Faculty Senate nixes fewer football scholarships, visits

BY ALEX LANG
THE DAILY IOWAN

The UI Faculty Senate on Tuesday rejected a proposal that would have reduced the number of football scholarships from 85 to 72 and the number of campus visits from 61 to 51.

The proposal was unable to gain a second after the initial motion to discuss the plan, ending consideration before discussion could begin. The Faculty Council had formally endorsed the plan on Sept. 9.

The 15 percent reduction in scholarships would have saved

$150,000, according to the proposal. If it had passed in the Senate, the measure would have been forwarded to the NCAA for consideration.

However, the Senate did pass a motion that endorsed a framework completed by a national group seeking comprehensive reform in collegiate athletics. Several Big Ten and Pac-10 schools, among them Indiana and Oregon, have endorsed the framework, written by the Coalition on Intercollegiate Athletics.

UI makes move on health plan

BY SARAH FRANKLIN
THE DAILY IOWAN

A new health-insurance policy, instituted at the UI on Sept. 3, allows employees to use the money they contribute to their health spending accounts to purchase over-the-counter products.

The policy, which applies to all health-insurance providers, was set by the Internal Revenue Services and the Treasury Department.

The health spending account is an optional program available to UI employees that allows them to put a certain portion of each paycheck into an account used to cover health-care expenses, said Richard Saunders, the director of the UI Benefits Office. Employees determine the amount of money — which is not taxed — that goes into their health accounts.

Employees use out-of-pocket funds to purchase medication and then are reimbursed through the health account by submitting their receipts and a reimbursement form. The catch is that at the end of the year, employees lose any money remaining in the account, Saunders said. He added that the money left over in the account at the end of the year goes back to the university, which uses the money to fund the health-account program.

"I am not sure why [the change was made]," he said, adding that a number of formerly prescription drugs, such as Claritin, have become over the counter. "Now, for a lot of people with health insurance, it costs them more to buy these drugs."

Under the new guidelines, any item that can be used to treat an injury or illness can be purchased with health-account funds, including aspirin, cold remedies, sunburn lotion, and bandages.

Expenses in previous health-accounts included deductibles, physician fees, dental expenses, medical equipment, and prescription drugs.

Preventative medications, vitamins, and supplements are still not allowed unless a doctor prescribes them, Saunders said.

Stephen Dunbar, a professor in the College of Education who is enrolled in the health-account plan, said the most expensive medications he buys are prescription drugs. He would benefit from the ability to use the money in his health account for over-the-counter medication, he said.

"I think it would [benefit me], based on the amount of Claritin I bought last night," he said.

Life in the drag lane

A UI JUNIOR LOVES THE ROAR OF MOTORCYCLES, THE SMELL OF BURNING RUBBER

BY INDIA MORROW
THE DAILY IOWAN

Crouched on top of his 1982 Suzuki GS 550 L motorcycle as the ground shakes beneath him, Ben Wantland breathes in his favorite smell — air that reeks of tire smoke and alcohol fuel — and mumbles to himself, "one and two and three and go."

The 6-5 UI junior waits for the light to turn green, anticipating the quarter-mile race before him, and guns the throttle, tearing off with an opponent at his side. The difference between winning and losing, he knows, could be as little as one one-thousandth of a second.

Wantland, a pre-business major, recently scored the title of 2003 Cedar Falls Raceway Motorcycle champion, where he conquered the strip in 14.637 seconds, reaching 93.09 miles per hour.

"I've always wanted to race and be successful at it, and I guess I've succeeded," the 20-year-old said with a shrug.

His next stop is the Division 5 ET Finals next week in Cordova, Ill., the second-largest drag-race body in the nation.

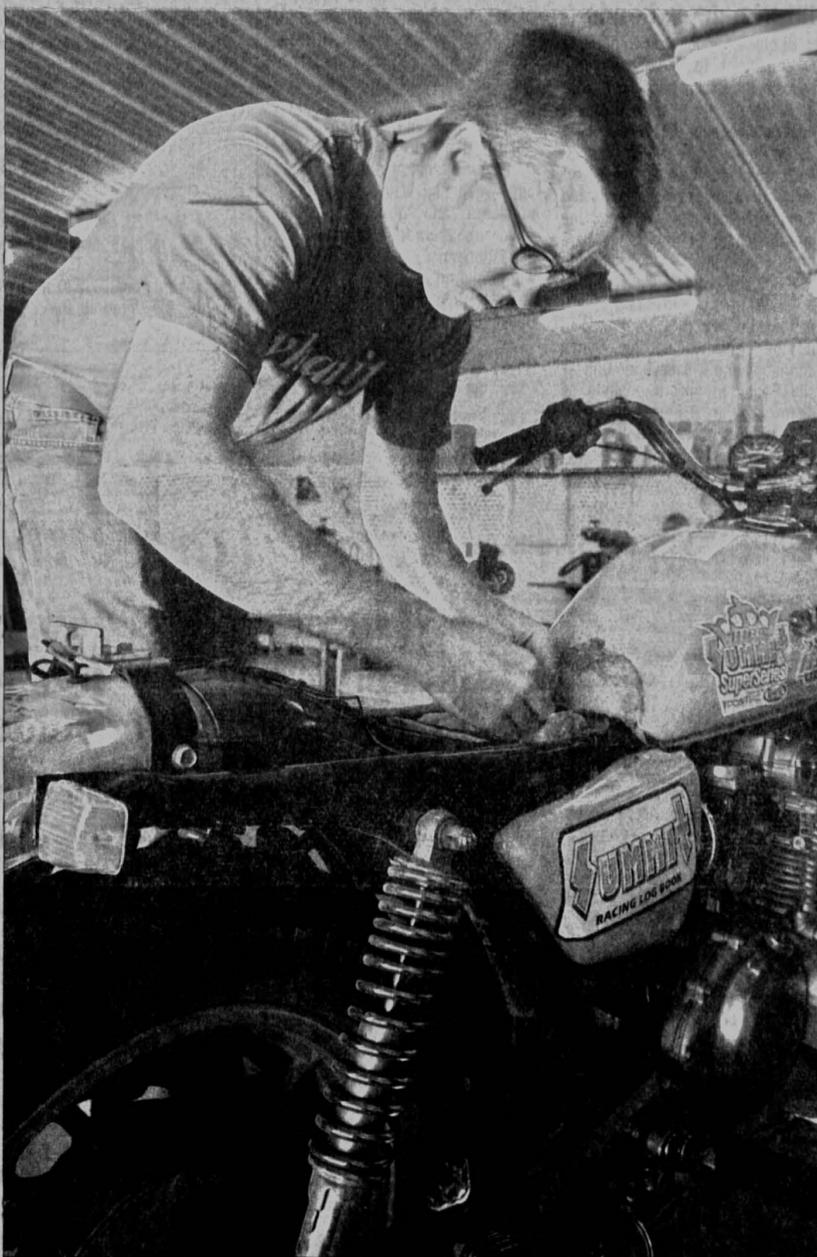

Wantland's parents didn't even know their son was racing motorcycles until two weeks ago.

"My wife and I were just flabbergasted when he told us," said Larry Wantland, the biker's father, adding that no other words could describe their reaction.

"His doing this really scares me," he said, attributing the fear to his 38-year background as a driver's education teacher.

The son Larry Wantland knows is "one of those people who does everything well," someone who could be anything: an engineer, actor, or track star.

"But it's just that, all of that is worthless if he ever hits the ground at high

Annan, Chirac rebuke U.S. on unilateralism

BY DANA MILBANK
WASHINGTON POST

UNITED NATIONS — President Bush got an earful of complaints from world leaders Tuesday but responded with a mild defense of his actions in Iraq and an understated request for U.N. help.

The White House was expecting a cool response as the president appeared before the 58th-annual gathering of the U.N. General Assembly. And the assembled leaders, many of whom opposed the U.S. invasion of Iraq, gave him just that. They warned that the Iraq war was a threat to the very purpose of the United Nations.

U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan, in an unusually impassioned and sharp condemnation of U.S. policy, said "unilateralism" was an assault on the "collective action" envisioned by the late president Franklin D. Roosevelt and the other U.N. founders.

"This logic represents a fundamental challenge to the principles on which, however imperfectly, world peace and stability have rested for the last 58 years," the secretary-general said. "My concern is that, if it were to be adopted, it could set precedents that resulted in a proliferation of the unilateral and lawless use of force, with or without justification."

Annan, who took the rare step of beginning his address in French rather than English, warned: "Excellencies, we have come to a fork in the road. This may be a moment no less decisive than 1945 itself, when the United Nations was founded."

French President Jacques Chirac, speaking shortly after Bush, called the war "one of the gravest trials" in U.N. history and said it "undermined the multilateral system."

In an extended critique of Bush's policy of pre-emptively attacking emerging threats, Chirac said, "In an open world, no one can live in isolation, no one can act alone in the name of all, and no one can accept the anarchy of a society without rules. There is

North Liberty chief back on duty after shooting

BY CHOYON MANJREKAR
THE DAILY IOWAN

North Liberty Police Chief Jim Warkentin resumed active duty Tuesday, nearly a month after he shot and killed a motorcyclist he was chasing.

His position had been left vacant after authorities launched an investigation into his involvement in the Aug. 28 chase. Warkentin shot 25-year-old Coralville resident Kyle Wasson after a six-minute pursuit that ended near Wickham Elementary School.

Warkentin has undergone a fitness-for-duty evaluation and deemed ready to return,

Warkentin resumes position as police chief according to press release that offered few other details. North Liberty City Administrator Brian James, who authorized the decision, declined to specify what the evaluation entailed.

"A fitness-for-evaluation procedure is self-explanatory — this is protocol procedure," he said.

North Liberty city officials have not had the opportunity to review the investigative file compiled by the state Division of Criminal Investigation and the city of Coralville.

Transcripts of conversations during the chase released earlier this month show that Warkentin contacted Johnson County dispatchers at 11:50 a.m. Aug. 28, alerting them of the pursuit. He began to chase Wasson on suspicion of a traffic violation. The chase, which began in North Liberty,

Apartment complex suffers damage in fire

No one was injured in a fire that melted the vinyl siding off an apartment Tuesday, causing approximately $20,000 in damage.

A van, a surrounding fence, and a shed containing extra bedding supplies caught on fire from a nearby Dumpster outside 538 Olympic Court Apartments around 6:20 p.m., according to the Iowa City Fire Department.

"It was intense enough to melt all the vinyl siding off the apartment building that was three stories high and 30 feet away from the Dumpster," said Iowa City Fire Battalion Chief Ron Stutzman, adding that authorities have not determined the cause of the fire.

Seventeen Iowa City firefighters arrived on the scene at 6:25 p.m.; the fire was extinguished 20 minutes later.

Apartment manager Cris Kinkead said residents immediately cleared all three floors.

"We double checked to make sure everyone was out of the apartment," she said, adding that she also checked the master sheet of residents to ensure that everyone was safe.

POLICE LOG

Frank Atta Mensah, 31, Coralville, was charged Sept. 18 with possession of stolen property stemming from an alleged Feb. 12 incident at his residence. In February, officers were called to Mensah's home to investigate suspicious activity, court records show. A UPS driver had been delivering several packages to the home, some of which were addressed to Mensah but to an address near his home. Others had Mensah's address but someone else's name. Officers also allegedly located $9,288.44 worth of merchandise purchased with a stolen credit-card number in his home.

David Michael Frantz, 24, 331 N. Gilbert St., was charged Sept. 22 with assault causing injury stemming from an alleged Sept. 19 incident at the First Ave. Hy-Vee. According to court records, Frantz got out of his car at the Hy-Vee parking lot after a verbal confrontation with a pedestrian. He then allegedly punched the pedestrian in the left side of the face, resulting in pain and bruising.

Man charged with burglary after attack

A man is in custody following an alleged burglary in Iowa City that left two people injured.

Ronnie K. Matlock, 43, address unknown, was charged with first-degree burglary Tuesday stemming from an alleged early morning incident at 1131 Third Ave.

According to court records, dispatch advised officers that a fight was in progress at the residence. Upon arrival, the two residents advised police that Matlock broke the apartment door and was armed with a baseball bat. Matlock had allegedly assaulted the two by striking them numerous times with the baseball bat, causing lacerations and broken bones, court records show.

A hearing is set for Oct. 3 at 2 p.m. Matlock is being held at Johnson County Jail on $20,000 bail for Floyd County.

Matlock has a criminal record that includes a previous felony, three OWIs, and six simple misdemeanors in Iowa.

UI names 2 profs as interim dept. heads

UI officials appointed two university employees to serve as interim heads of the anatomy and cell-biology department, the family-medicine department, and the Family Care Center.

Gerald Jogerst, an associate professor of family medicine, will head family medicine and serve as the interim leader of the Family Care Center beginning Oct. 1, according to a university press release.

He will hold the positions while a nationwide search is conducted to fill the spots vacated by Cynda Johnson, who will leave the university Friday to take a position as dean of the Brody School of Medicine at East Carolina University in Greenville, N.C. During Johnson's tenure, Jogerst was the associate head of family medicine.

John Engelhardt, a professor of anatomy and cell biology and director of the Gene Therapy Center for Cystic Fibrosis and Other Genetic Diseases, will head anatomy and cell biology. The appointment will be effective Jan. 1, 2004.

Engelhardt will replace Mary Hendrix, the Kate Daum Research Professor of anatomy and cell biology, when she leaves to become president and director of the Children's Memorial Institute for Education and Research, affiliated with Children's Memorial Hospital and Northwestern University in Chicago.

Vilsack vows to lower drug cost

BY MIKE GLOVER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Gov. Tom Vilsack says he'll look to Canada to save on prescription drugs for state employees and senior citizens enrolled in the state's Medicaid program.

Vilsack said on Tuesday that he'll launch a study of how much the state could save by buying prescription drugs in Canada at prices far below what's charged in the U.S.

"I know that Iowans and Americans are somewhat mystified that you can purchase drugs in Canada for significantly less than you can in America," he said in a speech to the Older Iowans Legislature, a group that meets each year to vote on issues important to seniors.

The state spends roughly $300 million a year on prescription drugs, roughly $90 million of that for its senior citizens.

If a survey shows Canadian drugs would be considerably cheaper, officials would approach drug companies and insurance carriers and pressure them to provide drugs at the lower price, Vilsack said.

If that fails, officials will pressure the federal government to lift its ban on importing drugs, he said.

"We want to negotiate the lowest possible cost for these drugs," he said.

Illinois officials have taken a similar step, and Vilsack said that if enough states follow suit, the pressure to lower prescription-drug costs will be impossible to resist.

"People will raise the risk

There are some significant steps that need to be taken. One thing we can do is control the price of prescription drugs.

— Gov. Tom Vilsack

issue," Vilsack said. "Risks can be managed if there are indeed risks."

He said the move is simply applying pressure on drug companies to respond to market demand.

"We can go to them and say we now know what a reasonable cost is for these drugs, and that's the cost we want to pay," the governor said.

He doesn't need legislative authority to conduct the study or switch the method it uses to obtain prescription drugs. He can take those actions as part of his administrative effort to control health-care costs.

The governor said that reducing the amount spent on prescription drugs would make more money available for other programs for seniors.

"There are some significant steps that need to be taken," Vilsack said. "One of the things we can do is control the price of prescription drugs."

The state already has a program where officials identify commonly prescribed drugs and negotiates reduced prices on those drugs.

Coralville OKs fine for false alarms

The Coralville City Council passed an amendment Tuesday night that will allow the city to fine residents for false fire alarms in addition to other changes designed to improve public safety.

The ordinance, which sailed through unanimously, passed its first reading at the Aug. 26 council meeting and its second on Sept. 9. It also includes a regulation stating that people who install fire alarms will be required to get a license.

The West Des Moines City Council has enacted a similar ordinance under which the first three false fire alarms in one calendar year are free, while the fourth false alarm results in a $50 fine.

Once the ordinance takes effect, fire officials will design new regulations for false fire alarms, which will be given to contractors when they receive a license.

The ordinance also requires that apartments and other such buildings have a box for the keys of all locked areas, which would facilitate access for firefighters. Buildings will have six months to comply with the key-box regulation.

Council OKs Plan for deer sharpshooters

The Iowa City City Council passed a resolution approving a 2003-04 Deer Management Plan, which provides $100,000 to continue to implement long-term deer management measures.

Though education on reducing deer-vehicle collisions and preventing deer from damaging property are included in the plan, controversy in the council and the community has centered on the use of sharpshooters to kill up to 200 deer during the winter.

The resolution passed 5-2. Councilors Irvin Pfab and Steven Kanner questioned the success of the program and argued that the money could be more effectively spent on local — and nonlethal — measures.

Accused bomber to receive 4 more months in hospital

BY TODD DVORAK
ASSOCIATED PRESS

IOWA CITY — A former college student who, police allege, planted pipe bombs in Midwestern mailboxes will spend four more months in the custody of federal doctors, a judge ruled Tuesday.

Luke Helder, 21, has spent the last six months at the Federal Medical Center in Rochester, Minn., where psychiatrists are trying to determine whether he is fit for trial.

U.S. District Judge Mark Bennett lengthened his stay at least another four months based on a report filed by doctors and the agreement of attorneys.

The report will not be made public, Bennett said during a brief hearing held via teleconference.

"Hopefully, [in four months] we'll be able to set it for trial, pending what the doctors tell us," the judge said.

Helder, a former student at the University of Wisconsin-Stout, is accused of placing pipe bombs and handwritten, rambling notes in 18 rural mailboxes in May 2002.

Six people were injured in a five-day spree that began with explosions in west Illinois, spread across Eastern Iowa, and prompted the U.S. Postal Service to order rural mail carriers not to deliver to closed mailboxes.

Bombs and notes were also discovered in mailboxes in Nebraska, Colorado, and Texas, though none detonated. Helder was ultimately captured outside Reno, Nev.

He was brought back to Iowa where exploding bombs injured six people — four mail carriers and two residents — and the first federal charges were filed.

For the first several months Helder was held in the Linn County Jail in Cedar Rapids. He was transferred in May to the center in Rochester, located just 17 miles from the home of his parents, in Pine Island, Minn.

Helder has pleaded not guilty in to charges of using an explosive device to maliciously destroy property used in interstate commerce and using a firearm to commit a crime of violence. He faces up to life in prison if convicted.

His attorney, public defender Jane Kelly, filed papers last year stating she will use the insanity defense if the case ever goes to trial.

No date has yet been scheduled for the next hearing in the case.

Farm-worker bill proposed

BY NICK ANDERSON
LOS ANGELES TIMES

WASHINGTON — Senior Republican and Democratic lawmakers on Tuesday proposed an immigration-reform bill that would allow an estimated 500,000 undocumented farm workers to become legal U.S. residents, a breakthrough for a movement that had stalled after the 9/11 terrorist attacks.

If enacted, the bipartisan plan would be one of the most significant steps to revise immigration law since Congress approved a sweeping amnesty for illegal immigrants in 1986. But the latest initiative narrowly targets approximately half a million farm workers — a small percentage of the estimated 8 million to 10 million illegal immigrants — and is, therefore, less comprehensive than some of the proposals the United States and Mexico discussed in 2001, only days before terrorists hit the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

To qualify for temporary legal status, lawmakers said, workers would have to prove 100 days of agricultural employment in the 18-month period that ended Aug. 31 and meet certain other conditions. Then, to obtain a "green card," which signifies permanent residence in the United States, they would have to show 360 days of additional farm work over the next six years.

Experts said many of those expected to enroll in such a program — the people who toil in the fields to harvest fruits and vegetables — either live or work in California and are natives of Mexico or Central America.

Democrats have long sought to aid migrant workers. To win Republican backing, the bill also takes several steps to revise, and possibly expand, a guest-worker program that allows growers to import temporary labor from abroad. This program, viewed with skepticism by domestic labor leaders, currently is of modest size and is used mainly in the Southeast.

The new legislation, embraced by both agricultural businesses and farm workers, stands a good chance of becoming law under a Republican president who has said he wants to approach immigration "in a way that recognizes reality" and treats foreigners in the United States "with respect."

4 indicted in club stampede

BY ROBERT E. PIERRE
WASHINGTON POST

CHICAGO — The owners and promoter of a nightclub where 21 people died in a stampede seven months ago were charged Tuesday with involuntary manslaughter.

Authorities said the men jammed five times as many people into the E2 nightclub than should have been allowed and ignored the crowding to turn a profit. When a nightclub security guard tried to break up a fight using pepper spray, authorities said, hundreds of people were trapped in a single stairwell as they tried to flee the club in a panic.

"It was a disaster waiting to happen, and the disaster did happen," said Cook County State's Attorney Richard Devine at a Tuesday news conference. "These individuals knew this was a dangerous situation. For their recklessness, they are accountable under the law."

Indicted were co-owners Calvin Hollins Jr. and Dwain Kyles, Marco Flores, the promoter of the night's entertainment event, and Hollins' son, Nicky Hollins, the floor manager that night.

The lawyer for Hollins Jr., Thomas Royce, has said his client had no link to the company that owned and operated E2. Royce called the indictment "overreaching."

Immediately after the deaths, Chicago city officials charged that club owners ignored safety codes and had opened the club in violation of a city order. The complaint also alleges the owners violated a July 2002 court order demanding that the building's second floor be closed. The owners' lawyers have argued the order referred only to balconies above the second floor.

Prosecutor Robert Egan, reading from the indictment, said the owners willfully packed the club with approximately 1,200 people on the night of the stampede; its capacity was 240.

Police referred the case to Devine in March without suggesting charges. The nightclub was above the Epitome restaurant, popular with black entertainers and politicians. Kyles is a former lawyer for the city with longtime connections to the Rev. Jesse Jackson. Several prominent civic leaders, including Jackson, pushed for a thorough but independent investigation to determine whether city building inspectors shared responsibility.

Devine said Tuesday that neither the city nor the security guard who discharged the pepper spray was found criminally responsible.

The defendants, who have repeatedly expressed their remorse for the deaths, said they were surprised by the charges, which were returned by a grand jury on Sept. 18. Joseph Lopez, a lawyer for Flores, said after a preliminary hearing Tuesday that the criminal charges were unwarranted.

"My client is terrified," Lopez said. "All of the defendants are scared."

Kyles told reporters, "My heart sincerely goes out to these victims and their families, and I simply look forward to my day in court."

Lakesha Wilson, a cousin of stampede victim Nicole Rainey, said outside the courthouse that she thought the bail was too low.

"I think they should go to jail," Wilson said.

Duke rally denounces bigotry after frat mocks Mexicans

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Protesters at Duke University rallied against a fraternity that promoted a party with fliers that looked like expired green cards, T-shirts with the image of a drunken Mexican, and a mock border-patrol checkpoint at the door.

"Everything that I am — my family, customs, culture, and language — was violated," said Sandra Sanchez, who helped organize the demonstration Monday at Duke Chapel. "The stereotypes of drunk Mexicans and border crossing was hurtful."

Several speakers told approximately 75 students, professors, and administrators that the Sept. 13 Sigma Chi party inflamed their long-held belief that Duke has ignored its Latino students, who make up around 7 percent of the school's enrollment.

Sigma Chi President Marc Mattioli, who said he is Latino, apologized and said the fraternity was not bigoted.

He said the fraternity was talking with leaders of the Latino community to develop an education program for fraternity members and Duke community.

The party "was designed to be a lighthearted celebration of the Mexican tourism scene," Mattioli wrote in a letter published in Duke's student newspaper, the Chronicle.

"In no way was it intended to imply a political or social statement about Mexico, Mexican-Americans, immigrants, or immigration policy," he wrote. "Obviously, it did not come off as such."

Court restores California recall vote

BY WILLIAM BOOTH AND RENE SANCHEZ
WASHINGTON POST

SAN FRANCISCO — The federal appeals court that had postponed California's recall election reversed itself Tuesday and decided to permit the vote to proceed as scheduled on Oct. 7, leaving candidates just two weeks to campaign in the tumultuous and still unpredictable race.

An 11-member panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit unanimously agreed that the public's right to vote in an election that has nearly reached the finish line outweighs the risks of using outmoded and potentially faulty punch-card ballot machines in six urban counties in California that have large numbers of minorities.

In a 12-page decision, the judges said that to halt an impending election under any circumstances would be "extraordinary" but to interfere with one in which more than 500,000 absentee ballots already have been cast would be "unprecedented."

"There is no doubt whether the right to vote is fundamental," the court wrote. "But a federal court cannot lightly interfere with or enjoin a state election."

Lawyers for the American Civil Liberties Union, who filed the lawsuit that led to the election's postponement last week, expressed bitter disappointment with Tuesday's ruling and warned again that approximately 40,000 votes may never get counted. But the ACLU said it would not appeal the decision to the U.S. Supreme Court.

No legal obstacles remain to holding the recall in two weeks, and the campaign has entered critical and exceptionally tense days — for Democratic Gov. Gray Davis and all of the top candidates vying to succeed him if voters oust him. Polls suggest that support for the recall is declining but that Davis is still likely to be removed from office. California Republicans, who

UI takes action against over-the-counter costs

The university has approximately 7,000 employees participating in the health-account program. Saunders expects that number to increase during the next enrollment period, which is slated for later this fall.

"I think it will grow because employees will have the ability to save a little," he said. "Still, people who don't use medical care a lot, particularly young people, may not enroll."

One UI employee not enrolled in the program said the addition of over-the-counter medications is not enough to change his mind.

"The key barrier for me is that it doesn't carry over from year to year. Including over-the-counter medication isn't enough of an incentive," said Kenneth Culp, an associate professor of nursing.

Although there is no monthly limit on the amount of money an employee can use, Saunders cautions participants to use their money wisely.

"[Employees] have to reasonably use their judgment so they don't spend it on minor things and have a lot of aspirin and then need a root canal at the last minute."

Cool U.N. reception for Bush

no alternative to the United Nations."

Bush, who did not sit in the chamber for Annan's address, played down the contentious issue of Iraq and emphasized the good works of the United Nations. He devoted nearly half his speech to unrelated issues — weapons proliferation and sex trafficking — and made only a gentle request for assistance in Iraq. "Now the nation of Iraq needs and deserves our aid, and all nations of goodwill should step forward and provide that support," he said.

Bush spoke as if the divisions over Iraq were largely in the past. He spoke of the militants in Iraq as "against all humanity" and suggested moving beyond the disagreement over the war. "[T]here was, and there remains, unity among us on the fundamental principles and objectives of the United Nations," he said. "We are dedicated to the defense of our collective security, and to the advance of human rights. These permanent commitments call us to great work in the world, work we must do together. So let us move forward."

The president defended U.S. actions in Iraq, but he suggested those were in defense of U.N. wishes, not in violation of them. "[B]ecause a coalition of nations acted to defend the peace, and the credibility of the United Nations, Iraq is free, and today we are joined by representatives of a liberated country."

Bush played down the difficulties in Iraq, saying its people are "meeting hardships and challenges." He said the war has made the Middle East safer and the world more secure. He also hailed the actions of U.N. humanitarian services in Iraq and spoke of progress training police, rebuilding schools, hospitals, power plants, and other infrastructure.

He said a new U.N. Security Council resolution would expand the U.N. role in Iraq, but he suggested that role would be in developing a Constitution, training civil servants, and conducting elections — not in leading the occupation. In an implicit rejection of the rapid transfer of power to Iraqis that France has proposed, Bush said, "The process must unfold according to the needs of Iraqis, neither hurried, nor delayed by the wishes of other parties."

Bush was scheduled to have two days of individual meetings with leaders from France, Germany, Pakistan, India, and other countries.

crossed Mesquite Drive and Muddy Creek Lane.

Wasson, who was riding a red motorcycle, collided with a police car. He was killed by a gunshot wound to the torso that was fired by Warkentin in a physical scuffle that ensued between the two.

A parallel investigation into the death is also being conducted by the DCI and the city of Coralville. James says he has not received any notification of the status of that report or the date of its release. The city will not comment on the incident until more information is received.

Lt. Rob Hanson, the public-information officer for the Iowa Department of Public Safety, said he did not know if the findings of the report would have any bearing on Warkentin's position. "We wouldn't think it would have any effect on the person involved; the decision to use the information will be left up to the agencies," he said.

UI Faculty Senate rejects decreasing scholarships

FACULTY SENATE

The framework seeks to improve academic performance among athletes and looks at the financial issues of college athletics. It would address such issues as reducing scholarships nationwide, raising the initial eligibility requirements, and reducing the commercialization of collegiate athletics.

UI German Professor Judith Aikin said that endorsing the framework does not change anything at the university but means that the school would participate in the nationwide study.

"This is a very important motion," said history Professor Katherine Tachau, the Senate vice president, adding that there is a "big problem" with profit in athletics nationwide. "It is our job to speak for the academic values at the university," she said.

One Senate member, Jim Nepola, a professor of orthopaedic surgery, said his main concern was that passing the framework motion would be misconstrued, making the university look as though it didn't care about athletics.

"In principal, it is a great idea," he said. "In practice, it is not a great thing to do."

The Senate also passed a second motion to send the framework to the UI Board in Control of Athletics to have the group evaluate which issues the UI already conforms to and those it views as problematic. The Athletics Board is made up of faculty, staff, and students.

Members of the football program could not be reached for comment.

Also at the meeting, Kay

Gfeller, a co-chairwoman of the provost search committee, said that the university is still looking for applications and nominations for the position. The committee will start to go over applications in the near future, and it expects to name 12 semifinalists, she said. After the semi-finalists are named and interviewed, five to six finalists will be named sometime in early December — each announced one day before her or his official campus visit.

The search committee asked faculty to help with the search by giving more nominations and, once the semifinalists are chosen, that faculty members try to persuade candidates to come to the university.

"No provost candidate wants to work for a lethargic faculty," Gfeller said.

UI junior lives in the really, really fast lane

speeds while riding that thing."

Ben Wantland said he considers racing "one of those things that you can cross off your list before you die."

"Racing is totally instinct and intrinsic for me, since I'm not exactly a stranger to engines on wheels," he said.

At 12, Wantland's father gave him his first motorcycle, a red 1982 Kawasaki AR80 he rode around the 19 acres surrounding his Chariton, Iowa, home.

After eight years with oil under his fingernails, Wantland calls himself a "total gear head" because he loves building and fixing the two cars, motorcycles, truck, and boat he owns — anything with an engine — which he bought cheap, fixed, and painted.

The brown-haired Wantland works on his fleet of machines at a maintenance shop at Quail Creek Golf Course in North Liberty, where he works as a mechanic.

"I've pulled quite a few all-nighters there," he said.

Ken Arkema, Wantland's boss and the golf course's superintendent, said he doesn't mind Wantland using the shop because "it pleases me to see such a young man with the abilities that he has, so I want to encourage him."

Wantland spends much of his time tweaking the orange Suzuki motorcycle he races.

The bike "is the true essence of motorcycling," he said about the model he bought for $500 and fixed with more than $2,000.

Shawn Morgan, a good friend of Wantland's, has watched the souped-up cycle's transformation.

"It's just phenomenal what he's done to the bike since he got it in 2001," Morgan said. "It's special that Ben not only has the desire to race, but he also has the mechanical knowledge to make his bike the best that it can be."

Although Wantland loves motorcycle racing, the 210-pound student said he plans on retiring the bike and switching to something with four wheels. "There's more future in racing cars."

Sometime soon, he said he plans on adding his dream car to the collection — a '66 Chevrolet El Camino.

"If I were born in the late-50s, I would have been perfect for the times," he said.

POINT/COUNTERPOINT

Will women rule the world?

So, someone finally got it ... women outperform men in all levels of education. The women on The Daily Iowan editorial board would like to give a sincere thank you to the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development for this profound statement, which is only around 10,000 years overdue. Way to go, ladies — I knew we could do it.

Oh, but we'd also like to tell the men of the editorial board to make sure that they don't overexert themselves trying to write their part of the point/counterpoint, because we all know that women apparently apply themselves a little more diligently to their tasks — as shown by our higher GPAs and SAT scores.

According to the study, women outnumber men in college graduation statistics and also have higher expectations for the future. This leads us to the question, "How does a guy show that he's planning for the future?" Answer: "He buys two cases of beer."

Considering, however, that women still aren't getting paid as well as men for their scientifically proven higher educational talents, I guess the men can afford that extra beer.

It's really no wonder, though, that females' verbal skills have continued to pass that of males, because the majority of a guys' time from the age of 5 is dedicated to playing video games, fuming to themselves, and breaking the silence only to banter with each other about their superior proficiency and yell at the television when they can't pass level 2.

Overall, we'd just like to say the idea of men ruling the universe needs to be relinquished and the proverbial torch passed on to the more deserving of the sexes.

So keep sitting on your couches, boys, drinking that beer and looking mindlessly at your TVs while we continue our ascent towards total world domination.

Well, well, well. So some French think tank reports that women exceed men in academic performance at every level of education. Congrats ladies, you've truly come a long way. We male members of the editorial board wonder if there's any connection between this story's placement on the front page and the current editor being a female and all?

According to the study, in developed countries, including the United States, women outperformed men across the board, from grade school to university. There's one problem, however: Did the study take into account a little thing called effort?

We men, admittedly, are a lazy species. Given the choice of studying for a third-grade spelling test or trying to beat Zelda, we usually choose the latter. This aversion to studying does not end in grade school, either. In high school, we forfeited studies to try to beat the new and improved Zelda for Game Cube. We have the smarts, you see, it's just that our priorities are a little mixed up.

The study also says that women outnumber men in U.S. colleges and universities. That's all fine and dandy, but ladies, you're forgetting a crucial responsibility you have. You see, barring a discovery for transsexual DNA-modifying surgery, we men will forever be unable to reproduce by ourselves. Some of us have tried but ultimately failed. We worry about the fate of humanity if women continue to succeed academically and forget about their procreative duties.

As far as the discrepancy between men's and women's salaries goes, it's truly a travesty. Maybe the gap can be closed the next time a woman is elected president.

Playing the real insiders' game

Former membership has its privileges. The House gym. Access to the House and Senate floors and adjoining cloakrooms. Attendance at the Republicans' and Democrats' weekly policy lunches. Free parking on the Capitol grounds and unrestricted entry at a time when tightened security has ended ordinary citizens' freedom to roam the halls. All these would be unremarkable, if cushy, retirement perks that lawmakers ensure for themselves were it not for the way they are being abused. As detailed by the Washington Post, the access afforded former members gives many of them a powerful — and lucrative — leg up in their new day jobs: lobbying their former colleagues. Thus, former Arkansas Republican Rep. Jay Dickey, fresh from his paddleball game, could hand Rep. Zach Wamp, R-Tenn., fresh off the treadmill, proposed language sought by one of Dickey's lobbying clients in an appropriations bill. Dickey, climbing onto the dais at a House Transportation Committee session, could sneak a look at proposed legislation to make sure it included a provision favoring that client. Or he could enter a private room off the Senate Finance Committee chamber to assess the chances for a dividend tax cut important to another client, Stephens Inc.

These privileges are an artifact of a long-gone era when, for the most part, members returned home once their government service ended. Now, many former lawmakers stick around as lobbyists. The perks need to be revisited.

In a small nod toward seamliness, Congress voted in 1989 to require lawmakers to wait a year before directly lobbying their former colleagues. Would it be too much to ask, as well, that ex-members who choose to trade on their past service give up their membership perks? After all, they probably can afford to join a gym that's not subsidized by the taxpayers. This editorial appeared in the Washington Post.

RARELY WITHIN THE same sentence are the terms "hip-hop" and "elderly gentleman" found, save, perhaps, as in "The elderly gentleman told his grandson to turn down that damn hip-hop record." This assumption is based on the facts that senior citizens, as a demographic, are neither enamored with the musical stylings of such artists as P. Diddy nor are aware that vinyl records have long since gone the way of the typewriter (which, incidentally, some of them might very well utilize to compose angry letters to this newspaper lambasting my pandering to stereotypes of the aged as crotchety, out-of-touch prune-juice bibbers).

JESSE HELLING

But, as the aforementioned grandson said to his grandfather following the latter's 785th retelling of his contribution to the Battle of Guadalcanal, let's get to the point. Earlier this month, 78-year-old Tony Benn, liberal British gadfly and former member of Parliament, released an album of speeches he made through the course of his career set to "ambient urban music," which, as far as I can gather, is mediaspeak for hip-hop.

Rap aficionados will, no doubt, notice a few departures from certain stock elements of the genre. References to "play-uhz" and "gettin' yo freak on" are eschewed in favor of diatribes against the euro and closures of British coal mines, and, with the possible exception of former Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, the "biznitch" factor of Benn's brainchild is decidedly low.

Politicians who moonlight as musicians are not just a British phenomenon, by the way. On this side of the pond, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, has released several albums of patriotic and religious-themed music, a fact that might very well account for his June 17 avocation of developing technology that could remotely destroy of computers found to have downloaded materials illegally.

And speaking of frightening, long before he attained the rank of attorney general, John Ashcroft released a compilation of original gospel songs ever-so-cleverly titled "Gospel (Music) according to John." Were I a music critic, I might be tempted to point out that not since the last time I slammed my cat's tail in the refrigerator door had I heard anything so melodic as the timeless Ashcroft classic, "Blessed be that City." But, no, I shall refrain.

Having attained the ripe old age of 21, I am not, by any standard, an authority on the proper habits and life choices of those in the so-called twilight of life. But, as a so-called writer, I applaud not only Benn's creative vision, but his transcending of traditional classifications of his age group.

This is not to say, by any means, that I advocate such transcendence as a clear-cut policy. While Benn was promoting his album in London, across the Channel in Paris, Yoko Ono, former wife of the late John Lennon, reprised a 1964 performance titled "Cut Piece," in which the now 70-year-old artist invites members of the audience to literally cut off a fragment of her dress and send it to a loved one, all in the name of world peace.

Like, wow. Having missed the '60s, I can only assume that such exhibitions were an inevitable outcome of prevailing social ideals and rampant drug use. But, philistine that I am, it is unclear to me as to how the sight of a disrobed septuagenarian would aid in hastening peace in our time.

Public nudity excepted, I invite all readers to take an opportunity to chip away at the perceived notions of what a member of their age group is like. Teens and 20-somethings, sport a pair of plaid polyester pants, hitch them up to your armpits, drive down to the local bingo hall, and regale your contemporaries with stories about "the good old days." Seniors, ride a skateboard downtown, strike up a spirited game of Hacky Sack, and regale your contemporaries with impressions of the cop that tried to confiscate said skateboard.

For, in my opinion (and I doubt I'm alone here), looking outside one's own perspective will advance the cause of peace far more than looking at Yoko Ono's naked body. ■

The importance of being earnest

When I picked up my Daily Iowan on Tuesday morning, I found out that I was in "hot water." Understandably, I asked the question, "With whom?" To my dismay, that question was never answered. I was the subject of the article, "Kerry work lands Dem leader in hot water."

Because DI reporter Jeffrey Patch didn't make his intentions clear when interviewing me, I would like to take this opportunity to defend myself. I am the president of the University Democrats, and we are a strong presence on this campus. We work to get Democrats elected and to facilitate involvement for students. That is my mission, and that is what the group members elected me to do.

Let's make this clear — I am caucusing for John Kerry, but to say that this is front-page news suggests a severe lack of news on this campus. I have not once used my capacity as the Dems leader to further Kerry's presence on this campus.

The attention that I gave to the Kerry rally was equal to that that I gave to the Chrissy Gephardt event, the Wesley Clark breakfast, and the Dick Gephardt event in Coralville. At all of these events, the U Dems had a significant presence.

I wholeheartedly agree with a Republican. The College Republican leader's comment about supporting Kerry as Megan, but not as U Dems president, is completely true and is exactly what I have been doing.

From now on, I encourage the DI and specifically Jeffrey Patch to find news instead of making it.

Megan Heneke
University Democrats president

A hidden agenda?

I have never found an article in The Daily Iowan offensive until today. However, it is necessary to address the DI about the article published in the Sept. 22 issue concerning Megan Heneke, the University Democrats president.

Heneke, as a citizen of the United States, has a right to publicly support any candidate of her choosing.

The aim of U Dems is to support the Democratic ideals on this campus — supporting any candidate, public or private, is something each and every member of the U Dems executive council has a responsibility to do. The article in the DI is searching out a controversy, which is entirely irresponsible.

It leads me to ask the question, what is the agenda that Jeffrey Patch and the DI have in mind?

In response to President David Skorton and UI Student Government President Nate

Green not publicly supporting a candidate, they should not choose a candidate. They both represent a majority of differing opinions, and their jobs on this campus are not to forward political ideas but to run major nonprofit organizations. Also, a fact that many overlook is that if a nonprofit 501(c)(3) organization (which I believe both institutions qualify under some form of this tax-exempt status) publicly supports any political candidate, it can lose this status all together.

Heneke is what is called an "opinion leader" in the world of politics. They are everywhere, and they always influence people. The DI needs to recognize its role as one too and remember the impartiality that true journalism attempts to embody.

Roy Waller obsessively cleans the windows of his apartment with Windex in Matchstick Men, a film about a con man and his daughter.

Matchstick Men is a three-tiered, meticulously crafted divergence for Academy Award-winning director Ridley Scott from the epically violent pictures that made him famous. Should we worry? Not in the least.

Roy Waller (Nicolas Cage) is much more than an obsessive compulsive phobic. Sure, Roy will go into convulsions if you walk across his rug with your shoes on or become abrasive if you forget to wipe down the phone receiver when finished talking, but this sickness alone does not constitute his full persona. Because, although he would prefer to spend the day inside his Lysol-scented home cleaning the bottom of his glass coffee table to taking a walk outside, Roy is also a con-man (con-artist, he would say) and quite a good one at that.

In to help Roy with his grifting enterprise is the young and excitable Frank Mercer (Sam Rockwell), who is the yin to Roy's yang. Sloppy and care-free about everything but making money, Frank is Roy's learned protégé, and business is booming. Claiming that they take nothing that isn't given to them, the swindlers work a tax-refund ring convincing people that they need a water purifier. They then play the role of government officials in order to get the checking-account numbers from their marks. The job definitely pays the bills, but both Roy and Frank are looking for that one big score to truly put them in the money.

Unfortunately, the only way that Roy can function at his job is if he takes his medication, and when he accidentally knocks his bottle of pills into the garbage disposal, he has no choice but to meet with Frank's psychiatrist acquaintance, Dr. Klein (Bruce Altman). Klein refuses to prescribe Roy medication until he has first sat down for some therapy.

Therapy seems to help Roy, and as Klein delves further into Roy's past, it becomes apparent that Roy may have had a child in a past marriage. The child would now be 14, and Klein believes that it is imperative to Roy's mental health for him to meet this teenager.

Roy discovers that he does, in fact, have a daughter named Angela (Alison Lohman), and when he picks her up after school, there is an instant bond between father and daughter that begins to make Roy question his role in the world. But for Frank, the question becomes even larger — how will Roy's relationship with his newly found daughter affect the money-laundering con the duo is trying to pull against wealthy American businessman Frechette (Bruce McGill), which promises the con-men the score they have been looking for?

It's safe to say that Cage has been making solid career choices over the past couple of years — bringing to the screen three incredibly memorable characters in the Kaufman twins in Adaptation and here with his Roy. There are similarities here between Cage's character and Jack Nicholson's character in As Good as it Gets, but there is an embodiment by Cage in Matchstick Men of the sickness and neurosis that Nicholson didn't even touch. Cage is so good it's scary, and he should be well-rewarded come nomination time later this year.

But Matchstick Men could only have gone as far as its supporting actors; thankfully, Rockwell, Altman, and Lohman are more than up for the task. Rockwell continues to build on the promise he showed as a leading man in last year's Confessions of a Dangerous Mind, allowing himself to shine even against Cage's brilliant performance. Altman is perfectly cast as the psychiatrist; he brings a credibility and a mystery that is essential for making the final act of the film work. Lohman's performance as the 14-year-old daughter is also superb, not the least because she is 24, but seems to be no more than 16 throughout the film.

Matchstick Men, which is based on the book by Eric Garcia, is a hip and remarkably engaging film. Although the "gotcha" ending, which has become an essential plot element for con movies, may seem a bit too contrived and unbelievable, by the time that it comes, the audience members have enjoyed themselves so thoroughly that it doesn't seem to be a problem. Matchstick Men may truly be a Ridley Scott film: Fun and remarkable, it leaves the audience yearning for more.

U.S. attack enrages Iraqi villagers

BY HAMZA HENDAWI
ASSOCIATED PRESS

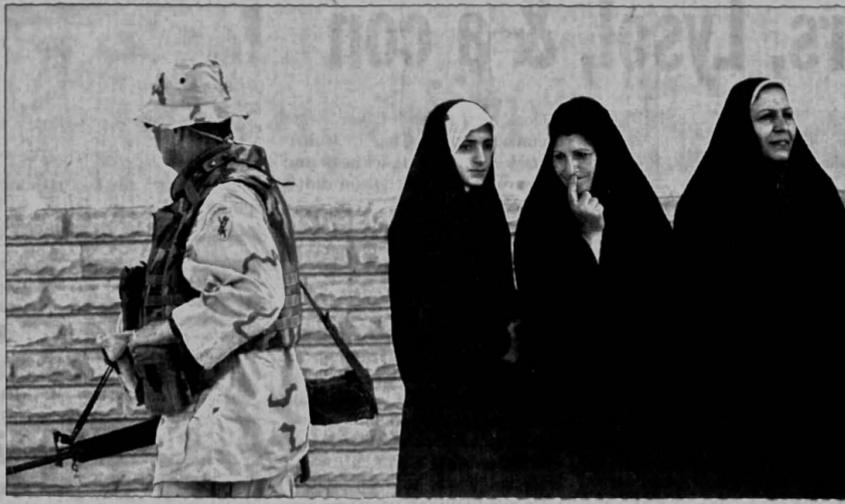

AL-SAJR, Iraq — U.S. soldiers backed by helicopters firing rockets attacked a farmhouse Tuesday, killing three Iraqis and wounding three others, villagers said. The U.S. military said soldiers followed suspected guerrillas into this village after a patrol was ambushed.

Afterward, five craters ranging up to 10 feet wide and 3 feet deep could be seen in the courtyard of the farmhouse. A sixth rocket had crashed through the roof. The yard was strewn with broken glass, and a wall on one side of the building was pocked with bullet holes.

The fighting in Al-Sajr, a small village west of Baghdad, highlighted the difficulties of combating guerrillas in populated areas and was likely to deepen resentment of the U.S. occupation in an already volatile region.

"There never was any trouble in our village, and the Americans have never been inside it," one of the wounded, retired army Sgt. Abed Rasheed, told the Associated Press at Fallujah General Hospital. "This is not about overthrowing a government or regime change."

took place here but said it knew of only one death — that of a guerrilla fighter. A military spokeswoman, Spc. Nicole Thompson, said that after firing on an American patrol, the attackers ran into a building. She said the soldiers then called in air support.

Villagers insisted no one had fired on the Americans. They did say U.S. soldiers detained three young men during a security sweep Sunday. Residents said the Americans appeared in the village around 1:30 a.m. Tuesday and began firing with light weapons. Villagers later heard aircraft approaching.

Soon afterward, six missiles struck the home of Ali Khalaf Mohammed, killing the 45-year-old farmer. Two of Mohammed's sons, aged 11 and 9 years, were wounded.

Villagers said two other men — Saadi Fayad and Salem Ismail — were killed after they rushed to Mohammed's house to offer assistance.

Mohammed's 48-year-old brother, whose first name is also Mohammed, said a U.S. officer came to the house about 9 a.m. Tuesday to inspect the damage. He said the officer, speaking through an interpreter, apologized and said, "We are here to protect you."

U.S. soldiers detain AP employees

BAGHDAD (AP) — U.S. soldiers detained an Associated Press photographer and driver on Tuesday, handcuffing them, forcing them to stand in the sun for three hours, and denying them water or use of a telephone.

Soldiers from the 2nd Battalion, 70th Armored Regiment, 1st Armored Division detained photographer Karim Kadim and driver Mohammed Abbas, both Iraqis, near Abu Ghraib, west of Baghdad, and kept their guns trained on them, despite repeated attempts to explain they were journalists.

The troops were looking for explosives planted in the area.

"We identified ourselves from the very beginning as press, even before we approached the troops. I was asked not to take any pictures, and I didn't. We were told to leave, and we walked away, and then one of them shouted at us to come back," Kadim said.

An armored personnel carrier arrived moments later. Three soldiers disembarked and aimed their guns at the two men.

"A sergeant ordered us to raise our hands and face an APC. We were searched, and they took away all my camera gear. Then our hands were tied behind our backs, first with rope, then with plastic handcuffs," said Kadim, extending his wrists to show marks left by the cuffs.

The two were made to stand for three hours in temperatures of 110.

Abbas said the soldiers accused them of participating in the insurgency attacking U.S. troops.

"You know about the explosives here; you are part of the people who put them here," Abbas quoted one soldier as saying.

SOLD OUT

David Sandstrum, the UI director of athletics ticket operations, announced this weekend that Iowa's home game against Penn State on Oct. 25 is sold out. The Hawkeye game against Illinois on Nov. 1 is approximately 200 tickets short of a sellout.

Earlier this week, Sandstrum announced that Iowa's contest against Michigan, on Oct. 4, is also sold out.

He added that there are a limited number of single seats available for the Penn State game and that tickets for the regular-season home finale against Minnesota, on Nov. 15, are still available. Those tickets can be purchased at the Athletics Ticket Office in Carver-Hawkeye Arena and by telephone at 1-800-IA-HAWKS.

Bradley added to Ray Guy Award watch list

Nate Kaeding's foot isn't the only one on the Iowa football squad to draw attention around the nation.

Punter David Bradley was added to the 2003 Ray Guy Award Watch List Tuesday by the Greater Augusta (Ga) Sports Council. The award is given to the best punter in Division I-A.

On December 11, the three finalists for the award will travel to Orlando, Fla. for the Home Depot College Football Awards Show, with the winner presented during a telecast on ESPN.

Bradley, a junior from San Diego, has 18 punts for an average of 41.2 yards per kick so far this year.

His longest punt went for 62 yards, and he has pinned opponents inside the 20 yard-line seven times.

DETERMINATION, STRENGTH, AND COURAGE HAS PROPELED SARAH ARENS THROUGH MANY UPHILL BATTLES — BOTH ON AND OFF THE CROSS-COUNTRY COURSE.

By Jason Brummond
THE DAILY IOWAN

Cross-country is a physically grueling and mentally demanding sport. Competitive runners need to be at their top fitness level while maintaining the right mindset in preparation for a race. But even the toughest course is no match for what Sarah Arens has gone through.

The Iowa fifth-year senior has battled through tragedies and injuries during her Hawkeye tenure. As a freshman, she suffered through stress fractures. During her sophomore year, her brother Ben died in a car accident. She broke her tibia, the inner and thicker bone on the leg between the ankle and knee, during her junior season, and her boyfriend of more than a year, Seth, is battling cancer.

"She's just overcome all of her personal tragedy but also certainly a lot of injuries and things that would set you back," said Iowa women's cross-country coach Layne Anderson.

"I think for a lot of people who would be in her position, they would kind of throw in the towel and say, 'Maybe this just isn't worth it.'"

Despite obstacles that could have hindered her, Arens has persevered and thrived as a runner. The Remsen, Iowa, native has finished as the top Hawkeye in 18 of 20 meets she has competed in during her

Freshman WR Davis to start

BY DONOVAN BURBA
THE DAILY IOWAN

Forget the injury bug. On the eve of the Big Ten season, the Iowa Hawkeyes find themselves stricken by a veritable plague of pain.

Coach Kirk Ferentz confirmed at his weekly press conference that wide receiver Ed Hinkel won't play Saturday at Michigan State after suffering a groin injury in the first half of last weekend's win over Arizona State. The loss means redshirt freshman Calvin Davis will take over a starting slot alongside Ramon Ochoa.

Davis saw his first action against the Sun Devils, catching three passes for 51 yards.

"He'd probably be the first to tell you that he wasn't the most confident guy out there, and that's natural," Ferentz said about Davis. "He hasn't played a lot, he missed some significant time not playing as a junior in high school, and ... last spring he didn't practice much."

"I really think now that this is going to open things up for him and give him the confidence he needs to be able to play successfully."

Davis, a state-champion sprinter at City High, could also take over Hinkel's role as kick returner. He returned kicks in high school, but he hasn't had the chance yet as a Hawkeye.

"I'm looking forward to [returning kicks] also," Davis grinned. "That's something I've always wanted to do, especially in the atmosphere that we have. If I get an opportunity to get back there, I'll definitely enjoy it."

James Townsend and Eric McCollom were pulled off the redshirt list prior to the Arizona State contest to bolster a receiving corps already weakened by Mo Brown's ankle injury, and both should see time Saturday. Townsend made two catches for 7 yards, and McCollom, a quarterback by trade, lined up as wide receiver on a few plays.

Ferentz said he'd explore several options with McCollom, who played wide receiver for two years in high school before moving under center.

"I have pretty quick feet," McCollom said. "I'm not a real fast guy, but I can change directions pretty quickly."

Hollywood ending for Hawkeyes?

Listening to Kirk Ferentz speak about his team, you half expect him to don a hooded sweatshirt, sprint to the top of the Kinnick Stadium steps, and bellow, "Heeey yo, Adrian!"

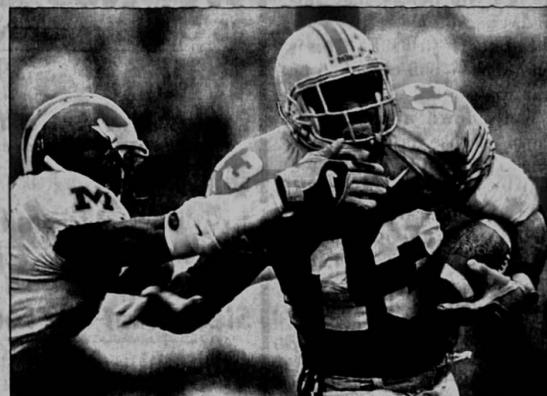

Ferentz takes on a Rocky Balboa-like attitude when speaking of his team. He pounds into the media and his players a mindset that the Hawkeyes are underdogs. That's the way they like it, and it's them against the world.

Clarett sues NFL over draft eligibility

BY RUSTY MILLER

Former Ohio State tailback Maurice Clarett has moved on from college football controversies by suing the NFL.

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Suspended Ohio State tailback Maurice Clarett sued the NFL on Tuesday, asking a judge to throw out a league rule that prevents him from entering the 2004 draft.

The lawsuit contends that the NFL rule prohibiting players from being drafted until they have been out of high school for three years violates antitrust laws and harms competition.

Clarett, who rushed for 1,237 yards and led Ohio State to a national championship as a freshman last season, wants U.S. District Judge Shira Scheindlin to declare him eligible for the 2004 draft — or require the NFL to hold a special supplemental draft sooner.

Under current rules, he is not eligible for the draft until 2005.

"Had Clarett been eligible for the 2003 draft, it is almost certain he would have been selected in the beginning of the first round and would have agreed to a contract and signing bonus worth millions of dollars," according to the lawsuit filed in federal court in New York.

The NFL says it will fight any challenge to the rule.

"We do not believe that this lawsuit serves the best interests of Maurice Clarett or college football players generally, but we look forward to explain-

Mercifully, it's almost over for the toothless Detroit Tigers

BY LARRY LAGE

DETROIT — The embarrassment on the field is just about over for the Detroit Tigers, a season of futility coming to a merciful end. Then, of course, they'll have to deal with the jokes for years to come.

As this once-proud franchise closes in on the modern record of 120 losses, it can find solace in one other piece of history:

The team they seem destined to pass, the 1962 New York

Mets, won the World Series just seven years after setting the standard for bad baseball.

So, yes, perhaps there is hope. "We lost a lot of games, but we can't say it was a complete failure," said Tigers rookie pitcher Jeremy Bonderman, who has 19 losses. "A lot of young guys, including myself, have gotten a lot of experience."

Most of it not good, though.

Going into Tuesday night's game against the Royals in Kansas City, the Tigers had lost 10 games in a row. They broke the American League record for losses with 118 on Monday and needed to win five of their remaining six games to avoid the historic mark.

Alan Trammell, a former star shortstop with the Tigers in his first year as manager, planned to miss the games Tuesday and Wednesday to attend the funeral of his mother, who died on Sept. 20.

"In light of my situation, it will be difficult to come back, but I will," Trammell said. "I'm going to continue to stand here and be accountable."

Inside IOWA Football

A popular saying tells us that it's "better late than never." That certainly rings true for fifth-year senior Ramon Ochoa, who made the most of his first career start at wide receiver on Sept. 20 against Arizona State.

Ochoa

Although Ochoa had proven himself as a prominent kick returner, running a Buffalo punt 70 yards for a score earlier in the year, it seemed that a starting wide receiver spot would not be within his grasp.

But after Mo Brown went down against Iowa State, everything changed.

Brown's injury left many Hawkeye fans feeling that Iowa would have to depend on its running game.

Instead, all three Iowa touchdowns — two of which were caught by Ochoa — came through the air Sept. 20.

The California native has been taking it all in stride so far and seems eager to do it all again on Saturday in East Lansing.

DI reporter Justin Kenny talked to Ochoa about his nickname and pregame meals.

DI: It didn't look like it at the game on Saturday, but did you have any jitters about making your first start at wideout?

Ochoa: No, no, no. I didn't have any jitters.

DI: What is your favorite route to run?

Ochoa: Anything that gets me in the end zone.

DI: Do your teammates and coaches call you "Razor," too, or is that just a media thing?

Ochoa: No, it's the whole team.

DI: How did that nickname get started?

Ochoa: It started back in junior high or high school. There was a wrestler — Razor Ramon. And my name's Ramon, so they called me Razor. Edgar, one time, he slipped it out when we first got here.

From then on, I was Razor.

DI: So were you a big WWF fan when you were younger?

Ochoa: No, I wasn't a big fan. When I was a kid, I guess I liked Ultimate Warrior and Hulk Hogan.

DI: What's in your CD player right now?

Ochoa: I got some rap. I like Fifty [Cent] or Youngbloodz.

DI: Do you have a pregame meal you like to stick with?

Ochoa: I eat the same meal every Friday night — steak, some spaghetti, rice, and corn.

DI: Who was your sports hero as a kid?

Ochoa: Bo Jackson.
DI: Favorite movie?
Ochoa: It's either Major League or The Program.
DI: You've just caught a punt during a live practice. Who do you least want to see coming at you?

Ochoa: I'd have to say [Matt] Roth.

DI: Who would you like to see coming at you?

Ochoa: That's a tough question ... you, man.

DI: You're good friends with Mo Brown. What did he tell you before last Saturday's game?

Ochoa: He just said, "This is your shot — ball out." And he was excited.

Well, down and excited. Down because he wouldn't be able to play, but he was excited that it was a big opportunity for us to step up and play.

DI: Favorite song?

Ochoa: "It Ain't No Fun," from Snoop Dogg.

DI: If you got rich, what's the first thing you'd buy?

Ochoa: I'd probably get something for my parents. Either a new house or a new car for my parents.

Wood kayos Cincinnati

CINCINNATI (AP) — Kerry Wood struck out 12 and limited the Cincinnati Reds to one infield single in seven innings Tuesday night, leading the Chicago Cubs to a 6-0 victory.

Wood (14-11) walked Russell Branyan with one out in the seventh, and Wily Mo Pena broke the no-hit bid with an infield single. Jason LaRue then flied out to left — the only ball the Reds got out of the infield off Wood. The right-hander left after the inning, having thrown 122 pitches. He walked four batters.

Kyle Farnsworth pitched a perfect eighth, and Mike Remlinger gave up a single before finishing the two-hitter.

Ramirez led the Cubs' offense with a solo homer and RBI single off right-hander Scott Randall (2-4).

Ramirez led off the fifth with his 27th homer, and the Cubs sent eight batters to the plate for four runs in the sixth to take control.

Blue Jays 8, Devil Rays 5

TORONTO (AP) — Carlos Delgado hit his 299th homer, and Toronto's starting pitcher was ejected for the second-straight night as Blue Jays beat Tampa Bay.

Josh Towers was ejected for throwing behind Aubrey Huff, who hit his 32nd home run in his previous at-bat in the fifth inning.

Braves 2, Expos 0

ATLANTA (AP) — John Smoltz got his first save since coming off the disabled list after Rafael Furcal's two-out single in the eighth inning broke a scoreless tie, and Atlanta defeated Montreal.

Gary Sheffield added a run-scoring double off Javier Vazquez (13-12), who dominated the Braves for seven innings before tiring in the eighth.

Mets 1, Pirates 0

NEW YORK (AP) — Al Leiter pitched his first complete game in slightly more than a year, and Tony Clark drove in the only run as New York broke an eight-game losing streak with a victory over Pittsburgh.

New York had lost 16 of its previous 17 games.

Yankees 7, White Sox 0

CHICAGO (AP) — Jason Giambi hit a grand slam in the ninth inning, and Jose Contreras struck out a career-high nine as the New York Yankees clinched their sixth-straight AL East title with a victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Marlins 5, Phillies 4

MIAMI (AP) — Jeff Conine's three-run homer off Kevin Millwood highlighted a five-run seventh inning, and Florida rallied to beat the fading Philadelphia.

The Marlins moved two games ahead of the Phillies in the wild-card race with five games to go.

Cardinals 5, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Woody Williams mastered Milwaukee for the second time in a week as St. Louis Cardinals beat the Brewers.

Williams (17-9) scattered three hits over seven innings, walking none and striking out six.

Twins 4, Indians 1

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Kenny Rogers came within one out of a shutout, and the Minnesota Twins clinched at least a tie for the AL Central title with their 10th-straight victory, beating Cleveland.

career, including the last 13 races. She credits a change in attitude for her achievements.

"I think if anything [is important] in life, it's learning how to get through things, not necessarily defeating them," the (nearly) 23-year-old said. "It's been a lot of perseverance and determination, and I've just tried to focus on the positives."

Anderson constantly praises Arens as a great role model for the younger team members and as an athlete whom any coach would love to have.

He believes that she's a perfect example of someone who can overcome almost anything and be successful by working hard and remaining patient.

"She has the work ethic that you're looking for in all of your kids — just the way she approaches her day, her preparation for running, and her academics," the coach said. "That's the kind of kids we want in this program, and I think the young ones are always looking to the top person for guidance."

This season, Arens won the first Iowa Invitational, and she was named Big Ten Athlete of the Week for her efforts.

She finished second overall at the Iowa State Open, and Anderson believes she can qualify for the NCAA championships.

Arens said she has grown a great deal as a person. She no longer worries about the little things in life, and she thinks she does a much better job of prioritizing. Anderson feels the Academic All-Big Ten honoree is unique ing to the court both the very sound reasons underlying our eligibility rule and the legal impediments to the claim that was filed," NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said.

Clarett was suspended from the Buckeyes for at least a year after an investigation determined he broke NCAA bylaws concerning benefits for athletes and lied to investigators.

The lawsuit argues the NFL rule "is a restraint of amateur athletes who were strangers to the collective-bargaining process."

Ferentz continues his blockbuster saga

eyes when Ferentz repeatedly says, "We're just not that good ... Michigan's got Braylon Edwards, right? Before that, they had David Terrell. We've got Ramon [Ochoa] or many of his other David-vs.-Goliath statements. Maybe using some Hollywood-style rallying cries is fitting for his Iowa squad, though. After all, the last year-and-a-half has seen the Hawkeyes make a Rocky-like meteoric rise from the depths of the Big Ten to the Deluxe Apartment in the Sky that is the top of the conference standings.

At every turn in Kinnick the last couple years, you see cinematic spectacles. Ferentz was the first to notice the frenzy of the Hawkeye contingent on Sept. 20.

"It was electric. Lights add to it a little bit also. There was a real electricity in the crowd," he said.

A chill ran up my spine as I watched thousands of students wave yellow-and-black towels during Iowa's 21-2 roundhouse of Arizona State last week. It was reminiscent of 1987 and 1991, when Homer Hankies were waved frantically by 45,000 crazed fans of my beloved Minnesota Twins.

"I liked that touch," said Ferentz, comparing it with a favorite team of his back in the '70s. "It was like the Terrible Towels back in Pittsburgh."

The game was goose-bump-inducing for another reason as well: We're in the middle of a mystifying run by the Hawkeyes the likes of which we've rarely seen.

Wrap your mind around these stats for the man in the lead role of this drama. During Hayden Fry's prestigious career in Iowa City, the best run he ever had over any 19-game stretch was 16-3. After Iowa's beat-down of ASU on Sept. 20, Ferentz's troops have gone 18-3 in their last 21 games and have won 13-straight regular-season games. Oscar-worthy credentials, indeed.

The climax of this blockbuster of a Hawkeye run may have come early Sept. 20 in the north end zone with the Hawkeyes staggering after being punched in the mouth by a safety and a turnover off the right arm of their quarterback. With fans clamoring for Drew Tate to replace Nathan Chandler and visions of a four- or five-loss season bouncing around in their heads, Jovon Johnson backed the Sun Devils to the ropes with an interception of ASU's Andrew Walter.

With that lightning-quick uppercup by Johnson, the Hawkeyes began to bludgeon the Devils as if they were Clubber Lang, and they had little, if any, pity for this fool.

This Hawkeye saga may yet spill over onto Bourbon Street for a back-alley brawl at the Sugar Bowl. Most insiders theorize that even with a victory over their rival Iowa State (a.k.a. "Apollo Creed") in 2002, Iowa would have been on the outside looking in at the BCS national championship game because of a relatively weak nonconference slate. Assuming Walter snaps out of the punch-drunk state he was in at Iowa City and leads the Sun Devils to the solid season most expect, Iowa's BCS rating could get the requisite boost to send thousands of Hawkeyes flocking to lol in the bayou's Bourbon Street with beer and 60-ounce Hurricanes.

Lamented before this season that it would be next to impossible for the Hawkeyes to duplicate last season's miraculous run. To my amazement, the magic that hung over Kinnick Stadium in 2002 has decided to stay put for a while.

Yes, it appears this Rocky-like sequel has a chance to better last year's. Just do us a favor, Hawkeyes, and keep that damn "Sico the Robot" out of this one.

E-mail/DI reporter Kelly Beaton at: kelly-beaton@uiowa.edu tans. Walker sprained his knee during practice on Sept. 17 and didn't suit up against the Sun Devils. Eric Rothwell takes over for Walker, with Sam Aiello and Pete McMahon lining up at right tackle and right guard, respectively.

Booster rumors slammed

Ferentz firmly dismissed a rumor, first published in Sunday's Kansas City Star, that an Iowa booster offered high schooler Tony Temple housing, food, and use of a swimming pool. The article did not name the booster, nor did it give any corroborating evidence other than Temple's word. "It sounds like the National Enquirer; that's what that article read like to me," Ferentz said. "I know people like reading that crap ... I'd really like to see some hard evidence, and if there is, let the NCAA deal with it. But it's much ado about nothing."

Early exit 'terrible'

Ferentz criticized Ohio State running back Maurice Clarett's decision to sue for early entry into the NFL, calling the move "really terrible."

"Statistics show that NFL players with college degrees earn more money and have longer careers," said Ferentz, citing his experience as an assistant coach for the Cleveland Browns and Baltimore Ravens. "I think it's really unfortunate, but it's a sign of the times, and a lot of the things that are going on in these times aren't for the best of the individuals involved."

Sanders, Young updates

Strong safety Bob Sanders has an outside chance of playing Saturday, Ferentz said. Sanders has missed the previous three games after undergoing surgery on his right foot, but he started rehabbing aggressively last week. Running back Albert Young's recovery from a broken bone in his leg is progressing, but Ferentz was unsure whether the true freshman had regained enough confidence to merit playing time.

Two charged in killing Giants fan outside Dodger Stadium

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two men were charged with murder Tuesday in the shooting of a man after a baseball game last week at Dodger Stadium.

Manuel Hernandez, 33, and Pete Marron, 19, both of suburban South Gate, were each charged with one count of murder, said prosecutor Kerry White. The Sept. 19 parking-lot shooting of 22-year-old Mark A. Antenor Cruz, a San Francisco Giants fan, occurred during an argument with Los Angeles fans. It was not immediately clear what the disagreement was over. The Giants won the game, 6-4. Hernandez was to be arraigned

Broncos burst out of the starting gates

BY JOHN MARSHALL
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — Beating Cincinnati and San Diego was a nice way for Denver to start the season. The wins gave the Broncos a little more confidence and new quarterback Jake Plummer time to get comfortable.

But it is not like the Broncos took out the town bully with one punch. It was the Bengals and Chargers, after all. Embarrassing the Raiders on national television? Now that's saying something.

"I'm tired of all these people talking about other teams and how great they are," Broncos tight end Shannon Sharpe said after Denver's 31-10 win Monday night. "They talk about these teams that are supposedly set for the Super Bowl. But you know what? We played like a great team, and we showed what we are all about."

Denver joined Kansas City and Indianapolis as the only teams in the AFC at 3-0. Oakland, last year's AFC champion, fell to 1-2.

OK, so the Raiders have been a shell of the team that lost to Tampa Bay in the Super Bowl last year. Oakland's offense looks like it is stuck in the mud, the defense can't stop anybody, and the penalties are piling up.

But don't tell the Broncos about Oakland's troubles. They're not listening. Not only is Oakland the team Denver loves to beat, the Raiders embarrassed Denver twice last season.

"I'm about as satisfied as I've been in a long time," Broncos defensive end Trevor Pryce said.

Plummer shook off last week's shoulder injury and showed why the Broncos picked him up in the off-season. He threw touchdown passes to Sharpe and Ashley Lelie in the first quarter, then put the Broncos up 21-0 with a 6-yard touchdown run on a bootleg.

He wasn't done. Plummer also took off on a 40-yard run in the second quarter to set up another score. It was the longest run by a Broncos quarterback, six more than any by John Elway.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

This government put my father in a concentration camp for two years. People are being detained today without being charged. This is so close to what happened to my family in 1942.

— Mako Nakagawa of Seattle, whose father immigrated from Japan in 1913 and was imprisoned during World War II. She is one of some 900 people participating in a freedom ride in support of immigrants' rights.

WHAT IOWANS ARE DOING TO SUPPORT THE DEMOCRATIC PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES

By Jesse Ammerman

- Downloading more racy Joe Lieberman photos from the Internet.
- Ordering new crates of Carol Moseley Braun coffee mugs.
- Harboring strange, yet wonderful, emotional attachments to Sen. John Kerry.
- Still holding out hope that Michael Dukakis will launch another thrilling run for the presidency.
- Deciding which body part would be most ideal for new Gen. Wesley Clark tattoo.
- Camping on lawn and staying awake in quivering anticipation of Howard Dean's next visit to Anamosa.
- Wishing husband's Medicare proposals were as sexy as Dick Gephardt's.
- Seeing something on TV about a guy running for president; switching back to "Full House" rerun.

Little University

- How many of every 10 centenarians in the United States are female?
- What chain denied accusations that it had added ephedrine to its Tazo Chai tea?
- What Clinton Cabinet member's dress size did the Chicago Tribune describe as "rangy"?
- How many gallons of water does the average U.S. resident use in a day — 10, 50, or 100?
- Which sitcom did Kurt Vonnegut say he wished he had written instead of his novels?

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stay focused on what's important today. If it has to do with money, health, or getting along with colleagues, perk up and give it your all.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't be afraid to change your look or do something out of the ordinary. That you are daring enough to take the road less-traveled will attract some unusually creative individuals.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Any partner you have in your professional or personal life is likely to take things the wrong way today. Stress will result if you let things escalate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your serious attitude will bring you some unexpected responses from friends. Someone will want you to help her or him with a personal problem because of your genuine compassion and understanding.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If you are between jobs, this is a great day to set up interviews or send out your resumé. You will be able to settle any debts you have incurred. A move may lead to a better position.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Lots of changes are coming your way. This is not the day to meddle in other people's affairs. You will have enough to contend with on your own turf.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be careful while driving or when dealing with an authority figure. Dealing with hospitals or other institutions will leave you feeling uncertain; give yourself time to think.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will make some good friends because of your willingness to help others. Your strong beliefs and convictions will draw people who like what you have to say. Leadership is a natural direction.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You will have regrets if you are too candid about the way you feel. Your personal life may be on shaky ground. Take time to make some changes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Delve into something that interests you. Doors will open that lead to new and exciting concepts. Expand on an idea that you have been considering for some time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Consolidate your debts if you feel you are in financial disarray. Changes in your position can be advantageous. Your creative ability may be just the answer you are looking for.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do what's in your heart rather than say what's on your mind. Actions will speak louder than words. Be careful not to let someone from your past meddle in your personal affairs.
