Whitmore to head tech

BY JEFFREY PATCH

U.S. Sen. Jim Whitmores decision to head the University of Texas System Campus in Austin was no secret. But the announcement of his resignation in April was a shock to many in the University of Texas System. The announcement came after an extended period of rumor and speculation.

Whitmore had been the system president for five years, during which time he oversaw the merger of the University of Texas at Austin and the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center. He had faced criticism for his handling of the merger and for his role in the Texas A&M merger.

Whitmore served as the system president at the University of Massachusetts before joining the University of Texas System as president-elect in 2001.

His resignation, effective in August, leaves a vacancy that will require the University of Texas System to search for a new president. The search process will likely take several months.

Despite the departure of Whitmore, the University of Texas System remains a strong educational institution with a long history of excellence. The system is composed of 14 institutions and employs more than 16,000 faculty members and staff.

The search for a new system president is expected to begin immediately and will likely involve an extensive search process.

Baghdad blast used military arms

BY PATRICK J. JOCDONNELL and TRACY WILKINSON

BAGHDAD - The bomb that leveled the U.S. consulate in Baghdad was a potent blend of plastic explosive and 20 pounds of C-4 plastic explosive, said an official familiar with the investigation.

The bomb was placed at the base of the consulate building, said the official, who asked not to be identified.

The bomb was detonated by a remote control device, said the official.

The blast caused extensive damage to the building, including the loss of windows and the collapse of the roof.

The consulate was closed indefinitely after the explosion.

The cause of the explosion was not immediately known, but authorities are considering several possibilities.

The official said that the explosion was likely caused by a remote-controlled device.

The blast sent a shock wave through the surrounding area, causing damage to nearby buildings.

The blast also sent玻璃 flying through the air, causing injuries to several people.

The blast caused a large amount of smoke and debris to fill the sky.

Barterd takes Alford plea in fiery stunt

By J.C. PERRY

A former assistant football coach at Iowa whose fiery stunt ignited a bar brawl last year was sentenced earlier today to a year in jail and a $1,500 fine. Staff writer Troy David Kline agreed to plead guilty to a charge of willfully disregard in front of a victim, then a UI freshman in class, the woman's safety, in exchange for a lighter sentence.

The charge stems from an incident that occurred April 15, 2002, in Etc., 118 St., Iowa City. Kline set fire to Everclear in the woman's dorm room at 2:30 a.m. on April 15. The woman was injured and later won a civil suit against Kline, who was sentenced earlier to 12 months in jail and a $1,500 fine.

The victim, who was not identified by name, then said she had been in a bar with Kline and other UI students when Kline started a fire in the dorm room. The victim said Kline then fled the scene.

The woman said Kline later approached her and told her he had started the fire. The victim said Kline then told her he did not mean to伤害 her.

Bus, dump truck collide on dusty road

TREVOLE, Iowa — Two children were injured Wednesday when a dump truck collided with a school bus at the intersection of Highway 10 and County Road A.

None of the injuries were life-threatening, and Bremer County Sheriff's Deputy Dan Pickett, who was seated in the hospital room with the children, said they were каждый.

"Everybody was scared, I think," he said.

The county-owned dump truck struck the bus about 1 p.m., west of Trevoole on Highway 10 in Bremer County, according to authorities. The bus then rolled over, but the children were not injured, Pickett said.

The bus was en route to a nearby school, and the children were not injured, Pickett said.

"They were taken to the hospital for observation," he said.

FCC head promotes ‘localism’

BY JUBE SHIVER JR.

WASHINGTON — Moving to quiet criticism that the Federal Communications Commission has been too quick to approve new low-power television and radio stations, FCC Chairman Michael Powell said Thursday that his agency would take steps to make broadcast regulations more local.

Powell said that the agency would form a task force to determine what broadcasters, some of whom have been criticized for airing generic newscasts that originate in centralized studios, should be compelled to produce more local news and other programming. He said the agency would begin an inquiry into rules that would promote "localism" at TV and radio stations.

In addition, the FCC intends to accelerate the licensing of up to 1,000 low-powered radio stations that are largely being sought by churches, schools, and other nonprofit groups. Powell said at a news conference.

The initiatives were unveiled nearly a month after House of Representatives overwhelmingly approved an appropriations measure that would reverse the FCC by preventing any broadcaster from owning TV stations that reach more than 35 percent of U.S. households. The legislation would roll back the 45 percent TV ownership cap approved by the commission on June 2.

With the Senate set next month to consider reversing many of the new media-ownership rules, Powell has been under pressure to address what is threatening to become a major political embarrassment for the Bush administration.

"We heard the voice of public concern about the media loud and clear," he said. "Localism is at the core of these concerns, and we are going to tackle it head on."

Surge benefits utilities

In one of the first detailed accounts of the events leading up to the Aug. 14, 2003 blackout, Blackstone, Massachusetts-based power-transmission company said it was blindsided by the planning-energy grid surrounding Cleveland field a year and a half before the event, and was caught off guard by the scale and duration of the outage that knocked out the electricity in Lake Erie.

"Our company did what they meant to do," he said. "But when you're working through the logistics of the problem, you get all the facts together and then go from there."

According to International Transmission Company's controllers in Chicago, Ohio's lines ran at a 50 percent load before Aug. 8 when Pentagon officials said Wednesday.

Three minutes later, two more lines in Ohio tripped off. Power that had been flowing into Lake Erie trickled, the Cleveland area took a new load, building up to this thing. We were surprised that FirstEnergy's Transmission released its analysis Wednesday and said he was surprised that FirstEnergy's Transmission wasn't indexed from the start of the region before the blackout." he said.

By then, Ontario, Canada, was pumping massive amounts of power through western Michigan into northern Ohio, said Denis Deslauriers, FirstEnergy's director of strategic planning.

"It is like you kind of heard something, and you start looking around to see what is it," he said. "And before you have the chance to figure out what it is, 2,000 square miles of power—possibly Philadelphia—lost."

FirstEnergy spokesman Mark Durbin declined to address the specifics of International Transmission's study Wednesday. "Other companies say what they want to say, but you're still working through the investigative process," he said. "We just want to get all the facts together and then go from there."

The company, chief executive Joseph Welch, told Bloomberg News "That is not graphical, but we do know about it. There was an hour backlog building up to the thing. We literally were sitting there blind."

International Transmission's analysis with the explanations of New York power grid operations, the company's executive chairman said that at least two of the lines were quickly pushed past their capacities. Deslauriers said.

"The voltage on the Michigan system soon fell off, and two power plants in the middle of the state went off-line. It was a take-off seconds before the blackout," he said.

Arnold kicks off recall campaign

BY WILLIAM BOOTH

LOS ANGELES — A more star-studded and the endorsement of Arnold Schwarzenegger's own house builder.

Arnold Schwarzenegger in his first news conference Wednesday told voters that taxes and over-spending have dimmed the California dream — and he pledged to set things right if elected governor.

But he continued to avoid specifics when asked to detail what kind of deep cuts he would make. Although many voters are telling pollsters they are surprised by his candidacy, they also say they know little about his off-screen character and position. Standing before TV news cameras, Schwarzenegger appeared formal and composed. He made no gaffes.

State Democrats and Gov- Gray Davis, who described the recall as a "right-wing" power grab, was expected to intensify during his final extended session with reporters.

Placed by his top aide an assistant to Schwarzenegger, former Reagan-era Secretary of State George Shultz, Schwarzenegger spent most of his campaign focused on the campaign's core message. The recall was the first in a long line of events that highlighted the governor's ability to move through the political system with ease. "It's very much pre-con-

WASHINGTON — The United States and Israel are ready to deploy dozens of military training exercises this summer in Iraq and Afghanistan, where thousands of American and Soviet soldiers are deployed.

Approximately 15,000 American service members are deployed to Iraq and approximately 2,000 are in Afghanistan. The largest deployment is expected to be in the Iraqi theater.

"Our military forces are on the verge of taking the offensive," Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said Wednesday. "Our forces are ready to conduct a full-scale military operation.

"The enemy is clearly on the offensive," he said. "We believe that this is a critical time for the Iraqi people to come together and build a new society.

Bad cables shut down UIHC parking ramp

"It's unlikely that anything disastrous could have happened," said Ricketts, adding that if it prevented the concrete surface from hardening, it could result in cracks developing. Jeff Rahn, the manager of parking facilities operations at the UI, said the repair was necessary because after the cabling was removed, the concrete was allowed to dry faster than usual.

optimizers from the extremist group Ansar al-Islam — who hold in their lease in northern Iraq during the war — have slipped back into the country since May 1 in addition to reduced surveillance by suspected members of Al Qaeda. Some have moved from western Iraq to the eastern portion of the country.

The U.N. briefing was "of a different nature from the intelligence we've seen before last week," Brennan said after Thursday's attack. "It does not mean that we can exclude the possibility that the Fedayeen Saddam or some of the old della streets grew. They had very substantial experience in the field and a lot of their intelligence services, and it's not just possible that it was done by them."

The degree to which design and engineering expertise was shared with each other remains a matter of debate. Almost all who well-armed former Baath Party officials were known to be leach- ing with ruthless extremists from outside who soon occupied Iraq as the new battlefront against the US.

In Baghdad, anger, sorrow over blast

BAGHDAD — This distinction is pretty clear to Cleora Manuel. She is the woman who deserves to die, and any Iraqis who do so in this war "are being used for something."

"If you kill those who do not deserve to die, you should be called a terrorist," said the photographer from downtown Baghdad, a Baghdad neighborhood known for its attacks on support of Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

Even now, victims are given the bounty by the family of suicide bombers. Earlier this week, a woman was killed in the front seat of a suicide car that blew up in a Baghdad hospital.

Abbas orders Hamas arrests

BY KARIM LAUB

JERUSALEM — Palestinian Prime Minister Mahmoud Abbas ordered the arrests Wednesday of 14 members of the militant Islamic Jihad group as suspects in the bombing of a UN building that killed 23 people and injured scores more.

He said the 14 were members of the extremist group and were suspect in the bombing of a UN building that killed 23 people and injured scores more.

The move came as the US, Britain and Israel launched a new wave of strikes against militant groups in the Gaza Strip, where at least 20 people were killed.

We did not see much from the UN, but they told us to forget about it, said Abbas, whose shop sits in the shadow of Abu Hanifa, a famous mosque. The bombing of the UN building in downtown Baghdad on the 13th of December made it a suicide bomber stoked with anger.

The Israel government condemned the bombing and called for a diplomatic effort to end the violence. In Jerusalem, he was shot by a Palestinian, an Israeli security official said.

The fall of Saddam Hussein, a notorious figure, has put a strain on the peace process. The UN has raised questions about the future of the region.

TEHRAN — US military commanders in Iraq now no need to add more troops to fight the war, despite the bombing of the UN building in Baghdad, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said Wednesday.

He said the US military strategy in Iraq is to attack the Iraqi government and support the US-led coalition. The attack was seen as a response to the UN attack.

The Palestinian Prime Minister, who said the bombing of the UN building was a "suicide bomber stoked with anger," has called for an immediate end to the violence.

Abbas was seen as a moderate leader who has tried to negotiate with Israel and the US. He has been under pressure from the militant groups to stop the violence.

But Abbas avoided the issue of his detention, saying he would work with the international community to bring about a peace process.

The US has been trying to negotiate a peace deal with the Palestinians, who have been split over whether to accept or reject a peace deal with Israel.

The US has offered to mediate the conflict, but Abbas has rejected the idea. He has said he will not negotiate with Israel until Israel agrees to withdraw from the West Bank.

The US has a military base in Iraq, and has been trying to negotiate a withdrawal from the country. The US is pressing Abbas to accept a peace deal with Israel.

Darwin's theory on evolution inspired a profound change in the understanding of the natural world. It challenged the prevailing notion of a static, unchanging universe. Instead, it suggested that species evolve over time through the process of natural selection. This concept fundamentally altered the way we interpret the history of life and the diversity of species we observe today. Darwin's work laid the foundation for modern biology and continues to influence scientific thought. It is a testament to the power of a well-supported, scientifically rigorous hypothesis to change our understanding of the world.

LONDON — Are you feeling like a "mogul" because you apparently remember the meaning of the word? Or are you a "helmet" and steadfast at your rubbish disposal language?

For many years, the British have been sending out 200,000 new editions of "The Oxford Dictionary of English" to people across the land and foreign, that have returned English usage and are included in the new editions of the "Oxford Dictionary of English" which is being released today.

"Nigger," taken from the show "House of Cards," becomes a "nigger". The word is used in a sentence: "His face was only a few inches from mine." The term "nigger," which appears in the dictionary, is defined as a "person of American Negro descent who is identified by such term in a derogatory and offensive manner." The term "nigger" is not used in the dictionary because it is not a derogatory term.

The Hawkeyes, who were ranked eighth in the conference by a poll of eyes at Big Ten media day in Chicago, picked up defending national champion Ohio State and Illinois on their conference schedule for Big Ten football in 2003.

"To say we're going to go 8-again or win the conference championship, you know there are 10 other programs that are pretty good in our league that are going to do the same thing. So you have to be able to beat each other," Ferentz said at the Hawkeyes' media day on Aug. 7. The Buckeyes are led by junior quarterback Troy Smith, who is the Hawkeyes' conference opener on Aug. 31.

The Hawkeyes' schedule, which ranked second among Big Ten programs, was regarded as a more serious charge of academic favoritism abuse problem ineligible assault when he was suspended Jackson can only wait and hope his career. There is no Bliss at Baylor

BY JIM LITKE

Nobody at Baylor told head basketball coach Dave Bliss that firing a dead kid was a bad idea.

Nobody had to. It just isn't in many words.

Recovering Princeton alumnus Bliss was Blue-idea, like his team was bringing in one questionable character after another and lowering the tone about slightly and weapons chemistry at every turn. He did sound that much like himself.

And when it blew up, it was Blue-idea, to be honest. As he wasultiately be the headline at every tum. Be clear about that much.

The same sentiments, apparently, he was not alone. Laura Dennehy was Bliss'.

It's the kind of sentiment that Bliss has always been known for. When it blew up, it was Bliss' idea, according to one former player.

And when it blew up, it was Bliss' idea, according to one former player. When he emerged, Collins-Hays said the

"I think the players see us in good terms. That's what I think the players see us in good terms. It's what they see us in good terms."

But that was precisely the problem. Bliss had to do it. The only way he could. He couldn't afford to do it another way.

Iowa's were only asked to last 13 times last year, a daunting task to repeat for a team that overachieved last year — the Hawkeyes are confident.

"We had some key players step up and do things that our coaches thought were uncharacteristic," said coach Kirk Ferentz.

That said, the stoic Ferentz (a guy who has not smiled in the press room in five years) is not expecting the Hawkeyes to repeat last year's success. "We won't be playing against the same level of talent," he said.

Along with a formidable schedule, the Hawkeyes must also replace some studs — the 43 players who made up the 11-starters from last year's roster.

"We're going to have to replace some of our best players," Ferentz said.

The key to the Hawkeyes' success this season will be their ability to find replacements for those losses.

Iowa will be missing some of its top performers from last season, including quarterback Brad Banks, who led the team with 2,000 passing yards and 13 touchdowns. Wide receiver Jermelle Johnson was also a key player, catching 43 passes for 620 yards and four touchdowns.

The Hawkeyes will also miss the leadership of defensive end Kevin Williams, who had 14 sacks and 16 tackles for loss last season.

However, Ferentz is optimistic about the team's chances.

"I think we're going to have a very good football team," he said.

Ferentz said the team's strength this year will be its depth, with several players stepping up to fill the void left by the departures of Banks and Williams.

"We have some talented players who can step up and play big roles," he added.

The Hawkeyes will face a tough schedule this season, with games against top teams such as Ohio State, Wisconsin, and Purdue.

"We know our schedule is going to be tough," Ferentz said. "But we're ready to face the challenge."
I love art, and I want artwork on my body — if people say your body is a temple, then I say decorate it.

— you had to hit it off, Kautman.

The apprentices paid their dues with regular sketching and manipulation tasks before picking their first tattoos as apprentices. After honing their skills, they performed small tattoo work on friends of friends that their friends volunteered. "If you want to learn and eventually work your way up to larger or more challenging pieces," Warren said, "nothing will make you more impressed than the real thing."

Kautman’s guidance and support throughout the apprenticeship period paved the way for the now-defunct students to build a solid foundation of skills to build upon. "He gave a lot of people the opportunity to open their own shops at an early age," said Muddleston.

In conclusion, Kautman’s input in the tattoo's execution, coupled with his supervision, was a testament to the importance of mentorship in the tattooing industry. His dedication to ensuring the quality and success of his apprenticeship program is evident in the number of successful tattoo artists who have emerged from his studio.

Body of Work

Try not to wince as a humming needle dipped in scarlet ink grooves birth to bolts of pain. Gazing at my inner left knee, I see the crimson apparition of a single Spanish word. The face of Nemesis Studios tattoo artist Scott Kautman shows perfection and well-rounded precision as he affixes the tattoo pricked by tattooery. A nearby collection of art books boldly attempts to distract me from what I own must be purgatory, but the truth is that I love the pain threshold that tattooing offers.

"You OK there, buddy?" Kautman asks, noticing my tension.

I rack up and tell him I'm not.

The artist-heavy permanently over his forehead, etts of animal. His heaped tattooed arms draw my attention — they agree with large, bristling depictions of a tortured soul, a perpetually mounted, and a fiery portrait of mixture Thun- in of the few not only in black, but a few shades of crimson and gray.

A small metal chair, covered in scarlet tiles, holds black tattooed meat through one of his hands as he grunts the small, burning tattoo machine. The style of the needle, a traditional one, with a fine point, is drawn into a freestyle pot of ink and continues its work.

In something of a contrast to his low for tattooers death-spoke, it is my inner left knee, Kautman is known for the detail and the focus on the tattoo's intention. He draws his designs using only the tools on his right hand, and each tattoo is completed in one sitting.

"With Scott, you never get a day without drawing." After high school and a couple sketchy tattoos acquired in dingy airbrush painter's, Scott Kautman studied with friend Warren in 1983, and eventually honed his skills as a tattoo artist.

"He started a mall in my body. If people say your body is a temple, they say can't be true," he says.

On the other hand, Kautman found himself something no one can do on a bench on the Pedestrian Mall. Wreaths of white smoke hung languidly from a cigarette dangling from his lips, and occasionally white-hot beams of the summer sun shone on his face, but the sad truth is, I've never been to a day without tattooing.

"You can pick up a crayon, " said Sonya Muddleston, a silvery plume gone from her hair. Muddleston, the airbrush painter's, became a tattoo artist early on due to Scott Kautman's influence on her. "I got into the tattoo work on my own, and I could pick up a tattoo or something," she said.

"I have no idea how to detail and bring your work your way up to larger or more challenging pieces," Warren said. "But it makes a lot easier to work on your own."

"With Scott, you never get a day without drawing," After high school and a couple sketchy tattoos acquired in dingy airbrush painter's, Scott Kautman studied with friend Warren in 1983, and eventually honed his skills as a tattoo artist. "He is quick and creative, and he always has a good idea of where he's going," she added. "With Scott, you never get a day without drawing."

"He has great shading — I have to bow down to the techniques he used," and Sonya Muddleston, when numerous tattoos include an indigenous American indigenous tattoo, said she appreciated Kautman's input in the tattooing community, saying that the design would have been lost in many other cultures.

"He wanted to do my personality and not the trend. I was in that day, the Detroit Revol Emeralds employee said with a smile.

Kautman said he always works with customers to make the image right for them, first to build a rapport, then to start work.

2C Day and night, Irving B. Mellencamp sang, "I'm a problem. Muller decided on Irving."

Mellencamp still rockin' the wave

By JUSTIN GLANVILLE

Two years ago, John Mellencamp didn't expect to make another album for a major label. His last album was released in 2001, under the name "Trouble No More," and was met with mixed reviews. His new album, "Trouble No More," has been well-received by critics, and has topped the charts.

The driving force behind the creation of the album was Mellencamp's desire to make a statement about the state of the world. "It's an American story," he said. "It's about being perceived as a dumbass, and the damage that can do to a community, and how the damage can be reversed." Mellencamp's music is often characterized by its political and social commentary, and this album is no exception. The songs on "Trouble No More" explore themes of war, corruption, and the struggle for justice.

Mellencamp's passion for music is evident in his performance, and the album is a testament to his talent as a songwriter and performer. "It's a way of making a statement," he said. "It's a way of saying something important." Mellencamp's music has always been a reflection of his personal experiences, and this album is no exception. The songs on "Trouble No More" are a reflection of his commitment to social justice and his passion for making a difference in the world.

The album has received critical acclaim, with many critics praising Mellencamp's songwriting and performance. "It's a great album," said one critic. "It's a great album for anyone who loves music and cares about the world." Mellencamp's music is a reminder that music can be a powerful tool for change, and his commitment to making a difference in the world is evident in every song on "Trouble No More."

OPEN RANGE

1/4, 7: and 9:30 p.m.
Campus 3

As I watched Open Range, its imagery inevitably reminded me of the classic Western American movies. There were the cattle drives of Red River (1948), the showdowns between yellow rose petals and opposite sides of a narrow gap (1951); and the gritty, hard-boiled, and intense atmosphere of Shane (1953). It's not just the debuts of Kevin Costner and Robert Duvall, but also the scenery of the plains that remind us of the Western genre.

Kosterman is played by the versatile Kevin Costner. After working long hours sitting as a pulp-out at the mill, he is finally able to relax. Despite this, every moment of his life seems to be filled with anxiety and fear, which he tries to hide behind his stern and gruff exterior. His relationship with the villain, played by Robert Duvall, becomes a test of their wills, as they both try to outsmart and defeat each other.

In the scene where Kevin Costner's character washes his hands in the river, it is clear that he is trying to cleanse himself of the sins of his past. This scene is a powerful reminder of the individual's struggle against their inner demons. The film's climax, with its brilliant filmed, climactic shot, almost felt like yelling, "Forget everything!" to the audience.

The story on the range is a testament to the genre that gave us the heroes of the past. The story is about the futility of the individual in the face of a greater force. It's a story of survival, of triumph against the odds.

Kevin Costner and Robert Duvall star in Open Range.
