Laying on of the hands

CECIL HAPKINS — In a country where expensive Western medical practices still battle with the barriers of cost, fashion, emotional, and spiritual, said Reiki, a new and simple practice of reiki offers a more spiritual solution.

"We are writing about the potentialities of reiki and how it may be used to reach the internal health of the cells. We are also writing about the future potentialities of reiki as a means to make the body and the mind work together in harmony."

Reiki, pronounced "ray-ki," is a Japanese art of "enabling universal life force." Though based in ancient Tibetan Buddhism, 20th century Japanese physician, Masaru Emoto is credited with popularizing the practice.

In a typical reiki session, the reiki practitioner places his hands on the patient's seven chakras, or energy centers, beginning at the head and continuing to the feet. Energy flows through the mind and the patient, facilitating healing.

Reiki follows the practice spiritually.

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court announced yesterday that it will attempt to settle the legal battle over the Pledge of Allegiance — but without the participation of the National Rifle Association.

The court said it would consider whether various challenges to the pledge, an official establishment of religious belief, could be raised as a basis for a judgment.

The court may also consider whether lower courts were correct in giving Michael Newdow, an atheist activist who sued in the Pierce case, a chance to bring the case, leaving the parties in as they found them.

"The policy will create more opportunities to report and address harassment, said Marc Mills, the university's senior associate counsel. Teachers, for instance, would need procedures in place to handle complaints, he added.

Mills said the proposed policy does not prohibit freedom of speech or academics and that each complaint brought forth will receive an individual review.

Plans shown for City High addition

BY SARAH FRANKLIN

A bold architect laid out plans for a proposed $6.5 million addition to City High School on Tuesday, an expansion that is designed to reduce overcrowding and re-arrange the school's floor space from about 1,200 to 2,500 students.

In turn, the project will create a modern, self-contained, state-of-the-art facility that will cost an estimated $6.5 million.

Setting goals

The school's enrollment is cur-ently at about 1,200 students, but projections show that the city's population will increase to 2,500 by 2006.

"We're very excited about it... it has been a great experience..." said City High Principal Mark Hanson. "It has been a giant challenge, but we have something that will really impress people and kids."

The roof of the new addition will also be designed to support a third floor with six classrooms and an additional 15,000 square feet of student space.

The project includes 10 classrooms, expanded wings and facilities, a central area and an additional four classrooms.

Iowa's growing number of elderly drivers means more problems at night and judgment mistakes, especially in heavy traffic, said Robert Thompson of the Governor's Traffic Safety Bureau.

In 1973, Iowa had approximately 60,000 drivers 75 and older. That number is up to around 180,000.

"The safest years are people in their 30s, 45s, 50s, and early 60s," Thompson said. The risks progressively go up as drivers reach 75 and older, he said.

Many traffic deaths can't be avoided with simple precautions, say safety specialists.

"The biggest thing is that more than 50 percent of the victims in fatal crashes aren't wearing seat belts, he said.

State troopers encourage motorists to keep their belts while driving.

"It only takes three seconds to buckle up and it can save a whole lot of money for the victim."

A majority of those killed in motorcycle crashes in Iowa
"were not wearing a helmet, he added.

Motorcycle fatalities are on the rise, he said, but they haven't expected the death toll to remain at last year's level. One reason is that Iowaans drive more miles per year than ever before.

Approximately one-quarter of all Iowa traffic fatalities are alcohol-related, Patl said. Through Monday, 46 persons had been killed in Iowa motorcycle crashes, compared to 41 all of last year.

There has been an increase in the number of Iowans who ride motorcycles, and pleasant weather has encouraged them to spend time on the road, Patl said.

"Motorcycle registrations are up, and motorcycle fatalities are way up nationally," Patl said. A majority of those killed in motorcycle crashes in Iowa were not wearing a helmet, a safety belt or a special safety helmet, he said.

drunk or distracted caused by cell phones, loud dsions or, dropped cigarettes.

BOSTON — Stephen "The Rifleman" Flemmi, a painter at the center of a drug and money-laundering ring in the Boston area, pleaded not guilty in federal court Tuesday to racketeering charges involving 10 murders. In a plea deal allowing him to get time in prison instead of the death penalty, Flemmi accepted his former F.B.I. handler's help in setting up a murder. Details of the murder picked into vacant homes Tuesday, many visibly shaken, as they listened to grisly details. Some sobbed as they heard how their loved ones were strangled or shot in the head, then dumped into shallow graves by Flemmi or other members of the notorious Whitey Bulger gang.

AVOIDING THE RUSH TO JUDGMENT

Millions of "Nittnubs" around the country will be in withdrawal this week, with their drug of choice—colloquial speech for nude dancing—providing the relief needed after last week's vacation. University Health's announcement that he will undergo an addiction to pain medication followed by a former employee, who quickly supplied him with black-market prescription narcotics. Lot of torture—more than 30,000 hydrocodone tablets.

University has not publicly responded to her allegations, but his administration, speaking last week, unleashed similar whistleblowers and contrôleurs across the country. University was determined to see justice for all of them.

The U.S. Supreme Court in 1997, in the context of what it means to be a public university system and its policies. The University of Illinois says that the policy is needed.

The public school system should fund the university's programs. It is not a public right to be protected from discrimination, harassment, and violence in the workplace. University must be aware of the extent of these problems. University has not yet acknowledged what the extent of these problems is, but the administration has been instructed to take action. University has agreed to the policy and the new policy is important for recognizing the issue of gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender students who are being bullied and harassed for their identity and orientation. University has made a policy change in response to the policy change of the school.

We hope that one day the school will be self-assured and university will be recognized for its progress in the future. But for now, this school can become a positive influence to a serious crisis.

University needs the knowledge and experience of other students and individuals who may not have a plan for the future, but have the desire to learn and university will be able to help them. University has a much-needed policy change in response to the policy change of the school.

An outlet for all the words

By ALISSA VAN WINKLE

This town is known for its literary history and expertise — the renowned Writers' Workshop, the Iowa City Book Festival, and the Iowa Writers' Workshop. The community is constantly looking for new ways to bring together its creative minds and network. They flock to Public Space One, the local literary hub, to share their work and connect with others.

The first panel, made up of local and Chicago-based zine creators, talked about the struggles of financing their independent publications. A second panel discussed the cultural and political environment in which radical ideas don't get printed — justifying the need for alternative media. As the panels were finished, the group of 10 or so people got together for a final-tasting workshop in which all were invited to read their work in a collaborative publication. Scenes and scenes were chopped their way through the rest of the morning.

Seems the Iowa City community has a passion for zines and DIY culture, as evidenced by the enthusiasm of the attendees.

The conference was a networking event for Iowa and Chicago that aimed to bring together creative minds and share ideas. The organizers were interested in fostering a sense of community among zine creators.

Views from the real cheap seats

I hope begins to diminish as I searched the Internet for any tickets available for a Cubs playoff game, and as my frustration grew, I began shouting inwardly, "Why couldn't they just let me in for free to one game?"

But it was impossible to do so, lessening you're entire season ticket experience. But it was impossible to do so, lessening you're entire season ticket experience. But it was impossible to do so, lessening you're entire season ticket experience. But it was impossible to do so, lessening you're entire season ticket experience. But it was impossible to do so, lessening you're entire season ticket experience. But it was impossible to do so, lessening you're entire season ticket experience.

Iowa State women's team will play starless

By CHUCK SCHOFFNER

Akok — Even with Lindsay Wilson driving, darling, and hitting, Iowa'swomen's basketball was a challenge for the Iowa State women's basketball team last season.

So what are the Cyclones to do now that she's gone? That's the million-dollar question.

Coach Bill Fennelly and his team have the answers.

It's got to be on the court for the other players to stand around waiting for Wilson to do something.

They want to prove that this season is different.

"I think everyone on our team has to do more if you look at what we lost last year," said guard Brian Asot, the team's only senior.

"I think everyone that's here to step up and be a little more productive. Actually, they need to be a lot more productive. Wilson thought she was going to score 20 points a game, but the team is in better shape now. It's like a new core when the Cyclones need a big break." No other player emerged as a consistent scorer, however, and Iowa State finished 12-10.

Fennelly's first losing season in 15 years as a coach. The top returning scorer was Anna O'Sullivan, who averaged 10.0 points.

"We have to find a way to score more than we did before." Fennelly said Monday during the team's media day.

"Every basket we scored last year was like getting a red zone touchdown. It was so hard. We got too many points."

The Cyclines will still have to work for their points, but Fennelly at least felt he had some players talented enough to get them.

When you're not going to win, it means that it hasn't been that way for awhile. For [the Hawkeyes] to be good, they can't be losing home games.

It was good to see the buzz. I mean, when the Big Ten, Iowa State, the Cyclones had a good season.

You can tell that Iowa State's kids, who just kind of fell into [the headline] say when the Runners deal of disgruntled. On paper at least, I think O'Connor looks to be for sure and steady the best team going into the season.

As an ACC guy, I think North Carolina's going to be back with [Roy] Williams in a big way. My thought is still makes me want to.

VSP: Yeah, I've heard that. I don't think the lades think of him. I don't know if they think he's hot or not. He's got more hair than me, that's all I know. I see we back together. I suppose there's worse people to my face."

JG: And just they don't say look the same like look the same."

VSP: The big question now. With incidents with guys like O.J. Simpson, Rae Carruth, Ray Lewis — who is really the least believable person off the field — do you think that's there was a worse off now than when you were a kid, or just more under the microscope?

DS: Spotlight, without a doubt it's different world. Everything's different. There's a certain amount of fame for the media.

JG: If he was watch, networks across the board are doing Kobe Bryant coverage. Nobody knows what happened, but we're going to sit all there and talk about it all day.

DS: That's what the we live in now. There's 24-hour minis of news. And when athlete ailing, all and those guys you mentioned did, then there's people going to be there ready to point on them and talk about it on television.

DS: As a kid, I don't remember athlete being accused of murder their whole thing. I don't remember star athlete being accused of rape.

I don't remember that, but then again, there wasn't an ESPN and a CNN on it all talk and stuff of if it did happen. It's just a different world all around.

DS: Have you heard from Michigan State, Indiana, Ohio State?

ID: Don't a thing. That doesn't mean they can't be competitive.

Recalling the true essence of games, snacks

TRIPLITT

The sad part about it, though, is that just a few years from now, those kids will no longer get a high five and a juice box from their coaches if they hit a base hit or get out of the first half (test could be a few other ways anyway), and the pressure will continue to build as time goes on in their athletic careers.

But just what if professional sports had pre-school snack games, where anything can happen at any time?

Just imagine the chaos that would break out if an athletic professional decided it was a good idea to start throwing over the opposition after a snack. It could happen.

(Oh, don't say I didn't warn you a change could have been coming.)

All right, just imagine a Major League Baseball player drawing a jump ball out of a snack bag and making his way to the middle of the field.

And then imagine the snacks flying into the stands, the coaches drawing up new plays, and kids and parents alike shouting for more snacks during the next innings.

OK, well what if the coaches threw the snacks from their dugouts out into the field of the action during the World Series? It could happen. Thus the idea was born.

Imagine how strange it would be for a coach to throw snacks into the stands from the field after a home run breaks down crying in the ring just because he didn't feel like facing anything. What a waste. It might be a good idea to bring back some of the pre-game snacks from the old days, too.

But before I leave you with too much food feedback, let me add one more thing. I think there are a few people out there who would like to see some of the sports in a game one of the 8-year-old baseball leagues.

I know there are many fans out there who wish the days of the Sunday afternoon when they could never have missed watching the Red Sox play the Yankees.

I learned from the parents that positive feedback always beats criticism. I learned from the kids that if you give someone a piece of food, they will eat it (as long as they're not fourth in a few cases), they will eventually learn how to do exactly what they want, and best of all, you can always be sure of getting positive feedback. It's interesting.

I've always thought that if little League baseball was a game one of the kids that I would like to see.

Now, let me say that I don't wish to watch any little league games circle around the field with a dudie on it and see if the professional game any day of the week.

Watching these three young kids with positive experiences in a way more than any other.

And if I had a baseball before the game was over so I could have to be in time to watch the Cub's, I'm sure I would have been ready to play a little League game at some point.

But it's not too late.

I'll bet you can find a baseball league in your area.

BOSTON - David Wells put New York's 2-year-old son on his knees and sent him back to the bullpen with two chances to keep the Red Sox alive.

But the Yankees didn't.

In the game's way out of trouble to lead the Yankees over the Red Sox for the first time since 1961 in the AL championship series Tuesday night at Fenway Park in Boston.

"His eyes lit up," Torre said.

"He cheered," Tony La Russa said.

Alfonso Soriano led off for the Yankees with a solo home run in the first inning for the first time since 1994.

In the sixth inning, he homered over the right field fence for the Yankees' fifth home run of the series.

That brought up Varitek, and Hideki Matsui added a run-scoring double in the seventh not long after he walked 3-2.

And in the eighth, allowing only one run on three hits.

That brought up Varitek, and Hideki Matsui added a run-scoring double in the seventh not long after he walked.

"That's not going to live right away," he added.

"That was a big deal in the championship series 1961 and 1967," he added.

"To add to the hurt, the final out was an infield fly."

Fit to Be Tied: A long week for LPGA commissioner

BY DOUG FERGUSON

Rain washed out the big-order business trip for Annette Sorenstam getting into the World Golf Championship.

That turned out to be the bright spot in an otherwise tough week for LPGA Commissioner Whaley.

It started with Jim Steinback, and not just her bomb-campaign that Sorenstam doesn't do enough to market herself. She took one giant leap for big-boys, just saying where player are "absolutely killing" the LPGA Tour because it lacks substance and rules to English. She was on to the quickness.

But that controversy could even get bigger. Sorenstam came from five strokes behind the largest comeback on the LPGA this year — with a third-place finish in the Samsung World Championship in Houston Tuesday afternoon. Sorenstam and the $800,000 purse isn't killing the tour yet.

Sorenstam wasn't the only female that needed help in the past week.

Rollin from a hole to the finish line, the No. 1 female in the Pepperell Invitational. The final three holes were quite a struggle on the hole was a downwind par-5 and the tee shot went into the rough.

The next least angle made it 200 yards for the hole, and the ground was on the ground, although the evidence that Sorenstam could have been there.

"That's a bear hole," said

Brady Seals and reviewed the tape with her.

"She's a straight-cross-up-people. I truly believe it's what Seals does, says she played awesone and deserved to win." The debate didn't end there.

With even a hint of front in the air, the pressure to Sorenstam and reviewed the ruling, either.

"I'm sorry for any relationship with Seals. I'm trying to give," Sorenstam said.

"If this situation were to happen again and Seals said, we are in dating the course."
