FBI opens full probe into Wilson/CIA leak

By Colin Anderson

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department on Tuesday announced that it has begun a full criminal investigation into allegations that Bush administration officials used a covert CIA operation, known as "W" or the "plausible deniability" program, to kidnap and interrogate suspected terrorists without violating U.S. law.

"There's just no way to know whether the person has been involved in the program or not," said a senior Justice Department official who asked not to be identified.

The expanding probe, which sharply shifted from a full investigation into allegations that Bush administration officials used a covert CIA operation, known as "W," to a "plausible deniability" program, is a move to full-scale proceedings.

Secretary of State John Kerry, whose department is responsible for the operation, has defended it and says that the program is "a good program.

On Monday evening, according to the sources familiar with the investigation, the senior Justice Department official who asked not to be identified, said that the program is "a good program.

Bush trumped money game over challengers

"Just because there are not enough natural or artificial light on vitamin D does not mean that vitamin D intake would help against colds," said the study's lead author, Dr. Jeffrey Patch, a professor of medicine at the University of Iowa.

"It takes a long time to actually prove that taking vitamin D or by taking a dietary supplement. The body has to convert vitamin D that is ingested from foods to vitamin D that can be absorbed into the bloodstream. The process of converting vitamin D to a form that can be absorbed into the bloodstream takes a long time and it requires the formation of a biochemical reaction in the skin. When sunlight is absorbed by the skin, vitamin D is produced, which is then converted to a form that can be absorbed into the bloodstream.

"One of the fastest-rising cancers is skin cancer, and a recent study published in the medical journal JAMA has shown that people who are exposed to sunlight have a lower risk of developing skin cancer than those who are not. This is because vitamin D is produced in the skin when sunlight is absorbed. The study also showed that taking vitamin D supplements did not have the same protective effect as being exposed to sunlight.

"This is not yet really known whether increasing vitamin D intake would help against colds," said Dr. Jeffrey Patch, a professor of medicine at the University of Iowa. "It is not yet really known whether increasing vitamin D intake would help against colds."

Fallibility kills death penalty, critics say

Another Guantánamo interpreter jailed

BY JOHN MINTZ

WASHINGTON — Federal agents at Guantanamo Bay arrested an interpreter from the Guantánamo Bay prison camps on Monday as he returned from a foreign trip, U.S. officials said.

The arrest of Ahmed Metwalli, a naturalized U.S. citizen who has been a prominent member of the Government, was confirmed by officials with the Customs and Border Protection office of the Department of Homeland Security. They noted that he carried U.S. military identification and that the details about his return were "not public." He was scheduled to be deported from the foreign trip, the officials said.

The arrest of Mr. Metwalli, who has been a close ally of President Bush, comes at a time when the United States is facing a crisis over allegations that its military and intelligence services had been involved in illegal mistreatment of prisoners at the detention center in Cuba.

Mr. Metwalli was arrested on a charge of murder at Guantanamo Bay on Tuesday night, and he was being held at the U.S. military prison on Tuesday.

Mr. Metwalli, 35, is a former Iraqi government official who was arrested in 2002 and has been accused of murder.

A senior defense department official said on Tuesday that Mr. Metwalli had been arrested on a charge of murder.

Mr. Metwalli, who is a former military officer, had been a close ally of President Bush, and he was a key figure in the administration's efforts to stabilize Iraq.

The administration has argued that the move would be more costly because Iraq's rebuilding, and Bush opposes efforts to stabilize Iraq. But the White House has since proposed a plan that would be more costly because Iraq's rebuilding, and Bush opposes efforts to stabilize Iraq.

The administration may have no choice but to support the panel put forth by the Senate Appropriations Committee, which has been struggling with a similar problem because two prominent Republicans are still on the ballot.

"It has become clear to me over the last 48 hours that the only way to stop a Republican candidate in California is to vote for you," he said in an interview earlier Tuesday. "My job is to say to Arnold Schwarzenegger.

Campus is praying to stay the law, but in recent days he has told supporters that he would not object if they decided to oppose the recall or to back a candidate who could prevent Schwarzenegger's victory. "Why can't we just get past their fear of Arnold — we're not going to reelect them," he said.

Campus's spokesman, Tyler Thorpe-Phelps, said Tuesday that the university's decision is a "hard decision." He said that the university's decision is a "hard decision." He said that the university's decision is a "hard decision." He said that the university's decision is a "hard decision.

"It might seem like just a glimmer of an electorate," said Mark Baldassare, the polling director of the California Peace and Public Policy Institute of California, "but it could be a significant one. In a close election, they could make a big difference.

Schwarzenegger's campaign called Huffington's announcement "an important development," saying that it was a sign that the recall was "now a serious threat to the race.

"There's plenty of media attention, but it's clear that voters have had enough of Arnold for her," said Bob Stetman, a Schwarzenegger spokesman. "We don't think she is going to win the recall."

ON THE SPOT

What was the best thing that happened to you today?

Aid to Immigration necessary and proper

The debate over President Bush's request for $7.6 billion in emergency spending for Ireland and Afghanistan is threatening to take a dangerous and irresponsible turn. Democrat and, to an extent, a self-professed Bush admirer, Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle is threatening to filibuster the funding bill in an attempt to starve it of the necessary votes to pass. This is an attempt to stave off a potentially embarrassing defeat in the Senate, for which he and many other senators are in desperate need.

But the real reason for this filibuster is to demonstrate that this administration has no respect for the need for a thorough investigation of the two American military units involved in the Abu Ghraib torture scandal. In the wake of the Abu Ghraib scandal, the Senate has expressed its intent to investigate the behavior of US soldiers in Iraq, and to determine the extent to which the administration knew of the abuses.

Aid to Immigration necessary and proper

The spending request is in response to a recent report by the National Intelligence Council, which found that the United States faces a potential terrorist threat in the form of a "return stream" of foreign fighters who have been trained and deployed overseas and who are now returning to the United States to carry out attacks.

The Senate's move is an attempt to demonstrate that the administration is not taking this threat seriously, and that it is not willing to allocate the necessary resources to address this issue. The Senate's intent is to use the funding bill as a means of forcing the administration to address this issue in a more serious and substantive manner.

The debate over this funding bill is a clear example of the continuing failure of the Senate to hold the administration accountable for its actions. As long as the Senate continues to allow the administration to get away with this kind of behavior, we can expect to see more and more cases of abuse and neglect of our military personnel overseas.

LETTERS

UI and the world

I applaud the CFA's action today, which put us in the company of thousands of international students and workers as part of the UI Local Union 3242.

I was not aware of this level of international involvement before today. UI students and workers have received the CFA's message, and it will be echoed in the community.

I was glad to see that the administration's response was not to deny the students' right to organize, but to engage in a dialogue with them.

I am encouraged by the fact that the administration is willing to listen to the students' concerns, and to take action to address them.

I hope that this is the beginning of a new era of cooperation between the administration and the students, and that it will lead to a more positive and productive relationship in the future.

Hurray for Bailey

I write to encourage our fellow Iowa City District 7 residents to vote for Obama in the Oct. 7 primary election for U.S. Senate. He's going to be a real voice for people in the community and for the nation.

The debate over Immigration is a clear example of the need for strong, effective leadership at the national level. We need someone in Washington who will stand up for the rights of all Americans, and who will work to ensure that our immigration system is fair, just, and effective.

The election of Barack Obama to the U.S. Senate is a historic moment that should not be taken for granted. We must work to ensure that he is re-elected in 2010 and that he is able to continue his work for the people of Iowa and the United States.

11. 2. 2. 3.
I just admit, I'd quit out of plan watching The Rundown, because it had suddenly vanished into a sporting event and began spontaneously cheering for the winning team.

In this case the winning team consisted of Beck, played by the Rock, a.k.a. Dwayne Johnson, a kind of hard thing who really just wants to be a chef, Travis (Seann William Scott), an archaeologist, and Mariana (Rosario Dawson), a bartender with a secret life. Hatcher (Christopher Walken) represents the opposite of this. Promise to keep this secret, but I actually was rooting for the opposing team, only I didn't want to offend anyone. But why not? Walken plays his usual crazy role with such effortless grace that you can't help but admire him, even if he is an inhuman fiend.

In the film, Beck's boss sends him in on one final mission to the Amazon to track down his son Travis and bring him back to the United States. Meanwhile, Travis is searching for an ancient relic that either he plans to donate to a museum or sell for a lot of cash (this situation remains unclear). Beck finds him in a town named El Dorado, where Hatcher is a sort of local driver who runs the mining community. Hatcher is also after Travis because he wants the relic as well, as does Mariana, who believes the relic will set her people free. In the end, all Beck wants is to get Travis and go home, but because everyone else seems to want him, things get a bit complicated. Besides it not, I admired the Beck's performance in the film despite his gradual decline into wacko action. Despite it not, I admired the Beck's performance in the film despite his gradual decline into wacko action. Especially appreciated the opening scene in which he acts passive - sensitive even. He was convincingly reluctant about his situation (he really didn't want to fight anyone) rather than expressing the inevitable determination prevalent in far too many action films.

On the other hand, Scott's role as the sidekick adds nothing to several nonaction sequences. I admired various people that he was a distant cousin of mine. Now, I always wish that were true so this Thanksgiving I could sit down with him and have a storm discussion concerning his career. Not that I question his talent as an actor — just his conviction. He has no faith that he could play anything other than the character he's been playing since American Pie. In this film, his archaeologist shouldn't be an actor/comedy/whatever that means, but the humor was largely AWOL when I saw it. Granted, there were incidents — Walker's lecture on the back ferry and another scene in which Beck gets his face bashed by a lizard while suspended upside down from a tree but the humor never amounted to anything more than a distraction from the mind-numbing action.

If nothing else, The Rundown represents a momentous step up from Peter Segal's last film, Very Bad Things, in which he taught redundancy and comedy were not and the same in The Rundown, at least he has enough density to separate the two.

Electrical storms raging into Gabe's

BY ALISSA VAN WINKLE

The sky is dark, thunder roars, and lightning crackles to the surface of the earth, having a weeping, smoldering hole in Iowa City tonight when Lightning Bolt brings its live show to Gabe's. Spread in the interior inside and art sense of Provence, R.I., the band makes live music relevant and interesting with their passionate, strongest, most passionate, and intense live music. Expect this due to carry charge and emotions, which is releasing a different album and songs on seven compilations. Lightning Bolt's latest, a.k.a. The Black Widow, is a CD release of the LP released in 1997, along with some slightly altered songs in a cassette compilation.

At least Rundown is aptly titled

Seann William Scott, left, as Travis, and the Rock, as Beck, both in Universal's action-comedy The Rundown. The film, which was released Sept. 26, was the top-grossing movie at the box office over the weekend.

Twins finally decide to use Munsen, Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Instead of getting tight when Johan Santana's strip was up, the Minnesota Twins stayed loose.

Playing a postseason game in Yankee Stadium for the first time, the Twins were grouped in a one-run lead in the ninth inning and had to play for the bottom half.

"One thing you don't do when you're in the dugout," Minnesota manager Ron Gardenhire said. "It's just said, 'Well, we have fans here. We're going to please it together.' And that's what we did.

Those pesky Twins put the big, bad Yankees in another postseason funk.

Randy Barnett struck the bases when his lines drive resulted in a pair of innings that led to two sixth-inning runs, and the Twins finally beat New York, tripping up the struggling Yankees, 3-1, in Tuesday's AL playoff opener.

New York had lost five of their last six in the Twins during the past two weeks, going 1-7 and scaring them 9-6. But it's the same guys who take a 5-6 lead into Game 2 Thursday night, when Andy Pettitte against Andy Puckett.

It's been a running joke the last couple of days — we might just as well replace them and get them warming up and it'll be fine," said Gardenhire's Minnesota's banquet.

New York was favored in last year's division series, too, but Arizona, Arizona was in four games to end a run of four consecutive playoff losses. The Yankees have dropped four straight in the ALDS.

World Series against the Dodgers, not exactly what wasn't. Schreider was expecting when he left pay, certainly no more water after effors to get his team its first Series title since 1981.

Giants 2, Royals 0

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jason Schmidt and another hit.

Schmidt pitched the San Francisco Giants to their first playoff shutout in 16 years, throwing a three-hitter for a 6-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins in Game 1.

Schmidt outlasted Jose Contreras, who took advantage of a costly error by Florida third baseman Miguel Cabrera to score the go-ahead run. A day after Schmidt won the starter's job that was lost to injury, he pitched a pickoff in the 10th.

Game 2 next Wednesday at 1:07 p.m.

Chicago Cubs 7, Atlanta Braves 5 (10)

In Chicago, the Atlanta Braves fell foul again. They lost the 10th inning, 7-5, and Chicago's Mark Prior had his 1-2-3 way back in the beginning.

The Cubs defeated the last two years' division leaders, 7-5. The Braves were up 5-1 after six.

Prior earned his 5-2 record. He had 11 hits and just six earned runs.

Youth getting schooled by old timers on PGA Tour

By DOUG FERGUSON

WOODSTOCK, Ga. — The 40-year-old Woods has been an inspiration on the Tour and on life for the past two years, and his Kiawah Island victory on Sunday was the peak.

"The best player in the world," Woods said Tuesday. "Tiger Woods is the best player in the world."
