Jazzing the town

BY LAURA HOLMES
THE DAILY IOWAN

On a still, 96-degree Sunday evening, downtown Iowa City is crowded with people soaking up the atmosphere of the Iowa City Jazz Festival.

Two jazz fans, Steve Grismore and Mark Ginsberg, first brought their vision of a jazz festival to life in 1991; now in its 13th year, the annual event pulls in huge crowds.

In his faded black T-shirt and blue denim shorts, Grismore, the director of the festival, said the weekend-long festival has been a great success despite bad weather early Sunday afternoon.

"We've started on time every day," he said. "The rain didn't change a thing, and we had a huge crowd on [July 5]; it was jamming."

Grismore estimated that approximately 20,000 people attended the festival, including crowds going for the big finale — the Dirty Dozen Brass Band of New Orleans.

The festival, which played host to 23 bands, has had more than 150 volunteers help with organization since September, Grismore said.

"There is a lot of work put into organizing this event," he said. "Fund raising starts in July, and then we need to decide which bands to try to get to come and play."

For Grismore, a major benefit of the festival is educating youth about jazz culture by having local high-school students play on stage, thus broadening young people's perception of jazz.

The buzzing downtown atmosphere from July 4 through Sunday made the success of the jazz fest easy to see.

Jones a lightning rod for critics

BY JOHAN BERGENAS
THE DAILY IOWAN

One of the most powerful men on the UI campus, Phillip Jones, the vice president for Student Services, unwinds by getting his hands dirty in his garden, listening to jazz, and rooting for the Chicago Cubs.

A converted barn at 3201 Muscatine Ave. has served as Jones' home for the past 20 years. The house is equipped with a basement gym, where he works out every day at 6 a.m. before he takes his 2000 Toyota Avalon to his office on the second floor of the IMU. He has advanced through the university hierarchy, becoming dean of students in 1983 and vice president for Student Services in 1997.

Job-seeking tsunami swamps businesses

BY KENT NGUYEN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Many local businesses are being inundated with applications as soon there is any hint of a job opening. Sixty-one people — mostly UI students — recently applied at the Summit, more than 40 at Gilda Imports, and at least 60 at the Deadwood.

Although the number of applications may lead job seekers to think the job market is nonexistent, the truth is it's normal.

The Milken Institute — a non-profit, independent economic think tank in Santa Monica, Calif. — crowned Iowa City as the best-performing city among 96 "small metro" areas in the country in terms of where jobs are being created. The study, released June 25, examined such economic factors as job growth, salary growth, and technological output.

The report concluded that cities that depend on a variety of industries ranked highest. Cities with a heavy dependency on the "high-tech 'new economies' of the 1990s," which used to enjoy high rankings, were found near the bottom of the list.

"If you have a balanced portfolio, you tend to deal with the ups and downs better than those [cities] that heavily rely on one type of industry," said Skip Rimer, the Milken director of communications.

Many local business owners agree that Iowa City has a fairly decent economy and that other factors may be causing the high number of job applicants.

Taking the bull by the horns in IC

BY STACEY ROSSMAN
THE DAILY IOWAN

The popular Red Bull energy drink, which contains a large amount of caffeine and amino acids, has been a hit with the early 20s crowd since its arrival in the United States in 1997. Despite warnings of its dangerous side effects, Red Bull consumers cannot get enough of it — especially when it is mixed with alcohol.

Red Bull, which was first produced in Austria in 1987 and is distributed in 70 countries, is now banned in France, Denmark, Norway, and Iceland, according to a July 2001 press release issued by Red Bull following the deaths of three Swedish Red Bull consumers.

In the press release, Red Bull officials said they are "certain that the alleged consumption of Red Bull Energy Drink has no connection whatsoever with the cause of death of these three young people" and "any harmful effects are generally connected to that of the alcohol."

Although the three deaths sparked an investigation by the Swedish National Food Administration in 2001, Swedish officials have not released any information proving that Red Bull directly caused any of the three deaths.

"Because alcohol is a depressant and caffeine is a stimulant, they both have effects on the central nervous system," said Kathy Mellen, a UI Student Health Service dietitian. "When mixed together, [they] can alter people's perceptions about how drunk they really are, especially for someone who does not usually drink caffeine."

Experts may say there are reasons to think twice about mixing Red Bull and alcohol, but many Iowa City bar patrons continue to order, make, and drink the mixture.

UI junior Dustin Willard said he does not hesitate to mix Red Bull with alcohol because the combination has not had a negative effect on him.

"I like the alert feeling it gives," he said.

That "alert feeling" is an effect from the 80 mg of caffeine in each 8.3 oz. can of Red Bull, Mellen said, adding that this feeling may cause people to think they are sober enough to drink more than they can handle. They might even feel confident enough to drive.

Chris Dilillo, a former bartender at the Union Bar, 121 E. College St., said he hasn't encountered any negative effects of drinking Red Bull mixed with alcohol — neither as a consumer nor as a server.

"The people drinking Red Bull and vodka don't get any drunker than the people drinking Captain and Coke," he said. Coke contains considerably less caffeine than Red Bull — 35 mg of caffeine in each 12 oz. can — but the same rules apply when mixed with alcohol, Mellen said.

Iowa City gets plugged in but not wired

BY J.K. PERRY
THE DAILY IOWAN

Mobility is fast becoming the manner in which people want to accomplish business, work, and play. Institutions and companies all over the nation have burst onto the scene to meet this rising demand, and Iowa City is no stranger to the phenomenon.

Since 1999, the UI Information Technology Services has provided wireless Internet for faculty, staff, and students in several buildings across campus.

The focus has been on the Main Library, where service is offered on nearly all of the first three floors.

To pick up the signal, a customer must have a computer, usually a laptop, outfitted with wireless connectivity. ITS wireless service is compatible with Cisco's Aironet 352 PCMCIA wireless card or an Apple Airport version 2 card for iBooks.

"Sometime in the fall or spring, the system will allow you to use almost any card," said Steven Fleagle, the ITS director of telecommunications and network services. He and his staff are testing the compatibility of other cards at the moment.

Members of the university community can obtain both types of cards at the Main Library Information Arcade. The arcade loans computers for a period of one day, but they cannot be taken from the premises. An individual who checks out a PC card can take it anywhere ITS offers service.

The popularity of the service, however, has been low until recently — when the ITS stepped up its efforts at campus awareness.

"Once we put out signs, we've seen a big pick-up," said Lisa Martincik, the Information Arcade head. During the past semester, laptops and cards were loaned on a regular basis.

ITS has installed new access points around campus, such as the most recent one in the Chemistry Building, because students and faculty members have shown interest in obtaining them. The Chemistry Building's service should be up and running by today if all goes well, Fleagle said.

The UI is not the only entity pushing wireless service: A fairly new company formed by UI students, X-Wires Communications, offers to "Cut YOUR wires NOW," according to the company's Web site.

The company, located at 23 S.

Anne Webbeking/The Daily Iowan

Ben Anderson, the president of X-Wires Communications, a wireless Internet service, sits in the Terrapin Coffee Co. on June 18. Subscribers Dan Bovenmyer and Josh Cramer (background) said they hook up to the Internet using X-Wires from the coffee shop on a regular basis.

Gilbert St., is now serving around 60 customers in residential, business, and "hot spot" locations such as the Terrapin Coffee Co., 259 Iowa Ave., said President Ben Anderson.

"Two companies sharing a space for mutual benefit," he said.

X-Wires offers six service plans to set up its customers at Terrapin. It's possible to purchase an hour's worth of service for $1.95, a day's worth for $6.95, and other such plans. Monthly packages are included — anywhere from $19.95 to $39.95 — depending on the speed desired.

"On average, we have from five to 10 people a day [using the service]," said Craig Alt, the Terrapin general manager, adding that as awareness grows, so will the number of people using X-Wires' service.

Josh Cramer, a Web-site designer who frequents Terrapin as his "new office," said, "I think this is the next evolution in wireless."

The growth of "hot spots" such as Terrapin should also continue in the near future — plans are already in the works, although Anderson said he could not be more specific.

"Like any new business, we're trying to get to the break-even point, but we're getting close," he said.

With 6 months to go, Dems' race shaping up

NEWS ANALYSIS

BY MIKE GLOVER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — The sweltering heat of summer has arrived, the Iowa State Fair is looming, and the Democratic presidential candidates are taking a brief respite from the state.

That makes it a good time to take stock of where things stand roughly six months before the state's precinct caucuses kick-start the presidential nominating season. A few things stand out:

- Former Vermont Gov. Howard Dean is on a roll right now. He's worked tirelessly courting activists in person and in small groups for more than a year now, the sort of grass-roots campaigning that pays big dividends. Dean effectively used his opposition to the war in Iraq to catch the attention of party liberals, who then discovered he had health-care policies they liked and was in their corner on such issues as gay rights.

One complaint early on was that Dean, as governor of a tiny state in the East, was not so well-financed as his rivals. He defeated that argument by collecting an astounding $7.5 million during the second quarter of this year, topping all of his rivals. It turns out his financial base was the Internet, not Vermont.

Dean now is firmly ensconced in the top tier and, if he holds his current momentum, looks to be coming out of Iowa with some steam.

- Rep. Richard Gephardt's campaign also has been picking up momentum, quashing suspicions that his candidacy, combined with his decision not to run for Congress again, might be a halfhearted effort aimed at giving him a graceful transition out of politics.

Gephardt, a talented retail politician, has been working quietly in meetings and activists' living rooms to build one of the best campaign organizations in the state.

Leaving his congressional leadership post has freed him to chart his own course on issues such as proposing a massive universal health-care plan.

Gephardt says he feels liberated, and he acts like it as well.

- Massachusetts Sen. John Kerry has put in the field one of the strongest campaign teams. He points to his history as a decorated Vietnam veteran and says he's not afraid to play the patriotism card against President Bush.

A lot of Democrats think Kerry has the best shot at beating Bush, and that's all that matters to some activists. It still remains to be seen if Kerry is up to the retail politics that can push him over the top.

- North Carolina Sen. John Edwards has invested a lot of time and money in Iowa and argues that the last two Democratic presidents were Southern moderates.

Somehow, Edwards has yet to catch fire in the state, though he did get some attention when he got out front on a policy for rural America. There's still time for Edwards to catch on, but undecided activists are likely to go elsewhere if he doesn't show some progress by Labor Day.

- Florida Sen. Bob Graham and Connecticut Sen. Joe Lieberman got into the race late and have been the least active in the state. Neither is going to abandon Iowa altogether, but they won't put a significant effort into the state.

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A woman allegedly threw her twin infant sons off a bridge into the Mississippi River, then jumped in herself, screaming incoherently as she fell 75 feet to the water, police said.

Several people who were at the river's edge for the city's July Fourth fireworks display on July 4 jumped in after them. A man rescued one of the 11-month-old boys, then pulled the mother to safety with the help of others.

By then, the second boy had disappeared, said police Cmdr. Brian Coyle.

The body of a baby was found Sunday night approximately 17 miles downriver, and Dakota County Sheriff's dispatcher Jan Kaeder said officials were "all but technically sure it's the child." She said a coroner would make the final determination.

Naomi Gaines, 24, and the rescued boy were expected to recover.

Coyle said Gaines, who has no criminal record, could face charges as early as today. She also has a 7-year-old son and a 4-year-old daughter, neighbors said.

She dropped the twins over the 5-foot railing of a bridge, then climbed over and jumped, witnesses said.

Coyle said the unidentified man who led the rescue of Gaines and her son put himself in harm's way by swimming out into the powerful current.

"It was heroic," Coyle said. "I'm impressed that a citizen would jump into the river and do what he did."

Witnesses said the woman kept screaming and resisted her rescuers.

"We were just sitting there, and we heard her screaming," said Erin Mac, who was among thousands of people at the river's edge. "She just kept screaming these bloodcurdling screams."

Man dies in fireworks accident

LOWELL, Iowa (AP) — A man died on July Fourth when he bent down to pick up a lit firework and it exploded in his face, a neighbor said.

Michael Irven Powers, 38, of Lowell, was pronounced dead at the

A neighbor, Phyllis Totemeier, 53, said the explosion happened when Powers bent down to pick up a rocket power that had fallen over.

No other injuries were reported.

The sheriff's office said Sunday no more information was available.

Liberia's Taylor accepts exile

BY KARL VICK
WASHINGTON POST

MONROVIA, Liberia — President Charles Taylor of Liberia announced on Sunday that he will step down and accept an offer of asylum in Nigeria.

The announcement, issued after a meeting with Nigerian President Olusegun Obasanjo, appears to clear a major obstacle for the deployment of U.S. troops to Liberia. President Bush repeatedly has made Taylor's departure a condition for sending a U.S. peacekeeping force.

Although Taylor has promised before to leave, his pledge Sunday carried both a specific destination and the weight of Obasanjo, the respected leader of Africa's most populous nation. Neither leader gave a specific date for Taylor's exit, but both emphasized it will be sooner rather than later.

"I think it is proper to proceed gingerly and with haste," Taylor said. "I did understand from President Bush that things need to be done quickly as there is a window of opportunity. We embrace and accept that window of opportunity, and we move hastily."

The announcement came as Bush prepared to leave on his first tour of Africa amid mounting expectations that he would dispatch the peacekeeping force to this nation, which was founded for freed American slaves.

A U.S. military team — 20 U.S. military experts, accompanied by 15 U.S. security troops — was due to arrive in the capital, Monrovia, early today to assess the humanitarian situation in the city, where the population of 1 million has swollen as villagers have streamed in to flee fighting associated with a rebel offensive.

But Taylor's announced exit also ignited fresh concerns about whether he will escape trial for alleged war crimes. A U.N. court last month indicted Taylor for crimes against humanity and other violations of international law in neighboring Sierra Leone, where Taylor-backed rebels are notorious for severing the limbs of civilians.

Obasanjo disparaged the U.N.

indictment, calling it an obstacle to bringing a "durable peace" to Liberia, where rebel groups claim to control much of the countryside.

The Nigerian leader said on Sunday that the only "condition" attached to his invitation to grant Taylor safe haven "is that Nigeria and I will not be harassed by anybody, any organization or any country, for making this humanitarian gesture, a gesture that is necessary to solve the conflict in this country."

Human-rights advocates warned that the issue would not go away. Taylor's indictment, only the second of a head of state after Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, was widely hailed as a blow against the culture of impunity that has made wars in Africa especially brutal, because the men waging them sense the world's indifference.

"The special court for Sierra Leone should be respected," said Peter Takirambudde, the director of the Africa division of Human Rights Watch, an advocacy group based in New York. "Peace and stability should not trump justice."

Taylor and Obasanjo framed the Liberian president's departure as a conciliatory move aimed at hastening the arrival of an international force to stabilize the country while removing the president many call its main source of instability.

"We invite the United States to come full force and assist this process in bringing peace back to Liberia," Taylor said after meeting for more than an hour with Obasanjo. Taylor faces a U.N. Security Council ban on overseas travel, as well as possible arrest abroad on the war-crimes indictment.

"We believe that it's not unreasonable to request that there be an orderly exit from power," Taylor said. "We believe it will help in the long run, the short run, and the medium term."

Rights advocates say that allowing Taylor to escape trial might hasten the arrival of peacekeepers but will complicate efforts to establish a government ground in the rule of law.

Taylor's departure was sought by critics who describe him as the engine of discord that has enveloped the region. By supporting rebel groups that sought to undermine governments in neighboring countries, Taylor provoked other countries to do the same, analysts say. Of the two rebel armies now threatening his government, one is backed principally by Ivory Coast, the other by Guinea and Sierra Leone.

Experts fear guerrilla war

BY THOMAS E. RICKS
AND RAJIV
CHANDRASEKARAN
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — Recent Iraqi attacks on U.S. troops have demonstrated a new tactical sophistication and coordination that raises the specter of the U.S. occupation force becoming enmeshed in a full-blown guerrilla war, military experts said Sunday. The new approaches employed in the Iraqi attacks last week are provoking concern among some that what once was seen as a mopping-up operation against the dying remnants of a deposed government is instead becoming a widening battle against a growing and organized force that could keep tens of thousands of U.S. troops busy for months.

Pentagon officials insist that the U.S. military is not caught in an anti-guerrilla campaign in Iraq, that the fighting is limited mainly to the Sunni heartland northwest of Baghdad, and that progress is being made elsewhere in the country. "There's been an awful lot of work done," Air Force Gen. Richard Myers, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told "Fox News Sunday" in an interview taped last week. "A lot of the country is relatively stable."

But a growing number of military specialists, and some lawmakers, are voicing concern about trends in Iraq. There is even some quiet worry at the Pentagon, where some officers contend privately that the size of the U.S. deployment in Iraq — now about 150,000 troops — is inadequate for force protection, much less for peacekeeping. The Army staff is re-examining force requirements, said a senior officer who asked not to be named.

"If you talk to the guys in Iraq, they will tell you that it's urban combat over there," the officer said. "They all are saying, 'What we have is not enough to keep the peace.'"

And the point-blank shooting of an unarmed British reporter on a Baghdad street Sunday and a grenade attack on a U.N. compound raised concern that Iraq's worsening insurgency — until now targeting only coalition troops and Iraqis accused of U.S. collaboration — will spread to Westerners in general.

Also on Sunday, an assailant shot and killed a U.S. soldier waiting to buy a soft drink at Baghdad University, firing once from close range in the third such assault in nine days. The style was coldly similar to the killing of the young British freelance cameraman, who was shot in the head outside a Baghdad museum on July 5.

"In Iraq," Sen. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., the chairman of the intelligence committee, said on CNN's "Late Edition" Sunday, "we're now fighting an anti-guerrilla... effort."

Sen. Carl M. Levin of Michigan, the senior Democrat on the Armed Services Committee, said: "Our troops are stretched very, very thin. We should ask other countries" to send troops, including Germany, France, India, and Egypt.

"It is an absolute mystery to me" that NATO has not been asked to authorize the deployment of member forces in Iraq, Levin, who just returned from a three-day visit to Iraq, said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press." Committee Chairman John Warner, R-Va., noted that the administration anticipates "that 30,000 troops from other nations will be involved before year's end."

But it is not clear that those foreign troops will be forthcoming in the numbers expected, especially if fighting in Iraq intensifies.

"The increasing enemy activity in Iraq is very unsettling," said retired Marine Lt. Col. John Poole, a specialist in small-unit infantry tactics. "It could mean that the situation has started to escalate into a guerrilla war."

Retired Army Col. Richard Dunn, a former head of the Army's internal think tank, agreed, saying, "I'd like to be wrong on this, but we may be seeing a classic insurgency situation developing." At the same time, he said it is possible that "we may just be seeing a surge of activity that they're unable to sustain."

Last week, 45 armed men launched a concentrated assault against a U.S. convoy north of Baghdad. Attacks in the capital appear to be becoming more effective.

In one incident, an Iraqi stood in a moving car and fired a rocket-propelled grenade at a U.S. Army Humvee. Snipers have been hitting troops in Baghdad. Over the weekend, one 1st Armored Division soldier guarding the National Museum was shot and killed, and another one died in a similar attack at Baghdad University.

With the two weekend deaths, the U.S. toll grew to 209, including 70 troops killed since President Bush declared the war over May 1.

Overall, say some U.S. soldiers at fixed points such as road checkpoints and outposts, the attacks are far more widespread and persistent than is reflected in the casualty figures. The attacks tend to focus on more vulnerable parts of the military, such as isolated checkpoints and slow-moving convoys.

In another worrisome development, Iraqis who are working with the U.S. occupation force are being targeted. On July 5, seven new police officers who were graduating from a training academy were killed by a bomb.

Roberts, who just returned from a congressional trip to Iraq, said it is essential for the U.S. effort to capture or kill deposed Iraqi President Saddam Hussein. "Not only is he aiming at Americans, but now he is aiming at Iraqis, who will cooperate," said Roberts. "So it's a big-ticket item for us... The next hundred days are very, very critical."

U.S. agrees to free Turks, cooling spat

BY JAMES C. HELICKE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

The United States agreed on Sunday to release 11 Turkish special forces detained in northern Iraq, a Turkish official said, ending a standoff that strained efforts by the NATO allies to repair relations frayed over the Iraq war.

The Turkish soldiers would spend the night at a guest house in Baghdad and would be handed over to Turkish officials in Sulaymaniyah "at daylight" today, the high-level government official said on condition of anonymity.

The private CNN-Turk and NTV news channels had reported that the soldiers were released in Baghdad. But the official told the Associated Press that security concerns and weather conditions barred them from traveling to Sulaymaniyah on Sunday night.

A U.S. official could not confirm the Turkish soldiers' release; the State Department did not immediately return phone calls seeking comment.

The announcement came after a bustle of diplomacy that included telephone calls between Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan and U.S. Vice President Dick Cheney as well as another between U.S. Secretary of State Colin Powell and Foreign Minister Abdullah Gul.

Turkey and the United States also held talks on the return of the Turkish special forces in Sulaymaniyah late Sunday.

special forces on July 4 in the northern Iraqi city of Sulaymaniyah outraged Turkey and deepened the public's mistrust of the United States.

Turkey has long had thousands of its soldiers in parts of northern Iraq to fight autonomy-seeking Kurdish rebels who have launched attacks against Turkey from bases in northern Iraq.

After the U.S.-led invasion of Iraq, it also sent military advisers there to keep watch on Iraqi Kurds. Turkey fears that increasing Kurdish power in northern Iraq could encourage Kurdish rebels to revive fighting in Turkey's predominantly Kurdish southeast.

In the Sulaymaniyah raid, troops from the 173rd Airborne took the Turkish special forces and others into custody over an alleged plot to harm Iraqi civilian officials in the north, a Bush administration official said earlier Sunday.

The official said on the condition of anonymity that some had subsequently been released. A total of 24 — including nine Turkish soldiers — remained in U.S. custody and had been taken to Baghdad, the official said.

Republican lawsuit a waste of money in budget crisis

In Iowa these days, one party's partisan witch-hunt is another party's noble defense of the hallowed Constitution.

Semantics aside, a party-line vote has commenced what will most likely become a lawsuit against Gov. Tom Vilsack.

Last week, the state Legislative Council, which conducts business between legislative sessions, voted 14-9 to authorize the hiring of a law firm to advise state lawmakers as a preliminary measure for potential litigation.

This move is relatively unsurprising. Republican lawmakers, including House Speaker Christopher Rants, had publicly stated their intention to sue Vilsack if he did not flatly accept or reject the economic-stimulus bill, which was approved in a special legislative session.

The governor has been accused by some lawmakers of exceeding his legal authority by vetoing specific items.

Among other provisions of the bill, which was designed to bolster the state economy and establish a $503 million economic-development fund, Vilsack removed a $310 million income-tax cut, along with regulatory changes affecting compensation for injured workers.

Under the state Constitution, governors have the power to nix individual items from bills that specifically appropriate money.

Vilsack contends that this power allows him to reject measures that could affect his handling of the budget and that the items vetoed from the bill fall under this category.

Republican lawmakers refute this, along with criticisms that the motives for legal action have more to do with inter-party squabbling than the welfare of the state.

According to House Majority Leader Chuck Gipp, R-Decorah, "This is a matter of separation of powers between the executive branch and the legislative branch. It's not Democrats versus Republicans."

The conduct of some lawmakers, however, strains the validity of such an assertion.

Most notably, the rejection of a $200,000 spending cap for legal fees suggests that winning the lawsuit might be more important than clarifying an important constitutional provision.

Vilsack has an irrefutable responsibility to uphold the Iowa Constitution. As such, legislators are right to question potentially dubious actions of the governor in the matter.

However, in these troubled economic times, state funds should not be used frivolously. With the plethora of lawyers involved in Iowa politics, perhaps some noble figure might have offered their services pro bono in the interest of seeing justice served. Had a spending limit been approved, state lawmakers would have more clearly demonstrated a motivation to work purely for the good of the state.

Sodomy reactions

I'd like to take a moment to congratulate our Supreme Court on its decision on gay sex and to also give a quick smug grin to that wonderful "country" of Texas. I realize that many would consider me a naive, liberal college kid for saying this, but it seems to me that this country has bigger, more life-threatening, and more dangerous issues to deal with — none of which include deciding whether it should be legal for two people to show their love for each other in the privacy of their own home. But maybe that's only me. Spread the love.

Julia Slocum

I believe The Daily Iowan has effectively "Jayson Blair-ed" a recent editorial about the Supreme Court's ruling on the Lawrence v. Texas decision. The disregard for research and the Constitution has me floored.

Once again, liberals (the DI included) have sought to discredit and demonize Justice Antonin Scalia by branding him "intolerant" and "immoral." This wasn't Scalia's opportunity to deny homosexuals "civil rights" and "right to privacy" — it was an opportunity to uphold the Constitution and states' rights. Scalia's argument centered on the liberty of the states to enact or repeal laws as they see fit and not the Supreme Court to be the nation's city council and sex police. And, if sodomy is now "protected" under the Constitution, what's next — bigamy and incest?

The ramifications will be profound. It goes to show that legislative and judicial bodies walk a fine line with regard to legislating morality. It is not the Supreme Court's function to be an "agenda setter," which the homosexual community has acknowledged that this recent decision is.

Blown call

Often, I think that if President Bush ran into a burning building and saved 50 orphans, puppies, and kittens, the Daily Iowan editorial board would find a reason to criticize him for it. Now, I am certain this is true.

The do-not-call registry established by President Bush and the FTC has given people a way to say "stop with the freaking cold calls already!" Thank you, Prez. I appreciate it.

I respect the hard-working people employed by telemarketing industry, but their employers have crapped in their own nest. The industry had an effective tool for marketing to people directly in their homes, and it abused it. The people who stand to lose their jobs were hired into an overinflated industry, built on the snake oil of a machine that can dial 50,000 numbers per hour. Ever wonder why there is a delay between when you answer the phone and when an actual human being starts her or his sales pitch? It's the machine yelling to the call center, "Sucker on line two!"

Sometimes there isn't even a relay to a live person. Ever get that guy on your answering machine or voice mail who wants to consolidate your debt? In a tone designed to make you feel like a complete loser, he says, "I'm really surprised you haven't called." Yeah, I thought so. This is the industry the editorial board wants to keep around until the economy perks up.

Since the invention of that infernal machine, telemarketing has been a giant Ponzi scheme destined to evaporate when people learned they were not bound by social mores to talk to these people. Busted dot-com and telecom industry alumni can relate. They were also hired into over-expanded industries built on the promise of technological advancement. Then they found out a bunch of other people had exactly the same idea, and the profits were not infinite.

Yes, I thought twice about submitting my number to the list. I thought about submitting my number twice for good measure.

Hope dies, and that's why I'm here

Bob Hope is going to die. On May 29, Bob celebrated his 100th birthday, but amid the festivities, no one thought about the obvious question: Who will take his place?

Throughout his career, Bob was more than just another comedian — he entertained the public, U.S. troops, and, uniquely, every U.S. president since Franklin Delano Roosevelt. I know that Bob is an iconic legend and no one could ever truly replace him, but I believe that I could fulfill his role by maintaining the spirit of his comedy. My watchwords will be affability, tact, and decency, and I will never stray from the high standards that Bob set. So without further ado, I would like to present for your consideration, America, the next clown prince of presidential comedy.

Hey, let's give a big hand to that freak who sings those songs on the piano about the trade-deficit! Wasn't he a boring piece of crap? Wheww.

Let me tell you folks, I just flew into Washington, D.C., and boy, is my asshole tired. You see, George W. Bush's latest ban on racial profiling for federal investigations doesn't include cases involving terrorism. Because I walked into the airport with my brown skin — what was I thinking? — I had a little detour in sunny Guantanamo Bay with intelligence agents anally probing me with a cold lead pipe for 12 hours a day. I'm not sure what they were looking for up there, but now I know why they call it Camp X-ray: After a week of interrogations I can see inside my ribcage by standing on top of a mirror. I apologize in advance if at any point during the show I defecate involuntarily.

We've got a great crowd here tonight. Seriously, give yourselves a hand. Let's take a look into the audience, shall we? Hmmmm ... we've got Bush ... and Dick ... and then there's Colin. Wow, if you add a tub of anal lube and my sixth-grade camp counselor to that list, you don't have an executive cabinet but an inventory of a formative experience from my childhood that left me feeling violated and confused ... and strangely curious. But hey, I've talked enough about involuntary defecation tonight, am I right folks? Am I right?

Ooohh. And there are the Bush daughters. Hello hello. Yes, I'm talking to you. Fellas, are you all thinking what I'm thinking? Yeah: "I'd like to do to them what their father did to Iraq."

Oops, did I hit a nerve? OK, OK, I admit you guys really did have good reasons for shocking and awing Iraq. Your intelligence told you they posed an imminent threat to us, right George? And by "your" intelligence I mean Rumsfeld and his selectively chosen Special Plans group at the Pentagon, not the CIA, State Department, or international information agencies. But now that you've found all those stockpiles of WMDs, you can — what? Oh, you haven't found WMDs yet? No offense George, but after your SAT scores, we probably should have known better than to rely on your intelligence.

Hey, WMDs aren't a big deal, I mean Iraq was part of the war on terror and Saddam had links to Al Qaeda too, right guys? But the U.N. committee on terrorism just released a draft of a report on Al Qaeda that had no mention of any connection to Baghdad. But what do they know, right? I mean it's just the rest of the world, no biggie. Besides, Richard Grenell, a spokesman for the U.S. mission at the United Nations, maintains that Iraq provided some weapons training to Al Qaeda. That very well may be true. It makes perfect sense: Iraq has had 20 years of experience using arms supplied by America, so it would be the perfect resource for Al Qaeda to find out how to use its arms supplied by America. Whoa. Is this thing on?

Don't sweat it, even without WMDs and links to terror, Saddam Hussein was a terrible, horrible tyrant who tortured, oppressed, and murdered his people ... and unlike other terrible, horrible guys who torture, oppress, and murder their people — like Kim Jong Il, who actually has nuclear weapons, by the by — Saddam was also sitting on huge oil reserves, not that it had anything to do with it.

No, this was all for the Iraqi people. Speaking of the Iraqi people, do we have any Iraqis in the audience today? Not sure? Well, if after the Gulf War, Bush Sr. encouraged you to rise up against Saddam, and when the United States provided you no military support, scores of you were killed and forced to live for another 10 years under Saddam's despotic rule ... you might be an Iraqi. If during those 10 years instead of receiving any support or aid from the United States, you suffered even further under the weight of U.S. sanctions, rendering you starving and destitute in addition to politically repressed ... you might be an Iraqi.

That's my time folks, you've been a beautiful audience, tip your waitresses, they're good to you, so you be good to them. If you would like to see me after the show, I'll be out in the rose garden bleeding from a precision head wound delivered by a CIA operative's rifle.

R&B icon White dies

BY ANTHONY BREZNICAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — With his unique baritone — a mix of velvet and gravel — R&B great Barry White was the voice of America's bedroom, his throbbing compositions conspiring with purring vocals to seduce fans for more than three decades.

White, who had kidney failure from years of high blood pressure, died July 4 at age 58. He had been undergoing dialysis and had been hospitalized since a September 2002 stroke.

His songs were infused with sexually charged verbal foreplay, such as on 1975's "Love Serenade," which began with the low, intimate whisper: "I want you the way you came into the world, I don't want to feel no clothes ..."

Although his popularity peaked with several disco hits in the 1970s, White's music was introduced to a new generation by sample-hungry rappers. He received belated recognition for his work in 2000, when he won his first two Grammys, for best male and traditional R&B vocal performance for the song "Staying Power."

Don Cornelius, the founder of the "Soul Train" TV show, remembered White as "a true master."

"There was no match for Barry White. His music is just going to live forever," Cornelius said. "It's not limited to disco or soul or hip-hop or anything."

He said White's lyrics were directed toward his second wife, Glodean James.

"Love was a very important aspect of his life," Cornelius said. "He had this tremendous love for the lady. He wasn't just singing for your mate and your bedroom, he was singing and writing for his own bedroom."

When Cornelius visited White in the hospital two months ago, the singer was almost completely incapacitated.

"The man really suffered," Cornelius said. "At times he was full of tubes. If it wasn't for the fact that he was an abnormally strong man, he would've been gone a long time ago."

Born Sept. 12, 1944, in Galveston, Texas, to a single mother, White and his younger brother, Darryl, spent most of their childhood in South Central Los Angeles. He said he had a lifelong love for music. During his early teenage years, he began singing in a Baptist church choir and was quickly promoted to director.

He was jailed at age 16 for stealing tires, a punishment he credited with helping him straighten out his life and dedicate his efforts to music.

White joined the Upfronts soul group as bass singer and cut six singles. For several years, he stayed away from performing and focused on work behind the scenes as a songwriter and producer.

He married a childhood sweetheart, identified only as Mary in his autobiography, and fathered four children with her before they separated in 1969 and later divorced.

White discovered the female trio Love Unlimited — which included his future second wife, James — and produced their million-selling 1972 single "Walkin' in the Rain With the One I Love."

The next year, White returned to performing with the song "I'm Gonna Love You Just a Little More Baby," which topped the R&B chart and hit No. 3 on the pop chart.

He is credited by some for helping launch the disco phenomenon with his orchestral "Love's Theme" in 1973, which he conducted with his group, the Love Unlimited Orchestra.

In 1974, his album Can't Get Enough climbed to the top of the pop charts on the strength of the signature hits "Can't Get Enough of Your Love, Babe" and "You're the First, the Last, My Everything."

That year he also married James. The couple had four children together and collaborated on the 1981 album Barry &

Glodean, which featured the songs "I Want You" and "You're the Only One for Me." They divorced in 1988, but he said they always remained good friends.

White suffered a family tragedy in 1983 when his brother, Darryl, was shot and killed in a dispute with a neighbor over change from a $20 bill. In his 1999 autobiography, Love Unlimited: Insights on Life and Love, White said music likely spared him a similar fate.

After working on more than a dozen albums in the 1970s, his career waned over the next decade as he attempted small comebacks with the albums The Right Night & Barry White (1987) and The Man is Back! (1989).

He enjoyed a larger resurgence with 1994 album The Icon Is Love, and his ballad "Practice What You Preach" became his first No. 1 hit in 17 years. Toward the end of the 1990s, his songs were regularly featured on the Fox comedy series "Ally McBeal," and he made an appearance on the show as himself.

His single "Staying Power," off a 1999 album of the same name, won White two Grammys and proved he hadn't tamed his libidinous lyrics. "Put on my favorite dress, the one that oozes sexiness," he cooed in the title track's opening lines.

That year, White's chronic blood pressure forced him to cancel several live performances with the group Earth, Wind & Fire, and he was briefly hospitalized.

White's survivors include eight children, grandchildren, and his companion, Catherine Denton.

FILM REVIEW

28 Days Later

When: 1:15, 4, 7:15, 9:40 p.m.
Where: Campus 3 ★★★ out of ★★★★★

Ever since I was young I've been fascinated by zombie horror films. I've seen a number of superb ones (Dawn of the Dead, Night of the Living Dead) and quite a few awful ones (Zombie, Children Shouldn't Play With Dead Things). There have been successful satires of zombie films (Return of the Living Dead), as well as ill-advised ones (Dead Alive).

28 Days Later falls somewhere in the middle of this spectrum. It lacks the brilliance (and the zombies) of Dawn of the Dead, but it certainly isn't so shoddy or rushed as Resident Evil. One could even make a case that 28 Days Later isn't a zombie film at all.

It begins with a group of eco-terrorists liberating some monkeys from a medical lab. The monkeys, however, carry a virus that causes them to go berserk. The monkeys expectedly attack their supposed liberators, and thus the virus is unleashed.

The title card "28 days later ..." appears, and from here we are introduced to Jim (Cillian Murphy), a bike courier who has just awoken from a coma and finds himself alone in London. He wanders about finding bits and pieces of information that clue him in to a recent epidemic and a subsequent evacuation of the city.

As the film progresses, Jim encounters other survivors: Selena (Naomie Harris), a callous young woman who claims she'd kill Jim in a heartbeat if he were ever infected, and Frank (Brendan Gleeson) and his daughter, Hannah (Megan Burns), who have barricaded themselves in their high-rise apartment building.

Some of the best moments of the film come at the beginning. The shots of a deserted London are wonderful. But when Jim does finally encounter some zombies, the film reveals a rather interesting spin on the genre.

Film: 28 Days Later
Director: Danny Boyle
Writer: Alex Garland
Starring: Cillian Murphy, Naomie Harris, Megan Burns, Christopher Eccleston, Brendan Gleeson
Length: 108 minutes
Rated: R

Instead of sticking to the classic zombie formula of slow-moving masses of living dead, 28 Days Later creates rather agile zombies that don't lethargically lurch after their prey so much as they leap through windows, startling their unsuspecting victims (as well as the audience). The agility of these infected zombies causes the movie to lose some of the essence of typical horror films.

Sure, the past zombies were slow and dim-witted, but there were so many of them that it hardly mattered. Nothing can be more terrifying than a scene in which a horde of these creatures surround a helpless victim. 28 Days Later lacks that element of horror.

In addition, once infected by a zombie, humans transform into zombies in a matter of seconds rather than the gradual transformation explored in traditional zombie films. This creates a truly tense atmosphere that constantly challenges the audience's expectations.

The film is brilliantly written and cast. The characters intended to evoke sympathy are truly well-constructed. We know and understand them.

Unlike lesser horror films in which we sit around waiting for annoying characters to meet their demise, in 28 Days Later, we want the characters to live. This creates an immense tension throughout the film, which is accentuated when someone we like becomes infected because the other characters must destroy her or him within a matter of seconds.

The film is stunningly thrilling but ultimately falls short as a zombie flick. There simply aren't enough zombies, and the film seems more content to explore the human drama.

If you're looking for a classic zombie film, rent Night of the Living Dead. If you're looking for a tense thriller, maybe you should give 28 Days Later a try.

Suicide blasts enrage Putin

BY SUSAN B. GLASSER
WASHINGTON POST

MOSCOW — A day after a double suicide attack killed 13 rock fans at an outdoor concert here, President Vladimir Putin canceled a foreign trip Sunday and denounced the attack, which authorities have blamed on Chechen rebels, as a "bloody and vile crime" meant to "sow fear, suspicion, and ethnic intolerance."

The deadly explosions on the afternoon of July 5 just outside an airfield packed with as many as 40,000 young concert-goers reinforced fears of the capital's vulnerability to terrorist attacks, and authorities visibly ratcheted up security.

The day before the attack, Putin had signed a decree setting presidential elections for Chechnya on Oct. 5. Soon after the explosions, Interior Minister Boris Gryzlov linked the two events, suggesting the two female suicide bombers were trying to disrupt elections that Putin says will bring "normalcy" to Chechnya after nearly a decade of on-again, off-again war.

A Kremlin spokesman said Putin, who canceled a trip to Uzbekistan and Malaysia because of the explosions, had no intention of changing his Chechnya policy. "Every time they explode something, they try to cause a harsh reaction of the government in Chechnya," said the spokesman, Alexander Machevsky. "We are not going to do any harsh reaction. We are going to move on with the political process."

The Kremlin has argued that the wave of suicide attacks linked to Chechens in recent months signals a new phase in the long-running conflict, as rebels no longer capable of waging open battle against Russian troops in the republic turn to terrorist activities with help from foreign sponsors.

"It's possible that Chechens will become intolerant of such actions, but not anytime soon," said Sergei Khaikin, a sociologist who has conducted extensive polling in Chechnya over the past five months. Still, he said, his research for the Public Opinion Fund found that only around 10 percent of Chechens generally supported such tactics; almost half condemned them, and 34 percent were "trying to find an explanation for their actions."

The death toll in the July 5 bombings was revised downward to 13, in addition to the two attackers, one of whom was tentatively identified as a 20-year-old Chechen. Authorities said 11 victims died at the scene, and two died at a hospital. Dozens were wounded, and nearly 50 people remained in the hospital this afternoon, city health officials announced. Gryzlov and other officials said the toll would have been much higher if the suicide bombers had managed to get inside the festival.

It was the first deadly attack in Moscow since October 2002, when Chechen guerrillas took a theater audience hostage and 129 hostages died, mostly from the results of a knockout gas used by authorities to end the standoff.

For grieving families and shocked concert-goers, Sunday was a chance to try to understand why the women had targeted a rock festival drawing mostly teenagers and young adults.

"To wage war against kids at a rock concert is just idiotic," said Oleg Ifmagilov, a bass guitarist in the group Va Bank, which played at the festival before the explosions. He pointed out that many of the musicians were activists against the war and said the Chechen separatists would only damage their cause by targeting young people.

Valentina Popkova, who lost her 21-year-old daughter, Anna, said they had never backed the government's decision to go to war in Chechnya — "Of course I don't support it," she said, "how could you?" — but was now overwhelmed by the idea that the war had come to Moscow.

"Young people can't go anywhere anymore; it's become scary to live in Moscow," she said. Anna, an environmental-engineering student, had been planning for weeks to go to the concert with three friends. They were in the ticket line when the explosion went off nearby; only one of them survived.

"She was my only daughter," said Popkova, who learned of her daughter's death on television late on July 5 after fruitlessly searching the hospitals.

Death penalty roils Puerto Rico

BY MICHAEL MELIA
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — By all accounts, the crime was horrific. Kidnappers demanding a $1 million ransom killed and dismembered a suburban grocer in 1998 after his family alerted police.

Now, federal prosecutors in this U.S. territory are seeking the death penalty for the accused killers, a strategy that is stoking debate about the Caribbean island's relationship with the United States. That debate already has reached the U.S. Supreme Court.

Most people here contend that seeking the death penalty in the trial, which starts today, infringes on Puerto Ricans' right to self-government and violates their constitutional ban on capital punishment. Puerto Rico carried out its last execution in 1927.

"It's not right for the U.S. to impose a law that Puerto Ricans had no hand in crafting," said territorial Sen. Fernando Martin, a member of the Independence Party.

The island's 4 million people are American citizens, but they have no vote in Congress.

The Puerto Rico Bar Association, two anti-death penalty groups, and defense attorneys also argued that the death penalty could not be sought because the island's Constitution banned it. Their argument ultimately was rejected by the U.S. Supreme Court, which ruled that the island is subject to federal law.

"We do not believe in capital punishment, and we feel that what has happened is an affront to our relationship [with the United States]," said Arturo Luis Davila-Toro, the president of the Puerto Rico Bar Association.

Gov. Sila Calderon, who has called capital punishment immoral, said it would be inappropriate for her to intervene. However, her mentor, former Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon, said the case exemplifies why his political party seeks more self-governing powers in the commonwealth's current arrangement with Washington.

Hector "Gordo" Acosta Martinez and Joel Rivera Alejandro are accused of kidnapping Jorge Hernandez Diaz during the night of Feb. 11, 1998, as he left his store in the San Juan suburb of Rio Piedras. The grocer's kidnappers warned he would be killed and "cut to pieces" if his family notified authorities or refused to pay the ransom.

When they learned police were investigating, the kidnappers shot the grocer, hacked off his head and limbs, and dumped the body parts along a road.

The defendants are charged with first-degree murder and extortion.

This is the first of 59 cases in Puerto Rico in which federal prosecutors have invoked the 1994 Federal Death Penalty Act, which broadened the range of crimes punishable by death.

Puerto Rico abolished capital punishment in 1929, two years after farmworker Pascual Ramos was executed for beheading his boss with a machete. The U.S. military government had executed a total of 23 people — mostly poor, illiterate, and black — since American troops seized the island in 1898 during the Spanish-American War.

Chief U.S. District Judge Hector Laffitte has imposed a gag order on prosecutors and defense attorneys involved in the case.

But Rivera Alejandro's lawyer, Rafael Castro Lang, has argued that the case should be taken out of federal court, saying it is there only because prosecutors contend the grocer was involved in interstate commerce.

The U.S. Supreme Court became involved after Puerto Rican Judge Salvador Casellas in 2000 ruled in favor of an argument by the suspects' defense attorneys, the bar association, and anti-death penalty groups.

The judge agreed that applying the death penalty would violate Puerto Rico's Constitution and the federal statute concerning its status as a self-governing entity.

However, that decision was overturned a year later by the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston, which ruled that Puerto Rico is subject to federal law. The U.S. Supreme Court upheld that decision.

If Acosta Martinez and Rivera Alejandro are convicted and sentenced to death, they will not be executed in Puerto Rico, prosecutors have said. Rather, they will die by lethal injection at the federal penitentiary in Terre Haute, Ind.

The festival also rises

PAMPLONA, Spain (AP) — In a burst of streamers, champagne, flying eggs, and tooting horns, Pamplona erupted Sunday with the start of what will be nine days of raucous partying for the annual San Fermin bull-running festival.

Tens of thousands of people, many in the traditional white shirt and trousers with red bandanna, crammed into the town hall square and surrounding alleys for the "chupinazo," the noontime firecrackers that herald more than 200 hours of revelry in this northern Spanish city.

"It's mental, completely mental," said Kate Berg of Melbourne, Australia. "I got lifted up in the crowd. I'm still shaking."

The festival, popularized by Ernest Hemingway's 1926 novel The Sun Also Rises, has been held since 1591. The descriptions of drunken abandon turned what had been a local affair into one of the world's most-famous parties.

Phil and Pam Bourjaily, Iowa City residents their whole lives, while not big jazz fans, did stroll downtown to tour the sights during the festival.

"It's neat to see people out," Phil Bourjaily said. "There's a great atmosphere."

Although he loves every minute of the festival, Grismore said, he realizes that he can't be festival director forever, with the job such a huge undertaking. Instead, he hopes to establish a solid financial and organizational structure for the fest so he can finally step down as director.

"I'm a musician," he said. "I want to get back to playing again."

Israel OKs release of Palestinians

the rule of Palestinian Prime Minister Mahmoud Abbas, who has vowed to carry out the U.S.-backed "road map" peace plan.

A top Palestinian official, however, expressed disappointment at the limited release. Radical groups, whose members are not slated for release, immediately condemned it.

The United States and Israel are strongly backing Abbas, also known as Abu Mazen, as an alternative to Yasser Arafat and as a Palestinian leader they believe can crack down on radical groups and help bring peace.

"All professional assessments which were submitted to Prime Minister Sharon indicated that releasing prisoners is likely to significantly contribute to the strengthening of Palestinian Prime Minister Abu Mazen, with whom we are negotiating," Israel's Cabinet said in a statement agreeing to the release.

"A strong Palestinian administration will be able to act more effectively against terror, and therefore, Israel has a strong interest," the statement said.

Sunday's Cabinet decision excludes members of such militant groups as Hamas and Islamic Jihad that oppose peace with Israel and excludes Palestinians who carried out or planned violent attacks against Israelis. Hamas, Islamic Jihad, and Arafat's Fatah movement are observing a cease-fire of at least three months.

It was unclear how many prisoners would be released, but Sharon met earlier Sunday with Avi Dichter, the head of the Shin Bet security service, who presented him with a list of several hundred prisoners slated for release. Israel's Channel 2 TV said 400 would be released.

In Israel, the arrest of militants has been credited with helping to reduce terror attacks, and the Cabinet vote was controversial. The ministers first deadlocked 10-10 and only confirmed the measure 13-9 after the Cabinet agreed to set up a committee to monitor Palestinian compliance with the peace plan, Tourism Minister Benny Elon said.

"The release would be carried out in tightly supervised, small, and measured doses in relation to proven Palestinian actions in the security sphere; in other words, if terror continues and there is no genuine Palestinian effort to fight and eliminate it, the releases will stop," Sharon said after the Cabinet meeting.

Defense Minister Shaul Mofaz said the releases will not begin immediately.

"I think that it will take some time before the committee convenes and makes decisions," Mofaz said.

Palestinian security chief Mohammed Dahlan said he was disappointed that the releases will be so limited.

Jones known for promoting rights

them to be successful," he said, adding that you can never stop hoping, a lesson he learned from his mother, who is now 91 years old and suffering from Alzheimer's disease.

Jones started at the University of Illinois-Chicago in the late 1950s and earned a degree in physical education with a GPA close to 3.0 from the University of Illinois-Champaign in 1963.

While in college, he met his wife of 39 years, Jo Lavera, who is the business manager of the UI Museum of Art.

After college, he was a counselor at a neighborhood center, trying to prevent gangs from expanding to Chicago's North Side, and a physical trainer at the University of Illinois before he enrolled at the UI in 1965 to earn a master's degree in physical education.

His life took a turn toward the unexpected when he began teaching psychology the following school year at North High School in Flint, Mich.

The year was tumultuous, he said, recalling a riot in the schoolyard on April 4, 1968 — the day the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated.

Jones said he was ordered by the principal to calm the rioters, and he himself was arrested for interfering with an arrest when he tried to stop two police officers from beating one of his students.

Soon after the incident in Flint, he returned to the UI to help recruit minority students and also earn his Ph.D. in higher-education administration and student development. He said he felt the need to learn more about higher education and administration to be able to do an effective job.

Paul Retish, a professor in the College of Education who has known Jones since he first came to the university, said Jones has a strong personality and is devoted to diversity and equality and getting things accomplished.

"He's got a huge commitment to get things done and get them done correctly," Retish said.

As a top administrator, Jones is forced to make difficult and sometimes controversial decisions — such as canceling a Snoop Dogg concert a few years ago and sending out letters to parents of students with alcohol violations.

Jones said he does not regret any of his decisions but added that some choices could have been better.

"(Jones) is in a position to make decisions that cannot be universally popular," said UI President David Skorton, adding that the nature of Jones' job makes him controversial because he faces hard issues.

Retish agreed that Jones' job involves controversial issues, adding that Jones is a very forthright person.

"It's his job to say no as well as yes, and all people who are in a position to say no become controversial," Retish said. "It's the nature of his job."

Jones, however, disagrees. "I don't think I am controversial; other people think I am," he said, adding that he does not know why the ideas he puts forth seem to draw attention. Jones has once again drawn attention with the university's proposal for a new policy that will notify parents of student drug and alcohol abuse in the university's residence halls.

The new policy will go into effect this fall; it will register in the student's disciplinary file any abuses of the no-tolerance rule in the dorms. Depending on the infringement, a student can face probation or expulsion from the dorms or from the university, Jones said, adding that he fully supports the plan.

Jones said one of the contributions he is most proud of was helping to create the Special Support Services in 1970, which was designed to help students achieve equal success.

Above all, Jones said, he wants to continue the legacy of the university's commitment to human rights that people such as Sandy Boyd, the former interim president, Philip Hubbard, a former UI vice president, and Skorton have embraced.

After all the decision-making at work and getting some mud under his nails in the garden, Jones doesn't have any big post-retirement plans. He said only that he will continue to strive for excellence in everything he does.

"I will keep doing it until I get it right," he said.

Avalanche of applicants buries local businesses

ECONOMY

The Summit Restaurant & Bar, 10 S. Clinton St., placed an ad three weeks ago in The Daily Iowan advertising three to four positions. The one-day ad reeled in 61 applicants, 55 of whom were college students, said Brad Norton, the establishment's co-general manager.

The trend he notices during the summer is that some students often try to find second jobs, he said.

"They don't want to spend seven days at the beach," he said. Jim Bell, the owner of the Deadwood, 6 S. Dubuque St., says that the surplus of applications is fairly normal, but, he said, he's had more applications in the past.

"During the school year, I sometimes get 80 to 100 applications," he said, adding that although interviewing each applicant is a lengthy process, he enjoys meeting students.

Gilda Six, the owner of Gilda Imports, 30 S. Clinton St., was overwhelmed with applications when she placed an ad on Jobnet.

"In three days, we had 29 applicants. Every day after that, we would get four or five applications," she said, adding that people submitted so many applications that she had to cancel her ad, which was scheduled to run for a month. After removing the ad, applications still came in.

"It looks like Iowa City is doing OK in the economy," said Six, adding that she thinks that so many students like Iowa City so much that when summer rolls around, some of them don't want to leave, forcing them to find a job.

"I feel luckier than some of my friends," said Kelly McConnaha, 21, who was recently hired at Gilda Imports.

UI junior Erin Simandl has been looking for jobs since the end of the school year and has submitted applications to Victoria's Secret, Abercrombie, and the Summit, just to name a few. She plans to apply for more jobs in the weeks to come but will continue to participate in psychology experiments sporadically.

"The economy might be fine, but I may just be too picky," she said about her ongoing hunt for a job.

quote of the day

For the president to say, 'Bring it on,' almost like daring and provoking Iraqis to kill American soldiers, he sounds more like a gang leader in South Central L.A. than one that is trying to institute a policy of democracy and reconstruction in the world.

Signs that your summer job sucks

- Inconsiderate supervisors seem to frown upon your lunchtime boozing!
- Your company believes in traditional, time-honored practices, which unfortunately means that you are paid in chickens and textiles rather than currency.
- Although you are now the night-shift manager at Taco Bell, nobody will refer to you as "commandante" and light your cigars.
- You're learning a lot, and it's a lot about manure.
- You've been asked to oversee a new project, which would be nice if your title wasn't "interim President of Iraq."
- Finally, you landed a big PR internship. You just wish it wasn't for the J. Geils Band.
- Your desires to bed buxom babes and drink the town dry make you kinda wish that you hadn't become a Catholic priest.
- The good news is that you've mastered the intricacies of license-plate printing. The bad news is that your parole hearing isn't for another two years.
- This outdoor "gardening" job isn't quite what your friend Miguel made it out to be.

Woods coasts to win at Western Open

LEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Even Jack Nicklaus, Ben Hogan, and Arnold Palmer couldn't match this.

Tiger Woods cruised to victory Sunday in the 100th Western Open, his 38th career victory on the PGA Tour and fourth of the season. It marks his fifth-straight year with at least four victories, a feat no one else has managed.

And this is a guy who some say is in a slump?

Hogan, Palmer, Tom Watson, and Lloyd Mangrum had four-straight years with four or more victories.

The victory also made Woods the fifth three-time winner at the Western, the oldest stop on the PGA Tour. Hogan, Nicklaus, and Palmer each won the Western twice.

The gaudy numbers don't stop there. Woods shot a 69 Sunday, giving him 21-under 267 for the tournament. That matches the tournament record set in 2001 by Scott Hoch.

Woods missed an 11-footer on the 18th that would have given him the record on his own. The crowd cheered when he putted out, but he still looked a little subdued.

Woods led the entire tournament, the first wire-to-wire winner at the Western since Nick Price in 1993. It's the fifth wire-to-wire victory in Woods' career.

He finished five strokes ahead of Rich Beem, the 13th time he's won by four strokes or better.

U.S. Women's Open goes to playoff

NORTH PLAINS, Ore. (AP) — A shocking collapse by Annika Sorenstam gave way to the first three-way playoff in 16 years at the U.S. Women's Open.

Angela Stanford holed a 20-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole, Kelly Robbins birdied two of the last three holes, and Hilary Lunke had to settle for par in a dramatic ending Sunday to a national championship that will go one more day.

They finished at 1-under 283 and will return this morning for 18 more holes.

Sorenstam won't be joining them. The best player in women's golf was poised to win after a perfect drive on the par-5 18th hole, leaving her 236 yards away and making birdie seem like a done deal. Instead, she hit into the trees and into a bunker and finished with a bogey.

Sorenstam learned all about pressure two months ago at Colonial as the first woman in 58 years to play on the PGA Tour. It didn't pay off at Pumpkin Ridge.

Bryant arrested on sex-assault charge

BY COLLEEN SLEVIN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bryant

After a series of interviews and a review of the physical evidence, investigators met with representatives for District Attorney Mark Hurlbert and concluded they had enough evidence for the felony sexual-assault count, the sheriff's office said in a statement.

"During the investigation, Bryant was cooperative with investigators and remains cooperative with authorities," the sheriff's office said.

Judge Russell Granger ordered the case sealed. Attempts to reach Bryant for comment were not immediately successful.

"These allegations are completely out of character of the Kobe Bryant we know," Lakers general manager Mitch Kupchak said in a statement. "For the seven years he's been with us, he has been one of the finest young men we've known and a wonderful asset to both our team and our community."

"However, since this is a legal matter being handled by the authorities in Colorado, we must refrain from further comment at this time."

Bryant was the NBA's second-leading scorer last season, averaging a career-best 30 points a game. He scored 40 or more points in nine-straight games in February and also had career-high averages of 6.9 rebounds and 5.9 assists while playing in each of the Lakers' 82 games.

The Lakers were eliminated from the Western Conference semifinals by the San Antonio Spurs, ending Los Angeles' run of three straight NBA championships.

Bryant underwent shoulder surgery on June 12 in New York. The Lakers expect he'll be ready by the start of training camp in October.

Bryant married Vanessa Laine in April 2001. Bryant and his parents recently mended a rift that developed when he became engaged to Laine when she was an 18-year-old high-school student.

Laine gave birth to their first child, Natalia Diamante Bryant, in January.

Braves 7, Expos 5

ATLANTA (AP) — Chipper Jones hit two home runs, and Mike Hampton bounced back from two shaky starts to lead the Atlanta Braves past the Montreal Expos on Sunday.

Hampton also had two hits, including his first homer of the season. Javy Lopez had a two-run single in the fifth to give Atlanta the lead for good.

Hampton (4-5) went seven innings and retired 12 of the last 15 batters he faced. He gave up nine hits and was charged with all four runs.

Brewers 3, Rockies 1

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Richie Sexson's two-run double in the seventh inning helped Ben Sheets and the Milwaukee Brewers avoid a sweep with a victory over the Colorado Rockies on Sunday.

With two outs in the seventh, Sexson sent a full-count pitch from Jose Jimenez (0-5) off the right-field wall to break a 1-1 tie.

Sheets (7-6) gave up one run on four hits over seven innings. He struck out six and his one walk was intentional. Dan Kolb pitched a perfect eighth and Mike DeJean struck out two in the ninth for his 17th save.

Giants 3, Padres 2

SAN DIEGO (AP) — J.T. Snow hit an RBI single with two outs in the ninth inning, and the San Francisco Giants won on Sunday to take two of three from the San Diego Padres.

The Giants started their winning rally with one out when Yorvit Torrealba's sharp grounder glanced off the glove of third baseman Sean Burroughs and rolled into left field for a single. Neifi Perez followed with a single off Luther Hackman (2-2) before Ray Durham struck out. Mike Matthews came on and allowed Snow's grounder up the middle that scored Torrealba.

Felix Rodriguez (5-0) got the last out of the eighth for the win and Tim Worrell pitched the ninth for his 20th save.

Royals 5, Tigers 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Jose Lima allowed two hits over seven innings Sunday to lead the Kansas City Royals over the Detroit Tigers.

Lima (4-0) gave up two runs and five walks in seven innings and struck out five. He loaded the bases on a single and two walks in the first inning, then walked Eric Munson, forcing in a run.

Munson also homered in the fourth.

Mike MacDougal pitched the ninth for his 24th save.

Blue Jays 5, Orioles 3

BALTIMORE (AP) — Eric Hinske hit two homers, and Chris Woodward singled in the tiebreaking run in the 10th inning as the Toronto Blue Jays rallied to defeat the Baltimore Orioles Sunday.

Hinske went 4-5 with two doubles. Greg Myers also homered as Toronto won for only the second time in nine games.

Toronto trailed, 3-1, in the ninth before Myers led off with a home run. One out later, Hinske tied it with a drive to center that glanced off the glove of a leaping Luis Matos.

Marlins 6, Phillies 3

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mark Redman pitched his second-straight complete game, and Juan

Encarnacion homered and drove in three runs as the Florida Marlins completed their first sweep in Philadelphia with a win over the Phillies.

Juan Pierre went 3-3 with two runs scored and Ivan Rodriguez drove in a pair for the Marlins.

Jim Thome and David Bell homered for the Phillies.

Florida took a 3-0 lead in the first against Randy Wolf (9-4) capped by Encarnacion's two-run homer and prolonged by second baseman's Placido Polanco's fielding error.

Florida extended its lead to 6-2 in the third with consecutive RBI doubles by Castillo and Rodriguez and a sacrifice fly by Encarnacion.

Diamondbacks 2, Dodgers 1

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rookie Andrew Good allowed an unearned run in six sharp innings as the Arizona Diamondbacks beat Hideo Nomo and the Los Angeles Dodgers on Sunday night.

Shea Hillenbrand was 3-for-4 with a double and scored Arizona's second run on Lyle Overbay's sacrifice fly.

Good (4-2) allowed just four hits, striking out six and walking two.

Sosa, Clemens don't make the cut

ALL-STARS

But after the final rush of voting, Pujols led with 2,030,702, followed by Bonds (1,919,116), Sheffield (1,533,278), and Sosa (1,390,355).

"Sometimes when this kind of situation happens, it happens for a reason," Sosa said. "I'm very happy for him ... I'll be there next year."

Pujols had a hard time believing it. "I was shocked because I finished fourth in the voting coming into today," he said.

NL manager Dusty Baker, Sosa's manager on the Cubs, decided to bypass his top star. "Because Sammy wasn't voted by the players or by the fans ... I think it might be a good idea that Sammy use this break and go underground," Baker said.

None of the big milestone players made it: Clemens got his 300th win and 4,000th strikeout, and Sosa and Rafael Palmeiro hit their 500th homers.

Several big names won't be at the game because of injuries —

Randy Johnson, Curt Schilling, Mike Piazza, Vladimir Guerrero, and Trevor Hoffman.

Also not selected were slumping stars — Derek Jeter, Greg Maddux, Tom Glavine, and reigning AL MVP Miguel Tejada.

Elected to start in the AL were Delgado at first, Alfonso Soriano at second, Rodriguez at shortstop, Glaus at third, Jorge Posada at catcher, Edgar Martinez at designated hitter, and Ichiro Suzuki, Manny Ramirez, and Matsui in the outfield.

Matsui was a nine-time All-Star in Japan.

"It certainly is different from the others because it's a different country. It will be a lasting memory," he said through an interpreter.

Two of the three AL starting outfielders are from Japan.

"I met Mr. Matsui when I was 17 and in high school. I don't think either of us could have imagined being on the same field at the All-Star game," said Seattle's Suzuki. "It's very significant and meaningful."

NL starters are Todd Helton at first, Giles at second, Renteria at shortstop, Scott Rolen at third, Lopez at catcher, and Pujols, Bonds, and Sheffield in the outfield. Bonds will be going to his 12th All-Star game, his 10th as an elected starter.

Making the NL team as reserves in the new player vote were Jim Edmonds, Rafael Furcal, Andrew Jones, Paul Lo Duca, Mike Lowell, Richie Sexson, Jose Vidro, and Preston Wilson.

Kevin Brown, Shawn Chacon, Prior, Woody Williams, and Jason Schmidt were elected as starting pitchers, and John Smoltz, Eric Gagne, and Billy Wagner were elected as relievers.

AL players elected reserves were Garret Anderson, Hank Blalock, Bret Boone, Nomar Garciaparra, Ramon Hernandez, Melvin Mora, Mike Moyer, and Wells.

Esteban Loaiza, Roy Halladay, Moyer, Mark Mulder, and Barry Zito were elected as AL starting pitchers, and Brendan Donnelly, Keith Foulke, and Eddie Guardado were elected as relievers.

"I still don't believe I've been chosen," Moyer said. "It's because of a lot of hard work that I've been able to be competitive at the age of 40 and beyond."

Loaiza began the year as a non-roster invitee to spring training.

Armstrong falls but finishes first stage at Tour de France

BY JOHN LEICESTER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MEUX, France — Lance Armstrong was hoping for an uneventful start to the Tour de France — no crashes, nothing to disrupt his quest for a record-tying fifth win.

It didn't quite work out that way. The 31-year-old Texan was thrown from his bike Sunday in a dramatic pileup involving approximately 35 riders sprinting for the finish of the first full stage of the Tour.

"It is never good to crash, but it wasn't that bad," said Armstrong, the 1999-2002 Tour winner. "We all just fell over and got piled on top." Armstrong was not seriously hurt, but his bike had a flat, and the wheel wouldn't turn, so he completed the race on the cycle of his U.S. Postal teammate, Jose Luis Rubiera.

U.S. rider Tyler Hamilton, a former teammate of Armstrong's now cycling for the Danish CSC team, and four others were taken to a hospital for X-rays, Tour doctors said. Hamilton, who broke his collarbone, looked doubtful to continue the Tour.

Italy's Alessandro Petacchi was just ahead of the pack that crashed and won the stage. He blamed Tour organizers for the pileup, saying the corner where the accident took place, a few hundred yards from the finish, was dangerous.

"We're made to wear a helmet, but then they give us a dangerous corner so close to the finish," said Petacchi, 29, who rides for Italy's Fassa Bortolo team. "That's something that should not be on the route in such an important race as the Tour de France."

The Tour competition director, Jean-François Pescheux, denied that the course was at fault. "If people tell me today that it was dangerous, then they should stop cycling," he said.

A Spanish rider, Jose Enrique Gutierrez, went down first, slipping in the last turn before the finish in the town of Meaux, east of Paris.

Other riders piled into him. Many others were blocked behind the mass of fallen riders. Shouldering broken bikes, some walked the few hundred yards to the finish.

Armstrong bruised his right thigh and scratched his left shoulder, said a spokesman for his U.S. Postal Service team, Jogi Muller.

Hamilton, one of Armstrong's main rivals, broke his right collarbone and said he would likely pull out of the race.

"I've dedicated my life to it this year. It's a big disappointment," he said.

The accident highlights the pitfalls that could derail Armstrong's drive to tie Spanish great Miguel Indurain's record of five-consecutive victories, from 1991-1995.

Before the race, Armstrong said his goal was to avoid trouble and save his energy for a team time trial later in the week and for punishing mountain stages, where he often leaves rivals in his wake.

"It's a dangerous week, as we all know, and you need to avoid problems and accidents," he said. "We'll just stay out of trouble, try to avoid any problems."

Those sounded like famous last words after the crash.

Two of Armstrong's teammates also went down during the crash. George Hincapie suffered cuts on his left knee, and Vjateslav Eki-mov had scratches.

The winner, Petacchi, beat out Robbie McEwen of Australia in the dash for the finish. German Erik Zabel was third. Petacchi covered the 104-mile course in 3 hours, 44 minutes, and 33 seconds. McEwen and Zabel were just behind.

IN BRIEF

NWU's Brewer named soccer assistant

The Iowa women's soccer team announced it has hired Mike Brewer as an assistant coach. Brewer took over as head coach at Division III Nebraska Wesleyan University in 2001 and simultaneously coached teams for Pius X Central High School and the Capital Soccer Association Gold Force.

Brewer graduated from Hastings College in 1998 with a B.A. in communication production and a minor in psychology. While at Hastings, he was a two-year starter and NAIA All-American scholar-athlete. Brewer led Hastings to the NAIA regular-season championship in just the second year of the program's existence.

"I am very excited about hiring Mike with his experience as a player and a coach at different levels," said Hawkeye coach Carla Baker in a statement. "Mike brings a lot of enthusiasm, knowledge, and commitment to the student-athletes, and he has a desire to grow as a coach in this profession. We look forward to utilizing Mike's experiences and know that he'll have an impact on our student-athletes and our program."

Trio of divers garners national recognition

Three Hawkeye divers earned national recognition during recent competition. Nancilea Underwood placed seventh at the United States Diving Championships in Indianapolis, qualifying her for the 2004 Olympic diving trials in June 2004. Lisette Planken and Timo Klami both qualified for the world diving championships; to be held July 13-20 in Barcelona. The two will compete in both the 1- and 3-meter events. Klami qualified for the championships at the Swedish Cup competition, while Planken earned her spots at the NCAA championships and an international event in Rome.

All three divers earned All-American honors at the 2003 NCAA championships; Klami is the Big Ten champion in the 3 meter.

THE MID-SUMMER CLASSIC

All-Stars: Out with the old, in with the new

BY RONALD BLUM
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Some of baseball's biggest stars aren't All-Stars this year.

Sammy Sosa, Roger Clemens, and Pedro Martinez missed the cut for the July 15 game in Chicago.

Instead, Hideki Matsui, Albert Pujols, and Carlos Delgado were among the new faces picked Sunday by fans.

Twenty-nine of the 63 players were first-time All-Stars, including 40-year-old pitcher Jamie Moyer. It was the most first-timers since 30 were chosen for the 1988 game in Cincinnati.

Also among the first-timers were Kerry Wood, Mark Prior, Hank Blalock, Mark Mulder, and Vernon Wells.

And the fresh faces aren't the only thing giving the All-Star game a new look. Following last year's messy 7-7, 11-inning tie in Milwaukee, baseball decided to give the league that wins the game home-field advantage in the World Series.

"In the past, the game has been an afterthought," seven-time All-Star Alex Rodriguez said. "A lot of times, by the sixth or seventh inning, the guys were showered, packed up, and on their way back home. Hopefully, this year, the fans are going to get a much better game with a lot more intensity."

Players, managers, and coaches also had a say in the teams for the first time since 1969, and rosters were expanded from 30 to 32 per league.

Seven players were picked for their first All-Star starts, including Marcus Giles, Troy Glaus, Javy Lopez, and Edgar Renteria. Two Boone brothers — Cincinnati's Aaron and Seattle's Bret — also were picked for the game.

Sosa, who had been on the last five NL All-Star teams and six overall, was second among NL outfielders in totals released July 1 with 894,156 votes, trailing Barry Bonds (1,157,384) and ahead of Gary Sheffield (811,239) and Albert Pujols (793,109).

Spencer drove an 0-2 pitch into the left-field seats to send Minnesota to its 16th loss in 22 games.

Wimbledon win befuddles joyful Federer

BY HOWARD FENDRICH
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

WIMBLEDON, England — When Wimbledon finally was won, the burden of expectations lifted, Roger Federer dropped to his knees, arms aloft. Then he rose and, walking off the court, put his hands to his face.

He sat in his court-side chair and began to sob.

These were tears of joy, certainly, but also tears of relief.

"There was pressure from all sides — also from myself. I wanted to do better in Slams," Federer said. "I've always believed, but then in the end, when it happens, you don't think that it is possible. It's an absolute dream for me. I was always joking around when I was a boy: 'I'm going to win this.'"

That forecast was met and tremendous potential fulfilled with an all-around brilliant performance in the Wimbledon final Sunday against Mark Philippoussis, a 7-6 (5), 6-2, 7-6 (3) victory that gave Federer his first major title.

Federer was quite collected throughout the match, ripping returns on serves that made line judges, ball boys, and spectators flinch. He laced passing shots by the 6-foot-4 Philippoussis, spun aces off lines, and crafted crisp volleys.

It was all done with such aplomb that one might have guessed Federer didn't care about the outcome. But when it was over, Federer let go.

"He's a very emotional person, and that's nice for people to see," said coach Peter Lundgren, who also shed tears during the trophy ceremony. "These guys are human."

Still only 21, yet already for years considered a "can't-miss" future champion, Federer felt pushed to perform. His 1998 Wimbledon junior title inspired some to sing praise, and those notes grew into a full-blown chorus after he ended seven-time champion Pete Sampras' 31-match winning streak at the All England Club in 2001.

But until this fabulous fortnight, the fourth-seeded Federer never had made it past the quarterfinals at a major. Since the upset of Sampras, Federer lost three first-round matches at majors — including at Wimbledon last year and the French Open in May.

With the winner's Challenge Cup cradled in his hands, Federer's voice cracked and he cried some more.

"You see the trophy, and it's so beautiful. Gold. You don't have golden trophies very often," he said later. "Just the way when you look at it, and when you hold it — it is something you've always dreamed of. So right then, you feel like: 'Am I dreaming? This is true right now?'"

Indeed it is. Federer is the first Swiss man to win a major title and the seventh male champion at the past seven Slams, one short of the Open era record. Contrast that with the women's game: Serena Williams claimed five of the last six majors, beating sister Venus in each final, including on July 5 at Wimbledon.

The all-Williams final lasted longer than the 1-hour, 56-minute masterpiece painted by Federer, who has the air of an artist with his ponytail and white bandanna. Smoothly covering the court, Federer dominated every facet against Philippoussis, who was trying to become just the third unseeded men's champion at Wimbledon since seeding was introduced in 1927.
