U.S. troops fire on protesters; 13 killed

BY RAJIV CHANDRASEKARAN
WASHINGTON POST

FALLUJAH, Iraq — U.S. forces stationed at an elementary school opened fire on an angry mob protesting the American presence here after several demonstrators began shooting at soldiers guarding the building, U.S. officials said Tuesday.

Local officials said 13 Iraqis were killed and as many as 75 wounded in the shooting Monday night, making it the bloodiest clash between civilians and U.S. forces in postwar Iraq.

Two injured demonstrators and three men who live across the street and viewed the confrontation said the participants were unarmed and were complaining only about the U.S. occupation of the school. But three other witnesses said several of the protesters were shouting slogans in support of former President Saddam Hussein and firing assault rifles into the air in defiance of U.S. orders.

Although details remained murky — accounts of the Iraqi witnesses differed sharply from those of U.S. soldiers in the school — what was clear was that the shooting further poisoned already tense relations between U.S. troops and residents of this city on the Euphrates River, 35 miles west of Baghdad, that had long been a stronghold for Saddam and his Baath Party.

As several coffins were carried toward cemeteries Tuesday, thousands of enraged people took to the streets to shout slogans denouncing the United States. Hundreds of others gathered outside the school to scream at the soldiers from the 82nd Airborne Division. Many stopped to gaze at lingering reminders of what was, by everyone's account, a fierce volley of gunfire outside the two-story Leader's School on Hay Nazzal Street: bullet-pocked walls, pools of congealed blood on the sidewalk, confiscated AK-47 assault rifles, a bullet-

Blood stains the ground Tuesday at the site of a Monday night shooting incident in Fallujah, Iraq. U.S. soldiers opened fire on Iraqi protesters, killing at least 13 people and wounding 75.

UI cyber-docs aid U.S. troops

BY PHIL DAVIDSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

A computerized medical-reference system operated by UI researchers has played a valuable role in helping U.S. troops stay safe during the war in Iraq, officials say.

The Virtual Naval Hospital has provided U.S. forces critical information for operating in desert conditions, data on biological and chemical weapons, and counseling for post-traumatic stress disorder, which can be harrowing for many soldiers, said Michael D'Alessandro, the hospital's clinical co-director.

"Those in combat situations see the most gruesome sights and experiences that a human can be exposed to," said D'Alessandro, who also serves as architect and digital librarian-in-chief. "How do you cope with that?"

In March, the hospital's Web site was used by more than 75,000 military personnel. Because Internet access is not available to all Marines and sailors in Iraq, D'Alessandro, a UI associate radiology professor, said the virtual hospital downloaded the content onto a CD-ROM and distributed 10,000 copies to forces in Iraq.

The hospital, designed to deliver medical information to providers as they care for patients, is most often used by medical personnel with the Navy and the U.S. Coast Guard, as well as by physicians in the Canadian, British, and Greek navies.

"The [virtual hospital] serves as a reference for health-care providers in many settings, to include operational, battlefield, peacekeeping, and humanitarian missions," said Capt. Jan Chandler, who oversees the hospital as the Head of the Naval Telemedicine Business Office in Bethesda, Md.

The site recorded 8 million hits, with 4 million pages read, last year.

That is up from 5 million hits and 3 million pages read the previous year. The Navy recently renewed the contract with the UI until 2008.

"The [virtual hospital] is considered a valuable medical reference for our operational forces, including patients and providers," Chandler said. "It serves as a compact, portable source of medical and administrative information, including links to other helpful resources."

Prior to the deployment of naval personnel in Afghanistan last year, the program warned them about health risks. The virtual hospital educated troops about overexposure to the Afghan sun and skin cancer, regional malaria strains, and how to maintain nutritional levels in the mountains.

The project, developed in the UI medical school in 1997, was initially funded by the U.S. Navy Space and Naval Warfare Systems Command. It is now sponsored by the Navy Bureau of Medicine and Surgery. Information on the University officials' lips are sealed about it.

Local restaurateurs are salivating like dogs on Thanksgiving Day. And if all goes as planned, UI students may be forgoing monotonous cafeteria lines for the dark mahogany booths, thumping bass, and art of local eateries.

"I can't comment at this time," said Greg Black, the director of UI Food Services. "We'll see what they have to say when they get here."

The "they" threatens to reinvent how students eat — or at least where — on college campuses across the Midwest, and the gastric cross hairs are trained on the UI.

A Virginia company is hoping to offer a service this fall that would allow UI students to charge meals from local businesses to a card worth a predetermined amount of money.

"We're in the business of creating a product students enjoy," said Brandon Lloyd, the vice president of public and investor relations of Off Campus Access Inc.

Black was initially suspicious, saying he's heard that similar programs at universities turned out to be a "hoax" and "fraud." But later, he wouldn't speculate, having not seen or heard anything about the Virginia company.

Under the program founded in 2000 by recent college graduates, students or their parents would allocate a given amount of money to an account at the beginning of the semester to purchase food at local restaurants

UI board limits bowl junkets

BY DONOVAN HANNAH
THE DAILY IOWAN

The UI Board in Control of Athletics is enforcing a self-imposed ban on all superfluous travel to postseason football games after a committee questioned the policy that gave the board a free trip to the Orange Bowl.

A dozen members of the group that governs UI athletics accepted free tickets to the Jan. 2 football game in Miami, with all but one bringing a spouse or friend on the trip — which cost the university approximately $2,000 per person, around $46,000 for the entire group. The board voted 9-7 on April 24 to allow only its chairman, currently education Professor Nicholas Colangelo, or a designate to travel on the UI's dollar.

Colangelo informed the Faculty Senate at a meeting Tuesday afternoon about the Athletics Board's vote.

The move came after an ad-hoc committee led by board member James Tomkovicz, a UI law professor, recommended the policy change.

Tomkovicz has said he sees no connection between serving on the board and attending the bowl game and does not understand how board members would better represent the UI than other faculty members who do not receive the benefits. He refused the trip to the Orange Bowl.

2-hour phone fritz hits UI system

Phone service to much of the UI campus mysteriously malfunctioned on Monday, with callers unable to dial numbers either inside or outside the university for at least two hours.

From about 5 to 7 p.m., callers received busy signals when they tried to dial 9 to reach outside lines. They also began noticing the same result when they tried to dial numbers in the residence halls.

Even the UI's last switchboard operator of the evening said he could not call an outside number to reach a technician to help. A flood of calls complaining about the phone service started just as the operator's shift ended at 6 p.m.

He estimated that at least 50 percent of campus phones, if not more, were affected.

UI police officials said they knew less than the reporter who called, and they were unaware that the operator had left for the evening.

Teach-in covers shifting sands of war

BY JEFF PATCH AND PAULA MAVROUDIS
THE DAILY IOWAN

Participants sat in the drizzling rain discussing the current status of the antiwar movement at the UI's second teach-in Tuesday, while others donated blood at the IMU in the name of peace.

A sparse crowd — approximately 10 — gathered at the Peace Camp on the Pentacrest to listen to Katy Hansen, the executive director of the Iowa United Nations Association, give a noon talk about the United Nations' lack of involvement in rebuilding Iraq.

"The only way the United States is going to get worldwide legitimacy in Iraq is to bring in the United Nations, but they won't do it," she said.

The 45-minute discussion, cut short by mild rain and peppered with polite disagreement from listeners, called for grass-roots involvement and bashed both Democrats and Republicans.

Participants ventured inside the IMU to continue discussions with UI faculty, staff, and students on topics ranging from national security to media coverage of the war to the future of the Middle East.

"The [Bush] administration is very dumb and bound to lead toward more terrorism," said panelist Maureen McCue, a UI adjunct assistant professor in international programs.

Most of the speakers condemned the Bush administration and various government agencies as acting against the interests of the average American.

John Barry of the National Lawyers Guild jokingly compared the Bush administration with the recently toppled Iraqi regime: "I'm making my own 52-card deck at home with [Richard] Perle, [Paul] Wolfowitz, and [Donald] Rumsfeld."

UI geography Professor Rex Honey told a group of approximately 20 that the United States should not be able to influence or decide things such as the number of states in Iraq or Iraqi media control.

"Why is it important for us to maintain Iraq?" he said. "If we set up control there, we will be taking away control from their people, as well as the control of their resources."

The "Hemobile," a custom RV from the Mississippi Valley Regional Blood Center, sat in the parking lot of the IMU and collected blood from approximately 40 people.

John Richard/The Daily Iowan
Lise VanderVoort of COGS lectures at a teach-in held in the IMU on Tuesday afternoon, one of many speakers throughout the day.

The organization supplies blood to 36 hospitals in 31 counties throughout Iowa and Illinois, said Tracy Buker, a donor-resource consultant for the Iowa City area.

"I try to do what I can," said Iowa City City Councilor Irvin Pfab, who waited for more than an hour to donate blood. "It's the right thing to do. You don't have to make a lot of noise."

Pfab, 70, sat in on a lecture in the IMU criticizing media coverage of the war in Iraq. The media environment today, he said, reminds him of past wars, in which propaganda was used by the U.S. government and media.

"We are lied to," said the Korean war veteran. "The propaganda machine is so vicious."

Teach-in organizers said the event was intended to reintroduce the "war issue" and keep students informed.

Public library debuts new wing

BY JESSICA REESE
THE DAILY IOWAN

With renovations more than halfway complete and eight weeks ahead of schedule, the Iowa City Public Library will re-open today after closing for two weeks to relocate all materials into its new west wing.

Describing the transfer as stressful but successful, library Director Susan Craig said the most exciting part of the $18.4 million expansion and renovation project remains ahead.

"We're still in the middle," she said. "The bigger portion of the new library is now being constructed in the old space."

Two professional moving companies transferred approximately 200,000 library materials, along with furniture and shelving, into the addition between April 16 and Tuesday. With a new entrance near the Pedestrian Mall fountain, the wing will serve as temporary library quarters as renovations begin on the old library building, 123 S. Linn St.

Craig said returns have been steady at three satellite locations during the past two weeks, easing the stress of reshelving thousands of books, CDs, and videos that had been checked out prior to the library's closing.

"At one time, we had tens of thousands of materials due on April 30," she said. "Now we're down to about 20,000 — but that's still a huge number."

An average day usually brings in 2,000 to 3,000 returns.

Craig anticipates a lot of traffic when the library re-opens today at 10 a.m.

"If people need a new movie to watch or a new fiction book, it's a great time to come because people haven't been checking out materials," she said. "The shelves will be filled."

Volunteers at The Book End, a used-book store, 113 S. Linn St., which is affiliated with the library, said its traffic has increased considerably during the library's hiatus.

"We've definitely seen more people coming in," said volunteer Judy Hendershot. "They have been delighted we're open."

The library project, approved by voters in 2000, will double the facility's square footage from 47,000 to 81,276, including 11,663 of retail space available for lease. Under the direction of Knutson Construction, the project began in January 2002; it is expected to be completed in June 2004. The library will close for another two weeks then for final renovations before its grand opening.

In the meantime, the first floor will contain the circulation desk, children's collection, and a desk devoted to adult collections of fiction, music, and movies. Nonfiction, reference, and public Internet access will be located on the second floor. The basement, which will ultimately be converted into retail space, will house staff and public-meeting rooms.

Iowa City resident Fred Mertz, who stopped by the Linn Street book-drop Tuesday afternoon to return a few videos a day early, said he's looking forward to having the library open again.

"I'll be really glad when it's back," he said. "It's a great library."

Construction on the new wing forced a popular playground located on the Ped Mall to close. It will reopen on May 10, slightly west of its previous location.

Local teen charged with school arson

A 15-year-old student was charged Tuesday with first-degree arson stemming from three separate incidents at Iowa City City High School.

Iowa City police officers transported the City High student to the Linn County Detention Facility after he allegedly admitted to intentionally starting three fires in male student restrooms while school was in session.

Iowa City police Sgt. Brian Krei said contents of wastebaskets in three separate restrooms were set on fire on April 3, 15, and 18.

Two other similar instances at the school remain under investigation, police records show.

There was minimal damage, Krei said, adding that it was most likely contained to the canisters themselves.

An investigation into the incidents led to the boy's arrest. Two other fires, which occurred on April 15 and 22, were also caused by contents of garbage cans being ignited, Krei said.

First-degree arson is a Class B felony, punishable by 25 years in prison, but Krei said he doubts whether the penalty will be implemented.

"It probably won't be that severe, based on his age," he said. "It will probably be handled in the juvenile courts somehow."

The boy is expected to see a judge this morning.

Bank moves on home of county official

Wells Fargo Home Mortgages Inc. filed a foreclosure petition Monday against the Johnson County deputy auditor and his wife, who were charged with possession of cocaine and child endangerment in February.

John Deeth, 39, and Laura Deeth, 50, allegedly failed to pay a promissory note on their 714 Brookside Drive residence in the amount of $114,226.52, court records show.

The bank is seeking payment of the original loan, acquired by the Deeths in March 2001, plus interests and court costs associated with bringing the action.

The Deeths were arrested at separate locations on the night of Feb. 27 on charges of possession of a schedule II controlled substance and child endangerment.

Iowa City police arrested John Deeth at 418 Brown St. at 10 p.m., nearly two hours after Laura Deeth was taken into custody at the couple's home.

Police officers and the Department of Human Services began a joint investigation after Laura Deeth's 22-year-old daughter, Sara Poisel, told authorities that her mother and friend Michael Castor had been using marijuana, cocaine, and methamphetamine in the house.

Poisel also alleged that her mother was inadequately providing medication to her 13-year-old, adopted daughter, who suffers from a life-threatening illness.

Levitas: Beware the hate groups

BY CASEY WAGNER
THE DAILY IOWAN

In looking for a scapegoat for the 9/11 terrorist attacks, some groups of Americans pointed the finger at Abraham Lincoln, said author and radical-right expert Daniel Levitas.

These groups — mainly radical white supremacists — say the United States' 16th president ushered in the racial mixing and racial tolerance that prompted the attacks, which killed nearly 3,000 people, he said during a reading at Prairie Lights Tuesday night.

As far-right and radical as this idea may seem, Levitas said, it and other neo-Nazi and anti-Semitic beliefs are actually commonplace in a society that has misled itself into thinking such paradigms are a thing of the past.

"Things have changed since the segregation and separate-but-equal policies of the 1940s," he said. "But it is wrong to consider far-right groups and their ideas as a radical phenomenon."

Levitas, who served as the research director of for the rural advocacy group Prairie Fire Rural Action in Des Moines, was also promoting his book, The Terrorist Next Door, which talks about the history of the radical right in the rural Midwest.

The event was sponsored by Hillel as a part of the UI community's first 24-hour Yom Hashoah Holocaust Remembrance Day Vigil, which ended Tuesday evening.

Levitas said it is easy to ignore far-right groups, such as skinheads and the Ku Klux Klan, because they are so clearly defined as bad. The challenge, he asserted, is recognizing the same tendencies in ourselves.

A recent poll found that 17 percent of the adult population of the country — more than 35 supremacist groups are in full swing recruiting new members, he said, using the 9/11 attacks and economic problems to their advantage.

In the 1980s, rural groups in Iowa and Nebraska tried to recruit farmers by telling them the farm crisis that was crushing them was caused by Jewish bank owners, Levitas said. In the 1990s, these same groups used government acts, such as the Brady Bill gun-control measure, as the centerpiece for their beliefs that a new world order, led by Jews, would take over the world.

"You and I cannot imagine murdering millions of people," said Gerald Sorokin, the Hillel director. "But there are people out there who are fine with it."

Sorokin, who attended Tuesday's lecture, echoed Levitas' sentiments, saying that even though many Americans and Iowans think their communities are tolerant, minority groups are still in danger of domestic terrorism.

Education, they said, is the best solution to end racism and hatred toward minorities. Events such as Tuesday's book promotion and Holocaust vigil are only the beginning.

"While the numbers [of anti-Semitic groups] may not be massive, it stunts the progress of our country," Levitas said. "We, who believe otherwise, need to bring us closer and sooner to the idea that all men are created equal."

UI researchers use Ebola in cystic-fibrosis therapy

BY TODD DVORAK
ASSOCIATED PRESS

UI researchers working on a gene therapy for cystic fibrosis have discovered an unlikely ally — the deadly Ebola virus.

Researchers have found that a protein taken from the virus can be used to help deliver genes into the lung's thin layer of airway cells more efficiently than other tested methods, Patrick Sinn, a post-doctoral pediatrics researcher at the UI Hospitals and Clinics, reported in today's edition of the Journal of Virology.

In patients with cystic fibrosis, the gene that regulates salt and water secretions is either absent or impaired. Those secretions are critical to keeping the lungs free of mucus, which can clog airways and trap bacteria that can cause infection.

The disorder afflicts approximately 30,000 people in the United States and a similar number in Europe. It is one of the most common fatal genetic disorders; treatment involves variety of antibiotics.

The goal of cystic fibrosis gene therapy centers on inserting functional versions of genes into airway cells of patients.

So far, tests using the Ebola protein have been performed on healthy human airway cells. Although research is in its early stages, researchers are cautiously optimistic about the results.

"We're still years from a true gene therapy for sure," said Sinn, the lead author of the paper. "There are a lot of goals we have to reach before it's tested on humans. But we have some encouraging preliminary results."

Ebola is one of the world's deadliest diseases, causing rapid death through massive blood loss in 50 to 90 percent of those infected, according to the World Health Organization.

The virus spreads through bodily fluids, but studies also show it can penetrate via the human body's respiratory system.

That trait is what led researchers to drop other respiratory viruses, such as influenza and measles, as a means for delivering genes and test a small portion of the Ebola virus.

"Most people understandably do not think of the Ebola virus in a favorable light," said Paul McCray, a UI pediatrics professor and lead investigator in the study. "But our approach takes a small part of this bad virus and puts it in a hybrid system to get some good out of it."

3-car crash injures 2

Ben Plank/The Daily Iowan

Iowa City police responded to a three-car accident at the intersection of Dubuque and Prentiss streets at 12:52 p.m. Tuesday.

Witnesses said they saw at least two accident victims being carried on stretchers from the scene by emergency-medical personnel.

Police have compiled a partial report but have not released the names of anyone involved nor possible injuries pending the ongoing investigation, said police Sgt. Mike Lord.

Police are not releasing the names of witnesses, either.

The driver was listed in the preliminary report as being charged with failure to obey a stop sign — a simple misdemeanor that usually carries a fine of less than $100. Lord said the intersection "doesn't stick out" as a dangerous one and said he does not think the area has a high accident rate.

Supervisors cool to jail proposals

BY CHOYON MANJREKAR
THE DAILY IOWAN

Some county officials were lukewarm Tuesday about the efforts of a task force charged with examining overcrowding at the Johnson County Jail, with some going as far as to say the group failed its job.

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors were formally presented Tuesday evening with seven recommendations to reduce the jail overcrowding. And although a majority of the supervisors supported the measures half-heartedly, some complained about their lack of direction.

"We were hoping for specific recommendations, but the results show that the county wants to see different things tried," said Supervisor Mike Lehman.

The Johnson County Jail Space and Services Task Force recommended implementing alternatives to incarceration, including day reporting centers, electronic-monitoring systems, and intensive pre-trial supervision, among other measures. The county paid a consulting firm $67,000 to coordinate the 26-member group, which deliberated for 11 months.

Supervisor Terrence Neuzil has been critical of the task force for excluding supervisors and for being indecisive.

"The role of this committee was to provide specific recommendations that are fiscally responsible and have the approval of the county attorney, judges, and Iowa law," he said before Tuesday's supervisors work session. "I do not believe it did that."

Those concerns mirror similar lamentations previously voiced by County Attorney J. Patrick White and Sheriff Robert Carpenter; both served on the task force but refused to support the recommendations, which also include better data collection, analysis, and reporting.

In addition, the task force advises supervisors to develop a long-term plan for a possible new jail, provide treatment for the mentally ill and substance abusers, coordinate a committee to evaluate the status of individuals in the justice system, raise public awareness, and ensure that the county's needs are heard by state policymakers.

Members of the task force who were present Tuesday said they felt the exercise was a success and effectively incorporated a diverse group of representatives.

Panel Chairman Richard Gibson defended the group's findings against accusations of ambiguity, saying the members reached a consensus through "an absence of any disagreement."

"If you mix 26 different people and lock them up for four hours, it is encouraging to see the consensus in the final report," said Arlinda McKeen, who coordinated the task force. "This isn't a group hug. There were problems."

The recommendations will be discussed at an upcoming supervisors' work session before implementation.

The county currently deals with its overcrowding problem by shipping inmates to Linn County, which costs the county approximately $1 million per year, Neuzil said.

The Johnson County Jail, 511 S. Capitol St., is often double-bunked. A proposed $20.3 million new jail was voted down by county residents in the fall of 2000.

riddled taxi, the discarded shoes of a boy who residents said was shot to death.

Lt. Col. Eric Nantz of the division's 325th Airborne Infantry

Regiment said his troops returned fire "to protect the lives of our soldiers."

But as word of the shooting spread through the streets, the clash was described as an abuse of American power and a massacre of unarmed civilians trying to exercise their new freedom to speak and protest — liberties denied them for the past 35 years. Whether that version was correct or not, the incident — the third reported fatal shooting involving U.S. troops and Iraqi protesters in the past two weeks — seemed likely to fuel anti-American sentiments here and elsewhere.

"The situation has become very grave," declared Sabah Arrawi, an educational psychologist who serves on Fallujah's newly created City Council. "When the Americans came here, we didn't object, but now we want them out."

with a card instead of cash.

The company's genesis, Lloyd said, was born from a distaste for meal plans that didn't cut the mustard.

"It's been received very well at the universities where it's run right now," he said of Off Campus' program.

Both students with and without board plans have taken advantage of the service at the University of Tennessee, University of South Carolina, and Towson University in Maryland, Lloyd said. Students living on campus tend to use the meal plan as a supplement to their residence-hall plan, and off-campus students use it as their only meal plan, he added.

An Off Campus representative loped into town sometime last fall, courting such restaurant owners as Leah Cohen, the owner of Bo James, 118 E. Washington St., telling them the company would handle all the billing and send checks to participating restaurants every two weeks. The Virginia firm would only take a 10 percent bite of earnings, the representative said. Cohen signed on.

"It's been done at a few campuses, and it's been very successful, so I thought I'd give it a try," she said.

Thirteen local eateries took the hook as well, hoping to lure palate-bored students from the cafeteria.

It's a risk-free endeavor for restaurant owners, said Mike

Porter, who owns One-Eyed Jakes and the Summit and is also in on the deal.

All students living in the residence halls, with the exception of Mayflower and Parklawn, are required to have a board plan. Full board, 20 meals per week, costs $1,230 per semester. Partial meal plans are also available for a lesser charge, but all include $100 in Hawkeye Dollars per semester.

Towson University student Sarah Breitenbach said the program has become popular among students since it started in the fall of 2002.

"Overall, I wouldn't say there's been a positive or negative reaction to it," she said. "It hasn't taken a strong hold over our residence board plan yet."

Although Lloyd acknowledges that his company obviously competes with dining services at universities, Off Campus Access "works very closely with many aspects at the universities," including athletics departments and student government.

Off Campus' alternative plan would prove to be popular with students, predicted UI sophomore Liz Hatfield as she dined on Pizza Hut pizza at the IMU Tuesday night.

"I think everyone would go for that, huge," she said.

The same dormitory food "gets old" after a while, Hatfield, who lives in a sorority house, lamented, adding that her parents would probably be willing to contribute money to an Off Campus plan.

Other students, such as UI sophomore Sarah Davis, aren't so sure how mouth-watering such an option would be for students paying their own college expenses.

"I think people whose parents are already paying for their expenses would go for it," she said. "I'd rather spend my money on other things. If I wanted to budget money for that, I'd do it myself."

Board puts limit on free travel to bowls

BOARD

Keith Carter, an Athletics Board member who took his wife, Cheryl, to the Orange Bowl, said that although the vote was close, there were no negative reactions to the measure and that he supports using the money for other expenses.

"I'm against even the chairperson going to any bowl game for free," he said.

The contentious vote had some saying it was their obligation to attend such events to represent the university.

Mathematics Professor Dan Anderson said he voted to send the head of the board for free because of the lessons that could be learned by other members of the Athletics Board.

"Going to a bowl game is good representation for the university," said Anderson, who took his wife, Kathy, as a guest to January's game. "It is also a good learning experience for everyone."

Student member Justin Hattan said he favored sending all the board members to bowl games because they are ambassadors for the university.

"Representatives go to the games and bring back ideas from other universities," he said.

Hattan also said bowl-trip expenses are covered by outside sponsors.

Also during the Faculty Senate meeting Tuesday afternoon, a representative from the Task Force Undergraduate Arrest Rates, which will release its findings next month, said the panel members are not against a zero-tolerance law for student drug offenders, but they favored interdisciplinary referrals that would keep offenders from losing their federal funds.

John Whiston, the law school's legal-clinic supervisor, said Iowa is the only Big Ten university that does not have interdisciplinary referrals; it instead turns students who are caught with drugs over to the police.

"Students who have arrest records will have problems getting in professional schools," he said. "Getting arrested for a small amount of marijuana can impact your job and future."

Whiston said that some police officers provoke students.

"A lot of police officers are cowboys," he said. "There are real problems between students and the Iowa City police."

Ex-school president, family plead guilty to pot charges

BY MIKE WILSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Standing side by side with their lawyers, former Des Moines Area Community College President David England, his wife, and their daughter pleaded guilty to drug charges Tuesday.

England, 50, his wife Donna, 49, and their daughter Jessica, 23, pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana with intent to deliver and failure to affix an Iowa drug-tax stamp, charges that carry a maximum penalty of five years on each count and a fine of $7,500.

District Court Judge Douglas Staskal set sentencing for David and Donna England for June 19.

Jessica England waived a pre-sentence investigation and asked that she be sentenced Tuesday. Staskal granted her a deferred judgment, meaning the charges will be erased from her record if she successfully completes probation.

"I'm very sorry for the embarrassment on my family, and this won't happen again," Jessica England told Staskal.

She sniffed back tears as she hugged her parents.

Assistant Polk County Attorney Daniel Voogt said he would not resist deferred judgments for the Englands.

David England's lawyer, William Kutmus, said the Englands acknowledged that marijuana found in a freezer in their home was for personal use and that they shared it with one another.

None of the items commonly used by drug dealers, such as triple-beam scales or large amounts of cash were found in the Englands' home, Kutmus said.

"There was nothing remotely connected to the sale of marijuana," he said after Tuesday's hearing.

The Englands were arrested

Bill Neibergall, Des Moines Register/Associated Press

March 12 after a police search of their upscale home in nearby Johnston found 2.5 pounds of marijuana, which was stored in individual bags, including one stored in a freezer.

Kutmus said because the marijuana was stored in a freezer to preserve it, it shows the Englands weren't drug dealers.

"A dealer doesn't put marijuana in a freezer," Kutmus said.

David England, whose annual salary was $183,750, plus a $1,500 monthly housing allowance, was placed on administrative leave by the community college's board following his arrest; he later resigned.

An internal investigation conducted by the college found no connection between anyone at the college and the charges against England.

Staskal said the pre-sentence investigation will allow the court to determine the nature of a prior conviction England had in Texas, in 1971.

The Des Moines Register has reported that England was convicted of marijuana possession. School officials said they did a background check when they hired England in 2001 and didn't know about the conviction.

Before he came to Iowa, England has worked at North Lake Community College, a community college in Irving, Texas.

Michael Short, 19, a student at the Des Moines college, called England's arrest an "embarrassment to the school."

The college has already felt the backlash from the case as some alumni told the school shortly after the Englands' arrest that they would not contribute to the college's annual fund-raiser.

Kutmus said the Englands acknowledge their mistake but stand by their contention that the marijuana was solely for their own recreational use.

"David, from his standpoint — he's a product of the '60s — his marijuana use wasn't regular; he just used it to relax," Kutmus said.

Group: State tax plan flawed

BY MIKE GLOVER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — A series of proposals to boost the cigarette tax would end up shifting the tax burden to low- and middle-income Iowans, according to a new study by a liberal think tank.

Instead, the report by the Iowa Policy Project called for lawmakers to use any money generated by a cigarette tax hike to bolster income-tax credits that aid the working poor.

"People are rewarded for working," said Mike Crawford, a spokesman for the group. "It can make a big difference in terms of making ends meet."

The group released its latest study at a Statehouse news conference as lawmakers struggled to craft a series of compromises to end this year's session.

Included in that are a series of proposals that feature increases in the state's cigarette tax. One would boost the state's cigarette tax by 36 cents a pack and use that money to lower retirement taxes and pay for a giant economic-development fund Gov. Tom Vilsack has proposed.

A second would increase cigarette taxes to help finance a revision of the income-tax system that would sharply lower rates and cut income taxes by $310 million.

The study issued Tuesday found fault with both.

"What the proposal does is raise a regressive tax to pay for regressive tax relief," said group spokesman Peter Fisher, a UI professor of urban and regional planning.

Using the money to reduce taxes on retirement income would primarily benefit the wealthy, because much retirement income already is exempt from taxes, he said.

The tax reduction that's been proposed would give a person with $30,000 in retirement income a $6 annual benefit, Fisher said.

"The top 19 percent of elderly income earners would receive 57 percent of the tax cut," he said.

The income-tax proposal is more complex. It would increase the cigarette tax, temporarily increase the sales tax, and stop the phaseout of the tax on utility bills. The plan also would eliminate most deductions — including the ability to deduct federal tax payments — and use that money to sharply lower tax rates. It cuts approximately $310 million in income taxes.

Fisher argued that all of the tax increases in that plan hit hardest at the poor, and most of the relief goes to the wealthy.

"We think serious consideration should be given to alternative forms of tax relief that would offset the regressivity of the cigarette-tax change instead of aggravating it," he said.

The study suggested a 75-cents per pack increase in cigarette taxes, which could be coupled with increasing personal-exemption credits by $25 and expanding the earned-income tax credits going to the working poor.

That would leave $44 million a year to pay for Vilsack's economic-development fund and would support a bond issue of $550 million, the group said.

Attention Graduating Students

Did you know that you can reduce the interest rate on your student loans and save thousands of dollars by consolidating your student loans after graduation?

The Higher Education Act, established by Congress, allows any graduate (or parent with PLUS loans) to consolidate their student loans by combining all their eligible student loans into a single loan issued by a new lender. Graduates who do this immediately after graduation (while they are still in their non-repayment period) are able to reduce the interest rate on all their eligible loans by 0.60% - potentially saving themselves thousands of dollars.

There are several other benefits associated with Student Loan Consolidation and these include:

- The ability to reduce your monthly interest repayments by up to 54% by extending your repayment period. This may help you in matching your income level to your repayment obligations.
- Fixing the interest rate on your loans to take advantage of the historically low interest rates that are currently available for the life of your loans. Your existing loans are variable and could rise over time as interest rates rise. Consolidation can ensure that this doesn't happen.
- Dealing with only one monthly loan repayment from one lender can make your life easier.
- Save even more on your repayments by taking advantage of 'borrower benefits' that can reduce your interest rate by up to an additional 1.25% by making electronic and on-time repayments.

Does it Matter When You Choose to Consolidate?

Yes. If you are about to graduate (or have recently graduated) timing is critical to maximizing the amount that you can save with consolidation. If you wait too long to apply for consolidation, you might miss out on the opportunity to reduce the interest rate on all your loans by 0.60%.

What Does it Cost to Consolidate?

There are no fees or credit checks, nor is there any penalty for early repayment of your consolidation loan. Note however, that you can only consolidate once and consolidation can affect certain deferment and cancellation benefits associated with loans.

Are you about to Graduate?

Act now by registering with the Student Loan Consolidation Program (SLCP). It is free and involves no obligation. SLCP will simply provide you with information on what consolidation is all about and contact you after graduation to remind you of the opportunity to reduce your interest rate by consolidating early.

For more information, call a loan counselor at 1-866-311-8076 or click on our ad at www.dailyiowan.com to see if you qualify for these savings.

State must look before it leaps into investment

The Iowa Legislature is expected to vote this week on a program that would establish a $350 million fund to bring businesses to Iowa and stimulate the state's economy. On the surface, the plan seems sound — except that the state has a poor track record in such matters. The Iowa Agricultural Finance Corp., created in 1998 to bring business to the state, failed miserably, throwing away $12 million of public money in the past two years, as reported by the Des Moines Register.

The organization had given Rudi's Bakery, a Colorado-based organic bread producer, $7.9 million in taxpayers' money by mid-2001, with the stipulation that the business establish a factory in Iowa. The venture was expected to create more than 100 jobs for Iowans. Rudi's made good on its promise, starting a factory in North Liberty — a factory that closed six months later. Currently, the bakery employs three Iowans, who work at the factory-turned-distribution center.

Another $4.2 million went to ProdiGene, a Texas biotech firm that was supposed to use Iowa corn extracts to produce pharmaceuticals. Two years later, ProdiGene has no involvement with the state. What went wrong?

Much of the blame lies with the finance corporation, which showed a remarkable lack of foresight when it initially gave the money away.

Rudi's was in financial trouble even before it came to Iowa, posting losses in 1997 and 1998. The company also had a history of bad management, according to a memo written by Gov. Tom Vilsack's executive assistant. To top it all off, Rudi's required hard, winter wheat, which isn't grown in Iowa.

For its part, ProdiGene ran into trouble with the federal government and had to destroy thousand of bushels of potentially tainted soy beans and corn. The finance corporation can hardly be blamed for that, but it can be blamed for not signing a written contract with ProdiGene requiring the company to grow corn in Iowa. Such a contract is about as standard a procedure as one can find in such deals.

So should Iowa taxpayers be alarmed that the state is going to earmark millions of dollars for the same sort of venture that crashed and burned so recently? Bringing businesses into Iowa is crucial for the state's economic survival. However, the eagerness to invest should be tempered by the memory of the finance corporation's debacle.

The Legislature must make absolutely sure that the causes of past failures have been completely plowed under before it attempts to sow a new crop using the taxpayers' seeds.

Greek system includes all — who can afford it

Alex Johnson's description of Zeta Tau Alpha's gala "soirée" amid the elegant, Renaissance Revival architecture of the renovated Abbey Train Station, designed by Charles S. Frost in 1901, was enchanting indeed (DI, April 16). However, if the purpose of his article was to persuade me that Greek life is more than the shallow, self-centered, materialistic philosophy it is portrayed as, he failed miserably.

He claims that Greeks (fraternity or sorority members, not Mediterranean natives) are unfairly characterized as being elitist. But by describing the opulence with which he lives, he does little to prove otherwise. For instance, when he asks the question, "Isn't it more appealing to live in an actual home setting with Sullivanesque terra-cotta detailing and Ionic columns?" he only displays his naivety. Of course it is more appealing. Living in such luxurious surroundings, however, is not simply an option that everyone can choose in life.

Many of the people who live in our world, for example, must use columns of scavenged wood, junk-metal, or cardboard to support the roofs of their homes. These people are also, sadly, without terra-cotta detailing to brighten their home setting. Or take for instance, my apartment building, with its plain, square, stucco columns of the kind that his article describes as the "lifeless, postmodern, and yucky architecture prevalent on most campuses today." Though it may not suit his sense of style, it is affordable, warm, dry, and the landlord regularly services the plumbing, so it is attractive to me. And while the dorms may be "retro" in his opinion, they are home to many people who cannot afford more extravagant dwellings.

So, while he is "dancing the night away" in his "mystical train station" where four-course dinners are served with wine, I hope he appreciates the fact that his "Greek life" is not one that many can afford or be accepted into and that may be why they are labeled as "elitists."

Not your grandfather's democracy anymore

James Eaves-Johnson really doesn't understand democracies, and so his views on individual liberties, militias, and taxes are so extreme that your readers are befuddled (DI, April 15). That is why so few letters are sent in response.

Eaves-Johnson's views were a little more relevant half a century ago, but not today. Our democracy has matured substantially over the last few decades. Different ethnicities enjoy greater participation in our society and government than was dreamed possible just four decades earlier. Eaves-Johnson praises the private citizen, but when that citizen exercises a fundamental right by entering government, Eaves-Johnson calls him or her a "thug." He would certainly call a federal agent at Ruby Ridge a "thug," but one of them was Asian American. Montgomery County (Va.) Police Chief Charles Moose of D.C.-sniper fame is black; is he a "thug"? Private Jessica Lynch, a 19-year-old from small-town USA, is a U.S. soldier; is she a "thug"? Eaves-Johnson is calling all of us "thugs."

Eaves-Johnson has us befuddled with his ideas of militias, mainly because his ideas come from 1770 rather than 2003. I for one am in passionate disagreement with the government over such issues as the death penalty and the war in Iraq, and I feel that the government's violence related to these issues endangers my welfare and the welfare of my family. But I know that a majority of my fellow citizens disagree with me, and that is why the government executes people and wages war. So, if I resort to violence and attack an employee of a correctional system or the military, that would be an irrational and criminal act. Yet Eaves-Johnson glorifies and encourages such violence. It is called domestic terrorism, and it has no place in a democracy.

So please stop insulting us, and stop trying to protect our rights. Please keep your militias away; we want our law enforcement to understand "due process" and to be answerable to someone.

How to use the music inside you before it's too late

Indecisiveness—whether toward selecting a major or a career—affects not only students but millions of people around the world. And studies show that the number of people who don't know, ideally, what they'd like to do with their lives keeps on growing. The average American now switches careers three to four times in her or his lifetime.

So, for what it's worth, here's a small sampling of the lessons I've learned that have helped me find focus in my life. And bear in mind, I'm no expert. Assess your values. Ask yourself these questions, and answer them honestly: What do I want? How will I know when I get it? And why do I want what I want?

For instance, you might think you have wanted to go to med school ever since you started watching "ER." But why? Is it because you like the image of being a doctor? Or your parents pressured you? It's also possible, of course, that you're meant to go into the field because you'd enjoy the day-to-day work, being around people who share your personality type, and the idea of healing others. Read biographies of people similar to you as well as your role models. Those ignorant of history will often repeat its mistakes.

So check out your family history. You'll surely find some similarities between yourself and your relatives.

And then check out such books as Gig, by John Bowe. It's a collection of personal essays from people in different kinds of industries. From reading about a day in the life of the UPS worker to the CEO — it's like shadowing dozens of different professions at your own pace.

Now, if only there were a Web site with a database in which you could type your biographical information and it would pair you with people who share a lot of similarities with you — wouldn't that be something? Take an aptitude test. Most people don't know about their natural talents — qualities otherwise referred to as aptitudes. Hence, it's common to see people who don't choose their careers, their careers choose them. And that doesn't always make people happy.

Oliver Wendell Holmes once said, "Most of us go to our graves with our music still inside us." How tragic. But it doesn't have to be that way. Call the Johnson O'Connor

ALEX JOHNSON

Aptitude Research Center in Chicago at (312) 787-9141 and ask for some information. I took its test a few years ago after taking more than 40 different personality and career-assessment tests. But this was by far the best, not only for the detail in its description of my personality and ideal career choices, but also for the methodology behind the test design. Take a look at the real world. Go around, and ask UI students if they can name the top 10 employers for Iowa; most probably can't. And I'm willing to bet that a few won't even be able to name 10 companies that they've thought about working for — they're the same students who aren't sure what they want to do after college.

Which, of course, raises the question: How can people know what they want if they don't know what the options are? So when you get a chance, just get on the Web and start exploring different companies and organizations. Then make it interesting.

Start e-mailing them. Ask intelligent questions. Start to develop relationships if you can. Even get business cards made and a personal Web site with a portfolio of your work up there. You'll be ahead of the game, and, trust me, opportunities will unfold.

You'll know when the right one hits you. Once I knew a student who did this; before she knew it, she had a small consulting firm offering to help pay her tuition, hire her after graduation, and advise her on what classes she needed to take in order to succeed in the firm. Simplify your life. Until you find a path, simplify your life as much as possible. Live in a small area so that you don't accumulate clutter. Lower your expenses so that you never have to worry about the stress of not having enough money getting in the way of helping you focus on the important things in life, such as personal development. Also, stay away from people who like melodrama or self-imposed confusion. You get the idea.

But more importantly, what do you think? Why is it that some people know that they want to do with their lives and others don't? It's a timeless question that's always worthwhile to discuss.

New Palestinian PM condemns violence

BY JOHN WARD
WASHINGTON POST

RAMALLAH, West Bank — Mahmoud Abbas was approved on Tuesday as the Palestinians' first prime minister, and in a speech to Parliament, he renounced terrorism and vowed to "relentlessly address" the possession of illegal weapons by Palestinian militants. But he warned Israel it must abandon Jewish settlements and end occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip to achieve lasting peace.

Abbas, popularly known as Abu Mazen, and his new Cabinet won a comfortable 51-18 vote of confidence from the Palestinian Parliament after a lively, four-hour debate. He is scheduled to be sworn-in today. The approval clears the way for the release of a new peace initiative, known as the road map, sponsored by the United States, Russia, European Union, and United Nations. President Bush has promised to publish it as soon as Abbas and his Cabinet take office.

"As we extend our hand to you in peace, we reiterate that peace cannot be possible with the continuation of settlement activity," Abbas said in comments directed at Israel during a speech to the Palestinian Legislative Council that was observed by hundreds of foreign diplomats and journalists. "The choice is yours: peace without settlements or a continuation of the occupation, subjugation, hatred, and conflict."

Abbas, 68, who has criticized the 31-month long Palestinian uprising for using violence to resist Israel's occupation, said he hopes to reopen a dialogue with Israeli leaders, who, like Bush, have refused to hold direct talks with Palestinian President Yasser Arafat, contending that he has poisoned the atmosphere for peace by supporting terrorism.

"The path of negotiations is our choice," Abbas said. "We denounce terrorism by any party and in all its shapes and forms, both because of our religious and moral traditions and because we are convinced that such methods do not lend support to a just cause like ours, but rather destroy it. There is no military solution to our conflict."

The long-awaited arrival of a new Palestinian government came on a day marked by violence. Israel launched two strikes against Palestinian militants in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, killing four people. An Israeli Apache helicopter gunship fired four missiles at a car outside the southern Gaza town of Khan Yunis early today, killing Nidal Salameh, 36, a senior military leader in the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. A passenger in the car also was killed, and three people were injured, local hospital officials said.

Two militants from the Al Aqsa Martyrs Brigades, a radical group affiliated with the Fatah political organization of Arafat and Abbas, were killed in a shootout with Israeli soldiers early today in the small West Bank village of El Khadr, located just south of Jerusalem and west of Bethlehem.

Moving U.S. troops eases sore point for Saudi government

BY VERNON LOEB
WASHINGTON POST

PRINCE SULTAN AIR BASE, Saudi Arabia — Having removed the threat from Iraq, the U.S. military will end operations in Saudi Arabia later this year, freeing the kingdom of a major political problem caused by the visible presence of U.S. forces in the land of Islam's two holiest shrines, U.S. Defense officials announced Tuesday.

Shutting down U.S. flights from Prince Sultan and moving the U.S. Combined Air Operations Center from here to nearby Qatar mark the beginning of what Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld has described as a major realignment of U.S. military forces, not only in the Persian Gulf but also in Europe and the Far East. Meeting this morning with service members here inside a giant aircraft hangar, Rumsfeld said he is attempting "to refashion and rebalance those arrangements so that we're organized for the future."

Marine Gen. James Jones, Rumsfeld's newly appointed NATO commander, is reviewing U.S. military installations in Germany with an eye toward moving at least some of them to new NATO members in Eastern Europe. "NATO is a different place now, and the center of gravity has in fact shifted from where it was when it was a relatively small organization of 15 countries to a much larger organization of some 26 countries," Rumsfeld told the troops here.

The Pentagon is also considering reductions in the 38,000 military personnel stationed in South Korea and moving those who remain away from the demilitarized zone with North Korea. And in Central Asia, Rumsfeld and Gen. Tommy Franks, the head of the U.S. Central Command, must decide what to do with bases in Uzbekistan, Kyrgyzstan, and Tajikistan that were opened in 2001 and 2002 to support the war in Afghanistan.

But the Persian Gulf seems to be the most immediate candidate for change.

A month ago, at the height of the Iraq war, 10,000 U.S. military personnel and 200 fighters, tankers and surveillance aircraft were based at Prince Sultan, a sprawling, 250-square-mile compound in the flat Saudi desert 70 miles southeast of Riyadh, the capital. Even before the war, U.S. war planes flew from here to patrol the no-fly zone over southern Iraq. Since 1992, the U.S. Air Force has flown 286,000 such sorties, straining budgets, aircraft, and personnel.

U.S. planes patrolling a second no-fly zone, this one over northern Iraq, were based at Incerlik Air Base in Turkey. The Air Force also plans to withdraw most of those planes, U.S. officials said, after basing them at Incerlik since 1991 to fly patrols designed to protect Iraq's Kurdish minority in a 17,000-square-mile autonomous zone in the northeastern corner of the country.

Bush tries to straddle 2 sides in AIDS debate

BY AMY GOLDSTEIN AND JULIET EILPERIN
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — As the House prepares to vote Thursday on a $15 billion plan to help alleviate AIDS in African nations, President Bush and House Republicans are trying to make the proposal more palatable to conservatives, who favor HIV-prevention strategies that rely mainly on sexual abstinence.

The White House, which proposed the ambitious initiative as part of its budget for next year, has made it clear that Bush will support the bill even if it permits the distribution of condoms, a staple of AIDS-prevention efforts in developing nations that some social conservatives believe condones promiscuity.

During an East Room ceremony Tuesday to champion the legislation, Bush straddled the approaches favored by longtime AIDS activists and by his conservative political base. And on Capitol Hill, GOP lawmakers are preparing to try to alter the legislation in two ways that administration officials said on Tuesday they would like: One change would explicitly say that abstinence and marital fidelity should be the main strategies to slow the spread of the devastating virus, while condoms could be given out as a last resort. The other change would give religious groups that were funded under the plan the right to refuse to use any AIDS-fighting strategy they consider objectionable.

The five-year plan, which would focus help mainly on 14 African countries that have been ravaged by the disease, is a major feature of Bush's "compassion" agenda for this year, and its inclusion in the budget has surprised and delighted public-health advocates who have long argued that the United States should make a large investment to curb the epidemic worldwide.

Nederlands II will present two dramatically different performances tonight and Thursday at Hancher.

The spirit of vibrant dance

BY SARA CONRAD
THE DAILY IOWAN

Nederlands Dans Theater II is a Dutch modern-ballet group that is anything but a traditional dance company. Tonight and Thursday evening at Hancher, the world-renowned dancers will showcase six numbers, including prize-winning choreographer Paul Lightfoot's Sad Case, a piece based on the intense emotional energy and hormonal changes experienced during pregnancy.

The troupe is one of three branches of the Nederlands Dans Theater, divided into groups according to age. Nederlands II focuses on younger members, containing a cast of 14 international dancers from Michigan to the Czech Republic between 17 and 21 years old; it is known for its youthful spirit and vibrancy. At a later age, these dancers usually graduate into the main dance group, Nederlands I.

Demonstrating the company's modern approach to dance, it also includes Nederlands III, a division that includes members over the age of 40 — past the traditional age for dancers.

The younger members of Nederlands II work with a staff of 12 choreographers, including Johan Inger, who was one of the troupe's most popular dancers for 12 years before leaping into choreography. Inger, who was born in Stockholm, joined the company in 1990 after performing as a soloist in the Royal Swedish Ballet. Tonight, he will present his 16-minute choreographed piece Dream Play, accompanied by the music of Stravinsky's Rite of Spring.

Also tonight, choreographer and artistic adviser Jiri Kylián, winner of two Nijinsky Awards for choreography, will present Sechs Tänze, a combination set to Mozart's Sechs Deutsche Tänze, which simultaneously celebrates the humor of Mozart's character and the socially tumultuous period in which he lived.

On Thursday night, Kylián will showcase Indigo Rose, a 22 minute-long combination set to five different pieces of music.

Hans van Manen, who joined the company in 1960 and for 10 years also served as its artistic director for, will put on a 17-minute piece this evening titled Simple Things. The piece is a pas de deux involving four dancers, the men and women engaging in duets, moving in and out of relationships.

Getting caught in a cultural drift

BY DIANA ROFFMAN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Sometimes what is happening in our own backyard doesn't seem possible, so we close our eyes to it. Terrorism, secret gangs, and power-hungry, jealousy-driven people can invade our land and our homes without even the blink of an eye.

Bharati Mukherjee, a distinguished professor of English at the University of California-Berkeley, wrote Desirable Daughters in an attempt to dramatize the effect that this blindness can have on an Indian family living in the United States.

Mukherjee, a graduate of the Writers' Workshop, has been a U.S. resident since 1980. Her 1998 collection of short stories, The Middle Man and Other Stories, won her the National Book Critics Circle Award — a first for a naturalized citizen. Desirable Daughters is her most recent work.

"I wanted to write a fictional novel about the very different choices my sisters and I made as we grew up," she told The Daily Iowan. "Two of us, like in the novel, moved to America, while one of my sisters stayed in India."

For Mukherjee, to stay in India, even from a very young age, meant to stick with the predictability, comfort, and safety that comes with a planned husband and a matronly role in life.

"For me it was an either/or kind of choice. I either had to stay in India or stay in the [United States], to take chances and risks," she said. "I chose to stay in the [United States] and let my wits settle my future."

In Desirable Daughters, the contrasts between Mukherjee's real life and the life of Tara, her fictional character, are almost nonexistent.

Tara is a woman caught between her old life in India and her new life in California. She and her son, Rabi, live together, while her ex-husband, considered to be "the Bill Gates of India," lives nearby. The novel follows Tara's family as a serial-killer gangster infiltrates her family life and threatens the safety of both her family in the United States and in India.

What weakens the story is the uneven mix of the plausible with the implausible. On one hand, Mukherjee places Tara in situations that can be shocking — a troublesome family secret that over-the-phone conversations will not clear up — and difficulties with Rabi, a boy dealing with his sexuality and his family's history.

But on the other hand, there are moments when this novel rides the fence between a thriller and a teen-romance. At one point in the novel, an indignant Tara declares, "I may be alone right now, this week, but these past three nights are the first time I've been without a man or the attention of many men, most of it unwanted, in seventeen years!"

And, while the idea of gangs, terrorism, and the shortsightedness of many American citizens may be fruitful, true, and useful for a novel, it is the moments when Mukherjee returns to the relationship between Tara and her two sisters that we see the beauty found in her writing.

Gallery, Kaeding honored in Playboy

Iowa offensive lineman Robert Gallery and placekicker Nate Kaeding were named to Playboy's preseason All-America football team on Tuesday.

The magazine also made Iowa's Kirk Ferentz its 2003 coach of the year.

Gallery earned first-team All-Big Ten honors last season. Kaeding won the Lou Groza Trophy last year as the nation's top placekicker.

Iowa has had 13 Playboy All-Americans. Kaeding and Gallery are the first since Jared DeVries in 1998.

Illinois chooses Weber from SIU

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Bruce Weber, who led Southern Illinois to NCAA tournament appearances the last two seasons, will be the next coach at Illinois, one of his players confirmed to a newspaper.

"I just got off the phone with him and he told me he's going to Illinois," Southern Illinois senior Jermaine Dearman told The Champaign News-Gazette on Tuesday night. "It's a good business move for him. I'd take it, too."

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, The Southern Illinoisan and Chicago radio stations WSCR-AM and WGN-AM also reported Weber had been hired to replace Bill Self and an announcement would be made Wednesday.

"He's a good coach and a good person, and up at Illinois he'll already have a built-in fan base," Dearman said.

CORRECTION

In Tuesday's Daily Iowan, it was reported that offensive lineman Ben Sobieski joined the Hawkeyes as a walk-on. In fact, Derek Pagel, not Sobieski, was the third Hawkeye walk-on drafted over the weekend. The Daily Iowan regrets the error.

Iowa State players back Eustachy after scandal

BY CHUCK SCHOFFNER
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

Eustachy

DES MOINES — Iowa State's basketball players went to the university's president and athletics director Tuesday, urging them to keep embattled coach Larry Eustachy.

They also said Eustachy apologized by telephone for any embarrassment he had caused them from the publication of photographs that show him partying with college students in Missouri and kissing young women on the cheek.

"I'm behind coach Eustachy

100 percent, as I know he would be for each and every one of us," forward Jackson Vroman said.

The photographs, printed in the Des Moines Register on Monday, have touched off a national buzz and prompted calls for Eustachy's dismissal or resignation.

Eustachy's behavior was a hot topic on radio talk shows, both locally and nationally. The Reg- ister said in an editorial that Eustachy "has to go." The father of Iowa State player Jake Sullivan agreed, but an ISU booster said Eustachy has indicated a willingness to change his behavior and should be given that chance.

Iowa State officials are considering disciplinary action against Eustachy, who is under contract through the 2010-11 season and is paid more than $1 million a year, but nothing has been decided.

Vroman said the players told university President Gregory Geoffroy and Athletics Director

Bruce Van De Velde that they supported Eustachy and wanted him to be their coach.

"Bruce Van De Velde told us he would do what is best for the university and the basketball program," said Vroman, who will be a senior next season. "We want them to do what's best for the basketball team, and that's to keep coach Eustachy."

Vroman and center Jared Homan, who will be a junior, said they would seriously consider leaving if Eustachy was not the coach.

"Basically, he's treated me like a son," said Homan, who was charged with public intoxication last month. "He always looked out for me and has been there when I needed him. I feel this time I need to be there for him."

Vroman said he thought the photos made Eustachy "look bad" but added, "I don't think it portrayed him as who he is at all."

Eustachy, 47, is holding a can of beer in the photos, taken at an apartment party in Columbia, Mo., in the early morning hours of Jan. 22, after Iowa

Pitcher perfect

Complete team effort seals 6-0 victory

BY TODD BROMMELKAMP
 THE DAILY IOWAN

In the step-by-step process of preparing for next week's Big Ten Tournament, the Iowa softball team continued waltzing in the right direction Tuesday.

Bolstered by 10 hits and solid defensive play the Hawkeyes handed Western Illinois a 6-0 setback on a rain-soaked Pearl Field.

The Hawkeyes improved to 38-12 with the victory. Starting pitcher Lisa Birocci moved her season mark to 23-7 in the three-hit shutout, going the distance and striking out nine West-erwind hitters.

"We've had a season-long goal," said Iowa coach Gayle Blevins. "Our group is very focused right now."

As usual, most of the offensive production was made possible by the top of the order, led by Katie Boney going 3-4 with three runs batting in the No. 2 spot. With Boney and leadoff hitter Kristin Johnson setting the table for success, the middle of the order made sure the place settings were cleared.

Lindsey Bashor, Jessica Bashor, and Birocci, who hit in the four through six spots, accounted for five RBIs with Lindsey Bashor and Birocci both bringing home a pair of teammates.

In short, it was a complete team effort.

"That's what it takes for our team," said Johnson, who was 1-for-3 with a run scored and a stolen base. "When everything comes together, that's when we're the best."

Good, bad, and ugly from NFL draft

Another NFL draft is in the bank, and some teams used the opportunity to build a nucleus of good, young players. However, like so many photos featuring Larry Eustachy and college women from a rival school, let's just say mistakes were made. The theme for this year's draft recap will be "The Good, the Bad, and the Ugly," because The Bridges of Madison County doesn't lend itself to draft metaphors.

THE GOOD:

Baltimore: The Ravens put together the best draft in the league, drafting über-studs Terrell Suggs and Kyle Boller in the first round. Suggs dropped to 10th in the draft after a mediocre workout, which teams strangely valued more than the insane 24 sacks he recorded in his junior year. He's still only 20 years old, so he could easily see 15 or more years of action in the pros. Boller has what might be the best arm of the class, and scouts raved over his potential. The rest of the Baltimore crop was solid, including underrated fullback Ovie Mughelli, which is just really fun to say. Those three could all end up in the Pro Bowl by 2008.

Detroit: Take Randy Moss, and take away the complete insanity. That's wide receiver Charles Rogers, the second pick

Panther/Hawkeye-rain delayed game to proceed

BY KELLY BEATON
 THE DAILY IOWAN

The Hawkeyes plan to take care of some unfinished business tonight.

After what has essentially become a two-week intermission, Iowa (13-21) and Northern Iowa (19-21) will finish a rain-delayed nine-inning affair the two teams began April 16 in Iowa City at UNI's home field, Riverfront Stadium in Waterloo. The two clubs will pick up play at the exact point their contest was postponed two weeks prior — with one out in the top of the fifth inning with one runner on and the Panthers at bat.

Andrew Hansen (0-0, 6.05) will start on the mound for the Hawkeyes.

Iowa coach Scott Broghamer said the games with intrastate rival UNI offer his squad a preview of the several key games that await them as the Hawkeyes make their postseason push.

"They're an in-state rival, so obviously it's an important game [and a half]," he said. "We get to be the home team in game one, so we've got to take advantage of that and use the last at-bat. We just have to play the kind of baseball that's been successful for us, which is getting solid pitching and defense and score one or two runs an inning."

The game features two vastly different squads at the plate.

The Panthers feature a very aggressive offensive lineup that has out-homered the Hawkeyes 26 to 16 thus far this season, and they have a staggering total of 104 more RBIs (249-145) than their southern neighbors. Northern Iowa is aggressive on the basepaths as well, having stolen 104 bases to this point in the season, while Iowa has mustered only 55.

Six Panthers have hit over .300 this year, led by slugger Adam Boeve, who's hitting .335 with 10 homers and 45 RBIs.

The two teams have fared more similarly on the mound thus far in 2003 than at the plate. Both possess staff ERAs over 5.00 and have been hit hard at times by opponents.

WOMEN'S TENNIS SEASON WRAP-UP

Hawkeyes stellar in singles play

BY KATIE LOW
 THE DAILY IOWAN

A split personality pervaded the Iowa women's tennis team this year. The Hawkeyes were quite strong in singles, winning four of six singles points in five of their Big Ten duals. They also split singles, 3-3, in three of the conference duals.

"Overall, I don't think we could have asked for more from a singles standpoint," Hawk coach Paul Wardlaw said.

Doubles, however, turned out to be quite a different story. The team was able to win the doubles point in only two of 20 dual matches this spring season.

"For the future, I would say we need to improve on doubles," Wardlaw said. "On our team, we have a lot of players whose styles of play are more suited to singles."

The team was still solid, however, going 5-6 in the Big Ten with the sixth loss coming at the hands of Penn State in the first round of the Big Ten Tournament on April 24. The Hawkeyes finished with an overall spring record of 7-13, which Wardlaw attributed to the team's formidable schedule. Twelve of the Hawkeyes' 20 dual meets were against ranked opponents this season.

"We have to make our schedules two years in advance,"

Wardlaw said. "In this case, I think it was just too difficult of a schedule for the team we had this year. We want to play a tough schedule but still have one that allows us to get better, one that allows us to qualify for the NCAAs and one that prepares us for the Big Ten season."

Even though the team suffered a few setbacks, he said he was still very proud of the effort his team gave.

"I think we improved throughout the year and probably played our best tennis the last three to four weeks of the season," he said. "Overall, given our numbers, I thought we competed well and played well as a team. I was pleased with the camaraderie and team spirit."

The Hawkeyes will use the summer to play in tournaments and to improve their strength with conditioning programs. Wardlaw said he expects four to five new players to join the team in the fall and he is hoping they can help Iowa become a more balanced team.

"I'm expecting us to be really solid next year in terms of depth because we will have more numbers," he said. "We also have some very good doubles players coming in which, combined with the experience, the team gained this year will be helpful."

point/counterpoint

Will the Lakers' dynasty end this year?

The Lakers' grasp on the NBA's crown is wavering these days like Larry Eustachy's Winnebago after an all-night bender.

That half of the Lakers' players are nearing Eustachy's 47 years of age is their main problem. Power forward Robert Horry is 32, Brian Shaw's 37, and another wily veteran, 33-year-old Rick Fox, will miss the rest of the postseason after tearing a tendon in his left foot. Fox's leadership and playoff experience will be missed.

The rest of the Lakers' roster has started to resemble a MASH unit as well. Kobe Bryant jammed a rotator cuff attempting a dunk April 22, and he will battle soreness for the rest of the playoffs. Don't forget Shaq's big toe, which is always liable to flare up.

Aside from having to battle their own demons, the Lake Show must contend with one of the most formidable Western Conference playoff lineups in history.

Not only are the Spurs, Mavericks, and Kings coming off stellar seasons, the Suns, led by the rapidly maturing Stephen Marbury and Rookie of the Year Amare Stoudemire, are looking like world-beaters.

Then there are the T-Wolves, the Lakers' current road block in round one. "The Big Ticket," Kevin Garnett, is desperate to pass through the turnstiles into the playoff's second round for the first time ever after six previous tries. Garnett is dangerous enough when he's taking on his usual double teams, but for some reason, Phil Jackson has stubbornly left Robert Horry alone on KG. The result? A 29.8 point-per-game average for Garnett thus far in the series.

Throw in point guard Troy Hudson, a lifetime nine-points-per-game scorer who has averaged a lights-out figure of 27.3 thus far versus the Lakers, and Shaq and company are in trouble. If the T-Wolves don't nip the Lakers, another Western Conference foe will this postseason.

Call a cab, because like Eustachy after his late-night romp in Missouri, the party is over for the Lakers.

To the rest of the Western Conference, if not the entire NBA, Shaq and Kobe are four-letter words. It's not because they're dirty players, troubled citizens, or bad in any way. They're just too good. As Shaq hits his stride, and Kobe continues to improve on his already-ridiculous skills, there is just no chance for anybody.

The popular pick to usurp the Lakers is Sacramento, if Minnesota doesn't pull it off in the Upset Of This Still Young Century. Sure, Sacramento's deep. Its backups can and regularly do beat the bejezus out of the Lakers' bench, but it's the whole team that counts, and the whole Laker team can and does beat anybody.

In Game 7 last year, Vlade Divac proved himself little more than a whining flopper, right down to the pathetic writhing on the floor after fouling out. Up stepped paper tiger Chris Webber to guard Shaq in overtime, and he was ritualistically abused. The Kings don't know how to beat the Lakers, and they know it.

Then there are the Spurs, with their dynamic duo of Tim Duncan and David Robinson. When it comes to playing the Lakers, though, these two are more like Donny and Marie Osmond than Batman and Robin. They spent last year's playoffs blowing leads to the Lakers and watching Bryant take games over. What Spur can stop him on defense? Stephen Jackson? Danny Ferry? Did anybody know those two players even existed?

Last, there's no coach in the NBA better than Phil Jackson. It's not even close. He has always used a couple of great players surrounded by mediocrity and won championships. Shaq and Kobe had Eddie Jones, Elden Campbell, and Nick Van Exel with them once, but because the painfully ineffective Del Harris was their coach, they were quickly taken out in the playoffs. Jackson is unbeatable, and it'll be readily apparent this year too. Viva Los Angeles!

Angels perfect against Indians

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLEVELAND — Ramon Ortiz pitched a seven-hitter, and Garret Anderson drove in three runs Tuesday night to lead the Anaheim Angels to a win over the Cleveland Indians, who have lost seven-straight games, 10-1.

Ortiz (4-2) gave Anaheim a rare strong start and its first complete game of 2003 as the Angels improved to 8-2 in their last 10 at Jacobs Field.

Anderson hit a two-run homer off Ricardo Rodriguez (2-2), and Jeff DaVanon added three RBIs.

The Indians (7-19) are off to their worst start since 1969 and have their first seven-game losing streak since June 27-July 3, 1991.

Ellis Burks homered in the fourth for Cleveland. The Indians have scored just 11 runs in their past six games.

Ortiz's strong outing has to be encouraging to Anaheim manager Mike Scioscia, whose starters entered with the AL's third-worst ERA (5.96) and an 8-11 record.

Anaheim right fielder Tim Salmon makes a sliding try at a sinking line drive by Cleveland's Josh Bard in the second inning. The ball bounced out of Salmon's glove and was ruled a single.

Mark Duncan/Associated Press

Boston 7, Kansas City 2

BOSTON — Nomar Garciaparra was 3-4, and Tim Wakefield pitched six strong innings as the Red Sox rallied from a two-run deficit.

Wakefield (3-1) allowed two runs on seven hits, including homers by Carlos Beltran (inside the park) and Mike DiFelice. Wakefield also struck out six and walked one.

Chris George (3-2) allowed three runs on six hits and a walk, striking out three in 5 1/3 innings. He shut the Red Sox down before giving up a run in the fifth and then running into trouble in the sixth.

Todd Walker singled and moved to second on Garciaparra's single and third on Manny Ramirez's flyout. Kevin Millar's sacrifice fly off Jason Grimsley tied it at 2, then Garciaparra stole second and took third when DeFelice's throw went into center field for an error.

Seattle 6, N.Y. Yankees 0

NEW YORK — Roger Clemens failed to get his 298th win, and Ichiro Suzuki and Hideki Matsui didn't do very much, either, in their first matchup in the major leagues.

Clemens allowed three homers for the first time since August, and the two Japanese stars failed to drive in any runs.

Bret Boone, Ben Davis, and Edgar Martinez homered for Seattle, which has won 12 of its last 13 regular-season games at Yankee Stadium. New York (20-6) lost consecutive games for the first time this season. Suzuki was 1-5 with a bunt single, and he scored in the seventh inning. Matsui was 1-4 with a ninth-inning single.

Gil Meche (3-1) took a three-hitter into the eighth and wound up allowing six hits in 7 1/3 innings, extending his scoreless streak to 16 1/3 innings.

Minnesota 5, Tampa Bay 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Corey Koskie homered and drove in three runs, and Kenny Rogers pitched seven strong innings.

Torii Hunter also homered for the Twins. Rogers (3-1) gave up only one earned run in seven-plus innings, allowing eight hits. He struck out four.

Eddie Guardado pitched the save. Aubrey Huff hit a solo homer for the Devil Rays.

The Twins opened the game with consecutive singles by Jacque Jones and Cristian Guzman off Tampa Bay starter Jorge Sosa (1-3). Jones scored on Koskie's groundout to give the Twins a 1-0 lead.

The Devil Rays tied the game when Huff led off the second inning with his fourth homer of the season.

After Guzman led off the third inning with a single, Koskie hit an opposite-field homer to make it 3-1. One out later, Hunter hit a solo homer to left.

Baltimore 11, Detroit 3

DETROIT — Jason Johnson pitched five scoreless innings, and Jerry Hairston had three runs and two RBIs.

Detroit dropped to 3-21, while Baltimore moved back over .500 at 13-12.

Johnson (4-0) allowed four hits and a walk, striking out two. He didn't win his fourth game last year until Aug. 15.

Rookie Jeremy Bonderman (1-4) gave up five runs — four earned — nine hits and two walks in 5 1/3 innings. Bonderman threw a career-high 118 pitches, 53 in the first two innings.

Atlanta 3, Houston 1

HOUSTON — Greg Maddux pitched seven sharp innings to win his third-straight decision, and Gary Sheffield hit a two-run single.

Maddux held Houston to just one run and five hits, outpitching Roy Oswalt.

John Smoltz worked the save. He struck out Brad Ausmus with two runners on to end it.

The Astros got a run in the first inning when Geoff Blum singled and scored on Jeff Kent's double.

After that, Maddux (3-3) limited the Astros to three hits and didn't allow a runner past second base. He struck out five and didn't walk a batter.

Oswalt (2-3) allowed two runs and four hits in the first inning.

Montreal 3, Milwaukee 2

MILWAUKEE — Brian Schneider hit a tiebreaking RBI infield single with one out in the ninth inning.

Brad Wilkerson homered and scored the go-ahead run, and Montreal starter Javier Vazquez struck out 12 in seven innings.

With one out in the ninth,

Wilkerson drew a walk from Mike DeJean (0-2), stole second, and went to third on Keith Osik's errant throw into center field. Schneider then hit a one-hopper off second baseman Keith Ginter's glove to score Wilkerson.

Scott Stewart (2-0) got two outs for the win, stranding Enrique Cruz at second in the eighth inning. Rocky Biddle pitched the save.

Vazquez retired the first 11 batters and allowed just two runs and three hits. Wilkerson helped stake him to a 2-0 lead.

Wilkerson homered in the second inning to make it 1-0.

Texas 16, Toronto 11

TORONTO — Juan Gonzalez and Carl Everett each homered twice to lead the Rangers over the Blue Jays.

A crowd of 48,097, the largest since opening day, turned out at SkyDome after the Blue Jays offered $1 tickets in an effort to show Toronto remains vibrant despite SARS.

Alex Rodriguez and Todd Greene also homered for the Rangers.

Gonzalez hit a two-run homer in the first inning off starter Mark Hendrickson (1-4), and his three-run shot off Jeff Tam in the sixth gave Texas a 12-4 lead.

Gonzalez drove in a season-high five runs and Everett knocked in four. Everett hit a two-run homer off Kelvim Escobar in the ninth.

Toronto's Frank Catalanotto had four hits.

Nets slide past Bucks with Jefferson's help

ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Richard Jefferson had 17 points and a career-best 16 rebounds and the New Jersey Nets made 11-12 free throws in the final 2:35 to beat the Bucks, 89-82, for a 3-2 lead in their first-round series.

Jason Kidd added 19 points, six rebounds, and five assists and Kerry Kittles had 15 points for the defending Eastern Conference champions. The Nets can clinch the best-of-seven series by winning Thursday in Milwaukee or in New Jersey on Saturday if the Bucks force a deciding game.

"That was a T.J. painting, a finger painting," Kidd said, equating the game to a work of his 4-year-old son. "You just say it looks good. The thing is at this time of the year all you want to do is win, and that's what we did."

San Antonio 94, Phoenix 82

SAN ANTONIO — The Spurs opened a double-digit lead in the first quarter, extended it to 24 by halftime, and held off a rally to take a 3-2 lead in their series.

The Suns, who erased big leads in both of their victories, made the second half worth watching.

They opened the third quarter with a 19-5 run that trimmed San Antonio's advantage to 59-49, but the Spurs put together a string of baskets to restore their lead to 19 by the end of the quarter.

Phoenix charged again in the fourth period, pulling within six, 85-79, with 1:49 to play on a drive by Stephon Marbury. But the Spurs hit their foul shots down the stretch to secure the win.

"We came out with energy in the second half," said Shawn Marion, who led the Suns with 22 points. "We closed the gap real close. We just couldn't get over the hump."

"We knew they were going to make some kind of run," Duncan said. "But we kept our composure and sustained throughout."

Reserve Malik Rose led the Spurs with 27 points and 13 rebounds. Duncan added 23 points and 17 rebounds.

Redden's OT goal lifts Senators in East

ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — Wade Redden's goal 6:43 into overtime lifted the Ottawa Senators to a 3-2 victory over the Philadelphia Flyers on Tuesday night.

Ottawa leads the Eastern Conference semifinal series 2-1. Game 4 of the best-of-seven series is Thursday in Philadelphia.

The Senators trailed 2-1 entering the third. They had been 0-22 in playoff games when trailing after 40 minutes. Philadelphia was 35-0-3 when leading after two periods this season, including 5-0 in the playoffs.

Marian Hossa and Daniel Alfredsson scored power-play goals for Ottawa.

John LeClair and Sami Kapane scored for the Flyers.

Philadelphia's Roman Cechmanek, coming off a brilliant 33-save performance in a 2-0 road victory Sunday night, stopped 24 shots.

Kapanen scored his fourth goal of the playoffs, giving the Flyers a 2-1 lead with 7:14 left in the second.

Tony Amonte, standing behind the net, took a pass from Marcus Ragnarsson and sent it to Kapanen, who one-timed a shot from inside the left circle. Lalime stopped the shot with his glove, but the puck bounced high in the air, off Lalime's back and into the net.

Patrick LeClair gave the Flyers a 1-0 lead just 4:35 into the game on his second goal of the playoffs. Jeremy Roenick set it up with a nifty pass to Amonte, who slipped and took a shot while on his knees. Lalime stopped Amonte's shot, but LeClair, skating in from the bench, tapped the rebound into an empty net.

Vancouver 3, Minnesota 2

ST. PAUL, Minn. — The Canucks took full advantage of their boiling rivalry with the Wild.

Vancouver scored three power-play goals and Dan Cloutier made 16 saves and got a little help from the posts.

The Canucks got goals from Brendan Morrison, Ed Jovanovski and Daniel Sedin as the Wild allowed three power-play goals for only the second time this season. The Canucks, whose power play was ranked third in the NHL this season, went 3-for-6 with the man advantage in a game that saw 40 penalty minutes assessed.

After combining for 16 penalty minutes in Game 1, the teams earned 74 in Game 2, the majority coming when players engaged in a postgame scuffle that warranted five misconducts.

The NHL fined the Wild $25,000 Tuesday for their part in the brawl, and the bad blood carried into the rematch. Seven seconds after face-off, Minnesota's Matt Johnson and Vancouver's Brad May got into some stick play and dropped their gloves.

The Wild had power-play goals by Filip Kuba and Marian Gaborik, but fell behind on Sedin's second-period score.

With practice, Couples finds groove on PGA tour

BY DOUG FERGUSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fred Couples rediscovered his place in golf.

The search started almost three months ago on the practice range at Pebble Beach, when he beat balls for six hours with Butch Harmon at his side.

"He's never done that in his life," Harmon said.

It ended late Sunday afternoon at the Houston Open when Couples was flawless over the final five holes and wound up with a four-stroke victory, his first on the PGA Tour in five years and 87 tournaments.

He raised his putter in triumph. What followed made it clear there was nothing silly about this victory.

"I haven't won in five years. I haven't played really well in five years," Couples said. "I worked hard on my game, and it meshed. I have a lot of people to thank. That's what was going through my mind. Didn't get it out very well."

The message was never more clear. Players in his age bracket (43) with far less ability have been winning their share of tournaments over the last five years.

Hal Sutton has won six times since 1998, including a Tour Championship and an 18-hole duel with Tiger Woods at The Players Championship.

Scott Hoch, 47, won three times in the last three years. Mark O'Meara was 41 when he won two major championships. Bernard Langer, 45, qualified for his 10th Ryder Cup team.

"I have been practicing," Couples said. "I never really thought I'd win this quickly, but I thought I could win again if I practiced and played."

Couples was looking for the easy way out last year when he got behind a failed proposal to start a Major Champions Tour.

"If I play like I did last year and keep deteriorating, and the PGA Tour is tough," Couples said at the time, "there's nowhere for me to play golf."

The solution wasn't a gimmick tour with guaranteed money. The secret has always been in the dirt.

"He hadn't worked hard," Harmon said. "He had been fooling himself."

A desperate Couples hooked up with Harmon during the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am. Couples told him how terrible he had been swinging, and Harmon didn't believe it until they got to the practice range.

"It's worse than you said," Harmon told him.

Harmon's time already is cut thin. He still works occasionally with Woods.

His deal with Couples: You put in the time, I'll make the time.

Not only did they spend six hours on the range, Couples went to Carlsbad, Calif., during the Match Play Championship and worked with Harmon at the TaylorMade test center.

"That's when I knew he was serious," Harmon said. "He worked his tail off ever since."

They essentially shortened his swing, taking undue pressure off Couples' already-sensitive back.

"What I had him visualize was to feel like he was coming over the top to hit a pull hook," Harmon said. "He had to get his arms in front of his body coming down."

His victory in Houston moved him to No. 29 in the world ranking, which assures him of returning to the U.S. Open and likely will get him into the World Golf Championships for the first time in three years.

"A lot of people think Freddie doesn't care," Harmon said. "I think he showed how much it meant to him. Very seldom do you see him that emotional."

As one of golf's most renowned swing gurus, Harmon gets his share of perks. He has written several books and made just as many videos. He has endorsement deals with Titleist and Buick. He operates golf schools in Las Vegas and the Bahamas. What happened Sunday ranks among his greatest rewards.

Harmon already was emotionally spent from a funeral service for his mother-in-law. He got home and turned on the TV to watch the final three holes of the Houston Open, and the brief interview that followed.

Couples started to thank his wife, Thais, and Harmon when his voice cracked and his lips quivered, and tears were flowing from Houston to Las Vegas.

"I had tears in my eyes when he holed out," Harmon said. "Because I know how hard Freddie has worked."

USOC

Unlikely character emerges as key to Olympics changes

BY ALAN ABRAHAMSON
LOS ANGELES TIMES

John Carver, an expert on the ways boards of directors work, has emerged as perhaps the pivotal figure in the remaking of the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Earlier this month, an internal USOC reform panel issued recommendations based on Carver's work and his notions of clearly defined responsibilities and accountability — even though he was virtually unknown as recently as February. That blueprint, a number of insiders said, has become the working reference point for USOC reform.

The blueprint said the USOC needed a clear mission, then defined it as winning medals. It said the board of directors ought to be trimmed from 123 to nine. It also said the new board ought to identify core values and set broad policy but delegate day-to-day affairs to a CEO.

On April 25 in New York, a committee appointed by the U.S. Senate convened a town hall-style hearing into the USOC's structure and culture — the issues at the root of political infighting that erupted earlier this year into one of the worst management crises in history. The president, CEO, and several other officials resigned.

The Senate panel, due to issue its recommendations by June 30, is under no obligation to follow the USOC blueprint. But a source familiar with the Senate panel said it was "very interested in the hard and direct way the [USOC] task force put together its plan."

The plan, as even its authors acknowledge, is far from complete. Looming, for instance, are potential conflicts with International Olympic Committee rules. Brewing are uncertainties about whether Carver's ideas can be applied to "independent" directors summoned to help shepherd the USOC — because it can take years to learn the workings.

Even so, the blueprint has emerged as the starting point for change.

Frank Marshall of Los Angeles, one of the co-chairs of the internal-reform panel, said Carver provided "the foundation for our recommendations."

Carver, 64, based in Atlanta, author or coauthor of five books and more than 170 articles, called the USOC in early February, offering to help after reading news reports about its management implosion.

The USOC is essentially divided into two rival camps, volunteers and staff, a fracture that for years has invited power struggle. The volunteers make up a 123-member board, which meets twice a year, and an executive committee, typically 23, which meets every few weeks and in which most power resides. The paid staff, headed by a CEO, numbers about 500.

Congress put the USOC in charge of the Olympic enterprise in 1978 through what is called the Amateur Sports Act.

HORSE RACING

Hine, Smith inducted

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Hubert "Sonny" Hine, who trained 1998 Horse of the Year Skip Away, and jockey Mike Smith were elected to the National Museum of Racing's Hall of Fame on Tuesday.

The late Hine and Smith will be inducted into the Hall of Fame in Saratoga Springs, N.Y., on Aug. 4.

Also elected were Precisionist in the male thoroughbred category and Dance Smartly in the female thoroughbred category.

Hine raced Skip Away in the name of his wife, Carolyn. The horse won the Eclipse Award as 3-year-old champion of 1996. His victories included a win over Cigar in the Jockey Club Gold Cup and the Breeders' Cup Classic.

"I know he'd be very proud. He's here in spirit," Carolyn Hine said of her husband who died at 69 in 2000.

Hine was elected over finalists John Veitch, who trained Alydar, and California trainer Mel Stute.

The 37-year-old Smith is the regular rider of 2002 Horse of the Year Azeri. He also rode Skip Away to victory in the 1997 Breeders' Cup Classic. Smith led the nation's riders in earnings in 1993. He is based in Southern California.

Smith was chosen over Eddie Maple and Randy Romero.

Precisionist was voted champion sprinter after winning the Breeders' Cup Sprint in 1985. A versatile horse, he won four other Grade 1 stakes at distances ranging from one mile to 1 1/4 miles. The other nominees were Ancient Title and Mania.

Dance Smartly became the only filly to sweep Canada's Triple Crown, winning the Queen's Plate, Prince of Wales Stakes, and Breeders' Stakes of 1991 by a combined margin of 18 lengths. The other nominees were Flawlessly and Sky Beauty.

The inductees were screened and elected by 150 racing writers.

Opinions differ on ISU coach

State lost to Missouri, 64-59. In some photos, Eustachy is kissing young women on the cheek or is being kissed on the cheek.

"A lot of them look like they were staged," Homan said. "He's drinking, but he's 47 and has that right. As far as being kissed on the cheek, I don't know if you've seen 'The Price is Right' with Bob Barker, but he has that happen all the time."

Bill Sullivan, whose son Jake was the Cyclones' leading scorer last season, said Eustachy should resign.

"Coach has always purported himself to be an honorable person," Sullivan said. "If, in fact, he violated a conduct clause in his contract, an honorable person would step down and save the university from any embarrassment."

Jake Sullivan, who'll be a senior, said the photos were a "terrible" blow to the school's image. But he said he would support Eustachy if the coach changed his drinking habits.

"My dad has his opinions, and he says what he wants to say," Jake Sullivan said. "My thing is I'm willing to forgive as long as the person is willing to change and dedicate himself to what we're trying to do."

"I give every ounce I have to this community and this university and want the same in return from my coach."

Eustachy, who is married and has two children, said Monday alcohol was a factor in his behavior and he would deal with that. "I hope to be measured by my future conduct," he said.

ISU booster Bob Gitchell, an orthopedic surgeon who has front-row seats, said he can't justify what Eustachy did but said it did not warrant his dismissal.

"Unless it's really, really bad, I don't think a life should be destroyed because of what 1 percent of your behavior may be," Gitchell said. "I think this is a time when maybe Larry needs saving."

"I've watched him save a lot of kids from the streets, from the gutter. I know personally several kids that would have no chance to be where they are today if it wasn't for his influence. I think that part of him still exists," Gitchell said.

Vroman said he was not sure if Eustachy would keep his job.

"I don't think all of the administration here wants him around as badly as I do and most of the team does," Vroman said.

Iowa jumped out to an early 3-0 lead in the bottom of the first when Johnson scored on a fielder's choice by Lindsey Bashor, who was safe at first base when no play was attempted. With runners on second and third, Birocci cleared the bases with a two-run single to center.

The Hawkeyes added a single run in the third on an RBI double by Bashor before tallying two runs in the fifth. Stacy May smacked a run-scoring double before being replaced at second base by Emily Gerlick. The speedy freshman then came around to score on Jessica Bashor's lone hit of the day.

Becky Sullivan, who was named the Mid-Continent Conference's

Pitcher of the Week for her efforts last week, took the loss to fall to 12-12. The loss was the Westerstuds' first in 11 games, dating back to April 18.

Kentucky will visit Pearl Field for single games on Saturday and May 4, the final two home contests of the season for the Hawkeyes.

Northern Iowa sports a 5.47 staff ERA and has yielded a .291 batting average to its opponents. The Panthers are led on the mound by Spencer Black, who has a 2-2 record, saves in 13 appearances, and a 2.16 ERA.

The Hawkeyes have been roughed up a little more on the pitching rubber than their intrastate rivals. Iowa carries a 6.07 team ERA into tonight's game and has been hit at a .316 clip by opponents.

Despite their troubles throughout the majority of the season, the Hawkeyes have received a late-season boost from Nathan Johnson (4-1, 3.21), who will now join the starting rotation and may take the mound for Iowa in game two.

Iowa has enjoyed a great deal of success over the years against UNI. The Hawkeyes own a 63-16-1 advantage in their all-time series versus UNI, including a 6-4 win last year in Waterloo.

The two clubs will finish their April 16 contest beginning at 5 p.m. Game two will begin at 7 p.m.

"It adds a little to the mid-week game," said UNI coach Rick Heller of the rivalry. "I think the teams have fun with it, and they're always ready to play. I think we should have a good crowd and it should be a good atmosphere."

of the draft and the cornerstone of the Lions' draft. Rogers is big (6-4, 215) and fast (top speed: about Mach 5). On a Lions team that doesn't have a single receiver who can adjust to the ball, he is a welcome addition. The Lions also drafted linebacker Boss Bailey, a freakish athlete from Georgia who was listed in the first round on most, if not all, draft charts. Questions remain about his fundamentals, but for a linebacker, those can be taught. A 4.38 40-yard dash cannot.

THE BAD:
Buffalo: O.J. Simpson. Thurman Thomas. Willis McKnee. Injury. The Bills extended their pantheon of great running backs by inexplicably using a first-round pick on tailback Willis McGahee, who suffered a horrifying knee injury not five months ago. While his recovery has been faster than expected, nobody comes back 100 percent from a surgically reconstructed knee, ever. Buffalo ignored running backs Travis Henry, an All-Pro, and pre-draft acquisition Olandis Gary, just to use their first draft pick on a guy who can't walk correctly yet. NFL officials are debating putting a Breathalyzer in the draft rooms next year.

Washington: It's bad enough that the Redskins only had three picks to use, after a series of questionable (OK, boneheaded) trades gutted their draft. What's worse, they used a seventh-round choice on Gibran Hamdan, a mediocre-to-awful quarterback from Indiana best known for throwing three interceptions to Iowa's Grant Steen last year. When asked by bewildered reporters, head coach Steve Spurrier defended the pick, noting that Hamdan "ran a 4.9 in the 40" and "looks like a pro quarterback." Horrified Redskins fans openly wept.

THE UGLY:
Houston: The prevailing idea in the NFL draft is that potential is worth more than results. Houston took that notion to absurd extremes, drafting Drew Henson in the sixth round. Unfortunately, Henson had maintained that he has no interest in the NFL. In simpler terms, Houston actually threw a pick away entirely. The Bengals, sensing a challenge to the throne of Worst Drafters In History, defended their title by using their next pick on LeBron James.

Minnesota: Those lovable Purple People Eaters botched their first-round pick for the second year in a row, having to "pass" after they used all of their allotted 15 minutes trying to work out a trade. What's worse, after the next two teams quickly made their selections, they selected defensive tackle Kevin Williams, who is most certainly not the ninth-best player in the draft. Head coach Mike Tice's reaction? "I'm pissed." Oy vey. Even worse, their next pick, linebacker E.J. Henderson, has a degenerative back condition. Poor Viking fans. If it weren't for the Bears being just as bad last year, they'd have nothing to smile about.

Second time a charm for Sixth Man

BY GREG BEACHAM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Sacramento Kings guard Bobby Jackson won the NBA's Sixth Man of the Year award on Tuesday.

Jackson, the runner-up for the award last season behind Detroit's Corliss Williamson, received 52 of the 118 first-place votes from a panel of broadcasters and journalists.

Jackson got 362 points in the voting. Milwaukee shooting guard Michael Redd finished second with 257, and Utah forward Andrei Kirilenko was third with 127.

Jackson, the Kings' undersized offensive spark plug, is just the second point guard to win the award, along with Orlando's Darrell Armstrong in 1999.

Jackson was the Kings' fourth-leading scorer this season, averaging a career-best 15.2 points. He also recorded career bests in shooting percentage (46.4), free throw percentage (84.6) and 3-point percentage (37.9).

But Jackson's season was hardly a typical one.

He started 26 games for the Kings last fall while Mike Bibby missed the first seven weeks with a foot injury — and after a collision with Shaquille O'Neal on Christmas, Jackson missed the Kings' next 20 games with a broken hand.

Jackson has been the Kings' best reserve since returning. He spells Bibby and Doug Christie at both guard positions, and he's usually on the court in the closing minutes of tight games.

Not bad for a guard who's probably two inches shorter than his listed 6-foot-1 — and who's been traded twice and allowed to leave Minnesota three seasons ago.

Jackson is one of the Kings' leaders, with an exuberant locker-room presence and a calming veteran influence. He's also known for his remarkable work ethic.

A six-year veteran, Jackson is one of several Kings still under contract for more than two seasons. With consecutive division championships under their belt the Kings are one victory away from their first-round playoff series with the Jazz.

Though Jackson could start for many teams, he says he prefers coming off the bench for an elite team with a shot at a title.

"It's a good role for the team, and for me," Jackson said last week. "Starting isn't a big deal. I'm more interested in finishing games."

The Ledge

Pilfered by Nick Narigon

Heard any good Larry Eustachy jokes lately?

• Like ISU students, no matter how hard he tried, he couldn't get laid.

• The photos gotta be fake; fat girls drinking Natty Light can only be found in Ames.

• Should he be fired, Larry can always host "Girls Gone Wild" with Snoop.

• Or work as a Natty Light spokesman.

• Or recruit for Mizzou.

• Or chauffeur for John Madden.

• Or run for president (this is nothing compared with Clinton).

• I heard the Playboy photo shoot for Girls of the Big 12 will take place in Larry's Winny.

• His actions are considered illegal in Missouri, because it WASN'T his sister.
