Groping for meaning in 9/11's wake

BY CHRISTINA ERB
THE DAILY IOWAN

Two years ago, UI alum Michael Weinstock watched flames pour from the World Trade Center towers, only a short distance from the front door of his downtown Brooklyn apartment.

For the 1994 UI graduate — now an assistant district attorney in the Investigations Bureau in Brooklyn — the horrific events of 9/11 haven't faded.

"I saw a huge amount of smoke pouring out of the towers," he said. "It was then that I realized the scope of this event was bigger than I originally believed."

At 8:46 a.m., the first plane crashed into the north tower of the WTC.

Weinstock, a volunteer firefighter and emergency medical technician, caught a ride with an ambulance heading to the scene.

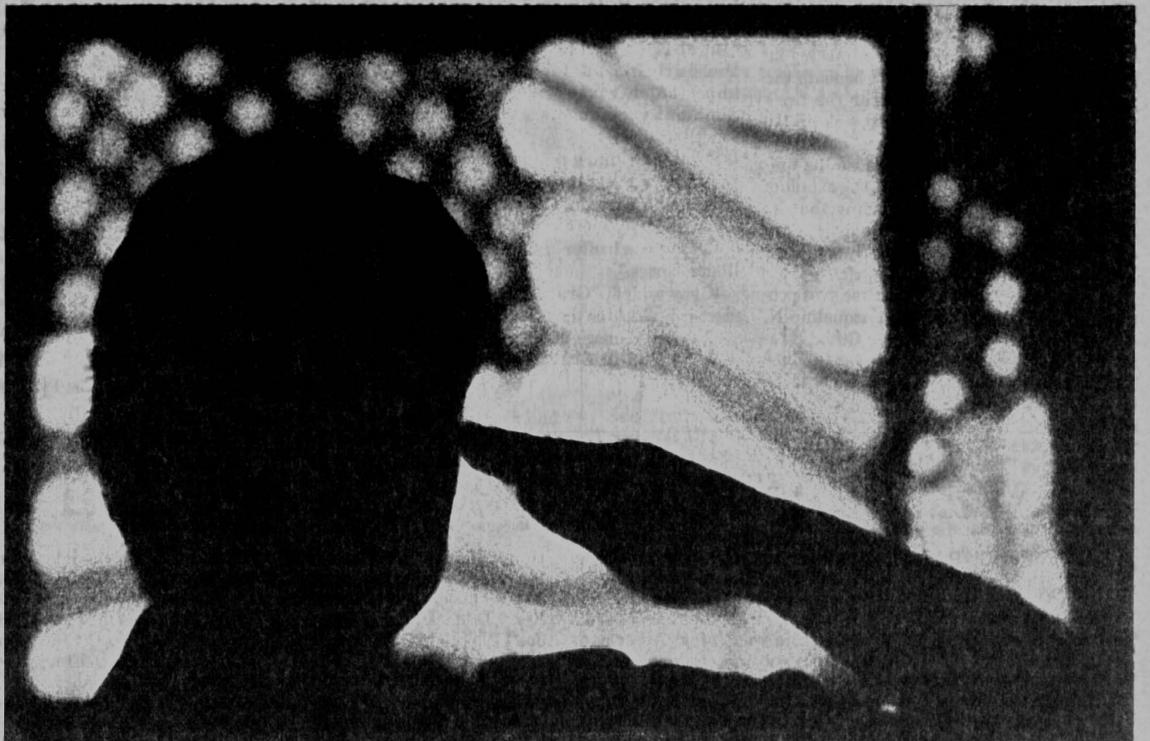

While en route, the second plane crashed into the south tower at 9:03 a.m.

"It was very graphic," he said, recalling the details matter-of-factly despite the painful memories. "The wounded were walking."

Weinstock said he thought he was going to die when the first tower fell at 10:05 a.m., less than 10 minutes after he arrived on the scene.

"It was like a huge earthquake; the sound was unbelievable, deafening," he said. "The way the building came crashing down was like a nightmare. Everyone just ran as fast as he could."

He made it through the front door of a neighboring building just before shards of glass, metal,

'The memory that paws around in back of mind'

BY MICHAEL POWELL
WASHINGTON POST

NEW YORK — To Bishop Brown, it has been like watching a virus work its way through the body of his native city. Those three digits — 9/11 — linger so long.

"Here, you can still feel it. It's alive." The 53-year-old sanitation worker leans against a wall on Nassau Street in downtown Manhattan, a place once covered by the late afternoon shadows of the World Trade Center. "Where I live, upper Manhattan, it's far away. Life goes on — except when I remember I knew a couple people who died in there."

"Then — it surprises me — I can get choked up."

Two years after the terrorist attacks that felled the World Trade Center, most New Yorkers begin conversations by saying they've had enough. Enough of tourists snapping photos of the great hole in the ground, enough of politicians invoking their pain to score some points, enough tears. The battles now are so wearingly practical and maddening — to rebuild a city beset by 200,000 lost jobs and to fend off a real-estate baron who would take all the grand talk of memorial and soaring designs and build millions of square feet of office space at Ground Zero.

"We can't dwell on fear," said Carmen Pietri-Diaz, who directs the Nuyorican Poets Café in the East Village, where young poets by the dozen have tried their hand at capturing the meaning of the tragedy. "We have to work, pay bills, make love, and survive. But it's the memory that paws around in the back of the mind."

"The deep wheels of this city grind on," said Mike Wallace, a Pulitzer-prize winning historian of New York at the City University Graduate Center. "I've always been skeptical that any event is capable of utterly transforming a social formation of 8 million people that's been around for 400 years."

Yet memory of that day can sneak in at most unexpected times, beckoned by nothing more this week than a razor sharp September sky.

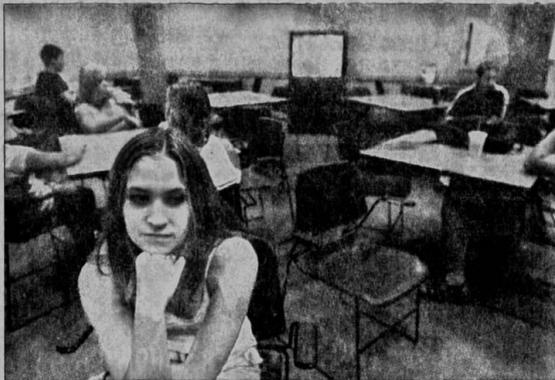

"No matter how hard I try, I'm a sadder, more pessimistic person than I was," said Laurie Fendrich, an abstract artist who lives and works in a loft three blocks from Ground Zero.

The need for public ceremony has faded. What's left is the memory of shared loss. "When New Yorkers speak of Sept. 11," Fendrich said, "we all talk into a mirror."

Two local newspaper polls in recent weeks found that New Yorkers yearn for a return to normal, whatever that is. A distinct majority take a dim view of the mayor, and more than half barely follow what's happening at Ground Zero.

Expand the Patriot Act, Bush demands

BY DANA MILBANK
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — President Bush, in a speech marking today's anniversary of the 9/11 terrorist attacks, called on Congress Wednesday to "untie the hands of our law-enforcement officials" by expanding authorities' ability to probe and detain terrorism suspects.

Hailing the passage of the 2001 USA Patriot Act, which expanded federal police powers, Bush said those changes did not go far enough. He called for empowering authorities in terrorist investigations to issue subpoenas without going to grand juries, to hold suspects without bail, and to pursue the death penalty in more cases.

"Under current federal law, there are unreasonable obstacles to investigating and prosecuting terrorism, obstacles that don't exist when law-enforcement officials are going after embezzlers or drug traffickers," Bush said at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Va. "For the sake of the American people, Congress should change the law and give law-enforcement officials the same tools they have to fight terror that they have to fight other crime."

In endorsing an extension of the Patriot Act, Bush plunged

Ex-girlfriend testifies in Dodd trial

BY SEUNG MIN KIM
THE DAILY IOWAN

A Coralville man accused of raping and murdering a 22-year-old woman allegedly assumed an alias and fabricated tales to elude law-enforcement officials, witnesses testified Wednesday.

Richard Dodd persuaded his former live-in girlfriend, Kathleen Bagley, to lie to police about a box of .45-caliber ammunition she bought at Fin & Feather in February 1981 after Coralville police linked her to the purchase, she told jurors. When police questioned her after the slaying of Vicki Klotzbach, she said the bullets were intended as a late Christmas present.

Her testimony offered the first account from someone close to Dodd during the third day of his first-degree murder and kidnapping trial. Dodd, 46, was charged Jan. 29, 2002, more than 20 years after Klotzbach's body was

Students eye lobbying associations

When it comes to student political influence, sometimes you get what you pay for.

A lobbying organization under consideration by universities and colleges in Iowa has proven effective in other states facing budget problems similar to Iowa's. Students in Oregon and Colorado have been able to stave off tuition increases with help from statewide student associations, groups that provide lobbying and organizational assistance — for a fee.

Honors to open nearly on time

BY INDIA MORROW
THE DAILY IOWAN

Repairing fire damage to the Blank Honors Center will cost the UI between $545,000 and $885,000, but workers predict the facility will open almost on schedule, officials said Wednesday.

The $14 million project, which had been scheduled to open by late December or early January before the fire, is expected to welcome students by Jan. 20, the first day of the spring semester, said Steve Parrott, the director of University Relations.

"Before, we were being cautiously pessimistic, but now we're being optimistic," he said at a press conference held beneath the smoke-damaged windows near the fire's origin. "Even though the fire was pretty dramatic, the damage really was not."

The price range is wide because the university hasn't fully determined the extent of the damage, Parrott said, adding that he thinks insurance will cover the majority of the cost for renovations — mostly replacing windows.

The Honors Center will house two programs: the Connie Belin & Jacqueline N. Blank International Center for Gifted Education and Talent Development, created for students second grade to high-school level, and the Honors Program for UI students with a GPA of 3.2 or higher.

Officials had called the center's damage "minimal" but still significant enough to delay the building's opening for several months.

The new center's third floor will be dedicated to the Honors Program, with a library, television and lounge area, two quiet study lounges, and an ITC with twice the number of work stations available in the Jefferson Building, the current home of the program.

Bob Kirby, the Honors Program assistant director, said letting students enter the building as soon as possible is important because "it would provide a community for Honors students to share together."

Spencer Griffin, a senior who works with the Honors Program as the arts-program coordinator, agreed: "The new building will allow so many more awesome things that Jefferson can't offer them because of the limited space."

Kirby added, "Granted, the damage is extremely visible on the outside, but in terms of really severe damage, it really didn't happen."

Edwards pushes free-college plan

BY JEFFREY PATCH
THE DAILY IOWAN

Sen. John Edwards, D-N.C., defended his "College for Everyone" plan and secured the endorsement of the president of the College Democrats, a national organization with 475 campus chapters, in a conference call with reporters Wednesday.

"John Edwards will make the first year of college free, and he has a plan to create jobs for the college graduates this administration has neglected," said Ashley Bell, the national president of the College Democrats. "He is our best hope of winning back the White House."

The senator's college plan would give states resources to make the first year of tuition at every public university and community college free for students who commit to working 10 hours a week.

The 50-year-old senator said he will repeal the Bush tax cuts on the wealthiest Americans and "cut unnecessary corporate subsidies and close pointless tax loopholes" to pay for such programs as College for Everyone.

On Sunday, Edwards announced that he is fully committed to running for president, and he will not seek re-election to the Senate in 2004 or the vice-presidential spot.

"I am running for president, period," he told The Daily Iowan on Wednesday from a Philadelphia campaign stop. "There is no doubt in my mind whether I will be the Democratic nominee."

According to a national poll released Sept. 6 by independent polling company Zogby International, former Vermont Gov. Howard Dean finished first with 16 percent, followed by Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass. (13 percent), Sen. Joe Lieberman, D-Conn. (12 percent), and Rep. Dick Gephardt, D-Mo. (8 percent). No other candidate, including Edwards, received more than 3 percent.

The UI University Democrats, which has 370 members, has not endorsed a candidate. It does not plan to endorse any candidate until one is selected by the Democratic Party at its convention in Boston on July 26-29, 2004.

"When all is said and done, and the nominee is chosen, we can all come back as one group," said Mayrose Wegmann, the treasurer and past president of the University Democrats.

The organization passed an amendment last year not to endorse a specific candidate, but the group allows subcommittees that vie for a specific candidate — so far, groups for Dean, Rep. Dennis Kucinich, D-Ohio, Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., and Edwards have formed.

Wegmann said that within two weeks, every Democratic candidate will have a subcommittee — including Gen. Wesley Clark, who has not announced that he will run but said he will decide by his Sept. 19 visit to Iowa City.

Edwards plans to formally announce his campaign Sept. 16 in his hometown of Robbins, N.C. Iowa supporters will stage a statewide door-to-door campaign to publicize Edwards' campaign at 10 locations across the state, including Iowa City, at 5:30 p.m.

Police: DM 'normal' after 9/11

BY JOE NUGENT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Police operations here have returned to normal two years after the 9/11 terrorist attacks, but officers in Iowa's capital city still react with an extra dose of caution to the unexpected.

"This is Des Moines, and there aren't a lot of what would be 'hard targets,'" said police Sgt. Tony Steverson. "However ... we could, potentially, just like anywhere else, be a target of terrorist attacks."

The heightened state of alert that existed for approximately six months after the attacks has diminished greatly in the last year and a half, he said, but officers continue to be wary when dealing with reports of a suspicious person or package.

"We are a bit more concerned when we get calls of that nature," Steverson said.

Departments in other cities have had several officers called up for military duty, but Des Moines has been lucky, he said. Only two officers and one cadet have been activated.

Budget cuts have prevented the department from filling the open positions, and duties have been reorganized so other officers can cover them, Steverson said.

Sgt. Brent Harris, the day-shift

Des Moines police Sgt. Brent Harris on Wednesday talks about department operations two years after the terrorist attacks in New York and Washington, D.C. Police operations have returned to normal, he said.

supervisor, agreed that department operations have returned to normal and the public is back in its regular routine after an elevated awareness in the first six months after the attacks.

"There was initially a lot of hype about anthrax, and packages, and how to handle that type of thing," he said. "But I don't remember anything recently or in the last year and a half. Business is back to normal. We're very busy."

The attacks on New York and Washington made him angry, Harris said, but the Oklahoma City bombing in April 1995 actually put Des Moines police on a higher alert because of its proximity to the Midwest.

Senate deals Bush blow on overtime

BY HELEN DEWAR
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — The Senate, defying a White House veto threat, voted Wednesday to block the Bush administration from issuing new overtime-pay rules that Democrats and their labor allies said could result in a loss of income to millions of American workers.

The planned rules change would expand overtime protections for low-wage workers but make it easier for employers to exempt many better-paid workers. The proposal approved by the Senate would allow the expansion but not the curtailment of overtime coverage.

The 54-to-45 vote for the proposal amounted to a rare victory for Democrats and organized labor in the Republican-controlled Congress, even though the struggle's final outcome remains in doubt.

"The Bush administration proposal is not only anti-worker and anti-family, it is bad economic policy," said Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, who led the assault on the regulations. "It will take money out of the pockets of hardworking Americans and will not create one new job."

Democratic opponents said their plan would not interfere with parts of the rules extending overtime protection. They took aim at sections that would strip other workers of eligibility they have long enjoyed. The precise number was a matter of dispute — an estimated 800,000 by administration allies, and as high as 8 million by Harkin's estimate.

The votes appeared to signal a growing willingness on the part of both GOP-run chambers to break with the administration on selected issues, especially those that touch people personally and are likely to resonate in next year's congressional elections. They also appeared likely to embolden Democratic challenges to the administration.

The Senate vote came a day after the House approved a larger pay raise than President Bush wanted for federal civilian workers and voted to derail his plan to provide more private-sector competition for federal work. And a few hours after the Senate voted on the overtime issue, it approved another Democratic amendment barring the administration from implementing the proposed changes in student-aid rules that Democrats said would have made thousands of college students ineligible for financial assistance.

The overtime vote is "perhaps the most important victory that we have had for working families in some time," Senate Minority Leader Thomas Daschle, D-S.D., said.

Daschle acknowledged that obstacles remain, including Bush's veto threat. "So our victory today is only the first step," he said. But he and other Democrats vowed to continue the fight, even if it means trying to rescind the overtime rules should the Labor Department put them into effect. "We're in this for the long haul," Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said.

After the vote, Labor Secretary Elaine Chao issued a statement describing her department's proposed changes as "long overdue" and pledging to "continue our efforts to strengthen overtime protections for workers."

The proposed new Labor Department rules would overhaul the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 to redefine eligibility for overtime pay, which is paid at the rate of time-and-a-half after a 40-hour work week. Under the department's proposal, employers could more easily reclassify workers into the exempt categories as administrators, professionals, and executives. Employees earning more than $65,000 annually could be denied overtime pay if they perform any of the exempted duties.

Drought blisters crops, lowering expectations

BY EMILY GERSEMA
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Drought in the Midwest has scorched corn and soybean plants, prompting farmers and experts to speculate that the Agriculture Department this week will lower its expectations for a bumper corn crop and large soybean harvest.

"Certainly, that's what a lot of people are expecting, especially more in the case of soybeans than in corn," said Pat Westhoff, an economist at the Food and Agricultural Research Institute. "The dry weather we had since the last report came out probably did some damage to the crop."

The Agriculture Department will release new price estimates today.

Western states have been chapped by dry, hot weather for almost five years. Now the drought appears to be spreading eastward, past the Dakotas into nearby farm states — Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, and Wisconsin — stunting and killing many crops. For farmers in those areas, it's been quite a turn since last spring, when they got enough rain to soak the soil and a fair number of sunny days to help the crops grow.

The Agriculture Department had projected that the corn harvest would be the largest ever — 10.1 billion bushels. The agency also projected that farmers would pull in a large soybean crop of 2.86 billion bushels, a 2 percent increase over last year's harvest but down 1 percent from 2001.

Don Roose, an analyst at U.S. Commodities Inc., estimates that projections will be lowered to 2.72 billion bushels of soybeans — down about 140 million from the government's forecast. He also predicts that the corn crop forecast will be down by 300 million bushels at 9.81 billion bushels.

Roose said crop production levels vary from region to region. Farmers in eastern Illinois and Ohio are growing healthy corn and soybeans, while their Midwestern and Western counterparts are losing yields to bad weather.

CITY

Officials: Easy Place fire 'suspicious'

Officials investigating a fire that caused $310,000 in damage to several downtown businesses called the blaze "suspicious" Wednesday but would not elaborate further.

Authorities have yet to pinpoint what sparked the Aug. 27 blaze that began at Easy Place, 119 Iowa Ave., but they continue to investigate different possible causes, said Iowa City Fire Department Capt. Larry Kahler.

"Suspicious," he said, indicates that firefighters could not find an immediate cause and need to search further. Samples from Easy Place's kitchen were sent to laboratories to check for the presence of certain fire-causing elements, but so far nothing has turned up, he said.

They are also inspecting wiring obtained from the scene, but they have not yet learned the results of those tests, he added.

Final estimations place the renovation costs of Easy Place, the most heavily damaged establishment, at $150,000. Joe's Place, 115 Iowa Ave., suffered $130,000 worth of damage, and repair costs for Malone's, 121 Iowa Ave., total $30,000.

Malone's and Joe's Place have since re-opened for business. Easy Place remains closed and boarded up.

STATE

State GOP eyes $40 million tax cut

DES MOINES (AP) — Senate Republicans said Wednesday they are crafting a round of tax cuts of at least $40 million, hoping to return to taxpayers a windfall the state is expected to collect.

"We want to make sure that gets back to the people of the state of Iowa," said Senate Majority Leader Stewart Iversen, R-Dows.

The potential windfall comes because of a unique feature of Iowa's tax law. Iowa is one of the few states where taxpayers are allowed to deduct federal tax payments when calculating state tax liability.

Because Congress has passed steep tax cuts, lowans will have less in federal tax payments to deduct, meaning the state will collect a windfall of approximately $40 million from lowans paying more in-state taxes.

Iraqi leader wants troops gone

BY DAVID HOLLEY AND JEFFREY FLEISHMAN
LOS ANGELES TIMES

BAGHDAD — As American authorities investigated a suicide car bombing that targeted a regional U.S. military office, the president of the Iraqi Governing Council called Wednesday for the most rapid possible restoration of sovereignty.

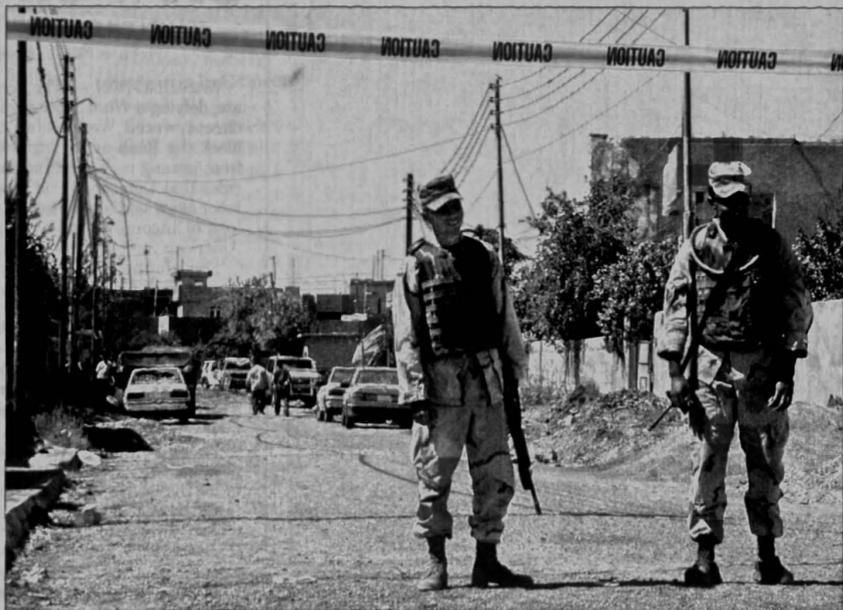

Also Wednesday, a U.S. soldier was killed in Baghdad while trying to disarm an improvised bomb, and U.S.-led forces pressed operations across the country in search of supporters of deposed President Saddam Hussein.

Council President Ahmad Chalabi, in an apparent bid to strengthen the fledgling civilian authorities' nationalist credentials with skeptical citizens, said at a news conference here that the U.S.-appointed Governing Council would not invite additional foreign troops to Iraq but instead looked forward to foreign troops leaving.

"The stance of our council is to restore sovereignty on our land," declared Chalabi, who is seen by critics as having little political backing within Iraq, depending instead on his ties to Washington. "We will not invite troops to come. Our ultimate aim is complete sovereignty of Iraq over Iraq."

When asked about the apparent conflict with the goals of the Bush administration, which is seeking troops from other countries such as Turkey, he responded, "We understand the coalition is in charge of security within the country." Still, the comments by Chalabi, who holds the rotating presidency for a month, marked a backing off from an earlier welcome he indicated for a Turkish force.

The question of a Turkish force in Iraq is sensitive because of the large Kurdish population in the north near the border with Turkey. Given the history of a 15-year Kurdish rebellion in Turkey, some observers fear there could be clashes between Kurdish and Turkish forces in Iraq.

The American soldier who died in Baghdad was part of a team trying to dispose of a roadside bomb, the U.S. military said. The team first attempted to detonate the bomb by shooting at it with a .50-caliber weapon; the device exploded when the soldier went forward to investigate, the military said. The soldier's name was withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Two Iraqis and the car bomber were reported killed in Tuesday night's attack on a U.S. military headquarters in the northern city of Irbil. Fifty-three people, including four intelligence workers with the U.S. Defense Department and a Kurdish guard, were wounded when the front of the two-story building collapsed. The attack occurred about 8:50 p.m. when a Toyota SUV exploded near the building.

The bombing was the first major terrorist attack in the Kurdish-controlled north since President Bush declared the end of major combat. There was no immediate claim of responsibility. But the blast came on the heels of a recent threat by Ansar al Islam, a militant group that U.S. officials say has ties to Al Qaeda. One of Ansar's leaders, Abu Abdullah Shafiq, told Arab media that the group's focus included assaults on U.S.-led forces, which he described as the "occupier enemy."

At a military briefing in Baghdad on Wednesday, U.S. Army Lt. Col. George Krivo said that U.S.-led forces "continue offensive operations throughout Iraq to identify, detain, or kill Saddam Fedayeen, former regime loyalists, Baathists, and their supporters." Troops seized a variety of ammunition and weapons at sites around the country, he said.

"During the last 24 hours, coalition forces have conducted 62 raids, 1,498 patrols, and detained 69 people," Krivo said.

At his news conference, Chalabi praised the acceptance Tuesday of the new Iraqi foreign minister at a meeting of the Arab League, calling it "a very good development."

"We want the best relations with other Arab countries," he said. "We want to cooperate in every field."

'Osama,' on videotape, threatens more attacks

BY MOHAMAD BAZZI
NEWSDAY

An Arab satellite station aired footage Wednesday of Osama bin Laden walking leisurely with his top deputy through a rocky mountainside, both men carrying walking sticks and assault rifles slung over their shoulders.

The tape, broadcast on the Al Jazeera network, offered the first images of the Qaeda leader since he vanished from Afghanistan's Tora Bora region in December 2001. More ominously, two accompanying audiotapes threatened new attacks against Americans.

The tapes' timing — on the eve of the second anniversary of the 9/11 attacks — once again showed bin Laden's propensity for historical symbolism. They also served as a rude reminder of the Bush administration's failure to snare America's most-wanted man, even as its energies are consumed by the controversial occupation of Iraq.

Analysts say the footage also appears intended to show Al Qaeda's operatives that the network's leadership is still active and in seemingly good health.

"This is a message from Osama that he's still alive and well and that he has managed to outsmart the world's only superpower," said Diaa Rashwan, a senior researcher at the Al-Ahram Center for Political and Strategic Studies in Cairo, Egypt. "He is saying that he's ready for the next round."

In an eight-minute audiotape accompanying the videotape, a speaker identified as bin Laden praised the "great damage to the enemy" inflicted on 9/11 and mentioned five of the suicide hijackers by name. On a second tape, a voice said to be that of Ayman al-Zawahri, bin Laden's deputy, threatens more attacks on Americans and calls on Iraqi insurgents to "bury" U.S. troops.

"This is another reminder that they continue to plot to attack us and to attack freedom," said Sean McCormack, a spokesman for the National Security Council.

President Bush, asked about the tape during a tour of forensics labs at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Va., said he had not heard it yet. The president has generally refrained from mentioning bin Laden by name since the end of the war in Afghanistan nearly two years ago.

Al Jazeera said the tapes were produced in late April or early May, but the channel did not say how or when it obtained them. The video's backdrop resembled the border regions between Afghanistan and Pakistan, where U.S. officials believe bin Laden and al-Zawahri are hiding out.

U.S. intelligence officials said they will review the tapes, looking for clues about bin Laden's health and whereabouts.

The tape shows bin Laden and al-Zawahri walking up and down a rocky hill dotted with green plants. In one shot, bin Laden leans on a walking stick in his right hand and wears a blanket over his left shoulder.

In several sections of the video, bin Laden and al-Zawahri carry AK-47 assault rifles.

The two climb to the hilltop and sit resting, looking out over trees and rocky outcroppings, the camera behind them. The video appeared well-planned and well-shot; bin Laden looked over his shoulder at the camera several times. At one point he waved at the camera.

In the audiotape purportedly by al-Zawahri, the speaker refers to U.S. troops in Iraq — an indication that it was made after the American invasion of Iraq in March.

"We salute the mujahideen brothers in Iraq, and press on their hands, and ask Allah to bless their sacrifices and valor in fighting the crusaders," the speaker says. "We tell you that God is with you and the Islamic nation supports you ... Bury them in the Iraqi graveyard."

Bin Laden was last heard from on April 7, exhorting Muslims in an audiotape to rise up against Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, and other governments he claimed were "agents of America."

 UI alum Michael Weinstock, on losing his friend, a firefighter, in the Sept. 11 attacks.

The sound and the fury

THE NATION WILL pause this morning for a moment of silence to honor and remember those killed in terrorist attacks two years ago. Then, the silence will break, and the inane chattering noise will swell once again to where it left off.

Silence seems to make people in our culture uncomfortable. Silent people are pestered to share. Most everyone else seems to have the same open invitation. Free speech in America is mistaken for an invitation to speak freely — free of topic, free of thought, even free of an audience. Real conversations are rare. Most of the time, we just wait for our turn to talk. These phenomena will be painfully apparent today.

The tasteless, the rude, and the attention-starved miscreants will see a soap-box where the twin towers once stood. The microphones and cameras will be tantalizingly thick today — and their kind can sense it. Broadcasters will have dawn-to-dusk "exclusive" interviews. Professors and political analysts will clarify the differences between "now" and "before." Publications deliberately tailored to shock you to tears are timed to hit area shelves today. Roommates will talk about two years ago — beginning every sentence with "I." Occasionally, a few people will retell some remarkable stories, but for every one of those, countless selfish opportunists will probably seize this day to further their political agenda, thinking only about next November.

This day should be about remembering the voices that have been silenced. Today is not about us, the chattering masses. There's no reason everyone should care where each of us were, how each of us found out, and what each of us thought. We were all felt something. None of us was immune. The important stories can never be told. Most of the ones that will be told only serve to elevate the narrator. They're egotistical and unnecessary. Our obese, friendly (as opposed to lean and mean) mass-media machine needs to fill space or air to ensure that the public continues to view our ads or commercials. The same trite games of one-upmanship and drama people will play with each other will be played by the press on the newsstands and in airwaves. It's our job. For us, today is about attention counted by readers and ratings. Don't be like us. Don't fill up space with useless words. Don't turn a national tragedy into a stage to get attention. Be better than that — be human.

Politicians will also sell themselves today. They'll find a way to get some attention via good timing and well-honed media proficiency. Some of them will use the occasion to tout the war on terrorism; others will criticize it. They'll sell themselves to the public by purporting to be touched by the remembrance of a national tragedy. That's their job, too. Don't play their game, either.

Nothing needs to be said about today's anniversary. What can be said? Assuming one has something worth saying and hearing is presumptuous arrogance (irony noted). This is a day that transcends the chatter. If Sept. 11 couldn't shock America into silence, what would? What fundamental purpose would words serve? They serve only ourselves. Even this — especially this — falls into that category. There aren't words that suit to put this day in perspective. What perspective are we trying to achieve? How can anyone comprehend and fully feel the impact of more than 3,000 deaths in a single day?

Instead of trying to quench a thirst for validation and attention, we should take a lesson in the fragility of life. This day should remind us to make time for what's important. Not to suggest we live in fear — just minimize the potential regrets. No matter how we interpret this anniversary, the reminder that sometimes the unthinkable does happen is inescapable. With that, I'll be silent. ■

JOHN MOLSEED

Remembering the past and looking toward the future

TWO YEARS AFTER 9/11: HOW WE'VE CHANGED, AND WHERE WE'RE HEADED

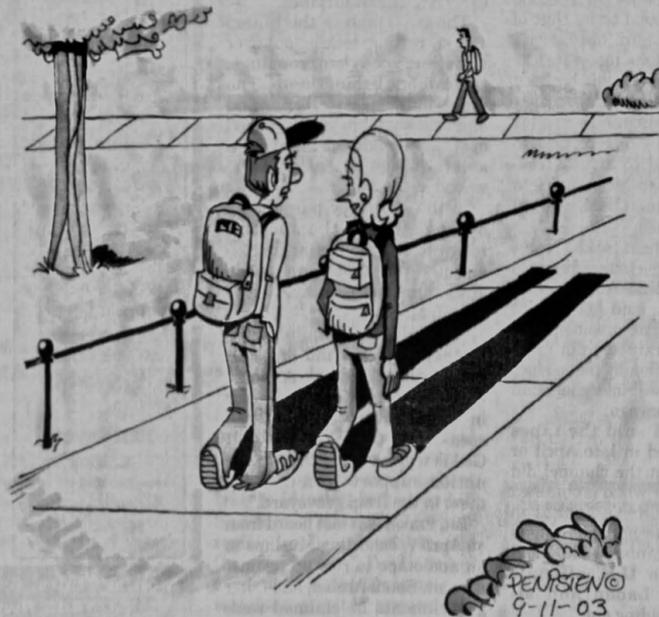

Two years. For those who lost family members, friends, co-workers, and partners in the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, this is surely a short period of time. Not long enough to sort through their anger and grief. Too soon to overcome their loss.

For the rest of us, however, two years should be long enough to give us perspective on the event. While our world will never be the same, it is our duty to evaluate the ways in which it has changed.

Shortly after the attacks, many told us that 9/11 would unite us as a country. Two years later, few would argue that it did. If anything, we stand more divided than we were on Sept. 10, 2001. It is important to note what has happened, and what has not happened, in the two years since the attacks that has led our country to change in this way.

We have not, for example, been asked to make sacrifices in the way that many of us expected. Although our dependence on foreign oil compromises our ability to stand up to Middle Eastern countries such as Saudi Arabia (which, many suspect, sympathizes with terrorists), we have not been asked to reduce our fuel consumption. Neither the president nor members of Congress have made a serious plea that we carpool, use mass transportation, or drive more fuel-efficient vehicles.

Similarly, we have not been asked to sacrifice monetarily. Even as President Bush announced earlier this week his intention to push Congress to spend $87 billion for operations and reconstruction in Iraq and Afghanistan, he made no mention of repealing his dramatic tax cuts. We will, it appears, pass the cost of this war on to future generations instead of paying for it ourselves.

On the other hand, our leaders have taken several steps to address the threat of terrorism. Bush sent troops into Afghanistan with almost universal backing at home. The oppressive and hateful Taliban regime soon fell, and the United States began the process of trying to dismantle the Qaeda terrorist network.

Soon, however, U.S. forces had killed more civilians in Afghanistan than the terrorists had killed in New York and Washington, D.C., and our commitment to rebuilding the country diminished as we shifted our focus to the hotly contested war in Iraq. We now find ourselves all but trapped there, with no stated plan or timetable to rebuild the country and bring our troops home.

This is the state of America, two years later. Today is not a day for pointing fingers or blame. It is a day for remembrance. But it should also be a day for reflection. These are the problems we now have before us. Even as we remember the past, we must look ahead to the future to find solutions.

Dean committed to diversity

To suggest (as did the DI editorial on Sept. 10) that Howard Dean is not serious about seeking minority support for his candidacy or making race an issue in his campaign is wholly misleading.

Dean's commitment to affirmative action is not, as your editorial suggests, a recent development. On Jan. 18, Dean spoke at the Linn County Democrats' annual dinner, where he was passionate in his condemnation of President Bush for trying to divide the country along racial lines. Bush had recently invoked misleading specter of "quotas" when describing the affirmative-action programs of the University of Michigan, a tactic designed to divide the nation along fissures of fear and ignorance. Dean condemned such tactics at the time and continues to do so, loudly and often.

Dean has met with supporters all over the state of Iowa, and he has paid particular attention to communities with diverse ethnic and racial populations, including Des Moines, Davenport, Muscatine, Cedar Rapids, and Waterloo. Dean also has the endorsements of U.S. Reps. Raúl Grijalva of Arizona and Major Owens of Brooklyn, N.Y., both of whom have commended him for his commitment to racial justice.

Finally, to suggest that Dean's "e-backers" are "white upper-middle-class computer users" is just plain wrong. I invite the DI staff to come to the next Meetup for Dean on Oct. 1. There they can mix and mingle with the more than 100 Dean supporters who convene once a month in Iowa City to work for this candidate. They can talk to the unemployed, the single parents, the absolutely broke college students, the retired, the disabled, and the "non-white" supporters of Dean to find out firsthand just how much Dean's support cuts across lines of class, ethnicity, and sex in our city.

Setting the Clark bar

Nine Democrats have entered the 2004 presidential race in hopes of defeating George W. Bush. However, I believe there is a better candidate who has not yet officially entered the race but who is the right person to lead our nation for the next four years. His name is Wesley Clark, and he is from my home state of Arkansas.

Gen. Clark has a stellar record of service to his country. He graduated first in his class from West Point, was chosen to be a Rhodes Scholar, and earned master's degrees in philosophy, politics, and economics from Oxford University. He has 34 years of experience in the Army, including four years as NATO supreme allied commander and commander in chief of the United States European Command. In that position, Clark directed Operation Allied Force, a multinational effort to topple the despotic Serbian regime of Slobodan Milosevic. Operation Allied Force, which saved 1.5 million ethnic Albanians from ethnic cleansing in Kosovo, has been hailed as the greatest example of multinational cooperation in history.

Clark is also one of the most decorated soldiers in our nation's history, rising to the rank of four-star general and receiving numerous honors, including the Silver Star, Bronze Star, and Purple Heart. In August 2000, Clark was awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian honor.

He has also received honorary knighthoods from the British and Dutch governments, as well as being made a commander of the French Legion of Honor. No American leader since former President Eisenhower has earned such international respect and admiration.

A lifelong Democrat, Clark has spoken in favor of affirmative action, workers' rights, environmental protection, and more sensible fiscal policies. He is also the only Democratic candidate running ahead of Bush in polls.

Although Clark has not yet decided whether he will enter the 2004 presidential race, he is being encouraged by an unprecedented grass-roots effort that has drawn support from millions of Americans. Many experts believe he might announce his decision at or just before a speaking engagement on Sept. 19 at the UI. If you are interested in learning more about the only Democrat who CAN defeat Bush, visit any one of the hundreds of Web sites set up to encourage Clark's running.

ATTACKS

and chunks of cement crashed down on the street behind him.

At 10:28 a.m., as he was treating the wounded in the building, the second tower collapsed.

Sept. 11 had "a huge impact on my life," he said, his voice hovering above a whisper as he recounted the death of his best friend, also a firefighter, that day. "It's tough to grasp that my lifelong childhood friend had been killed by terrorists."

"I'll still grab the phone to call him, only to realize that he's not here anymore."

Weinstock, who has not visited Ground Zero since the attacks, said the memories still haunt him.

"Every day, I think about it," he said. "I always have more nightmares about all of the funerals I attended than about the actual event."

Childhood innocence lost

Two years ago, Colleen Russo was sitting in her sixth-grade classroom at Hoover Elementary School, watching the planes explode on television as her teacher, Marlene Johnson, compared the attacks to Pearl Harbor.

"I never thought something like that would happen," she told The Daily Iowan on Sept. 11, 2001. "I thought all the wars were over, and people wouldn't do that stuff anymore."

Russo, now 13, said she remembers her confusion about what was happening.

"I thought our country was safe and perfect, but now I know that it is not," she said.

Russo said she now cares more about wars in other countries after what happened to the United States.

"I'm kind of mad at the fact that we haven't helped out with Afghanistan more, and I feel really sorry for all the people there," she said. "We said we'd help them, and we haven't, really."

Terror in Washington, D.C.

Sitting in her USA Today office, Alissa Swango experienced terror as she watched smoke rising from the Pentagon — where the third plane crashed at 9:38 a.m.

The White House was evacuated seven minutes later.

The 2001 UI graduate, who lives only eight blocks from the White House, immediately called her friends in Iowa City when she saw United Airlines Flight 175 hit the south tower on television. She arrived at work just as the second plane crashed into the north tower.

Leaving the nation's capital that night, Swango encountered closed bridges and strict security. "The hardest thing I saw that day, firsthand, was the emptiness of the city. D.C. was a ghost town. I was scared to go outside alone. I didn't trust anyone. That was very disturbing because I've never had to feel that way before," she said.

Student hopes for better understanding

UI senior Megan McFarlane remembers watching the first plane crash into the WTC on "Good Morning America" as she washed dishes in her kitchen.

"I didn't think it was an accident. I thought it was someone trying to send a message," she said.

While McFarlane watched the events unfold from her apartment, a fourth plane crashed in a field in Somerset County, Pa., at 10:10 a.m. At that exact time, a portion of the Pentagon collapsed in Virginia.

Although her parents told her to go to class and avoid watching the television, McFarlane opted to watch the television in the IMU.

"You can't ignore this, you can't close your eyes and hope it is going away," she said.

In response to whether she has witnessed any anger toward Muslims, she said, "It is such a beautiful culture, and it is being overshadowed by such horrific events that they had nothing to do with."

Muslims fear retaliation

American Aman Aminzay, the president of the UI Muslim Student Association, remembers he first heard about the WTC collapsing in the Bowen Science Building.

"I couldn't believe it, I just couldn't believe it," said the third-year medical student.

Aminzay said that after 9/11, many local Muslims received support, concern, and understanding, not retaliation.

"Much of the discrimination I received was in the forms of stares and rude comments," he said.

It was a different story for some of his American-Muslim friends, he said. One was in Donutland the week after Sept. 11 and watched as a 50-year-old white man walked into the store, yelling at the Indian workers saying, "Why did you do it?" The workers said, "We didn't do anything. We're Hindu, we're not Muslim," Aminzay said.

"The events of Sept. 11 has helped me better understand the scope and degree of suffering of people all over the world," he said.

A congressman hopes for peace

Two years ago, Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, heard some of the most shocking news since he took office.

He said the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11 are one of the most earth-shattering events of the last decade.

"The question remains what its full meaning is, and only a longer expansion of time will show that meaning," he said.

Leach said he feels very apprehensive that there will be a further surge of terrorism in America.

"The challenge for America is to protect ourselves and hold culprits accountable but not to make this a conflict between the Judeo-Christian and Muslim religions," he said. "Only time will tell whether our policies are productive or counterproductive."

Leach said he thinks there are many lessons of 9/11 — a small number of people can wreak havoc with terrorist acts that undercut civilization.

"Because [terrorism] is so easy to institute, society is particularly vulnerable," he said.

But the same polls show that fewer than half would feel comfortable eating dinner at a rooftop restaurant in a new World Trade Center. And two-thirds are "very concerned" about another terrorist attack. In fact, more worry about an attack now than a year ago.

"New Yorkers don't do well with this — the fear gnaws," said Hank Sheinkopf, a national political consultant and lifelong New Yorker.

That said, other grand claims for transformation voiced in the days after the towers fell sound silly now. Irony never died. Strapping young firefighters no longer get standing ovations when they walk into a bar. To the extent that some New Yorkers still feel like hugging someone, as many find the impulse annoying. Real estate, that most New York of obsessions, is booming around Ground Zero.

into a contentious issue on the eve of the Sept. 11 remembrance, which Bush has proclaimed "Patriots Day." By endorsing an expansion of police powers, the president put himself at odds with a number of Republican lawmakers who have joined Democrats in an effort to scale back part of the original Patriot Act.

Opponents said Bush, in launching the offensive, was seeking to blunt an effort to repeal the increased authority the administration won after the 2001 attacks. "It's clear the administration, now on the defensive, is trying to use offense as a defensive strategy," said Anthony Romero of the American Civil Liberties Union. "The public is saying they've gone too far. Now you have the president and the attorney general asking for additional power."

Iowa City's First Choice in Emergency Care Just Got Better

Prompt. Convenient. Personal.

At Mercy, our emergency care is significantly faster than the national average, so you'll wait less and go home sooner. Our new heated and covered patient drop-off area is conveniently located at the corner of Bloomington and Gilbert streets. Our entire emergency room is now private—including a dedicated family consultation room and a children's play area. And, of course, our patients are always attended by trauma-certified emergency room doctors. High-quality emergency care that's prompt, convenient and personal. It's no wonder we're Iowa City's first choice.

found bound in tape and shot. "I was afraid," she told defense attorney Dick Klausner. Dodd, leaning back in his chair with his left leg propped upon his knee, watched Bagley as she recounted details from their 18-month relationship, when they lived in various apartments and worked together at the Perkins Restaurant in Coralville. It was at Perkins that Dodd allegedly stole the murder weapon — a commemorative Colt .45 single-action revolver. Bagley said the black gun with gold embellishments was stored in a cabinet with a combination lock at the restaurant after a lunchtime customer inadvertently left it on a table. Dodd asked for the combination, which she gave him, she said, and a few days later he brought the gun home. From then on, she found the gun in numerous storage places, such as Dodd's red gym bag, the front seat of her 1974 Ford Mustang, and in a dresser drawer, she testified. "He liked this gun," Bagley said. When she arrived home late on Oct. 20, 1981, she said, Dodd was acting strangely. "He was extremely agitated and argumentative," Bagley said. "He sort of picked a fight with me about me and my job." He left the apartment sporadically for up to 20 minutes at a time, she said, and the next morning, he told her the revolver, a tape deck, and a box full of tapes had been stolen. "He was afraid that the person [who stole it] would hurt someone [with the gun] and that it would be traced back to him," Bagley said. In other testimony, Coralville

Police Chief Barry Bedford said Dodd, who identified himself as "Rick Hedges," cracked open Bagley's apartment door six to eight inches on Nov. 18, 1981. After a 15-minute discourse, "Rick" said he was a UI custodian and was unaware of ammunition or weapons in the home. Defense lawyers argued there wasn't sufficient evidence to deem Dodd the sole suspect. For instance, Klausner said, other suspects linked to the case had the same blood type as Dodd. Although the defense probed Bedford about other potential suspects, the Coralville police chief stood firm. "I could eliminate all the possible suspects except for Dodd," he said. If convicted, Dodd faces life in prison. He is already serving a life sentence for the kidnapping and murder of a 10-year-old girl. E-mail DI reporter Seung Min Kim at: seungmin-kim@uiowa.edu

Students mull groups for lobbying

LOBBYING

an association like ours, it's a lot harder for students to get involved," said Melissa Unger, the legislative director of the Oregon Student Association. Right now, financial considerations stand in the way of such a group in Iowa. Students at Colorado schools who are members of the association pay between $.50 to $.75 a semester in student fees to the Colorado Student Association. Representatives from Iowa colleges and universities — including the UI, Iowa State University, and the University of Northern Iowa — attended a summit in Des Moines last spring to discuss the formation of an Iowa Student Association. Another meeting will take place in late September or early October. "I think we'd have more influence," said UI Student Government Vice President Mayrose Wegmann. "It would bring all of the students together to have one message ... and there would be continuity from year to year." An Iowa Student Association might help, but students should not expect dramatic changes, said UISG President Nate Green. Robert Downer, a member of the state Board of Regents, agreed that the group would simply build upon current student efforts. "[Students] have done a fair amount of lobbying already," he said. "I'm not sure that this would expand it that much ... But anything that brings in more voices, I'm in favor of." Students in other states point to the concrete results these groups have achieved. Oregon schools persuaded legislators this year to delay the elimination of tuition plateaus. The measure would have charged students for each credit hour, regardless of full-time or part-time status. "Students worked really hard to educate legislators," Unger said. "They actually delayed the change for a term so that students could learn about [it]." The Oregon association also helped students lobby to reinstate $1 million in funding for a student childcare grant. Students mailed more than 100 letters and between 6,000 and 8,000 postcards to lawmakers during the legislative session. In Colorado, students and their lobbyists opposed efforts by the University of Colorado to gain "enterprise status," which would have allowed tuition increases of as much as 25 percent per semester. "Basically, the governor shut down the bill because of student representation through the [Colorado Student Association]," said Thomas Arthur of the Associated Students of CU-Denver. Were Iowa to adopt such an organization, student lobbying activities would not likely change much, Wegmann said. UISG already takes students to Des Moines to lobby legislators during "action days" and pushes students to send lawmakers E-mails and letters. "I think a lot of the effect is the message we're putting out," Wegmann said. "If legislators don't hear about student issues, those issues sort of drop off the table." KOBE UPDATE

Prosecutor details Bryant charges

EAGLE, Colo. (AP) — A prosecutor outlined the sexual assault case against Kobe Bryant for the first time Wednesday, saying there are photographs of injuries to the woman and a videotaped statement from her.

In a court brief, Eagle County District Attorney Mark Hurlbert said he planned to present the evidence at the Oct. 9 preliminary hearing that will determine whether the NBA All-Star will stand trial.

Hurlbert also said the main investigator in the case will testify, as will a nurse.

While detailing his evidence, Hurlbert also asked the judge to throw out a defense subpoena calling for the accuser to testify. Hurlbert said testifying at the hearing would subject the 19-year-old woman to needless "anxiety and intimidation."

The defense can instead question investigators about the accuser, the prosecutor said.

Bryant's attorneys, Pamela Mackey and Hal Haddad, did not return a telephone message seeking comment.

Bryant is charged with sexually assaulting the woman June 30 in his suite at a nearby mountain resort. She worked there, and Bryant was staying there while in Colorado for knee surgery.

UMASS AD takes job at troubled Baylor

WACO, Texas (AP) — Ian McCaw was hired Monday as athletics director at Baylor, a school shaken by scandal and the slaying of one of its basketball players.

McCaw left the same job at Massachusetts and earlier ran the athletics departments at Northeastern and Tulane.

"Baylor represents a pinnacle personal and professional position for me," he said at a news conference at Floyd Casey Stadium.

He replaces Tom Stanton, who resigned exactly one month earlier as the fallout began from the death of Patrick Dennehy. Basketball coach Dave Bliss resigned the same day and has since been replaced by Scott Drew, formerly of Valparaiso.

Former Baylor player, Carlton Dotson, has been indicted on a murder charge in Dennehy's death.

Violations ranging from scholarship payments to poorly handled drug tests have been revealed in Bliss' program.

An internal investigative committee has yet to file a full report.

IOWA VS. IOWA STATE

Iowa, ISU items flying off the shelves

BY JUSTIN KENNY
 THE DAILY IOWAN

With the big game just days away, many fans will be looking for a way to show support for their team. The most traditional approach is by wearing their team across your chest. Statewide, many apparel stores selling Iowa and Iowa State merchandise are showing considerable increases in business this week.

The Hawkeyes have some other big games this year, including Michigan, Ohio State, and Purdue. In the days before any Iowa football game, local and non-local apparel/novelty stores expect sales to surge a bit. But the battle for the Cy-Hawk Trophy is an entirely different ballgame.

Off Campus Apparel and Novelties stores in Des Moines and Cedar Rapids have reported huge sales increases this week, and they expect the trend to continue through Saturday.

The stores, which carry half-Cyclone, half-Hawkeye merchandise, have shirts specifically for the game this Saturday — "Beat State" or "Beat Iowa." The store's colorfully displayed motto asks customers to "please stay on your side of the store and not provoke any uproars ... unless you really can't help it."

Leann Saubrey, the manager of the Cedar Rapids branch, said that regardless of the sign, there still have been minor scuffles and altercations. "On the whole," she said, "Iowa fans are a little more ... aggressive."

Saubrey, an admitted Hawkeye fan, also indicated that so far this week sales have been neck-and-neck for Iowa and Iowa State merchandise.

The Des Moines Off Campus, which usually has about a 60-40 Iowa advantage in sales, reported this week that sales are very close.

At the University Bookstore in Ames, Merchandise Manager Mike Shupp said that although sales have not skyrocketed all week, sales always go up around game days.

"Excitement equals sales," he said.

In Sports Page of Ames, employee Erin Gannon said there has been a big increase in sales this week.

In Iowa City, most stores said sales would probably be brisker if the game were at home but that they expect some more business today and Friday.

No matter what team Iowans are cheering for on Saturday, they're sure to be outfitted in style.

PART FOUR OF A FIVE-PART SERIES: HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL PLAYERS FROM IOWA CITY CONTINUE THEIR PLAYING CAREERS AS HAWKEYES

Kicking out all the old records

BY JASON BRUMMOND
 THE DAILY IOWAN

He's All-American, All-Big Ten, all-everything. These aren't too many kicking awards that Iowa's Nate Kaeding hasn't won. He takes the kicker stereotypes — isolated from the team, doesn't get excited during the game, isn't a real "football" player — and boots them out the window.

Kaeding currently holds Iowa's record for points in a game (15) and season (120), as well as consecutive field goals (22) and consecutive PATs (60). Hawkeye career record marks of 142 PATs, 54 field goals, and 290 career points are within reach this season for him: He's already got 134 PATs, 47 field goals, and 275 career points.

Kaeding credits the team's success for his own. He knows if the offense doesn't move the football, he doesn't get an opportunity to kick.

"It's really a fraction of progress ... I've just benefited from [the team's] success. It will be nice to hopefully have my name on top of that prestigious record by the time the season is over," the senior said about Rob Houghtlin's 16-year-old career scoring mark.

In addition to scoring, Kaeding provides overpowering blasts on kickoffs. Last year, Iowa led the Big Ten in kickoff coverage, surrendering only 15.8 yards per return. Field position is critical, and the Hawk defense couldn't get it much better — zero of Kaeding's kickoffs have been returned past the 20-yard line this season.

At Iowa City West, Kaeding earned All-State honors in his senior season and showed a strong leg even then. In three varsity seasons, he connected on 152 of 156 PATs and 20 of 32 field goals. The longest field goal of his prep career was 50 yards, and he recorded 86 touchbacks on kickoffs.

"After my junior year, I kind of realized that it was part of my goal — I wanted to earn a scholarship," Kaeding said. He added that the accomplishments that he received during his high-school career were team-oriented — his school won 26-consecutive games and two state championships.

Kaeding has amassed a pretty extensive collection of hardware during his collegiate career. He was the recipient of the 2002 Lou Groza Award, given to the best place-kicker in the nation. The trophy, which was first given out in 1992, has only been won in consecutive years once, by current Oakland Raider Sebastian Janikowski. Kaeding is an early favorite to win the award this season.

Hawkeye coach Kirk Ferentz has constantly praised the 6-0, 190-pound kicker during this season. His leg gives the team a chance to score almost as soon as it's across the 50-yard line. Ferentz believes Kaeding has been a great influence on his teammates.

"I think it's extremely rare," Ferentz said. "I can't really remember a kicker being a team leader, and I mean that with all due respect. Nate just has that personality — he's very engaging, he's so committed, he's so mentally tough that everyone has great respect for him."

Hawkeyes ready to end instate losing streak

BY BRIAN TRIPLETT
 THE DAILY IOWAN

A band of Hawkeye fans began clearing out of Kinnick Stadium at half-time in the Iowa-Iowa State game in 2002, ready to return to their tailgates and celebrate the victory.

With a 24-7 half-time lead, it seemed the Hawkeyes had finally done it. They had ended the streak that left such a bad taste in the mouths of Iowa football followers for four years. But quarterback Seneca Wallace and the Cyclones had other plans. Twenty-nine-straight second-half points and three Iowa fumbles led Iowa State to a 36-31 victory and put the Black and Gold into a state of disbelief.

It was the only game of the regular season in which Iowa quarterback Brad Banks seemed human. By the end of the year, it marked the only "L" in the win-loss column, ruining the perfect record.

The Cy-Hawk trophy was kept in Ames yet another year — the fifth straight to be exact — and the bad taste would continue to linger for the Hawkeyes.

"Iowa State's beaten us five in a row now," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "The last two years, we had bowl football teams, pretty good football teams, but we weren't good enough to beat them on that given day, so the earned goes to them. They've earned the victories."

No player on the 2003 Iowa roster has seen success against the Cardinal and Gold, and neither has Ferentz in his five-year tenure as head coach.

The Hawkeyes try to go on this season as if it were just another game on the schedule, and while it does count just as much as any other on paper, it counts more in the Hawkeyes' hearts.

"This is one game whether it's at our place or their place, it's guaranteed it's going to be a great environment," Ferentz said. "If that doesn't get your heart going a little bit, you probably shouldn't be playing."

Both of the squads' standout quarterbacks departed after the 2002 season, and while the Hawkeyes seem to be the stronger team this year, that doesn't give Ferentz and the Hawkeyes any relief.

The Cyclones are 14-5 at home against the Hawkeyes in the series, and are 2-0 on the season thus far.

"We need to go up there and play against a good football team on the road, and that's going to be quite a challenge for us, and that's what I'm worried about," Ferentz said.

"We've got our work cut out for us."

WORLD FREESTYLE CHAMPIONSHIPS

Hunting for Gold

FORMER IOWA WRESTLER AND CURRENT ASSISTANT COACH JOE WILLIAMS GOES FOR AN ELUSIVE WORLD FREESTYLE TITLE
BY ALI NOLLER
THE DAILY IOWAN

Joe Williams knows he's the best 163-pound freestyle wrestler in the country. On Friday, he'll finally get a chance to prove he's the best in the world. Two years after finishing in third place at the World Freestyle Championships (he fell in the semifinals to Russia's Bouvaisa Saitiev in a controversial one-point loss), the former Iowa wrestler and current Hawkeye assistant coach emerges as one of the U.S. front-runners at this weekend's championships in New York City.

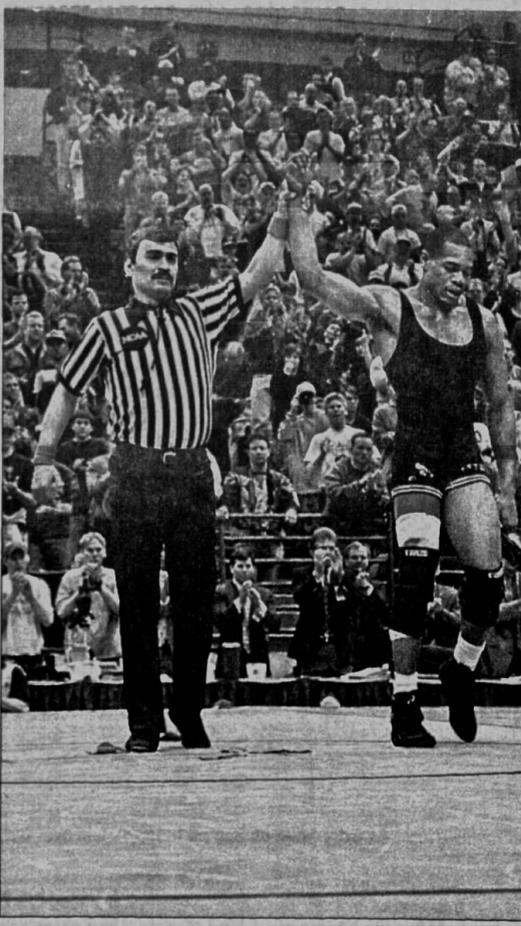

"I have a better idea of what [the competition] can do," he said. "I've watched these guys wrestle, and I've been able to focus on myself."

Williams' desire to avenge the loss to Saitiev has been fueled by a two-year postponement. The World Championships were canceled in 2001 after 9/11, and the United States elected to not attend the 2002 championships because of safety issues with the host site in Tehran, Iran.

The rematch with Russia's Saitiev will be one of the marquee matches of the tournament. Saitiev has won numerous world titles, and he was an Olympic champion in 1996. He beat Williams in 2001 after officials reviewed the match tape and determined Williams had stepped out of bounds to give Saitiev the one-point victory.

That match replayed in Williams' head as he trained at Carver-Hawkeye Arena and at the U.S. freestyle training camp in Colorado Springs, balancing his roles as coach, athlete, father, and husband.

He's in the best shape of his life—a strong assertion for an athlete who dominated the college wrestling scene in the mid-90s, racking up 129 career wins and three NCAA titles. Since then, he's proven he can dominate internationally, too. He's a three-time U.S. National Freestyle Champion, three-time world team member, and he was named the 2001 and 2002 freestyle athlete of the year.

This weekend, these accomplishments are not enough for the four-time All-American.

"I'm going out there to win it," Williams said from New York. "I am looking forward to showing people what I can do."

Iowa wrestling coach Jim Zalesky has had varying roles in Williams' career—first as a coach, now as a colleague. This weekend, he'll just be a wrestling fan.

"[Williams] looks good, and he's ready to go," Zalesky said. "Once you get to that level of competition, and you've been there a few times to have the experience, you feel pretty good going into a tournament like this."

The rest of the Hawkeye coaching contingency—assistant Tom Brands, strength coach Royce Alger and Williams' former coach Dan Gable—will make the trip to New York. Brands is the assistant resident freestyle coach for the U.S. team.

For Williams, having a ring of support at the tournament and being closer to home are a few more advantages on his quest for a World title.

Until he steps on the mat on Friday, he'll be patiently waiting to redeem a title.

And prove he's the best 163-pound wrestler in the world.

Titans pick up Anderson, NFL's oldest active player

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Titans wanted an experienced kicker, and they got one Wednesday night by agreeing to terms with Gary Anderson, the NFL's career scoring leader and once again the league's oldest active player.

The Titans lost kicker Joe Nedney for the season to a torn ligament in his right, non-kicking leg during their 25-20 victory Sunday over the Oakland Raiders. Nedney and punter Craig Hentrich combined to kick four field goals in the game.

"It was important to find a veteran kicker who has made all the big kicks and been in all of the situations," general manager Floyd Reese said. "We feel like Gary is the best available kicker and that we couldn't afford to take a chance with a younger player with the number of games in this league that come down to a final kick."

The 44-year-old Anderson had been looking for work since the end of last season when he finished up with Minnesota.

The Vikings had tried to find a replacement for Anderson but brought him back when his replacement missed a field goal and two extra points in the second week.

Anderson has 2,233 points in his career. He was 18-of-23 last season, and made a 53-yard field goal to beat Miami in December. But Anderson was just 3-of-8 between 40 and 49 yards.

He was the last of three kickers to audition for the Titans during the past two days, starting with Brett Conway on Tuesday followed by Neil Rackers on Wednesday morning. Anderson took his turn Wednesday afternoon following practice.

Coach Jeff Fisher said both Conway and Rackers kicked well. But Anderson has the experience the Titans want as they try to return to the Super Bowl for the first time since 2000.

Fisher said Monday that the Titans would need to find a cheap — and inexperienced — kicker because of their lack of space under the salary cap. But they were able to squeeze in Anderson using the NFL's $450,000 minimum salary for veterans.

Hentrich, chosen Wednesday as the AFC's special-teams player for his performance against Oakland, said he will do what the Titans ask. He also wouldn't mind handling kickoffs again, something he did between 1998 and 2000 when Al Del Greco was the kicker.

"It would be nice to get it back again," Hentrich said.

The Titans had nobody else on the roster who could punt or handle kickoffs before reaching terms with Anderson. Hentrich said he has only seen backup quarterback Billy Volek even attempt a punt, and that went sideways.

Rivalry win aids recruiting

BY CHUCK SCHOFFNER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

AMES, Iowa — If Iowa State was ever going to succeed in football, coach Dan McCarney knew he had to have good players from his own state.

Beating Iowa in each of the last five years has helped McCarney get them.

McCarney understands a recruit isn't going to choose between Iowa and Iowa State solely on who wins the game between the two. But he also knows his in-state recruiting has picked up since the Cyclones turned the series into a rivalry again after 15 straight victories by Iowa.

"When you're building a program, you have to have a cause," McCarney said. "Our cause has been to get somebody around America, starting here in the state of Iowa, to respect Cyclone football.

"To do that, you better start getting some of those players that Iowa or anybody else wants from around the country."

Ten former Iowa high school players will start for the Cyclones in Saturday's home game with Iowa, including all five members of the offensive line.

"When you see the lineup we have with a lot of Iowa kids, had we been losing the last five years and the streak went to 20, could we have gone to bowl games? I don't think so," McCarney said.

"Could we have had a chance to win 16 of our last 21 games at home without good Iowa kids? I don't think so. So it does impact it."

Iowa still gets its share of in-state players. Three of the Hawkeyes' starting offensive linemen are from the state, including tackle Robert Gallery, a likely first-round pick in next year's NFL draft.

But in recent years, McCarney has been able to sign Iowa players such as Tyson Smith, Casey Shelton, Seth Zehr, Todd Blythe, Milan Moses and Aaron Brant, a true freshman who starts at offensive guard.

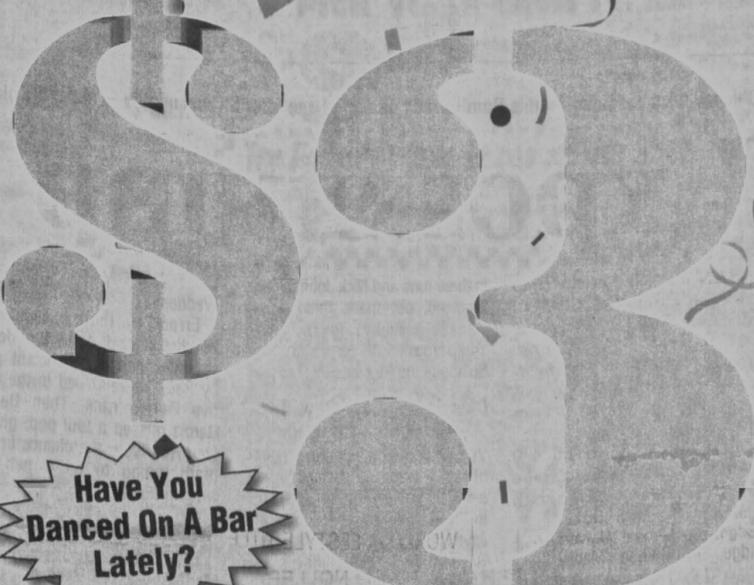

"Being able to beat Iowa has really helped them," recruiting analyst Tom Lemming said. "I know it did a year ago. They signed four of the top six players in the state. The last recruiting season, they won the in-state battle."

Chicago third baseman Aramis Ramirez sits near the base after he was unable to make the play in time to first base.

Expos stump Cubs

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Pinch-hitter Jose Macias hit a go-ahead double in a five-run eighth inning, and the Montreal Expos overcame a four-run deficit to beat the Chicago Cubs 8-4 on Wednesday.

Chicago was ahead 4-0 behind Matt Clement, who took a no-hit bid into the sixth inning.

Clement walked his first three batters in the inning and was replaced by Mark Guthrie, who walked the next two batters, forcing in a pair of runs. Orlando Cabrera followed with an RBI single off Dave Veres.

Endy Chavez opened the eighth with a single off Mark Remlinger and stole second. Kyle Farnsworth (3-2) relieved, and Cabrera bunted to first baseman Randall Simon, who missed the tag as Cabrera reached.

Yankees 15, Tigers 5

NEW YORK (AP) — Jorge Posada hit a grand slam and drove in a career-high seven runs, and the New York Yankees overcame four errors and routed the Detroit Tigers on Wednesday night.

Hideki Matsui homered and drove in three runs and Nick Johnson also homered, but made three of the Yankees' defensive miscues. New York remained 3½ games ahead of Boston in the AL East.

Blue Jays 6, Devil Rays 5

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Vernon Wells and Carlos Delgado hit back-to-back homers in the seventh inning, and Wells drove in three runs as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Tampa Bay Devil Rays on Wednesday night.

Wells' two-run homer in the seventh put the Blue Jays ahead 5-3.

Braves 4, Phillies 2

ATLANTA (AP) — Javy Lopez homered to give the Braves a franchise-record 216 homers this season, and Atlanta rebounded from a big loss to beat the Philadelphia Phillies on Wednesday night.

Horacio Ramirez (10-4) allowed six hits in seven innings. He gave up solo homers to Pat Burrell in the second and Tomas Perez in the seventh and struck out seven.

Marlins 7, Mets 3

NEW YORK (AP) — Juan Encarnacion and Derrek Lee hit back-to-back doubles that broke a fifth-inning tie and helped the Florida Marlins to a victory over the New York Mets on Wednesday.

Errors by third baseman Ty Wigginton and shortstop Jorge Velandia, and a nonchalant play by Raul Gonzalez, led to the first five Florida runs. Then Danny Garcia missed a foul pop, giving Ivan Rodriguez the chance in the ninth inning to hit a two-run wrapup homer.

Red Sox 5, Orioles 0

BALTIMORE (AP) — Pedro Martinez allowed three hits over eight innings, and Kevin Millar drove in two runs as the Boston Red Sox defeated the Baltimore Orioles on Wednesday.

Johnny Damon had three hits and scored twice for the Red Sox. Martinez (12-4) struck out nine and walked two. He gave up singles to Geronimo Gil in the third and eighth innings and a double to Larry Bigbie in the seventh.

Astros 3, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jeriome Robertson won his 14th game, the most among rookies the season, and the Houston Astros regained sole possession of first place in the NL Central by beating the Milwaukee Brewers on Wednesday night.

Houston scored three runs in the first inning.

Royals 9, Indians 7

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Brent Mayne's two-run double highlighted a five-run fifth inning, and the Kansas City Royals snapped a four-game home losing streak with a victory over the Cleveland Indians on Wednesday night.

Kris Wilson (6-3) earned the win with one inning of relief work. Jeremy Affeldt got the save.

Josh Bard hit a three-run homer, and Alex Escobar and Jody Gerut had three hits each for the Indians.

Pirates 3, Reds 2

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pinch-hitter Rob Mackowiak hit a two-run homer off Chris Reitsma in the ninth inning, giving the Pittsburgh Pirates a 3-2 win over the Cincinnati Reds on Tuesday night.

Craig Wilson opened the ninth with a single off Reitsma (9-5). Mackowiak, batting for Jason Bay, then hit a 2-0 pitch deep.

Mike Lincoln (3-4) allowed one hit in the eighth inning. Julian Tavarez earned the save.

Cardinals 10, Rockies 2

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Albert Pujols hit two home runs and Brett Tomko pitched a six-hitter and had two hits as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Colorado Rockies 10-2 Wednesday night, giving Tony La Russa his 2,000th win as a manager.

Mets, other teams commemorate 9/11

(AP) — The New York Mets found a fitting way to pay tribute to Yolanda Dowling and the other victims of 9/11 — they played the tape of her singing the national anthem at Shea Stadium seven years ago.

The Mets are off today, the two-year anniversary of the terrorist attacks. So before Wednesday afternoon's game against Florida, they used her rendition of "The Star-Spangled Banner" that she performed on Banner Day at Shea on Aug. 4, 1996.

Eight Mets players, including starting pitcher Jae Weong Seo, wore hats from the different service organizations who lost members that day. After the attacks, Mets players wore "NYPD," "FDNY," and Port Authority caps for the rest of the season.

The flip side: Gesture costs Paniagua job

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox released Jose Paniagua on Wednesday, a day after he made an obscene gesture at the plate umpire as he left the field.

"It was a decision we felt we had to make," White Sox general manager Kenny Williams said before Chicago's game against Minnesota.

"You have to excuse a certain amount of failures out there when you haven't pitched in a year," Williams added. "What's inexcusable are the actions that happened afterward. That's not what we stand for."

With the White Sox leading the Twins, 8-2, on Tuesday night, Paniagua came in to relieve in the ninth, his first appearance in the major leagues in a year. He gave up four runs, three hits, and a walk in just one-third of an inning, and he was apparently upset with some of the calls made by plate umpire Mark Carlson.

Paniagua was still arguing as he walked back to the dugout, and he was seen making an obscene gesture in Carlson's direction. The White Sox went on to win, 8-6, extending their lead over Minnesota in the AL Central.

"We obviously don't need things like that portraying an image that's really not the Chicago White Sox," manager Jerry Manuel said. "We're just trying to do the right thing."

COLLEGE FOOTBALL PICKS

Michigan-Notre Dame top rivalry

BY JOSH DUBOW
ASSOCIATED PRESS

There's no conference title on the line when Michigan and Notre Dame play. And they usually meet too early to have a direct effect on the national championship race.

But there's no playing down the rivalry between the two winningest teams in college football.

Even players and coaches who usually precede big games with clichés about how "every game is important" recognize the special significance of this game.

"We're intense every week, but there's an added intensity and level of focus and concentration to this week," Michigan quarterback John Navarre said. "This is one of those great games, one of the reasons that you come to Michigan."

"Once you're here, it lives up to everything you saw on TV growing up. The buzz around here and the buzz on game day is something that is very special."

That's what happens when the team with the most wins in major college football (Michigan) plays the team with the best winning percentage in history (Notre Dame).

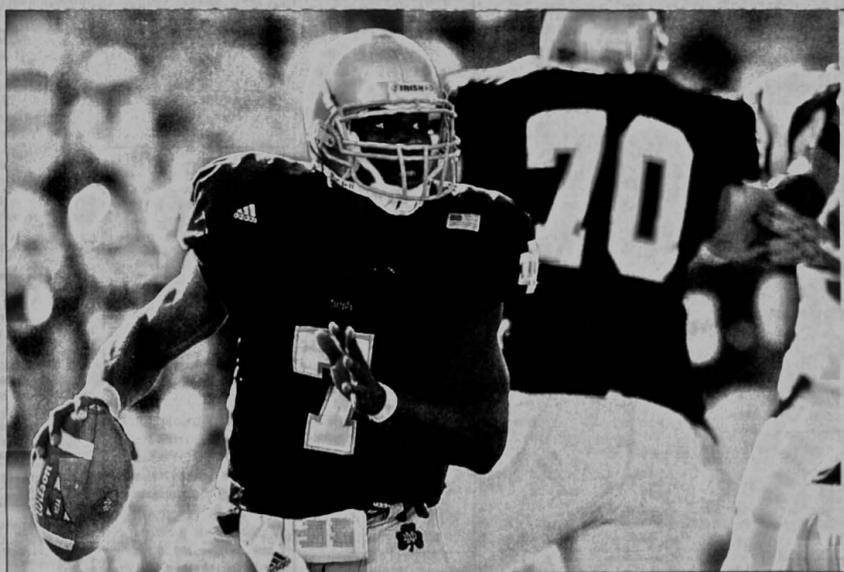

"When you have two teams with that kind of history, it's natural that this game gathers the interest of a lot of people not only in this region but around the country," Notre Dame coach Tyrone Willingham said.

Playoff MVP signs contract with Ducks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jean-Sebastien Giguere, whose goal-tending carried the Anaheim Mighty Ducks to the Stanley Cup finals, agreed to a four-year contract Wednesday.

Terms were not disclosed. Giguere had a 1.62 goals-against average and a .945 save percentage in 21 playoff games in June. He won the Conn Smythe Trophy as playoff MVP, even though the Ducks lost to New Jersey in seven games in the finals.

He also set a record for the longest playoff overtime shutout streak in NHL history: 168 minutes and 27 seconds. He allowed just one goal against Minnesota in the Western Conference finals, which was an NHL record for a best-of-seven series.

Giguere was 34-22-6 with a 2.30 goals-against average and a .920 save percentage during the regular season. His 34 wins were fifth-best in the NHL.

Clarett suspended

BY RUSTY MILLER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Maurice Clarett was suspended for the season Wednesday for violating NCAA rules, tarnishing Ohio State's national title and clouding the future of one of the nation's most talented running backs.

Clarett was punished because the school determined he accepted thousands of dollars in improper benefits and then lied to NCAA and school investigators.

"This is a sad day," Ohio State Athletics Director Andy Geiger said as he announced the penalty.

Even though the infractions date back to 2002, the school is not in jeopardy of having its national title stripped.

Clarett will remain on scholarship this school year. His attorney, Scott Schiff, wouldn't speculate if Clarett's Ohio State career was over.

"He's considering his options right now," Schiff said.

Clarett had been suspended from the team while the NCAA and Ohio State investigated his finances. Ohio State has been working for more than two weeks on a response to "several pages" of allegations sent by the NCAA to the university.

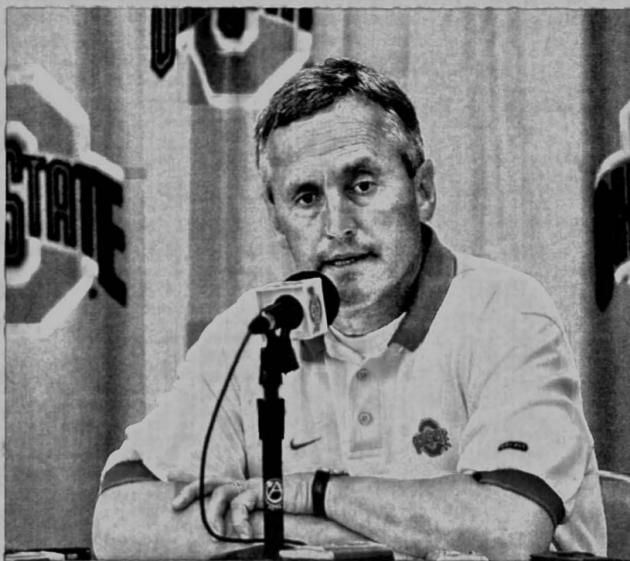

Geiger said Clarett was guilty of 14 violations of the ethical-conduct bylaw and two violations of receiving preferential treatment or benefits because he is an athlete.

Geiger said before each season Ohio State players are presented a copy of NCAA Bylaw 10, which deals with ethical conduct and not lying to investigators.

"You play by the rules; you live by the rules," he said.

He said Clarett would be required to make a donation to a charity of his choice equal to the amount he received in benefits, which Geiger termed as "thousands of dollars," if he wants to be reinstated.

Ohio State can appeal for Clarett's reinstatement after the year suspension is complete.

Terry Gilliam/Associated Press

Ohio State coach Jim Tressel responds to questions by the media during a news conference on Wednesday after Ohio State athletic director Andy Geiger announced running back Maurice Clarett will be suspended from the football team for one year because of NCAA violations.

"We hope the NCAA considers a suspension for this season to be sufficient," Geiger said. "More importantly, we hope that Maurice will remain in school to pursue his degree and that conditions will warrant our application for reinstatement to play Buckeye football next season."

If Clarett transfers, the NCAA requires the new school to declare him ineligible, then seek his reinstatement through the NCAA. He would have to sit out a year in addition to any suspension or ineligibility handed down by the NCAA in order to play at another Division I-A school. Clarett could play immediately in a smaller division after he is reinstated.

Schiff said he was troubled that Clarett is not permitted to appeal the NCAA penalties. The association's rules only permit a school to appeal.

"The most important thing I think is that the inherent problem with the NCAA procedures is the lack of due process and the lack of any procedure for the student-athlete himself to appeal the NCAA findings," Schiff said.

Clarett, a sophomore, could also try to go to the NFL and challenge the rule that requires players to wait three years after high school to enter the draft or leave for the Canadian Football League.

Geiger said Clarett accepted some benefits during his freshman year — before Ohio State won the national title in the Fiesta Bowl on Jan. 3. Geiger said the NCAA had not determined that the school could be blamed for the violations or that the bowl victory was in jeopardy.

Because the NCAA is not in charge of the bowl system, it does not have the power to strip a school of a national title.

"If the university was unaware or uninvolved, then the university is not culpable," Geiger said.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

Big, unthinkable tragedies happen. Now, instead of keeping that and developing hatred or sense of revenge, instead of that, think long-term. The negative event, try to transform into a source of inner strength.

A GUIDE TO THE FALL TV SEASON

By Jesse Ammerman

- If you haven't done so already, carefully re-configure your schedule so that it does not interfere with any new episodes of "Big Brother 4."
- For those watching "According to Jim" in hopes of a Jim Belushi topless scene, be aware that his breasts aren't likely to get past network censors.
- Now that he's starring in NBC's "Happy Family," there's never been a better time to reorganize your John Larroquette Fan Club meetings.
- Be careful about what you watch. If we continue to sit idly by while Whoopi Goldberg and Joe Mantegna star in sitcoms, then the terrorists have already won.
- "Friends" is back again by popular demand. So, too, is "JAG."
- Since "Wanda at Large" has now been moved to Friday nights, be prepared to cancel a lot of dinner plans.
- ABC's "George Lopez" demonstrates the network's commitment to diversity, which is not to be mistaken for a commitment to "funny" or "interesting."
- Breathe easy, everybody. "Becker" was renewed for another season.

horoscopes

Thursday, September 11, 2003 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may feel the urge to change your personal situation, but if you take action based on your emotions, you are likely to make a mistake. Expect someone to try to meddle in your private affairs.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone may give you a hard time should you have to deal with authority figures or any work-related matters. An insult may be more truthful than you want to believe.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may get taken for granted if you are too eager to do for others. Someone is likely to offer you a position or a partnership. Consider it carefully. You may end up doing all the work.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Travel and contact with old friends will be uplifting. Getting back to basics and into shape should be your concern. Work-related problems will escalate if you get involved in who should be doing what.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Put your efforts into raising your current assets and building up your portfolio. Work toward developing the freedom to follow through with a creative idea you have conceived.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can expect things to turn sour today. Dead-end projects will set you back. Your partner may upset you if he or she has been spending too much. It may be a good day to come to an arrangement with those involved in your life.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): This could be a touch-and-go day in which those close to you may question what you are trying to do. Share your thoughts, but don't expect any help. Partners may not agree with your choices.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Throw yourself into your work, and you will get ahead. Your unique approach to everything you do will pay off today. Change is good, and you are ready for it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't rock the boat. Your partner will be extremely sensitive. Stay away from a risky investment, and prepare to make some changes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Changes made to your home environment will be slow and tedious. Make final preparations to your cottage, boat, or any other seasonal property before the weather changes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Check over your personal papers. Find out what needs to be updated. You may also want to book a physical to ensure that you are healthy and taking proper care of yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Social activities should be scheduled. You will have some very interesting thoughts that, if put into play, could lead to extra cash. Follow through.

PRIVATELY going primate Riverside Theatre opens its 2003/04 season with Noel Coward's Private Lives

Story by Peter Madsen Photos by Nick Loomis

A lover's spat ensues as a couple lounges on a Côte d'Azur hotel balcony at sunset.

"My dear, I should love to chop your head off with an ax," the man declares with eyebrows arched upon his curled, reddened face.

"Elyot!" his wife shrieks. "What a thing to say on our honeymoon!"

And it wasn't but a moment ago that they were locked in a lover's embrace, cooing and oogling in a saccharinely sweet, newlywed fashion.

This is the unrequited youthful passion that playwright Noël Coward heats up in his critically heralded "Private Lives" (1931) — the first featured play of Riverside Theatre's 2003-04 season. Where most of Coward's contemporaries would let things simmer and cool, he maddeningly stirs the plot until it boils over into an ardent and searing comic spectacle.

"Most adults have had a relationship that was horribly destructive, yet so incredibly enriching," director Ron Clark said with a sparkle in his eyes. "I think it's a play that young people will enjoy."

Clark and Jody Hovland found themselves in the early '80s without a stage to call home. The two, now married, felt that creating a theater company seemed like a great means to an end — thus, Riverside Theatre, 213 N. Gilbert St.

"We were very impatient because we both love working," Hovland said. "To have any control over your artistic career is very rare for an actor."

Riverside enjoys "one of the smartest, most-educated audiences in the country," Clark said, given the proximity of such an array of artistic and theatrical establishments. However, that's not to say that the demographics of playgoers are akin to that of Iowa City — most audience members are in their 40s or 50s.

And that, to say the least, baffles Clark.

"We're missing the frequency of people in their 20s and 30s," he said. "We always try to be accessible and inviting to students who come — once we get you in the door, you'll come back."

And once they see Private Lives, they most certainly will. The two-hour, two-act production is a witty and humorous look into the love lives of two newlyweds enjoying their honeymoon along the French Riviera. Everything is simply grand, however, until the man runs into his ex-wife, who is also recently married and honeymooning. The old flames immediately realize they are still madly in love with each other and, in a hasty scheme, hurry off to Paris on the midnight train. Near hysteria ensues when, following a particularly heated squabble, the two are discovered by their respective spouses.

Brimming with painfully witty commentary delivered in well-honed British English, Private Lives is a strikingly relevant and articulate romantic satire — notwithstanding the 77 years since its inception.

The actors said that in the mere four weeks spent in rehearsal, they came to very much enjoy their work at Riverside under the eyes of Clark.

"It's great to come here, make a little money, and work with good people and great material," said featured actor Tim Budd.

Clark spoke of Riverside's responsibility in bringing Iowa City "necessary theater" to keep the cultural center of the city alive and well. The town enjoys the artistic outpourings from many venues, including Hancher, the Iowa City Community Theatre, and such outlets as the UI theater department and Public Space One.

In subsequent months, Riverside will play host to a number of productions, including The Last Five Years, written and composed by Tony Award-winner Jason Robert Brown. Riverside regulars can look forward to Grocery Stories, which was produced, written, and acted by Clark. The Goat, Or Who Is Sylvia? is a risqué play that explores the parameters of conventional love when a married man confesses to a sexual affair with a goat.

"Directors need to have a vision that is exclusive to the art community yet inclusive to the audience," Clark said. "We have the deepest respect for our audiences."

ARTS

Local Women's Music Festival

In its 10th year, the Women's Music Festival has provided the stage and limelight for the diverse range of local women's music and art.

"We're dedicated to highlighting women's voices and talents," said festival volunteer Kelly Corral. "I feel there's a lack of it in the mainstream, and I want there to be more of it."

The festival, set in a cozy, shaded place in Upper City Park, will topple the first domino Saturday from noon to 5 p.m. Admission is free to all; donations will be gladly accepted. A number of both local and touring women are scheduled to perform, including local favorites Amy Finders (of the Mike and Amy Finders Band) and Annie Savage (of the Johnson County Mayflies), who will combine artistry and sound in a delectable duo. Fans of Patty Ankrum (formerly of Black Sheep) can anticipate her work backed by guitarist Dale Beeks.

The organizers of the festival also arranged the appearance of comedian Suzanne Westenhoefer Friday at 8 p.m. in the Macbride Auditorium. Tickets are $15; Corral said the festival will honor the sliding scale of "give more if you can, give less if you can't."

Blairing the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Jayson Blair, the former New York Times reporter who resigned amid accusations of fraud and plagiarism, has a book deal with New Millennium Press, a Los Angeles-based publisher with its own controversial past.

The book, Burning Down My Master's House, is scheduled to come out in March 2004, with a first printing of more than 200,000, New Millennium Co-President Michael Viner said Wednesday.

Blair resigned from the paper on May 1 after filing some three dozen phony or plagiarized stories from October 2002 through April. The scandal surrounding the 27-year-old former national correspondent led to the resignations of Times Executive Editor Howell Raines and Managing Editor Gerald Boyd.

BY RICHARD SHIRK
THE DAILY IOWAN

For a garage band somewhere, harmony and melody are more important than distortion pedals, and the Beach Boys are always going to be higher on the rock 'n' roll totem pole than Sonic Youth, the Ramones, or Chuck Berry.

The Essex Green is one such band. It will appear tonight at Gabe's with a new album, Long Goodbye (Merge) and a lush-chamber pop sound.

This aesthetic was made into a signature sound by the now-defunct Elephant Six musical collective. Built around a common love for psychedelic pop-music, and physically based in an Athens, Ga., flophouse, the E6 once boasted an impressive core membership of such bands as Apples (in Stereo), Olivia Tremor Control, Elf Power, the Essex Green, the Minders, and Neutral Milk Hotel. While the Elephant Six officially announced its demise in October 2002, the Essex Green's 1999 debut, Every- thing is Green, was one of the many high-points of the collective's paisley-cast back catalogue.

And with Long Goodbye, the band's sophomore album, the Essex Green has moved on. Although it may not be the Raymond Chandler concept album the title suggests, it is a progression. If Everything is Green sounded like an obscure, lost recording from a long-forgotten West-Coast pop-band circa 1966, Long Goodbye plays like the polished reunion album recorded 10 years after.

But it's more than just a question of recording in 24-track studios rather than an eight-track basement studio. And although Long Goodbye is a full-sounding album, it hasn't lost any of the innocence that made Everything is Green, and the Elephant 6 sound in general, so charming, catchy, and googly eyed.

And, unlike other bands that are too quick to overdo the cute 'n' precious gimmick, the Essex Green seems to come by its goofy optimism honestly, with gentle melodies, layered harmonies, and fine musicianship. For instance, while songs such as "The Late Great Cassiopeia," "Lazy May," and "Berlin" are hook-filled pop songs, real merit can be heard in "The Boo-Hoo Boy" and "Old Dominion." These songs build layers of strings and keyboards to reach an orchestral scale rather than resort to the marching-band-on-acid noise collages (usually 14 people playing simultaneously in a room with tambourines, beat-up trombones, pawn-shop accordions, and a malfunctioning Wurlitzer) that typify many of the Elephant 6 albums.

But even with the Essex Green's musicianship and new-found high-fidelity sound on

Breaking up made easy, from A to Z

BY SARA CONRAD
THE DAILY IOWAN

Some of us like to kiss and tell. It's just gratifying — like the whole romantic experience is recorded forever when blabbed to a friend.

But some others like to kiss and tell everything ... to everyone.

That's what Meredith Broussard did before she gathered 26 talented writers to spill their souls on their romantic failures (and how they all chose just one to vent about is beyond me.) Broussard had just watched her 26th relationship burn to the ground, and she was relaying it to anyone with ears — including the door person at her apartment building, she admits — to more accurately understand her emotions. This seems fair. I support therapy and people in need of it.

But that wasn't enough. Broussard still felt, well, burnt. So she tried to have a little fun with her scars. By telling friends about her crisis, she found that they, too, were eager to let off a little steam. And that's when, voila, she imagined collecting all of these wounds into one anthology — an informative anthology, The Dictionary of Failed Relationships.

In the collection, Broussard pairs up 26 pieces of fiction with titles corresponding to each letter of the alphabet — conveniently including definitions of those titles. It's not a coincidence, either, that she had just realized her involvement in 26 relationships completely gone to hell. It is a coincidence, however, that she made this discovery at 26 years old. A creepy thing such as that explains why Broussard felt she had to celebrate with an anthology.

The titles range from "Ambivalence" to "Zero" and include stories crying of pain, confusion, envy, and all those other wonderful emotions that one gains and eventually loses in a relationship. All the authors are — surprise — women. But that doesn't mean that only women can benefit from this literary balm. Stories such as "Green," by Susan Minot, picks on envy, which plagues — admit it — both sexes. So don't feel snubbed.

Then again, pieces such as "Etiquette" cater especially to men ... although women could probably better sympathize with the wisdom: "There's nothing more pathetic than a woman waiting around for some guy to call ..."

The author of "Etiquette," Thisbe Nissen, is a graduate of the UI Writers' Workshop and is known for her novel The Good People of New York as well as her collection of short stories, Out of the Girls' Room and Into the Night. She has also produced (with Erin Ergenbright) a culinary book relating to relationships, The Ex-Boyfriend Cookbook — if you're into that sort of thing. Which, of course, you might be, reading a review about a dictionary of relationships.

For some extra healing, you can show up today at Prairie Lights Books, where Nissen and Broussard will read from the collection at 8 p.m.

"Think of it as the literary equivalent of Ben & Jerry's ice cream," writes Broussard. "Delicious at any time, but especially appropriate for times of PMS or heartbreak."

Eat up.

Le Divorce proves Splitsville no laughing matter

An effort to satirize American and French social attitudes gets lost in the film starring Kate Hudson, Naomi Watts, and a bevy of other stars.

If you've seen the trailers for Le Divorce, you're probably thinking it's another one of those Hollywood romances set in whimsical, magical Paris.

These types of farces were popular in the '50s and '60s — sophisticated people falling in love, eating fancy foods, wearing stylish clothes, and getting involved in oh-so-witty situations. Well, you're right; Le Divorce is a little bit like that. But it's also a little like many other things ... too many other things.

This is one great, chaotic mess of a movie. Let me attempt to briefly give you a general sketch of the plot. Naomi Watts plays Roxy, a pregnant American woman living in Paris. Her French husband, Charles-Henri de Persand (Melvil Poupaud), decides to leave her because he has become smitten with a Russian woman named Magda. Isabel Walker (Kate Hudson), Roxy's sister, flies in from America just as the marriage falls apart. While helping her sister cope during this troubling time, Isabel also figures it might be fun to have an affair with Charles' uncle, Edgar (Thierry Lhermitte). During all this confusion, Magda's jealous American husband (Matthew Modine) is going around bullying Roxy and Isabel. There's also some stuff about a priceless Walker family painting, half of which, Charles claims, belongs to him.

As you probably noticed, there are way too many characters and subplots. Screenwriters James Ivory and Ruth Praver Jhabvala have so much ill-focused material floating around that it's mind-boggling they didn't think to cut good chunks of it out. They make an effort to satirize American versus French social attitudes and values, but this layer of the film gets nearly lost by the end. Worse yet, not a single character emerges as engaging, complex, or even sympathetic. The supporting cast includes a list of well-respected stars, including Leslie Caron, Stockard Channing, Sam Waterson, Glenn Close, Bebe Neuwirth, and Stephen Fry. How all these people got together to play such underdeveloped characters is beyond me. As for leads Hudson and Watts, their physical attractiveness can't make up for a noticeable weakness in their performances.

Film: Le Divorce
Director: James Ivory
Writers: James Ivory and Ruth Praver Jhabvala
Starring: Kate Hudson, Naomi Watts, Stockard Channing, Glenn Close, and Bebe Neuwirth
Length: 117 minutes

All of these flaws might be halfway excusable if the story (or, rather, the jumble of small stories) were funny or interesting. However, minimal laughs are to be had at Le Divorce, and none of the slow-paced vignettes add up to much. To be frank, it's all quite boring and uninviting. I was really surprised that director James Ivory and producer Ismail Merchant were at the helm of this production. Merchant-Ivory films (such as Howards End [1992] and The Remains of the Day [1993]) are frequently some of the classiest movies of their respective years. Le Divorce, on the other hand, plays more like a TV soap opera than a piece of high art.

Before we close, let me point out that fans of Comedy Central's ingeniously clever "Reno 911" may recognize Thomas Lennon. The filmmaker seems to have shot themselves in the foot by casting him in the picture, though. Every time the actor appeared on screen, I kept thinking about how hilarious he is on TV and how apparent the film's lack of energy was.

Gamboling among the bare facts

I woke up late for school, and in my half-conscious state, grabbed my backpack, and ran out the door.

Sprinting at a brisk pace, I arrived just in time as class was beginning. As I opened the door, the teacher and every student turned toward me, and unanimously began to laugh. In horror, I looked down to find that in my hurry, I had forgotten clothes and was standing completely naked in public.

BETH HERZINGER

Then I woke up for real, safely concealed by pajamas in bed, hours before class began. It was a dream, but the terror I felt from the possibility of such a situation lingered, and I checked my clothes twice before leaving, to be sure I was actually wearing them.

Nudity would seem to be one of the most universal human qualities. We all have bodies that are basically similar in shape and structure. Yet why does even the dream of being naked before others cause us such fear?

Attitudes towards bodies and exposure are cultural and vary as much as the circumstances dictating them. In America, for all the forward and backward thinking since its inception, has clung to the Puritan belief that a naked body is a cause for shame. Despite the near-nude advertisements that surround us, a woman breastfeeding in public makes many people uncomfortable.

It is not the same all over the world. On a trip to Germany several years back, I was astonished at the nonchalant way nudity was a part of daily life. Women sunbathed topless, and the saunas were co-ed. While I was giggling with such displays with my American friends, our German exchange students told us to stop embarrassing them.

Iowa City is a far cry from Europe, and I'm actually fairly relieved that there probably won't be nude gatherings on the Pentacrest in the near future. But Iowa City's love and support of artistic endeavors ensures that some nudity thrives. While browsing the shops and galleries downtown, works of art depicting the human form hang on the walls nonchalantly, not demanding attention, but subtly reminding us of what we really look like once the layers are stripped away.

Art seems to be the one forum in which a nude body can be appreciated, dissected, rendered unusual, depicted — anything but shamed. No one would consider the classic nude statues, such as Venus de Milo or Michelangelo's David, anything less than fine art.

Artists have learned to love what the rest of us loathe. Look at a naked body sometime, even your own. The fine lines and golden ratios of the human physique intrigued the Greeks. Artists throughout time have struggled to depict the beauty of the naked form despite the cultural ramifications.

Art, however, is not immune to cultural criticism, and throughout the country, there have been proposals to dress the Greek statues, to remove paintings of naked bodies, to censor the most pure expression of what it means to be physically human.

This concern does not extend to all areas. When it comes to a naked body, there is a fine, almost indeterminate line between the artistic and the pornographic. Nudity in movies helps increase sales, and in marketing, it helps sell products. The bodies presented are toned, stitched, and airbrushed to perfection. No wonder the average-looking person would feel some sense of shame of being exposed in the same way.

In Iowa City, nudity seems to be going strong. The Full Monty, a Broadway musical about a group of friends hard up for cash who become male strippers, will hit Hancher at the end of the month. Playboy released its "Girls of the Big Ten" issue this month, and several UI students were featured. Is this display of near nudity art? After all, even artists need a naked body to depict. It's hard to draw a solid definition.

Nudity is thus, like its counterpart, beauty, in the eyes of the beholder and in the body of the beheld. What your body is comfortable with is up to you, not society, the marketing industry, or even the pursuit of art.

And next time you go to class naked, smile in your sleep, and keep on dreaming.

ABC acquires historic 9/11 footage

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC News said Wednesday it had acquired the only known video footage of both planes hitting the World Trade Center, and it expects to begin airing it on the second anniversary of the 9/11 terrorist attacks.

Its agreement ends a dispute over the footage that had scuttled ABC's plans to show it nationally on "This Week" on Sunday.

ABC News, which thought last week it was getting the rare footage for free, paid for its use. Neither ABC spokesman Jeffrey Schneider nor lawyer Bob Reicher, representing owners of the tape, would reveal how much.

The first expected airing is today on "Good Morning America," Schneider said.

The videotape was shot by an immigrant construction worker who had been making a sightseeing tape for a friend, and its existence was not widely known until reported in the New York Times on Sunday. The cameraman, Pavel Hlava, was riding in an SUV from Brooklyn to Manhattan on Sept. 11, 2001.

The first impact was caught on tape as the vehicle was approaching the Brooklyn-Battery Tunnel. Upon emerging from the tunnel, Hlava pointed the camera at the burning north tower and caught the second plane hitting the World Trade Center.

Only one other tape, by French filmmakers who had been making a documentary on firefighters, is known to exist that shows the first plane hitting the tower. No other known video shows both impacts. Federal officials are said to have interest in the video because it could help determine the speed of the first plane as it approached the World Trade Center. ABC News was given a copy of the video last week by Mike Cohen, said Schneider. He's described in the Times as the man who drove the SUV that day and Hlava's boss, who believes the tape should not be sold for profit.

The network made plans to air it Sunday morning on "This Week." It was shown in New York City, where the Sunday political show airs earlier than in the rest of the country, and host George Stephanopoulos made a point of saying the network hadn't paid for it.

Under the influence of an obscure mix tape

BY DAN MALONEY
THE DAILY IOWAN

Weeping sally boys and girls rejoice, Morrissey (of the Smiths fame) is back, only this time he's manning the mix-tape buttons instead of the microphone.

Morrissey's newest release, Under the Influence, may sound like a cover album of the Moz's favorite songs, but it's really nothing more than a glorified mix tape. The only thing we get out of Morrissey is a heavenly photo of him and handwritten liner notes issuing praise for his favorite jams of the past.

It could be a lot worse, however — at least the songs he's chosen don't suck, and it looks as though the Moz has done some digging to provide obscure music gems of the past.

The compilation begins with a fast-picking, bluegrass-sounding track called "Saturday Night Special," from the Sundown Playboys. The lyrics are barely audible but the melody is draped with moonshine-sipping rowdiness, accordion swilling, and banjo plucking. Yee haw, Moz.

Continuing Morrissey's love of early rock 'n' roll/rockabilly stuff are obscure tracks by Nat County, Charlie Feathers, and Jaybee Wasden. County's "Woodpecker Rock" is a rudimentary rockabilly track with Woody Woodpecker-style vocal inflections. "Woodpecker" is quite the cooker and probably would tear up a dance floor full of pompadours and betty cuts. Feathers' "One Hand Loose" follows the same rockabilly style and could easily be sung by Elvis in his early days. The track is a keeper despite Feathers sounding like he's having a hiccupping fit.

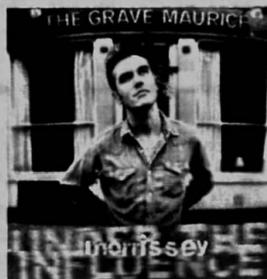

Wasden's track, "De Castrow," lines up well with the other rockabilly-sounding stuff, but it also has a country edge, giving you the feeling of riding alongside John Wayne or drinking brandy with him around a lonely campfire.

Not surprisingly, Moz has included a strong string of such New York artists as the Ramones, the New York Dolls, and Patti Smith. The Ramones' track, "Judy is a Punk," recently resurfaced on the soundtrack for The Royal Tenenbaums, but it fits well on Under the Influence. The song is a sucker punch of bouncing melody and catchiness. The New York Dolls' "Trash" is included, and it is a backyard stomper. The glammy rock of the Dolls has been a widely known favorite of Morrissey's, and this cut is a good representation of the Doll's sneering, cross-dressing, "I don't give a shit" attitude. Patti Smith offers a spoken-word-sounding version of "Hey Joe" that is resounding and powerful.

Other notable tracks are T-Rex's "Great Horse," Jimmy Radcliff's "(There Goes) The Forgotten Man," Nico's "All That Is My Own," and Ludus' "Breaking the Rules."

This is a nice compilation of old standbys and new obscurities that the Moz has taken upon himself to share with his fans. Although many are bummed that Morrissey's sugary-sweet vocals aren't anywhere on the record, it's probably for the best. His liner notes are a good read and sure to give you a new sense of understanding for this depressing, international playboy.

All in all, it's worth the import pricing (the only way it's available). Unfortunately, that kid down the hall with the 52x burner can't help you score a copy — the CD is copy-protected and won't play on your computer.

On the trail of the perfect love song

BY ALISSA VAN WINKLE
THE DAILY IOWAN

He is armed with a guitar and songs that speak to and from the heart.

His name is Mason Jennings, and if you combined all of his whole-hearted, bitterly ironic songs, it just might form the perfect love song.

"I think the perfect love song is always just ahead of me, something to strive for," he said. "Maybe if you string all my songs together on the day I die, maybe that'll be close."

The 28-year-old songwriter seems to echo the words and voice of apparitions of the past, such as Bob Dylan and Nick Drake. Jennings, however, is reluctant to make such comparisons.

"Those are the guys I'm aiming at when I write. They've written the best stuff and I'm just trying to hold my own with them," he said.

He has hit stages in Australia and Europe. In 2002, he sang the national anthem at a Minnesota Vikings game, and in 2000, he won the Minnesota Music Award for best songwriter.

"I guess I am just trying to learn about myself better and get engaged with life and the world around me," Jennings said.

This true old soul is no stranger to love — at age 12, he made a song for his first girlfriend and gave it to her on a tape.

He was born in Hawaii and grew up in Pittsburgh, where he attended the same high school as Christina Aguilera. He started playing drums at age 12 along with bass, piano, and electric guitar, and he stuck with guitar because "it was what moved me the most."

He began writing and performing songs at age 13; at 16,

Mason Jennings' search for the perfect love song brings him to Gabe's on Friday. The Hawaii native has written more than 300 songs.

he dropped out of school to pursue his love.

In Minnesota, Jennings caught the eye of a major label and decided to put it off to give himself time to develop as an artist.

His first, self-titled, album (1998) was recorded in his living room on a four-track; he played all the instruments. He then came up with his own label, Architect Records.

"I use the name Architect because it gives me a feeling of starting from the ground up," Jennings said.

Mason's second record, Birds Flying Away (2000), was his first effort with a band. His third record, Century Spring (2002), was written right after Mason got engaged.

"I think of that as a record of love songs and songs about finding your place in the world," he said.

His fourth album, Simple Life, is an Internet-only CD of a collection of old songs. Mason said he had a lot of songs that he didn't want to forget.

With more than 300 songs and four albums, this love-struck wanderer promises to entertain, if not construct the perfect love song in the process.

Jennings will be at the Mill on Friday with No River City. Tickets are $12 and can be purchased at the Mill, the Record Collector, and from Ticketweb.

The Pulliam Journalism Fellowship

Jump-start your newspaper journalism career with a solid program that boasts four Pulitzer Prize winners among its alumni — the Pulliam Journalism Fellowship. The Fellowship offers myriad career opportunities; in fact, a Pulliam Fellow from our first class of 1974, Barbara Henry, now serves as president and publisher of The Indianapolis Star.

Now entering its 31st year, the 2004 Pulliam Journalism Fellowship helps build a bridge from the classroom to the newsroom. Fellows are assigned to The Indianapolis Star or The Arizona Republic in Phoenix for 10 weeks each summer as staff reporters. We award 20 Fellowships annually. The stipend is $6,500.

Our Fellowships are open to college sophomores, juniors and seniors pursuing a career in newspaper journalism. We will be accepting applications for our Summer 2004 program as of September 2003.

Visit our Web site at <http://www.indystar.com/pjf> or e-mail Fellowship director Russell B. Pulliam at russell.pulliam@indystar.com for an application packet. You also may request a packet by writing:

FILM REVIEW

by Dave Micevic

The Order

When: 12, 2:25, 4:50, 7:15, and 9:40 p.m.
Where: Cinema 6 ★ out of ★★★★★

For those of you who, like me, thought the trailer for The Order made the film look a bit lackluster, allow me to put your suspicions to rest: The Order is as bad as, if not worse than, you'd expect it to be. It's not that it's tasteless or insulting as much as it is just altogether ineffective and unmemorable. Even now, I struggle to recall a single moment of the film that has stuck with me through the night. It came and went from my memory as quickly as it will no doubt come and go from the theaters.

This is one of those horror films that, much like Polanski's The Ninth Gate, attempts to build tension rather than go for the quick shocks. The problem with the tension it attempts to create is that it 1) ultimately leads to a rather disappointing climax and 2) is built in a plot structure so muddled and murky that any potential suspense is replaced with confusion.

Heath Ledger plays Alex Bernier, a rogue priest who is a Carolingian — which by the movie's definition is a priest who battles demons and the undead, not that any of that actually happens in the movie. Instead, Alex spends his time uncovering the details of his mentor's mysterious death in Rome. The church claims it was suicide and so he won't receive a proper burial, but Alex thinks otherwise, and in a peculiar scene, contracts the help of two nuns to bury the priest in sacred ground against the church's orders.

This sets the stage for the only terrifying moment in which two demonic children watch Alex from beyond a gravestone. He, of course, takes out his cross and casts them back to hell. Immediately following their departure, Alex's supposed friend, Thomas Garrett, a priest from Paris, mind you, suddenly appears in this cemetery in Rome at God only knows what hour. Their conversation seems casual enough considering Alex has just confronted a demonic presence. "What passed through here?" "Demon spawn in the guise of children." Good answer.

Strangely enough, these demon spawn play absolutely no discernible role in the film — which is also the case with most of the characters. Peter Weller plays a cardinal who contracts Alex to hunt down a man known as the sin-eater (a person who can purge people of sins by taking them in himself), Shannyn Sossamon plays Mara, a woman who, in the past, was exorcised by Alex and supposedly had tried to kill him at one point. Benno Furrnann plays William Eden, the sin-eater.

These characters have little to no relevance in the story — least of all Mara, whose presence is to fill the role of the Dr. Watson character to whom everything must be explained. Of course, as the film progresses, very little actually is explained. At one point, a certain character betrays another, but the motivation is displaced under the weightiness of the story. Another character dies at one point, and, while I believe it was meant to be a touching moment, it passes us by just like every other bleak and empty moment in this film.

There wasn't a single actor here that wasn't phoning in her or his performance. Sossamon is better suited for an episode of "Buffy," Weller has even less range than he did as Robocop, and Ledger looks just plain bored. I imagine at one point the film's concept was filled with passion, but something went wrong. Maybe Brian Helgeland, who wrote and directed this waste, wasn't exactly sure what kind of film he was trying to make. One thing's for sure, though — the film is definitely not entertaining in any capacity, and no doubt the blank stares of the actors will be met with the blank stares of the audience.
