Outcry kills U.S. plan for terrorism betting

BY BRADLEY GRAHAM AND VERNON LOEB
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon Tuesday scrapped a plan to establish a futures market that would have allowed investors to bet on the probability of coups, assassinations, terrorist strikes, and other events in the Middle East.

Confronted by a congressional outcry and widespread expressions of disbelief after news of the program suddenly emerged Monday, senior Pentagon officials appeared at a loss to explain how the program ever got as far as it did.

Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Wolfowitz told a Senate hearing that he learned of the program from a newspaper story he read en route to the hearing, which dealt with post-war reconstruction in Iraq.

"I share your shock at this kind of program," he said. "We'll find out about it, but it is being terminated."

At the Pentagon, Tony Tether, the director of the agency responsible for overseeing the program — the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency or DARPA — issued a statement saying "it simply did not make sense to continue" the effort "in light of the recent concerns surrounding it."

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said earlier in the day that he had phoned Tether to impress on him the need to stop the program immediately.

Group sues Coralville over proposed center

BY CRISTA HAHN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Coralville Hotel Associates LC filed a lawsuit Monday alleging that the proposed Coralville hotel and convention center violates the Iowa Code, Chapter 23A, court records show.

Des Moines attorney Steven Nelson, representing the hotel association, said in the lawsuit that the code "generally prohibits government from competing with local enterprise."

The legislation states cities are allowed to build things such as sports arenas and garbage-collection facilities — even if they will compete with area businesses — because they are proper things for a city to do," said Nelson, adding, "It is our position that they are prohibited from building a hotel in Coralville."

However, the code lists several exemptions, including "the performance of an activity by a city that is intended to assist in economic development or tourism."

The proposed hotel and convention center, which will stand on Ninth Street at the southeast corner of Interstate 80 and First Avenue, is slated to cost $58 million.

U.S. sweeps net more Saddam bodyguards

BY JOHN HENDREN AND ESTHER SCHRADER
LOS ANGELES TIMES

TIKRIT, Iraq — U.S. soldiers captured two more of Saddam Hussein's former bodyguards here Tuesday, and a military official said the former Iraqi president is moving every few hours to evade pursuit.

An Arab satellite television network, meanwhile, played an audiotape purported to be Saddam, with the voice acknowledging the deaths last week of Uday and Qusay Hussein, the deposed leader's sons, and saying he would willingly sacrifice "100 children" for the resistance if he had them.

"Thank God for what he destined for us, and honored us with their martyrdom for his sake," the speaker said in the broadcast by Dubai-based Al Arabiya television, which said it received the audiotape on Tuesday. It was the second tape released in a week purported to be from Saddam.

"We know he's on the run," said Maj. Josslyn Aberle, a spokeswoman for the 4th Infantry Division. "We know he's not staying in any one place more than a few hours at a time — probably four hours at a time."

Military officials would not say whether the tip on Saddam came from electronic eavesdropping, visual surveillance, or Iraqis seeking a $25-million reward for his capture or death. But several officials have said recently that the number of "human intelligence" reports have increased significantly in recent days and the quality of those reports has been proved in raids that net their target subjects.

"Human intelligence is some of the reliable intelligence that we get," Aberle said.

At the Pentagon, U.S. officials said whether Saddam will

The CIA, meanwhile, was analyzing the purported Saddam tape, comparing it with known samples of Saddam's voice. One agency official said final results of the analysis would not be available until today.

The official, who requested anonymity, said the agency had tentatively concluded that Saddam's voice was heard on four tapes released to Arab news outlets since U.S. troops captured Baghdad.

The capture of the two bodyguards Tuesday followed a night in which soldiers took 29 detainees in 230 patrols and

Summer slows down for plasma center

BY LUCY COLLINS
THE DAILY IOWAN

At BioLife Plasma Services, college students looking for a little extra cash make up 55 to 60 percent of the facility's donors, but the exodus of students from Iowa City in the summer causes a decrease in the much-needed donations.

Julie Tarvin, the manager of BioLife, 408 S. Gilbert St., said that so far in July, the center has seen 1,700 donations — 19 percent fewer than May's 2,100.

"There is always a patient in need," said Andre Buechner, BioLife's marketing and corporate-communications manager, adding that because plasma cannot be created artificially, it is important to have a regular stream of plasma donors who have already been screened and are known to have safe plasma.

As an incentive for returning clients, donors are paid $20 if they give once and $50 if they give twice in a week. There is also a bonus of $10 for each person donors recruit for the center.

The money is one of several reasons to donate for UI student Louis Goral, who said, "It's a cool way to get money because you are actually doing a good service."

Alison Muller, a Kirkwood student and plasma donor, said she tried to find another job when her current employer cut her hours but then started donating plasma because "it's so easy to just go in there for an hour and a half and have $20."

With Iowa City's unemployment rate at 3.3 percent in June, a 0.4 percent increase from May, Goral said after applying for 15 to 20 jobs he decided to donate plasma. He calls it a rewarding way to get extra cash because it "benefits everyone."

Unfortunately for the center, the number of those who enjoy the donation money decreases during the summer. Buechner estimated that centers such as the one in Iowa City see a decrease of about 20 percent during summer months.

"Traditionally at [the Iowa City] location, it's a lot of college students," Tarvin said. "We are trying to increase awareness in order to keep donations up throughout the entire year."

Goral said that because so many students leave in the summer, it is easier to get an appointment.

"I can definitely see the decrease in donors," he said.

During a donation, a needle placed in the vein pumps out the blood. Once the plasma is separated from the rest of the blood, the blood is pumped back into the donor.

Plasma is the pale yellow liquid portion of the blood, consisting mainly of water and proteins, that can be easily replaced by the body. Plasma aids the circulation of red and white blood cells and platelets and also makes possible natural chemical communication among different parts of the body.

Plasma facts

- The human body contains approximately 12 pints of blood at any given time.
- Plasma makes up 57 percent of whole blood.
- Average plasma donations nationally per week: 1,000-1,600.
- Average annual donations nationally per plasma donor: 18.
- Average annual donation nationally per blood donor: 1.8.
- Donor reimbursement nationally per year: $1 million-$1.5 million.
- Number of tests nationally per year to check for safe plasma: more than 40 million.
- Plasma-based products are used in therapies to treat people with medical needs such as hemophilia and immune deficiencies as well as trauma and burn victims.
- Donors must be 18 years old and weigh at least 110 pounds; they also must pass all other required donor-eligibility criteria.

Despite Saudi wishes, report stays classified

BY LAURA SULLIVAN
BALTIMORE SUN

WASHINGTON — President Bush said Tuesday he won't declassify a 28-page section of a congressional report investigating the September 2001 terror attacks, despite mounting pressure from Saudi Arabia and some members of Congress to make the information public.

Bush said declassifying the pages, which detail possible links between Saudi officials and the hijackers, would harm national security and reveal sensitive intelligence sources and methods.

"There's an ongoing investigation into the 9/11 attacks, and we don't want to compromise that investigation," he said, addressing reporters alongside Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon in the White House Rose Garden.

"If people are being investigated, it doesn't make sense for us to let them know who they are," Bush said. "It would help the enemy if they knew our sources and methods."

Bush's announcement came just hours before a hastily called meeting between Bush and the Saudi foreign minister, Prince Saud al-Faisal, who asked Bush to release the pages publicly. The meeting did not change Bush's mind.

After the meeting, Saudi said the Saudi government would agree to a U.S. government request and allow the U.S. officials to question a man linked to some of the hijackers. The man, Omar al-Bayoumi, is believed to be in Saudi Arabia.

Al-Bayoumi, a Saudi who was employed by the Saudi Civil Aviation Authority, helped two of the hijackers find and pay for an apartment in San Diego.

Saud told reporters that "we understand" Bush's reasons for not declassifying the disputed section of the 850-page report, but he felt that the secrecy was defaming his people.

"We have nothing to hide," Saud said. "We do not seek, nor do we need, to be shielded."

He added: "We believe that releasing the missing 28 pages would allow us to respond to any allegations in a clear and credible manner and remove any doubts about the kingdom's true role in the war against terrorism and its commitment to fight."

The last-minute nature of the meeting highlighted the sensitivity of the subject for Saudi Arabia and the Bush administration. Saudi officials have tried to portray the Saudi royal family as a partner in the war against terrorism, while the administration has needed Saudi cooperation in trying to track down Al Qaeda, most recently in investigating the car-bomb blasts that killed 34 persons, including eight Americans, in Riyadh in May.

The report, which was produced by a joint panel of the House and Senate intelligence committees and released July 24, outlines repeated failures of the U.S. intelligence community to pick up clues and signals pointing to a pending terrorist attack. Although the public version of the report does not name any country specifically, the report cites a CIA memorandum that points to "incontrovertible evidence" the terrorists were helped by a "foreign power."

Several people who have seen the classified section say that term refers to Saudi Arabia. The pages, congressional sources say, point to financial and political links between the hijackers and the Saudi government.

The redacted section, sources say, also describes al-Bayoumi's activities in more detail.

The unclassified version of the report links al-Bayoumi to Al Qaeda and said he met the two hijackers after leaving a meeting at the Saudi consulate.

On Tuesday, meeting with reporters at the Saudi Embassy after conferring with the president, Saud said that Condoleezza Rice, Bush's national security adviser, asked the Saudi government to allow U.S. officials to question al-Bayoumi. Saud said FBI and CIA agents from the local Saudi offices would be permitted to question him if he can be located.

Local man to turn Sackter's story into film to see the documentary, titled Bill Sackter: A Special Spirit, complete. He said he believes the documentary will cement Sackter's place in Iowa City and American folklore.

"He is a model of a spiritually developed human being," he said. "We need more heroes like that today."

Barry Morrow, the man who brought Sackter to Iowa City from Minnesota, is collaborating with Walz and Wyrick to gather material for the documentary. Morrow, who worked for Walz as a student, is now a Hollywood screenwriter; he wrote Rain Man in 1986. Morrow has also written screenplays for two movies about Sackter's life — Bill on His Own, which starred Helen Hunt, and Bill, starring Mickey Rooney.

Morrow first met Sackter when he was a dishwasher at a country club in Minnesota and said he soon realized that behind Bill's outward appearance — a balding, overweight man who wore shabby wigs — was a man with a unique spirit.

"Bill is the genesis of everything I write," Morrow said. "By knowing him, I know what a story is."

"Sometimes great gifts come in frappy wrapping. Bill was not a pretty present under your tree, but he was the best present, because it takes opening up to see what's inside."

Walz, a former UI professor of social work, quickly befriended Sackter and remained his close companion until Sackter's death on June 16, 1983. Sackter died in his sleep waiting for the next sunrise.

"He made the world happy," Walz said. "He was the only man of pure innocence I've ever met."

Sackter was known for his genuine sincerity and hospitality, Walz said, adding that he befriended children and people who he sensed needed an ear.

"He could just read people," he said. "Most of his life, people needed Bill's help, rather than Bill needing others."

Throughout Sackter's eight years in Iowa City, he received numerous awards for changing how society perceived the mentally disabled. In 1977, he was named Iowa's Handicapped Citizen of the Year by then-Gov. Robert Ray, and he was selected as a runner-up for the U.S. Handicapped Citizen of the Year, but his recognition went beyond organizations that focused on people with disabilities.

Sackter was invited to the White House by former President Carter, played Santa Claus for local Iowa City organizations, including Mercy Hospital, and played his harmonica — his trademark — for thousands at the next sunrise.

Emmy Awards in 1982. He was also intended to be declared an official ambassador for mentally retarded citizens by the White House but died before the appointment could become official.

Wyrick said he hopes to land a widely recognized celebrity to narrate the documentary, and he wants it to air eventually on national television. He added that the main obstacle now is financing the project, which so far has been done through private donations totaling $50,000 — a little less than half of the project's cost.

Wyrick said he believes the documentary is important for the image of Iowa City, a place Morrow said Bill adored and considered home.

said, "being Saddam's bodyguard is not a crime."

The raids by soldiers of the 4th Infantry's 1st Brigade appear to be feeding on themselves, with detained security guards leading soldiers to their confederates, although military officials would say little about what they were divulging.

On Sunday, troops from the 4th Infantry said they missed grabbing Saddam's security adviser — and possibly the former Iraqi president himself — by 24 hours in a raid in Tikrit. If intelligence reports about his frequent movements are correct, Saddam would have moved six times during that period.

Nevertheless, Aberle insisted, the search has maintained its intensity and could produce the toppled leader any day.

Times writer Bob Drogin contributed to this report.

Pentagon drops terror futures market

Warner said Tether's agency had neglected to "think through the full ramifications of the program."

The initiative had been seen by its Pentagon sponsors as a way of using the predictive ability of markets to anticipate possible terrorist events or other crises. It was based on the notion that futures trading had proven to be effective in predicting other events, such as oil prices, elections, and movie-ticket sales.

Under the plan, traders could have bought and sold futures contracts on the likelihood of, say, Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat being assassinated or Jordanian King Abdullah II being overthrown. Those who predicted correctly would profit over those who guessed wrong.

The Pentagon had listed the program in Defense budget plans sent to Capitol Hill and had briefed congressional staff members earlier this year. A Web site had promoted the program, and registration of up to 1,000 traders had been set to begin Friday, with trading slated start Oct. 1.

But the initiative had gone largely unreported by news organizations until two Democratic senators — Ron Wyden of Oregon and Byron Dorgan of North Dakota — called a news conference Monday to denounce it as twisted and morally offensive.

"Spending taxpayer dollars to create terrorism betting parlors is as wasteful as it is repugnant," Wyden and Dorgan said Monday in a letter to the Pentagon. "The American people want the federal government to use its resources enhancing our security, not gambling on it."

At first, DARPA officials tried to defend the program as a way of gaining intelligence and preventing terrorist attacks. But by Tuesday, the program had become the subject of revulsion and mockery among Democratic and Republican lawmakers alike.

On the Senate floor, Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., denounced it as a "plan to trade in death" and said the Bush administration should "issue a public apology, especially to the families of the victims of Sept. 11." Similar expressions of outrage were leveled at Wolfowitz during his appearance before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

While promising to look into the matter, Wolfowitz also sought to add a word in defense of DARPA, saying the agency "is brilliantly imaginative in places where we want it to be imaginative." He then added, "It sounds like maybe it got too imaginative in this area."

This drew a sharp retort from Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif.

"I don't think we can laugh off that DARPA program," she said. "There is something very sick about it. And if it's going to end, I think you would end the careers of whoever it was who thought that up."

She noted that terrorists could have participated in the betting as well — and "knowing they were planning an attack, could have bet on the attack and collected a lot of money."

Called the Policy Analysis Market, the project arose under a DARPA division called FutureMAP, or "Futures Markets Applied to Prediction." Two companies also were involved — Net Exchange, a market-technology company, and the Economist Intelligence Unit, a division of the publisher of The Economist magazine. The Pentagon had planned to spend $8 million on the effort through 2005.

The program was supervised by retired Adm. John Poindexter, who served as the national-security adviser to President Reagan and was convicted for his role in the 1980 Iran-Contra scandal, although the conviction was later set aside. Poindexter was involved in another controversy last year over a computerized surveillance project, initially known as the Total Information Awareness program, meant to collect information about potential terror threats by culling private databases. After lawmakers and others voiced concerns about possible invasions of privacy, Congress and the Pentagon imposed constraints on the project, and its name was changed to the Terrorism Information Awareness program.

The true face of Howard Dean

I would like the people of Iowa to see the true face of Howard Dean before his campaign workers put so much lipstick on the pig that he becomes unrecognizable.

The people of Iowa should know that, thanks to Dean and his cronies in the Vermont Legislature, family farms in Vermont are going out of business at a rate never before seen in the state's history. Property taxes have risen to a point where people are being taxed out of their homes and off their land, and working people cannot afford even the most basic of services.

Dean has used our tax dollars to fund a rail service that has no passengers, a bike path that is so over budget it cannot be completed, and an educational system that consistently produces high-school graduates who cannot make change for a dollar nor find the United States on a map of the world if it were the only country outlined in red.

Have a view you want to voice? The DI is taking applications for columnists and editorial writers. Stop in at 201N Communications Center to pick up an application, or e-mail calvin-hennick@uiowa.edu for more information. Women and minorities are strongly encouraged to apply.

Dean does not belong in any public office, much less the office of president. He doesn't support the active defense of this country, he believes in taxing those who do real work to support those who don't, and he will do or say anything to get elected. I hope that he never gets the chance to do for America what he's done for Vermont.

Political inspiration

Voter turnout in the last presidential election was abysmally low. People are tired of politics and politicians. Young people are disillusioned or simply uninterested.

One exception is the grassroots support Howard Dean has generated. Close to 64,000 people across the country have joined the Dean-supporter groups at the Meetup.com Web site. People are finding a new way to be involved in politics.

Dean is the kind of candidate whose ideas and energy break through the apathy and inspire people to care again.

Self-interest is the best policy

The current debate raging over whether to send U.S. troops to Liberia reveals a lot about leftists and conservatives. While leftists clamor for U.S. military intervention, conservatives oppose it, but only meekly. Why?

Morality, the leftists believe, consists not in defending one's interests but in sacrificing them. Accordingly, they advocate U.S. military intervention only when no U.S. self-interest exists (such as in Somalia, Bosnia, and now Liberia).

Conservatives, who generally uphold military intervention when in the interests of the United States, are morally disarmed by their own altruistic beliefs. They are unable to resist the leftists' calls to sacrifice for the needy (abroad or at home).

Thus, as long as altruism remains the prevailing morality among our politicians, Americans can't count on either the right or the left to defend their interests. Only when self-interest replaces altruism as a principle of domestic and foreign policy, will Americans be safe in their inalienable rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

I DON'T GIVE A HOOT about the spotted owl. Get it? Ha ha!

I recently moved to Washington, D.C., and one of the things I've learned so far is that the people here don't work just to pay the bills, they work because they "believe in" something. Yeah, I know it sounds stupid. I learned this earlier in the week as I sat in a job interview for a meaningless, bottom-rung position in some organization for endangered wildlife protection. After the usual questions about my job experience and education, my interviewer, a squinty middle-aged man with truly impressive pit stains, leaned forward and asked, in a low, husky voice, "So what are your feelings about the spotted owl?"

I was about to tell him the truth ("I have a great love for the spotted owl, preferably roasted on a spit with a side of potato wedges") when I realized that, for this man, the mere mention of the spotted owl gave him the moral equivalent of a raging erection. Maybe even a literal raging erection — I can't be sure; he was sitting behind this big desk. This city is crawling with these people, people who will tell anyone within earshot about the importance of llama contraception or affordable boat insurance for trapeze artists or whatever it is they do from 9 to 5. These are the last people you want to get stuck in the bathroom line with at a party. If this happens to you, the best thing to do, in my experience, is to pretend you're even more zealous than they are.

Person With Stupid Belief: "You know, if they can put a man on the moon, you'd think that they could do something to advance the rights of gay pets."

You: "Yes, I know! It makes me so angry! In fact, I'm so angry that I think I'm going to kill someone right now."

PWSB: "Hey now, wait just a second..."

You: "Do you happen to have a gun I could use, or a bomb?"

PWSB: "Uh, I think I'll go use the downstairs bathroom." (scurries away)

You: "KEEP SPREADING THAT GAY PET GOSPEL, BROTHER!"

It seems like you can't get a job these days without caring about something. Just try telling an interviewer that you just want to work there so you can pay the bills. They'll look at you like you just told them you're a child-molesting neo-Nazi. Working today is becoming more and more like joining a cult. Your mere physical presence is no longer adequate — they want all of you. No matter where you work, whether on the board of a prestigious corporation or on the urinal-maintenance staff of Botulism Shack, you are bombarded with endless talk of the "team" or the "family" or the "core values" or the "mission," etc., etc. This is borderline brainwashing. And yet people are at fault, too — they allow it to happen.

It's ultimately a failing of the individual, a weakness. Most people are all too eager to be reduced to a job title. In a place such as Washington, D.C., it's disturbingly clear that a lot of people use their jobs as substitutes for a personality, a life. Working used to be a means; now it's an end. Faced with the impossibility of getting paid to do something they like, they learn to like what they get paid to do — the most despicable sort of commisera-tion. All these transparently arbitrary careers and "noble causes" are just white noise to cover up the fact that these people lack either the courage or the audacity to build their own identities. You see it happening all the time — whether it's religion or a homoerotic fraternity, extreme sports or a lame job, people are desperate for any kind of prefabricated self.

Which is exactly what I told the spotted-owl guy at the end of my interview. I've never seen a grown man crumble like that. Like I've always said — despite what they tell you, honesty is rarely the best policy.

ARTSPaquin not at all buffaloed

BY BEN NUCKOLS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Anna Paquin can't remember much about day-to-day life on the set of Buffalo Soldiers. It's hard to blame her — Miramax postponed release of the black comedy several times after acquiring it on Sept. 10, 2001.

Paquin plays the teenage girlfriend of military clerk Ray Elwood (Joaquin Phoenix) and the daughter of his chief antagonist (Scott Glenn). The movie takes place on an Army base in West Germany in 1989, as the Berlin Wall is coming down.

The 21-year-old actress said in a phone interview that she's had so many jobs since Buffalo Soldiers was completed that details of working on the film are a blur. But she's proud of the movie and believes it should be taken on its own terms, saying it's not realistic enough to be seen as a slap at the American military.

Paquin was the second-youngest Oscar winner ever — at age 11 — when she accepted the award for best supporting actress in 1994 for The Piano.

She called The Piano the beginning and the end of her screen career because she missed school and friends while on the set. But she's gone on to appear in nearly 20 movies, including She's All That, Almost Famous, 25th Hour, and two X-Men films.

Paquin is a student at Columbia University — Julia Stiles is a classmate. She's leaning toward becoming an English major. And no, she hasn't gone near an acting class.

1. Who's the bigger diva on campus at Columbia? You or Julia?

Paquin: Neither? [Laughs.] I mean, I'm not really friends with her specifically because we don't really have the same groups of friends, although I'm sure there's probably a fair amount of overlap because the school's just not that big. But she certainly doesn't have that type of reputation, and I don't think I do, either.

2. Is it true that an angry member of the audience threw a water bottle that hit you on the head after a screening of Buffalo Soldiers at this year's Sundance Film Festival?

Paquin: I wasn't actually hit by it. [Giggles.] It came kind of in my general direction. I think it sounds more exciting if you get to read that it hit me, but it's not true.

3. You were born in Canada but moved to New Zealand when you were 4 years old. Do you consider yourself a Canadian or a Kiwi?

Paquin: Probably a little of both, although culturally, all my reference points are from my years in New Zealand. I was hardly conscious of the time I was living in Canada because I was so young. But I've traveled around so much that I kind of don't really know where I'm from anymore.

4. Did you really say you didn't want to continue acting after The Piano?

Paquin: It was the only time I'd ever acted in my life, so

Gino Domenico/Associated Press

Actress Anna Paquin poses in New York on Wednesday. Paquin, who won an Oscar for her supporting role in the movie The Piano at age 11, stars in the recent film Buffalo Soldiers, a satire about the misdeeds of some U.S. soldiers in West Germany in 1989.

yeah, given that everyone was asking me at 11 what I wanted to do with the rest of my life, I was like, "I don't know." I don't really know if anything I said as an 11-year-old had any real serious significance or weight.

No one usually cares what 11-year-olds have to say about anything. It's a very unusual situation to be in.

5. Do you ever dream about winning another Oscar?

Paquin: It would be nice. I'm not really holding my breath or anything. I think everyone hopes to at some point. Now that I've won it, I guess I just have to earn it through my work and live up to my end of the deal.

Sex, lies, & feminism in the Mogul Empire

BY VIDYA MURTHY
THE DAILY IOWAN

In the sequel to her debut novel The Twentieth Wife, Indu Sundaresan continues to map the rise and ultimate demise of Meherunnisa in The Feast of Roses.

Meherunnisa, meaning "Sun of Women," becomes the 20th and last wife of the 17th-century Mogul Emperor Jahangir, who gives her the title "Nur Jehan," or "Light of the World." While the first book narrated the early life of this powerful woman, The Feast of Roses emphasizes her central role in the Mogul court.

Meherunnisa is ambitious and crafty and has the emperor on her side. With great cunning and farsightedness, she forms a junta with her father, brother, and the heir apparent, Prince Khurram.

As the daughter of a Persian refugee, and connected to the throne only through marriage to the emperor, she tries to secure an alliance between the heir and her daughter. Meherunnisa begins to take control of the court's everyday matters: the public appearances at the balcony where she receives and sorts out public grievances, her fight with and eventual success in banishing the king's adviser, Mahabat Khan, the way she manipulates the marriage between her niece and the future Mogul emperor. The author provides many such anecdotes to show how Meherunnisa succeeds in ruling the mighty empire, albeit from behind the scenes.

The story of a winner is always an engaging read, even more so if that winner is a woman. Sundaresan packs her narrative with all the ingredients of a potboiler: love, sex, lion hunts, treachery, chess games, torture, greed, and so on. Those who are familiar with the great, opulent Indian films of the 1950s — such as Mogul-E-Azam or Anarkali, which presented a nostalgic view of the Muslim world — will recognize the author's penchant for describing the colorful costumes, the magnificent jewelry, the nubile concubines, the strong eunuchs, the elaborate courtly manners, etc.

The multitude of characters — innumerable servants, dancing girls, Portuguese Jesuits, the English ambassador, the Jain monk, and so on — is thrown in more for effect rather than purpose. Against this rather stony backdrop, the main characters are reduced to types instead of individuals.

In an effort to shape her protagonist as a powerful woman, the author creates a character who attempts to rewrite her destiny and ultimately fails. But Sundaresan does not fully succeed. She writes, "All her life [Meherunnisa] had wanted the life of a man, with the freedom to go where she wished, to do what she wanted, to say what came to her mind without worry for consequences." This rather anachronistic attempt to recast a 17th-century woman in a "modern" light, without paying attention to the historical context, makes the character look like a caricature. The author occasionally gives out prosaic information — about the bickering Portuguese, or the ambitious English, or the Decanars — without fully integrating it into the story. Still, one has to laud Sundaresan's ambitious venture to present a woman who seemed to have had it all: compelling looks, power, grit, and a will to dominate the men around her.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You have so much on the go today that you must be selective and make the most of all your options. You will prosper in more ways than one. Stay centered, and you will make impressive decisions.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Someone who knows your weakness may upset your emotional well-being. Try to deal with this person without letting her or him know too much.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Relatives may have some interesting information to share with you. Your family background will help you understand yourself and your needs a little better.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Someone who has been confused orowell may put demands on you. Your suggestions and help will be appreciated, but you should not devote all your time to one cause.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Expect to get a harsh response if you are out of line or blaming someone for something that he or she didn't do. Being positive will help to counteract any emotional problems you face.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Allergies, headaches, and minor mishaps are likely. Don't make promises that you know you can't live up to. Changes will be inevitable, but everything will turn out for the best.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your contribution to a fund-raising event will lead to future prospects. The end result will be well worth your effort. You will put on a very impressive show today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If you are pushy, you can expect everything to backfire. You may have to compromise. Focus on the creative, and leave the wheeling and dealing to everyone else.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You will have the urge to wander, so plan a day trip. You will be curious, and your competitive nature should lead to all sorts of interesting prospects.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make time for an older relative today. If you offer your assistance and guidance, you will feel good about yourself, and you will impress someone you care about deeply.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Nothing will go according to your plans, so don't make any. Take things as they come. Be the mediator: Listen to all sides without making judgments.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may feel that someone in a higher position than you is not being just. If you are gracious, you stand a much better chance of getting what you want. Use your ingenuity.

Job-Hunting Tips for the College Grad

by Jesse Ammerman

- Check to see if you have an uncle who runs a Fortune 500 company. If not, see if you have an uncle who runs the morning shift at Arby's.

- Be careful when selecting a job fair to attend. Many of these "fairs" do not even offer funnel cakes or carnival rides.

- Make a short list of the skills you acquired as an undergraduate. Be sure to mention these during your interview at Pancho's.

- When turning in a résumé, make sure to write "recyclable" near the top. That way, the employer will know which bin to toss it in.

- Find an ad in the classifieds that you feel suits you, and circle it repeatedly using a really cool marker. Then put the paper away and continue watching "Fear Factor."

- When checking the classified ads, remember that the terms "outgoing" and "energetic" generally refer to how you might look in a bikini.

- Boast to employers about the multitudinous advantages of holding a B.A. in your field. Everybody loves a comedian, after all.

- Keep a list of companies that have rejected your applications. This might come in handy if you find work as a commercial rap artist and are not sure whose mothers you should slander.

The Diamondbacks have been outscored 10-8 while playing six consecutive one-run games, another club record.

Mike Lowell and Juan Encarnacion drove in Florida's runs in the fifth against Brandon Webb (7-4), who departed for a pinch hitter after five innnings.

Penny (9-8) retired 11 in a row before Luis Gonzalez singled leading off the seventh. Carlos Baerga walked, but Steve Finley flied out, and Penny struck out Danny Bautista and Alex Cintron.

Braden Looper pitched the save.

Consecutive singles in the fifth by Luis Castillo, Ivan Rodriguez, and Lowell made it 1-0. Rodriguez came home when shortstop Cintron bobbed Encarnacion's grounder for an error.

Rockies 5, Reds 3

CINCINNATI (AP) — Jay Payton matched his career high with four hits Tuesday night, leading the Colorado Rockies to a victory in the Cincinnati Reds' first game under interim manager Dave Miley.

Darren Oliver (9-6) gave up four hits and three runs in six-plus innings. He also had a pair of hits, including an RBI single.

The Reds had four errors.

Shortstop Ray Olmedo had three throwing errors. The Reds lead the majors with 104 errors in 107 games.

Starter Jimmy Haynes (2-11) gave up 10 hits and four runs in only 4½ innnings.

Haynes had an embarrassing moment. He hit a grounder through the hole at second in the third inning, but right fielder Rene Reyes charged and threw him out at first.

Justin Speier got the save.

Payton had three of his four singles off Haynes. He singled to open the second, when Oliver's two-out single made it 1-0.

Devil Rays 9, Blue Jays 8

TORONTO (AP) — Rocco Baldelli hit a go-ahead, two-run single in the ninth inning as the Tampa Bay Devil Rays rallied for a victory over the Toronto Blue Jays on Tuesday night.

Travis Lee and Aubrey Huff homered for the Devil Rays, who rallied from a 4-0 and 7-6 deficits.

Toronto's Carlos Delgado hit his AL-leading 31st homer in the ninth, cutting the lead to 9-8.

Toronto's Greg Myers homered twice, including a go-ahead three-run shot in the seventh. He set a career high with his 12th homer and tied a career high with five RBIs.

After Tampa Bay's Julio Lugo singled off Aquilino Lopez leading the ninth, Trever Miller (1-2) got one out before loading the bases by giving up Antonia Perez's single and walking Huff. Baldelli followed with a single and gave Tampa Bay a 8-7 lead.

Damian Rollins hit an RBI sacrifice fly one out later to make it 9-7.

Al Levine (3-5) pitched 1½ innings for the win, and Lance Carter got the save.

Brewers 6, Mets 3

NEW YORK (AP) — Royce Clayton hit a three-run homer, and Keith Osik added a solo shot as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the New York Mets on Tuesday night.

Clayton and Osik did their damage in the second and fourth innings against Dan Wheeler (0-1), who replaced injured starter Tom Glavine in the second inning.

Glavine was injured while throwing a pitch in the top of the first. He completed the inning, throwing 18 pitches — 11 for strikes; his status is day-to-day.

The Brewers loaded the bases in the first against Glavine, who allowed two hits. Brady Clark reached on catcher's interference with two outs, but Glavine got Keith Ginter to line out.

Toronto's Carlos Delgado hit his AL-leading 31st homer in the ninth, cutting the lead to 9-8.

Mike DeJean pitched the save.

In the fourth, Ginter and Osik hit one-out singles before Clayton's homer gave Milwaukee a 4-2 lead.

Orioles 7, Twins 5

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Jay Gibbons homered and drove in three runs and Tony Batista also hit a home run in the Baltimore Orioles' 7-5 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Gibbons hit a two-run shot in the first, a run-scoring single in the sixth and was at the plate when the Orioles took the lead on a wild pitch in the eighth.

Baltimore improved to 3-3 on its eight-game, nine-day road trip and took the first of a three-game series at Minnesota.

Hector Carrasco (1-2) pitched 1-3 innings, allowing two hits and one run. Jorge Julio worked the ninth for his 24th save.

Luis Rivas, 2-for-4 with three RBIs, hit a two-run homer in the third for the Twins, who lost their third straight.

Michael Restovich, in his first game since being recalled Monday from Triple-A Rochester, went 2-for-4 with a double for Minnesota.

Brewers 6, Mets 3

NEW YORK (AP) — Royce Clayton hit a three-run homer, and Keith Osik added a solo shot as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the New York Mets on Tuesday night.

Clayton and Osik did their damage in the second and fourth innings against Dan Wheeler (0-1), who replaced injured starter Tom Glavine in the second inning.

Woods shows up when it counts

BY DOUG FERGUSON

ASSOCIATED PRESS

RANCHO SANTA FE, Calif. — All he had to do was make pars at Royal St. George's and Tiger Woods might have captured the silver claret jug.

He still wonders why the 1999 U.S. Open might have unfolded had he made that short putt on the 17th hole at Pinehurst No. 2.

And what about last year at Hazeltine?

Woods had a 12-foot birdie putt on No. 13 as he was closing in on Rich Beem at the PGA Championship. He three-putted for bogey, and even four-straight birdies at the end weren't enough for him to recover from that blunder.

So, Woods remains stuck on eight majors. He is not even halfway home to the 18 majors won by Jack Nicklaus, the only record that really matters.

Does it haunt him?

Hardly.

Every opportunity lost in a major — none as great as the British Open — makes Woods realize he is lucky to even be in range of the Golden Bear.

The 18 majors are impressive enough.

What really gets Woods' attention are the 19 times Nicklaus finished second.

"If he wins half of those second-place finishes — let's make it nine — that's 27 majors," Woods said, his eyes widening at the thought of such an outrageous number.

"Did he win them all? No. Did he get beat? Yeah," Woods said. "He also blew a couple here and there. He made his share of mistakes. But he put himself there more than anybody else. And that's the key."

Woods has not blown a major yet.

He has had at least a share of the 54-hole lead eight times and won them all. Woods probably has 80 majors ahead of him, so that's bound to change.

"It's probably going to happen, because it's happened to everyone else," he said. "But if you're there enough times, you're also going to win your share."

That's what Woods took away from the British Open, where bogeys on two of the last four holes left him two strokes behind Ben Curtis.

Woods spent a week diving off the coast of Central America, recharging for the PGA Championship at Oak Hill in two weeks, his final chance this year to win a major.

He continues to see the big picture, even when everyone else is taking snapshots.

A year ago, some people assumed — Nicklaus included — that Woods might not be as motivated for the PGA Championship because he lost his bid for the calendar Grand Slam with an 81 in the third round at the British Open.

Now some believe Woods is piling the pressure on himself to win the PGA Championship and avoid his first major-less season in five years.

How does he approach Oak Hill?

For one thing, Woods doesn't plan to play a practice round until he arrives Monday of the PGA Championship.

"I'll treat this the same as all the others," he said. "Same focus. Same mindset. Same preparation. And hopefully, it works out. It has worked in the past. The key is to put yourself there, and hopefully you outplay the other guy."

It doesn't always work out that way.

What eats at him more than his two bogeys down the stretch at Royal St. George's is that those wasted strokes mattered more than he could have realized.

Tiger Woods, shown teeing off at Monday's Battle of the Bridges, has no problem getting up for majors.

Blame that on Thomas Bjorn. "I wouldn't feel so bad like I do now — and probably will for a long time — if Thomas had gone ahead and finished the way he was supposed to," Woods said.

Bjorn had a two-shot lead with three holes to play when he took three swings from a pot bunker on No. 16 and made double bogey, then dropped another shot on the 17th to blow a chance at winning his first major.

Has Woods ever blown a major?

He contemplated that for a minute, then returned to 1999, when he was toward the end of his longest drought (10) in the majors.

"The only one I felt I should have won was at Pinehurst," he said. "I was playing so well that day. I felt it was my tournament to win, even more than the PGA at Hazeltine."

Payne Stewart won the '99 U.S. Open with a 15-foot par on the final hole to beat Phil Mickelson by one shot. Woods tied for third, another stroke behind, but he can't shake the memory of a 5-foot par putt that lipped out on the 17th hole.

Woods was at even par for the tournament. In the group behind him was Mickelson at 1 under and Stewart at even par.

Bryant prosecutor gets more funding

BY JON SACHE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAGLE, Colo. — Prosecutors handling Kobe Bryant's sexual assault case won a request for additional money Tuesday, securing $105,000 from county commissioners and the possibility of more.

The aid could be increased again based on District Attorney Mark Hurlbert's needs, Eagle County commissioners said. Other counties in the judicial district could be asked to contribute to Hurlbert's $2 million budget, county finance director Mike Rooper said.

Rooper said it was the first time in his two-and-a-half years in office that a prosecutor has asked for additional funds.

Dozens of reporters are expected here next week for Bryant's initial court appearance on a felony sexual-assault charge. The Los Angeles Lakers superstar has said his 19-year-old accuser had sex with him willingly at a resort in nearby Edwards on June 30.

Also Tuesday, attorneys for several media organizations filed motions to open sealed court records, saying many details have already been publicized — some of them by Bryant and Hurlbert.

"Ironically, at the same time, both the district attorney and Bryant are opposing the very thing that would permit the public to independently test the veracity of their public-relations statements, i.e., unsealing the court file," the attorneys wrote.

Bryant's attorneys, Hal Haddon and Pamela Mackey, did not return phone calls seeking comment. The defense did ask Judge Terry Ruckriegle not to allow expanded media coverage of the case, saying it could jeopardize Bryant's right to a fair trial.

Along with the money, Hurlbert also got some additional expertise: Ingrid Bakke, head of Boulder's sex-assault and domestic-violence unit, is on loan for up to a year to help with the case. Hurlbert's office has deputy district attorneys, but so far he has been the lone prosecutor to address the case publicly.

The Colorado Judicial Branch this week is expected to launch a Web site page devoted to the case. The page will have information on hearing schedules, motions rulings, and other details.

"I've had 150 calls a day. It's overwhelming," said Krista Flannigan, spokeswoman for the prosecutor. "It seemed like it was going to save a lot of us time. Especially as court orders come out, they just don't have the staffing to make sure the media has everything."

The door to Hurlbert's office, which had been open to the public, is now locked and posted with a sign saying the office is closed. A phone number is posted for visitors to leave messages.

A judge issued a detailed order Tuesday for reporters covering the Aug. 6 hearing, outlining procedures right down to parking availability.

IN BRIEF

Aiello pleads guilty to assault charge

IU offensive lineman Sam Aiello pleaded guilty to assault causing injury Tuesday, stemming from an April 5 incident in the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St., where he allegedly stabbed a patron of the bar in the eye with a pool cue.

"I don't know what went into consideration [with the guilty plea]," said Assistant Johnson County Attorney Victoria Dominguez. Aiello's attorney, Matthew Petrelka, could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

Dominguez said Aiello and Petrelka will ask for a "deferred judgment" at the sentencing hearing, meaning the court can rule without a "finding of guilt" and place the person on probation rather than convict him and sending him to jail. Dominguez said she would not recommend this course of action, in which Aiello would not be required to serve time in jail.

Aiello, who pleaded not guilty on grounds of self-defense May 20, was charged April 11 with assault causing injury. According to police reports, two men were playing a game of pool at the Sports Column when one left to use the restroom. When he returned to finish the game, the report shows, Aiello allegedly grabbed the man's cue, preventing further play. Shoving ensued between Aiello, the man, and the other player before the football player shoved the man against a wall, "then jabbed the victim in the eye with the pool cue causing injury," the report shows.

Aiello, a 6-5, 304-pound offensive lineman, is awaiting disciplinary action from the university. Iowa football coach Kirk Ferentz could not be reached for comment.

Sanderson to wrestle at Pan Am Games

AMES (AP) — Four-time national champion Cael Sanderson will compete with the U.S. men's freestyle wrestling team at the Pan American Games in the Dominican Republic.

Sanderson, a former wrestler at Iowa State University, earned the spot by winning the 185-pound title at the 2003 World Team Trials earlier this month.

Former Iowa standout Joe Williams also will compete with the team at the games, which will be held Aug. 6-8 in Santo Domingo.

Alford prepares team for trip Down Under

BY JASON BRUMMUND
THE DAILY IOWAN

Kangaroos, koalas ... and Hawkeyes? Iowa's men's basketball team began practice Tuesday for a five-game, 12-day trip to Australia to play against a handful of the country's professional teams. The team will depart Iowa City on Aug. 10 and will return on Aug. 22.

"The trip comes at a good time for our team as we look forward to next year," Iowa head coach Steve Alford said in a press release. "As a team we need to work on defense, communicating on the floor, and shooting the basketball. It will give us a head start, not only for next season, but also individually in knowing the areas each player needs to improve on during individual workouts in the fall."

The first of five games will be played Aug. 14 against the Sydney Kings, followed by the Wollongong Hawks on Aug. 15, Brisbane Bullets on Aug. 17, Brisbane Capitals on Aug. 18, and the Kuiyam Pride on Aug. 20.

Redshirt sophomore guard Pierce was suspended last season, while DeWitz transferred from a junior college and elected to sit out the entire 2002-03 season in order to gain an additional year of Division I eligibility. He will be a sophomore next season.

"Nick DeWitz and Pierre

Pierce have practiced with us, but they haven't played in a game in nearly a year and a half," Alford said in the statement. "It should really help both of them heading into the year."

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Clement twirls gem vs. SF

CHICAGO (AP) — Matt Clement pitched a two-hitter, and Moises Alou hit a three-run homer in the first inning to lead the Chicago Cubs over the San Francisco Giants, 3-0.

Clement (8-9) struck out eight and walked two in his third career shutout.

He struck out the side in the fifth inning.

The only hits for the Giants were a fourth-inning infield single by Marquis Grissom and a seventh-inning single by Andres Galarraga.

Alou homered following singles by Mark Grudzielanek and Sammy Sosa off Damian Moss (9-7), who allowed just five hits in seven innings.

After Grissom singled in the fourth, Clement walked Barry Bonds and retired Benito Santiago on an inning-ending lineout.

In the seventh inning, Aramis Ramirez booted Santiago's grounder for his 26th error of the season, the most in the major leagues.

Red Sox 14, Rangers 7

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Boston's Bill Mueller became the first player in major-league history to hit grand slams from both sides of the plate in a game, connecting for three homers to lead the Red Sox over the Texas Rangers Tuesday night.

Mueller, batting left-handed, hit a solo homer in the third inning against R.A. Dickey.

Batting right-handed, he hit his first slam off Aaron Fultz in the seventh for a 9-4 lead. One inning later, he connected from the left side against Jay Powell for a 14-4 advantage.

Mueller had a career-high nine RBIs with the first three-homer game of his career. He has 13 homers this season, also a career best, and four career slams.

It was the 12th time a player hit two grand slams in a game, the first since Boston's Nomar Garciaparra against Seattle on May 10, 1999.

Mueller had his second multi-homer game of the season, the third of his career. He hit two homers Moises Alou of the Cubs is greeted at home plate by teammate Sammy Sosa after Alou's three-run home run in the first inning on Tuesday. The blast proved to be the difference in a 3-0 Cubs win over the Giants.

Cardinals 2, Expos 1

MONTREAL (AP) — Scott Rolen's sacrifice fly in the ninth inning led the St. Louis Cardinals to a victory over the Montreal Expos.

Garrett Stephenson scattered four hits and outdueled Livan Hernandez in a game that took just 2 hours and 4 minutes.

Rolen was 2-3 with two RBIs, including a homer in the second inning.

Stephenson (5-10) struck out four and walked none.

Hernandez (10-7) allowed five hits and two runs.

After striking out twice in his first three at-bats, Albert Pujols singled with one out in the ninth to extend his hitting streak to 13 games.

Pujols advanced to third on Tino Martinez's single before scoring the go-ahead run on Rolen's fly to center.

Rolen gave St. Louis a 1-0 lead with a homer on a 2-2 pitch from Hernandez with one out in the second game, 1-1.

Braves 6, Astros 3

ATLANTA (AP) — Russ Ortiz stretched his winning streak to a career-high eight games and hit a homer, leading the Atlanta Braves to a victory over the Houston Astros in a matchup of division leaders Tuesday night.

Ortiz (15-4) allowed three runs in 5 1/2 innings to join Toronto's Roy Halladay as the only 15-game winners in the majors. John Smoltz worked the save.

Houston starter Roy Oswalt left in the third after reinjuring his right groin. His final pitch was knocked into the stands by Ortiz, tying the game, 1-1.

The Braves went ahead for good in their half of the fifth. Giles singled — his third hit — and Sheffield followed with a homer off Ricky Stone (5-4).

Phillies 2, Dodgers 0

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Vicente Padilla pitched eight shutout innings, and Bobby Abreu hit a two-run homer as the Philadelphia Phillies ended a four-game losing streak with a victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers on Tuesday night.

Padilla (10-8) allowed three hits, struck out four, and walked one.

Joss Mesa got the save.

Kazuhiro Ishii (9-5) took the loss.

The Phillies scored in the second inning. Mike Lieberthal hit a leadoff single, and Abreu then homered off a 3-1 pitch.

The Dodgers had runners on first and second with no outs in the fourth after Shawn Green singled and Paul Lo Duca was hit by a pitch. But Padilla ended the threat by getting Jeremy Burnitz and Adrian Beltre to fly out and retiring Larry Barnes on a grounder.

Ishii allowed just three hits and two runs with seven strikeouts in six innings.

son, while DeWitz transferred from a junior college and elected to sit out the entire 2002-03 season in order to gain an additional year of Division I eligibility. He will be a sophomore next season.

Pierce is excited about the trip and the competition that the team will play against, as well as the country he and his teammates have the opportunity to experience.

"It will be a good experience to just leave the country, and go experience a different culture, and sightsee a little bit, and get the competition against the pro teams," the Westmont, Ill., native said.

Miley replaces Boone in Cincy

BY JOE KAY

CINCINNATI — Dave Miley's only season in the major leagues was his worst year in baseball.

He was the Cincinnati Reds bench coach in 1993, helping rookie manager Tony Perez ease into the job. At that point, the former minor-league catcher seemed to be on the fast track as a coach.

Forty-four games into the season, Perez was fired by general manager Jim Bowden, and Miley was demoted to bullpen coach. The next year, he was in the minors again.

"That was a long year, to be honest with you," Miley said Tuesday. "That was just a tough year. It seems like a long, long time ago."

Ten years later, he's back. This time, he's in charge.

One of the Reds' most loyal employees finally got his chance to manage in the majors when Bowden and manager Bob Boone were fired Monday as part of a front-office makeover.

Miley, 41, will be interim manager for the rest of the season, trying to steady the team through uncertain times. The Reds don't expect to hire another general manager until after the World Series, then chose a manager.

If the Reds do well for the rest of the season, Miley could be a candidate. He arrived in Cincinnati on Tuesday with no promises and no pretensions. After spending his entire career with the Reds, first as a minor-league catcher and then as a minor-league coach or manager, he was just glad to arrive.

"With the time you spend down there, you wonder if it's ever going to happen," he said. "I spent all those years in the organization, and I always wanted the big club to win."

His loyalty was a factor in his long-awaited promotion. Miley had chances to leave for other organizations, but stuck it out with the Reds, who chose him out of high school in the second round of the 1980 amateur draft.

"My claim to fame is I was drafted before Eric Davis," he said.
