Water project draws Coralville fire

Coralville residents woke up against a waterfront-once-gray backdrop earlier this week, after the completion of their Glen Oaks neighborhoods transformation during Coralville Council meeting Tuesday night.
Gary Moondie, who has lived in Glen Oaks Drive, addressing the crowd, said that Cinco Homes, Gallinas Real Estate, 2014 N.

Dubuque Road, is continuously changing development plan after the area has already been owned and approved to remain in place, including a four-year-old and wildlife.
Moondie said it is important about the implementation of the landscaping in the area before the trees were cut down, adding that it would also unnecessarily kill many trees and wildlife.
He added that one reason he thought the Glen Oaks home was because of the reason which made the least viable for the plan.
Moondie claimed that the developer was exploiting the development in order to sell real estate.
"Now let's put that rather-alongside plan [of the development]" Moondie said.

Several employees in the administration of the Union Hospitals and College Complementary Parking Pass Program have allowed opportunities for abuse that several university employees took advantage of, university officials said. Two employees were fired.

An internal audit reviewing the parking system revealed that several discrepancies opened the door for some employees to use the passes intended for hospital patients — for their personal use or use at one of the four hospital parking ramps. The parking-pass program gives the patients passes that allowed them to park in the ramp for free.
The part-time student parking attendants, employed by the Department of Parking and Transportation, were fired several months ago for violating program policies when they attached extra magnets to the passes to the ticket of the parking customers. Several other employees were represented for misuse of the parking passes, which led to the loss of an additional income, and UIHC spokesman Tom More.
"We found used parking passes on the counter of the books, which is a violation of our procedure because it clearly makes it possible to steal," said David Barlott, the Parking and Transportation director, adding that the employees were not fired for diversion.

"They are our enemies," Yaalon said. "We will continue to strike them as long as they continue to act against us."

Israel was quick to respond to the threat that Iran's atomic weapons program poses to the country, with Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu saying that Iran's leaders are "playing with fire.

New fee may not affect renters

BY ANNE SHUPPY
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa City City Councilors on Tuesday approved a new fee structure for tenants for the first time in the city's history. The councilors voted 6-1 in favor of the fee, with Mayor Ernie Lehman as the lone dissenter.

The fee is intended to help offset the cost of enforcing a city ordinance that prohibits property owners from retaliating against tenants who report unsafe conditions. The ordinance was adopted in 2001.

The new fee is in addition to existing housing and sanitation fees. It is calculated as a percentage of the tenant's gross income, with a maximum of $100 for each dwelling unit.

The fee will be collected by landlords, who will then pass it on to tenants. The fee will be recalculated annually, based on the average price of renter-occupied units in the city.

The councilors decided not to include an exemption for low-income tenants, as some had suggested. Instead, they decided to set a maximum fee of $100 per unit.

The fee will be in effect immediately, and the councilors are expected to vote on a similar fee for landlords in the future.

The fee is expected to generate an estimated $1 million in revenue per year, which will be used to enforce the tenant protection ordinance.

The fee was introduced by City Councilor Debra Haar, who said the city needs to do more to protect tenants' rights.

"The fee will help us enforce the tenant protection ordinance and ensure that tenants have a safe and healthy living environment," Haar said. "This is a step in the right direction, and I'm excited to see how it will work."
District plans assessments

The Iowa City School District plans to adopt new methods of tracking and assessing elementary-school children this fall, school officials said at the Tuesday night School Board meeting.

In order to increase accountability for the No Child Left Behind Act, wording for the Language Arts, Reading and Mathematics tests they use are being changed to make it clear to parents what they need to improve comprehension and writing skills to make it on to the next grade.

"People may ask why we need assessment," said Pam Ehly, the district director of Testing and Accountability. "While scores may be high, there are children who need additional support. While some students need to challenge themselves, teaching methods need to be in accordance with the new methods.

The change will help the district know if children are being helped to progress in reading and writing skills, Ehly said. The current assessment was not designed to do that, but was primarily for how students were progressing in other areas such as mathematics, science and social studies.

The Development Reading Assessment will be implemented in elementary schools this fall and the current plan was to do two assessments. The fall test will evaluate strengths and weaknesses, and the spring test will produce a final evaluation of students that future teachers will be able to assess.

This assessment was tried out at Hills, Mark Twain, and Peace Elementary Schools at various grade levels and proved to be successful. Ehly said in fact that Hills, Mark Twain, and Peace Elementary were not evaluated this year in the current assessment.

The first change mandates a new grading system for elementary schools to track student performance in the third-grade test in a variety of literature to meet the expectations of both the state and the district.

The second change involves restructuring of the current test to include a sort of standardized test that is not state-mandated.

Orientation needs to get with the program

Letting new students plan their schedules would decrease stress and prepare them for the future.

Most students will never use again.

By sending students in groups to spend time in the brochure holder that seems to be a constant on the last day of Orientation to feeling rambunctious.

Now that the race is over, we have found the culprit that caused our fish tank to break. We are still in shock of the discovery and bear the blame of the culprit. The culprit has been found, and we are still in shock.

World, U.S. largely ignoring the problems of Central Africa

European governments and U.S. diplomats have been neglecting signals to the world about the imperative need to protect the civilians in Central Africa. The mission may succeed in warning the world about the continued threat to the region, but unless more is done on the ground, the mission may fail.

For traditionalists, these materials are still needed. They're coated in tempera paint, I'd never吃 up with the program, afraid of all fish. Iowa donors urged to consider increased giving

Iowa donors are being urged to consider increased giving to the University of Iowa by President Bruce Harreld, who discussed the need for philanthropic support during his annual State of the Campus address on Sept. 22.

"Philanthropy is a work of the heart, and it is a work of the heart that we must do," Harreld told the audience at the Johnson Center Ballroom.

The president said the university's finances are in good shape, with enrollment and giving on the rise. However, he noted that the university still faces challenges, such as funding for research and student scholarships.

"We are in a position to do great things," Harreld said. "We have the talent, we have the resources, we have the commitment. But we need your help to make these dreams a reality."
Canada sees 1st gay wedding

BY TOM COHEN
Monrovia, Calif.

TORONTO — Two Canadian men were married Tuesday in a ceremony marked by the first gay wedding just hours before an Ontario appeals court ruled that the country's ban on homosexual marriage was unconstitutional.

The appeals panel declared the current legal definition of marriage was based on a "misunderstanding" of the law and that the court should declare it unconstitutional. A three-judge panel of the Ontario Court of Appeal struck down a law that defines marriage as the union of one man and one woman.

The ruling came just hours before the judge and the couple's friends celebrated the wedding at an outdoor ceremony. The couple is Edward Pegg Jr. and Michael Stark, who began dating in 1996.

"I think we've changed our lives," Edward Pegg Jr. said. "We're happier, we're more positive, we're more relaxed. We're more like ourselves."

The government can appeal the decision. It has 30 days to file a request. A final decision is expected in about nine months.

The decision comes in a judicial review filed by two Ontario cities, Toronto and Hamilton, and a homosexual couple, Edward Pegg Jr. and Michael Stark, against a portion of the federal definition of marriage.

"This is a victory for all of us," said Edward Pegg Jr. "We've been waiting for this for a very long time."

"We're happy to get married," said Michael Stark. "It's been very hard to get married."

Edward Pegg Jr. and Michael Stark already exchanged vows in 2000, but the marriage was not recognized by the Ontario government.

"We've been waiting for this for a very long time," said Edward Pegg Jr. "We're happy to get married."

"Let’s get it over with now, so when we go play Cincinnati we’ll have everybody that we need," said Mike Remlinger, Chicago Cubs reliever.

"If not, let’s go with it. Whatever needs to be done, let’s go. We don’t want to lose this game."

The Cubs were 0-0 without Sosa last month while he was on the disabled list after undergoing surgery on his leg. But they would lose him for the season next week, when they follow a three-game interleague series against Toronto with a four-game road test against NL-Central champion Cincinnati.

"Let’s get it over with as soon as possible, because Cincinnati will have everybody that we need," Remlinger said.

Claiborne went 10-7 without Sosa last month while he was on the disabled list after undergoing surgery on his leg. But they would lose him for the season next week, when they follow a three-game interleague series against Toronto with a four-game road test against NL-Central champion Cincinnati.

"Let’s get it over with as soon as possible, because Cincinnati will have everybody that we need," Remlinger said.

Seattle TE guilty of reckless driving

BY TIM KORTE

KIRKLAND, Wash. — Seattle Seahawks wide receiver Jeromy Stevens pleaded guilty to reckless driving after prosecutors agreed to drop a drunken driving charge.

Stevens entered the plea in Kirkland Municipal Court. But Judge Albert Bovee declined to accept a sentence recommended by prosecutors and defended by Stevens. As part of the plea agreement, Stevens must pay a $3,000 fine, serve 90 days in jail and complete a rehabilitation program.

If he violates the terms of his probation, Stevens could face up to nine years in prison.

Inside liner staff writer Paul. Haase contributed to this report.

Seattle Seahawks tight end Jeromy Stevens pleaded guilty to reckless driving after prosecutors agreed to drop a drunken driving charge against him.

Stevens had been cited in December 2003 after he was stopped near downtown Seattle. A Breathalyzer test showed that his blood alcohol content was 0.10 percent.

Stevens was cited for reckless driving because he had a blood alcohol content of between 0.08 and 0.15 percent, and the legal limit is 0.08 percent.

"I'm willing to take responsibility for what I did and agree to whatever it is you require me to do," Stevens said.

Stevens was seen the Seahawks' first-round draft pick last April and signed a five-year, $10 million contract the same day.

Stevens has been enrolled in anger and drug counseling programs since being drafted. In his rookie season, he caught 59 passes for 525 yards and three touchdowns.

While at the University of Washington, Stevens pleaded guilty to misdemeanor hit-and-run property damage after driving into a moving home in 2002. As a student at River Ridge High in Olympia, Wash., he was arrested in 1996 for participating in a power-wrestling match.

Stevens' attorneys also have confirmed that Portland had missed multiple other driving offenses in the last year, including several speeding violations.

Tavani Banks wants to return to NFL

By S.P. BJORKMAN
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa defense was overlooked this season by many people, but part of the reason was because of the performance of Banks, who was a big part of the team’s success.

In the NFL, Banks was a member of the New England Patriots, the Miami Dolphins, and the St. Louis Rams. He was drafted in the seventh round of the 2003 NFL Draft.

In his NFL career, Banks has played in 51 games, starting 31. He has recorded 48 tackles, one sack, and two interceptions.

He has also been a part of several special teams, including kickoff returns and punting.
