Dean stumps for votes of youth

BY JEFFREY PATCH
THE DAILY IOWAN

Former Vermont Gov. Howard Dean told a crowd of more than 500 students at the IMU on Sunday that he would combat rising tuition and rescue the sluggish economy.

His stop in Iowa City was part of a four-day swing through college towns to connect with voters under 30, dubbed the "Raise the Roots" tour.

"Young people like me usually don't join political parties," said UI Students for Dean President Jenny Elliott, later saying she supports Dean because she thinks he is above partisan politics. "His sincerity comes out so much when you see him in person."

Dean harshly criticized President Bush's economic policy and the ballooning federal deficit, calling that administration a "credit-card presidency" and asserting that the Bush tax cuts have hurt the middle class.

"The truth is there never was a big tax cut for the middle class," Dean said. "Tell me what happened to your tuition in the last two-and-a-half years."

Dean lambasted his challengers for the Democratic nomination, saying they first compared him with George McGovern for appearing too liberal. Now, they liken him to Newt Gingrich, complaining he is too conservative, Dean said.

Dean often used the college tour to talk about the country's racial divide. During an Oct. 3 forum in front of a mostly black audience at Howard University in Washington, D.C., the candidate harshly criticized Bush for using "the race card" by selecting the word "quota" to describe the admissions system at the University of Michigan.

"Every pollster and every politician in America knows that the word quota is a race-loaded word," Dean said. "It's deliberately designed to appeal to people's fears that they're going to lose their place in a university or their job to a member of a minority community."

Joe Trippi, Dean's campaign manager, said Dean is building on an already established network of energetic youth supporters to con-

You can go Homecoming again

BY CRISTA HAHN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa City turned into black-and-white country this weekend as thousands of students, alumni, and community members turned out for the university's "Everything Old is New Again" Homecoming celebrations.

Onlookers stood four people deep from the curbs of Dubuque and Washington streets to watch the Oct. 3 parade as excited kids, outfitted in Hawkeye attire, turned cartwheels in the street while their parents talked with neighbors and friends.

"There is a nice mix of Iowa City neighborhoods, university students, and young alumni," said Iowa City resident Stacy Davis, who attended the parade with her husband and kids and said she is proud to be an Iowan. "I had to move a long way away before I realized I was an Iowa girl."

A large horn blared, and Davis' attention was directed to a shiny red and chrome fire truck making its way down the street. Two clowns tossed candy to kids, who scrambled for it. The crowd clapped enthusiastically as the UI Alumni Band marched out in step to its music. University President David Skorton came next in the procession in a red Corvette.

A giant hot dog also loomed overhead, with the crowd screaming, "The wiener-mobile!" upon its arrival.

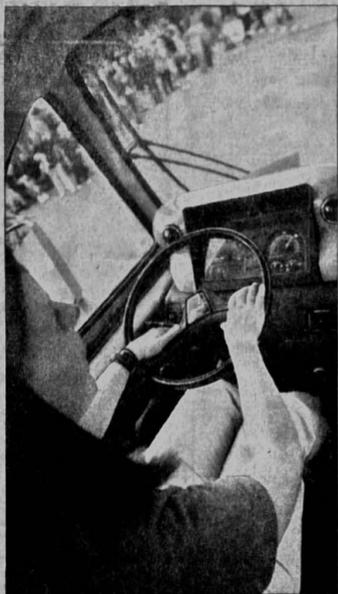

"I liked seeing the giant hot dog," said 9-year-old Morgan Burden, with a smile. Toots from wiener-whistles could be heard after the mini hot-dog whistles were thrown to the children.

The Prairie Light float featured characters from children's books — such as Big Bird, Curious George, and Madeline, among others — and captured the attention of adults and children alike.

"The parade is a snapshot of Iowa City and all the diversity. ... you're not going to see this in Pella, Iowa," said Michael Rielly, a UI law-school grad and practicing lawyer from Lake Geneva, Ill.

Legendary Iowa football coach Hayden Fry — the parade's grand marshal and newly inducted member of the NCAA Football Hall of Fame — gave a speech at a pep rally in front of the Pentacrest following the parade and reminded students to be courteous to Michigan fans and to have fun.

Members of the Iowa City West High marching band surged toward a 27-foot-long, 11-foot-high mobile hot dog garnished with the Oscar Mayer logo moments before the UI Homecoming parade began.

Being rushed by swarms of wiener fans is a regular occurrence for Brad "Baloney" Locke, Julie "J-Dog" Nocella, and UI alum Michelle "Mustard" Norton, who were hired to drive the five-ton Oscar Mayer Wienermobile, license plate "Weenr," across the Midwest for a year.

UI freshman remembered as caring & honest, a confidant

BY PAULA MAVROUDIS
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI freshman Brian Barry was known as "The Tank" to his high-school soccer team because he could plow down the sidelines and score whenever he had the ball, said UI freshman and close friend Nate White.

Though Barry's life was cut short, friends and family remember the West High graduate as a talented soccer player, mellow and caring, whom people could confide in. Barry, UI freshmen James Arthur and Betsy Sweeting, and West High junior Mackenzie Sedlacek were driving on Taft Speedway early last Sunday morning when Arthur lost control of the car and hit a tree, killing Barry and injuring everyone else.

Barry was 18. "You would think he was kind of shy at first, but once you got to know him, you found out that he was a genuinely good guy," said White, a fellow West High graduate.

White, who shared calculus, astronomy, and psychology courses at the UI with Barry, said they met during their freshman year at West High, and a friendship between the two developed in the years following.

"We became real good friends sophomore year," White said. "After that, it was always a group of four or five of us that would hang out every weekend. We went to movies and West High football games all the time."

Israel bombs target in Syria

BY JOHN WARD ANDERSON
WASHINGTON POST

JERUSALEM — The Israeli air force bombed a target deep inside neighboring Syria early Sunday in retaliation for a deadly suicide bombing in Israel a day earlier, threatening to turn the 3-year-old Palestinian uprising into a larger regional conflict. Syria denounced the attack as a "grave escalation" but said its reply would be diplomatic.

Israeli military sources said the 3 a.m. attack targeted a training camp approximately 10 miles northwest of Damascus, the capital, that was used by several Palestinian groups, including the radical Islamic Jihad, which asserted responsibility for an Oct. 4 suicide bombing at a restaurant in Haifa in which at least 19 people were killed. It was the first such attack inside Syria in 26 years, Israeli security sources said.

A statement by the Israeli military accused Syria of sponsoring terrorism and said Israel "will not tolerate the rules terrorist organizations and their supporters are trying to impose." Israeli army forces also destroyed the house of the suicide bomber's family in the West Bank town of Jenin on Sunday.

In Washington, U.S. officials urged both sides to exercise restraint. A senior administration official said, "We have repeatedly told the government of Syria that it is on the wrong side in the war on terror and that it must stop harboring terrorists." U.S. officials said they weren't notified about Israel's plans prior to the attack.

A senior Israeli military official said one person was apparently injured in the strike, in which one or two Israeli F-16 fighter jets dropped two bombs, each at least 1,100 pounds, destroying two buildings at the camp, called Ain Saheb.

"Today's operation ... was intended to send a message that no one can strike Israel with impunity," said Dore Gold, a senior adviser to Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon. "There is an axis of terror that begins in Iran, and it reaches the Gaza Strip, and its main crossroads is in Syria."

A day for focusing on improvement

BY SARAH FRANKLIN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Sunday at sunset, Jews across the world began celebrating Yom Kippur, the holiest day on the Jewish calendar. The Iowa City community observed the holiday with a variety of services tailored toward Orthodox, Conservative, and Reform Judaism.

"Yom Kippur is the Jewish day of atonement ... Every year, every person passes in front of judgment on Rosh Hashanah," said Tamar Fox, the vice president of the Hillel Student Board. "They are inscribed in the Book of Life, which is sealed on Yom Kippur."

Jerry Sorokin, the Hillel director, noted that "the idea of Yom Kippur is that we focus on personal sins and personal failings and focus on improvements. Judaism is concerned with the notion that people are flawed but fixable, not inherently bad."

During the holiday, which will end today after sunset, Jews restrict food, drink, sex, wearing leather shoes, washing for pleasure, and using scented oil, Sorokin said.

"Yom Kippur is one of two 24-hour fasts in the Jewish calendar," Fox said. "The concept is showing one's devotion to God and showing serious commitment to new year's resolutions made on Rosh Hashanah."

Liyone Fein, a UI graduate student and an Orthodox Jew, said she will attend services, fast, and "reconcile myself with God and others." A rhetoric TA, Fein has canceled her classes today to observe the holiday.

David Goldstein, a UI house staff fellow in otolaryngology who considers himself an "ultra-reform" Jew, said he will fast today but will also see patients.

"People will observe that to different levels. Some people will cut corners," Sorokin said.

Yom Kippur services

Yom Kippur services Monday
Reform: 9 a.m., Hillel, 122 E. Market St.
Conservative: 9 a.m., IMU Main Lounge
Orthodox: 9:30 a.m., Hillel

Concluding services:
Conservative and Reform: 5 p.m. at Agudas Achim Synagogue, 602 E. Washington St.
Orthodox: 6:20 p.m. at Hillel

There are a number of differences among the three types of services that will be held during the holiday.

Rabbi Avrohom Blesofsky of the Chabad Movement, an organization affiliated with Orthodox Judaism, said in the more traditional Orthodox services, men and women are seated separately to focus on prayer, not the social aspect of the service.

"[Men and women sit separately because] in Judaism the understanding is that it is more difficult for men than for women to concentrate on spiritual issues. So women remove themselves from men. Women are more spiritually advanced," Fein said.

Blesofsky said another key difference is that the Orthodox services are in Hebrew, with English translations available.

The content of the services also vary.

"Reform eliminates much of the preliminary part of the service," Sorokin said. "There is a quick introduction, and then we get into the meat of the service."

Sorokin said that at the end of the services, Reform has eliminated the additional service and folded the significant part into the main service.

"The length of the Reform service is half that of the Conservative and Orthodox services," he said.

Clark lags in Iowa necessity: organization

BY MIKE GLOVER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — For all his high-wattage candidacy, Wesley Clark lags far behind his Democratic presidential rivals in the months of organizing and hours of handshaking that it takes to win the Iowa caucuses.

The state's Jan. 19 caucuses, the first test for Democrats in the hunt for the nomination, present a formidable challenge for any candidate, let alone a political neophyte such as Clark who entered the race only last month.

"You cannot run a credible campaign in Iowa from 30,000 feet," said Iowa Democratic Chairman Gordon Fischer. "You can't throw up a couple of television commercials, drop in a couple of times."

Between now and January, this is the candidate's task: Persuade supporters to head out on a winter's night and attend a two-hour neighborhood meeting where they will argue with friends and neighbors and then publicly declare their preference for a candidate.

Organization is critical as is one-on-one persuasion.

In enlisting Iowans willing to commit to his cause, Clark trails his more established rivals.

Rep. Dick Gephardt of Missouri won the Iowa caucuses in his unsuccessful White House bid in 1988, and he still has the contacts throughout the state. Sen. John Edwards of North Carolina earned good will when he spent nearly $200,000 in campaign cash to help elect Iowa Democrats in the last election.

Howard Dean, the former Vermont governor, has campaigned in the state for more than a year. He has more than 100 field staffers on the ground and an organization in each of the state's 99 counties.

Dean often acknowledges the work that has to be done, opening conversations with activists with the line: "I know you're an Iowan, and I'll have to talk with you five times before you even think about supporting me."

Ron Parker, a Democratic legislative staffer, says, "People expect the candidate is going to come into their living room, come to their coffee shop, come to the union hall, and once usually isn't enough."

"You've got candidates who have been coming here for a year and have talked to some activists a half-dozen times and still can't get them to commit."

POLICE LOG

Jose Fuentes, 30, 2401 Highway 6 E., was arrested Sunday for assault on a peace officer and public intoxication. Staff members at Mondo's, 212 S. Clinton St., flagged down a police officer because Fuentes was causing a disturbance, police records show. When the officer tried to arrest him, Fuentes allegedly attempted to hit him with his elbows. As Fuentes was being taken to jail, he continued to hit the officers with his elbows, striking one in the chest. Police report that Fuentes' pre-arrest

Breathalyzer showed he had a blood alcohol level of .106.

Lori Ann McIntyre, 34, Davenport, was charged Oct. 2 with third-degree theft after allegedly trying to steal a computer from the Coralville Wal-Mart. McIntyre was with another woman who purchased a computer, and she allegedly returned to the store with a receipt and put another computer into a cart. An employee allegedly watched her load the computer and walk out without paying for it, court records show. She is being held at Johnson County Jail on $2,000 bail.

Gemayal R. Randle, 21, North Liberty, was charged on Oct. 3 with assault on a peace officer after he allegedly told an officer, "I'll knock your ass out" during a fight investigation at 2400 Lakeside Drive. He is being held at the Johnson County Jail on a $2,000 bond.

Foundation nears fund-raising goal

The UI Foundation has attained 75 percent of its $850 million goal, raising more than $660 million in private gifts and pledges for the program "Good. Better. Best. Iowa."

Some of the benefits from the fund-raising campaign are already being felt. The money will go toward six new buildings, including the Gerding Athletics Learning Center; 60 new Presidential Scholarships, endowments of $100,000 or more; and 76 new endowed faculty positions. Other funds will go toward Hancher Auditorium, the UI Libraries, athletics, and bio-medical research.

"There's no secret to the campaign's dramatic success so far," said UI Foundation President Michael New in a press release. "It takes a university that people believe in, with top-ranked programs and the vision to become one of the very best."

New also credited the numerous foundation volunteers and staff who are part of the program.

The campaign, which was launched in January 1999 and will run until December 2005, has seen increases in the number of overall contributors and alumni donations. Of the money garnered by the program, there have been five gifts of $10 million or more totaling $150 million.

City may require sprinklers in fraternities, sororities

IOWA CITY (AP) — A public discussion is scheduled for today on a proposal to require automatic fire sprinklers to be installed in all fraternity and sorority houses on the UI campus.

City officials are pushing the proposal to require installation of sprinklers within five years.

The proposal will be presented to the City Council in April as part of a series of building code revisions, said Fire Marshal Roger Jensen.

"We have a serious threat here for life loss," he said. Many of the fraternity and sorority houses were built in the 1920s with construction that would allow a fire to spread quickly.

Dan Wilkes, a member of the corporation board for Acacia fraternity, said its 80-year-old house has approximately 30 residents this year.

Wilson: Revenge was behind leak of name

BY WALTER PINCUS
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — Former Ambassador Joseph Wilson said Sunday that the leak of his wife's name as a covert CIA official by Bush administration officials in July could have been for revenge or to undercut his criticisms of the Iraq war or to intimidate other government insiders from talking to journalists.

"I do believe, however, that the president would never have condoned or been party to anything like this," he said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

The Justice Department has begun an investigation into the unauthorized disclosure of the name of Wilson's wife, Valerie Plame, who served in the CIA's operations division and acted clandestinely under what is called non-official cover. That meant she worked in a position not associated with the U.S. government and when overseas on a spy mission was not protected by diplomatic immunity.

Asked if he thought the leak had endangered his wife, Wilson said on CBS's "Face the Nation" that since the publicity of the Justice Department investigation, "other people" have suggested "perhaps this does make her a target." As a result, he said he and his wife were taking unspecified security precautions.

He also said on "Meet the Press" that he had been contacted by a publisher about writing a book and will attend a book fair in Germany next week to test the market. He said he first turned down the suggestion that he go, but changed his mind after publication of the fact he was considering it.

Columnist Robert Novak, also on the NBC program, said the identification of Wilson's wife came during an interview with one senior Bush administration official when he told the official "it was very strange that the mission to Niger could be done by a diplomat with no experience in counterproliferation who was regarded as a critic of the war and really had no experience at the agency."

The Sunday before Novak's interview with the official, July 6, Wilson's view that the Bush administration had distorted the allegation about Iraq's effort to buy uranium from Niger had been given wide circulation through an op-ed piece he'd written that was published in the New York Times and a story in the Washington Post that contained the first on-the-record interview with him. In addition, Wilson appeared that Sunday on "Meet the Press."

One day later, under pressure created by Wilson's disclosure, the White House publicly acknowledged it had been a mistake to include the 16 words about uranium and Africa in the president's State of the Union message in January.

I DO BELIEVE, HOWEVER, THAT THE PRESIDENT WOULD NEVER HAVE CONDONED OR BEEN PARTY TO ANYTHING LIKE THIS.

— JOSEPH WILSON, FORMER AMBASSADOR

When Novak asked why a man with Wilson's views had been chosen, the columnist said Sunday that the Bush official told him, "Well, his wife works in the counterproliferation section at the CIA, and that she suggested it, his mission."

Wilson was an opponent of Bush's Iraq policy in July this year, at the time Novak asked his question, but his selection by the CIA for the Niger mission took place in February 2002. When Wilson was sent to Africa, just weeks after Bush included Iraq in the "axis of evil" in his 2002 State of the Union address, he wasn't opposed to Bush's policy toward Baghdad. He was the last U.S. diplomat to deal directly with Saddam Hussein and supported ousting the Iraqi president.

Appearing on "Fox News Sunday," U.S. chief weapons inspector David Kay said he's searching for a cache of reference strains of biological agents that's supposed to include anthrax. Reference strains aren't weapons agents but in effect sample amounts to be used to determine whether that agent exists.

California gubernatorial hopeful Arnold Schwarzenegger on Sunday walks away from the podium in Sacramento as Dee Snider, lead singer for Twisted Sister, sings what has become Schwarzenegger's theme song, "We're Not Gonna Take It Any More."

Arnold fends off groping charges

BY DAN BALZ AND EVELYN NIEVES
WASHINGTON POST

LOS ANGELES — California's gubernatorial recall campaign turned increasingly nasty Sunday, as Democratic Gov. Gray Davis demanded that Republican candidate Arnold Schwarzenegger address in detail accusations of sexual misconduct that have mounted daily. For his part, the film star asked supporters to reject a "sleaze campaign" that he said was politically inspired by "well-organized" opponents.

Facing possible ouster from office on Tuesday, Davis sought to rally his soft Democratic base to vote against the recall by signing a far-reaching health-care bill requiring all larger employers in the state to provide health insurance for their workers as his campaign team tried to keep the focus on questions of Schwarzenegger's treatment of women.

Schwarzenegger joined thousands of supporters for a rally outside the state Capitol in Sacramento, where he called for a broom and said, "We're going to clean house." The rally ended his four-day bus tour of the state that has been partially overshadowed by the controversy over charges of groping and misbehavior toward women. Sunday's rally included several hundred protesters, some chanting "No on recall" or "No groper for governor," who clashed with the actor's supporters.

It was another day of tumult, confusion and dueling campaign polls that's left the recall election in an unsettled state two days before the balloting. The only new public poll, conducted by Knight-Ridder Newspapers and NBC News, showed a majority still intending to vote to remove Davis from office on Tuesday and Schwarzenegger still leading Democratic Lt. Gov. Cruz Bustamante in the ballot's second question: Who should replace Davis if he is removed?

That poll, like other private poll results that the campaigns and their partisans have been circulating, showed support for the recall slipping somewhat over the weekend. It wasn't clear, though, that Davis can overcome the deep hostility among voters toward his leadership, despite growing questions about Schwarzenegger and the charges leveled against him. Davis' advisers said the recall vote was now virtually even, which Schwarzenegger's advisers disputed, but there were signs of nervousness in the actor's camp.

Before signing the health-insurance bill, Davis stepped before cameras outside a health-care facility in Los Angeles to insist that Schwarzenegger deal directly with the allegations against him.

Noting that 15 women have come forward, Davis said, "I believe Mr. Schwarzenegger should deal with these explanations in detail, not through partial explanations, evasive answers, and partial denials. The question gets down to this: Are all 15 women and their families lying, or is Mr. Schwarzenegger not telling us the truth?"

His campaign also put on a new television ad, featuring Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif. She says "serious allegations have surfaced against the governor's opponent" that deserve "serious consideration" by voters.

The Los Angeles Times first published accusations against the actor on Oct. 2. The newspaper had another story on its front page Sunday morning, this one recounting charges by four more women who said the actor had fondled them or touched them inappropriately. The incidents described in the Times' stories cover a span of 30 years.

Schwarzenegger's advisers have charged that some of his accusers have close ties to Davis and the Democratic Party and that some have been financial contributors to his campaigns.

In an interview with NBC anchor Tom Brokaw, aired tonight on NBC's "Dateline," Schwarzenegger at first denied he grabbed or groped any woman, saying, "This is not me." A minute later, he said he was not denying all accusations. "Not at all," he said.

Schwarzenegger said Davis is partly to blame for the charges coming out now. When Brokaw asked about Davis' call for the actor to address the charges, the film star said it was Davis who owes the people of California an apology for what he has done to the state.

Brokaw replied: "You're not going to be any more specific about these charges in terms of your denials?"

"As soon as the campaign is over, I will," Schwarzenegger replied. "I can get into all of the specifics and find out what is really going on. But right now, I'm just really occupied with the campaign."

The grand finale of Schwarzenegger's bus tour from San Diego to Sacramento didn't end with the triumphal flourish his campaign had planned. There were more "Join Arnold" signs than those of dissent, but Californians with various reasons for not supporting Schwarzenegger often drowned out the cheers of supporters.

The most vocal were more than 300 union members who were hastily organized by the Sacramento Labor Council's central committee on the night of Oct. 4, said several members interviewed.

Protest reveals strains

BY TYLER MARSHALL
LOS ANGELES TIMES

BAGHDAD — It was a minor incident, a small blip in the stream of events that are shaping the new, American-controlled Iraq.

But the confrontation that unfolded in central Baghdad on Sunday, pitting a few hundred former Iraqi army conscripts against U.S. military forces and the newly reconstituted Iraqi police, said much about the difficulties Americans face as occupiers of a country many of them barely understand.

By the time the morning-long standoff had ended and the protesters had drifted off, the American soldiers had succeeded in preventing any violence, but at the cost of something intangible yet vital to the longer-term success of the U.S. involvement in Iraq: good will.

There was manhandling of protesters, screaming in English — a language few, if any, in the crowd understood — and a shoving match with an Iraqi police captain helping to calm the unruly crowd. By the time the incident was over, the Americans were left with few new friends.

"Saddam Hussein is gone, but now it's worse than Saddam Hussein," said Hatim Jasim Khalaf, a 26-year-old former Iraqi army private who said he was making his fifth attempt to collect the $40-a-month payment promised by occupation authorities. "We just want justice. We only want what's rightfully ours."

Like most of those who had gathered along a main road near the disbursement center where ex-soldiers collect their pay, Khalaf had become increasingly frustrated by his inability to receive his stipend. "If there's no pay [soon], we'll use violence," he vowed to a couple of reporters at the scene.

An Iraqi boy joins a group of former Iraqi soldiers demonstrating over rumors their pay would be cut off in western Baghdad on Sunday.

On Oct. 4, confusion over the same issue triggered rioting in Baghdad and two other cities. Coalition military spokesman Lt. Col. George Krivo said Sunday that three rioters were killed in those disturbances, while scores were injured.

Precisely what ignited the unrest remained unclear. Occupation authorities said more than 320,000 former Iraqi soldiers had received their pay, and they blamed former Baathist regime provocateurs for encouraging the violence by spreading false rumors, including one that the payroll money had run out.

The protesters who gathered Sunday were driven by a different concern: that those responsible for distributing the money had pocketed the money themselves. "They make you sign, then they take your money," said Sayeed Hussein, a 24-year-old former Iraq army private. His eyes welled with rage as he spoke.

American troops, attempting to move the crowd off a major street, grabbed and pushed the protesters, as one soldier shouted, "Get the [expletive] back onto the sidewalk! Do you understand that?" Few did.

During an hourlong attempt to break up the protest, the American troops made no apparent attempt to communicate with the demonstrators in their own language, Arabic. One uniformed Arabic speaker who appeared to be working for U.S. forces threatened demonstrators with a billy club.

When Iraqi police Capt. Basim Khamis moved in to stop the translator, a uniformed American turned on the police officer and yelled, "You take care of your people, I'll take care of mine!" He then shoved Basim backward.

Offended, Basim shouted back, "I know my people. I will protect my people."

Following a few tense moments, the two law-enforcement authorities patched their differences and once again focused on the protesters. The gathering broke up when Baghdad's new police chief, Hassan Ali al Ubaydi, speaking by megaphone, announced that the ex-soldiers' grievances had been passed to the Interior Ministry and asked them to choose 10 representatives to meet with him today.

Arafat names crisis Cabinet

BY MOHAMMED DARAGHMEH
ASSOCIATED PRESS

RAMALLAH, West Bank — Yasser Arafat installed an eight-member emergency Cabinet on Sunday with Ahmed Qureia as prime minister, an apparent attempt to deflect possible Israeli action against him following a suicide bombing a day earlier.

Israel threatened last month to "remove" Arafat, without setting a time, and there were new demands for his expulsion after the Oct. 4 attack by Islamic Jihad. Nineteen Israelis were killed in a crowded beachfront restaurant in the northern port city of Haifa.

Aides to the Palestinian leader said he was clearly concerned about possible Israeli action after the bombing. There was no direct move against Arafat on Sunday; instead, Israel bombed a target inside Syria that it claimed was an Islamic Jihad training base, striking deep inside its neighbor's territory Sunday for the first time in three decades.

In installing an emergency Cabinet, Arafat makes it more difficult for Israel to move against him. The United States appears willing to give Qureia a chance, and any Israeli action against Arafat could force Qureia's immediate resignation and cause chaos in Palestinian areas.

Qureia, who had been tapped for the job last month, had initially planned to present a larger Cabinet to Parliament for approval on Wednesday. Arafat's decree Sunday meant that Qureia takes office immediately.

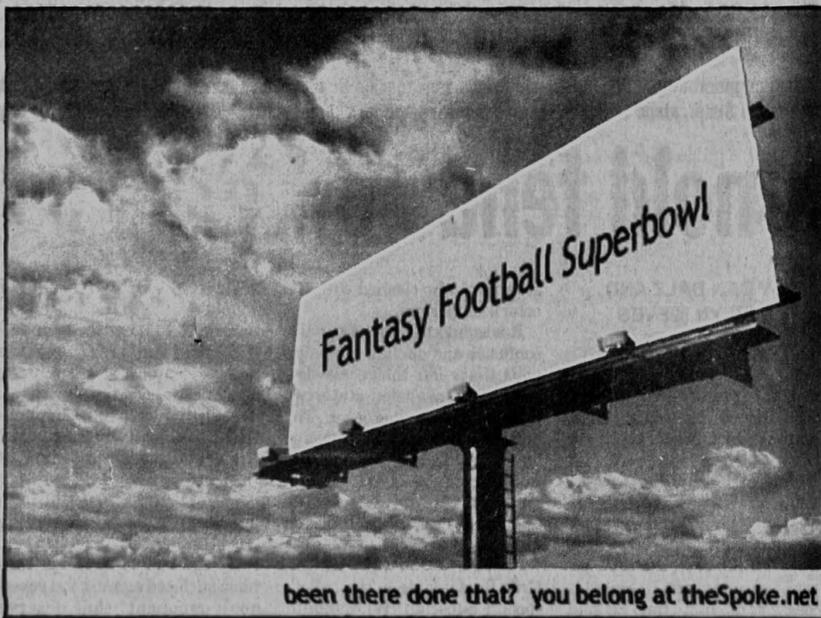

"Taking into consideration the difficult situation of the Palestinian people and the necessities imposed by the situation, President Arafat issued a presidential decree by which he declared a state of emergency ... and formed an emergency government headed by me," Qureia told the Associated Press.

Qureia also said he would try to implement the U.S.-backed "road map" peace plan and "work ... to get out of this situation of chaos in the Palestinian territories."

Qureia has not outlined his security plan, though he is not expected to dismantle militant groups, as required by the road map. Palestinian Authority officials fear a confrontation with Hamas and Islamic Jihad will trigger internal fighting.

Qureia said three portfolios were assigned: Nabil Shaath as foreign minister, Salam Fayad as finance minister, and Nasser Yousef as interior minister. Qureia listed the other five members of the Cabinet as Saeb Erekat, the current chief negotiator, Nabil Abul Hummus, the current education minister, Jamal Shobaki, the current minister of local affairs, and two legislators from Arafat's Fatah movement, Abdel Rahman Hamad and Jawad Tibi.

The Cabinet is to be sworn in Tuesday and immediately hold its first meeting, Qureia said.

Kremlin's man leads in war-torn Chechnya vote

GROZNY, Russia — In their war-shattered capital and impoverished villages, Chechens voted for a president Sunday in an election condemned by critics as a sham but promoted by the Kremlin as a step toward ending a decade of violence and chaos.

Regional election chief Abdul-Kerim Arsakhanov told the ITAR-Tass news agency that the Kremlin-backed candidate, Chechnya administration chief Akhmad Kadyrov, appeared headed for victory.

Arsakhanov said early Monday that Kadyrov's victory was beyond doubt, ITAR-Tass reported. With nearly a quarter of the votes counted in preliminary and unofficial tallies, Kadyrov had more than 83 percent, Arsakhanov was quoted as saying.

No official figures were expected until later in the day, but Arsakhanov said the results were unlikely to change by more than 3 percentage points, ITAR-Tass reported.

In the capital, where ruined hulks of buildings rise like broken teeth, and in impoverished villages, many Chechens turned out in suits and fine dresses to vote. But others disdained the proceedings as a farce.

"In my view all of Russia is far from democracy, and not just Chechnya," said Liza Vishayeva, as she passed a polling station that was the only building on her Grozny block without holes chewed into it by artillery. She said she hadn't voted and doubted the election would bring significant improvement.

Sergei Grits/Associated Press

A man passes an election poster depicting Akhmad Kadyrov, Chechnya's Moscow-appointed acting president who is expected to win the Chechen election, in Kadyrov's home village of Tsentoroi on Sunday.

"To change this to a peaceful situation would be very tough," she said.

Russian forces are widely alleged to have killed and raped civilians during Chechnya's current war, which began in September 1999 with a massive air and ground assault but has devolved into a bloody stalemate. The Russians pound Chechen rebels with heavy weaponry and insurgents stage daily ambushes with explosives and hit-and-run attacks.

This war followed the 1994-96 conflict that ended with Russian forces withdrawing after rebels fought them to a standstill.

Chechen rebels have also mounted attacks outside the region, including a hostage-taking raid on a Moscow theater last October and suicide bombings at a Moscow rock concert this summer.

Even Kadyrov — widely expected to win after his leading challengers withdrew or were cast out of the race — said the region's suffering would be hard to turn around.

"I would like to say that tomorrow the sun will rise from the place where it sets," Kadyrov told a news conference in the tree-lined courtyard of his house in the village of Tsentoroi. "But what will be different tomorrow is that I will be legally elected."

Russian officials and lawmakers have discussed substantial autonomy for Chechnya, but no terms have been reached. Still, the Kremlin hopes the election — held as the war enters its fifth year — will be seen as a sign of civil order returning to the region.

Pope names 3 new saints

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Ailing Pope John Paul II gave the church three new saints Sunday, presiding over the first of several stamina-testing ceremonies on a packed schedule this month.

John Paul's voice sounded clearer than it had in recent days as he opened the canonization ceremony in St. Peter's Square, which only a few hours earlier had been drenched by a downpour.

Slowly reading a long Latin text, the 83-year-old pontiff declared three missionaries to be saints: Daniele Comboni, an Italian, Arnold Janssen, who was German, and Josef Freinademetz, an Austrian.

Sunday's canonization was the 50th such ceremony John Paul has led since becoming pontiff in 1978. In all, he has raised to sainthood 476 faithful, new role models he hopes will help shore up the faith of Catholics.

Coming from countries around the world and including lay people as well as clergy, the saints offer a variety of professions and paths taken in their holy lives.

"We inscribe them in the roll call of saints and establish that in all the Church they are devotedly honored among the saints," John Paul said of the latest saints.

John Paul, sitting in an upholstered chair outfitted with wheels, was brought to the center of the steps of St. Peter's Basilica. Many in the crowd of about 30,000 cheered when the pope appeared.

U.S. closes notorious detention center

BAGHDAD (AP) — The U.S. military has shut down Camp Cropper, an increasingly notorious makeshift prison where hundreds of Iraqis were crowded into tents through Baghdad's scorching summer, a U.S. official reported Sunday. The detainees were scattered to other facilities.

The Iraqi Lawyers League, pressing a rights campaign under an expatriate prisoner of the Baath regime, has won another concession from the Americans as well: accelerated hearings, with lawyers, for some of at least 5,500 detained Iraqis.

That newly elected league president, Malik Dohan al-Hassan, met with U.S. occupation chief L. Paul Bremer a month ago to register complaints about the internment of thousands of Iraqis without charge since a U.S.-British invasion force toppled Saddam Hussein's Baath government in April.

"I told Bremer the Americans and the Iraqi people ought to have become friends since then, but the way they have handled these things has produced just the opposite effect," Malik said.

Journalists were barred from Camp Cropper, but released detainees this summer told of overcrowded and unsanitary conditions, and they alleged physical abuse by guards. The human rights group Amnesty International protested it "may amount to cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment, banned by international law."

Mexico braces for tropical storm

ISLA PARAISO, Mexico (AP) — Surging seas brought by Tropical Storm Larry as it nears Mexico's Gulf coast have flooded this island fishing village, where all but three of the 75 families that live here have fled for safety.

Three major ports along the southern coast of the Gulf of Mexico were closed Oct. 4, and Tabasco state authorities warned that 4,000 people may need to be evacuated if the storm strikes the area as predicted.

"If it gets any worse, I'll have to go," said Santana Cordoba, 47, of Isla Paraiso, from inside a fragile house with a palm-leaf roof. "It already broke through the jetty, and there's no need to risk it because it's going to hit hard."

Tropical Storm Larry is the most dangerous of three storms expected to reach Mexico in the coming days. Authorities are also watching Hurricane Nora and Tropical Storm Olaf, both off the Pacific coast. Nora and Olaf gained force Saturday.

Weathering a corporate-joe invasion

The early buzz concerning Starbucks' imminent arrival has been predictably negative. The en vogue stance is to rail against the corporate giant.

Starbucks is portrayed as an army sweeping across this continent under a java jack-boot in a perceived war against independent coffee providers. True, its expansion seems endless and its reach seems infinite (and those holding out against its blooming empire are fighting a two-front war and are now pushed back to South Dakota); but Starbucks' expansion to Iowa City, on Clinton Street near the intersection with Burlington, won't hurt the local coffee market as much doomsayers are predicting. Iowa City coffee drinkers won't be so easily assimilated — if anyone will be assimilated with Starbucks' arrival, it will be Starbucks itself.

The perception that Starbucks is a poisonous evil empire is generally accepted by the student-age populous. Enter "Starbucks" and "assimilate" in Google; you'll find plenty of late teens to 20-somethings disparaging the chain. "Friends don't let friends drink Starbucks" bumper stickers adorn vehicles nationwide, and they will soon appear here in the Iowa City area.

Generally, the student-age population values individualism. Those who will frequent Starbucks will either be people unfamiliar with the other coffee houses downtown or people who are already sold on its corporate logo. Starbucks will have to appeal to the individualists — conform to Iowa City, rather than let Iowa City conform to it.

There is, of course, the free-market effect Starbucks will have on Iowa City area.

"It raises the standards of what premium coffee can taste like," said Terrapin Coffee owner David Meyer.

"It's the job of the independent to raise the bar even higher." Meyer said he doesn't see Starbucks' impending arrival as an attack on his business, but rather a good reflection on Iowa City and Coralville's business market by attracting the major chain.

Starbucks' record on treatment of coffee growers and the environment are causes for concern, but singling out this chain rather than others doesn't make any sense (you didn't hear the same moaning and teeth gnashing when Olive Garden broke into Coralville).

Regardless, a new store will open — and some may see this as the loss of one more Midwestern outpost weathering invasion — area coffee drinkers will have another choice for a downtown coffee shop. Meanwhile, Starbucks' star will only continue to rise, unless of course it tries to enter Russia in the winter.

Something a little lost in translation

The arrest of one Guantánamo Bay prison camp interpreter on espionage charges is an occurrence. Arresting three in as many months is a trend.

Last week, federal agents at Boston Logan Airport arrested Ahmed Mehalba for making false statements after classified information about the Guantánamo Bay prison camp's operations were found in his luggage as he returned from a foreign trip. The U.S. Navy base in Cuba detains approximately 660 suspected Qaeda and Taliban operatives.

Mehalba, a naturalized U.S. citizen from Massachusetts who is of Egyptian descent, was returning from a trip to Egypt when he was stopped by inspectors of the Department of Homeland Security. After seeing Mehalba's U.S. military identification, the inspectors asked him what was on the computer discs he carried in his baggage.

Instead of merely containing music and videos, as Mehalba claimed, the discs discovered that the discs contained "secret" information concerning his work at the base in Cuba.

This is frightening. Who is responsible for hiring the interpreters of alleged terrorists and what kind of screening system is in place?

San Diego based Titan Corp. has worked with the U.S. military for 25 years providing interpreters and linguistic support. Supplying interpreters is just one facet of Titan. The defense contractor provides communication products, solutions, and services for the Department of Defense, intelligence agencies, and other government agencies.

Titan has the appearance of a credible agency, so why did it fail to recognize potential problems with Mehalba? Of course, he must be presumed innocent, but he was arrested on a charge of making a false statement to federal agents.

One of the other arrested Guantánamo interpreters, Army Capt. James "Yousef" Yee, an Islamic cleric, was taken into custody on Sept. 10 because of sensitive materials found in his possession, including documents concerning Guantánamo detainees and interrogators, as well as maps of the facilities.

Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said the military should toughen background checks for military personnel at Guantánamo. He also said it was "shocking" that six months after the Pentagon had assured him it was investigating two Islamic institutes that approve Muslim clerics for military service, the probes have not begun.

The Departments of Defense and Homeland Security must make investigating into these matters a top priority. For the safety of the American people, the government must hire interpreters and clerics without ties to any radical organizations.

I WAS HUNCHED OVER my Spicy Peanut bowl at Z'Mariks, a "help wanted" poster in the window right in front of my face. Twenty minutes is all the margin I had to eat, and I was trying to savor every inch of it, hiding away as best I could. There was another girl at the other end of the counter, quiet as me, two stools away, and then those stools were taken, by a man and a woman.

She's a printmaker, graduate student, and so is the man — call her Annemarie, and him Tyrone. I know this because I met Annemarie, briefly, over the summer, and because the few snippets of their conversation that meandered into my foggy headspace say so.

Then, I started paying attention when they said the name of a good friend of mine, a printmaker and papermaker: Ken Walker. Ken Walker, Ken Walker, Ken Walker. "We're going to have to look at his work, aren't we?" said Tyrone, looking ahead to a class session. "We're going to have to critique it. I really have nothing to say about it. I mean, has his work changed at all since the last time I saw it? Is he still obsessed with 'Ken Walker' and what that means?"

Well, yes, said Annemarie. Well, yes. And they kept talking about Ken. Annemarie seemed to vacillate, saying at one point, "But he's very confident about his work. He's very able to decide what he wants, what he doesn't. Say yes to this; no, not that. And that's very strong." Tyrone was straight-out anti-Ken, replying, "But why are you in graduate school then? If you're that confident, and determining, why are you in graduate school? Just go off, set up your studio, and print!"

He's lucky I didn't dump my Spicy Peanut on his head.

I can understand not always enjoying work that's experimental in both technique and scheme, such as Ken's. Work that is so is rarely pliant and rarely easygoing; constant intellectual prodding isn't always what any of us want out of artwork.

But Ken's work fascinates me because he's interested in bringing out the elements of What, How, Who, Why — elements that function simultaneously but not always in step with each other. What is the work presented as? How does it function? Who is "reading" it, experiencing (with) it? And how do these elements change each other, and what the work of art means? Because saying Work Of Art B means X is like saying Marilyn Monroe was a Dress Size Y — it's false. Just as Monroe wore several different sizes of dress during her adult life, what artwork means is not static, because how it is fluctuates constantly.

Experiencing a work of art, whether it's visual, written, musical, tactile, or some cross-genre peacock of those (and other) categories, is a contrapuntal process: There are many voices involved, and sometimes they speak over each other.

For instance, there's this column. It is different here on my computer screen as I'm writing it, all the need-revisions in Barbie-pink text, than it is in your hands, a tidy little column attached to my mug. Or, than it is on the Daily Iowan Web site, surrounded by links and graphics; than it would be on glossy magazine paper, illustrated with pictures of various Marilyn Monroes. Is it free-reading, or are you reading it for a class — do you love the class, or hate it? Are you reading it for the first time, or the fiftieth? Are you bored ... yet?

I'm painfully interested in these questions, and the effects of their answers — though I do doubt whether those can be pinned down as tidily as a butterfly. And I can understand not always enjoying work, such as Ken's, that plays with them, takes them as part of its intent and meaning; theory, and experiment, aren't everyone's cup of aesthetic tea. But I do not understand people, like Tyrone, who dismiss that work, or bash its artist, because of its subject(s). Its questions. ■

ARTS

Creatively straining not to be a townie

BY JULIE THROM
THE DAILY IOWAN

A contemporary artist with contemporary dreams is Nick Naughton in a nutshell.

Naughton, whose work is on display at Public Space One, 6½ S. Dubuque St., through Friday, said there are too many things in the art world that have been overdone, "almost to the point of being cliché."

The Dubuque native came to the UI to pursue an art major after his first year of college at the University of Northern Iowa. In May, the now 23-year-old graduated with a B.F.A. in printmaking. With modern art being so cutting-edge, Naughton said, he always feels compelled to keep changing.

"If you want to be competitive, you have to always be pushing the envelope, pushing it further than the next guy," he said.

Originally, he had wanted to do just that with his display at PSOne, but he ended up having to compromise his vision for the show. He said he had wanted to double the number of paintings he ended up with, for a total of 20, and he had ideas of hanging paintings over the windows in the space, allowing the light to filter through. However, he didn't have enough time. The works that Naughton has on display are mostly new, stemming from efforts over the past six months.

"It's all fresh stuff that I wanted to show people," he said. "I wanted to get their reaction."

Naughton said he really respects and supports PSOne and what it is doing, and in the future, he has visions of doing something along the same lines. Only he wouldn't mind stretching it across many different places around the world, each facility offering different things.

"I would want to offer a good alternative that wouldn't cost [artists] money but would give people access to the space and materials I would provide. It would be a studio and gallery all in one, like a mini-university without all the crap that comes with it," he said.

Naughton's artistic interest ranges from painting to printmaking, sculpture, drawing, and even some drunk sketching.

His sketch pad, which, he said, rarely leaves his side, is filled with a variety of detailed ink and pencil drawings.

Many of the drawings Naughton carries with him have been done simply by keeping his eyes open and recognizing the potential in everything he sees as a form of art.

"I want to take a different look at things," he said. "I want to look at [an object] and be able to see something that everyone else has overlooked."

One of the most important aspects of being an artist,

Naughton said, is to be able to explain your work, and to know it really well. "Sometimes, it's not that easy, and you have to make up a theory; you have to step back and ask yourself what you were really trying to accomplish," he said.

For many of his paintings, he said, he can see and understand what he is doing, but it can be difficult sometimes to put that into words. However, there are times when an explanation doesn't matter. Naughton, whose paintings are mostly abstract, said people who don't know much about art will almost always give a typical reaction.

"When people look at an abstract painting," he said, "they search for the familiar. They immediately look from within instead of looking out."

Though often questioned about what his future plans were with an art degree, he kept pursuing his work.

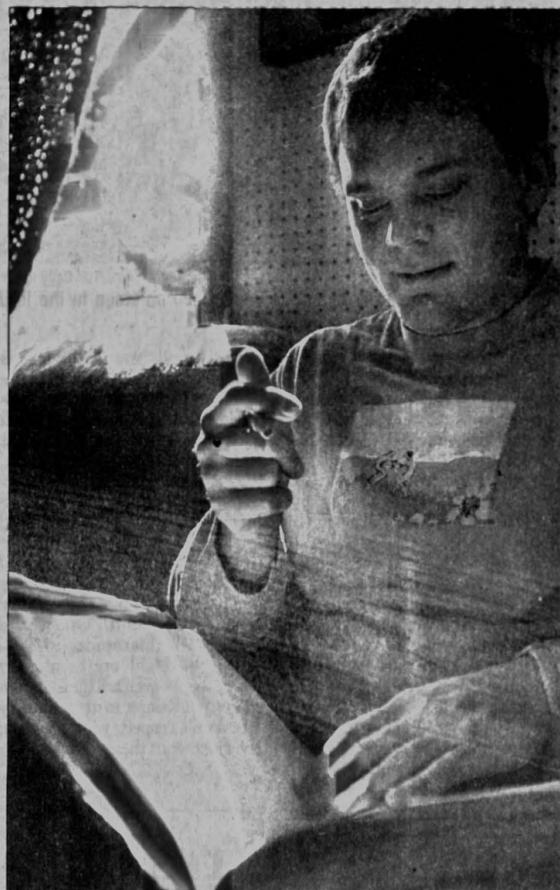

"It's something that I've always wanted to do," he said. "I don't know how I ever decided to do it. I guess it just seemed like the most fun, open thing to do. It had such a romantic appeal."

Aside from school, Naughton said, it is hard to find creative art people, and there have been times that it was difficult to balance his art and his social life.

"I used to go out a lot, but I'm becoming completely jaded with the bar scene," he said.

Lately, he finds that he has been choosing art over everything else. When his friends and his roommates go out, he will sometimes opt to stay at home, with the TV on, and draw.

"It keeps me going," said Naughton. "I know I'm getting something done and actively

Being Ted Nugent

DETROIT (AP) — They were shot with paintballs, slept in a barn, constructed their own out-house, and skinned a Russian bear.

Is all of this worth $25,000 and a truck?

Evidently so for the seven people who signed up for "Surviving Nugent," a two-hour reality program that airs Sunday night on VH1.

Ted Nugent, the outspoken rocker and outdoors enthusiast, challenges the contestants to live off the land in his rural compound near Jackson, approximately 70 miles west of Detroit.

The contestants are eliminated one by one as the Motor City Madman sees fit. The last one standing wins the loot and the vehicle.

Along for the ride are Nugent's wife, Shemane, son, Rocco, and his "blood brother," Big Jim, who drives the eliminated contestants down a dirt road in a pickup truck.

"We're showing off our self-sufficient, Neanderthal lifestyle," Nugent, 54, told the Associated Press. "If you can't derive some entertainment from that, you're weird."

"Surviving Nugent" is scheduled for one airing, but VH1 might make it an ongoing series, said Rob Weiss, the head of East Coast programming and development for the channel.

Nugent's no stranger to television — he's appeared on "Miami Vice" and "That 70's Show."

"I would like to think that if they can edit this, conveying the humor and the tension and drama we felt, it will be successful," he said. "I think I'm just goofy enough and the contestants tried hard enough, that it's gotta be entertaining."

On the road with Howard Dean

nect with college- and high-school-aged voters.

"I think we've got a much better idea of how to reach people over the Internet and use that as a communication tool," Trippi said on a flight to Dean's event at the College of Charleston in South Carolina. "Clearly, we've got to continue to do outreach. That's what this tour is about."

In an interview on the campaign's plane from Norman, Okla., to Seattle, Wash., Dean opened up about his college years and why he aims to bring a new generation into the realm of national politics.

"This generation is part of our base," he said. "If we get them in our party now, we can keep them. But we have to talk to them directly."

Dean, who attended Yale from 1969 to 1971, joined a fraternity, Zeta Psi, his sophomore year because he knew the president, but he soon quit because he became disenchanted with the culture.

Dean, who said his favorite movie is the college classic Animal House, initially balked on questions about alcohol and drugs during college but later acknowledged he drank alcohol and smoked marijuana occasionally.

"What went on in my irresponsible youth went on in my irresponsible youth — Ba-boom," Dean said initially. "I never did anything as bad as Arnold Swartzegger, I can tell you that."

Although he admitted to partaking in pot, Dean said the drug should not be legalized but that people should receive community service instead of jail time for possession of small amounts.

"Beer was always my drug of choice, not pot," Dean said, adding, "We should not legalize pot because we have a lot of trouble with the two drugs we already have legalized, which are alcohol and tobacco."

Dean taught junior-high social studies for a semester during his senior year of college and nearly received his teaching degree, but he soon grew wary of dealing with the elementary-school system.

"It was too hard," Dean said.

"What I really wanted to do was change people's lives. I was impatient and in a hurry. The kids were coming into school with such huge deficits that I thought I was swimming up stream."

After Dean graduated he went to Aspen, Colo., for a year, where he spent most of his time skiing; he washed dishes and poured concrete to support himself.

"For the most part, politicians don't talk to young people very much," Dean said. "One of the hallmarks of this campaign is why we are successful on the net and other people aren't. There are too many politicians in this country who don't respect young people; they just want their votes."

in "something to do with computers," said friend and UI freshman Matt Cretzmeyer.

Many of Barry's closest friends were his soccer teammates. After winning the state championships senior year, each received a ring commemorating the victory. Barry, a midfielder, and his close friend Franz Hochstrasser, a freshman at University of California-Santa Cruz, decided to switch rings as a promise that Hochstrasser would come back.

"His parents told me to keep it," he said. "And I'll probably wear it until the day I die."

Matt Harding, Barry's West High soccer coach and physics teacher, said he remembered that Barry didn't take himself too seriously, laughing when his team T-shirt said "Lactose" on the back in remembrance of the mess his spilled chocolate milk caused at a team dinner during his sophomore year.

Harding also recalled one game early last season when Barry stepped up and scored two goals in the last seven minutes of the game, winning a match against Des Moines-Roosevelt.

"Brian was never flashy with soccer, and he got the job done when it needed to be," Harding said. "He always did a really good job."

Barry enjoyed mathematics, and Harding said he frequently helped some of the other students with complicated physics formulas during class.

Hochstrasser, who received the news hours after the crash, said he and his friends are supporting Arthur and reminding him that they will always be there for him. Even though Arthur was released from the hospital, White said he is having a "very difficult" time.

A laid-back, soothing voice was one of Barry's most recognizable traits, one that continuously made the group laugh, White said. He wasn't particularly outspoken, but people listened when he talked, he said. That, coupled with honesty and positive attitude, made Barry one of Hochstrasser's best friends.

Barry was also the one all the West High girls seemed to go to with their problems. Hochstrasser said his high-school girlfriend would continuously seek advice from Barry, especially when it came to relationships.

"He would always tell you exactly what he was thinking," Hochstrasser said. "I can't ever remember him lying to me. I miss him so much already."

Homecoming fever sweeps Iowa City

Not counting the hoards of tailgaters outside Kinnick Stadium on Oct. 4, 70, 397 fans showed up to watch the Hawkeyes defeat the Michigan Wolverines.

In Kinnick, the crowd was especially revved up, with face-painted and foam-fingered fans.

"Everyone is upbeat and just out to have fun; it's what Homecoming is all about," said UI sophomore and basketball point guard Jeff Horner. "[Michigan's] not just some team we know we'll beat, they're a good team."

"I drove 18 hours by myself to see this game," said T.J. Skattum of Baldosta, Ga. "I grew up in Iowa, I am a big Hawkeye fan, and I'll root for the Hawks anywhere I go."

Trio reveals secrets of the Oscar Mayer Wienermobile that travel the United States as a mainstay for parades, supermarket openings, and football games.

Chants of "We want wieners" and shouts of "Go Oscar" echoed through the streets, as parade goers gawked at the giant frankfurter.

"I like the speakers in front and the carpet — it looks like paint splattered everywhere," said 9-year old Jonathan Jenkins as he stared, inches away from the vehicle's one door, in awe at the giant wiener that towered more than 6 feet above him.

Engulfed by the green and white mass of high-school students holding trombones, drums, and clarinets, Locke challenged the band to play the Oscar Mayer trademark song, "I Wish I Were," in exchange for a weenie whistle.

The high schoolers hoarded toward the door, instruments swinging, a crowd so thick that the Hotdoggers had to fend them off.

West High senior Aaron Weiner (no, seriously) was pushed to the front of the group after the trio of Hotdoggers announced they didn't have any more whistles to distribute.

"My last name is Weiner," he said, above the shouts of his friends. "I have to have a weenie whistle."

At 5:50 p.m., the giant mobile hot dog lumbered down the streets of Iowa City, decorated with UI window decals and black-and-gold Hawkeye streamers.

Sandra Wilson, a family friend of Norton who was handing out the 1-1/2 inch long whistles from an Oscar Mayer apron, was overwhelmed when whistle seekers charged her as she walked alongside the vehicle.

"All I see is hands," she shouted to Norton. "I don't see faces. I only see hands."

Locke, leaning on the window, added: "My arm hurts from waving too much, and my face hurts from smiling too much."

Before driving the Wienermobile, Nocella, Norton, and Locke had to attend a two-week intensive program called Hot Dog High, where 12 applicants from a pool of 1,000 learn about Oscar Mayer products, as well as the 120-year-old company's history and philosophy.

"I think she is enjoying it immensely," said Michelle's father, Mike Norton, as he watched his daughter carefully steer down the crowded streets during the Homecoming parade. "She had talked about it for years."

Locke said one of the most fun learning experiences during his Hot Dog High days was learning to drive the eight-foot-wide vehicle.

"It's a lot like a large van once you get used to the 26-foot hot dog," he said, adding that at first it was difficult maneuvering between the practice orange cones.

Once, he said, he panicked when he spotted a police car's flashing lights behind him.

"They wanted to brag to their buddies that they pulled over the Wienermobile," he said, adding that officers have also pulled over the frankfurter in the past in search of weenie whistles.

Tiger Woods

Tiger survives for fifth win in 2003

WOODSTOCK, Ga. (AP) — Tiger Woods is still the best in the world, and his fifth victory of the year Sunday at the American Express Championship might be enough for his peers to vote him best on the PGA Tour again.

With three clutch pars on the grueling back nine at Capital City Club, Woods won his seventh World Golf Championship in 13 tries by closing with a 2-over 72 for a two-shot victory over Vijay Singh, Tim Herron, and Stuart Appleby.

It was only the fourth time in 39 victories on the PGA Tour that Woods won despite failing to break par in the final round, and the first time since the 2002 U.S. Open.

Defending World Cup champions fall

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — There will be no World Cup repeat for the American women, no triumph before a raucous home crowd.

Spectacular goalkeeping by Silke Rottenberg, a brilliantly executed corner kick, and two late goals gave Germany a 3-0 semifinal victory over the defending World Cup champion United States on Sunday.

Kerstin Garefrekes' header off Renate Lingor's corner kick glanced off the crossbar and into the net in the 15th minute, then the Germans withstood one U.S. threat after another.

Iowa comes back from an early 14-0 first-quarter deficit to upend Michigan, 30-27, for only the 10th time in school history

Nicholas Wynia/The Daily Iowan

Ramon Ochoa escapes a Michigan defender during the Hawkeyes' 30-27 win over the Wolverines on Oct. 4. Ochoa caught the winning touchdown pass with 5:16 remaining.

BY DONOVAN BURBA
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Down 14-0 in the first quarter to a team from Michigan, the Iowa Hawkeyes must have felt trapped in some hideous recurring nightmare. But unlike last weekend, when Iowa couldn't overcome an early deficit to Michigan State, the Hawkeyes (5-1, 1-1) rebounded, edging the Michigan Wolverines (4-2, 1-1), 30-27, Oct. 4 at Kinnick Stadium.

Coming in, Iowa knew it would have to rely on its third unit to keep it close.

"Our special teams were a big part of the win today," said Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz. "We're not a good enough football team to win if our special teams don't play well."

Injuries forced Michigan Lloyd Carr to change his punt scheme, and the Wolverines unveiled a bizarre strategy. Garrett Rivas, the team's placekicker, lined up as the punter, and rolled out away from pressure before punting. The plan backfired in the third quarter, when Iowa safety Chris Smith got to Rivas and blocked the kick. The Hawkeyes took over on Michigan's 14, and the subsequent drive resulted in a field goal. "When I saw him come around the edge, and it was just me and him, I [knew] I had a chance," said Smith. "Then I saw him turn his body to kick it, and I just went and took the ball off his foot."

Carr said the play was designed to give Michigan better coverage downfield on the kick and that Rivas was supposed to punt it as soon as he saw pressure. The play wasn't the only lapse the Wolverines suffered on special teams, though.

Ramon Ochoa, who lost a fumble to the Spartans on a punt return, ran back three kickoffs for 85 yards, setting up Iowa's first 10 points. Then, with 1:46 left in the first half and Iowa trailing 20-10, the senior took Adam Finley's punt back 43 yards to Michigan's nine, and Nathan Chandler found Calvin Davis in the end zone three plays later.

"I take full responsibility," Carr said. "Because of some injuries, we changed our punt protection, and we gave up a couple plays there that really were the difference in the football game."

Two third-quarter Nate Kaeding field goals put Iowa in front 23-20, and with both defenses stiffening, it looked as if that score would stand. But the Hawkeyes put together a 10-

95 years in the making: 5 1
Cubs clinch division title

ATLANTA (AP) — Ninety-five years of frustration. Ninety-five years of ridicule. Put it all to rest. The Chicago Cubs are postseason winners.

Kerry Wood pitched another dominating game and Aramis Ramirez began the celebration with a mammoth home run, pushing the Cubs past Atlanta 5-1 in the decisive Game 5 Sunday night for their first postseason series victory since the 1908 World Series.

The franchise that endured the College of Coaches and the curse of a goat moves on to play Florida in the NL championship series. Game 1 is Tuesday night at Wrigley Field.

"We heard a lot of negatives from people, and they have reason to be negative," first-year manager Dusty Baker said. "They haven't had any reasons to be positive for a long time."

They do now. When Andruw Jones struck out swinging on the final pitch, flashbulbs went off around the stadium.

Catcher Damian Miller threw his arms in the air, then charged the mound to embrace closer Joe Borowski. Sammy Sosa tore across the grass to high-five his fellow outfielders. Wood, sitting in the dugout, pumped his fist before heading to the field to join the celebration.

In the stands, Chicago's fans shouted, hugged, and derisively performed the "Tomahawk Chop" — the Braves' signature cheer.

"It's unbelievable," said Sosa, who endured a beaming, injured toe and that infamous corked bat in 2003. "For me and everything I've been through, it's one of the great seasons that I've had."

Same for Cubs fans. The last out also set off a wild party outside Wrigley Field.

The Braves suffered another heartbreaking loss in the postseason, going down for the second year in a row in Game 5 of the division series.

HAWKEYE VOLLEYBALL

Hawkeyes continue losing streak

BY KELLY BEATON
THE DAILY IOWAN

The eyes of the Midwest were on the Iowa volleyball team yesterday, as Fox Sports Net aired the Hawkeyes' Oct. 4 match versus the Northwestern Wildcats.

Viewers, however, failed to witness a match representative of Iowa's talents. What they watched was a Hawkeye squad failing to click on all cylinders. What they watched was a team struggling desperately to get a win, any win, even in a single game, let alone a match.

Following two three-game sweeps over the weekend at the hands of Illinois Oct. 3, and Northwestern Oct. 4, the Hawkeyes (5-9, 0-4) are in the midst of a five-match losing streak in which they have lost 15-straight games.

Iowa coach Rita Buck-Crockett tried to put a halt to Iowa's slump against Northwestern by breaking the game down into segments by using five of an allotted six timeouts. Right now, her Hawkeyes need to try to win matches incrementally, one point at a time.

"We're talking to them about different parts of the game. Even mental parts of our games," said Buck-Crockett. "It should be a quick reaction, a process of what you have to do with the ball, and for whatever reason, we have some players that are not doing that well. When the ball gets to them, it creates problems. We have a lot of things to work on."

Topping the list of Black and Gold struggles against the Wildcats was the hitting department. Iowa had an .062 hitting percentage for the match, compared to the .308 of their opponents. For the match, Iowa had 24 attack errors, four service errors, one blocking error, and three ball handling errors in the 30-16, 19-30, 22-30 defeat.

A bright spot for the host Hawkeyes in the loss was the continued solid play of junior Laura Simpson, who collected 11 kills, and sophomore Alexa Lingris, who recorded a career-high nine digs. Northwestern was led by Erika Lange and Iwona Lodzik, who both tallied 14 kills a piece.

"I feel everybody really executed at their level," said

Lodzik. "Our passing was excellent today, and our blocking too. We were able to shut their hitters down."

Iowa freshman April Mech said the front-line of the visiting Wildcats presented a formidable challenge for her and her teammates.

"They set up the block well. We had a lot of hitting errors," she said. "It forced us to hit the ball out of bounds and places we didn't want to."

The presence of the Fox Sports cameras appeared to be a distraction at times for both squads. The network's cameramen nearly got trampled on more than one occasion by players hustling for a woebegone dig. Buck-Crockett said the presence of TV crews is the least of her squad's concerns.

"I would hope that it would kind of boost you up," said Buck-Crockett. "I don't think that had anything to do with it. I just think we had some people that were very flat. It goes back to consistency. We don't have a consistent collective group right now. We need some people to step up."

HAWKEYE NOTES

Women's tennis loses last five matches

The women's tennis team wrapped up its weekend at the Hoosier Classic in Bloomington, Ind., on Sunday not able to capitalize on its strong play of Oct. 4. After recording six victories on Oct. 4, the Hawkeyes went winless on Sunday, losing all five matches.

Freshman Hillary Mintz played her way to the flight C championship, but lost to Indiana's Laura McGaffigan (2-6, 7-5, 6-6 [10-8]), in the third set of the match.

"We're playing fairly well with our freshmen, we just need to keep learning," coach Paul Wardlaw said.

Doubles action wrapped up Oct. 4 with two Hawkeye wins. Hilary Tyler and Mintz won their fifth-place match in flight No. 1, 8-6. Also in flight No. 1, Okino and Hodgman won their last match, 8-6.

"We've played two-consecutive weekends, but I think we're off to a good start," Wardlaw said.

Iowa will next travel to Kalamazoo, Mich., to participate in the ITA Midwest Regionals Oct. 23-26. The Midwest Regionals will host 33 teams.

"That will give us an idea of where a lot of teams are, and what spring will be like," Wardlaw said.

Hawkeyes place 7th at Oregon Invitational

The Iowa women's cross-country placed seventh out of 19 teams in the Willamette Invitational in Salem, Ore., on Oct. 4. The Hawkeyes finished with 193 team points. Iowa freshman Nikki Chapple, who was competing in her first career meet as a Hawkeye, led the team finishing the 5,000-meter race in 17:41 and a 16th-place finish. Coach Layne Anderson had high expectations for Chapple heading into the meet, but he believes she can even improve on her stellar first race.

"I think she went out a little quicker than she would have liked, being her first meet in nine months," he said.

Iowa senior Sarah Arens didn't compete in the meet because of an injury, but she should be back in time for the squad's next meet — NCAA pre-national meet on Oct. 18. Anderson thought the team could have moved up two to three spots had Arens run.

Soccer team remains in mid-season slump

The Iowa women's soccer team lost its fifth-consecutive game over the weekend, getting swept by Indiana and Purdue. The Hawkeyes lost on Oct. 3 to the Hoosiers, 1-0, and to Purdue on Sunday, 4-1, as the Hawkeyes' scoring drought continued — Iowa has only scored two goals in its last five games.

The losses dropped Iowa to 3-8-1, 0-5-1 in conference play, but the Hawks' coach said that despite the losses, the team played well.

"The effort this weekend was unbelievable," Carla Baker said. "They gave everything they had."

Iowa controlled the play for much of the Indiana game — the Hawkeyes outshot the Hoosiers, had more corner kicks, and had fewer fouls. However, they had a defensive breakdown early in the second half and gave up a goal to Robin Barker. The Hawks had several shots throughout the second half to tie the game but couldn't convert.

In the loss Sunday to Purdue, the score was misleading. Iowa played Purdue evenly, tying the Boilermakers in shots with 13 and saves with five, and the Hawkeyes had one more corner kick. Iowa took an early 1-0 lead on Katelyn Quinn's sixth goal of the year at the 16:40 mark. Purdue answered with a goal at 29:23 from Annette Kent, her seventh of the year. Eight minutes later, Purdue was awarded a penalty kick, which was converted by Kim Comisar to put Purdue ahead 2-1 going into the half.

Purdue scored again at the 65:34 mark on a corner kick that deflected off an Iowa defender past goalkeeper Britta Voegle for the goal. Purdue finished the scoring at the 83:05 mark. Iowa had several opportunities to score, but Boilermaker goalkeeper Lauren Mason made several diving saves on Iowa shots.

"We finally had some opportunities today," said senior Teesa Price. "We just couldn't put them away. Hopefully, we can put some of those away next week."

Iowa will play Wisconsin Friday at 7 p.m. at the Iowa Soccer Complex. The team then heads to the road for a game at Minnesota on Oct. 12 at 1 p.m.

Golf Course. The teams will play 36 holes today and conclude on Tuesday with 18.

Coach Bobbe Carney will go with a similar lineup from previous events, led by junior Liz Bennett. She leads the team in almost every statistical category including rounds played, scoring average, and has shot the lowest single round of the season. She has also led the team in every tournament this season.

Senior Laura Holmes, juniors Lauren Cole and Shannon Fleming, and freshmen Virginia Bonfils and Karla Murra will also compete.

"It's a fairly consistent lineup. It's been a lineup that has all played good golf," Carney said.

Last year at the Shoot-out, the Hawkeyes finished in 14th place.

Laura Holmes led Iowa with a 54-hole score of 230.

"We've just got to put it together at the right time. But we're gaining confidence each week," Carney said.

Colorado residents prepare for Kobe hearing

BY COLLEEN SLEVIN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAGLE, Colo. — When the television trucks roll into town this week to cover Kobe Bryant's court hearing, Daysi Spath will be ready.

In a black SUV with "Bonjour Bakery" written on the windows, Spath is offering to deliver breakfast, lunch, and lattes to news media crews in a lot across the street from the Eagle County Courthouse.

"The only good thing is that Kobe Bryant is bringing business to this town," she said.

The town of about 3,500 is gearing up for another onslaught of reporters, camera crews, and spectators at Bryant's preliminary hearing Thursday in the sexual assault case.

This time, residents in the town about 125 miles west of Denver say they are better prepared.

Town officials are preparing a packet of information about businesses, such as Spath's bakery, to distribute to arriving reporters.

The county has rented a lot across the street from the courthouse and subleased it to television networks for $10,000. Networks have chipped in another $5,000 to cover everything from portable toilets to tables and chairs in a tent set up as a press center.

The county also paved a field behind the prosecutor's office for extra parking, a project it completed early because of the Bryant case, assistant county administrator Becky Gadell said.

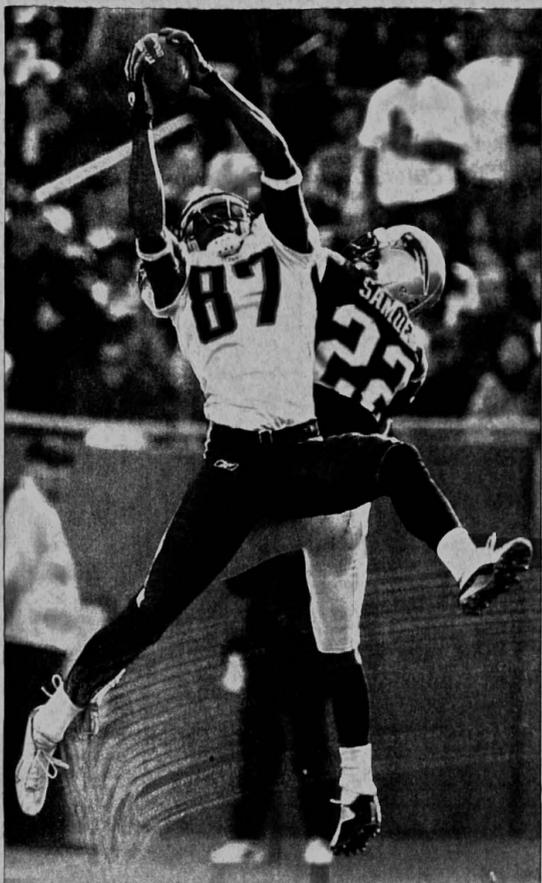

The county isn't making any money from the lot rentals, but it is serving as broker so the owner did not have to make individual arrangements with dozens of organizations.

"Our objective here is to balance public safety and insure a calm environment so that everyone can do their job — the court, the media, the parties," she said.

Bryant, 25, is accused of sexually assaulting a 19-year-old woman in June at a nearby resort. Free on $25,000 bond, the NBA star was at the Los Angeles Lakers' training camp in Honolulu over the weekend.

Bryant has denied the charges, saying he was guilty only of adultery.

The Titans' wide receiver Tyrone Calico (87) leaps for the ball as the Patriots' cornerback Asante Samuel (22) tries to defend during the third quarter on Sunday. The Patriots won 38-30.

Patriots prevail in wild game ender

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Patriots Mike Cloud returned from a four-game suspension for a substance-abuse violation and ran for a 15-yard TD with 3:14 left to give the Patriots the lead, then Ty Law clinched the win with a 65-yard interception return for a score.

The ending was wild. First Steve McNair bulled into the end zone from a yard out to give the Titans (3-2) a 25-24 lead, and then he threw for a 2-point conversion to rookie Tyrone Calico.

But Bethel Johnson returned the kickoff 71 yards to the Tennessee 30 for the Patriots (3-2). Three plays later, Cloud ran up the middle for the winning TD, capping a day in which he gained 73 yards on seven carries to beat the Titans, 38-30.

Chiefs 24, Broncos 23

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Dante Hall gave the Kansas City Chiefs plenty of happy returns — again.

Hall switched directions three times on a record-tying 93-yard punt return with 8:20 left, and the Chiefs rallied to beat Denver, in a game that matched unbeaten AFC West rivals.

Hall extended his NFL record of returning a kick for a touchdown to four straight games, and equaled the season record for kick returns for scores.

Bears 24, Raiders 21

CHICAGO (AP) — Paul Edinger kicked a 48-yard field goal on the final play as the Bears rallied from an 18-3 halftime to win their first game.

The Raiders (2-3) got five field goals from Sebastian Janikowski, but he also missed the first extra point of his career and had a 47-yard attempt blocked in the second half.

The Bears (1-3) finally showed some punch against the Raiders' soft defense, moving from its own 27 to the Raiders 30 in the final 3 minutes and 30 seconds to set up the winning score.

Bills 22, Bengals 16, OT

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Travis Henry's 2-yard plunge capped a five-play drive 4:53 into the extra period, lifting the Bills.

With Buffalo trailing 16-13, Drew Bledsoe marched the Bills 59 yards on 13 plays to set up Rian Lindell's 29-yard field goal with 28 seconds remaining in regulation.

Bledsoe wasted no time in securing the win, taking the Bills 57 yards after the Bengals (1-4) opened overtime going three-and-out.

It was the 22nd fourth-quarter comeback of Bledsoe's career, his third in two seasons with Buffalo.

Cowboys 24, Cardinals 7

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Emmitt

Smith sprained his left shoulder against his former teammates in the first half, then watched as the Cowboys won their third straight for the first time since 1999.

Quincy Carter threw for 277 yards and two TDs and the defense had two safeties in a four-play span in the third quarter as Bill Parcells won his first home game as coach of the Cowboys (3-1).

Smith, the leading rusher in NFL history who was released six weeks after Parcells was hired, lost a yard on six carries for Arizona (1-4), marking the first time in his 206 games that he failed to gain at least 1 yard.

Dolphins 23, Giants 10

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Olindo Mare kicked three field goals, and receiver James McKnight scored on a 68-yard reverse as the Dolphins took advantage of four New York turnovers and an injury to kicker Matt Bryant to win.

Ricky Williams, who was held in check until a game-clinching fourth-quarter drive, iced the third-straight win for Miami (3-1) with a 1-yard touchdown run. He finished with 22 carries for 39 yards, his worst game as a Dolphin.

Packers 35, Seahawks 13

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Brett Favre guided Green Bay on five consecutive touchdown drives to help the Packers beat their former coach, Mike Holmgren.

That was sweet revenge for Favre, who self-destructed in Holmgren's first return to Lambeau Field, when he committed six turnovers in a 27-7 loss to the Seahawks in 1999.

Vikings 39, Falcons 26

ATLANTA (AP) — Gus Frerotte filled in for the injured Daunte Culpepper again and threw a pair of touchdown passes to lead the Vikings.

Moe Williams ran for a pair of second-half touchdowns as the Vikings (5-0) outscored Atlanta 27-6 in the second half. The Vikings haven't missed a beat with Frerotte as the starter, winning the last two games by a combined score of 74-33. He completed 14 of 24 passes for 239 yards, including two throws that picked up more than 50 yards.

Panthers 19, Saints 13

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Relying on a steady dose of Stephen Davis, who ran for 159 yards and a touchdown, the Panthers moved to 4-0 for the first time.

Rod Smart — a.k.a. "He Hate Me" — had the flashiest play for the Panthers, returning a kickoff 100 yards for a touchdown.

John Kasay added field goals of 49 and 23 yards.

It was a confidence-building game for the Panthers, who opened last season 3-0 before going on an eight-game losing streak.

DONOVAN BURBA

Come-from-behind win is twice as nice

On Sept. 27, Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz stood in front of the assembled media in East Lansing, Mich., and proclaimed that his team was not built to come from behind.

At that point, who would have argued with him? The Hawkeyes fell behind early to Michigan State, then tried to come back with an attack that wasn't as much offensive as it was downright odious.

So when that same Hawkeye squad, with the same personnel, fell behind by two touchdowns in the first quarter to Michigan, theoretically a much stronger group than its in-state rival, you could almost hear the funeral bells tolling across Iowa City.

But then a funny thing happened: The team that couldn't come back, came back.

A touchdown here, a few field goals there, and all of the sudden the game was tied up at 20 in the third quarter. Then, with a sellout crowd cheering every play, Iowa took a 10-point lead. Michigan made a comeback of its own, but that fell short, the improbable becoming a reality.

So what happened in the span of a week that changed the Hawkeyes from a bunch of slugs into a group capable of hanging 30 points on what was the third-best defense in the country?

Credit Nathan Chandler, who rebounded from an ugly performance in the loss to pass for two touchdowns and rush for another. Credit Ramon Ochoa, who lost two fumbles to the Spartans but caught the game-winning score on Oct. 4. Credit Ochoa twice, in fact, for his punt and kickoff returns that put the Hawkeyes in great field position on three of their scoring drives.

But something else was at play at Kinnick, and it wasn't something that showed up on the post-game stat sheet. It was attitude, the same attitude that drove the Hawkeyes to run the table after losing a heartbreaker to Iowa State early last season.

"Just through the week of practice, we prepared too hard to give up after we got down 14-0," said Chandler. "We weren't just going to lay down for them. We got down 14-0; we just stayed with the game plan. You score one touchdown, you're down 14-7 — that doesn't sound so bad."

Chandler was even booed early in the game, when it looked like the offense was going nowhere yet again. Sixth career start, in front of 70,000+ who want his head, and does he fold? Well, no. On a first and goal from the six, he dropped back, shook would-be sacker LaMarr Woodley, then scrambled toward the goal line, diving across as he was about to be obliterated. The boo birds stayed silent in their nests the rest of the day.

It didn't take a win over the Wolverines to put Iowa's demons to rest. No, the Oct. 4 win is a testament to the character of a team that doesn't need a feel-good victory to boost its confidence. And that's what enabled them to come back.

Not that Ferentz is too keen on putting on a repeat performance. "I don't want to make a habit of it," he laughed. "I don't think that's what we're looking to do here."

Maybe not, but he sure should take comfort in knowing that when they get down, his Hawkeyes are indeed capable of picking themselves up.

No looking back

Senior WR Ramon Ochoa racked up 133 return-yards and a touchdown catch in the Hawkeyes' 30-27 win.

BY BRIAN TRIPLETT
THE DAILY IOWAN

Last week, Ramon Ochoa couldn't break a smile.

After Saturday's game against Michigan, it was hard for him not to.

The fifth-year senior felt like he let his team down when he fumbled twice against Michigan State in East Lansing, Mich., a week ago, but he helped to lead his team to a 30-27 victory over Michigan with a fourth-quarter touchdown catch and a handful of long kick and punt returns in the Hawkeyes' most recent battle against the Wolverines.

As far as redeeming himself goes, the 5-10, 189-pound Ochoa said that's impossible.

"I can't redeem myself," he said. "That's a loss in the column, and you can't take that loss away. That's going to be with me for the rest of the year, maybe the rest of my life, but this one was a big makeup test for me."

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said no one on the team cares more than Ochoa, but he was concerned about the Maywood, Calif., native's mental status after the game against the Spartans.

"Nobody hurt worse than him, and he hurt too much last week," Ferentz said following the Michigan game. "He really did. I was worried about that. But that's how he's built, and that's the kind of guys you like to have on your football team, so for him to come back today the way he did, it was sweet to see that. It really was, and he was such a major part of this victory."

Ochoa racked up 133 total return yards against the Wolverines, including a 43-yard punt return in the second quarter that he brought back to the Michigan 18-yard line to help the Hawkeyes eventually score their second touchdown of the game.

"Today, he made some huge plays for us, obviously the touchdown pass, but also on special teams," quarterback Nathan Chandler said. "I really feel like that's what got us going in this game."

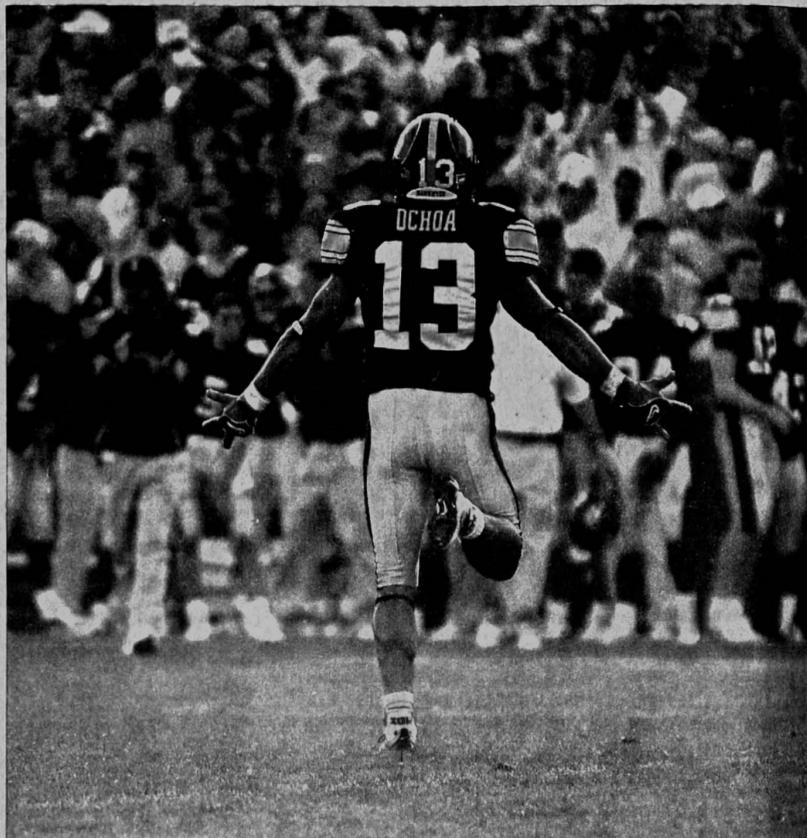

Chandler tossed the 31-yard touchdown pass to Ochoa with 5:16 remaining in the game to put Iowa up by 10 and give the Hawks the edge they needed to defeat Michigan in front of a sell-out crowd at Kinnick Stadium.

Ochoa is filling in at wide receiver with the absence of injured Hawkeyes Mo Brown and Ed Hinkel, but Ferentz might have to make some adjustments in the rotation when the starters return to action.

Chandler said it doesn't matter to him who he's throwing the ball to, as long as he knows their names.

Chances are, Ochoa is a name he won't forget.

Ramon Ochoa runs off the field after making a play in the Hawkeyes' 30-27 win over Michigan on Oct. 4.

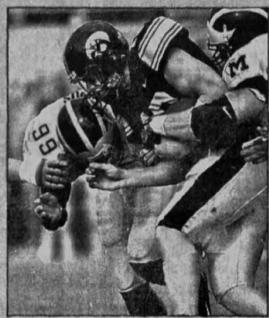

QUARTER BY QUARTER

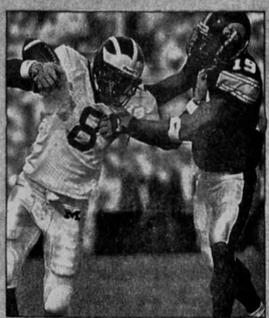

The Wolverines jumped out to an early 14-0 lead just 11 minutes into the game after Chris Perry's five-yard touchdown run and Braylon Edwards' 14-yard touchdown catch from John Navarre, who went 5-5 on the drive. The Hawkeyes fought back on the following series, however, when Nathan Chandler threw a 23-yard pass to tight end Erik Jensen, followed by a 13-yard pass to full-back Edgar Cervantes. Three plays later, Chandler ran the ball into the end zone after avoiding a sack to put Iowa on the board.

Michigan's Garrett Rivas hit a 47-yard field goal, which bounced off and over the crossbar to give the Wolverines a 17-7 advantage. Iowa's Nate Kaeding responded on the next drive with a 34-yard field goal to keep the Hawkeyes within a score, but Rivas knocked in another field goal from 26 yards. With under two minutes remaining in the first half, Ramon Ochoa returned Michigan's punt 43 yards. After a 5-yard pass to Ochoa and a 2-yard loss by Fred Russell, Chandler found Calvin Davis open in the end zone for a 6-yard touchdown pass just 19 seconds before the half.

For the sixth-straight game, the Hawkeyes shut out their opponents in the third quarter. Iowa cornerback Antwan Allen picked off a Navarre pass and returned it 24 yards to the Michigan 28-yard line midway through the quarter. Kaeding kicked in a 25-yard field goal to tie the game at 20-20, and after Chris Smith blocked Rivas' punt, Kaeding nailed his third field goal of the game to put Iowa up 23-20. On the last play of the quarter, Chandler's pass was intercepted by Marlin Jackson, who returned it 3 yards to the Michigan 33.

Jensen caught two crucial passes for the Hawkeyes, both of which came on third down, on a drive that eventually ended in a 31-yard touchdown catch by Ochoa. On Michigan's following drive, Navarre hooked up on a 41-yard touchdown pass to Edwards to put the Wolverines within three. After forcing Iowa to punt, Michigan got the ball back with 2:44 remaining in the game, but after a 5-yard delay of game penalty, the Wolverines failed to connect on fourth and 12 when Navarre's pass was incomplete. The Hawkeyes took a knee to capture the 30-27 victory.

play, 79-yard drive, capped off by a 31-yard touchdown pass from Chandler to Ochoa. The receiver was stripped of the ball almost immediately, but officials ruled in favor of Iowa.

Chandler was 17-34 for 195 yards on the day, a career high.

The touchdown turned out to be huge, as Michigan quarterback John Navarre drove his team 86 yards on seven plays, highlighted by a 41-yard missile to Braylon Edwards in the end zone. After Iowa went three-and-out, the Wolverines got the ball back with 2:44 left to play. Navarre looked poised to bring his team back, but a long run by Chris Perry was negated by offsetting penalties.

After three incompletions in Iowa territory, a delay of game call left Michigan facing a fourth and 12. Navarre's pass to Jason Avant was high, and the celebration began.

Inside the Numbers

Iowa allowed a season-high 463 yards of total offense, mostly through the air.

Navarre went 26-49 for 389 yards, and Avant and Edwards both had more than 100 yards receiving. But for the fourth week in a row, Iowa held its opponent to under 100 yards rushing. Perry, a leading Heisman contender, ran for 87 yards on 24 carries, his second-lowest output of the season. Oregon held Perry to 26 yards on Sept. 20.

The Hawkeye offense mustered just 295 yards, but that didn't concern Ferentz.

"All I looked at was the scoreboard," he said. "We're not a statistics team; we won't be a statistics team this year. We led the Big Ten in scoring the last two years — I'm very proud of that."

Injury report

Cornerback Jovon Johnson left the game in the first half with an ankle sprain and did not return. After the game, the sophomore proclaimed himself "fine," calling the injury "nothing major." Ma'Quan Dawkins, subbing for Johnson, suffered a knee injury, which Ferentz said might be a little more serious.

BOSTON — With the Red Sox four outs from another post-season failure, David Ortiz saved their season.

Ortiz broke out of an 0-for-16 slump with a two-run double off Keith Foulke with two outs in the eighth inning, giving Boston a thrilling 5-4 win over the Oakland Athletics on Sunday and forcing a decisive fifth game in the best-of-five series.

Oakland has lost eight consecutive times when it was just one win from advancing in the playoffs, the longest streak in major league history.

The teams had to fly across the country for Game 5 today in Oakland, with Boston ace Pedro Martinez opposing Barry Zito.

Scott Williamson pitched two perfect innings for the win, getting Erubiel Durazo to pop up to third base for the final out.

The A's got disappointing performances from two of their best pitchers. Starter Tim Hudson, pitching on three days' rest, left after one inning because of a strained muscle in his left side. Foulke, the loser, led the AL with 43 saves during the regular season, failing to convert just five chances.

Boston, which won Game 3 on Trot Nixon's 11th-inning homer, trailed 4-3 Sunday when Nomar Garciaparra doubled with one out in the eighth. One out later, Manny Ramirez singled sharply to left field, too hard for Garcia-parra to score.

into the AL championship series with an 8-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

After a sloppy loss in the opener that brought back memories of last year's first-round flop against Anaheim, New York beat the Twins three-straight times to clinch the AL division series 3-1.

A rested Yankees team will open the AL championship series Wednesday night at home against Oakland or Boston.

Wells improved to 9-2 lifetime in the postseason by going 7¹/₃ innings for the Yankees, who sent 12 batters to the plate in the fourth and knocked out Twins starter Johan Santana.

Bernie Williams and Hideki Matsui each hit an RBI double, and Nick

Johnson added a two-run double. Alfonso Soriano's bloop two-run single made it 6-0.

Derek Jeter later homered for the Yankees. After losing Game 1 at home, 3-1, New York outscored Minnesota, 14-3.

A leg cramp limited Santana's Game 1 outing to four shutout innings. After retiring 10 of his first 11 batters, Santana's success came to a screeching end with one out in the fourth. A stunned, silenced crowd of 55,875 watched the Yankees bash balls all over the field.

Marlins 7, Giants 6

MIAMI (AP) — Somehow, Ivan Rodriguez and the Florida Marlins held on.

The All-Star catcher withstood a hard collision to tag J.T. Snow for the final out, and the Marlins beat Barry Bonds and the San Francisco Giants on Oct. 4, clinching their best-of-five division series 3-1.

In typically dramatic fashion, the wild-card Marlins moved into the NL championship series to face the Chicago Cubs.

Dontrelle Willis and the Marlins blew a 5-1 lead before rookie Miguel Cabrera helped them regain the lead in the eighth with an RBI single.

Rodriguez scored the go-ahead run, jarring the ball loose from catcher Yorvit Torrealba. And when the ball scooted away, another run scored.

But the defending NL champion Giants weren't done. They scored once against closer Ugueth Urbina and had runners at first and second with two out when Jeffrey Hammonds singled to left.

A charging Jeff Conine fielded the ball on one bounce and threw a one-hopper wide of the plate to Rodriguez.

Rodriguez quickly moved in front of the plate and applied the tag as Snow bowled him over, trying in vain to dislodge the ball. Rodriguez's mask and helmet went flying, but he held the ball.

Wood wins again in series

CUBS WIN

Twelve-straight division titles have produced only one World Series championship, and the Braves face an uncertain future. Gary Sheffield, Greg Maddux, Javy Lopez, and Vinny Castilla are all in the last year of their contracts.

"We had a terrific year," manager Bobby Cox said. "The ball's got to bounce your way. It just didn't."

A couple of ex-Pirates helped the Cubs break through in the postseason. Kenny Lofton led off the game with a double and came around to score the first run. Ramirez put the Cubs up 4-0 with a two-run homer in the sixth — a massive, 439-foot shot over the center-field wall.

Braves pitcher Mike Hampton didn't even turn around after Ramirez connected. With Wood on the mound, the Cubs could have popped the champagne right then and there.

Wood won for the second time in the best-of-five series with a performance that matched his effort in Game 1.

A disputed call by the umpires — is that becoming a theme of this postseason? — led to the only Atlanta run.

The big Texan went eight innings, giving up just five hits before giving way to Borowski, an ex-Brave who finished off Atlanta in the ninth.

Chipper Jones led off the Atlanta ninth with a long drive to right field and — in a further sign that the Cubs' fortunes have changed — Sosa jumped and caught it at the wall.

Lopez and Jones then went down swinging, no doubt sending all of Chicago into a delirious celebration.

The Braves were a dominant hitting team during the regular season, leading the NL in all major categories. But the lineup that produced six 20-homer players and four guys with 100 RBIs couldn't do anything against Chicago's young guns.

Twenty-three-year-old Mark Prior pitched a two-hitter in Game 3, a 3-1 victory for the Cubs. Wood, 26, gave up seven hits and three runs in 15¹/₃ innings.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Oklahoma is nation's only dominant team

BY JOSH DUBOW
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Teams have been hyped up and brought down in a matter of moments. Expected powerhouses have struggled to escape against overmatched opponents.

In this topsy-turvy start to the college football season, about the only constant has been Oklahoma's dominance.

The Sooners, No. 1 in the Associated Press preseason poll, have barely been tested through their first five wins, outscoring the opposition, 221-75.

"They are playing great right now. They're head and shoulders above everyone else," Texas coach Mack Brown said Sunday as he prepared for next weekend's showdown with Oklahoma. "We'll lose some sleep over the next couple of days to try to figure them out."

While each passing week has exposed flaws on most of the top teams, Oklahoma has been flawless.

The defense was expected to be overpowering, and it has been, overwhelming opponents with its relentless speed. The special teams has four returns for touchdowns.

And with a healthy Jason White leading the offense, what was supposed to be the question mark has been a strength for the Sooners. Oklahoma has scored more than 50 points three-straight weeks.

"I think they're the best team in the country," Brown said. "Great defenses are usually better than the offenses they play. They have no weaknesses on defense. Then no one talks about the offense and the offensive line. ... Their talent is as good as anybody in the country."

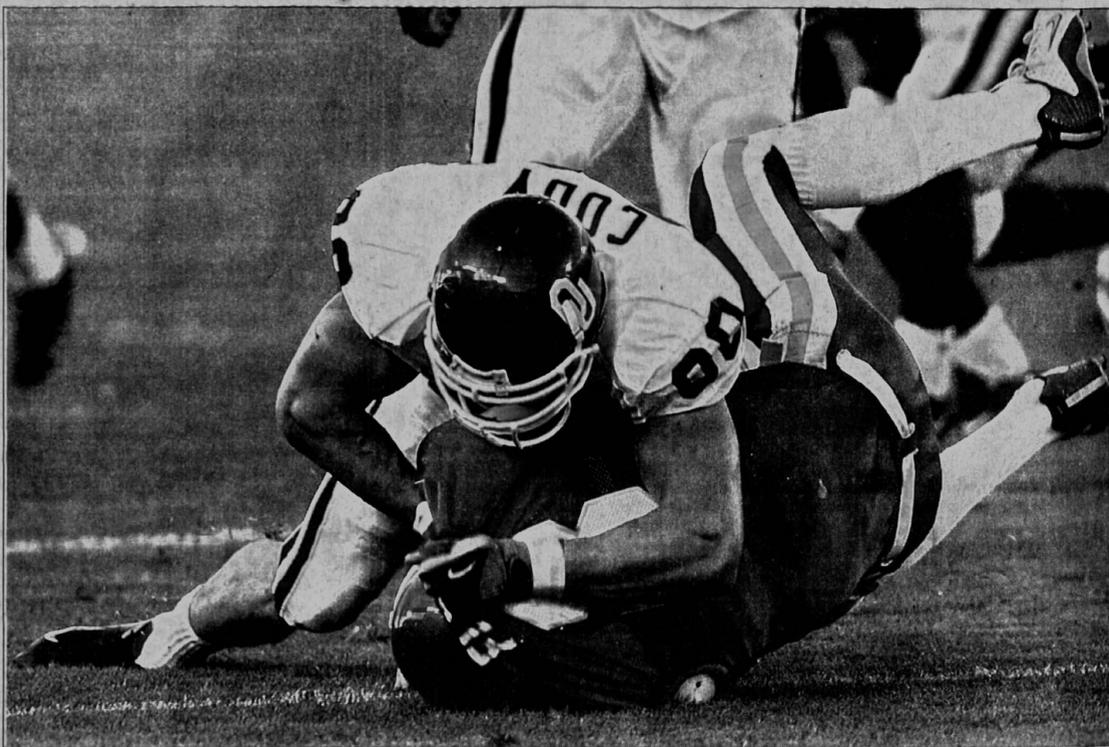

White, who had his last two seasons cut short by knee injuries, has been a big reason why. He tied a school record with five touchdown passes while throwing for a career-high 384 yards against Iowa State. He has thrown 16 touchdown passes and only three interceptions and is the nation's third highest-rated passer.

"Jason's numbers are better right now than others; that should count for something," Oklahoma coach Bob Stoops said when asked where White should rank in the Heisman race.

"He's such a hard worker. I know Jason, and the thing he's excited about is the way our team is playing. He's worked for this; he's playing in a great way."

There are 11 undefeated teams in Division I-A but only Oklahoma looks like a great one. The Sooners could get a tough test this week — but then again, Oklahoma has won three straight against the Longhorns.

"We're probably peaking at the right moment," Stoops said. "We're getting into the Big 12 schedule and looking forward to next week."

Chris Donahue/Associated Press

Oklahoma's Dan Cody flattens Iowa State quarterback Austin Flynn during the Sooners' 53-7 pummeling of the Cyclones on Oct. 4.

At least one of the unbeaten will fall Saturday when No. 2 Miami visits No. 5 Florida State — the first time since 1993 both teams were in the top five for their annual showdown.

The others have shown flaws or haven't been tested. Ohio State, Arkansas, Northern Illinois, and TCU have all been sent to overtime this year. Minnesota's toughest opponent so far has been Penn State (2-4), whose only wins came against Temple and Kent State. The Gophers will host No. 20 Michigan on Friday in a game that could put them into Big Ten title contention. No. 6 LSU has played one tough game, surviving in a 17-10 win at home against Georgia two weeks ago. The Tigers host struggling Florida this week.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

The California election is so preposterous, it's hard for any comedy show not to take a shot at it. It's the biggest carrot you can dangle.

— Todd Yasui, executive producer of "The Late Late Show."

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Today, assistance will not only be given readily, but it will open up a new friendship or partnership for future projects. You will gain trust and can work toward the goals you have set for yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Focus on improving your financial situation. If you let emotional matters get you down, you are likely to lose ground. Don't let anyone back you into a corner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): This is a great day to improve your skills for getting ahead. You need to reinvent yourself. If you are versatile, you will be more valuable to any group you work with.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Someone you care about will need your assistance, and you won't be able to say no. Don't forget your obligation to those you live with. You may need to get a little help.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You will be somewhat emotional, so clear up anything that is bothering you. Be ready to stabilize your love life once and for all. If you are single, now is the time to meet someone new.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Changes are inevitable today. Don't be afraid; embrace whatever comes your way. If you have let your work fall behind, ask for help.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Try something new today. Love and romance will be in a high cycle, so don't miss out. Spend time with the one you love, or socialize so you can meet a future partner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will have to watch your back. Someone will undermine you or try to put demands on you today. Prepare to stop this person in her or his tracks.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't waste time when you have so much going for you. You'll be surprised how many people will bend over backward to work alongside you. Organize a timetable for yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You will have some good suggestions to offer others. Be innovative. Make your own decisions. You aren't a follower, and now is the time to prove it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will tend to get a little emotional today. Put your energy into romantic endeavors. This is a perfect day to go after the person you love or to let your partner know how much you care.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take care of every detail, or you will experience a delay or setback. Expect officials to give you a hard time. Keep your thoughts to yourself, but listen carefully.
