BUSH TO ASK FOR $87 BILLION FOR STABILIZING AND REBUILDING IRAQ

An unidentified pedestrian watches President Bush's address to the nation on Sunday outside the CNN studios in New York. Bush vowed anew to continue the fight against global terrorism but said it would cost more than had been acknowledged.

Bush doubles ante for Iraq

BY MIKE ALLEN
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — President Bush, addressing the nation Sunday night about the mounting casualties and instability in Iraq, said he will ask Congress to double the amount already being spent on the conflict and urged the United Nations to play a greater role in the rebuilding effort.

Bush said he will ask Congress for $87 billion in additional military and reconstruction spending, significantly more than the range of $50 billion to $80 billion that administration officials had previously told lawmakers they would seek. That brings to approximately $150 billion the amount the United States is spending on the Iraq war and its aftermath, $50 billion more than officials had estimated just a few months ago.

"Two years ago, I told the Congress and the country that the war on terror would be a lengthy war, a different kind of war, fought on many fronts in many places," Bush said in a 17-minute televised address from the Cabinet Room of the White House. "Iraq is now the central front. Enemies of freedom are making a desperate stand there — and there they must be defeated. This will take time and require sacrifice. Yet we will do whatever is necessary, we will spend what is necessary, to achieve this essential victory in the war on terror, to promote freedom, and to make our nation more secure."

The presidential address came as ongoing violence in Iraq is shaking public support for the occupation and for Bush. As the

UI junior dies after accident

BY ERIN ALTHOFF
THE DAILY IOWAN

A UI junior hit by an SUV late last week while crossing Burlington Street died of her injuries on Sept. 5, and an investigation into her death remains underway.

Amanda Skolnick, 20, who was struck by a green Ford Explorer at the intersection of Burlington and Linn streets while walking to work on Sept. 4, was pronounced dead at UI Hospitals and Clinics. The driver, 20-year-old Thomas Eldridge, was turning left onto Burlington from Linn Street when the collision took place, police reported.

Skolnick

Charges against the Kirkwood Community College student are pending. A blonde and petite Skolnick, standing 5-2, was very close to her mother, friends noted, and would give up other social opportunities to spend time with her.

"She was just the most bubbly person you would ever meet," Kelly said. "She just talked to everybody and always had a smile on her face."

Skolnick met Kelly and close friend UI junior Jodie Hacker during their freshman year while living in Burge Residence Hall. A year later, UI sophomore Erin Nelson was introduced to the group.

"I met her Rollerblading," Nelson said. "And I remember leaving thinking she was so awesome and so fun. I was slow, and she was slow [on Rollerblades), so we hung out in the back and let the fast ones go ahead."

Skolnick's friends said the pre-nursing major enjoyed shopping, especially at Rampage, Abercrombie & Fitch, Express, and Hollister. She also enjoyed dancing and spending time watching movies, especially Wayne's World.

Her friends said they would miss the trips they took together more than anything, such as a trip to Des Moines last summer, where they patronized a salsa bar. "We were the only people in there who spoke English," Kelly said.

Skolnick's volunteer work in the UIHC intensive care cardiac unit, coupled with her career choice and involvement with her church in high school, highlighted her desire to spend her life helping others, friends said.

Skolnick had started working at Atlas World Grill a week before the accident. Manager Nicole Kelly said she will be missed despite her limited time at the restaurant.

"It was pretty shocking," Nicole Kelly said, adding that Skolnick was a hard worker who was always willing to help out and learn more about her job. "It just makes you realize how quickly things change."

According to a family neighbor of 15 years, Jane Levans, all individuals in the neighborhood were visibly upset. "It was such a hard, hard thing. Her parents are devastated. We all are."

"Nobody has ever had a bad thing to say about her, and now they never will. She's just that kind of person."

Skolnick's parents, still in mourning, declined to comment.

DODD TRIAL

Case opens in 22-year-old crime

BY ALEX LANG
THE DAILY IOWAN

Jury selection is scheduled to begin today in the trial of Richard Dodd for the alleged kidnapping and slaying of a Coralville woman almost 22 years ago.

Prosecutors claim that Dodd, 46, kidnapped and killed Vicki Klotzbach, 22, whose body was found in a field near a Coralville Interstate 80 exchange in 1981.

The investigation was stalled until 1996, when officers used DNA testing to match Dodd to a Western-style revolver used in the homicide. The case awaited trial until more witnesses and evidence could be examined. Dodd is serving a life sentence for the kidnapping and rape of a 10-year-old girl in Des Moines; he was convicted in 1984.

On Sept. 5, the defense moved to remove a photo lineup shown to Laurie Herring in February 2003 to identify Dodd. Herring, a UI student in 1981 who gave initial statements to police, said she was contacted recently when Coralville police were able to connect Dodd to the murder.

Barry Bedford — who was the head investigator in the case until he became the Coralville police chief — along with an Arizona detective, showed Herring a lineup of Dodd and five other people who fit the description she gave in 1981.

Herring, who now lives in Mesa, Ariz., said she saw Dodd in the area where the body of Klotzbach was found. Herring said that while she was leaving her Little Ridge apartment in Coralville and headed toward the corner convenience store, she noticed that a car was following her. While she was making her selections in the Mustang Mart, a block from where she lived, she noticed Dodd staring at her. She added that they had a stare-down for about 45 seconds.

"I became very uncomfortable," Herring said. "I felt he intended to do a lot of harm to me."

The defense claims that the photo lineup was unfair because it singled out Dodd's photo and led Herring to choose him as the person she had seen in 1981.

Claiming that the picture's shading and color stood out from the other pictures, the defense said the lineup suggested to Herring that she should pick Dodd. They also said that Dodd's picture emphasized the "Jay Leno chin," a protruding chin line, thus making his stand out from the other pictures.

Herring and Bedford deny that Dodd stood out in any way.

"The eyes drew me to picture No. 2 [Dodd's photograph]," said Herring, who also pointed out Dodd in the courtroom as the person that she saw in 1981 following her.

Additional motions to limit evidence in the trial — such as photos of the crime scene and testimony from a woman who spoke with Dodd after he was hospitalized for attempted suicide — were also presented on Sept. 5.

Judge Patrick Grady is expected to rule on the motions before jury selection begins today.

Student gov'ts push tuition reform

BY PAULA MAVROUDIS
THE DAILY IOWAN

Members of UI Student Government, in association with student governments from the other two Iowa public universities, presented a letter to the state Board of Regents suggesting plans for the future of possible tuition increases announced on Sept. 4.

The letter, addressed to Regents' President Owen Newlin, makes four main points concerning tuition. It asks the board to predict tuition increases before they happen while using a percentage limitation on increases, change the date of the regents' tuition decision until after the Legislature has decided upon appropriations, increase financial aid for students, and increase student representation on the board.

"I knew this was coming," said Regent Robert Downer, adding that he'd spoken with UISG President Nate Green over the summer about tuition increases. "I encourage this, and I want to turn things around."

The letter was written by members of UISG in association with members of student governments from Iowa State University and Northern Iowa University.

Arafat nominates new prime minister

BY MOLLY MOORE AND JOHN WARD ANDERSON
WASHINGTON POST

JERUSALEM — Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat nominated the speaker of the Parliament as prime minister Sunday to replace Mahmoud Abbas, who resigned on Sept. 6 after an acrimonious four-month tenure, senior Palestinian officials said.

Ahmed Qureia was accepted by senior representatives of the Palestinian Liberation Organization and the Fatah political movement as Arafat's nominee to fill the position and attempt to quell a mounting political crisis, officials said.

Saeb Erekat, a Palestinian legislator and chief negotiator with Israel and the United States, said Arafat proposed Qureia Sunday after Abbas (popularly known as Abu Mazen) "made a very public statement saying 'my resignation is final.' It was obvious that Abu Mazen was not going to go back from this," Erekat said.

Candidates stress experience

BY SEUNG MIN KIM
THE DAILY IOWAN

With nearly a century of combined experience working with children, candidates in the Iowa City School Board election are using their expertise in a race that concludes Tuesday.

Randall Rogers, a trade teacher who led industrial technology classes in the district for 35 years, said he would draw upon his interactions with at-risk students to focus on programs that would help them.

Mary Vasey worked for 25 years at Metro High School, an alternative institution in Cedar Rapids. The School Board's recent efforts to help at-risk kids is what motivated her to run for a position on the board, she said.

The election's incumbents, meanwhile, point to another type of experience they say is valuable for a board member.

Jan Leff and Pete Wallace, running for their second and third terms, respectively, on the board, said member continuity helps the panel's dynamic. After three years on the board, Leff said, she has learned "everything I need to know" to be a productive board member, and Wallace called I'm probably the candidate most fit for the blue-collar community.

— Randall Rogers, Iowa City School Board candidate his past experience a valuable attribute.

Wallace also noted that the current board members "work fantastically well together, and I'd like to see that continue.

"I like to think that wisdom comes with experience and age," said the 60-year-old.

Like Vasey, Rogers said he encountered many children deemed at-risk while he taught and coached wrestling, football, and track at West High School, laying the groundwork for future board initiatives.

"I'm probably the candidate most fit for the blue-collar community," he said. "I have lots of experience to share with the rest of the community — ideas that we can use to help the situation of at-risk kids."

Vasey said that, while she likes the governance policies the School Board has adopted and the way it operates, she can bring some new energy and perspective to the semi-weekly meetings.

"I really like the way the School Board works," she said. "I hope to continue and strengthen it [if elected]."

All four candidates would like to see the district's $39 million building projects completed. In addition, Wallace plans to continue efforts with nutrition, while Vasey would like to focus on the arts programs and volunteer opportunities. Leff would like to see possible curriculum changes, and Rogers, a Coralville resident, said he wants equal geographical representation on the board and to seek alternative energy resources.

Polls for Tuesday's election will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Work heats up for Burge workers

BY MICHAEL DHAR
THE DAILY IOWAN

Some cafeteria workers can't stand the heat, so UI officials are trying to cool off their kitchen.

The university will reopen an entrance to the Burge Residence Hall cafeteria's dishwashing room that was closed at the beginning of the year because of construction on a new kitchen nearby. Workers had complained that closing the entrance cut off ventilation and caused excessive heat near the hot-water dishwashing machine.

"It's hotter than hell in here," cafeteria worker Charles Lortz said inside the approximately 60-foot-long, 40-foot-wide dishwashing room. "It gets up to 100 degrees ... On the real hot days, it was nearly impossible to work in here."

The culprit — a bulky metal machine that takes up half the room — steam-cleans the dishes that roll in on plastic conveyor belts, throwing out heat and water in the process. A temporary wall erected by construction crews now covers the room's southern end, an area that once opened to the rest of the kitchen.

"You can feel the heat difference," said Riley Genz, a cafeteria worker and Kirkwood College sophomore, at the room's northern entrance. "The heat's got no place to go except this way."

Safety codes do not require the university to reopen the entrance, and a report from the Facilities Services Group said construction had not affected the room's ventilation. But university officials wanted to respond to workers' concerns, said Maggie Van Oel, the director of Residence Services.

"It's not like we think it's OK," she said. "And we want it to be as comfortable as possible."

Van Oel said she attributes the perceived rise in temperature to the "100-plus-degree weather outside" in late August. Workers had just returned to work at the beginning of the fall semester, and the hot weather made their labor seem exceptionally difficult.

"The room itself didn't cause a problem," she said. "It's a hard job, and the weather outside didn't help."

Workers filed their complaint on Aug. 28; they have not issued any more since the weather cooled, Van Oel said.

During the exceptionally hot weather, dining managers took steps to reduce the risk of heat exhaustion, including rotating dishroom workers every 15 minutes, adding fans, and encouraging people to drink cool liquids.

"They don't have to wear their (uniform's) coats; they're allowed to take breaks," said dining room assistant manager Chris Robinson. "Now that temperature's lower outside, it's a lot better."

University officials also plan to post signs listing the symptoms of heat exhaustion and advising workers how to keep cool. Construction on the kitchen is slated to finish in January.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CEDAR FALLS — A police officer who led many funeral processions in his years as a motorcycle officer will be laid to rest with similar honors today.

Honor guards from the Waterloo Police and Fire Departments will conduct burial ceremonies for Richard Harned, a 30-year police veteran, and his wife, Suzanne Harned, a former police and fire dispatcher.

A 21-gun salute by Waterloo officers is planned.

Funeral services are scheduled for 10 a.m. today at Nazareth Evangelical Lutheran Church in Cedar Falls; burial is at Greenwood Cemetery.

Most Waterloo police officers may attend the ceremony. Officers from the Iowa State Patrol, Black Hawk County Sheriff's Office, and the Iowa Division of Criminal Investigation will handle police calls during the services.

The Harneds were killed late on Sept. 3 in their Cedar Falls home.

Suzanne Harned's son from a previous marriage, Ryan Eric Johnson, 26, of Cedar Falls has been charged with two counts of first-degree murder.

Iowa Medical Examiner Dr. Julia Goodin said on Sept. 5 that the cause of death for each was a single gunshot wound.

Police have not commented on a possible motive for the killings. Friends have said Harned spoke little of her son, and the two reportedly had little contact.

Johnson had numerous contacts with police in his teens, but his adult record is limited to a single simple misdemeanor arrest and approximately a dozen traffic citations, police records show.

"He took care of a lot of people that way," said Waterloo Police Chief Thomas Jennings.

Bill Winder, a former owner of Kearns Huisman-Schumacher Chapel, remembered Richard Harned as a pleasant and efficient officer.

"I enjoyed having him come out and lead the processions. He's been doing it for a long time," Winder said. "Rick was an exception. I never heard him be ornery or mad or upset."

Score wars - ACT, SAT collide

BY STEVE GIEGERICH

ASSOCIATED PRESS

First, the maker of America's second-most popular college-entrance exam releases this year's test scores and declares incoming freshmen largely unprepared for math and science classes. A week later, results from the nation's No. 1 test show math scores at a 35-year high.

Something doesn't add up. In the wake of the annual release of ACT and SAT test scores, educators are still disagreeing about what to make of the results. One testing critic calls the discrepancy a result of marketing efforts aimed at setting the two exams apart.

"These are businesses in a nonprofit form," said Robert Schaeffer of FairTest, an organization that advocates balanced standardized exams.

The ACT scores for the high-school class of 2003 were identical in math and science to the year before — 20.6 and 20.8, respectively, on a 36-point scale. In the last five years, math and science scores have dropped slightly on the test, which was taken by nearly 1.2 million of last spring's high school graduates.

ACT researchers analyzed this year's results and concluded that just 26 percent of test-takers were ready to handle college coursework in science, 40 percent in math.

Meanwhile, the SAT math scores were the best since at least 1967: 519 on a scale with a top score of 800. Since the 1999 exam, math scores are up eight points.

Some educators say the number of students enrolled in

To have scores higher than 35 years ago, and to be testing a larger and more diverse student body than was tested 35 years ago, is pretty darn impressive — whether they're ready for college or not.

Andrew Porter, director of the Learning Sciences Institute at Vanderbilt University remedial math and science courses at four-year schools support the ACT's conclusion.

Michael Kirst, a Stanford University education professor, said ACT's position is compatible with a study he co-wrote earlier this year. It also found that many freshmen are not prepared for college math and science, despite gains in achievement scores.

But Andrew Porter, the director of the Learning Sciences Institute at Vanderbilt University, maintains that the SAT scores do, in fact, represent an upward trend in math and science proficiency.

"To have scores higher than 35 years ago, and to be testing a larger and more diverse student body than was tested 35 years ago, is pretty darn impressive — whether they're ready for college or not," he said.

Porter and other educators noted that the assessments of the SAT and ACT reflect the differences between the exams and the students who take the tests.

Although most universities are willing to factor either or both tests into the admissions process, the SAT is generally the primary exam taken by students on the two coasts, educators noted. It also figures more prominently in the admissions procedures at elite colleges and universities. The ACT is popular in the middle of the country, where it is the standard used by many public institutions.

Based in Iowa City, the nonprofit ACT based its findings on whether students reached "college readiness" benchmarks in the math and science sections of the exam.

It also gave students a questionnaire about their class work, which found fewer than half took three years of science and four years of math classes.

"I don't believe it's a perception," said Cyndie Schemer, ACT's vice president of development. "I think what we have here is a real issue supported by remedial course work that supports our data."

The New York-based College Board, the nonprofit association that administers the SAT, credited the boost in math scores on that test to increased enrollment in "rigorous" college preparatory math and science classes. The number of students taking precalculus has jumped by 12 percent since 1993, it said.

Schaeffer, the testing reformer, said that the ACT-SAT difference boils down to promotion of products. To appeal to the public and the media, each test-maker stresses "what's newsy" about its annual findings.

Vilsack to hold another 'come back' event

DES MOINES (AP) — Gov. Tom Vilsack plans to host a reception in Chicago on Sept. 25 in his continuing effort to persuade former Iowans to move back.

Vilsack will market Iowa's quality of life and educational opportunities.

He'll try to reach former residents who might be sick of lengthy commutes or tired of expensive mortgages or rents.

The reception is part of the Human Resource Recruitment

Consortium, a public-private partnership started four years ago when state officials became concerned about the possibility of future labor shortages. The program seeks ways to lure workers in the information technology, engineering, manufacturing, scientific research, financial and insurance, and managerial career fields.

So far, nearly 1,000 individuals and families have returned. Vilsack has hosted receptions in such cities as New York and Washington.

Nearly 28,000 residents between the ages of 20 and 34 left Iowa between 1995 and 2000.

"I don't think it's possible for the program to recapture everyone who has left the state," Vilsack said. He said the purpose is to make sure those who have left are aware of what's going on in the state with venture capital and economic development programs.

"One thousand families is a fairly significant number," he said. "But, we're not touching all of the universes of people that have left. ... There are people who have graduated from high school who've left, there are people who have graduated from other universities that perhaps we aren't tapping into."

Deliberations continue in rape case

Jurors will continue to deliberate today in a trial that will determine the fate of a Cedar Rapids man accused of sexually assaulting a woman as she slept.

Glass, however, testified that he had consensual sex with his accuser in a nearby bathroom. DNA evidence found inside the woman and on her clothing has been linked to Glass. The woman testified that she was unsure whether Glass had penetrated her as she slept.

Jurors were sent home after 4:30 p.m. Sept. 5 after deliberating for eight hours. They will continue talks at 9 a.m. today, faced with four possible verdicts:

- Third-degree sexual abuse, a Class C felony punishable by a maximum of 10 years and a $10,000 fine.
- Assault with intent to commit sexual abuse, an aggravated misdemeanor with a maximum penalty of two years in prison and a $5,000 fine.
- Assault, a simple misdemeanor

UI wins grant for bioresearch

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases has awarded the UI a $1.47 million grant for microbiology and infectious diseases research.

The Health and Human Services Department will spread $350 million in grants to institutions across the country over a five-year period. The funding will establish eight regional centers for research and training to combat diseases that could arise through bioterrorism or those that occur naturally, such as SARS.

"Funding research projects like these at the University of Iowa is the first step toward technological and scientific breakthroughs that provide hope for so many Americans suffering from different diseases and disorders," said Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, in a press release.

Harkin is the ranking Democrat on the subcommittee that funds health and education projects.

Researchers at the UI will work in collaboration with the University of Kansas, Iowa State University, and Wichita State University.

The UI's role in the main research project will include examining the host-pathogen relationship for Francisella tularensis, which causes tularemia — a potentially deadly bioterror weapon. Aside from research, the grant will focus on training future scientists for biodefense research.

College policies to be studied

BY JAY MATHEWS
WASHINGTON POST

The national organization that oversees college-application practices has decided not to sanction Harvard, Yale, and Stanford for violating early admission rules; it will instead launch a two-year study of the increasingly controversial and confusing higher-education application process.

Joyce Smith, the executive director of the Alexandria, Va.-based National Association for College Admission Counseling, said the organization has circulated a memo to its college and high-school members declaring a moratorium on enforcing rules that govern early admissions to colleges and universities.

The move is the result of a continuing debate over the popular early admissions programs, which, some educators say, do not give applicants enough time to consider their choices and put low-income students at a disadvantage because they risk losing some financial aid if they apply early.

Under the early admissions system, students can apply to schools as early as November of their senior year in high school and receive an answer before Christmas, in time to apply elsewhere if they are rejected.

Early admission was originally designed to give applicants the opportunity to get into their favorite schools early, reducing their anxiety about where they would attend college as well as allowing colleges to spread out and control the admissions process.

Most selective schools offer an "early decision" policy, which requires the applicant to go to that school if accepted early. Some colleges have the less restrictive "early action" policy, which allows students to apply to numerous colleges, both early and at the standard time, and not make up their minds until April.

When Yale and Stanford announced they were dropping their early decision policies in favor of early action, they said they would still insist that applicants for that special status agree not to seek early admission from any other school.

Some association members said that violated the official definition of early action. Harvard, after experimenting with an early action policy that allowed students to seek similar treatment from other schools, ultimately returned to a policy similar to Yale's and Stanford's. Harvard's director of admissions, Marlyn McGrath Lewis, said her staff found it difficult to carefully assess the additional early applications that poured in when the school lifted its restrictions.

Georgetown University, one of the few colleges in the Washington area with an early action policy, allows students to apply to other early action schools but not to any early decision schools, said Dean of Admissions Charles Deacon.

Many college-admissions directors and high-school guidance counselors said they welcome the association's decision to take a long look at the whole process rather than to penalize some schools by revoking their membership privileges or declaring their practices unethical.

"It's a very good idea," said Nina Marks, the director of college guidance at the National Cathedral School in the District of Columbia.

Martin A. Wilder Jr., the head of admissions for Mary Washington College and vice president for admissions, counseling, and enrollment services of the national association, said, "The landscape is just changing so drastically... There needs to be some extended discussion and in-depth thinking about this."

Leading candidates blast California's Proposition 54

BY BRIAN SKOLOFF
ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRESNO, Calif. — The leading Democrat and Republican vying to replace Gov. Gray Davis are both taking aim at another issue on the Oct. 7 recall ballot: Proposition 54, which seeks to limit what ethnic data the government can collect.

Lt. Gov. Cruz Bustamante is transferring $3.8 million in questioned contributions from Indian tribes and unions to a committee to fight the measure, his campaign consultant said Sunday. And Republican Arnold Schwarzenegger, under fire for some of his position on immigrant issues, said on Sept. 6 for the first time that he also opposes the measure.

"There is no way we can match that," Proposition 54's backer, Ward Connerly, said in Sunday's Los Angeles Times. The University of California regent acknowledged that the measure would likely be defeated.

Opponents say the initiative would undermine civil-rights enforcement because it would stop the collection of statistics that could show a pattern of discrimination in anything from schooling to law enforcement. Connerly has said statistics can't prove discrimination and that it's time to stop being so conscious about ethnicity.

Schwarzenegger, speaking to Spanish-language station KUVS-TV in Sacramento, said he believes it is necessary to collect the ethnic data for use in such fields as health and education.

"If you take that out, it will be disastrous," he said.

Rene Macura/Associated Press
California Gov. Gray Davis (center) waves to crowds gathered along the route for the 46th Annual East Los Angeles Mexican Independence Parade on Sunday.

Bustamante campaign consultant Richie Ross said the lieutenant governor is following his conscience by putting the union and Indian contributions into the fight against Proposition 54.

Bustamante, the only well-known Democrat among the 135 replacement candidates, has been criticized for accepting millions of dollars from unions and from tribes with lucrative casinos by taking advantage of a loophole in the state's campaign-financing rules.

He skirted the $21,200 individual contribution approved by voters in 2000 by accepting the multimillion dollar donations to his 2002 campaign committee for lieutenant governor. Because that committee was created before the state's new campaign-finance law took effect, it is not subject to the contribution caps imposed on newer campaign accounts. The money was then transferred into his recall committee account.

Though the action may be legal, critics say, it's wrong.

Republican state Sen. Ross Johnson filed a lawsuit asking a judge to forbid the lieutenant governor from collecting donations that exceed the limit.

Even state Democratic Party Chairman Art Torres said it "doesn't pass the smell test." It's a legal loophole, he said, but "do I think he should've used it? Probably not."

Democratic National Committee Chairman Terry McAuliffe defended Bustamante's decision Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press," saying "It is legal, and it is disclosed."

Size of request for Iraq funds stuns many

BUSH

administration struggles to recruit more foreign troops to relieve overstayed U.S. troops in Iraq, Bush last week reversed course and said his administration would give the United Nations control over the reconstruction in exchange for sanctioning an international military cost. Bush, in his address, blended his usual assertion of progress in Iraq with a blunt acknowledgment that the United States needs help.

"I recognize that not all of our friends agreed with our decision to enforce the Security Council resolutions and remove Saddam Hussein from power," he said. "Yet we cannot let past differences interfere with present duties. Terrorists in Iraq have attacked representatives of the civilized world, and opposing them must be the cause of the civilized world. Members of the United Nations now have an opportunity, and the responsibility, to assume a broader role in assuring that Iraq becomes a free and democratic nation."

The $87 billion request, for the fiscal year beginning next month, is larger than the $79 billion Congress approved in a similar measure for the current year after the war began in April. In addition, Bush aides said, the administration will ask other countries to contribute $30 billion to $55 billion for the reconstruction of Iraq.

The large amount of the request — the 1991 Gulf War, by contrast, cost $80 billion, of which only $9 billion was paid by the United States — shocked some lawmakers. If approved, it would increase the federal budget deficit for 2004 to $562 billion from the $475 billion the White House had projected without the war costs.

Bush's fellow Republicans control the House and Senate, and leaders of both chambers said they believe his request will pass, although some lawmakers said they will use hearings in coming weeks to question administration officials about exactly where the money will go, whether Bush has an exit strategy, and what he plans for future years. "We'll expedite it aggressively," House Appropriations Committee Chairman C.W. Bill Young, R-Fla., said. "They're running out of money."

Still, lawmakers and their aides were stunned that the amount was more than twice what they had expected only weeks ago and far more than the administration had suggested would ever be necessary, either before the war or during consideration of the $78.5 billion wartime bill Bush signed in April. "We'll swallow hard and fight to pass it," said a House Republican leadership aide.

White House officials had told congressional leaders just days ago that the package was likely to total $60 billion to $70 billion, in part because the administration was considering asking for the money in pieces or for shorter periods of time. Young said congressional leaders told Bush during a White House meeting last week "that we thought it would be wise to decide how much he was going to need for the long run and ask for it all at once rather than nickel and dime."

A senior administration official said the White House calculated it was better to take one big hit over the size of its initial miscalculation and the impact on the deficit, instead of refighting the battle again and again in the heat of the presidential race.

Democratic presidential candidates have seized on Bush's handling of postwar Iraq as a way to attack him on what has been one of his chief political strengths, his prosecution of the war on terror.

Former Vermont Gov. Howard Dean said on Sunday night that Bush still has not explained how he will resolve "the mess" in Iraq. "A 15-minute speech does not make up for 15 months of misleading the American people on why we should go to war against Iraq or 15 weeks of mismanaging the reconstruction effort since we have been there," he said.

The president made no mention last night of the fiscal constraints, portraying the spending request, including $66 billion for military and intelligence operations, as crucial to national security. "This effort is essential to the stability of those nations and therefore to our own security," he said.

As he has previously, Bush on Sunday put the Iraq conflict in the context of the larger war on terror. Terrorists, he said, "know that as democracy rises in Iraq, all of their hateful ambitions will fall like the statues of the former dictator. And that is why, five months after we liberated Iraq, a collection of killers is desperately trying to undermine Iraq's progress and throw the country into chaos."

points are ambitious and would take a lot of changes on the part of the Legislature," Green said. "But we want them to be at least discussed."

Downer said that he agrees with increasing financial aid, trying to predict tuition increases, and asking lawmakers to change the date of tuition decision.

He said, however, that he doesn't think the regents need more representation and that it would be too difficult to put a percentage limitation on tuition increases.

"I've been most strongly pursuing increased financial aid," Downer said. "But I can't support a percentage limitation." He added that because Iowa is in an environment of low inflation, the percentage can be controlled, but that might not be true in possible higher-inflation eras in the future.

Involving parents, Downer said, is also important in influencing tuition changes, because they have even more influence than the students sometimes.

The regents' current student representative, Regent Neala Arnold, said she, too, thinks the single student serving on the board is sufficient, though she finds it helpful to have contact with the students.

"It would be tough to add two more spaces on the board, one for each university," she said.

"If we have three, then that's a third of the board right there ... we don't just represent universities; we represent the whole state."

However, Downer believes that there are merits stemming from the student governments' efforts.

"[The letter] may be effective," he said. "It has to be a positive legislation move to work. It really boils down to tuition rates versus quality of education."

Arafat nominates new PM

Qureia, who along with Abbas was an architect of the 1993 Oslo peace accords, does not have a wide base of popular support among Palestinians, though he has been an elected member of the Palestinian Legislative Council from Jerusalem since 1996. He previously served as minister of economy and trade and minister of industry for the Palestinian Authority. Qureia, 66, had not responded to Arafat's offer as of late Sunday night, Palestinian officials said.

Any Palestinian official cast into the appointed role and accepted as an independent candidate by the United States and Israel is likely to face the same problems that prompted Abbas to quit: power struggles with Arafat and infighting with his allies, pressure from the United States and Israel to stop terrorist attacks on Israel, and a lack of legitimacy and popular support from being appointed rather than elected. Furthermore, any candidate supported by Israel and the United States is likely to be seen as suspect by the Palestinian public.

"He's coming at the wrong time; it's going to be hard for him," a Western diplomat said.

Qureia was bypassed this year when U.S., European, U.N., and Russian representatives pushed Arafat to accept Abbas to fill the newly created post of prime minister. Israeli officials said Sunday night that they were concerned Qureia, popularly known as Abu Ala, is too closely associated with Arafat to stake out independent positions.

Rare 9/11 tape surfaces

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The only videotape known to have captured both planes slamming into the World Trade Center, and only the second image of the first strike, has surfaced on the eve of the second anniversary of the 9/11 attacks.

The footage, obtained by the New York Times, was taken by a Czech immigrant construction worker whose son at one point came close to accidentally erasing the rare, chilling footage, the newspaper reported on its Web site on Sept. 6.

Federal officials investigating the trade center's collapse are trying to obtain a copy of the hour-long tape, which could cast light on the cause of the north tower's collapse by helping to determine factors including the exact speed at which the first plane traveled, the Times said.

The only other known footage of the first plane's impact came from a French film crew making a documentary about a probationary firefighter.

Pavel Hlava, an immigrant construction worker from the Czech Republic, shot footage of the first plane hitting the north tower as an SUV he was riding in entered the Brooklyn-Battery Tunnel en route to lower Manhattan.

Hlava, who made the tape looking at the camera's relatively low-resolution LCD display, told the Times he did not see the first plane as he focused on the towers. But the tape shows a whitish object hitting the tower, followed by dust spurting from the tower's side and a silvery, expanding cloud.

Passing through the tunnel, Hlava, his brother, and his boss heard a radio report that a small private plane had hit the World Trade Center, straight ahead outside the tunnel. That hardly prepared them for what they saw when they emerged: the north tower, looming over them, bursting with flames.

As Hlava continued filming, the second jet shrieked behind him. He caught the plane as it shot into the south tower, exploding into an orange fireball and sending papers flying in every direction. Later, after crossing the Brooklyn Bridge, he focused on the buildings again as the south tower tilted to one side and collapsed.

Hlava and his brother, Josef, unsuccessfully tried to sell the tape in New York and in the Czech Republic, the newspaper said.

Hlava said through a Czech-language translator that language difficulties hindered his ability to sell or release the tape to the media. He also said that so much time had passed that he had doubted whether there was still interest in the tape.

"All his friends, they told him,

"Hey, you made a mistake. You waited too long," translator David Melichar told the Times.

Hlava's boss, who was driving the SUV, also had strong objections to selling the tape, Melichar said.

Hlava and Melichar's numbers are not listed and attempts by the Associated Press to reach them were unsuccessful.

In the weeks and months after the attack, the tape sat in Hlava's apartment in the Ridge-wood section of Queens.

On one occasion, Hlava said he noticed that his son was playing with the video camera and erasing the tape. Hlava snatched the camera away before either of the plane impacts were erased.

A friend of Hlava's wife obtained a copy of the tape and traded it to another Czech immigrant to pay off a bar tab. Another woman who learned of the existence of the copy brought it to the attention of a freelance news photographer, who took the tape to the Times.

The photographer, Walter Karling, who now describes himself as Hlava's agent, said it had not been sold to any television station. The Times said it had not paid for the tape.

Karling's number was not published, and he could not be reached for comment by AP.

Man denies connection to bank robber killed by bomb

BY TODD SPANGLER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ERIE, Pa. — A man who says his girlfriend is a cousin of the pizza deliveryman killed after a bank robbery by the explosion of a bomb locked to his neck says investigators seized his tools and computer, but he denied on Sept. 6 that he ever met the dead man.

"There is no relationship. I don't know Brian Wells," Jimmy Johnson, 46, of Erie, told the Associated Press.

Wells, 46, was arrested and handcuffed Aug. 28 following a PNC Bank robbery near Erie, but he was killed when the bomb attached to a collar locked around his neck exploded while he and police waited for a bomb squad.

Investigators are trying to determine whether Wells locked the bomb onto himself, or if it was locked onto him by someone else who forced him to rob the bank.

Investigators searched Johnson's apartment on Sept. 5, taking tools and his laptop computer. He told AP that the search warrant was for items such as explosives and firearms.

"I know they didn't find anything like that because I don't keep nothing like that here," Johnson said.

Johnson said his girlfriend, whom he identified only as Angie, was Wells' cousin. Johnson said the couple spoke to FBI agents earlier because Angie had left messages on Wells' answering machine asking him to give her a ride days before he was killed.

Johnson said they had no involvement in the incident.

Wells' landlord and neighbor, Linda Payne, said a woman named Angie used to visit Wells at his apartment. She said Wells had identified Angie as a former schoolmate.

FBI agent Bill Crowley refused to comment on the investigation on Sept. 6.

Services held for 9/11 firefighter, last of 343

NEW YORK (AP) — Firefighters in formal dress and others in work attire were among hundreds of people who gathered Sunday to pay respects to Michael Ragusa, the last firefighter killed in the 9/11 attack on the World Trade Center to receive a memorial service.

The 29-year-old's remains have never been identified, so his family chose to bury a vial of blood he had donated to a bone-marrow center. A funeral was scheduled for Monday.

Many families of the 343 firefighters killed Sept. 11, 2001, held services before remains were identified, but Ragusa's family delayed an official ceremony.

"It was a very personal decision for the family," said Gerry Sweeney, a firefighter in Ladder Co. 131. "They really didn't want to go through a memorial service and then hear that a piece of Michael had been recovered and have to go through it again, but I guess they'd figured enough time had passed."

Of the 2,792 people who died in the attack, the medical examiner has identified remains of just over half.

Photos at the funeral home showed Ragusa smiling as a child, hugging his girlfriend, driving his cars and fighting a fire.

Dozens of firefighters, including some who took a break from their shifts to come to the memorial, passed through to offer the family their condolences and pay their respects.

Do you really want to see 22 minutes of drunken behavior and 32 acts of sexual deviancy?

Fellow Students,

Don't log onto college.movielink.com between September 15th and October 15th. Sure, high-speed, reliable downloads of your favorite movies seems like a great idea. But what about the message those films send? The people at Movielink want you to watch movies like American Pie, a film rife with drunken behavior, sexual deviancy, and a very unsanitary display involving food. Choose education over entertainment. Don't be lured in by the prizes. Granted, 'the ultimate PC entertainment system' sounds great, but think of the distraction. Up all night, watching movies, playing games, people stopping by with booze. Is that really how you want to spend your college years?

Trying to be a good sport

FOOTBALL SEASON DIDN'T use to bother me.

It's never been my thing, you know, commercialized sports, but I always thought of it as benign eccentricity. The memorabilia, the signatures, the personalized licensed plates, the little automobile flags — I didn't care. I didn't see it as a waste of money, because it wasn't my money; and while I've always found the overpopulation of home football weekends stifling, well, I knew most of those people would be leaving quickly enough.

ALLISON HEADLY

I actually started warming up to our local commercialized sports after a few years, because while working at the Iowa City/Coralville Convention and Visitors' Bureau, I learned how much money fans pump into the cities — money that benefits more than just the hotels, restaurants, intoxicatories, etc., that they patronize, because the hotel/motel tax so many of them pay subsidizes a variety of civic services.

Which is money you and I, as residents, would have to pony up if area visitors weren't doing it for us. So I started being fairly pro-sports for a while, in an abstract sort of way.

This started about three years ago, right around and following 9/11, which catalyzed the depressing shock wave of patriotism we're still riding out. Depressing not because I don't love this country — I do, I do. Not because I think those planes were aimed at something other than the idea of America — depressing because it's so knee-jerk and so absolutist.

And during this period, and during Afghanistan (and to a lesser extent, Iraq), I kept seeing all this patriotic flotsam and jetsam that reminded me of the paraphernalia of sports fandom. Bumper stickers, key chains, candles, T-shirts, Windbreakers, Christmas ornaments — all this stuff that didn't (and doesn't) seem to me to be honoring the dead nor suggesting some solution to the situation, some way out of the awful place we found ourselves in.

More than all the other stuff, the little automobile flags disturb me. Make me nauseous. They make me think about the first Gulf War and about how, being young, I surely missed much of its commercialized penumbra. I see them less now than I used to, a fact that I sometimes allow to reassure me, briefly thinking that they've tapered off because people have reconsidered through conscious deliberation of what the flag, in symbolizing the idea of America, is, and, as such, how it should be used. More often, I suspect most of them came down when they frayed a little — and came down not out of respect for the flag nor what it symbolizes, but out of vanity.

When I first saw them, I made some snide comments about Team America. But it took me about a year to really put it together, how the accouterments of sports fandom were suited to knee-jerk nationalism. How those accouterments don't function just as personal stuff, but also function as markers for other fans so everyone can be identified, categorized, and filed — either welcomed into the group and reassured as to their place in it, or ... not.

This dual role isn't unique to sports, of course. Gangs use this same kind of tag, and so do music fans, Harry Potter fans, sexual subcultures, racists — the list could go on forever. Maybe evolution hard-wired into our brains the instinct to identify our group based on external characteristics, because we were more likely to survive that way.

And with sports, we're more likely to have fun that way, because then we can cheer with our fanmates and easily rib whoever is rooting for the other team. Which I understand and still am totally fine with.

But football season does bother me these days. Every home game weekend, all the logofied people and cars and balconies, all the logofied stuff, it reminds me that when the discourse is inserted into international politics and catalyzes rabid nationalism, knee-jerk instinct is outdated. Because instead of having our lives saved, or having more fun, it makes us more likely to crash and burn. To alienate our allies. To not tread carefully, as we should. ■

Saving overtime from the GOP

Last week, Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, said he would propose an amendment to the Labor HHS Appropriations Bill that would preserve overtime pay protection for millions of American workers. The amendment would block a Bush administration proposal to eliminate the 40-hour work week and overtime pay for more than 8 million workers.

Harkin's proposal is a much-needed measure that many American families are depending on in order to continue making ends meet. With unemployment at a 10-year high of 6.4 percent, the administration is certainly not helping the cause by aiming to cut as much as 25 percent of some workers' annual income.

The Fair Labor Standards Act of 1939 requires employers to pay their employees time-and-a-half for overtime work, but it provides a narrow exception for white collar, or salaried, employees in "executive," "administrative," and "professional" positions. The Department of Labor's proposed changes to determine whether the exceptions apply would give employers more leeway in assigning worker duties to avoid paying overtime. For example, it would be easier under the changes to assign a worker the title of "administrator" and thus take away her or his right to overtime compensation.

Harkin's amendment would raise the annual pay below which workers must be paid overtime from just over $8,000 to $22,100. However, the Economic Policy Institute has concluded that, without Harkin's amendment, the new rule would still strip overtime compensation from the more than 8 million workers who earn more than $22,100 per year. Workers in the aerospace, defense, and health-care industries would all lose overtime eligibility.

In June, Harkin and 42 other senators sent a letter exhorting Labor Department Secretary Elaine Chao to reject the proposed regulation.

"In a time when we have a weak economy, the administration should be doing everything it can to stimulate consumer spending and help families struggling to make ends meet," Harkin said. "Instead, this proposal would take money out of the pockets of millions of working Americans."

Republicans say the proposal would reduce an increasing number of lawsuits by workers seeking overtime pay. Though this may be the case, putting financial constraints on millions of American families in order to curb lawsuit payouts isn't justified. As overtime pay often accounts for 20-25 percent of a worker's salary, millions of Americans rely on overtime to cover bills for housing and health care and to save for college tuition for their children.

Bush has touted his drastic tax cuts as an economic stimulus that will give money back to American workers. An easier way to encourage spending might be to continue paying workers fairly for overtime.

Music industry has only itself to blame

Universal Music Group's decision to slash its CD prices 25 percent by Oct. 1 probably comes too late to reverse the free-downloading habit that pervades teen and young adult culture. Even so, the cuts might win back enough older music fans and keep the retail-music industry hobbling along. The only way to find out is if other companies quit carping at Universal — which has almost one-third of new music sales in the United States and whose acts include Eminem and Shania Twain — and follow suit.

Music executives have contended for years that Internet downloading, not exorbitant pricing, was the cause of slumping sales. But CD pricing has always been about maximizing profit, not attracting new buyers.

When the CD replaced vinyl in the early 1980s, manufacturing a CD cost less than pressing an LP. Executives, however, raised prices as fast as possible and quit producing vinyl records just as quickly. Once consumers started replacing their old vinyl, music companies sold not only new recordings but also their huge backlists — think Beatles, Frank Sinatra, Nat King Cole.

Since that industry bonanza, much has gone wrong. In their hunt for Britney Spears-sized jackpots, music executives failed to cultivate offbeat new bands, leading consumers to complain about bland offerings. The rise of chain radio stations has erased the independent and locally owned stations that catered to regional tastes and played music because a programmer or disc jockey liked it. The quality of popular music fell as CD prices rose, up to $18.98 for a single pop disc. In the last three years, industrywide sales have plummeted 31 percent. Powerhouses such as Universal, Sony, BMG, and EMI are scrambling.

The response of the Recording Industry Association of America, the music business' trade and lobbying group, has been to launch a legal blitz against high-school and college students who download large numbers of songs. Downloading unquestionably is illegal, but the industry seems to be using an Abrams tank against slingshots.

The music industry's long-term future is probably in digital online sales. A new study by Forrester Research estimates that on-demand subscriptions and downloads could bring in $270 million this year and $1.4 billion in three years. But Universal's price cut may encourage the return to record stores of baby boomers, Gen-Xers, and audiophiles. The CD remains small, reliable, and user-friendly for fans who don't want to bother with downloading songs — whose sound is compromised by being compressed into a computer file.

The Beatles and Rolling Stones sang about revolutions, but who knew it would end up being the industry suits fighting at the cash register for their existence?

Crazy for Vasey

All of us in the university — students, staff, and faculty — have a stake in the Sept. 9 Iowa City School Board election.

The quality of Iowa City schools is especially important to our faculty, staff, and students who have school-age children.

Not only do I urge you to vote, but I hope that you will vote for Mary Vasey, a graduate of the university's one-time experimental school, University High. She also did some of her undergraduate and graduate work at Iowa.

Mary is exceptionally well-qualified for the board. She has more than 30 years experience teaching at every level of conventional and alternative K-12 schools. Highly regarded by her colleagues, she was one of the first teachers selected for the national faculty of the Coalition of Essential Schools and as an adviser to the Iowa Department of Education. She serves on the local board's advisory committee for its alternative school. She would be an excellent addition to the board.

Please consider voting for Mary Vasey for School Board on Tuesday or, if you want to vote early, at the Johnson County Auditor's Office, 913 S. Dubuque St., any weekday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Voting Southern

After hearing Edwards speak several times, asking him questions, and reading his policy proposals, I overcame my initial caution of supporting a Southern Democrat. John Edwards has earned my vote for president.

Edwards carries a deep commitment to racial equality, civil rights, and social and economic justice. After 20 years as a trial lawyer and a term in the Senate, Edwards remembers his roots in the rural working class, and they shape his campaign proposals for "Real Solutions for America."

His voting record is close enough to Tom Harkin's to make any Iowa progressive proud to support him. He has earned good to excellent voting records from the following groups: AFL-CIO, League of Conservation Voters, Planned Parenthood, ACLU, Human Rights Campaign, and Ralph Nader-founded Public Citizen.

History is also on Edwards' side. The past four Democrats elected president (including Al Gore) have been from the South. In a closely divided nation, Edwards offers Democrats the best hope to hold states we won in 2000 and then add Southern and border states needed to win the presidency again. Watch his TV ads, go to his next event, read his proposals, and see if you agree with me that Edwards has what it takes to win.

Gone too soon

Amber, you will be truly missed. If you never knew who Amber Huber was, she probably touched you in more ways than you can imagine: whether she was on the sidelines for women's basketball or volleyball games as a cheerleader freshman year, or working at Burge in the Grab & Go line, making sandwiches or swiping your ID card, or working for the Athletics Department doing what she loved and trying to achieve her ultimate goal of being a party planner.

Amber was a great friend of mine, and I will love her all my life. She has touched so many people with her charisma, bright spirit, and hope. I can remember taking her to concerts last year, such as Dave Matthews Band and Incubus, seeing her eyes light up when her favorite songs played. Her golden blonde hair and bright smile would always give people a reason to smile even if they were having the worst day. She was trying to beat cancer, and she left our lives way too early on Sept. 4.

She loved all of her family, friends, sorority sisters, co-workers and acquaintances — Amber had touched each of them in a certain way. She left this world at the young age of 20. She touched my life in a significant way that no one will be able to match. Amber, I love you so much and will miss you with all my heart.

Spun

The only thing that Jonas Akerlund's cinematic debut, Spun, has going for it is that it is guaranteed to make its audience retch, squirm, and cringe. Those, unfortunately, are the only kind words one can say about Spun.

College drop-out and northern LA suburbanite Ross (Jason Schwartzman) is just looking to score a quick hit of meth. As is his custom, he drives over to the one-story dilapidated house of his dealer, Spider Mike (Jon Leguizamó), whose paranoia and mental lapses seem to have finally gotten the best of him. When Spider Mike is unable to locate his stash of white powder, Ross follows another junkie, Nikki (Brittany Murphy), to the home of her wrestling-fan cowboy boyfriend, the Cook (Mickey Rourke), who supplies Spider Mike with all his drugs.

Ross' relationship with the Cook and Nikki is only beginning after the Cook fixes him up. The Cook employs Ross as a gofer in his meth-running business, which guarantees Ross the drugs that he craves but also takes him further and further away from his life of normalcy with his ex-girlfriend, Amy (Charlotte Ayanna), whom he constantly tries to get in contact with. As the characters try to ride out their highs through days and nights of no sleep, mishaps and destruction follow, culminating in, what else, a re-evaluation of self that leads to fewer answers and a multitude of new questions.

Akerlund's background is music videos, which is more than evident from his overly abundant use of camera tricks

Production Photos
From the top, Brittany Murphy, Jason Schwartzman, and Mena Suvari star as hopeless and helpless drug addicts in the dark comedy Spun.

and attention-getting editing. What Akerlund fails to realize throughout Spun is that while he may only have three minutes to convey his message in a video, in a 101-minute film, overstimulation means distraction both from plot and significance. Each sound effect, camera filter, and fast-paced edit that Akerlund uses to show the effects of meth were used first and much more effectively in Darren Aronofsky's masterful Requiem for a Dream. Akerlund does not have the skill to make any of his adolescent trickery effective, and he relies far too heavily on past drug flicks to try to make his film work. To his credit, Schwartzman tries to salvage the film, and he has occasional moments during which one recalls a young Dustin Hoffman in both The Graduate and Midnight Cowboy. The problem with Schwartzman's Ross is that there is not a shred of likability in his character. He is a masochistic, delusional leech who keeps a woman chained to his bed, her eyes and mouth duct-taped, for three days as he runs errands for the Cook. Ross is a despicable junkie who even in the end, during a moment of rest, is still as unlikable as before.

But although there is little redemptive in Schwartzman's character, there is even less in the casting of Murphy as Nikki. Every line Murphy snorts and every clothed striptease she performs seem to be a professional plea to distance herself from the sweet innocence of the characters she played in Just Married and Uptown Girls and return her to the roles that brought her accolades — such as those in Don't Say a Word and 8 Mile. But while Murphy's characters in those movies seemed to have a (albeit demented) soul, Nikki is a hollow and lifeless shell of a person who is difficult to care about, especially when there is a certain formulaic predictability to her character that the viewer can ascertain within the movie's first act.

The most abysmal part of Spun, though, is its absolute disregard for the seriousness of its subject. It is fair to say that it tries remarkably hard to make this story of meth-infused losers a comedy and goes to great lengths to add unnecessary attempts at humor, including ridiculous scenes of police stupidity and animated sexuality.

Viewing this film in Iowa, where it is difficult to meet a native who does not know somebody whose life has been affected by meth, Akerlund's insistence on humor comes across as irresponsible and sickening. His characters are presented as caricatures, which might have given him the idea that he could satirize their lives, but there is nothing humorous about a drug that so quickly destroys the life and future of anyone who comes in contact with it. Akerlund was way off the mark in thinking that the United States is ready to laugh at its drug-addicted citizens and to poke fun at their misfortunes, and it is here that the film truly loses any chance that it might have had to be an effective montage to the dangers of drugs.

Spun spins itself into oblivion from its very inception. Like so many of the methamphetamine users it attempts to maliciously parody, it is never able to recover.

Fighting ratchets up in Afghanistan

BY NOOR KHAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

QALAT, Afghanistan — Hundreds of Afghan government troops prepared Sunday for a new offensive against Taliban guerrillas in the south and east, including along the border with Pakistan.

The planned offensive came amid a visit by U.S. Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, who told a joint news conference in Kabul with President Hamid Karzai that the infiltration of terrorists into Afghanistan "is something that requires continuing attention."

"It's happening all across the globe. It proves the point that the global war on terror is not a problem in one country or for one country," Rumsfeld said.

A spate of attacks on Afghan police positions along the border and inland and heavy fighting in the past two weeks in a remote mountainous region of southern Zabol province have raised fresh doubts about the precarious grip Karzai has over parts of the country.

Karzai, who took power after U.S.-led forces ousted the hard-line Taliban regime in late 2001, has postponed for two months the process of approving a new Constitution, his spokesman said on Sunday.

The president insisted, however, that historic elections — the first in Afghanistan in decades — will take place as planned in June 2004.

The delay in holding a council meeting of 500 delegates to form the Constitution followed demands from the commission in charge that it needs more time to get input from ordinary Afghans. There have been public quarrels between conservative elements, including within Karzai's government, who want the Constitution to enshrine Islamic Sharia law, and secularists, who want it to embrace liberal traditions.

U.S. military spokesman Col. Rodney Davis said that more than 100 Taliban guerrillas have been killed in the fighting since Aug. 30 — centered on the Dai Chupan district of southern Zabol province. Four American troops have also been killed in the past month, one in Dai Chupan.

The latest raid on the insurgents came on Sept. 6 and involved American aircraft, Davis said.

While the situation in Dai Chupan has calmed in recent days, Afghan officials say forces are still hunting Taliban believed to have moved to nearby areas.

In Liberia, all money roads led to Taylor

BY EDWARD HARRIS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MONROVIA, Liberia — Charles Taylor used fear, patronage, and state monopolies to control what diplomats and business leaders estimate amounted to 90 percent of Liberia's economy — everything from imported rice to diamonds, timber, and lucrative shipping registry fees.

Tracking that money, and breaking Taylor's control of what's left, is crucial to rebuilding war-ruined Liberia. But diplomats say Taylor, working the phone from his new villa in exile in the jungles of southern Nigeria, isn't letting go easily.

These officials, citing intelligence reports, paint this picture of the ousted warlord-president's attempts to keep his hand in the pot:

Within days of his Aug. 11 acceptance of asylum in Nigeria, Taylor began making numerous calls each day to successor Moses Blah — violating his exile agreement — and Foreign Minister Lewis Brown. He also is trying to collect debts from Liberian business figures in Monrovia and attempting to solicit donations for unknown purposes.

"We don't know why he's raising money. What's clear is that he's keeping contact with the remnants of his government," Geoff Rudd, the European Union's top diplomat in Liberia, told the Associated Press.

Taylor, a longtime rebel leader who won the presidency in 1997, yielded power and flew out in a Nigerian presidential jet last month, bowing to pressure from the United States, African leaders, and rebels laying siege to his capital.

He left behind a country in ruin from 14 years of power struggles.

Liberia, once sub-Saharan Africa's most prosperous nation, today has no electrical system, a train system that runs on back-powered hand carts, and a water plant operated as a charity by the EU.

Taylor never made good on promises to repair Liberia — but not for lack of funds, Liberians and Western diplomats say. There are estimates he has up to $1 billion stashed in Swiss bank accounts.

"Taylor was into everything," Rudd said.

Taylor's regime had dealings in gold, diamonds, gas and rice imports, timber exports, printing, and Liberia's shipping-registry business, which is among the world's largest.

Diplomats and Liberian business figures describe a system in which six or seven prominent Liberians close to Taylor control all but 10 percent of the country's export and import businesses.

The Liberians speaking out insist on anonymity for fear of retribution. Longtime international officials in Monrovia, also unwilling to give their names, confirm the accounts.

RODDICK REIGNS

Andy Roddick

Roddick rolls to first Grand Slam

NEW YORK (AP) — Andy Roddick pounded three-straight big serves to win the first set of his first Grand Slam final, drawing a standing ovation from the partisan crowd.

There was no such celebration from Roddick: He tossed aside a ball he had in his pocket, blew on his fingers, and calmly walked to the sideline to sit down.

This is the new Roddick, the more mature Roddick, the major champion Roddick.

Backed by the game's top serve and impressive on-court patience, Roddick simply overpowered Juan Carlos Ferrero of Spain (6-3, 7-6 [2], 6-3) Sunday to win the U.S. Open.

The match ended, fittingly, with three-straight aces by Roddick, lifting his totals to 23 for the final and 123 for the tournament.

Then he let his emotions flow, crouching at the baseline, covering his face with his hands and fighting tears. He climbed through the court-side photographers' pit and climbed into the stands for congratulatory hugs.

It was Roddick's season-leading 19th-straight victory, making him 37-2 since teaming with coach Brad Gilbert, Andre Agassi's former mentor, after a first-round exit at the French Open.

DEDICATED

Athletics Learning Center opens

The UI unveiled the Gerdin Athletics Learning Center on Sept. 5. The 19,000-square-foot building, located at 402 Melrose Ave., was financed through private gifts.

The center features a library, computer and teaching labs, study areas, tutorial space, classrooms, an auditorium, conference rooms, and offices for academic staff. It will enable the Athletics Student Services to fully integrate the athletics and academic development of more than 600 student-athletes each year.

Russell and Ann Gerdin of North Liberty were the primary contributors for the center, donating $4 million to the effort.

UI President David Skorton and Athletics Director Bob Spawls were among the seven speakers at the dedication.

Buffalo's quarterback Randall Secky is taken down by Iowa's Abdul Hodge.

 THE DAILY IOWAN

Even before the final gun sounded to end Iowa's 56-7 blowout of Buffalo, the Hawkeyes were already looking ahead. By putting in the second team even before half-time, coach Kirk Ferentz made it clear that he wasn't going to sacrifice the rest of the young season to boost his players' stats.

Running back Fred Russell carried the ball just 12 times, picking up 98 yards and a touchdown. Ferentz pulled Russell, along with most of the rest of the starters, midway through the second quarter, with the Hawkeyes up 35-0. That output was his lowest regular-season showing since Oct.

26, 2002, against Michigan, when he missed much of the game with a hand injury.

The easy win against the overmatched Bulls ran the Hawkeyes' record to 2-0, and it gives Ferentz's squad much-needed momentum going into Saturday's showdown with archrival Iowa State in Ames.

The Cyclones have a five-game winning streak against Iowa, and Ferentz has never won the Cy-Hawk Trophy as a head coach. But the Hawkeyes claim that they're treating the battle like just another game.

"We have our same routine no matter whom we play," said wide receiver Mo Brown. "We just want to improve on what we did the week before."

QUARTER BY QUARTER

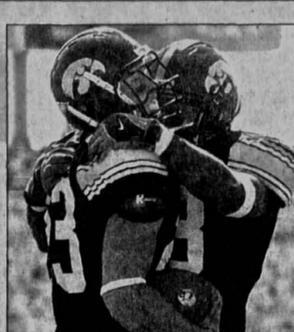

The Hawkeyes marched 73 yards down the field on their opening drive, capping it off with an Ed Hinkel touchdown catch from Nathan Chandler. After forcing Buffalo to punt, Iowa once again got in the end zone with Fred Russell's one-yard run. On the Bull's next possession, Chad Greenway forced a fumble and the ball fell into the hands of Sean Considine as he brought it into the end zone.

Freshman Champ Davis helped Iowa move the ball on its next possession with an 18-yard carry and a 12-yard reception before Nathan Chandler eventually trotted into the end zone on a 1-yard run. Considine picked off a Randall Secky pass and Mo Brown caught a 23 yard touchdown pass from Chandler eight plays later. On the Hawkeyes' next possession, true freshmen Drew Tate, A.J. Johnson, and Champ Davis led the charge.

A group of new faces on the defense entered the game for Iowa, but the Hawkeyes still held the Bulls scoreless. Marcus Schnoor reached the end zone on a 2-yard run while Kyle Schlicher, who entered the game just before the half, kicked in the extra-point. Ramon Ochoa broke free for a 70-yard punt return for Iowa's final touchdown of the game and the first touchdown of his career.

Aaron Leeper put the Bull's only points of the game on the board on a 2-yard touchdown run with six and half minutes remaining in the game. John Gallery saw the first action of his career on a pair of fourth-quarter punts for the Hawkeyes. Redshirt freshman quarterback Jason Manson saw his first career action on Iowa's final offensive series, but failed to complete his only pass.

Iowa City breeding ground for Hawkeye talent

BY JASON BRUMMOND
 THE DAILY IOWAN

The Hawkeyes are pretty familiar with their neighboring Little Hawks and Trojans by now. Iowa City, known throughout the state as a hotbed for high-school football, has consistently produced NCAA Division I football players, many of them choosing to stay at home and play at Kinnick Stadium.

City High head coach Dan Sabers has been involved in the school's program for 22 years and is in his third year at his current position. He thinks that because many kids are fans of Iowa football, they visualize themselves playing as Hawkeyes.

"Most have said that they grew up following the Hawks and dreamed of playing for them. As a parent, I do like the convenience of having my son so close to home," he said.

Sabers knows a little bit more than most on this subject — his son, Michael, has given an oral commitment to play for Iowa. The 6-5, 230-pound tight end could be a Hawkeye teammate with a current crosstown rival, West running back Greg Coleman, who is being recruited by Iowa and is one of the state's top prospects.

PART ONE OF A FIVE-PART SERIES:

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL PLAYERS FROM IOWA CITY CONTINUE THEIR PLAYING CAREERS AS HAWKEYES

The two Iowa City schools were able to win six state titles in a span of seven years during the 1990s — City in 1993, 1994, and 1996, and West in 1995, 1998, and 1999. The city doesn't offer a serious youth football league — only recreational flag football.

"I do not think there is anything unique about our program; I do believe having a Big Ten school in our town has helped. I do believe we do a very good job of trying to educate and train our athletes in the junior high to develop their bodies for their futures," he said.

Sabers said that he constantly mentions the "rich tradition of college athletes" when talking to the younger kids in the program. He even has a professional player that he can discuss. Tim Dwight remains the only legitimate NFL player to have been both Iowa City-raised and a former Hawkeye.

The 5-9, 180-pound six-year NFL veteran plays for the San Diego Chargers. He was drafted and played three seasons with the Atlanta Falcons. Sabers singled him out as the best player who has come through the City High program, adding that he has been very generous toward his hometown.

"Tim Dwight was and still is outstanding," Sabers said. "He had it all — character, skills, charisma, intelligence ... He continues to do so much for our entire community."

NFL BRIEF

Titans top Raiders in messy season opener

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Titans found a new hero, giving them some revenge against the Oakland Raiders.

Steve McNair threw two touchdowns, and punter Craig Hentrich matched his career high by kicking three field goals as the Titans downed the Raiders, 25-20, Sunday night.

It was a messy opener that doubled as a rematch of last season's AFC championship game. The Titans came in wanting to avenge the loss that kept them from their second Super Bowl in four seasons — and get a jumpstart for this season. Oakland won the AFC title game, 41-24, in January and outscored the Titans, 93-49, in two meetings last season that featured plenty of Tennessee mistakes.

This game had lots of errors, too. The teams combined for 28 penalties for 284 yards, but it was the Raiders who hurt themselves over and over. Their share was 17 for 173.

Iowa field-hockey defeats Syracuse, New Hampshire

Pattie Gillern, Lindsay Miller, and Margot McMahon all found their way into the scoring column in the first half.

New Hampshire's MacKenzie Stuart was the first to score in Sunday's match-up. But she wasn't the last.

Iowa's Schnepf, Miller, and Gillern scored, as well as two for Sarah Dawson and hat trick for McMahon.

Barb Weinberg continued to be a stickler in goal, allowing only two shots to reach the net in as many days.

Iowa, now 2-2, will make its home debut in a nonconference game against Northwestern on Sept. 17 at 3 p.m.

Volleyball team tallies two losses, one win at Ames

Sometimes a team improves the most by learning from its mistakes. The Iowa volleyball team received many lessons this weekend.

The squad fell to 3-3 after losses against Iowa State and Kentucky and one victory over Western Illinois at the Cyclone Challenge in Ames.

"I would've liked to have come home 3-0," said Iowa coach Rita Buck-Crockett.

"Friday, we worked on a new lineup, and we decided that it's probably not a good lineup," she added with a laugh.

The Hawkeyes committed 12 errors in a game one 30-19 loss on Sept. 5, setting the tone for the 3 games to 1 defeat. For the match, the Hawkeyes' recorded 52 kills compared to the Cyclones' 68, and tallied 67 digs to Iowa State's 73.

Defensive woes led the way to Iowa's second loss of the tournament on Sept. 6, as they fell 3-2 to eventual tournament champ Kentucky. Iowa followed up the loss to the Wildcats with a convincing 3-0 win over Western Illinois.

"Our team is going to have to win on our defense," said Buck-Crockett. "We had a very poor evening of defense Friday night, and also our defense was not strong [the next] morning against Kentucky. If our defense had been on Friday, we would have won in five."

Henin-Hardenne now a major star

BY HAL BOCK
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK (AP) — Justine Henin-Hardenne's victory in the U.S. Open certified her status as a major star and increased the intrigue at the top of the women's tennis rankings.

By beating Kim Clijsters' 7-5, 6-1, the tiny Belgian moved up to No. 2 in the world, slipping past Serena Williams, who sat out the Open, recuperating from knee surgery. Clijsters remains No. 1 despite the loss but was unable to close a serious gap in her credentials — the absence of a Grand Slam title.

Clijsters seemed to have every opportunity to take care of that little detail, marching through her first six matches at the Open without dropping a set and catching Henin-Hardenne after a grueling three-hour semifinal victory that left her dehydrated and on IV fluids for two hours after the match.

Even Henin-Hardenne had doubts about her chances.

About six hours before the women's final, the WTA issued an ominous medical update on her condition, calling her questionable for the match against Clijsters, with only a 50-50 chance to play.

Then Henin-Hardenne answered all the questions with a convincing victory. She saved two set points in the first set, then dominated the second.

A wisp of a woman at 5-foot-5½, 125 pounds, her recovery after the draining semifinal victory over Jennifer Capriati and her victory in the championship match was nothing short of remarkable. Henin-Hardenne credited the trainers and doctors who treated her for two hours after the grueling match.

"I think I went to sleep at 3:45," she said. "Then I was awake at 8:30, then tried to sleep a little bit more until 11:30, but it was very hard because the match was still in my mind. On the other side, I knew I had a final, and I didn't know [what] I was going to do to be fine."

Her support staff, coach Carlos Rodriguez and physical trainer Pat Etcheberry, encouraged Henin-Hardenne, reminding her of how well she was playing.

"I did believe in my chances," she said. "I went on the court to win the match and it worked pretty good."

She began the match with a statement, sweeping the first three games. It was a signal

Loss to ISU still stings

With each Cyclone victory during their recent five-win streak, they increase their ability to steal key instate recruits from the Hawkeyes. While the Hawkeyes' recent highly touted recruiting class overshadowed their foes from Ames, if ISU's recent run in the rivalry grows much larger, the Hawkeyes' recruiting classes — and subsequent play on the field — will suffer as a result.

In the last few years, Iowa has mined precious resources from Florida and Texas, in the form of players such as Mo Brown, Antwan Allen, Howard Hodges, and Drew Tate. But for every Drew Tate the Hawkeyes reel in, you seem to hear the 'Clones counter with two or three in-state studs such as Jordan Carstens, Brandon Cook, and Milan Moses. Raking in blue-chip recruits from around the nation is nice, but bringing in occasional homegrown talent instilled with Iowa work ethics and a burning desire to play for a home-state school is nearly as valuable.

Kirk Ferentz and Dan McCarney have a friendship dating back to their days as assistants for Iowa under Hayden Fry in the early '80s. But for three hours on Saturday afternoon, they'll have their squads scratching and clawing at each other like crazed dogs to claim the state of Iowa as their own.

What already was an intriguing rivalry took on epic proportions on Sept. 14, 2002, when ISU came back from a 24-7 half-time deficit to knock off the Hawkeyes, 36-31. The loss cost the Hawkeyes more than just bragging rights — it may have cost them a shot at the Fiesta Bowl and the national championship.

Believe me, you'll look back on that game with more and more disdain as the years pass, Hawkeye fans. Just as you'll remember plays like Banks to Clark on fourth-and-goal against Purdue from 2002, your memory will never relinquish the visions of Seneca Wallace shredding the Iowa secondary or ISU's Jeremy Loyd stuffing Aaron Greving for a safety, effectively ending his days in the Black and Gold.

This year, Iowa State lost its life-blood, Wallace, and consequently has struggled under the not-so-steady hand of freshman quarterback Austin Flynn, who will be thrown into the teeth of a fierce Hawkeye D that has allowed an average of just 5 points per game and 294.5 yards. Iowa enters minus the services of the anchor of its defense, Bob Sanders, who is expected to be out at least two more weeks after having a cyst removed from his right foot. The two squads may not look quite as impressive, but rest assured, the battle will remain just as intense.

It's all on the line Saturday in Ames. It's up to Kirk and the Boys to remind the Cyclones that they call this "The Hawkeye State" for a reason.

It's time for the big brother to show his little sibling who's boss.

ISU on horizon

Others were even more blasé. Russell claims he didn't even know this weekend's opponent until early last week, confusing the Cyclone game with the one after it, against Arizona State. Freshman backup quarterback Drew Tate, who saw his first action against the Bulls, pointed out that his home state of Texas has a few rivalries of its own.

"I've seen rivals before," he said. "I saw [Texas] and [Texas A&M] — that's pretty big down there, so I'm sure it's the same up here."

If Iowa plays as well in Ames as it has so far in 2003, the Hawkeyes have a good chance at regaining state bragging rights. Quarterback Nathan Chandler turned in his second-straight solid performance, going 8-11 for 113 yards and two touchdowns before Ferentz took him out of the game. The 6-7, 250-pound Texas native ran for his first career touchdown also, taking it in from a yard out in the second quarter.

"The first drive he might have been trying to do a little to much and see a little too much," Ferentz said. "But after that, he settled down and performed real smoothly."

In addition to six offensive touchdowns, the Hawkeyes added one score each on defense and special teams. Sean Considine recovered an Aaron Leeper fumble and took it 18 yards to pay dirt in the first quarter, and Ramon Ochoa capped off Iowa's scoring with a 70-yard punt return with just under two minutes left in the third quarter. Considine later added an interception.

Schedule flip-flop

Last year, Iowa was 2-0 before losing to the Cyclones, but it struggled the week prior to the loss, barely beating Miami (Ohio), 29-24. Iowa soundly defeated Miami, 21-3, in this year's matchup, and it goes into Ames having outscored opponents 77-10 on the season.

Participation points

Punter John Gallery and kicker Kyle Schlicher played as Hawkeyes for the first time, taking over for David Bradley and Nate Kaeding, respectively. Schlicher successfully converted on all three extra points he attempted, and Gallery, brother of lineman Robert Gallery, punted twice for a 46-yard average. All told, 67 Hawkeyes participated in the Buffalo game.

A rare sight

Tate became the first true freshman to quarterback the Hawkeyes since Dan McGwire in 1987. Tate went 4-7 for 37 yards, and rushed for 21 yards on three carries. When he came in, the crowd gave him a loud ovation, and he responded by throwing a perfect first pass to Champ Davis — who dropped it.

FOUR SCORE THEIR FIRST TOUCHDOWN AS HAWKEYES IN IOWA'S 56-7 ROLL OVER BUFFALO.

BY BRIAN TRIPLETT
THE DAILY IOWAN

A.J. Johnson thanked God. Ramon Ochoa felt like Sammy Sosa sprinting towards right field as he raced towards the sideline. Nathan Chandler just got rid of the ball. And Sean Considine didn't know what to do.

While each of the Hawkeyes celebrated differently, they all shared one thing in common in the Sept. 6 game against Buffalo: They reached the end zone for the first time in a Hawkeye uniform.

"I've been waiting for this opportunity my whole time here at Iowa," said senior backup punt returner Ochoa, who already had six messages from family and friends on his cell phone by the time he reached the locker room.

The Maywood, Calif., native recorded the 11th-longest punt return in Iowa history when he dashed 70 yards down the field late in the third quarter.

Trying to recall the play, Ochoa said it all seemed like a blur to him.

"Don't get tackled by the punter, that was my main goal," he said.

Free safety Sean Considine, who scored his first career touchdown on an 18-yard fumble recovery in the first quarter against the Bulls, shared Ochoa's sentiments after the game.

"It's just one of those things — when it happens, it happens so fast and so many things are going through your mind at once," he said. "I don't even remember what I was doing at the time."

The junior said because he hasn't scored many touchdowns, once he crossed the goal line, he didn't know what to do and waited for his teammates to catch up with him.

He said scoring a touchdown was constantly on his mind.

"Driving into Kinnick on the charter buses every day, you're visualizing big plays happening," he said. "That's what I do before every game, visualize myself making a big play."

Although he enjoyed every second of it, quarterback Nathan Chandler said throwing a touchdown and rushing for one are equally satisfying.

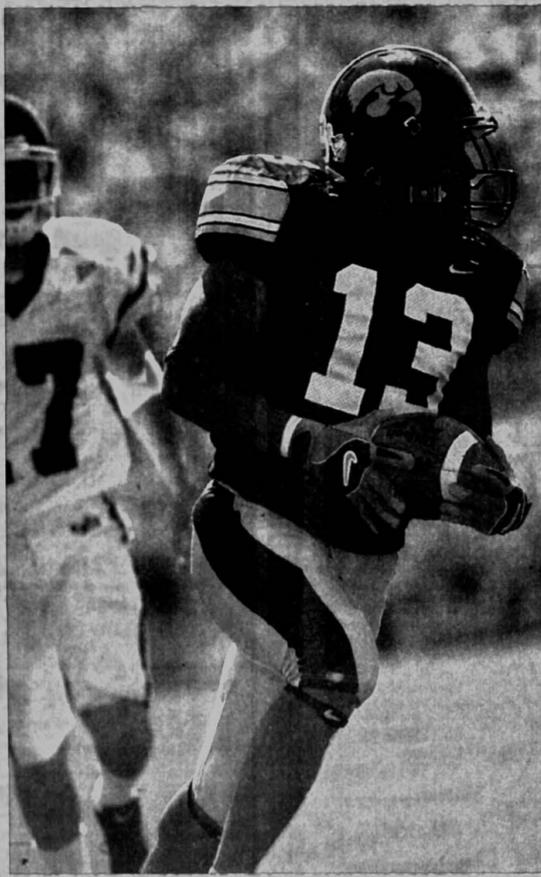

The senior crossed into the end zone on a 1-yard run early on in the second quarter, and after the game, he recalled the crowd's reaction.

"It's great. You cross the line, and everybody's going wild," he said. "You don't even think; you just feel the crowd."

True freshman running back A.J. Johnson said his second quarter 2-yard touchdown run was one of the best things to ever happen to him. The only thing the 18-year-old clearly retained from the play was crossing the goal line.

"When I saw that open field, I just put my shoulders down and ran as hard as I could, and I got in, and it felt like a shock over my body," Johnson said.

For young guys such as John-

Whitney Kidder/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Ramon Ochoa runs the ball in for a touchdown.

son, it's likely many more touchdowns are in store down the road.

For the seniors such as Chandler and Ochoa, their time as a Hawkeye is nearing an end. But while it may be seem a bit blurry to them, chances are crossing the goal line for the first time as a Hawkeye is something they will never forget.

SCOUTING THE CYCLONES

ISU looks more ready to play Iowa

BY CHUCK SCHOFFNER
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AMES — Thanks to a decisive victory, Iowa State looks far more ready to play Iowa than it did just a week ago.

Flynn

Not that it matters to coach Dan McCarney. A former Iowa player and assistant, McCarney is ready to go against the Hawkeyes anytime.

"I can't wait to coach in it," McCarney said. "It's one of the most exciting things I could ever have as a head coach in the Iowa State-Iowa series."

McCarney will get another chance when Iowa visits Jack Trice Stadium next Saturday. Iowa State has won the last five games in the series, but there were doubts and questions about the Cyclones after they struggled to beat Division I-AA Northern Iowa 17-10 in their Aug. 30 opener.

Many of those were erased Saturday in a 48-20 victory over Ohio University of the Mid-American Conference.

"Better team, better result," McCarney said. "It gives me a better feeling."

Iowa State amassed 523 total yards after getting only 327 against Northern Iowa. Quarterback Austin Flynn had 330 total yards himself, Michael Wagner rushed for 115, yards and Lane Danielsen and Jack Whitver both had more than 100 yards receiving.

Certainly worthy of a passing grade. But good enough to beat Iowa? The Hawkeyes also are 2-0 and have outscored their opponents, 77-10.

"They're a great team," Flynn said. "We've got to improve this week."

Flynn, a redshirt freshman, appears to be settling into the starting job comfortably. He completed 14-of-27 passes for 252 yards and two touchdowns with no interceptions and ran 14 times for 78 yards.

In two games, Flynn has been intercepted only once while throwing for 410 yards and three touchdowns. He has rushed for 145 yards and is averaging 5.4 yards a carry.

"He looks like he belongs as our starting quarterback," McCarney said.

While the defense has yet to give up a long, time-consuming scoring drive, it was burned by three big plays on Sept. 6 — a 68-yard touchdown run, an 80-yard TD pass and a 71-yard pass that set up a touchdown.

McCarney said those plays made him sick. Defensive tackle Jordan Carstens said the long passes simply were a case of being too eager to stop the run, which is the foundation of Ohio's offense.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Randall Simon homered twice and drove in five runs and Sammy Sosa added a solo shot to help Kerry Wood win for the first time in a month as Chicago beat Milwaukee, 9-2, on Sunday.

Wood (12-11) gave up eight hits and two runs in seven innings and had six strikeouts to raise his major league leading total to 234.

Sosa hit his 34th home run to lead off the seventh for a 7-2 lead. After Aramis Ramirez singled, Simon followed with his second homer and 15th of the season to make it 9-2.

Doug Davis (2-1) allowed five runs on four hits in four innings. The Cubs took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on a groundout by Sosa and a sacrifice fly by Ramirez which was dropped by left fielder Brooks Kieschnick for an error.

Sosa's grounder scored Tom Goodwin and Tony Womack, who doubled, came home on the fly ball.

Orioles 2, Mariners 1

BALTIMORE (AP) — Pat Hentgen allowed five hits in eight innings, and Brian Roberts kept up his assault on Seattle pitching as Baltimore beat the Mariners.

Roberts went 2-for-4 and capped a two-run third inning against Freddy Garcia with an RBI single.

Hentgen got the better of Garcia (11-14), who allowed only four hits and one earned run in seven innings but was betrayed by his defense.

The Orioles went up 2-0 in the third. Luis Matos drew a leadoff walk and scored when Mike Cameron fumbled Robert Machado's single to center. Roberts then extended his season-high hitting streak to 11 games with an RBI single.

Yankees 3, Red Sox 1

NEW YORK (AP) — David Wells took a shutout into the eighth inning, and Bernie Williams broke a scoreless tie in the seventh with his first home run since mid-August, leading the New York Yankees over the Boston Red Sox on Sunday.

Derek Jeter returned from a rib cage injury and made an error that led to an unearned run in the eighth. Mariano Rivera hung on for his 33rd save as the Yankees boosted their division lead to 2½ games. The Red Sox twice advanced runners to third base in the middle innings, but Wells got out of trouble each time.

Braves 2, Pirates 1

ATLANTA (AP) — Javy Lopez hit a tiebreaking homer in the seventh. Mike Hampton pitched four-hit ball over eight innings, and Atlanta defeated Pittsburgh.

Lopez drove in both Atlanta runs, tying the game at 1 with a two-out double in the fourth. Three innings later, he led off by driving an 0-1 fastball over the center-field wall for his 37th homer.

Hampton (13-7) snapped a two-game losing streak, allowing just one hit over his final five innings.

Blue Jays 8, Tigers 0

TORONTO (AP) — Frank Catalanotto homered twice, and Josh Towers pitched seven scoreless innings as Toronto won their third straight with an 8-0 victory over Detroit.

Towers (5-1) allowed just four hits, while striking out five and walking none. Pete Walker completed the four-hitter.

Greg Myers went 3-for-5 for the Blue Jays.

Catalanotto reached base in all five of his plate appearances. Catalanotto went 3-for-4 with a walk. He also reached on an error.

Devil Rays 11, Athletics 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Victor Zambrano pitched his first career complete game, and the Tampa Bay once again roughed up Barry Zito, beating Oakland.

Zambrano (10-8) gave up nine hits, walked none, and struck out eight.

Zito (11-12), the 2002 AL Cy Young winner, was tagged for seven runs and six hits over 5½ innings.

Rocco Baldelli drove in three runs as Tampa Bay took two of three from the AL West-leading Athletics.

The Devil Rays loaded the bases with no outs in the fifth on a walk, bunt single, and hit batter.

Cardinals 9, Reds 0

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Matt Morris pitched no-hit ball into the seventh inning and finished with a three-hitter as St. Louis beat Cincinnati.

Fernando Vina had a season-high four hits and Orlando Palmeiro and Mike Matheny homered for St. Louis.

Morris (10-6) struck out eight and walked one. He got all the support he needed in a three-run first.

Tino Martinez drew a bases-loaded walk off Seth Etherton (2-3), and Edgar Renteria followed with a two-run double.

White Sox 7, Indians 3

CHICAGO (AP) — Frank Thomas hit a go-ahead three-run homer in the seventh as Chicago beat Cleveland.

The White Sox trailed 3-2 when Thomas hit the first pitch from reliever Danys Baez into the seats in left field.

Dan Wright and five Chicago relievers held down the Indians. Baez (1-8) threw 1½ innings, giving up three runs and two hits while walking two and striking out one.

Twins 5, Rangers 4, 10 innings

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Torii Hunter hit a sacrifice fly in the bottom of the 10th inning to give Minnesota a victory over Texas.

The Twins and White Sox, tied for first place in the AL Central, open a four-game series at Chicago Monday night.

Dodgers 6, Rockies 2

DENVER (AP) — Adrian Beltre drove in three runs and had four hits to back Wilson Alvarez, and Los Angeles beat Colorado.

Shawn Green had two RBIs including a solo homer.

Alvarez (4-1) allowed eight hits and one run in seven innings.

Juan Uribe doubled off Paul Shuey in the ninth and Mark Bellhorn drew a walk. Eric Gagne came in and got the final three outs for his 49th save this season and 57th straight, both major-league records.

Padres 7, Astros 1

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Brian Giles hit his first home run for San Diego as the Padres beat Houston dropping the Astros out of first place in the NL Central.

Giles put the Padres ahead with a two-run homer in the first inning.

Giles drew a bases-loaded walk from Wade Miller (12-12) in the fifth.

Diamondbacks 9, Giants 6

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pinch-hitter Danny Bautista hit a tiebreaking two-run single to highlight a five-run eighth inning and lead Arizona Diamondbacks to win Sunday over the San Francisco Giants.

Royals 3, Angels 0

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Paul Abbott and two relievers combined on a five-hitter and Kansas City got home runs from Aaron Guiel and rookie Ken Harvey to beat the Anaheim.

NFL ROUNDUP

Andy Manis/Associated Press

Green Bay Packers' safety Marques Anderson tries to stop Minnesota Vikings' running back Moe Williams in the first quarter on Sunday.

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Randy Moss caught nine passes for 150 yards and a touchdown as the Minnesota Vikings beat the Green Bay Packers, 30-25, in front of a record crowd of 70,505 at the remodeled Lambeau Field on Sunday.

The Vikings built a 27-3 lead and then held off Green Bay's furious rally.

Javon Walker's 24-yard touchdown catch pulled Green Bay to 30-25 with 1:55 remaining. But Ryan Longwell's onside kick went out of bounds, and the Vikings took over thanks to a new NFL rule that doesn't allow a rekick with less than five minutes left.

Daunte Culpepper threw three touchdown passes and the Vikings' defense forced four turnovers in the first half.

Ahman Green's 1-yard TD run cut the deficit to 30-18 and Green Bay's Erwin Swiney recovered the onside kick with 6½ minutes left.

But Brett Favre hit his fourth interception in the end zone with 5:13 left.

Lions 42, Cardinals 24

DETROIT (AP) — Joey Harrington threw a career-high four touchdown passes as the Lions beat Arizona on Sunday, spoiling Emmitt Smith's debut with the Cardinals and Anquan Boldin's record for a receiver in his NFL debut.

Boldin, a second-round pick from Florida State, caught 10 passes for 217 yards and two touchdowns.

Detroit's rookie receiver had a good day, too. Charles Rogers had four receptions for 38 yards and two scores. He dove to catch a 13-yard pass from Harrington to put the Lions ahead 14-7 in the second quarter.

Giants 23, Rams 13

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Kerry Holmes recovered one of Kurt Warner's six fumbles for a touchdown, and the New York Giants sacked the St. Louis Rams' quarterback six times and intercepted him once in a victory Sunday.

Matt Bryant kicked field goals of 24, 47, and 44 as the Giants revamped special teams, performed flawlessly, Brian Mitchell, another offseason acquisition, scored his first rushing touchdown since 2000.

Warner, who completed 34-of-54 passes for 342 yards, threw a 37-yard touchdown pass to Torry Holt and drove the Rams into New York territory twice late in the game.

Texans 21, Dolphins 20

MIAMI (AP) — Kris Brown kicked his fifth field goal, a 35-yarder with 25 seconds left, and the Houston Texans stunned the Miami Dolphins on Sunday.

Houston's David Carr threw for 266 yards, including a 78-yard touchdown to Corey Bradford. The Texans limited Ricky Williams to 69 yards rushing and forced three turnovers, including an interception by the Marcus Coleman that set up the winning score.

Panthers 24, Jaguars 23

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Jake Delhomme replaced Rodney Peete in the second half and energized Carolina's offense with three touchdown passes — the last with 16 seconds to play — to rally the Panthers to a victory over the Jacksonville Jaguars in Sunday's opener.

Delhomme was facing a fourth-and-12 on the Jaguars 12 with time ticking away.

With the defense closing in, he found Ricky Proehl in the left corner of the end zone for the winning score.

Chiefs 27, Chargers 14

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Showing no ill effects from off-season surgery, Priest Holmes rushed for two touchdowns to lead the Kansas City Chiefs to a victory Sunday over the San Diego Chargers.

Holmes had TD runs of 5 and 24 yards and 159 total yards in the first half as the Chiefs took a 24-0 lead.

Newcomer Vonnie Holliday sacked Drew Brees three times in the first half, supplying the outside pass rush Kansas City sorely lacked last year.

Bills 31, Patriots 0

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Safety Lawyer Milloy needed less than a week to stick it to his former team. Quarterback Drew Bledsoe's wait was longer, but the victory just as sweet.

The two former Patriots sparked the Buffalo Bills to a 31-0 victory over New England in their opener Sunday.

Milloy started despite getting in only two practices with Buffalo, causing an interception, recording a sack, and taking part on five tackles.

Bledsoe engineered scoring drives of 80 and 90 yards on his first two possessions, and finished 17-of-28 for 230 yards with a touchdown and an interception.

Steelers 34, Ravens 15

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Tommy Maddox threw three touchdowns passes, two to Hines Ward, and Pittsburgh's defense roughed up the Baltimore Ravens' rookie quarterback Kyle Boller in a Steelers victory Sunday.

On Ward's second touchdown catch, a 28-yarder late in the third quarter that made it 27-0, Ward shed his coverage on a crossing pattern and Maddox hit him in stride for a 28-yard score.

Colts 9, Browns 6

CLEVELAND (AP) — Peyton Manning drove Indianapolis 65 yards to set up Mike Vanderjagt's

45-yard field goal with 1 second left Sunday, leading the Indianapolis Colts to a sloppy win over the Cleveland Browns.

Manning, who finished 27-of-43 for 214 yards, threw two interceptions — one in the end zone — in the first half and didn't look sharp until late.

He went 8-for-10 on the Colts' game-winning drive.

Broncos 30, Bengals 10

CINCINNATI (AP) — Clinton Portis ran for 120 yards and two first-half touchdowns as the Denver Broncos rolled over the Cincinnati Bengals on Sunday.

The Broncos (1-0) turned to their Rookie of the Year rusher to pull them through their new quarterback's shaky debut. Jake Plummer was repeatedly off-target, threw three interceptions, and looked skittish.

While Plummer stumbled, the Bengals (0-1) were hapless against Portis, who accounted for 159 yards on 24 runs and five catches. Portis' touchdown runs of 2 and 8 yards made it 20-3 at halftime.

Falcons 27, Cowboys 13

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Bill Parcells' Dallas Cowboys could not stop making mistakes, and the Atlanta Falcons recovered from a slow start to win the opener on Sunday.

Doug Johnson didn't make the kind of magic Michael Vick does, but he threw third-quarter touchdown passes to a sliding Warrick Dunn and a rumbling Alge Crumpler, then dove 1 yard for a victory-sealing score early in the fourth to spoil Parcells' return to the sideline.

Seahawks 27, Saints 10

SEATTLE (AP) — Matt Hasselbeck and Shaun Alexander made sure the Seattle Seahawks maintained their offensive momentum from last season.

A retooled defense did its part Sunday, too, in a victory over the New Orleans Saints.

Hasselbeck threw two touchdown passes and Alexander ran for 108 yards and scored twice. Seattle's defense held the Saints to 103 yards rushing.

The Seahawks scored 21-straight points in the second quarter, reaching the end zone on each of their possessions.

49ers 49, Bears 7

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jeff Garcia passed for 229 yards and two touchdowns, and Garrison Hearst caught a TD pass and rushed for another score as the 49ers sparkled in coach Dennis Erickson's debut, beating the Chicago Bears on Sunday.

Ahmed Plummer returned an interception 68 yards for a score.

The 49ers took a 33-7 halftime lead with their biggest offensive output in a half since 1992. They punted just twice in the first three quarters.

WALKER CUP

Britain-Ireland beats Americans for title

GANTON, England (AP) — Stuart Manley beat Trip Kuehne 3 and 2, and Britain and Ireland rallied from a two-match deficit by winning five of eight singles, beating the United States 12½-11½ Sunday to win its third-straight Walker Cup.

Manley

Trailing 7-5 after the Sept. 6 matches and 9-7 after Sunday's foursomes, Britain and Ireland followed up victories at Nairn, Scotland, in 1999, and Ocean Forest, Georgia, two years ago, in the closest match since 1989, also winning the Britain-Ireland by 12½-11½. The Walker Cup, a two-day biennial event, is the amateur equivalent of the Ryder Cup. The trophy is named after former U.S. Golf Association President George Herbert Walker, the great-grandfather of President Bush.

The Americans lost for the third-straight time after holding a lead at halfway mark. Despite the three-straight losses, the U.S. team holds a 31-7-1 advantage overall.

Gary Wolstenholme becomes the first Britain-Ireland player to win four Walker Cups.

Wolstenholme started the Britain-Ireland comeback at the Golf Club with a 3 and 2 win over 18-year-old Casey Wittenberg.

Oliver Wilson holed a 7-foot putt at No. 18 to beat Bill Haas 1 up, tying the match at 9-all.

Haas was watched by his father, Jay Haas, a PGA Tour veteran, who was on the U.S. team that won the Walker Cup in 1975 and his brother Jerry, who triumphed 10 years later.

Michael Skelton, Britain-Ireland's youngest player at 19, moved the host team ahead with a 3 and 2 win over Adam Rubinson.

American Matt Hendrix won to make it 10-all, needing just 14 holes to score a 5 and 4 victory over Stuart Wilson.

Brock McKenzie regained the lead for the Americans with a 3 and 1 victory Irishman Colm Moriarty, but David Inghis' 4 and 3 win over Ryan Moore made it 11-all.

Manley's win over Kuehne, the only Walker Cup veteran on the U.S. team, guaranteed the host team would retain the trophy.

Dubow: BCS works

BY JOSH DUBOW
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hopefully, all those playoff proponents were watching.

This weekend once again showed why the bowl system — even with its faults — makes college football as exciting as it is.

Two days after Congress entered the debate calling the bowl system unfair and two days before a meeting between BCS representatives and those who feel shut out of the system, there were a handful of dramatic games Sept. 6 that wouldn't have meant nearly as much if there were an NFL-style playoff system.

There was Brock Berlin leading Miami on a comeback from 23 points down to beat his former team Florida, 38-33, in an early nominee for game of the year.

There was Ohio State dodging an over-matched San Diego State to hold on for a 16-13 victory that extended its winning streak to 16 games.

There was Oklahoma coach Bob Stoops risking the No. 1 ranking with a fourth-and-11 fake punt call that changed the tide of the game and helped beat Alabama, 20-13.

And there was Notre Dame rallying from a 19-0 deficit to win its opener against Washington State in overtime.

In a playoff system, losses by any of those four teams wouldn't have meant much in the national-title race. In college football, where one loss can ruin a season, playoff intensity starts as soon as the season does.

There's a reason most fans don't pay any attention to college basketball in November and December and only take a cursory look until the tournament brackets come out in March. Most teams are only playing for seeding.

Or take the NFL, where almost every team — except Arizona and Cincinnati — seems to be within a game or two of .500 each Thanksgiving.

National title-aspirations can end before conference play even begins. Just ask Auburn, which was picked by some as the preseason No. 1 only to lose its first two games.

"Many times teams actually improve during the season. They may lose one or two games early in the season but by the time its the ninth, 10th or 11th game, they've honed it down," said Tlulane President Scott Cowen, the leader of the coalition trying to change the BCS. "Under the current system, there's not a real shot at a national championship. A playoff allows for that possibility."

Does Auburn deserve a shot at the national title after its horrid start to the season? A playoff would add some excitement to the postseason and give some teams more to play for late in the year. But the cost of rendering early regular-season games meaningless is too high.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

When they would say, "Oh, no, the air is safe," there was a great sigh of relief. But we know that many of the Ground Zero workers and volunteers are suffering from the World Trade Center cough, from asthma, from pulmonary-respiratory distress.

— Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton, D-N.Y., on an internal report saying the White House pressured the EPA into misleading New Yorkers about health risks after the 9/11 attacks.

YOU KNOW YOU'VE HAD A ROUGH WEEKEND WHEN ...

By Jesse Ammerman

- You started at defensive end for the University of Buffalo.
- You disproved those who claimed that one person could not finish an entire case of High Life. Sadly, you also disproved those who said that one person could not soil himself at three different bars.
- Your time-honored concepts of sex distinctions were further tested by the stranger you woke up with on Saturday morning.
- You've combed through your entire physics text, and you still can't figure out how puke ended up on your ceiling.
- The cops didn't buy your explanation that, in dog years, you are really far older than 19.
- You know there's a first time for everything, but you never figured there would be a first time for passing out in a bathtub.
- You don't recall what you were doing in the Chem Building, and you definitely don't remember why you were streaking.
- It's already Monday, and none of your friends have bothered to post bail for you yet.

Little University

- Which tongue has shared official language status with English in New Zealand since 1987?
- What "musical" duo, according to the Dallas Morning News, was revealed to be "nothing more than two mimes in Spandex shorts?"
- What Microsoft product put 21 million buyers in the pilot's seat, from 1992 to 1999?
- What vegetable's FAD2 gene did scientists at Japan's Kinki University implant in pigs so their pork would be leaner?
- What acid-head gave multimedia lectures called "How to Operate Your Brain" two years before he expired in 1996?
