Local teens saying hola, not bonjour

BY SELING MIN KIM
THE DAILY IOWAN

Saying hello is not always as simple as it sounds. Scholars say that the way a person says hello varies among many different languages.

Brian Ritter, the language creative director at HomeSafe, said it is important to say hello in a language that the person you are speaking to is comfortable with.

"It is important to say hello in a language that the person you are speaking to is comfortable with," Ritter said. "It helps to show that you are interested in their culture and their way of life."

The only thing UI junior Grant Schulte ever wanted was a house. He was not disappointed.

"I was so excited," Schulte said in a telephone interview from his Washington, D.C., apartment. "I think it’s the most exciting thing that’s happened to me yet."

Schulte was surprised when he and his apartment-mate, Jorge Zeller, were notified by the housing corporation that a house would be available. They had never lived in a house before.

"It’s been a little bit of a shock," Schulte said. "I mean, we’re just a couple of college students, and now we’re living in a house."n

Schulte is one of the many students who have been waiting for a house. The housing corporation, which manages 1,600 houses, has been criticized for not fulfilling students’ housing needs.

"We’re all trying to find a place to live," Schulte said. "But it’s hard to find a house when you’re not in a house."n

The housing corporation has been criticized for not providing adequate housing for students. They have been accused of placing students in unsafe living conditions.

"It’s just a relief," Schulte said. "I mean, we’re all looking for a place to live, and now we have one."

Schulte said that he is looking forward to the new experience of living in a house. He is happy to have a place to call his own.

"I’m so excited," Schulte said. "I mean, we’re just a couple of college students, and now we’re living in a house."
Local govt's ponder new pond campaign

BY SARA STRAIN

Local governments in Johnson County are weighing whether to spend tens of millions of dollars to build a new public park in the area's southern portion.

The project would be funded by a bond referendum, which would allow counties to raise sales taxes by one cent for 15 years.

County officials say the new pond is crucial for water quality and recreation.

The proposed park would feature a variety of amenities, including picnic areas, hiking trails, and fishing opportunities.

Supporters argue that the project will provide a much-needed boost to the local economy and offer residents a place to relax and enjoy nature.

Opponents, however, are concerned about the potential cost and environmental impact of the project.

The final decision on whether to proceed with the pond campaign will be made by voters in a upcoming referendum election.

By Anthony Kim

The new pond campaign has been met with mixed reactions from residents, who are divided on whether it is a good use of taxpayer money.

Supporters argue that the pond will provide a valuable asset for the community, while opponents claim that it is unnecessary and will cost too much.

The debate over the new pond is just one of many issues that are facing local governments in Johnson County.

 Destruction of That Art is Child's Play

BY VIDYA MURPHY

The Daily Iowan

Vidya Murphy is a woman, artist, number-cruncher, museum curator, and parent of three. More importantly, making art, she feels, is one of those things which makes one a part of the world. At the center of her vision is to make art that is integral to the process of living. She describes the process of making art as a journey where she, as the artist, is the director of the film.

Through her observations, experience, and hard work, Vidya Murphy answers all these questions.

“Not everything I do succeeds.”

“Children are so smart, and they can come up with such amazing ideas.”

North Korea now open to multiparty dialogue

BY GLENN KESSLER

WASHINGTON - After intensive diplomacy by the Chinese government, North Korea has indicated that it is willing to focus on its nuclear-weapons program with the United States in three-party talks, apparently ending its insistence that any future meeting must start with officials from Japan, U.S. officials said Wednesday.

Since the crisis over North Korea's nuclear ambitions erupted in October 2002, the United States and North Korea have met only once - in April - with Chinese diplomats participating. The Bush administration has long rejected the Chinese proposal that the U.S. and North Korea now launch one-on-one talks with the United States as part of any multilateral discussion.

The impasse has deeply worried North Korea's neighbors, who have grown anxious as North Korea has appeared to be moving rapidly to assemble a nuclear arsenal.

"The Chinese have suggested that the United States and Korea now launch one-on-one talks with the United States as part of any multilateral discussions," a senior Chinese official said Wednesday. "North Korea rejects dialogue on any other terms than those proposed by China, which Barbara Winston, a senior Chinese official, has suggested.

China's efforts, and a senior Chinese official, have reportedly agreed to resume at the end of this year. The Bush administration has been pressing for a three-way meeting, according to officials.

But officials from China also have said that North Korea is not ready to start nuclear talks with the United States unless it is satisfied that any discussion is likely to lead to sanctions or other reprisals against it.

The developments this week have highlighted the increasing pressure on the Chinese to set the stage for resuming talks in a format acceptable to the United States and North Korea.

The Bush administration officials, however, have not agreed on a precise formula, and in fact, have missed the mark that they are trying in any negotiations with the North Koreans.

"The developments this week have highlighted the increasing pressure on the Chinese to set the stage for resuming talks in a format acceptable to the United States and North Korea," a senior Chinese official said Wednesday. "North Korea has rejected the Chinese proposals, and has repeatedly stated that it will not engage with the United States unless the Chinese agree to start talks with North Korea in a format acceptable to the Bush administration.

Since the 9/11 attacks, arguments have absolved an entire generation from moral responsibility, which should be authenticated to the needs of national security. However, though it is often noted that the United States Purple Art, designed to keep Americans secure, was considered a violation of personal privacy. Indeed, "national security" has become a synonym of a trump card in the eyes of the U.S. government.

Citing security concerns, the Justice Department has not released recently,statuses Eumenides manuscripts to the original Qaeda suspects словно Reda Omar bin Laden, who was blacked out by U.S. forces at an undisclosed location. The actions of the Justice Department and the CIA further illuminate the process by which U.S. District Judge Lewis Brinkema’s order that Moussaoui be released to France, where he was born and raised, has been challenged on constitutional grounds. It is true that Brinkema’s order would prove that he was not yet sentenced to the attention of the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

The existence of Eumenides is increasely strong. Moussaoui had taken actions suspected to be linked to the government. The evidence against Moussaoui is overwhelming, which has been charged with terrorism conspiracy; he is being held by the government. Such a scenario is that all suspects are innocent until proven guilty, which is the American system of justice. Allowing a government wishes to maintain a lip-service to American ideals. Allowing a suspected usurper of the American system to participate in the justice system would spur an appeal by prosecutors.

There is no question that Moussaoui, a 33-year-old French national, had taken actions that would be considered terrorist activities. The idea that the American system of justice is fundamentally superior to any other country in the world is a fundamental constitutional right for all suspects.

Leaving part of yourself behind

It's been a summer vacation; I have been slowly packing all my belongings and preparing for the big move. Many people are just moving across town, and I have known it all along. I moved out of my apartment, and the process of packing and unpacking has been rather enjoyable. It has also been somewhat challenging, but I am sure I will adjust soon. The house we are moving into is a small, one-bedroom apartment located at 115-83 Locust Street. It is a nice apartment, and I am looking forward to living there.

During the Tuesday meeting of the School Board of the Urbandale Community School District, the board announced that it has reached an agreement to future collective bargaining agreements that differ from existing labor agreements. The project, because the board wishes to maintain open-market competition, brings to the construction process. Such agreements also are more likely to result in a better deal for the district.

A brief editors according to space considerations. Letters of more than 300 word exceeding 300 words will not be considered for publication, the board agrees. The efficiencies of labor agreements are designed for a combination of labor agreements and area businesses who have been part of the school district for many years. Project Labor Agreements are recognized in the labor market in union-dominated markets. None of the special projects in union-dominated markets.

The only example of such a agreement on a public project is now following a legal appeal that would be considered by the board. The board is considering the possibility of the district being able to overcome the appeal for the project. It is hoped that the School Board will proceed with the district being able to overcome the appeal for the project.

High-school students opt for Spanish

Language

Foreign-language officials aren’t sure of the reason behind the Spanish boom.

Bellevue believes the elimination of foreign-language programs in the elementary schools, which went on in 1992, has been a factor in the drop. Spanish may be a part of the problem.

“Students have not been exposed early enough to the language,” said Ruth Jones, a principal teaching assistant who works on the project. “Iowa City has had its program, and I think we

Doubt clouds Armstrong’s finishing place after Day 4

By Frank Klipsch

The letters G.T.G.T.G are written in black marker along the red handle of Armstrong’s white and black striped handlebar tape. This lettering, what Remmerde (pronounced REM-er-dee) has written above her name since she was a freshman at Buena Vista High School, stands for “Give the Glory To God.”

So far, the tailing Hawkeye hangover has sat on Iowa’s long list.

Game Time standout to become a Hawkeye

By John Locketter

MARBONNE, France — Lance Armstrong by now has become almost synonymous with a Tour de France win.

The 1999 champion has become almost as synonymous with a Tour de France win.

His return to the race this year has been anything but easy. He had to deal with cancer, and then he had to deal with recovery.

But as he crossed the finish line Sunday, Armstrong was still the man to beat.

“Lance is a bit stronger than me now, but I didn’t even try to beat him,” said Vinokourov, whose stage victory Sunday was his first on the Tour. “But going into the Pyrenees, the gap isn’t very big, and I am confident.”

Armstrong finished second after placing third at the U.S. Olympic trial in July. That definitely helped him get back into shape for the Tour.

Armstrong’s closest rival, Alex Zulle, came out of the Pyrenees in second place, seven seconds behind Vinokourov.

There are a variety of possibilities for the next stage, which could determine the overall win.

For instance, there is “All Faiths Day” — if you bring in a double figure and a view of this group.

Armstrong finished first, eight seconds ahead of Vinokourov, 12 seconds ahead of Zulle, and 14 seconds ahead of Vinokourov.

Any fan can choose this view of this group.

Unfortunately, the Department of Energy continues to ask Congress to fund a Cold War nuclear arsenal, and the nuclear-weapons complex necessary to maintain that arsenal, even though we no longer face a Cold War adversary.
