just glad to be able to help."

He said communicating in a team meeting this week helped the Hawkeyes come out strong.

"I think people responded really well to that meeting," he said. "I think that the younger guys, me included, are starting to learn what it takes to win a match against a Big Ten opponent."

Bergenaseals said he thought it would be a good way to prepare for the next two matches against Ohio State and Penn State.

"I think we have a really good chance to be successful next weekend," he said. "I think we can win if everyone approaches the match the way he did this weekend."

O'Leary fly fuels Cubs' rally

CHICAGO — Corey Patterson hit an RBI single, and pinch-hitter Troy O'Leary had a sacrifice fly in an eighth inning rally to win, 4-3, on Sunday.
Down 3-2, Sammy Sosa led off the Cubs' eighth with a double. After Eric Karros was intentionally walked, Patterson singled to tie it at 3. Lenny Harris pinch-ran for Karros, Mark Bellhorn drew a walk to load the bases and O'Leary followed with a fly ball for the go-ahead run.

Chicago's Troy O'Leary follows his sacrifice fly to right that drove in Lenny Harris during the eighth inning as Pirates catcher Jason Kendall looks on. The sacrifice was the game-winning RBI as the Cubs won, 4-3.

Boston 2, Baltimore 0
BOSTON — Derek Lowe and Tim Lincecum combined on a six-hitter, and Nomar Garciaparra homered Sunday as the Red Sox rebounded from a disastrous home opener with a 2-0 victory over the Orioles.
A day after Pedro Martinez gave up 10 runs in the worst start of his career, Lowe (2-1) held Baltimore to two hits over the first six innings before running into trouble in the seventh. He escaped, thanks in part to an unassisted double play by first baseman Shea Hillenbrand.

Philadelphia 13, Cincinnati 1
CINCINNATI — The Phillies scored a team-record 13 runs in the fourth inning. Ricky Ledee's three-run homer capped Philadelphia's outburst, which fell just two runs short of the NL record.
The major-league mark is 17 runs, set by the Red Sox against Detroit in 1953.
The Phillies' 13 runs were aided by seven walks. Randy Wolf (2-0) allowed four hits, walked one, and struck out eight in six innings.

Minnesota 9, Toronto 3
TORONTO — Matthew LeCroy hit a three-run homer, and Michael Cuddyer had a solo shot as the Twins completed a three-game sweep.

Cristian Guzman went 3-4 and scored three times for the Twins, who had 24 runs in the series.

Chicago White Sox 3, Detroit 2
DETROIT — Bartolo Colon won for the first time with his new team. Colon (1-0) struck out a season-high nine in seven innings, allowing two runs on six hits and two walks.
A 20-game winner last year, Colon was acquired during the offseason.

Atlanta 7, Florida 1
MIAMI — Greg Maddux, off to the worst start in his career, earned his first win of the season.

Vinny Castilla homered and drove in five runs as the Braves stopped Florida's four-game winning streak.
Maddux (1-3) gave up one run and two hits in six innings.

Cleveland 6, Kansas City 1
CLEVELAND — The Royals lost for the first time this season, ending baseball's best start in 13 years.
Milton Bradley had four hits, including his second homer for Cleveland.
Ricardo Rodriguez (2-0), a rookie right-hander, allowed one run and eight hits in seven innings.

Arizona 9, Milwaukee 3
PHOENIX — Elmer Dessens

became the first Arizona starter to win this year, and rookie Robby Hammock drove in four runs with a homer and double.
Dessens (1-1) accomplished in his third start what Randy Johnson and Curt Schilling couldn't, allowing seven hits and two runs in 6 1/3 innings.

San Diego 6, Colorado 2
SAN DIEGO — Rondell White's two-run homer highlighted a four-run seventh inning. Mark Kotsay also drove in two runs for the Padres.
White's homer, his third, came on a 2-1 hanging curveball from reliever Doug Jones.

WEEKEND ROUNDUP

Women edge Indiana
The Iowa women's tennis team got a taste of victory as it edged out Indiana, 4-3, on April 12.
The Hawkeyes claimed victory in four of five singles competitions to narrowly defeat the Hoosiers.
At No. 1, senior Cassie Haas handily took out her opponent, and Jennifer Hodgman claimed a quick win at No. 6, easily defeating Indiana's Sophie Rychlik (6-1, 6-1).
The team's other senior, Steffi Hoch, was also victorious at No. 2. Hoch endured a three-setter before finally pulling it out (3-6, 6-4, 6-3).
At No. 4, Chelsea Glynn also went the distance, sealing the match (0-6, 7-6 (5), 7-6 (5)).
"I was most impressed by how hard the team fought back," Hawk coach Paul Wardlaw said. "We were down the whole day and ended up coming back to win it in the last 10 minutes of the match."
The Hawkeyes were once again unable to come up with the "elusive doubles point," as Wardlaw has referred to it.
Wardlaw said he thought his team would face two strong teams in the last weekend of the season.
"We've got two pretty comparable teams in Ohio State and Penn State," he said. "There is a good chance both will be 4-3 scores."

Softball secures road wins in last trip out
The Iowa softball team ended its final road trip of the season with a pair of shutout victories over Big Ten rival Ohio State on Sunday.
Iowa grabbed a 7-0 victory in the opener before taking the second game of the double-header, 3-0, to improve to 29-9 this season.
After lying dormant for nine innings, the Iowa offense exploded for all seven runs in the 10th. Helped greatly by four Buckeye errors, the Hawkeyes sent 12 batters to the plate in the decisive inning. An RBI double by Lisa Birocci and a two-run triple from Kristin Johnson highlighted the outburst.
Birocci (16-6) pitched all 10 innings for the Hawkeyes, holding the Buckeyes to just six hits.

Women net eight first-place finishes in loss
Coming into the Wichita State Invitational, Hawkeye coach James Grant was confident his team would perform well. Honors for first-place finishes went to the women in eight events, but the effort was not enough to beat a strong Nebraska.
Three of the winners also reserved themselves a spot at the NCAA regionals in May. Junior Shellene Williams dusted the field in the 400 meters in a time of 54.28 seconds. In the 400-meter hurdles, Sarah Steffen won with a mark of 1:00.36. Kamesha Marshall also qualified for regionals, winning the shot put with a toss of 47 feet, 7.25 inches. She also garnered first place in the discus.

On the men's side, the field events were strong. Chris Voller took home the award for his throw of 185-4 in the hammer competition. The sophomore was followed by teammates Adam Hamilton and Brad Daufeldt, who took second and third respectively. To date, all three have now qualified for regionals.

Baseball struggles
After watching his Hawkeye baseball squad surrender an early 7-run lead to enter extra-innings tied at 11 runs apiece with host Ohio State, Iowa coach Scott Broghamer had to wonder what else could possibly go wrong for his snakebit squad.
Ohio State second baseman Drew Anderson supplied Broghamer the answer in the form of a two-run walk-off homer in the bottom of the 10th inning to give the Buckeyes an 11-9 victory. The win polished off a four-game sweep for the Buckeyes; they won game one April 11, 4-1, and two games the next day, 6-1 and 9-5.
The Hawkeyes (9-17, 2-10) have now lost 11 of their last 13 ballgames.
Ohio State staff ace Scott Lewis handcuffed the Hawkeyes' hitters in game one of the series, as he recorded a school-record 20 strikeouts, in the 4-1 Iowa loss.
The Hawkeyes had a rough time on the mound in the April 12 twin bill, surrendering 15 runs in 14 innings. Ryan Mentkowski (1-4) and Chris Maliszewski (1-4) took the losses on the day.

The Sounds' John Barnes hit an RBI double in the ninth inning to tie the game at 6 all and sent the match into extra innings.

Augusta belongs to Weir

BY DOUG FERGUSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUGUSTA, Ga. — A Maple Leaf grows among the towering pines of Augusta National.

Mike Weir became the first Canadian to win the Masters, making two clutch pars to force a playoff with Len Mattiace, and winning on the first extra hole with a simple tap-in for bogey.

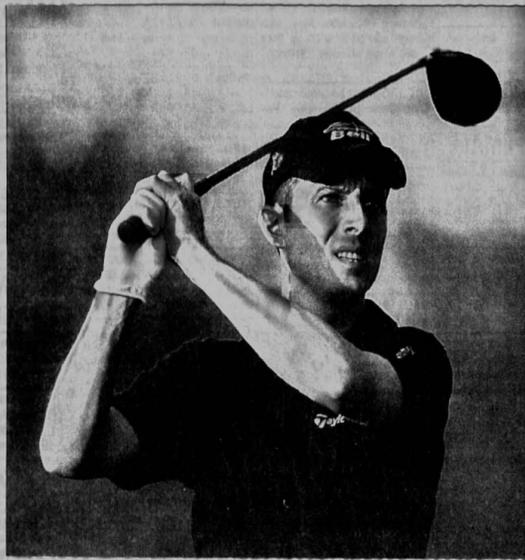

The green jacket Tiger Woods had hoped to slip on for a record third-straight year is going north of the border.

Weir, who only five years ago had to toil through PGA Tour qualifying school, closed with a bogey-free 68 on a dramatic Sunday at Augusta National, then let Mattiace make all the mistakes in the first Masters playoff in 13 years.

Weir had to sweat over a 5-foot par putt on the 17th and a 6-footer on the 18th, as Mattiace waited on the green among chairs already were set up for the green jacket ceremony.

Minutes later, Weir leaned over to tap in for his only bogey of the day becoming not only the first Canadian to win a major championship, but became the first left-hander to win a major since Bob Charles in the 1963 British Open.

Mattiace chipped in for birdie, holed a 60-foot putt on No. 10, and charged through the back nine on a mission to build a two-stroke lead. But Mattiace bogeyed the 18th, and he never had a chance in the playoff.

From the middle of the 10th fairway, he hooked his approach wildly to the left and then chipped some 30 feet by the hole. His par putt wound up with a double bogey.

Both finished at 7-under 281, the highest winning score at the Masters since 1989.

Weir won for the first time this year, and all six of his PGA Tour victories have been comebacks.

Until Sunday, the most nervous he felt was watching Canada win the gold medal in hockey at the Salt Lake City Olympics.

"This was definitely nerve-racking," Weir said. "I tried to gather myself on each putt. Every putt on this golf course is tough."

until last weekend, all of us involved were very proud of the way our team members had handled themselves, both on and off the field.

Ferentz added the area of "team conduct is my responsibility, and all of us are committed to making sure the incidents of last weekend are not repeated."

In the last year and a half, 14 members of the team have been cited for various offenses by local police.

Aiello, who entered spring practices listed as the team's starting right tackle, was involved in another high-profile off-field altercation in the summer of 2001, which involved a fight between him and then-roommate and Iowa quarterback Jon Beutjer.

No charges were filed in the incident, allegedly over $22 owed on a cable bill, which ended with Beutjer being knocked to the ground and sustaining a concussion.

Ferentz admitted publicly Aiello was the aggressor in the altercation, and he disciplined the lineman for it. Nonetheless, Beutjer left Iowa for Illinois, citing his displeasure with how the incident was handled by coaches as his main reason for leaving.

fection on day one, as they held off Stanford, Minnesota, and William & Mary. The Hawkeyes finished third in session one of the 12-team qualifier field, allowing them to advance to the April 12 NCAA championships with a score of 214.075.

Unfortunately for Iowa, the solid score didn't carry over into the next day, when the 12-team qualifying field was whittled in half to six teams.

The Hawkeyes finished sixth out of as many teams, trailing Big Ten conference foes Ohio State, Penn State, Michigan, and Illinois, as well as Oklahoma, which was crowned national champion for the second year in a row.

The Hawkeyes' best team performance of the weekend came on the high bar in the April 12 championships.

Iowa recorded a season-best score of 37.500 in the event, led by Gaveika, who won the event individually with a score of 9.675. Reavis finished a close second with a score of 9.625.

"The first day, we didn't have a great meet, but we were pleased to make it," Dunn said. "Unfortunately, in the team finals, we didn't do much better. We just didn't perform up to our potential in the team finals."

The meet wraps up a season in which the Hawkeyes finished 7-6 overall, 1-3 in the Big Ten. It was the 35th time in school history that the team had qualified for the NCAA team finals.

was the Hawkeyes' final and best event, Conway tied teammate Alexis Maday for fourth place with a 9.9.

Lorenzen said that going into the final event, he had no idea of where his team stood and did not know his team had qualified until assistant coach Larissa Libby's husband signaled from the crowd.

"I didn't want to believe it at that point," Lorenzen said. "I was afraid to believe it."

It wasn't until 20 minutes after the competition, when the scores had been recalculated for the last time, that the Hawkeye coach finally realized the truth.

The Hawkeyes, who finished with a score of 195.875, did not have their best meet of the season, but Lorenzen was content with the performance.

Despite being bothered by a knee injury, sophomore Annie Rue finished in seventh place in the all-around competition to lead the Hawkeyes.

"She's just done an outstanding job for us every meet," Lorenzen said. "She competed with a remarkable attitude for a sophomore. It was exactly the performance we needed."

IOWA MEN'S AND WOMEN'S BASKETBALL Hawkeyes honored at banquets

Senior Chauncey Leslie was named Iowa's Most Valuable Player for the 2002-03 basketball season at the team's annual awards banquet Sunday.

The Rochester, N.Y., native led the Hawkeyes in scoring with a 15.8 average. Leslie paced Iowa in scoring 16 times and reaching double figures in all but two contests.

Freshman Jeff Horner received the Chris Street Award, which is presented to the player who best exemplified the spirit, enthusiasm, and intensity of the late Iowa star.

Horner led Iowa with 140 assists and started all 31 games last season.

Junior Jared Reiner was recognized for having the highest grade point average on the team. Reiner earned academic All-Big Ten status for the second-consecutive season with a 3.27 GPA this season.

Josh Kimm was acknowledged as the Most Dedicated Student.

Iowa coach Steve Alford also presented awards for effort to Horner, Leslie, and Reiner.

The Hawkeyes finished the 2002-03 season 17-14 overall, 7-9 in the Big Ten, and advanced to the second round of the NIT.

Women led by Lillis

Junior forward Jennie Lillis was named the team's defensive player of the year and was given the Coaches' award at the Iowa women's basketball banquet on April 12.

Lillis was also honored for being named WBCA Region 6 All-America honorable mention. The Urbandale native was the only Big Ten athlete to be ranked in the top ten in scoring, rebounding, steals and blocks.

Senior Tracy Schrupp was named most improved player. Lillis, Kristi Faulkner, Jamie Cavey, and April Calhoun were honored for leading the team in statistical categories this season.

Jenna Armstrong, Cavey, Calhoun, Lillis, Becca McCann, and Faulkner earned academic all-Big Ten recognition for the year.

horoscopes

ARIES (March 21-April 19): It's time to make a career change, so get out to all the interviews you can set up. Relationships will open up if you have a heart-to-heart talk.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make personal changes. Get involved in activities that will jump-start your body. You will see — and like — the results.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): This is not the day to start something new or confront a situation that has been bothering you. Instead, get caught up and finish projects that have been hanging over your head. Work by yourself today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Spend some time with friends or relatives who offer you encouragement. Open up, and let your thoughts be known. There will be a better connection to those you care about.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It's time to turn your financial situation around. Talk to friends who may have similar interests, and see if you can collaborate to benefit everyone involved.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You will find it difficult to control your emotions today. Not everyone is on the same schedule as you these days. You will have to allow others space to do as they please.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone may not be as loyal as you think. Do something that will improve your living quarters. The changes you make will help to raise your spirits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Money and love may get you into trouble if you think you have to impress someone by spending a lot. Get out and meet some interesting people who will take your mind off a non-productive pursuit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You should try to be inconspicuous today. Trouble is brewing on the home front, and you don't want to be the brunt of anyone's discontent.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be well-prepared today. Business trips will pay off. Don't hesitate to pick up and move if it means a promotion.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): This is a great day to make some financial changes. Follow your innovative ideas. Keep a close tab on your health.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): This could turn into a touch-and-go sort of day, especially where any kind of partnership is concerned. You'll have trouble convincing others to go along with your plans.
