Group eyes cuts for football

BY MATTHEW MOSS

The ball is rolling for those who want to cut down spending on football nationwide.

A proposal to reduce the number of football scholarships and on-campus recruiting visits will go to the UI Faculty Senate Sept. 23 following a formal endorsement Tuesday from the UI Faculty Council, an organization consisting of professors from every UI college.

The proposal, presented by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences Educational Policy Committee, states that scholarship cuts could save the university $150,000, which could be used to fund and preserve "non-revenue" sports such as

There is a credible argument that the football program will be able to sustain itself," said UI political science Professor Peverill Squire, who brought the proposal before the council.

The liberal-arts school proposal, which failed at first but was eventually passed, calls for a 15 percent reduction in football scholarships, from 85 to 72, and a 16 percent decrease in the number of on-campus visits from 61 to 51. The measure will next go to the Faculty Senate; if passed there, it will be forwarded to the NCAA for consideration.

"The NCAA is the target at the moment," Squire said. "It's the [liberal-arts school's] attempt to get the conversation started."

Squire said 72 scholarships would be adequate because it would allow for a three-deep roster at all positions.

"The nature of the university and of university funding is changing," the proposal states. "Every component of the institution must cooperate and make sacrifices, including student athletics."

Not all the council members agreed. Pharmacy Assistant Professor Ronald Herman said a reduction in scholarships would lead to a decrease in the number of quality football players, which would not save the university money in the long run.

"You'll see the exact opposite,"

Katherine Tachau, the council's vice president and a history professor, said the cuts would only work if initiated by all football programs around the country.

"We're going to be producing worse teams if it's done unilaterally," she said.

Crooner Mayer set for Carver

BY CHOYON MANJREKAR

There has been "no such thing" as a concert at a Carver Hawkeye Arena since 2000, but the dry spell will end in November when pop icon John Mayer takes center stage as part of his latest album tour.

The Grammy-winning musician will come to Iowa City for a live concert on Nov. 9 at 7:30 p.m., officials of SCOPE, the university's concert-production group, revealed Tuesday.

Tickets will go on sale first for the John Mayer Fan Club on Friday and for the general public on Sept. 27 at 10 a.m. The concert is part of Mayer's tour to promote

ier Things, which went on sale in the United States Tuesday.

"We are sure he will do very well," said Lauren Prigge, the SCOPE public-relations director. "We wanted to have music that's popular and appreciated by students and the community."

Organizers hope to sell at least 13,000 tickets for the $35.50 event, which will be held in conjunction with JAM productions of Chicago.

Mayer, a radio-friendly crooner popular with teenagers, is riding the crest of his popularity after winning the Best Male Pop Vocal Grammy for his 2001 album, Room for Squares, which sold 3 million copies.

He is coming off a summer tour with the Counting Crows and a hit single, "Your Body is a Wonderland." He will stage concerts in the United Kingdom and Australia before beginning the U.S. leg of his concerts.

His concert in Iowa City will mark the first time SCOPE has held a major concert since a Matchbox 20 concert in 2000. SCOPE found itself at the center of a controversy in fall of 2001 when UI police raised safety concerns about "unde-sirables" and armed gang members at a scheduled Snoop Dogg concert. THE DAILY IOWAN

The mood in a half-full Johnson County courtroom was somber as prosecutors began to divulge evidence against a Coralville man charged with first-degree murder in a homicide nearly 22 years ago.

Testimony began Tuesday in the trial of Richard Dodd, 46, who is accused of raping and murdering Vicki Klotzbach near her Knoll Ridge Gardens residence on Oct. 20, 1981.

The trial's first day offered a brief yet graphic glimpse into a crime that continues to haunt Klotzbach's family.

Laurie Herring, a UI alumna who lived in the same apartment complex as Klotzbach, testified that she was followed by a suspicious man in a brown car while walking to the Mustang Market, a block from her home on Oct. 19, 1981.

In the brown Mustang Dodd's girlfriend owned, he kept a replica Colt .45 he had stolen from a Perkins, his former employer, prosecutors allege. The gun, they said, was the weapon he would later use to end Klotzbach's life.

Herring said she noticed the man was staring at her from the parking lot after she stepped out of the market.

She said she returned home and later saw the same man walking near her apartment, wearing a white brimmed hat with a small crown, a brown leather jacket, and jeans. She spotted him again near the building the next day, she told

Assistant State Attorney General Tom Miller told jurors in his opening remarks that Dodd was living with his girlfriend in a nearby residence at the time.

Experience prevailed in a close race that pitted two incumbents and two challengers against each other for a spot on the seven-member Iowa City School Board.

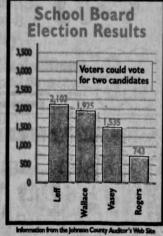

Incumbent Jan Leff, 62, will join returning member Pete Wallace, 60, on the board. Leff garnered 60 percent of the vote and Wallace 55 percent.

Mary Vasey, 69, reaped 44 percent, while Randall Rogers, 57, earned 21 percent in their losing bids.

Ajubilant Wallace celebrated with supporters at his home on the outskirts of Iowa City. Partygoers enjoyed a hearty night of conversation and wine as they congratulated the local pediatrician on his third term on the board.

"I'm very excited and very gratified," Wallace said. "[We were] uncertain about what results were going to be because there was a union and a democratic party support behind Vasey's campaign."

A six-year veteran of the School Board, Wallace plans to continue work on several projects he helped initiate, including overseeing the $39 million renovation project to area schools, examining nutrition in schools, and developing programs to assist at-risk students.

From her 215 Sunset St. home, Leff said she was "absolutely delighted" about her second-consecutive term on the board.

"I couldn't be more pleased," she said. "[The result] shows that voters have confidence in Pete Wallace and me."

Leff iterated that she will continue to focus on completing

Ceiling pot startles Coral Ridge

BY ERIN ALTHOFF THE DAILY IOWAN

A mall official said that while she was surprised to learn about a marijuana-growing operation in the ceiling of Coral Ridge Mall. there is not much that can be done to keep it from happening again.

A growing light, 29 potting containers of various sizes, soil, fertilizer, water, a makeshift greenhouse, and marijuana seeds and stems were discovered in a 6-by-6 area between the ceiling and the roof in a leased space within the mall, said Coralville police Officer Bill Clarahan. The site is only accessible by removing a ceiling panel and negotiating the height of the store, he said. No marijuana plants were found, but police believe the area had been cleared out recently.

"Legally, we're not allowed to enter a space. I can't go in and request to look in a tenant's ceiling without a search warrant," said mall general manager Monica Nadeau. "We're not naïve to the fact that there are illegal substances in the community, but growing in the ceiling is definitely a surprise."

> - Monica Nadeau, Coral Ridge mall general manager

The operation was discovered Sept. 3 by an electrician during routine electrical audit, Nadeau said. The audit took place in preparation for a change of hands, though the space was and is occupied. Authorities are not releasing the name or location because of the ongoing investigation.

"The plants were gone, and they left everything else, so it's hard to say one way or the other [when the area was vacated]," Clarahan said, adding that he didn't believe the items were sitting there long, based on their condition. "They might have been in a hurry and took what they had to."

Clarahan said that it was difficult to determine how much marijuana was harvested without seeing the plants, though he believes there were at least four plants growing.

"There were four pots that still contained soil, so I'm assuming that's where the plants were," he said.

This was the only growing operation found in a commercial space that Clarahan can remember during his eight years in the Coralville department. He believes the location will make it more difficult to find the perpetrator.

one's house, it's pretty hard for [the residents] to argue that a neighbor is coming over and growing dope in their basement without them knowing," he said, adding that he'd have to interview more people than usual to find the guilty party.

Because no actual plants were found, the person would be charged with conspiracy to manufacture marijuana - a felony - and possession of paraphernalia - a simple misdemeanor, Clarahan said.

Coralville police questioned whether the person responsible for the operation could be penalized with an additional five years in prison because of its proximity to the Iowa Children's Museum, located in Coral Ridge. Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White said the Iowa statute - which states that manufacturing or distributing drugs within 1,000 feet of a public school, park, pool, or recreational center mandates an additional penalty of up to five years in prison - would not apply in this case.

City moves ahead on transport center

BY ALEX LANG THE DAILY IOWAN

The intersection of Court and Clinton streets will sport a new look next year following an Iowa City City Council decision Tuesday to renovate the area.

Councilors voted 6-1 to award a building contract for the Court Street Transportation Center Project to Knutson Construction Services in the first official step toward a new four-story complex.

The complex, with a projected $7 million price tag, will have approximately 500 parking spaces, a childcare center, and stops for city and interstate buses. The bus depot located near the Robert E. Lee Recreation Center will move there, as will some taxi stands.

"This is part of a much larger, larger puzzle," said Mayor Ernie Lehman, referring to the rejuvenation of downtown.

Knutson hit the low bid for the project at just under $6 million. Federal funds will pay 80 percent of the cost, while remaining money will come from the general-obligation bond proceeds.

If the project receives additional funding, as Lehman believes it will, architects would add two additional stories for more parking spaces. To stimulate downtown growth, some of the spaces might be leased to businesses that move into the Old Capitol Town Center.

The center will take up just more than a year.

approximately 40 percent of a city block; demolition has already started on buildings that now occupy the space. Lehman said he expects construction to begin after the demolition is complete, sometime in the winter. The entire construction project is to last

Councilor Mike O'Donnell, who voted in favor of the resolution, said the city has a "commitment to have enough parking downtown."

However, not all councilors welcomed the complex.

"I think it would be better to spend money on other things downtown," said Steve Kanner. Also, the council repealed an old ordinance to allow Iowa City residents to park cars on their front lawn.

The change in the ordinance stemmed from a complaint against James Thomas, 131 N. First Ave, by neighbors who contended that vehicles parked on his front lawn are

The court ordered a frequent protester at the Emma Goldman Clinic to stay away from the facility in a temporary injunction sought on Monday by the clinic's director.

The order prohibits Dan Holman from being any closer than across the street from the clinic and 100 feet from Executive Director Karen Kubby, Medical Director Robert Kretzschmar, and their residences. Holman's alleged escalating behavior, which he denies, has created a "concern" for clinic employees, Kubby said.

The injunction stems from comments Holman made to a New York Times reporter on Sept. 3 while rallying with 50 other anti-abortion protesters

The Times quoted Holman as saying, "Some day, I hope I will have the courage to be as much as a man as he was" while holding a sign that read "Dead Doctors Can't Kill."

"It's my job, obligation, and duty to ensure the safety and security of everyone involved in this organization," Kubby said. "I've seen as a national trend that this kind of behavior continues unless there is intervention."

The clinic carefully considered the scope of its request for an injunction to respect Holman's constitutional right to protest peacefully, she said.

In an interview, Holman told The Daily Iowan he plans to fight the injunction with legal

"What I meant by that was that Paul Hill was not ashamed to equate unborn children with born children," he said of the Times article. "A lot of pro-life leaders don't take a stand. They are ambivalent about the status of unborn children."

Filing the injunction was a sign of "hysteria" from the clinic, which is "using my association and my support of Paul Hill as a reason to keep me away from the clinic," said Holman, the director of the Iowa Missionaries to the Pre-Born.

Holman, who lives in Keokuk, protests in front of the Emma Goldman Clinic roughly two times a week.

"I talk to women who are going in, speak to passers-by, preach on campus," he said. "Sometimes, we get a positive reaction. Some women change their minds about killing their child."

The injunction, filed in 6th District Court in Johnson County, is not the first against Holman. In 1992, he was one of 38 people named in an injunction in Milwaukee for blocking the doors to an abortion clinic.

Kubby said she became concerned about Holman's behavior when he changed his habits from standing out in front of the clinic displaying large, graphic signs depicting aborted fetuses to yelling Bible passages and videotaping clients as they entered.

Holman, who says he has been a Christian for 30 years, rejects the allegation that his behavior has changed.

"My behavior has been consistent. There has been no escalation," he said.

Pastor cries foul in facility's closing

BY PAULA MAVROUDIS THE DAILY IOWAN

A lone voice, accusing the state of misusing its power, continues to press for the re-opening of the Cornerstone Christian School after its doors were closed Monday. Pastor Royce Phillips of the Tabernacle Baptist Church, which operated the now-closed Cornerstone School, said he thinks the Department of Human Services wanted to keep the school open. "I don't think they ever intended to license us," he said. "They just wanted us to close.'

- "people who hate God" - never

The school was closed Monday after church officials reached a settlement with the agency following allegations that Cornerstone illegally operated as a daycare without a state-issued license.

Phillips, 50, accused the department of establishing overly broad regulations of such programs, making its own authority larger than necessary.

"It's made it so that any adults caring for a child who's not theirs are considered daycare," he said. "We are not, and have never been, a daycare. We are a school."

The closure, he added, is a "flagrant violation of the separation of church and state."

The agency, however has "made it abundantly clear that this has nothing to do with religion," said spokesman Roger Munns. "We hold dear to the freedom of religion."

The department does not have jurisdiction over schools and assumes no authority over churches, he said. Only daycares, defined as an establishment that cares for 14 or more children before or after school, can be regulated by the department, he said.

Phillips, whose school has had as many as 50 students stay before and after school hours, said an agency inspector came unannounced to the school last fall, saying that the department had received an anonymous call. The inspector informed the employees that they had to modify the facility and meet safety requirements for licensing or face closure.

The agency mandates that daycares must have staff trained in medical emergencies and CPR while following such basic safety measures as maintaining sturdy playground equipment and keeping medicine away from children's reach, Munns said. In its current state, the facility does not meet any of these requirements, he said.

The facility, which opened in 1997, was given until June 23 to halt operations. When the agency learned that the summer program was still open, it sent two consultants to investigate the situation. On June 25, Munns said, they concluded the facility was a day careoperating under a different name - summer Vacation Bible School — and was in violation of Human Services regulations. In July, the facility was still operating its summer Vacation Bible School although the agency had denied an application for a childcare

Getting ready for next time | Lieberman, Dean clash

BY RICHARD T. COOPER

LOS ANGELES TIMES

WASHINGTON - Kevin Clark is a second-generation cop, a street-tough police com-mander steeled in the cocaine wars of the South Bronx. Dan Hanfling is an Ivy League doctor. And Jim Schwartz spent his formative years answering fire alarms in suburbia.

Yet Clark, Hanfling, and Schwartz have three things in

First, each was personally involved in responding to the 9/11 terrorist attacks that struck the World Trade Center in New York and the Pentagon in Arlington, Va.

Second, each believes deep in his heart that such attacks will happen again. "I come to work every single day thinking today is going to be the day,'

Schwartz said recently.
Third, since Sept. 11, 2001, each has played a frontline role in the grass-roots struggle to get ready for next time - the nationwide effort to help local police, fire, and emergency medical teams improve their readiness for new terrorist attacks or other mass catastrophes.

Working in the arena of first responders and local preparedness, they have seen the war on terrorism from the bottom up. And their experiences offer unique insight into why, despite measurable progress in many areas, the overall effort remains longer on plans and promises than on final results.

Clark, Hanfling, and Schwartz, much like local officials in towns and cities, state capitals, and federal agencies across the United States, have wrestled with tight budgets, red tape, politics, and confusion all the while driven by their personal memories of 9/11.

Clark, now the police commissioner in Baltimore, is a native New Yorker; he commanded the 44th Precinct just north of Manhattan two years ago. "When the first tower actually collapsed," he said, "it was like somebody put a sword right into your heart.

Schwartz was directing rescue efforts and the firefighting after a fuel-laden airliner smashed into the Defense Department's massive headquarters. He had to order police and firefighters to form a cordon and physically restrain military personnel from rushing back into the building to search for comrades. Minutes later, a huge section of the structure collapsed into flaming rubble.

"Many of them suddenly faced the reality that if we hadn't given that order, they'd have been dead," Schwartz said.

Hanfling, as the head of emergency management for the largest hospital system in Washington's Virginia suburbs, put emergency rooms on alert for the expected flood of trauma cases.

Hours later, as medical director of one of the first search-and-rescue teams to penetrate the Pentagon's shattered interior, he received the news that no one inside was likely to be alive. There was nothing for it, he said, but to tell his trauma teams to stand down.

Small wonder these three have played their roles since Sept. 11 with singular determination.

Life on the street

If there are a million stories in the Naked City, as has been said of New York, then Kevin Clark probably heard the worst of them.

The son of a New York patrolman, Clark joined the force in 1981. He spent nine years in the South Bronx and three years in Spanish Harlem, "when the crack wars were in full effect."

On Sept. 11, 2001, Clark was driving to work across the George Washington Bridge and happened to glance downriver. To his astonishment, he saw the top of the trade center engulfed in a mushroom-shaped cloud.

When Clark called the NYPD operations center, a sergeant laconically informed him that they were sending a squad car to investigate. It was going to take more than that, Clark suggested.

At precinct headquarters, he said, "I told the radio dispatcher we weren't going to respond to anything except major crimes robberies, murders, serious things," Clark said. "We just assumed it was an all-out attack on any symbols or infrastructure."

Last fall, when he accepted Mayor Martin O'Malley's invitation to come to Baltimore, Clark brought with him his wife, five children, and two decades of experience fighting the scourge of drugs and violent crime that were ravaging Maryland's largest city.

He also brought a commitment to homeland security.

Supported by O'Malley, who has taken an exceptionally aggressive stance on readiness, Clark has pushed hard for better equipment and organization. "It's a new world since 9/11, and police and fire and other first responders need new equipment like this," he said recently when the city announced that all 3,350 of its police officers would get biochemical masks and protective suits.

Such gains have been hardwon, however, and the police commissioner's frustration sometimes boils over.

"We're not prepared, whether people want to believe it or not," he said. "But everybody is playing politics, and it's with people's

Part of the problem is that Baltimore, though it shows signs of revival after years of stagnation, is an old city with too many needs and too few resources.

Low and slow

Absurd as it may sound, Dan Hanfling says his biggest problem has been persuading homeland-security officials to see hospitals as part of the firstresponse system.

It's not that anyone thinks hospitals aren't part of that system, he said. It's that many officials make an unconscious assumption that, when disaster strikes, the hospitals will be

As a result, federal and state preparedness programs have tended to focus on bolstering police, fire, and emergency medical units.

"We needed to reset the focus of what is a first responder," Hanfling said. "Funding for hospital preparedness has been low, and it has been slow."

For instance, last year, the state of Virginia received $23 million from the federal Health Resources Service Administration. The state health department took $20 million. The remaining $2.8 million was divided evenly among the state's six administrative over Israel statements

BY RON FOURNIER ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE - Sen. Joe Lieberman accused Howard Dean in a campaign debate Tuesday night of turning his back on Israel, and the Democratic presidential front-runner shot back that he and former President Clinton held the same view on the issue.

"It doesn't help ... to dema-gogue this issue," Dean quickly added in the sharpest clash of the young Democratic debate season.

Two days before the second anniversary of the 9/11 attacks, Democrats criticized President Bush's handling of the war on terror at the same time they began to sketch out their differences on foreign policy.

Rep. Dennis Kucinich of Ohio criticized Rep. Dick Gephardt of Missouri for voting to support the war in Iraq.

Without mentioning any names, Sen. Bob Graham of Florida attacked Democrats for voting for the same legislation, saying they "gave the president a blank check."

Sen. John Kerry of Massachusetts, one of those to support the measure, defended his vote as necessary to show Saddam Hussein that the United States was serious about the need for international weapons inspectors to operate freely in Iraq.

Dean, the former governor of Vermont, has been the phenomenon of the nominating campaign to date, drawing huge crowds, displacing Kerry atop the polls in New Hampshire, and raising more money than his rivals.

That has his foes looking for ways to slow his momentum, as Lieberman's attack showed.

The 2000 vice presidential candidate said comments that Dean made last week about the Middle East "break a 50-year record in which presidents, Republicans and Democrats, members of Congress of both parties have supported our relationship with Israel."

Lieberman, who is Jewish, added that Dean "has said he would not take sides" in the Middle East, "but then he has said Israel ought to get out of the West Bank and an enormous number of settlements" should be demolished.

"I'm disappointed in Joe," Dean said. "My position on Israel is exactly the same as Bill Clinton's.'

The debate was held on a stage at Morgan State University, a historically black college in Baltimore, and hosted by the Congressional Black Caucus. Brit Hume of Fox News Channel handled moderator's duties.

Not all the issues were weighty. One questioner asked the nine would-be presidents to name their favorite song. "Changes in Attitude, Changes in Latitude," a tune by Jimmy Buffet, Graham said.

U.S.: Iraq costs underestimated

BY WARREN VIETH AND ESTHER SCHRADER LOS ANGELES TIMES

WASHINGTON - The White House acknowledged Monday that it substantially underestimated the cost of rebuilding Iraq and that even the additional $87 billion it is seeking from a wary Congress will fall far short of what is needed for postwar reconstruction.

Administration officials said President Bush's emergency spending request - which would push the U.S. deficit above the half-trillion-dollar mark for the first time - still leaves a reconstruction funding gap of as much as $55 billion.

"It is fair to say that the level of decay and underinvestment in the Iraqi infrastructure was worse than almost anybody on the outside anticipated," said one senior administration official.

"We were all surprised," said another.

The revised estimates underscored the political challenge facing both the president, who asked Americans on Sunday

It comes amid the increasing clamor of the 2004 election cycle and growing concern about the wisdom of spending more money overseas when the U.S. economy is shedding jobs and the federal deficit is ballooning.

Administration officials stressed that they had no plans to ask Congress for more than the $87 billion during the coming fiscal year, which ends just before next year's elections. They said they would pressure other countries to come up with the additional funds needed to restore security in Iraq and repair its ravaged infrastructure. Archdiocese to pay | Ueberroth drops out in Calif. recall vote

BY EDWARD WALSH

LOS ANGELES - Former baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth dropped out of the California gubernatorial recall election Tuesday and said he will endorse one of his rivals after hearing their plans to create more jobs in this fiscally strapped state.

Ueberroth's decision narrowed the number of prominent Republicans in the race to two; a poll released Tuesday showed that the two, actor Arnold Schwarzenegger and state Sen. Tom McClintock, are trailing Democratic Lt. Gov. Cruz Bustamante in the contest to succeed Gov. Gray Davis, also a Democrat, if voters recall Davis in the Oct. 7 voting.

According to the Field Poll, Bustamante, who was in a dead heat with Schwarzenegger last month, has pulled into a 30 to 25 percent lead over the actor. McClintock, who appeals strongly to California's most conservative GOP voters, was third with 13 percent, followed by Ueberroth with 5 percent, and columnist Arianna Huffington, an

But despite growing GOP pressure, McClintock iterated on Tuesday that he will not abandon the race. "I'm in this race to the finish line," he said in a radio interview. McClintock also took a shot at Schwarzenegger, dismissing the Republican frontrunner as a "not serious" candidate because he has said he will engage in only one debate.

In the two-part ballot, voters will be asked whether Davis should be recalled from office and who should replace him if he is. If a majority votes to oust Davis, the candidate who receives the most votes on the second question will become governor.

posing the biggest threat to Schwarzenegger's hope of solidifying enough Republican support behind his candidacy to defeat Bustamante, the only prominent Democrat in the 135candidate field. According to the poll, if McClintock, rather than Ueberroth, had dropped out, Schwarzenegger would pull slightly ahead of Bustamante.

The poll contained one glimmer of good news for the beleaguered Davis: 55 percent of voters favor his recall, down slightly from 58 percent in August.

Depo-Provera Contraceptive Injection

medroxyprogesterone acetate injectable suspension

What is DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection is a form of birth control that is given as an intramuscular injection (a shot) in the buttock or upper arm once every 3 months (13 weeks). To continue your contraceptive protection, you must return for your next injection promptly at the end of 3 months (13 weeks). DEPO-PROVERA contains medroxyprogesterone acetate, a chemical similar to (but not the same as) the natural hormone progesterone, which is produced by your owness during the second half of your menstrual cycle. DEPO-PROVERA acts by preventing your egg cells from ripening, if an egg is not released from the ovaries during your menstrual cycle, it cannot become fertilized by sperm and result in pregnancy. DEPO-PROVERA also causes changes in the lining of your uterus that make it less likely for pregnancy to occur. How effective is DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

The efficacy of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

How effective is DEPO-PROYERA Contraceptive Injection?

The efficacy of DEPO-PROYERA Contraceptive Injection depends on following the recommended dosage schedule exactly (see "How offen do I get my shot of DEPO-PROYERA Contraceptive Injection"). To make sure you are not pregnant when you first get DEPO-PROYERA Contraceptive Injection, your first injection must be given ONLY during the first 5 days after childbirth if not brass-feeding and, if exclusively breast-feeding ONLY at the sixth week after childbirth. It is a long-term injectable contraceptive when administered at 3-month (13-week) intervals. DEPO-PROYERA Contraceptive injection is over 99% effective, making it one of the most reliable methods of birth control available. This means that the average annual pregnancy rate is less than one for every 100 women who use DEPO-PROYERA The effectiveness of most contraceptive methods depends in part on how reliably each woman uses the method. The effectiveness of DEPO-PROYERA depends only on the patient returning every 3 months (13 weeks) for her next injection. Your health-care provider will help you compare DEPO-PROYERA have other contraceptive methods and give you the information you need in order to decide which contraceptive method is the right choice for you.

About two thirds of the women who used DEPO-PROVERA in clinical trials reported a weight gain of about 5 pounds during the first year. In a clinical study of over 3.900 women who used DEPO-PROVERA for up to 7 years, some women reported the following effects that may or may not have been related to their use of DEPO-PROVERA: Irregular menstrual biseeding, amenormea, headache, nervousness, abdominal cramps, diziness, weakness or fatigue, decreased seoual desire, leg cramps, nausea, vagnal discharge or irritation, breast swelling and tenderness, bloating, swelling of the hands or feet, backache, depression, insonnia, aone, pekic pain, no hair growth or excessive hair loss, rash, hot lashes, and joint pain. The Daily Iowan Dean's minority report a bit lame

During Howard Dean's Memorial Day visit to Iowa City, Daily Iowan reporters asked the front-running Democratic presidential candidate about his campaign's lack of minority supporters. He said, "When you have a rally like that in Iowa, it's a little tougher." While his statement was likely intended to reference Iowa's relatively small minority population, it still reflected a cavalier attitude toward recruiting much-needed minority support to his campaign.

Pointing to Iowa's demography is not only off-base but is wholly ignorant. It also shows he isn't really trying to reach minorities, at least not in Dean needs to realize the fault lies in the messenger, not the audience.

Iowa boasts a strong minority population in some places. West Liberty, which is just a short jaunt down U.S. Highway 6 from Iowa City, has a sizable Latino population: more than 1,300 people in the town of just over 3,000. West Liberty boasts a 58 percent diversity index, according to the 2000 Census. The index measures the likelihood that two people selected randomly from a given population would have different ethnic backgrounds. If Dean continues to say it's "tougher" to get minorities, he will only alienate important constituents for any Democratic candidate and hurt his campaign.

Dean's failure to broaden his reach so far is hurting him in other areas, most notably labor. Andy Stern, the president of the Service Employees International Union, said on Monday that Dean needs to broaden his support to gain labor backing. All nine candidates are in a tight race for labor endorsements, and there were signs early this week that Dean is getting the message. During his speech to the service-workers union Monday, Dean touted the Supreme Court for upholding the University of Michigan Law School's enrollment

Dean has done a good job shoring up support from previously ignored voting blocs, particularly students. His unprecedented Internet recruiting has propelled him into an early lead. His e-backers, however, are mostly white upper-middle-class computer users. He needs to garner more minority support in order to win the nomination. If his campaign turns a corner and becomes serious about that goal, Iowa minorities will be the first to notice. That's when Dean will acknowledge them rather than fall back on the perception of a homogenous Iowa population.

Leadership needed for Mideast peace

Though it would have been the height of folly to believe that the Israelis and Palestinians would follow the U.S.-backed "road map" to peace in swift, easy fashion, the process is in tatters now, and the region threatens to spiral into greater violence. With all its huge challenges overseas, the Bush administration needs to renew its arm-twisting, support the Palestinian Authority prime minister-designate, and get the Israelis to ease their military crackdown on the Palestinians and stop their incendiary killings of members of the Islamic militant group Hamas. All the parties have no choice but to press for peace - the alternative is unspeakable, endless blood-

Much of the latest turmoil turns on the politics of personalities - of the just-resigned Palestinian Authority Prime Minister Mahmoud Abbas, his feisty and reluctant would-be successor Ahmed Qureia, the marginalized but omnipresent Palestinian Authority leader Yasser Arafat, and the hawkish Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon. They pursue benighted policies at the expense of their long-suffering - and dying — people. Abbas, who was backed by the United States and Israel but was unpopular with Palestinians, battled for four months with Arafat, especially over control of crucial security forces that might quell terrorism. When it became clear this weekend that he could not prevail in his power struggle, Abbas quit. Arafat then handpicked as his successor Qureia. He is the pragmatic Parliament speaker and a moderate who was an architect of the Oslo peace accords. He has not formally accepted the post, insisting he needs guarantees of U.S. and European support and renewed Israeli pledges to pursue peace and to end the crackdown on the Palestinians.

U.S. and Israeli officials know

Qureia well. They could work with him, prodding him, as they did Abbas, to rein in radical Palestinians who wrongly oppose peace and murder Israeli civilians.

Arafat, if he did not let Qureia govern and negotiate for peace, would risk a historical ignominy far beyond his present isolation in his wrecked Fatah headquarters. Sharon, if he ignores stern U.S. warnings and yields to his hard-line instincts and supporters, just might rescue Arafat from the sidelines by exiling him from the Palestinian territories but pushing him onto a new global stage. That's the last thing the peace process needs the old chairman railing around the world against the United States and Israel. There already are enough obstacles on the hard road to Middle East peace, but the United States and other nations urgently need to get the Israelis and Palestinians back on it.

On the domestic front, economic uncertainty abounds.

Still, in these troubled times, it is comforting to know that the United States has not abandoned a long-held penchant for progress in the field of consumer goods, regardless of necessity.

It was in this spirit that Americans have, in the past, been endowed with such dubiously useful creations as rubber wallmounted fish that sing medleys of obnoxious songs. This trinket tinkering has created a society in which it is nigh unto impossible to buy an electronic appliance that doesn't contain a clock, despite the fact that few people feel a compelling urge to set their schedule by anything their dishwasher tells them.

HELLING

Earlier this month, two stalwart pillars of American life - milk and reality television — underwent metamorphoses that, though noteworthy for their ingenuity, are not, by objective standards, inherently functional.

Pop, soda, soda pop - however one refers to them — carbonated beverages are a bane to nutritionists throughout the United States. Following the age-old philosophy of "if you can't beat 'em, join 'em," George and Mary Ann Clark of Milford, N.Y., have, following a seven-year effort, concocted a beverage designed to bridge the gap between cola and cow juice. "Refreshing Power Milk" (RPM) combines carbonated water and powdered milk, eliciting the sensation of soda while providing the same nutritional content as an equal amount of skim milk.

This, of course, raises the question, Why couldn't people just drink skim milk in the first place? Or, for that matter, seek milk's nutrients from such products as vogurt or cheese?

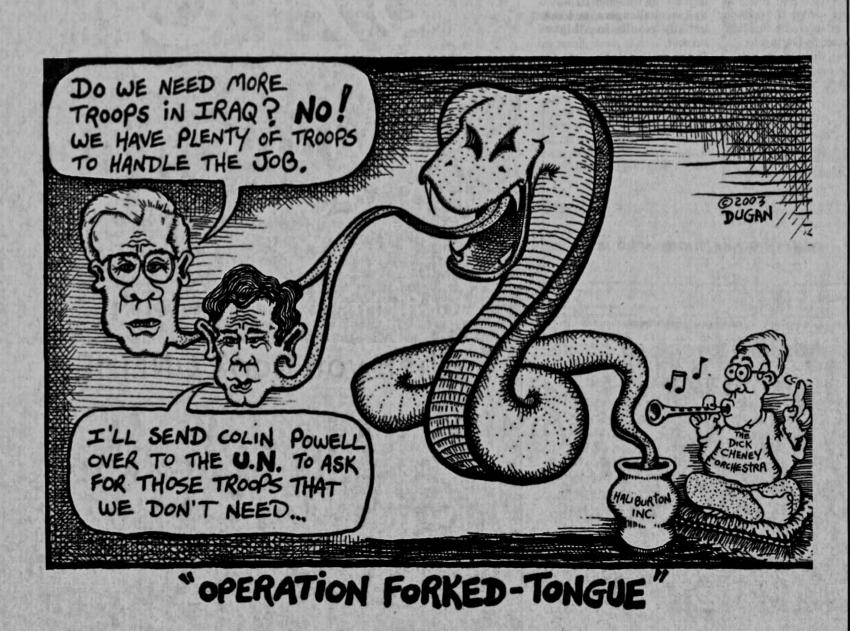

Legitimate arguments, to be sure ... if one is, in fact, a "commie." In the United States, so long as someone invents something, hordes of people will invariably buy it. This is the foundation upon which the American economy is built, and it is for this reason that the Clarks will most likely reap millions of dollars in profits; had they been citizens of the Soviet Union, for example, both husband and wife would have most likely been sent to the Gulag as social parasites, along with anyone else who had the audacity to whine about drinking plain, uncarbonated

And speaking of parasites, yet another reality television show, "Joe Schmo," to be aired on Spike TV, has descended from on high to impart its wisdom upon the American people who, for their part, are wondering what they did to deserve such punishment. Granted, these days reality-television programs propagate like so many malignant tumors upon the body of the United States, but this particular entry has a unique twist. Instead of the usual, hackneyed premise of a group of incongruous individuals forced to share a palatial dwelling laden with television cameras, "Joe Schmo" features a cast of incongruous individuals forced to share a palatial dwelling. However, in an attempt to breathe life into the concept, the entire show is an elaborate hoax, with the title character led to believe that he is a contestant on a reality program of a different name, in which he is competing for a $100,000 prize. Mr. Schmo, apparently, is none the wiser that he is not a participant on a reality-TV show, but is, in fact, a participant on a reality-TV show.

Confused yet? So am I. As near as I can gather, the title character is subjected to all the rigors of a "real" reality show (and isn't that a contradiction in terms ...) without the possibility for fabulous cash

Sounds like gooood watchin'.

Having an inordinate number of silly, semi-functional products and inane television programs from which to choose at any hour of any given day is part of what makes America great (Fact: Neither Afghanistan nor Iraq have ever developed talking rubber wall fish). Carbonated milk and not-real reality television, though themselves having little in common, stand nevertheless as testaments to American ingenuity.

Propagandist of the horror dies

BY BART BARNES

WASHINGTON POST

Leni Riefenstahl, the German film director and protégé of Adolph Hitler whose historic documentaries about the 1934 Nazi Party congress at Nuremberg and the Berlin Olympics of 1936 set benchmark standards for cinematic imagery and political propaganda that endured through the 20th century, died Monday at her home in Pöcking, near Munich. No cause of death was reported for Riefenstahl, who was 101.

Riefenstahl was a personal favorite of Hitler's and one of the few remaining friends of the Nazi dictator still alive. Under his sponsorship, she had wide authority and unlimited access in her work, and her career flourished. But it collapsed with the fall of the Third Reich and the carnage of World War II, and Riefenstahl never rid herself of the Nazi stigma.

As a filmmaker and artist, she had an eye for detail and a talent for editing that evoked the hypnotic spectacle of the massed Nazi legions, the raw charisma of the German führer and the mesmerizing drama and majesty of Olympic competition with a force and power not seen before in the film medium.

In 1932, Riefenstahl, then 30, heard Hitler speak at a rally and wrote to him offering her talents. In her memoirs, she rapturously described her first impression of him.

"It seemed as if the earth's surface were spreading out in front of me, like a hemisphere that suddenly splits apart in the middle, spewing out an enormous jet of water, so powerful that it touched the sky and shook the earth," she said. "I felt quite paralyzed."

During the 1930s, Riefenstahl was widely rumored at the highest levels of the Nazi Party and throughout Germany to have been Hitler's mistress. In the United States, the Saturday Evening Post described her as a "Nazi pinup girl," and the Detroit News, in a 1937 story, called her "the woman behind Hitler."

Riefenstahl in 1945

Riefenstahl always insisted the rumors were baseless, and investigators for the Allied Powers after the war found no evidence to suggest she may have had a romantic or sexual liaison with Hitler.

After the war, Riefenstahl spent three years under Allied arrest. Though war tribunals ultimately cleared her of wrongdoing and she could point out that she never joined the Nazi party, the suspicion of being a Nazi collaborator stuck.

As late as 2002, Riefenstahl was investigated for Holocaust denial after she said she did not know that Gypsies taken from concentration camps to be used as extras in one of her wartime films later died in the camps. Authorities eventually dropped the case.

Riefenstahl herself seemed ambiguous about how close she was to the Nazi center of power. She said she knew nothing of Hitler's "final solution" to exterminate the Jews and learned about concentration camps only after the war. But she also said she confronted the führer about anti-Semitism.

Riefenstahl in 2000

Speaking to the Associated Press just before her 100th birthday, on Aug. 22, 2002, Riefenstahl dramatically said she has apologized for ever being born' but that she should not be criticized for her masterful films.

"I don't know what I should apologize for," she said. "I cannot apologize, for example, for having made the film Triumph of the Will — it won the top prize. All my films won prizes."

Taken into custody by military authorities following the Nazi surrender in 1945, Riefenstahl was eventually released without charges. But it was years later before she obtained a work permit, and the films she made under Hitler would become a permanent reminder that she had served a regime that produced concentration camps, gas chambers, the Gestapo, and genocide of European Jews. She never regained her prewar professional standing as a director and actress

She photographed Rolling Stones' Mick Jagger and his then-wife, Bianca, in the 1970s. Clips from Olympia appear in music videos. Riefenstahl computer screen savers can be found on the Internet.

Riefenstahl said she was always guided by the search for beauty - whether it was the hypnotic images thousands of goosestepping soldiers in Nuremberg or in her critically acclaimed photographs of the Nuba people.

Through my optimism, I naturally prefer and capture the beauty in life," she said.

She reportedly had cancer surgery last year.

"I want to fall asleep, feel well, and then everything ends. Goodbye," the native Berliner imagined her death in a magazine interview last year. "That must be very beautiful."

LOS ANGELES TIMES

JERUSALEM - Two Palestinian suicide bombers struck hours apart Tuesday, setting off powerful explosions at a crowded bus stop outside a suburban Tel Aviv army base and a trendy late-night café in Jerusalem. At least 14 people were killed in the blasts, along with the bombers, and dozens of others were injured.

The back-to-back bombings underscore the difficulty the new Palestinian prime minister-designate, Ahmed Qureia, is likely to face in winning the confidence of the Israeli government and the Bush administration and trying to revive a fal-tering U.S.-backed peace plan.

After receiving news of the attacks, Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon cut short what had been the first visit by an Israeli leader to India to fly home for urgent consultations. Israel has repeatedly accused the Palestinian Authority of failing to crack down on militants, and some officials said Tuesday's bombings would lead to a renewed debate on expelling Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat from the West Bank.

The bombings came three days after Israel dropped a laser-guided bomb on a building in Gaza City where the leadership of the militant group Hamas was meeting. No one was killed in that attack, but Hamas vowed vengeance "on a scale never before seen." Hamas praised Tuesday's bombings, but stopped short of claiming responsibility.

Hamas supporters rejoiced as word of the two bombings spread. In a rundown neighborhood of Gaza City that is home to many Hamas leaders, celebrants fired semiautomatic weapons into the air and shouted "God is great!"

In the course of the nearly three-year Palestinian uprising, there have been more than 100 suicide bombings against Israeli targets, but it is rare for two to take place on the same day.

The first bomber struck outside the Tzrifim military base in the Tel Aviv suburb of Rishon Letzion just before 6 p.m., as a shift change was taking place and as the gates of the base were filled with arriving or departing soldiers.

In the blast's wake, bloodied army boots, torn rucksacks, and mangled body parts littered the area around an openair roadside shelter used by young soldiers catching buses or hitching rides. Seven soldiers, three of them women, were killed. Approximately two dozen others were injured.

"I saw what looked like an injured man lying on the ground," said Meirav Aish, an 18-year-old soldier who ran to help when she heard the blast. "Then I got closer and saw he was dead, torn all to bits. I saw a woman soldier who was completely burned her hair, her eyelashes, her clothes, everything."

Barely 5½ hours later, the second bomber struck, targeting a popular café on a Jerusalem street packed with restaurants and boutiques. The bomber managed to force his way among the tables, even with two security guards posted in the café, one indoors and one outside.

"When I heard the enormous explosion, I knew it couldn't be anything else," said Batya Bronski, who lives nearby and rushed to see what had happened. The front windows were shattered, strewing the sidewalk with glass, and the café's distinctive red-and-black sign was knocked askew.

"He was wearing dark clothes, but I couldn't see his face," Miron Azran, a waitress at the café, said of the bomber. "The explosion was tremendous - glass everywhere. I saw people injured, dead."

The evening bombings capped what had already been a bloody day. In the West Bank, Israeli troops for hours besieged a seven-story building in Hebron that the army described as a hide out for militants, although it was home to many Palestinian families as

Peacekeepers push into rural Liberia

BY EDWARD HARRIS ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAREYSBURG, Liberia West African peacekeepers took a crucial step toward securing Liberia's peace Tuesday, making their first major move into the volatile countryside and brokering a cease-fire to end the latest battle between rebels and government troops.

Fighting erupted early Tues-day when rebels attacked and overran Kakata, 40 miles northeast of Monrovia, said Col. Theophilus Tawiah of Ghana, the peace force's chief of staff.

Approximately 650 soldiers from Guinea-Bissau arrived just outside Kakata as the two sides traded fire. The contingent's Nigerian operations chief and a senior commander from Guinea-Bissau then met with leaders in the clash, negotiating an end to the battle.

"Our chief of operations intervened. The fighting has ceased, and the people are deployed," Tawiah told the Associated Press, referring to peacekeepers.

After the fighting eased, the peacekeepers moved into the town in armored cars and trucks.

Peacekeepers rounded up the rebels, who had briefly taken control of Kakata, loaded them onto trucks, and transported them to their base at Tubmanburg - passing over miles of government-held roads without any reported incident.

At least three rebel soldiers were wounded in the skirmish, along with two civilians including a woman in her 30s. The woman, whose house had been hit by a mortar round, was wounded in

Two trucks loaded with peacekeepers - an advance team preparing for the arrival of the larger force - had slept in Kakata overnight. The rest of the force arrived later Tuesday. None of the peacekeepers fired weapons during the fighting, Tawiah said.

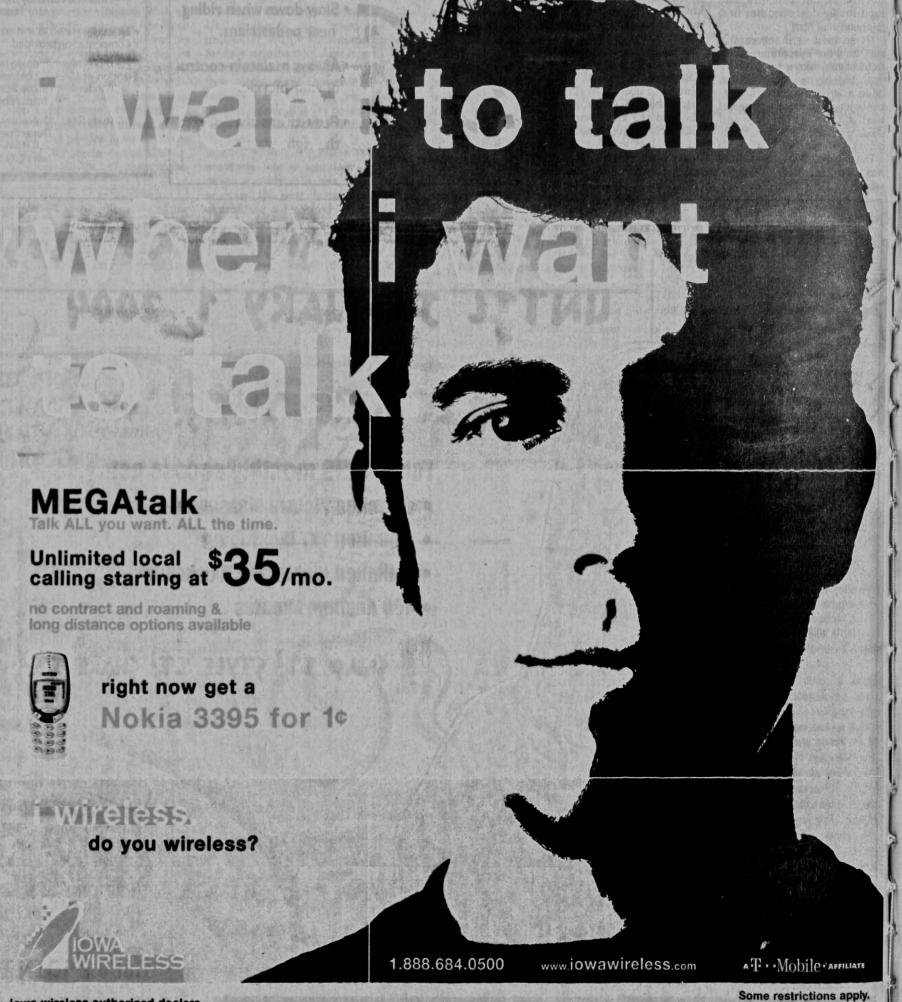

Unrest and large-scale refugee flows have plagued Liberia's countryside despite an Aug. 18 peace deal between the government and rebels.

The deployment to Kakata, delayed for several days, marked the peace force's first major push outside the capital since they arrived more than a

'We don't see any sign of peace. People signed the peace document, but they're not abiding by it," said Johnson Williams, a 41-year-old carpenter listening for news on the radio approximately 10 miles south of Kakata.

At least 200 civilians fled Kakata on Tuesday, said Coralie Lechelle of the French aid group Doctors without Borders.

Liberian Defense Minister Daniel Chea insisted that the peace force "must be firm against any cease-fire violations.

Ferentz: Team can't get caught up in emotions

BY DONOVAN BURBA THE DAILY IOWAN

Kirk Ferentz can claim until he's blue in the face that this weekend is business as usual, but the ghost of last year's second-half collapse against archrival Iowa State loomed over the Iowa coach's weekly press conference.

The Cyclones' comeback from a 24-7 halftime deficit gave Iowa State its fifth-straight win over the Hawkeyes, but Ferentz stressed that his team can't get caught up in the rivalry's emotion. "I'm more worried about our a 2-0 record and an 11-game reg-team having a good Saturday each and every Saturday," he said. "That's what I get paid to do. It'd be great for us to get the win, but if we'd beaten them five straight ... we'd still want to win the game, just as they do."

Iowa travels to Ames boasting ular season winning streak, but Ferentz scoffed at the notion that his team might be overconfident.

"Why would we be overconfident?" he laughed. "We haven't really proven anything this season, [and] we're playing a team we haven't had much success with. We need to go up there and play against a good football team on the road. That's going to be quite a challenge for us." But both Ferentz and his players dropped some not-sosubtle hints that beating the Cyclones would feel better than

DRAKE 3, IOWA 0

Down but not out

BY KELLY BEATON THE DAILY IOWAN

The Hawkeyes entered last night's match against Drake in Des Moines determined to scratch out a victory versus their cross-state foe.

Instead, they got declawed. Iowa was swept 3-0 by Drake, 33-31, 30-28, and 30-19. The loss marks the Bulldogs' first defeat of the Hawkeyes since Oct. 23, 1982.

"I think we're all pretty disappointed in how we performed," said Iowa coach Rita Buck-Crockett. "We had a lot of ball-handling errors in the first two games. That put a lot of pressure on us."

The Hawkeyes started strong in games one and two. Iowa registered 22 kills in game one, matching a season-high total for a single game. Iowa fought the Bulldogs neck and neck in a seesaw game two as well, before succumbing largely due to Drake's 18 kills.

Following intermission, the Hawkeyes faded in what proved to be the match's decisive game three, as they totaled just nine kills. Drake committed just five errors in the game.

The coaching staff is really disappointed with the way we performed [tonight]," said Buck-Crockett. "We just didn't come to play. Our usual pointmakers didn't make points."

One bright spot for Iowa was the play of junior Carolyn Giese. The Dubuque native continued her stellar play from the middle blocker position as she tallied a career-high 18 kills, surpassing her previous high of 15 set in a Sept. 5 loss to Iowa State in the Cyclone Challenge.

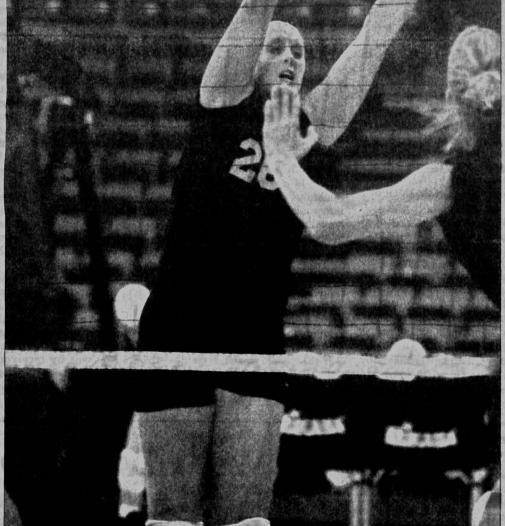

"Carolyn Giese really had an awesome game," said Buck-Crockett. "She's really steadying out. She's doing her job, we just have to get everyone else to do their job, too."

Giese said she plans to continue leading by example, hoping her teammates will follow her solid play on the court.

"I think it comes down to attitude, and wanting to win," she said. "We can't be afraid to lose. If I do my job, hopefully it'll make things easier for everyone else to do their job as well."

PART THREE OF A FIVE-PART SERIES: HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL PLAYERS FROM IOWA CITY CONTINUE THEIR PLAYING CAREERS AS HAWKEYES

BY JASON BRUMMOND

THE DAILY IOWAN

It seems that athletes are being recruited at a younger age as each year passes. Some kids get attention before they've even played at the high-school level. Iowa's Calvin Davis has a similar story, but one that is unique.

The redshirt freshman didn't play a down of football his junior year in high school at Iowa City High - he didn't even go out for the team. During track season that year, Iowa offered him a scholarship to play football. He thought, "Why not?"

Davis a team rarity

"I went out my senior year, and was thinking that there is no better place than here. So I committed early, and it turned out to be a good fit for me," he said.

Davis admits that being offered a Division I scholarship without playing any varsity football is pretty rare. He knew, however, that the coaching staff was

D-Rays Sign Young to $5.8 million deal

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)

- The Tampa Bay Devil Rays signed No. 1 overall pick Delmon Young to a $5.8 million, five-year contract Tuesday.

The outfielder will report to the Devil Rays' instructional league program Sept. 19.

Young, the younger brother of Detroit's Dmitri Young, hit .541 with seven homers and 28 RBIs in 22 games this season at Camarillo (Calif.) High School. He was the first selection in June's amateur draft.

Asked if signing a major league contract was a dream come true, Young said, "Winning the World Series would be."

Young, 18, hopes to reach the majors during the 2005 season. He also believes the Devil Rays, who have one of the major's youngest teams, can become championship contenders in the near future. "We should be able bring a World Series title back before 2010," Young said.

Tampa Bay general manager Chuck LaMar foresees Young as a corner outfielder.

"He's got a chance to be an awfully good offensive player," LaMar said. "I think we've signed a tremendous competitor."

To make room on the 40man roster for Young, Tampa Bay transferred shortstop Rey Ordonez from the 15- to the 60day disabled list. Ordonez is out with a knee injury.

Young gets a $3.7 million signing bonus, of which $25,000 is payable in November, $225,000 in January, $1.5 million each in January 2005 and January 2006 and $450,000 in July 2006.

Reid's readiness questioned

BY ROB MAADDI ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA - Andy Reid had five months to prepare a game plan for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. The way the Philadelphia Eagles played, it seemed more like five hours.

Reid, who calls the plays instead of offensive coordinator Brad Childress, came under heavy scrutiny Tuesday, a day after a 17-0 loss to the Super Bowl champion Buccaneers in the season opener.

"I need to do a better job of preparing this football team," the fifth-year coach said. "It starts with me."

Reid's most questionable call was a fake field goal on fourthand-goal from Tampa Bay's 1 less than five minutes into the game. Holder Koy Detmer's pass to rookie tight end L.J. Smith was dropped, and it seemed the Eagles never regained the momentum generated by a stirring pregame ceremony in the first regular-season game at Lincoln Financial Field.

After a pass-interference penalty on John Lynch put the ball at the Bucs' 1, Reid called a pass on first down, a run up the middle by Duce Staley on second down, and another pass on third down. None of the plays gained an inch.

Andy Reid

On both pass plays, quarterback Donovan McNabb was under heavy pressure and had to hurry his throw. Perhaps a better call would have been to try a quarterback sneak. McNabb is 245 pounds and has been very successful on sneaks, and the Eagles offensive line is bigger than Tampa Bay's defensive line.

"They covered the inside three people. Tampa was concerned about a sneak," Reid said, defending his decision.

If the sneak wasn't a viable option, Reid could have had McNabb roll out, and use his speed to either run it in or fake a run and throw. Or, the Eagles could have pounded the ball up the middle four times

"That was a bad call on their part," Buccaneers defensive end Simeon Rice said. "They took momentum away from themselves and gave it to us."

Reid's decision to abandon the running game also raised some questions. Teams that have had success against the Buccaneers in recent seasons were ones that ran the ball against Tampa Bay's speedy-but-undersized defensive line.

With Pro Bowl middle linebacker Shelton Quarles out with arm injury, it seemed likely the Eagles would take advantage by running the ball. But Reid gave the ball to his running backs just 10 times. In the first half, Reid called 24 passes to just nine runs. Starting running back Correll

Buckhalter, expected to be a weapon in the offense, carried once for no gain on the second series, and spent most of the night on the sidelines.

"We have certain plays for each of the backs; his plays just didn't get dialed up," Reid said.

Reid's playcalling wasn't the only reason for the offense's inept performance. There were dropped passes by receivers, bad passes, and poor decisions from McNabb and the offensive line was overwhelmed.

Trading Q's with the Q

A quarterback who tries to do it all generally succeeds in giving his coach gray hairs rather than winning a lot of ball games.

So far this season, Iowa quarterback Nathan Chandler has shown he realizes this. He is not racking up the passing yards or tossing five touchdown passes a game. What he is doing is simply taking what the defense gives him. The senior has a goose egg in the interception column, has been sacked only once, and has lost only one fumble. If Chandler can continue this trend come Saturday against Iowa State, the Hawkeyes should be tough to

This will, however, be his first road game, and he will have to contend with an always-boisterous Iowa State crowd. Saturday's

"Im a diehard Hawk fan, always have been, ever since I was 2 years old," said offensive tackle Robert Gallery, a Masonville, Iowa, native. "This is a game that I really want to win." Gallery recalled Iowa State's 1998 victory, the 'Clones' first win in the series since 1982. "Everybody was kind of in a daze because we'd won for so long. I think people kind of forget about that, too. You hear look at the 17 years before that." And even Ferentz, for all the playing down he did about the battle for the Cy-Hawk trophy, finally admitted there was something a bit special about about their five-year streak; well, playing the Cyclones.

"I live here, too," he said. "Now the fact that they live here and we live here - heck, yeah, common sense would tell you that your neighbor likes you better if you win."

Bob Sanders update

The Hawkeyes will be without strong safety Bob Sanders for the second-straight game. The senior had surgery on his right foot last week, and although he had a light workout Monday, Ferentz won't dress him for Saturday's game. Ferentz went on to say that expecting Sanders back for the Arizona State game on Sept. 20 would be "optimistic." Senior Chris Smith, who had an interception in the season opener against Miami (Ohio), seems likely to replace Sanders, as he did last week against Buffalo.

Cervantes back on top

Edgar Cervantes took back the top slot on the depth chart at fullback this week after two weeks of starting the game on the sidelines. Champ Davis, the freshman who started against Buffalo, suffered an ankle sprain against the Bulls, but should be healthy going into Ames. Ferentz called Cervantes a "blue-collar" back, designed for blocking, while Davis is more versatile.

ASU under the lights

Iowa's Sept. 20 game against the Arizona State Sun Devils will take place under the lights, as kickoff is now slated for 5:50 p.m. The last night game at Kinnick Stadium was on Sept. 14, 2002, when Iowa lost to Iowa State.

impressed with his athletic abilities and speed.

"I haven't heard of too many schools doing that, but they had a lot of confidence in me. I just thank the coaches and the university for giving me an opportunity to come play here," said the 6-1, 187-pounder.

Davis saw the first action of his young Hawkeye career last weekend against Buffalo. He entered the game in the second quarter as a wide receiver and also went back for a kickoff in the second half. He said that he loves the chance to return kicks, and it was one of his specialties in high school. While he didn't catch any passes in the game, he was thrown to twice. Both balls were just out of reach for him, but he thought that he needed to make something happen.

"I left a couple of plays out there that I got to finish, but it felt good to just get out there and 18-year-old won a total of nine play a little bit after sitting out individual and relay state chamfor a year [as a redshirt]," he said.

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said that Davis is maturing and improving along with the other young guys on the team. A big, physical receiver is becoming more valuable in football, and Ferentz thinks that Davis will be a great contributor to future Hawkeye teams.

"We're really high on Calvin. He's doing a great job, he's a young guy, and he's growing with each week. We're counting on him to be a real fine player for us," Ferentz said of the hometown kid.

While at City High, Davis recorded 53 receptions for 910 yards and 10 touchdowns. He showed his blazing speed by returning kickoffs for touchdowns that season. His most impressive high-school honors came on the track wrapped around the football field - the pionships for the Little Hawks.

Davis will not run track at Iowa. He wants to concentrate on one sport and put all of his time and effort into his life on the gridiron.

The Iowa City native enjoys playing at Kinnick Stadium because the people who have watched him play for years are able to catch his college games. Davis is still very much a student of the game, and because of his limited football experience is still trying to reach his potential in the sport.

"I think I learned a lot as far as football in general," Davis explained. "In high school, I just relied on speed a lot of time, but now I'm learning technique and trying to get bigger, and stronger, and faster."

They should call themselves the Dream Team.

Seven of them are among the top 11 on the money list. They have combined to win half of the 24 tournaments this year on the LPGA Tour, the latest coming when Karrie Webb of Australia, the youngest woman to complete the career Grand Slam, won for the 29th time.

"That would be one powerful team," Juli Inkster said.

Only it's not a team.

It isn't even a dream, at least not a realistic one.

The Solheim Cup, a showcase event in women's golf, is limited to players from the United States and Europe.

Some of the LPGA's best aren't allowed to play.

Inkster and Annika Sorenstam were among players from both teams who took a charter from Tulsa, Okla., to the southern tip of Sweden for this year's matches, which will start Friday at Barseback Golf & Country Club.

Webb flew home to Florida to watch on TV.

It will be the first time she has not gone to the Solheim Cup since her rookie year in 1996. Even though she couldn't play, Webb loved watching the drama and pressure from outside the ropes, and she grew so close to the American team that she started getting invited to team dinners

"I didn't feel comfortable," she said, "because it's an event I know I can't be in."

Joining Webb on the sidelines are Se Ri Pak, Grace Park, and Hee-Won Han of South Korea, who have won six times this year; three-time winner Candie Kung of Taiwan; Rachel Teske, a fellow Aussie who has won twice; and rookie sensation Lorena Ochoa of Mexico.

The PGA Tour had this problem nearly 10 years ago when it discovered its best international players — Greg Norman, Nick Price, and Vijay Singh — were from countries outside of Europe.

The answer was the Presidents Cup.

"I think the Solheim Cup is a good event, and it's great for those players who are part of it," Pak said. "I would hope someday soon we can have a competition similar to what the men have with the Presidents Cup."

For the LPGA Tour, it's not that simple.

Commissioner Ty Votaw has considered several options, but all come with a cost.

'We can't do it out of the goodness of our heart," he said.

The Karsten Solheim family, which owns Ping Golf, foots the bill for the matches and likes the format the way it is. Votaw is not about to risk that spon-

> "I'd hate to see it lose steam," she said.

The closest the LPGA has come to getting its international players involved in team competition was the 2000 Women's World Cup of Golf, which survived just one year before funding dried up. Webb and Teske led Australia to the title that among the strongest supporters of golf in the Olympics, a proposal that died last year.

That leaves Webb, Pak, and a litany of non-European stars to do without.

The solution is a tri-match involving 12-player teams from the United States, Europe, and the Rest of the World.

It would feature six best-ball matches in the morning and six alternate-shot matches in the afternoon the first two days.

Two U.S. teams play European teams, two European teams play two International teams, and two International teams play two U.S. teams.

Sparks' center Lisa Leslie is congratulated after the Sacramento Monarchs won game three of the Western Conference Finals Sept. 8.

Road Awaits Sparks

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP)

— If the Los Angeles Sparks are to win a third-consecutive WNBA championship, it will have to be on the road.

They won their first two titles at home, but Detroit had the league's best record this season, giving the Shock homecourt advantage for the WNBA Finals, which will begin Friday night at Staples Center.

"I don't think we're worried about where we're playing, home or away," All-Star for-ward DeLisha Milton said Tuesday.

The Sparks and Shock met once this season, with Detroit winning, 87-78, in overtime at home. That game proved the difference in determining the league's best record — the Sparks finished 24-10, while Detroit was 25-9 in completing the turn from the league's worst record last season.

"I feel that we are still the best team in this league, and we have not been given our due," Los Angeles coach Michael Cooper said.

The best-of-three finals pit former NBA rivals Cooper and Bill Laimbeer against each other. Cooper starred for the "Showtime" Lakers' teams of the '80s, while Laimbeer was one of the so-called "Bad Boys" on Detroit's championship teams in 1989 and '90.

"I enjoyed cheering against Mr. Laimbeer, and I enjoyed watching Coop play," said Mil-ton, a teenager when the Pistons and Lakers were major rivals.

"The Sparks are here, and we are the legitimate champions," Cooper proclaimed after the team beat Sacramento 66-63 on Monday night to win the Western Conference finals in three games.

Bears Sign Sanderson, Put Johnson on IR

LAKE FOREST, III. (AP) - The Chicago Bears, looking to shore up their injury-ravaged and inexperienced offensive line, signed tackle Scott Sanderson on Tuesday.

They also put safety Todd Johnson on injured reserve and signed defensive end Cliff Washburn to their practice squad.

Sanderson, who played at Washington State, was a backup at New Orleans in 2002, playing mainly on special teams. A six-year veteran, he was drafted by Tennessee in the third round in 1977.

The Bears lost starting guard Rex Tucker for the season because of a torn ankle tendon. Their other guard, Chris Villarrial, sprained a knee in Sunday's 49-7 season-opening loss to the San Francisco 49ers and will miss four to six weeks.

Tackle Marc Colombo and backup Terrance Metcalf also are injured, and starters Mike Gandy, Steve Edwards, and Aaron Gibson are inexperienced.

Johnson, the Bears' fourth-round pick in the 2003 draft, fractured his aw in the Bears' preseason loss to Denver on Aug. 16.

BY STEPHEN WILSON ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON - Track and field's governing body wants American sprinter Kelli White stripped of her two gold medals from the World Championships. Now it's up to U.S. anti-doping officials.

The International Association of Athletics Federations ruled on Tuesday that White committed a doping offense when she tested positive for a stimulant, and she should lose her world titles in the 100 and 200 meters.

The federation rejected

White's explanation that she took the stimulant for a sleep disorder and sent the case to the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency for a hearing and disciplinary action.

Rich Wanninger, a spokesman for the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency, said his organization had not received any information from the federation as of Tuesday afternoon. Once that information is received, Wanninger said, the agency will begin a review process that could last months.

The federation made it clear that it expects U.S. authorities to remove White's medals.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Implement some of your creative ideas into your work. Changes regarding contracts may throw you for a loop, but if you are accepting, you will fare even better when you renegotiate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You need to integrate new people and new interests, or perhaps take an educational trip. This is a great day for a new relationship or to make a stronger commitment to your present one.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Sudden changes are likely to cause alarm. Be careful not to initiate a change at work or at home for the wrong reason. Direct your efforts into making money and securing your position. CANCER (June 21-July 22): Venture out, and see things that will bring you into contact with interesting people. The knowledge you pick up will open doors to all sorts of interesting options. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Unusual circumstances regarding your health or financial situation will develop. Take care of these matters yourself instead of relying on someone else. A handson approach will ensure good results. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Partnerships may be on shaky ground today. Don't take care of someone else's mistakes. A change may develop if you let emotions get involved in a situ-

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Financial gains should be your goal in an effort to achieve the freedom you need to live more comfortably. Don't waste time second-guessing your ideas. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Express your ideas to people who can give you information pertinent to your plans. You will have
