Blank Center near opening

University and state officials tour the facility, which, despite a recent fire, will open its doors in January

BY ANNIE SHUPPY
THE DAILY IOWAN

Top UI administrators, state officials, and project donors toured the Blank Honors Center late last week, a first glimpse for many after a fire threatened to delay its opening for several months.

Although charred, jagged remnants of broken glass on the windows served as visible reminders of the Aug. 29 blaze, university officials expect that the six-floor, $13.9 million facility will expand their capacity to provide services to gifted students as early as January.

Nicholas Colangelo, the director of the Belin-Blank International Center for Gifted Education, said the vision for the program and the building began in 1977 with a phone call from Connie Belin, a mother who, along with her friend Jacqueline Blank, was interested in providing opportunities for high-achieving students — an endeavor that was not on the university's priority list.

"I'm just fortunate to be in a position to see that vision and help put structure to it," Colangelo said. "This building is a story about some outstanding human beings."

UI President David Skorton gave accolades to donor Myron Blank, who was present at the festivities, and he lauded the center's potential as a recruiting tool.

"This will provide us with the opportunity to expose the highest-ability students to the University of Iowa," Skorton said.

Gov. Tom Vilsack also attended but said he felt that the lack of economic progress and state support for higher education did not entitle him to "share the stage."

"I have to acknowledge that the state I am the chief executive officer of has failed to adequately support the efforts of the people here today," he said.

Bubble wrap may still cover the center's stair rails, and its floors may still be dusty, but the building will provide a state-of-the-art home for the Honors Program and the gifted-education center. The combination, university officials said, will make the building the first of its kind nationwide.

Alice Fulton, the Honors Program director, said the building creates a "unique space where students can learn and work together."

The setting sun shone through the lobby's expansive windows, representing the accessibility and openness of the programs inside, said Tim Hickman, an architect for Herbert Lewis Kruse Blunck Architecture.

Beverly Robalino, the project manager for the Blank Center, said officials will begin to move programs into the facility by Jan. 5.

Public colleges gird for slashes

BY CHOYON MANJREKAR
THE DAILY IOWAN

Officials at Iowa's three public universities will begin talks this week to discuss the best ways to handle additional state appropriation reductions.

A proposed 8.3 percent tuition increase at the UI, Iowa State University, and the University of Northern Iowa accompanies Gov. Tom Vilsack's call for a 2.5 percent budget cut to all state agencies to avoid a state deficit.

"The appropriation of the cuts will be underway after the president meets with the department heads and deans of different university departments," said Doug True, the UI vice president for Finance, who could not specify any areas up for cuts Sunday.

The cuts in state appropriations have set the UI back $7 million, prompting talks to begin among department heads, deans, and UI President David Skorton this week. True said administrators hope to have a more concrete action plan by next week.

At ISU, which was hit with $5.8 million in cuts, officials face a similar situation.

"President [Gregory] Geoffrey has not made any announcements, but we will come to a conclusion after discussing the situation with the vice presidents, provosts, and heads of different departments" sometime next week, said John McCarroll, the ISU director of university relations.

UNI suffered approximately $2 million in losses; a meeting with the president and his advisers is set today to decide a course of action, said James O'Connor, UNI's media-relations director.

Mary Jane Beach, the UI assistant vice president for business services, said the university will follow guidelines suggested by Skorton in a message he sent out in May to decide which university programs will receive less money. Those outlines include salary increases on par with cost of living increases and an assurance shielding individual university colleges and major units from the effects of the cut.

Vanessa Kerry grew up discussing politics and the fight against social injustice with her father, a lawmaker and Vietnam War veteran.

"It was never any one lesson; we'd take what we saw in life and talk about it," said Kerry, the younger daughter of Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., who is seeking the Democratic presidential nomination. "Lessons were always coming up."

Now 26 and a third-year student at the Harvard School of Medicine, Vanessa Kerry still speaks with her father every day — only now, they are both on the campaign trail.

Vanessa Kerry, who kicked off the "Kerry Dorm Storm" in Iowa last weekend to garner support on college campuses, is one of several campaign children who have set aside their regular lives to stump for their fathers. Iowa City has seen its share of wives and children as well — today, the wife of Sen. John Edwards, D-N.C., will meet with Johnson County Democrats. Last summer, Elizabeth Edwards visited Iowa City for a breakfast with some local supporters.

Chrissy Gephardt, too, has visited town on behalf of her father, Rep. Dick Gephardt, D-Mo. The presidential hopeful's wife also frequently accompanies him on the campaign trail. Prior to their father's withdrawal from the race, the daughters of Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., similarly attended events.

But not all of the Democratic kin are actively stumping for their fathers.

School District turns to $ reserve

BY ALEX LANG
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa City School District will lose $960,000 from its budget this year, stemming from a state-wide 2.5 percent reduction announced by Gov. Tom Vilsack last week.

Superintendent Lane Plugge said part of the problem is that individual schools have already been informed of how much they can spend because budgets have already been set for this year. With the cuts affecting the current year's budget, administrators decided to dip into the district's reserve fund instead of cutting people or programs in midyear.

Plugge superintendent of Iowa City School District

The reserve fund held $13.8 million as of June; it is used to round out budgets in most years, said School Board member Jan Leff, adding that the fund has also been used to buy equipment for schools because the state's technology budget has been slashed so drastically.

"We will still try to be as frugal as possible this year," Plugge said. "We will continue to watch our budget."

Eighty-five percent of the district's expenses are locked up in salaries and benefits this year, he said. No positions will be eliminated to save money.

One concern among administrators regarding the budget cuts is how they would affect the district's budgets in the upcoming years. With continued years of tight budgets, the district will begin to look at how to save money in the upcoming years, which may include reducing staff or cutting certain school programs.

"There are several things we will have to look at with next year's budget," Plugge said. "But those are the things we look at every year."

The district did receive an increase in funding from the state because its enrollment numbers went up, but this money has already been committed to salary increases and other general expenses.

Leff said that cutting personnel is something that the district does not want to do, but that will remain an option when the budget for next year comes up. She added she does not want to have to cut any programs because they are all necessary.

"We are going to have to look at making cuts in the future," she said. "We cannot continue to dip into the reserve fund."

2 GIs killed in Iraqi ambushes

BY CHARLES J. HANLEY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAGHDAD — Deadly ambush teams struck U.S. Army targets from west to north in the arc of resistance around Baghdad, and the interim Iraqi leader called Sunday for an immediate mobilization of the old Iraqi army to help the harried Americans.

The United States would "speed the process of relieving the burden on its troops" by recalling the disbanded Iraqi military, said Iyad Allawi, the current president of the Iraqi Governing Council. The idea got a cool reception, however, from Baghdad's U.S.-led occupation authorities.

Attackers killed two U.S. soldiers in a clash outside the northern city of Kirkuk late on Oct. 18, and others blasted a broken-down convoy in the western flash point city of Fallujah, setting off spectacular explosions from an ammunition truck.

Khalid Mohammed/Associated Press

A U.S. Army soldier guards the remains of a burned-out military ammunition truck after it was attacked in Fallujah, Iraq, on Sunday.

One Iraqi civilian was killed by the blast and at least four were wounded in Fallujah, either from the blasts or from gunfire from American troops as they sped away, hospital officials said.

An architectural wonder takes shape

BY CRISTA HAHN
THE DAILY IOWAN

The steel structure of the new building for the UI School of Art and Art History will soon peek from behind a construction fence as workers complete the first quarter of a project expected to receive national recognition.

The $20 million facility could begin taking shape next month once workers complete the foundation and finish pouring concrete to form the basement, said UI architect and project manager Rod Lehnertz.

WHEN IT'S DONE, THIS IS GOING TO BE AN ARCHITECTURAL HIGHLIGHT ON CAMPUS. IT WILL BE NATIONALLY RECOGNIZED FOR ITS DESIGN.

— ROD LEHNERTZ
PROJECT MANAGER

"People look at what's happened to date and assume that construction is idle if they can't see what's taking place behind the fence," Lehnertz said. The building, once completed, will stand three stories tall.

The original location was on a hill across from the Museum of Art, but renowned New York architect Steven Holl visited campus and decided to move the site to the edge of the lagoon across from the current Art Building.

After that changed, the biology and geoscience departments were consulted to ensure that none of the living organisms would be harmed by draining the lagoon and re-filling it and that the limestone bluff behind the pond would not be harmed during construction.

Organisms such as frogs and turtles, which live in the lagoon, were not natural to the area; they will return after the pond is refilled, Lehnertz said.

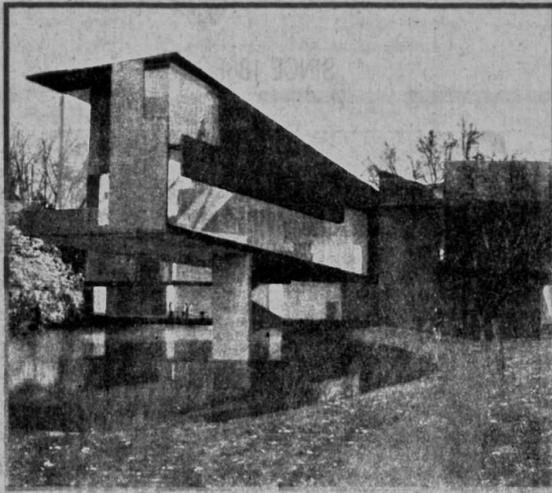

"I'm concerned about how it's going to look," said biology Professor Jeffrey Schabillon. "It never was a natural pond. It is a special area."

Schabillon added that there are few limestone-bottom ponds in Iowa. The nearest one is in West Branch, he said.

The new art building is slated for completion by July 2005.

"When it's done, this is going to be an architectural highlight on campus," Lehnertz said. "It will be nationally recognized for its design."

an art campus and match the quality of other UI buildings, said Martin Cox, the project architect for Steven Holl Architects.

The glass front of the south side of the building will use sun and water, Lehnertz said. "The reflection of the sun on the pond will create light effects and ripples on the horizontal surfaces on the south side of the building."

A terrace is also planned for the south wing directly adjacent to the pond's surface. Lehnertz said it will be a place where people want to go to sit, eat, and visit while warming in the sun.

"I think it is a wonderful idea to incorporate the natural world into construction," Schabillon said. "I think they are taking advantage of what could be and already is a beautiful site on campus."

The building will house a library, an auditorium, a gallery for student work, classrooms, a media theater, and administrative and faculty offices.

Mahogany Gist, 20, Coralville, was charged Oct. 17 with third-degree theft and five counts of forgery for allegedly using another person's credit card to purchase $957.62 worth of items from a Wal-Mart and Hy-Vee in Coralville between Sept. 21 and Oct. 1, court records show. A search of Gist's home allegedly recovered the stolen items.

Darnell Gist, 27, Coralville, was charged Oct. 17 with third-degree theft after his wife allegedly brought merchandise she had purchased with someone else's credit card to their home and told him how she obtained them. Although court records show Gist was initially angry, he then allegedly went back to Wal-Mart with his wife and purchased an X-Box with the credit card.

Juan Gomez, 20, Fredonia, Iowa, was charged Oct. 16 with malicious prosecution, forgery, and tampering with records. Gomez allegedly gave the name Jacob Salinas to obtain an Iowa identification card and allegedly admitted that he used the name to gain employment, court records show. Further investigation revealed that Gomez also allegedly used Salinas' name several times when pulled over for traffic violations.

Holly Sue Harsch, 37, 632 Beachview Dr., and Michael Beenblossom, 42, Washington, Iowa, were charged Oct. 17 with possession of methamphetamine precursors and conspiracy to manufacture a schedule II controlled substance after a search of their vehicle allegedly revealed six boxes of pseudoephedrine pills and other items used to make the drug, court records show. Beenblossom allegedly admitted to police that they were taking the items to a person planning to manufacture methamphetamine.

Fire hits Ready Mix

The cause of an early morning fire on Oct. 17 at Iowa City Ready Mix, 1854 S. Riverside Drive, remains under investigation.

Forty firefighters from Iowa City, Coralville, North Liberty, Tiffin, Hills, West Branch, as well as several off-duty Iowa City personnel, responded to the blaze, which was discovered around 3 a.m., a press release showed. The fire took nearly three hours to extinguish, after the hour it took to initially control the blaze.

No injuries were reported to either civilians or firefighters, and no one had to be evacuated from the building.

"There was considerable damage to the building," said Lt. Tom Lacina of Iowa City Fire Department. Lacina said he could not release any further details about the investigation into the fire.

Lieberman pulls out of Iowa race

BY MIKE GLOVER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Democrat Joe Lieberman has decided to abandon his campaign for Iowa's leadoff precinct caucuses, Democratic sources said on Sunday.

The Connecticut senator likely will leave a storefront office open, but he will pull out almost all of his staffing and make no overt effort to score in Iowa's caucuses, said the sources, who spoke only on the condition of anonymity.

Lieberman has decided to marshal his resources in states where he has a better chance — those with contests on Feb. 3 and also in New Hampshire, said two Democratic sources familiar with Lieberman's recent contact with backers in Iowa.

Lieberman began notifying key supporters of his decision on Sunday; a formal announcement was expected today.

Lieberman, who has not visited the state in recent weeks, started late and faded in the polls pointing toward Iowa's Jan. 19 caucuses. There was increased speculation he would focus scarce campaign resources elsewhere.

Lieberman is not the first to seek to bypass Iowa's caucuses, but the track record for doing so is decidedly mixed.

Iowa has led the presidential nominating season since 1976. In the years since, former Vice President Al Gore noisily opted out of the caucuses in his 1988 bid for the Democratic nomination. He complained the caucuses were dominated by liberals and said he'd make a stand in Southern states more friendly to his message. His campaign that year quickly faded.

In the last election cycle, Arizona Sen. John McCain decided to skip Iowa and focus on New Hampshire. He defeated then-Gov. George W. Bush in New Hampshire and had some early success in primaries, but he eventually dropped from the race.

Lieberman's exit from Iowa's caucus campaign won't have a heavy impact on the eventual outcome. His poll standings had fallen to the low single digits, and he had not garnered the backing of a significant number of key activists.

There likely will be a scurry for some of his more prominent backers, such as Iowa Attorney General Tom Miller and Democratic state backer Rep. Phil Wise, D-Keokuk.

While Lieberman has scored fairly well in national polls, that's largely attributed to his status as Gore's running mate in the last election cycle, a status which gave him broader name recognition than many of his rivals. In Iowa, he had not developed a network of grass-roots supporters likely to turn out in heavy numbers on Jan. 19.

Medicine's shadowy underworld

BY GILBERT M. GAUL AND MARY PAT FLAHERTY
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — For half a century, Americans could boast of the world's safest, most tightly regulated system for distributing prescription drugs. But now that system is undercut by a growing illegal trade in pharmaceuticals, fed by criminal profiteers, unscrupulous wholesalers, rogue Internet sites, and foreign pharmacies.

In the past few years, middlemen have siphoned off growing numbers of popular and lifesaving drugs and diverted them into a multibillion-dollar shadow market. Crooks have introduced counterfeit pharmaceuticals into the mainstream drug chain. Fast-moving operators have hawked millions of doses of narcotics over the Internet.

The result too often is pharmaceutical roulette for millions of unsuspecting Americans. Cancer patients receive watered-down drugs. Teenagers overdose on narcotics ordered online. AIDS clinics get fake HIV medicines.

Normally, drugs follow a simple route. Manufacturers sell them to one of the Big Three national wholesalers — Cardinal Health Inc., McKesson Corp., and AmerisourceBergen — which sell to drugstores, hospitals, or doctors offices. Regulators and industry officials have long considered this straightforward chain to be the gold standard.

The shadow market exploits gaps in state and federal regulations to corrupt this system, creating a wide-open drug bazaar that endangers public health. A yearlong investigation by the Washington Post has found:

- Networks of middlemen, felons, and other opportunists operating out of storefronts and garages fraudulently obtain deeply discounted medicines intended for nursing homes and hospices. The diverters have stored drugs in U-Hauls and car trunks in blazing heat, stuffed them in plastic sandwich bags, and traded them in a daisy chain of transactions with no purpose except to enrich the traders. Those drugs are ultimately sold to unwitting patients.

- The diverters pave the way for counterfeiters, who use pill-punching machines and special inks to produce near-perfect copies of the most popular and expensive drugs. They pass undetected through wholesalers to the shelves of retail pharmacies.

- Pharmaceutical peddlers take advantage of lax regulations to move millions of prescription drugs into the United States from Canada, Mexico, and elsewhere. Overwhelmed customs workers inspect fewer than 1 percent of an estimated 2 million packages containing medicine shipped into the country each year. Virtually all of those shipments are illegal, yet the Food and Drug Administration fails to enforce its own import regulations, saying it lacks the resources to intercept the illegal packages.

- Rogue medical merchants set up Internet pharmacies that serve as pipelines for narcotics, selling to drug abusers and others who never see doctors in person or undergo tests. The sellers move tens of millions of doses of hydrocodone, Xanax, Valium, Ritalin, OxyContin, and other controlled substances. Scores of customers have become addicted, overdosed, or died.

The shadow market, which includes both legal and illegal operators, has grown rapidly yet received little public attention.

Woman sentenced for intercepting e-mail

DENVER (AP) — A judge has sentenced an Arizona woman for intercepting someone else's e-mail, saying the penalty is a warning to others who might be tempted to do the same.

"I've seen people punished for opening other people's mail — snailmail. Privacy is still a cherished value that each of us has," U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch said.

On Oct. 17, he sentenced Angel Lee to 60 days home detention for intercepting e-mail sent to her husband's ex-wife, Duongladde Ramsay. Matsch said the case was a vicious divorce dispute about children.

Lee, 28, pleaded guilty in March, and she admitted accessing at least 215 e-mails sent to Ramsay last year.

Lee and her husband, Jeffrey, live in Arizona. Officials said she fraudulently obtained confidential user name and password information for Ramsay's e-mail account.

"I really apologize for what I did," Lee said. "She [Ramsay] has a right to feel the way she feels."

Ramsay has compared Lee's actions to someone breaking into her home and reading her diary.

off the job in solidarity.

The MTA and the mechanics union met separately on Oct. 18 with a state mediator but made little progress, Heard said. Negotiations with the union for MTA bus and rail operators resumed Sunday morning.

The MTA labor protests have clogged freeways and inconvenienced commuters. The strike, coupled with a walkout by grocery workers, has weakened Southern California's already troubled economy.

A total of 70,000 grocery clerks from three chains — Kroger Co.'s Ralphs, Safeway Inc.'s Vons, and Albertsons Inc. — went on strike or were locked out Oct. 11 in Southern and Central California.

Kobe or not Kobe?

ASPEN, Colo. (Los Angeles Times) — Kobe who?

That's what readers of the Aspen Daily News might well ask in the weeks and months to come.

Fed up with the relentless, increasingly lurid media coverage of the Kobe Bryant sexual-assault case playing out 75 miles away, the paper recently told the world — or at least its 15,000 readers — enough is enough.

No more stories of sex over chairs, legal gamesmanship, or alleged promiscuity.

"We are removing ourselves from the pack," declared Rick Carroll, the editor of the paper, which sits above a consignment shop here. "The story just doesn't warrant the coverage it's getting. It's just gossip."

This small act of journalistic independence, orchestrated by an even smaller staff at the free daily, was trumpeted in a front page editorial Oct. 9. It triggered an immediate avalanche of controversy.

More than 200 e-mails, letters, and phone calls poured in from across the country. Readers applauded the decision, claiming they were sick of the story and impressed that at least one newspaper had the guts to ignore it.

Others, mostly reporters and editors, were incensed. They accused the Daily News of grandstanding, censorship, and betraying the fundamentals of journalism.

Talks in LA strike gain traction

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Talks were gaining momentum Sunday with bus drivers and train operators whose walkout has forced about a half-million commuters to scramble for alternate transportation, authorities said.

"Things are looking quite optimistic with the drivers," said Bill Heard, spokesman for the Metropolitan Transportation Authority. "We are at the table, face to face, and things are quite cordial."

However, he said there was no apparent progress with striking MTA mechanics, and it was unclear when any agreement would be reached.

Approximately 2,200 MTA mechanics went on strike Oct. 14 after contract negotiations collapsed over the cost of health care coverage. Nearly 6,000 MTA drivers and train operators then walked

Fire in Chicago raises questions

BY MELANIE COFFEE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Jerry Lawrence could smell the smoke as he headed for the stairs on the 32nd floor, but he figured it was just a trash fire. It wasn't until he and others had crowded into the stairwell and the smoke began thickening around them that he began to worry.

"You could feel people picking up their pace in the stairwell as it became clearer and clearer that the fire was pretty bad," he said.

Once outside, Lawrence and his co-workers from the Cook County State's Attorney's office huddled in a group as flames and smoke poured from the government building's 12th floor. As the minutes passed, they prayed for one colleague still missing — Randy Roberts, 47.

The fire began around 5 p.m. on Oct. 17 as many workers in the 35-story Cook County administration building were preparing to go home for the weekend. Smoke filled the downtown tower's two stairwells as people followed an announcement to evacuate.

Only after the blaze had been put out did firefighters find approximately a dozen more people in the stairwell and on the 22nd floor, fire officials said. Six of them were dead.

Roberts was among the survivors. On Oct. 18, he and seven others remained hospitalized, some in serious or critical condition.

Officials hadn't determined on Oct. 18 what started the fire but said it had gutted a storage room in the secretary of State's office and damaged much of the 12th floor. Fire Commissioner James Joyce said the building had an alarm system but no sprinklers above the first floor. It holds as many as 2,500 people during business hours.

Bush floats Korea deal

BY MIKE ALLEN AND GLENN KESSLER
WASHINGTON POST

BANGKOK — President Bush said Sunday that he is willing to commit to a written guarantee not to attack North Korea in exchange for steps by the country toward abandoning its nuclear-weapons programs.

Bush's aides said he wants to have a proposal ready for North Korea to consider by year's end, when administration officials hope to restart the six-nation nuclear talks with North Korea that began haltingly in August.

The new approach constitutes a change for a White House that had resisted offering security guarantees that North Korea might consider a concession. North Korea has openly pursued nuclear weapons despite agreeing to freeze its programs in 1994 in a deal with the Clinton administration. Some U.S. officials contend the country already possesses one or two nuclear weapons.

Bush ruled out the idea of a formal nonaggression treaty, which North Korea has insisted must be part of an agreement involving nuclear concessions. "We will not have a treaty," Bush said during a photo session with Thailand's prime minister, Thaksin Shinawatra. "That's off the table."

Bush said he would sign a security declaration if it were a joint agreement with the four other countries participating in the talks with North Korea —

China, Japan, Russia, and South Korea. A senior administration official said Bush had ruled out a bilateral agreement on the principle that if North Korea violated a multiparty pact, "they would not only be dismissive of the United States, but they would also be dismissive of the other parties that participated in the assurance."

Although Bush aides said allies have encouraged the new approach, the immediate public reaction was restrained. Chinese President Hu Jintao, sitting next to Bush after they met Sunday, said simply that he would continue working to promote the six-party talks process "so as to strive for a peaceful resolution of this issue." Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi and Russian President Vladimir Putin made public statements that touched on the North Korean talks but did not address Bush's plan. Putin said he expects "good, positive results" if the talks continue as they are now structured and take account of North Korea's concerns.

North Korean officials have sought security guarantees since Bush labeled the country part of an "axis of evil" that included Iran and the former government of Iraq. Bush iterated his determination to resolve the North Korean dispute peacefully, and he drew a distinction between U.S. policy toward North Korea and the U.S.-led invasion of Iraq.

North Korea's response to Bush's new plan is difficult to predict because it has long sought a formal treaty with the United States. The Clinton administration gave North Korea several written assurances about security, but a multinational guarantee is a new concept.

Bush discussed the possibility of a multilateral security agreement with Hu on the sidelines of an economic summit here in the capital of Thailand. Bush floated the idea with Koizumi on the way to Bangkok last week, and aides said he plans to take it up with South Korean President Roh Moo Hyun today.

"We think there's an opportunity to move the process forward, and we're going to discuss it with our partners," Bush said as he met reporters in conjunction with the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation summit.

Bush, repeating a position he first took in February 2002, said he has "no intention of invading North Korea." He said he has made it plain North Korea "must get rid of her weapons program ... in a verifiable way" and added he is considering ways to restate that "on paper, with our partners' consent."

While the administration in the past has said North Korea must verifiably and irreversibly dismantle its nuclear programs before the administration responds, on Sunday aides set no specific prerequisites and hinted at some type of interim agreement.

Ambush kills 3 Israeli soldiers on West Bank

EIN YABRUD, West Bank (AP) — Palestinian gunmen ambushed an Israeli army patrol in a West Bank town Sunday, killing three soldiers, Israeli security sources and rescue services said, the most serious attack in the area in months.

The deadly attack came a few hours after Palestinians in Gaza fired rockets at Israeli towns and Israeli forces wound up a phase of a wide-ranging operation in a Palestinian refugee camp on the Egyptian border.

Security sources, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said Palestinians ambushed an Israeli army foot patrol in the Palestinian village of Ein Yabrud, east of the West Bank town of Ramallah. Three soldiers were killed and another was seriously wounded, they said.

A spokesman for the Al Qsqa Martyrs' Brigades, loosely linked to Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's Fatah movement, told the Associated Press its members carried out the ambush.

"A group of our fighters attacked an Israeli patrol in Ein Yabrud, killing and injuring many soldiers," he said by telephone, speaking on the condition of anonymity.

The area has been the scene of frequent Palestinian gunfire attacks against Israeli military and civilian vehicles.

Israel TV said that because of the severity of the attack, Israeli forces were likely to enter Ramallah, where Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat has been trapped in his headquarters for nearly two years.

300,000 flock to Mother Teresa beatification

VATICAN CITY (AP) — More than a quarter-million people — rich and poor, royal and regular — flooded St. Peter's Square on Sunday for the beatification of Mother Teresa, honoring the nun who built shelters, orphanages, and clinics around the world to care for those forsaken by everyone else.

Pope John Paul II presided over the open-air Mass but, for the first time in a major Vatican ceremony, was unable to utter a word of his homily, leaving other prelates to do so. In the few prayers he did say, his words were so slurred and shaky they could barely be understood.

John Paul did declare Mother Teresa "blessed," moving the woman many called a living saint for her work in the slums of Calcutta one step closer to official sainthood — and bestowing the honor during his 25th anniversary celebrations.

It has been a particularly grueling week for the ailing, 83-year-old pope, celebrating his anniversary Mass on Oct. 16 and gearing up for another lengthy ceremony Tuesday to install 30 new cardinals.

The Vatican estimated Sunday's crowd at 300,000 — one of its largest ever — and the ceremony was a colorful mix of Indian dance and sitar music with traditional Catholic hymns, reflecting the cultures in which Mother Teresa lived and worked.

"As of now, we do not have any principles to go ahead with, but we will be following the principles laid out by the president," Beach said.

Past plans to combat the loss of state appropriations have not followed a similar pattern, True said. Departments that lose funding differ from year to year depending on decisions made by the president and staff, but despite $98 million in cuts since 2001, the UI has striven to protect funds earmarked for library acquisitions, public safety, and student aid, True said.

After weathering $63 million in cuts over four years, ISU also has guidelines it follows to direct its decisions during periods of fiscal reduction. Mark Chidister, the assistant to ISU's president, said student aid and academic programs have traditionally been left untouched. The university has dealt with budget problems by eliminating positions, such as that of the vice president for external affairs and the implementation of energy-saving programs, he said.

Officials from all three state-funded universities have acknowledged the critical nature of the cuts but note that it is too early in the process to speculate their effect on the institutions.

governor "keeps them away from the limelight," said Sarah Leonard, Dean's Iowa press secretary. However, his family joined him for his announcement speech in Vermont last summer, and Judith Steinberg Dean, who is "extremely busy" with her medical practice, has sent letters to supporters while involving herself in fund raising, Leonard said.

"It's out of respect for privacy of the lives of the governor's family members," she said of the campaign's lack of family involvement. "It's certainly not a necessary component when the governor is leading the polls without family members on the campaign trail."

UI political-science Professor Peverill Squire said he does not think family involvement is a necessary component of a successful campaign, but it can help extend reach and soften a candidate's image. Some families may be more comfortable in the spotlight than others, he added.

"Families are either innocuous, or on the margin can help," he said.

Chris Heinz, John Kerry's 30-year-old stepson, is also making sacrifices to help the family effort.

"It's not a slam dunk that I'd be here by any means. I'm dropping everything," said Heinz, who lost his biological father in 1991. John Kerry "has just become a great friend of mine."

Vanessa Kerry said because she is older and out of school, she can more easily protect her private life. Sharing anecdotes about her father's sense of humor and hobbies, including kite-surfing, she said her father's decision to run for president did not come as a surprise to the family. He informed his dying mother about his plans to run shortly before she passed away in November 2002.

"My grandma told him, 'It's about time,'" Vanessa Kerry said.

Dozens of Iraqi youths cheer and dance atop a burned-out U.S. Army ammunition truck after it was attacked in Fallujah, Iraq, on Sunday.

Iraqi ambushes target U.S. troops; Iraqi leader calls for mobilization

In the attack near Kirkuk, 160 miles north of Baghdad, an American mounted patrol was ambushed by rocket-propelled grenades and small-arms fire at 10:45 p.m. Oct. 18, said Maj. Josslyn Aberle, a 4th Infantry Division spokeswoman. The patrol returned fire, but no additional enemy contact followed, she said.

In addition to the two killed, a third American was wounded, Aberle reported.

Early Sunday, approximately 30 miles west of that attack, U.S. troops were hit with grenades and small-arms fire near Hawija, and they killed three Iraqis when they returned fire, the 4th Infantry Division reported. Still farther west, near Beiji, American forces detained five attackers after a brief firefight, the division said.

On the eastern edge of Fallujah, 35 miles west of Baghdad, a U.S. Army ammunition truck, part of a convoy, broke down on the main road late Sunday morning and came under attack, the U.S. command said in Baghdad. The truck and possibly two other vehicles apparently were hit by rocket-propelled grenades.

"Shells were flying everywhere, like fireworks," shopkeeper Khalil al-Qubaisi, 45, said of the exploding ammunition truck. Dozens of Iraqi youths danced and cheered as the vehicles went up in flames.

U.S. troops trying to approach the site pulled back after coming under grenade attack, and opened fire in every direction as they left, witnesses said.

"I was fixing my car on the other side of the street, and Americans fired in a circular motion as they tried to leave," said Thaeer Ibrahim, 30, who was wounded in the shoulder by the American fire.

Four other civilians were wounded, and one later died of shrapnel wounds, said Dr. Rafae al-Issawi, director of Fallujah General Hospital. In Baghdad, the U.S. command said there were no American casualties.

In nearby Khaldiya, unidentified assailants fired two rocket-propelled grenades at two Humvees, damaging one, said a witness, shopkeeper Adel Kamel. It was unclear whether there were any casualties.

The deaths in Kirkuk brought to 103 the number of Americans killed by hostile fire since President Bush declared an end to major combat on May 1. A total 338 Americans have died since the invasion of Iraq in March, 217 of them in combat.

The command reported 15 attacks on forces of the U.S.-led coalition in the 24 hours ended at midday Sunday, down from a recent average of 22 a day. Most occur in the so-called "Sunni Triangle," a Sunni Muslim-dominated area stretching from the west of Baghdad to the north. The area was a strong base of support for Saddam Hussein's Baath Party regime, toppled by the U.S.-British invasion earlier this year.

American officials blame the insurgency largely on die-hard Baathists, but many here believe other Iraqis resentful of the U.S. military presence have joined in the hit-run attacks.

In an opinion-page piece in Sunday's New York Times newspaper, Allawi, head of the 25-member Governing Council for the month of October, said the decision by U.S. occupation officials to dissolve the 400,000-man Iraqi army after the war's end in April produced a "security vacuum that let criminals, die-hards of the former regime, and international terrorists flourish."

Allawi wrote that it is "vital" to recall Iraqi army units now, six months after they disintegrated before the U.S.-British military advance. The U.S. government has had little success enlisting significant foreign military help in Iraq, but a well-placed official of the occupation authority reacted coolly Sunday to Allawi's position.

"I don't think there's a vast swath of people out there who want to serve in the Iraqi army," said this official, speaking on the condition of anonymity.

The Americans are slowly rebuilding a new Iraqi army, having trained only a 700-man battalion thus far.

Allawi's council, meanwhile, issued a statement Sunday urging Iraqis "to remain calm and prevent incitement engulfing the country."

The Bush administration is urging other nations to send troops and money to help the United States in Iraq. Washington hopes that last week's unanimous U.N. Security Council vote on a U.S.-sponsored resolution on Iraq will prompt nations to contribute.

"We'll take as much money as we can get," Secretary of State Colin Powell said ahead of a donors conference due to begin Thursday in Madrid.

"And I think the resolution will encourage some countries to give who might not have had a basis to give before the resolution was passed," he said on "Fox News Sunday."

EDITORIALS reflect the majority opinion of the DI Editorial Board and not the opinion of the Publisher, Student Publications Inc., or the University of Iowa.

GUEST OPINIONS are printed periodically upon solicitation by the DI Opinions editor. In most cases, unsolicited guest opinions will not receive consideration. Readers who wish to submit a guest opinion should contact the editors with the word count and a short summary of the piece.

COLUMNS reflect the opinion of the signed author.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR may be sent to the DI at 201N Communications Center or via e-mail to daily-iowan@uiowa.edu (preferred). Each letter must be signed and include an address and phone number for verification. Letters should not exceed 300 words. The DI reserves the right to edit for length and clarity. The DI will publish only one letter per author per month. Letters will be chosen for publication by the editors according to space considerations.

One nation, under gods

"God" means different things to different people. For many in this country, the word signifies only Jehovah, the god of the Judeo-Christian tradition or a Trinitarian god. Others believe in Allah, the god of Islam — who is the same god. For followers of Eastern religions, God may not be a deity at all but rather a path to enlightenment. For Gandhi, who famously called himself a Christian, a Hindu, a Muslim, and a Jew, God was Truth. Even Albert Einstein, who certainly did not believe in a personal deity, used "God" to refer to the laws of nature and his understanding of the world.

Clearly, the word "God" does not belong to a single religion — or even to the field of religion itself. How, then, can acknowledgment of God infringe on the constitutional separation of church and state?

Last week, the U.S. Supreme Court wisely took on a case that will allow it to decide this question once and for all. The court will decide whether to overturn the 9th Circuit Court's ruling that the words "under God," added to the Pledge of Allegiance in 1954, are unconstitutional.

The Constitution mentions the separation between church and state only once, in the First Amendment: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof..." So for the Supreme Court to rule that the words "under God" violate the Constitution, it must find that the phrase either establishes a religion or prohibits its free exercise.

Clearly, the phrase does not prohibit the free exercise of religion, unless one counts strict atheism as a religion. The point of contention is whether the phrase establishes a government religion.

If the word "God" belonged only to Christianity, the pledge would be unconstitutional, because it would establish Christianity as a national religion. Similarly, if the wording was "under Allah" or "under Jehovah," the case would be open and shut.

Because the word "God" encompasses the beliefs of so many people, however, it cannot be understood as belonging to one religion. Rather, it describes our belief as a nation in something higher than ourselves, whether that be our unity as humanity, democratic ideals, or for many, a personal God.

Furthermore, removal of the phrase from the pledge would set an unsustainable precedent. The government would be forced to recall all coins and bills for their reference to a higher power. The Declaration of Independence, one of the documents on which our country was founded (ranking right up there with the Constitution itself) would have to be altered to eliminate reference to a "Creator." Even the oft-ignored third stanza of "The Star-Spangled Banner" proclaims "In God is Our Trust."

Though the United States is not a theocracy, we do have a long history of acknowledging God. Some may take issue with it, but it is not unconstitutional.

Accountability in government

We as students have the responsibility to question what our elected officials are doing in Washington, D.C.

Over the summer, the Department of Education and the Bush administration proposed changes to the federal needs-analysis formula that determines which students qualify for Pell Grants. This proposed change would prevent 84,000 students nationwide from qualifying for the Pell Grant anymore. On Sept. 10, the U.S. Senate took two actions that affect aid amounts for Pell Grants and Pell Grant recipients. In the first action, the Senate voted to keep the same federal needs-analysis formula that is used to determine who qualifies for Pell Grants and how much aid they should receive. The bill passed 51-44. This action allows for all students who currently qualify for the Pell Grant to still qualify. The other measure taken was to increase the maximum Pell Grant funding amounts from $4,050 to $4,500. This increase was an attempt to mitigate the effect of rising costs of college for low- and middle-income families. This measure failed in the Senate.

The government makes financial aid available to ensure that all students are able to attend college regardless of their financial means.

Since the Pell Grant program was established, nearly 80 million grants have been awarded to help low- and middle-income students attend college and, in turn, become productive members of society. Currently, more than 4 million students receive Pell Grants; 95 percent have a family income of less than $40,000 a year. By increasing the maximum Pell Grant amount, approximately 430,000 additional students would benefit from the program.

This second measure failed in the Senate because several senators were not present on the Senate floor to vote. Surprisingly, the senators who did not vote have recently told the Iowa media about their dedication to higher education and being the voice for students. Those senators who didn't vote included Sen. John Edwards, Sen. John Kerry, and Sen. Joe Lieberman — all of whom were so busy campaigning to become president that they forgot about their commitment they made to their constituents and to the students they represent in their states.

Whether you are a Republican, Democrat, or affiliated with no party, I encourage you to ask these candidates why they missed such an important vote. Better yet, ask them how they expect to become a good president if they can't fulfill their current job duties in the Senate.

Mayrose Wegmann
UISG vice president

DI, you suck!

It was so refreshing to read the Oct. 9 letters to the editor. Not only did they both come from Iowa City citizens for a change, they also confirmed what I've long believed to be true: that The Daily Iowan's editorial team, writers and editors alike, leave much to be desired.

For instance, I'm not sure exactly why you continue to print columns by Beau Elliot. Every single one winds down to the exact same point as the last: that Bush is an imbecile and so are all Republicans, Christians, and anyone who doesn't believe the same things he does. I'd be surprised if anyone even bothers to read his opinions anymore.

As far as your opinion editors go, they could use not only a lesson in editing (what is and is not appropriate for an editorial writer to discuss in her or his column, spelling and grammatical errors) but also a lesson in education. The point/counterpoint a few weeks back concerning the intelligence levels of females versus males was outright embarrassing. I was astonished that such a blatant display of stereotypes would be printed in any newspaper, especially one in heavy circulation in such a politically correct area.

The editorial made women look like catty, immature children and made men look like drunken couch potatoes. If these are the only types of women and men with whom your opinion editors are familiar, then they should consider spending a few weekends away from the bars and might spend some time in the real world instead.

If the DI wasn't delivered free to my home, I'd have canceled my subscription long ago.

Make peace, not walls

PRIME MINISTER SHARON, Ariel Sharon, your wall jeopardizes Israel's long-term prosperity. Even were it to stick to the "Green Line" boundary of 1967, before Israel endorsed colonizing the Palestinian territories, it would still be a futile gesture. No one makes peace with walls, 25 vertical feet of concrete — nor friends with barb-wire fences.

And peace is what Israel wants, no? What you want for Israel — for the violence to end, for suicide bombings to stop ripping into your land. It must be.

But your wall, it is ripping into the Palestinian's land — 13 miles, now, beyond the Green Line, to encircle your colony of Ariel. The wall around that colony will in coming months, I (and your government) anticipate, be connected to the greater, national wall — severing the West Bank from itself, much as the wall currently separates some Palestinian farmlands from the farmer's house.

And of the sections of wall completed, 85 percent of the land taken for the project is Palestinian. While your government says that the land is only being commandeered temporarily, until 2005, and that the title remains with the landowner, I don't believe it; that date seems to spring from President Bush's "road map," which calls for a Palestinian state by 2005. The road map, though, is performance-based, and performance by yourself, with the wall, and the Palestinian Authority, with its inability as yet to prevent suicide bombings, has been atrocious. Has been choreographed in the one-step-forward, two-steps-back rhythm of blues.

My best pick for president next year, Wesley Clark, unfortunately supports your wall, but he also says that "the Palestinians are the most-educated, most-Westernized, most-enterprising, least-tribal of all the Middle Eastern groups ... were a force for modernization and economic development ... are human beings like everyone else, and they've gotta be given a chance."

If your wall continues, it gives them a chance all right — a chance to choose between a wall and a hard place. It solidifies, literally, the two-societies-in-one, divorces not terrorists from law-abiders but Palestinians from Israelis, and Palestinians from Palestinians. It creates a galactic nursery not for stars but for hate.

Which is not something your region of the world lacks, and plenty of that hate is directed at Israel. Saudi Arabia has more than once contributed (at least) financially to your terrorist enemy Hamas, and you allege that Syria plays knowing and willing host to training camps for your terrorist enemy Islamic Jihad.

Your wall is not the answer to such actions and sentiments — it is fuel to the fire. It creates a ghetto. One such as was established in Warsaw, 1940. This new ghetto will not have the same reason for being as that one did, and it may have somewhat less-horrendous living conditions, but this ghetto will be better armed and more willing to flex that.

Rip down your wall, because it will not accomplish what you want it to. Instead, expel your fencing partner Yasser Arafat. Don't do it in the nebulous, someday future your Cabinet has authorized. Do it now. Today. Do it against the advice of Europe and the United States. Arafat is a duplicitous, dangerous man. He gives one face to the Palestinians and a different one to the world; he rejected Ehud Barak's open-hands offering that was the best recent chance for peace; short-sheeted his own protégé, former Prime Minister Mahmoud Abbas, and he seems likely to do the same to his current Prime Minister Ahmed Qureia.

Will Arafat cause problems in exile? Undoubtedly; it's what he does best. But there will be a chance for peace, without walls, if he is gone. Then, the sections within the Palestinian Authority that want peace with you will have far more power to make it. ■

Illegal music and movie downloads from Kazaa seemed like a pretty regular occurrence for many college students last year. Over the summer, however, the endless news stories on copyright-infringement suits seemed to strike fear into the hearts of a number of college-age downloaders and uploaders. Movielink, a new and legal online movie download service, may be what some students are looking for this year.

Unfortunately, there is a $2.99 to $4.99 fee for downloads of titles from Movielink's library (consisting of 450 films). Still, on rainy days when you don't feel like walking all the way to the libraries or video stores, this service may come in handy for carless UI students in need of entertainment.

Movielink is hosting a "college film festival" that, according to its press kit, "... will offer new and classic movies that have affected college culture throughout the years." American Pie, Army of Darkness, The Hot Chick, I Know What You Did Last Summer, and The Cable Guy are some of the films being shown. The question is, does their selection of "college" movies accurately represent what college students want to watch?

I was lucky enough to talk with Professor Rick Altman of the UI cinema/comparative literature department about his opinion of Movielink's picks. "With a list like this, it's not surprising to find Arnold Schwarzenegger governor of California; it's people who think this is the level of college-student film interests who vote for Schwarzenegger," he said. "...With some exceptions, it's a predictable marketing list of somebody's idea of what college students might pay money for."

Because college students are so knowledgeable about filmmakers, he was surprised that there was so little sensitivity about the work of important directors over the last decade, such as Martin Scorsese and Quentin Tarantino. He was "amazed and delighted," on the other hand, to find Blue Velvet and Bowling for Columbine included. Another thing that definitely stood out, Altman said, was how so few action pictures were mentioned, especially by producer Joel Silver (Die Hard, Lethal Weapon).

I then headed over to media services in the UI Main Library, which offers a wide selection of videos and DVDs for students to check out, and found Nikolas Gruber and Vic Cali working behind the desk. They said film students, in particular, tend to check out more cerebral movies and place "importance" over "entertainment" when it comes to what they watch. Gruber and Cali themselves appreciate certain titles not available from Movielink's festival, such as the works of Woody Allen and Robert De Niro, but the list caters to mainstream horror and comedy more than anything else. Of all the films to choose from, at least 10 were slapstick comedies. Instead of some of the festival choices present, they suggested the inclusion of a comedy such as The Big Lebowski. "It's a cult classic and staff favorite with a funny, likable character," Gruber said. Cali was quick to agree.

I also chatted with Eric Smith, a clerk at That's Rentertainment, 202 N. Linn St., a rental store with an impressive selection of hard-to-find videos and DVDs. He gave me his take on Movielink's offerings. "It's playing it safe and wants to make money," he said. He agreed that the average viewer is probably going to want to see the mainstream movies being shown in the college festival. However, he'd personally like to see more Cohen brothers and David Lynch works on the list. He also mentioned that a campus town such as Iowa City has a significant number of people looking for obscure films who are very aware of what else is out there.

Don't get me wrong, I really enjoy the low-brow American Pie trilogy, but I was still hoping to find a bit more variety to the roster of supposed "college classics."

When I talked to Trisha Render and Seth Michel, two UI film students, they were somewhat surprised by what was and wasn't included in Movielink's list. Render couldn't believe that The Matrix and The Lord of the Rings were overlooked, and Michel was understandably shocked to find that National Lampoon's Animal House somehow was neglected. They agreed that, overall, college students prefer movies that have the plot "handed to them," so it was fairly expected to see so many crude teen comedies and gory thrillers.

However, that still doesn't explain why Movielink skipped over genuine classics such as Star Wars, Back to the Future, and Raiders of the Lost Ark. They also noted that the Movielink people made some attempt at picking relatively obscure films, but these "obscure" films were too obscure. We all concluded that we don't have too many friends who watch Barbarella, Laurel Canyon, or The Endless Summer.

Being a college cinema student myself, I tended to agree with my interviewees on Movielink's overall selection. Don't get me wrong, I really enjoy the low-brow American Pie trilogy, but I was still hoping to find a bit more variety to the roster of supposed "college classics." Bottle Rocket did appear on the list, which I was extremely glad to see mentioned. However, other honest films in that vein got shut out in favor of sillier, more bankable comedies. American Graffiti, Diner, and Swingers are my three favorite coming-of-age movies, but not one earned a spot in the festival. Any of those three accessible dramedies would have been an ideal selection. Each is observant, poignant, and very funny and taps into the psyche of pre- or post-college-age kids with endearing screen characters.

It seems like this "college film festival" wasn't organized by actual college students but was composed of what Movielink assumed might be popular with people our age. Render summed up the general consensus when she said, "It's like your parents picking Christmas gifts they think you want."

In the heart of the heart of scandal

FILM REVIEW

Capturing the Friedmans

★★★½ out of ★★★★★

When I was in junior high, there was a teacher who all the students suspected was a pervert. Of course, the notion was preposterous. The teacher never committed such acts, but the point never was the truth of the matter — the scandal was.

Andrew Jarecki's debut documentary, Capturing the Friedmans, explores a quite similar phenomenon. In 1987, Arnold Friedman, an award-winning high-school teacher, and his 18-year-old son Jessie were charged with molesting a number of students who attended their after-school computer classes in the family's basement.

The film uses interviews and home movies shot by Arnold's other son, David, to document the aftermath of the accusations and the deterioration of the family.

Watching this, I was reminded of another brilliant documentary by the great Errol Morris called The Thin Blue Line, in which a man was sentenced to death for a crime he didn't commit. In the film, Morris' ultimate goal was the truth, and his movie was an investigation more than an examination of its subject.

That's not the case in Jarecki's film. The guilt or innocence of its subject is irrelevant; rather, the film wants to explore the nature and effects of the scandal. We watch as the camera examines the speech of each member of the family. Some have idealized notions of certain characters, others want to scapegoat. Many present testimony that contradicts what others say.

That's not to say that the film passes judgment on or seeks to undermine any given character. It merely presents a multitude of perspectives that don't entirely match up. We understand each perspective and can empathize with it. Elaine Friedman (Arnold's wife at the time) confesses that her husband revealed past instances of molestation to her, whereas son David contends that she manipulated Arnold into believing he was guilty. He remains firm that his father had no sexual contact with any of his students. We sense the anger he harbors toward his mother just seething below the surface.

Production Photo
Capturing the Friedmans plays at the Bijou through Wednesday.

Some of the former students are interviewed. One is animate about the reality of the rapes but presents the information as if it were casual or unaffectionate. Later on, the filmmaker catches him in a contradiction. Another student claims nothing happened and relates how the police almost forced false information out of him.

It seems everyone has something to say about Arnold except Arnold himself (he's already dead by the time the film was made). He's in much the same position Charles Foster Kane was in Citizen Kane.

The only unfiltered images we see of Arnold are in the home movies. In those moments, we no longer consider the allegations but begin to understand him as a human being. Sometimes we see him sulk about the house as a man broken and beaten down, other times we see him pantomiming playfully with his sons. If he was truly guilty, we can at least accept that he wasn't the monster the media made him out to be.

The final scene in the film reunites the mother with the accused son, Jessie. It is a touching moment, and Jarecki lets it speak for itself. It's not about whether she believes Jessie or not, or if she forgives him — her tears already answer that — but it exhibits the pain of separation and the joy of reunion, and no scandal in the world can destroy that.

CERVICAL DYSPLASIA STUDY

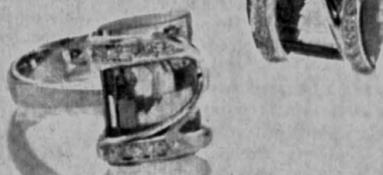

Healthy, non-pregnant females age 18 to menopause with a mildly abnormal pap smear are invited to participate in a 2-3 month study. In this study we will be evaluating the safety of an intravaginal experimental gel in women with mild dysplasia. This study would require that participants come to the clinic a minimum of 8-10 times including some hospital stays. Participants must be currently using either Depo-Provera or an oral contraceptive pill.

- All study-related exams and hospital expenses will be provided.
- Compensation provided.

For more information on how you can participate, contact Kathy Flanders at 356-4602 between the hours of 8:00 and 4:00, or e-mail at flandersk@mail.medicine.uiowa.edu, or visit our web site at: <http://obgyn.uihc.uiowa.edu/>

MINOR LEAGUES?

Dubuque studies pro park possibility

DUBUQUE (AP) — A professional baseball team could succeed and add millions of dollars to the economy, but a feasibility study also says a team may not be profitable because of the region's small population base.

The study, conducted by Minneapolis-based CSL International, compares Dubuque's demographics with 12 other cities that have constructed minor-league baseball stadiums since 1995.

Dubuque ranks below comparable markets in population and household spending, according to the study.

"It is also important to note that markets with similar demographic characteristics are currently supporting new minor-league ballparks and that none of these factors necessarily preclude the Dubuque market from successfully supporting a new ballpark and franchise," the analysis said.

Iowa businessman Michael Gartner said he would move his Battle Creek, Mich., team to Dubuque if the Midwest League team had a place to play.

Price is finally right for Hall of Fame

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — The World Golf Hall of Fame wasn't on the radar, at least not the one Nick Price was looking at while serving in the Rhodesian Air Force in the late 1970s.

Price

Price dominated the game like Jack Nicklaus two decades before him and like Tiger Woods does now. He won three major championships, 41 tournaments worldwide, enormous respect from his peers and, finally, a spot in the Hall of Fame.

"He's one of the greatest players we've ever had, as well as one of the greatest guys out here," Davis Love III said.

CHRYSLER CLASSIC

Japanese golfer wins third PGA event

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Shigeki Maruyama won his third PGA Tour event in as many years Sunday, shooting a final-round 67 at the Chrysler Classic of Greensboro to beat Brad Faxon by five shots.

The 5-7 Japanese golfer started the day at 17 under and leading Faxon by three. No other player was within six shots of the leader, and it remained a two-man race at Forest Oaks Country Club.

Maruyama was solid all day, and closed out playing partner Faxon with a birdie from the sand on the par-5, 15th hole, grabbing a four-stroke lead with four holes left.

Maruyama, who was 5 under Sunday, also had rounds of 65, 64, and 70 for a 22 under total, coming within one shot of the tournament record of 265, set by Jesper Parnevik in 1999.

Botched play

Nathan Chandler is knocked to the ground by a number of OSU defenders during the second quarter of the Oct. 18 game. Chandler was sacked three times and pressured often during the game, which ended in a 19-10 Buckeye victory.

Offense stumbles

BY KELLY BEATON
THE DAILY IOWAN

Twenty minutes from game time, an inspired Buckeyes squad huddled at midfield, bouncing as one to the rhythm of hip-hop rendered indecipherable by the blaring Ohio Stadium speakers. Nearly all 105,044 in attendance rose as one, feeding off the defending national champs' energy.

The frenzied anticipation of a championship bout was in the air. And with both defending 2002 Big Ten co-champions finally assembled for a long-awaited showdown, that's exactly what it was.

Unfortunately for the Hawkeyes, they all-too-often took on the appearance of the staggering, punch-drunk

Larry Holmes the squad often resembled early in Kirk Ferentz's tenure, as opposed to the menacing, Mike Tyson-like bruiser that was the 2002 version.

Several special teams gaffes and offensive slips overshadowed another punishing defensive performance by the Black and Gold, as No. 9 Iowa (5-2, 1-2) dropped a 19-10 decision to No. 8 Ohio State (6-1, 2-1), in Columbus.

Following the game, Ferentz pointed to special-teams breakdowns, such as OSU's Roy Hall blocking a punt of David Bradley, which Donte Whitner recovered in the end zone for a back-breaking touchdown with 7:54 to go in the third quarter, putting the Buckeyes on top 17-3.

Defense rolls

BY BRIAN TRIPPLETT
THE DAILY IOWAN

At first glance, it may have appeared that nothing could go right for Iowa in its 19-10 loss to Ohio State on Oct. 18, but hidden in the shadows of a few sloppy plays lay some solid football.

Granted, allowing a 54-yard punt return for a touchdown, having a punt blocked for another Buckeyes' score, and sailing a snap over the quarterback's head and out of the end zone for a safety were far from being considered crisp plays, but had those three follies not occurred, hypothetically, the Hawkeyes could have captured a 10-3 victory over the defending national champions.

"Even when we win, we make mistakes," Iowa offensive lineman Robert Gallery said. "There are things that we should have done differently, but nobody asks about them when you win."

In a defensive battle that featured the country's top rushing defense — Ohio State — and the Hawkeyes' dominant rushing defense, which ranked 15th in the nation prior to the Oct. 18 contest, Iowa held the Buckeyes to a measly 185 yards and three points on offense.

The Hawkeyes were no powerhouse with the ball, either, accumulating only 219 total yards.

"The feeling that you know you played good defense, you can come back next week and just try to build on that," Iowa linebacker Chad Greenway said.

SEE DEFENSE, PAGE 4B

QUARTER BY QUARTER

OSU JUMPS TO LEAD

After forcing Iowa to punt on its opening drive of the game, Ohio State settled for a 53-yard field goal from Mike Nugent, a career best, to give the Buckeyes a 3-0 lead. On their next possession, the Hawkeyes had to punt again, but this time David Bradley's boot was returned 54 yards for a touchdown by Michael Jenkins to give Ohio State a 10-0 advantage less than six minutes into the game. Iowa did manage to put three points on the board on a 36-yard field goal by Nate Kaeding.

DEFENSE HOLDS

While both teams remained scoreless in the second quarter, the Buckeyes came awfully close. Following four-straight punts, Ohio State reached the Iowa 1-yard line after Craig Krenzell's 34-yard pass to Drew Carter. Krenzell's quarterback sneak on first and goal failed on the first try, and on the second attempt, Iowa linebacker Abdul Hodge knocked the ball loose from Krenzell. The Hawkeyes' Sean Considine fell on the ball at the 1. The Hawkeyes failed to move the ball down the field and had to punt the ball away once again.

IOWA PUNT BLOCKED

The Hawkeyes had a number of problems in the third quarter, starting with a fumble on the snap between center Eric Rothwell and quarterback Nathan Chandler. Iowa's defense stopped Ohio State from scoring, but when the Hawkeyes got the ball back, David Bradley's punt was blocked into the end zone and recovered by Donte Hall to put the Buckeyes up 17-3. On Iowa's ensuing drive, the snap was botched once again and picked up by Ohio State, giving the Hawkeyes their second fumble of the day.

KAEDING RUNS IN TD

It appeared as if the Hawkeyes were opting for a 22-yard field goal from Kaeding on fourth and goal from the 5, but place holder Bradley pitched the ball to Kaeding, who ran it into the end zone for his first career touchdown. Later in the quarter, a Rothwell snap flew over Chandler's head and out of the end zone for an Ohio State safety. Chandler's pass was picked off by Chris Gamble with under 30 seconds remaining to seal the 19-10 victory for the Buckeyes.

The World Series that should have been played

The first two games of the World Series were played this weekend — you probably didn't even know.

The New York Yankees versus the Florida Marlins — how many of you watched it? Come on, be honest. No one cares if the Yankees win their 100th-consecutive title, or if the Fish, a team I now hate with a passion, can continue surprising the baseball nation. I don't want to watch it.

We almost didn't have to. We were close to having the ultimate World Series — the Chicago Cubs and the Boston Red Sox, and when I say close, I mean close. The Cubs were five outs away in Game 6. The Red Sox had a three-run edge in the eighth inning of Game 7.

The two franchises have a lot in common. Too much in common. They're perennial losers. They're cursed. They have great venues with even better fans.

The Red Sox haven't been to the Series since 1986, but don't be deceived by this relatively recent date. They haven't won since 1918.

The Cubs haven't been to the Fall Classic since 1945, and they haven't been crowned champions since 1908.

The Red Sox play at Fenway Park — the oldest ballpark (built in 1912) and home of the 37-foot high Green Monster stretching from left field to center.

The Cubs play at Wrigley Field — the second-oldest park (1914) and the venue known for its ivy, bleacher bums, and home-run balls being thrown back onto the field.

The Red Sox sold the most prolific home-run hitter in baseball history, Babe Ruth, to division rival New York.

Field hockey splits on the road in Ohio

The Iowa field-hockey team split a pair of games in the Buckeye State this weekend, rebounding from a 2-1 loss to Ohio State on Oct. 17 with a 2-1 win over the Ohio Bobcats on Sunday. The victory snapped the ninth-ranked Hawkeyes' brief, two-game losing skid.

Ohio State shot out to a two-goal lead by halftime, both scores coming in a seven minute stretch beginning 12:23 into the game. Iowa was able to slice the lead in half when sophomore Debbie Birrell knocked the ball into the cage on a pass from Pattie Gillern two minutes into the second period.

Despite the defeat, Iowa outshot the Buckeyes, 13-9, as well as taking an 11-6 advantage in penalty corners. On Sunday, Gillern got the game going in the right direction for her team, connecting on an unassisted goal 12 and a half minutes into the action. The shot gave Gillern, a senior from Medford, N.J., a team-leading 41 goals.

The Bobcats' Kristin Haan answered with a successful shot of her own six minutes later, knotting the score at 1 apiece. But Hawkeye freshman Heather Schnepf untangled the tie two minutes later, putting a loose ball past Ohio goalkeeper Jen Cote for the eventual game-winner.

Iowa's Barb Weinberg grabbed the goalkeeping honors on the day, out-saving Cote by a margin of 11-8.

Iowa will continue its three-game road trip with visit to Evanston, Ill., for a 1 p.m. matchup against Northwestern. The Hawkeyes will be on display at Grant Field again on Halloween before finishing out the regular season with a home game against top-ranked Wake Forest on Nov. 2.

Hawkeye womens' rowing places 5th

The Iowa women made their presence known over the weekend at the Head of the Charles Regatta, placing 5th in the Club Eight and 18th in the Championship Eight race.

Coach Mandi Kowal said she was very pleased the women's performance in the Club Eight. "The thing that most pleased me about [the Club Eight] was seeing the group come together. We had a bad row Friday, so we had to change some things ... but we had a very good showing."

The Championship Eight showcased not only the elite college teams around the country, but several national and international teams as well (a crew from London and the U.S. national team took first and second places respectively). The Iowa women took 18th with a time of 16:54.

Kowal indicated that because the race draws such high-profile rowing teams every year, she was happy with the way the team performed.

"We were within 4 seconds of Tennessee and we beat Minnesota, which beat us last week. It [Minnesota] beat us by three seconds last week and we beat it by eight seconds this week," Kowal said.

The crew will regroup for the Head of the Iowa Regatta on Saturday, which will be its final meet of the fall season.

Women swimmers beat Northern Iowa

The Iowa women's swimming team split a pair of meets on Oct. 18 in the Field House. The Hawkeyes beat Northern Iowa, 229.00-32.00, but lost a close one to Kansas, 131.00-130.00.

Jennifer Skolaski paced the Hawkeyes with three first-place finishes — the 100 backstroke, 200 backstroke, and 500 freestyle. Iowa also won the 400-freestyle relay and two other individual crowns — Katelyn Eustis in the 1,000 freestyle and Abby Van Maaren in the 50 freestyle.

Skolaski said she was impressed with the first meet for the team. While she wishes the Hawkeyes would have beaten Kansas, she believes this is the first step to a lot of success.

"As a team, we had a lot of improvements," Skolaski said. "I know we started a lot better this year than we did last year."

The team will next compete on Friday at home against Michigan State. The meet at the Field House will start at 2 p.m.

Iowa men finish 11th at Pre-National

The Iowa men's and women's cross-country teams competed in the Pre-National Cross-Country Meet in Cedar Falls on Oct. 18, with the men finishing 11th in the 35-team field, and the women placing 28th out of 32 teams.

Tony Rakaric led Iowa, placing 41st with a time of 24:38, and two other Hawkeyes finished in the top 60. Coach Larry Wiczorek believes this meet will earn his team at-large points for possible postseason consideration.

He noted that the running conditions were perfect, and he was quite pleased with the overall performance. "I really was happy with that [performance]," he said.

Women's coach Layne Anderson said he was a little disappointed with his team's performance. True freshman Nikki Chapple led the Hawkeyes with a time of 21:45 and a 67th-place finish — nearly 45 seconds ahead of her teammates. She was the lone Iowa runner to place in the top 100.

Anderson said senior Sarah Arens, who did not compete in the meet, should be ready to go for the Big Ten championships on Nov. 2. He added that a couple of team members were feeling sick and fatigued, but despite the placing, he believes it was a positive performance.

"[The course] was wide-open, really fast," Anderson said. "Some of them rose to the challenge. I think it was a step forward."

Soccer stuck in winless roadblock

The Iowa women's soccer team extended their winless streak to 10 games, losing both games on their Michigan road trip.

The Hawkeyes lost to Michigan, 1-0, on Oct. 17 and to Michigan State, 4-0, on Sunday. The losses dropped Iowa's record to 3-11-2, 0-8-2 (last) in the conference. During the streak, Iowa has managed just six goals.

Iowa played well against the Wolverines in the 1-0 loss. Michigan scored on a header from Stephaine Chaver at the 19:08 mark of the first-half to give the Wolverines the game-winner. Iowa shut out the Wolverines the rest of the way but couldn't mount an offensive attack, managing just 10 shots on goal over the last 70 minutes of play.

The Hawkeyes fell behind at the 31st minute after a goal from Spartan senior Michelle Perun. Andrea Sied scored off a penalty kick at the 38th minute to put MSU ahead 2-0 at half. Michigan State added two late goals at the 78th and 79th minutes to put Iowa away.

Iowa will return home Friday to play Wisconsin-Milwaukee in a match at the Iowa Soccer Complex.

Buckeyes sweep over volleyball

As if the Ohio State Buckeyes didn't do enough damage to the Hawkeyes' psyche on the football field this weekend, the school's volleyball team decided to add insult to injury with a 3-0 sweep Sunday in Columbus.

Iowa dropped its ninth-consecutive match of the season by the tally of 30-28, 30-23, 31-29 to fall to 5-13 overall, 0-8 in the Big Ten.

Despite the continuation of Iowa's lengthy losing streak, the Hawkeyes did receive encouraging signs in a couple of areas. First, the squad played as strong as it has in weeks in games one and three, in which it lost by two points each. Second, the play of senior Jitka Stehnova was especially positive, as she paced Iowa with a school-record tying attack percentage of .800.

The 5-9 native of the Czech Republic led the way for Iowa with eight kills and no errors in 10 attempts, tying the previous mark by junior Amoreena Reynolds set last season.

A trip to University Park, Pa., to take on the No. 13 Nittany Lions of Penn State kicked off the weekend for the volleyball squad. The hosts took the match by a score of 30-14, 30-23, 30-19. Game one set a particularly poor tone for Buck-Crockett's squad, as the Hawkeyes tallied their second-lowest point-total of the season. They also hit an abysmal -.93 in the opening game. Junior middle blocker Carolyn Giese provided a spark for her team with 14 kills, and four block assists.

Iowa will return to action with a pair of home matches this weekend, beginning Friday at 7 p.m. against Michigan State at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

HAWKEYE MEN'S GOLF PREVIEW

State pride on the line at Big Four Tourney

The Iowa men's golf team will play their final contest of the fall today when it travels to Cedar Rapids to compete in the Big Four tournament. The meet is a battle for state pride; Iowa will face Iowa State, Northern Iowa, and Drake in the one-day, 36-hole competition.

"This is for bragging rights in the state. It's a nice one to win so we can say, 'Hey, we're the best [program] in the state,'" Hawkeye coach Terry Anderson said.

Competing for the Hawkeyes will be freshmen Jon Feldick, Bennett Hammerberg, and Todd Larson, and sophomores Andy Tiedt and Luke Miller.

Feldick is coming off a top-20 finish at the Xavier Invitational, shooting a 142 for 19th place.

"I know my guys, because they're all from Iowa, it means a lot more to them, because their Iowa pride is on the line," Anderson said.

BCS focus on TCU, Northern Illinois

BY JOSH DUBOW
ASSOCIATED PRESS

When the first Bowl Championship Series standings are released today, it will be much more interesting to look at the bottom than the top.

Oklahoma will be No. 1, and the winner of the Miami-Virginia Tech game on Nov. 1 will also have a clear shot at the Sugar Bowl for the national title.

The big question is where the other two undefeated teams will be and whether they can play in a major bowl.

Northern Illinois is expected to be No. 10 in the first BCS standings, while TCU will be lucky to make the top 15, said BCS expert Jerry Palm.

"In December, if we're able to win all our ballgames, then we'll have something to talk about," TCU coach Gary Patterson said Sunday. "If we're able to pull it off, then we'll have an argument."

The BCS was set up by college football's six biggest conferences before the 1998 season to determine a national champion without a playoff system, instead using polls, computer rankings, schedule strength, losses, and bonus points to determine the teams that play for the title.

Oklahoma, Miami, and Virginia Tech figure to be the top three teams, Palm said, and they are the leading contenders right now for the Sugar Bowl.

While the system never was supposed to do anything other than determine the top two teams to play in a national-championship game heading into the bowls, there has been a lot of focus this year on how teams are picked for the other three bowls.

Teams from outside the Pac-10, Big 12, SEC, ACC, Big East, and Big Ten have been on a public-relations push to improve access to bowls that pay out about $13 million a team.

Right now, a team has to be in the top six to guarantee a bid and top 12 to be eligible. Because of the schedules they play, Northern Illinois and TCU have no shot for the automatic bid and must hope they can stay eligible.

If one of them is undefeated and in the top 12, you can probably count on the Fiesta or Orange Bowl to invite them to quiet the criticism.

"I've never been to a bad bowl game," Patterson said. "Obviously, for our kids, it probably affects them more than anyone else because kids have dreams. We can't worry about things we have no control of."

That will be a tough test for Patterson and Northern Illinois coach Joe Novak. Previous teams in this situation haven't been so successful at doing that.

In 2001, BYU started 12-0 and had hopes of playing in a major bowl but lost, 72-45, to Hawaii in the season finale. The previous year, TCU started 7-0 and reached the top 10 before a 27-24 loss to San Jose State.

In 1998, Tulane went undefeated but could only play in the Liberty Bowl because it was ranked 11th in the BCS standings. As the members of the BCS meet to discuss changes to the system for the next contract, which will begin with the 2006 season, they are considering guaranteeing any undefeated top 12 team a bid.

Despite high-profile wins against Maryland, Alabama, and Iowa State, the Huskies are hurt by the MAC. While the conference has two ranked teams for the first time in 30 years and has high-profile wins against Pittsburgh and Kansas State, the 14 schools have combined for a 9-26 record in nonconference games against Division I-A teams.

Northern Illinois has two tough road trips left, playing at No. 23 Bowling Green on Saturday and at Toledo on Nov. 15. If the Huskies win those games, they'll also have the MAC title game to contend with.

Conference USA doesn't help TCU much either, so the Horned Frogs will probably need lots of help from the pollsters to move up in the BCS standings. They also have to get past home games with Louisville and Cincinnati and a trip to Southern Mississippi.

Northern Illinois has looked much more impressive than TCU so far, especially after the Horned Frogs beat UAB by only three points.

History says both teams won't remain undefeated. But if they do, the Huskies should get the BCS bid.

Yankees even series

BY BEN WALKER

NEW YORK (AP)—The Face of October showed up and shut down the Florida Marlins, silencing all their talk about wreaking havoc in this World Series.

With his cap pulled down low and shadowing his dark eyes, Andy Pettitte pitched neatly into the ninth inning and drew the New York Yankees even with a 6-1 win in Game 2 Sunday night.

The Yankees came out slugging, a take-that response to a Marlins' team intent on using its speed to cause trouble.

Hideki Matsui delivered the big hit the Yankee Stadium crowd was waiting for, a three-run homer in the first inning on a 3-0 count. Slumping Alfonso Soriano later added a two-run drive.

Those shots seemed to revive a Yankees team that looked sluggish in losing the opener, 3-2. And they were plenty for Pettitte, who tied John Smoltz's postseason record of 13 victories.

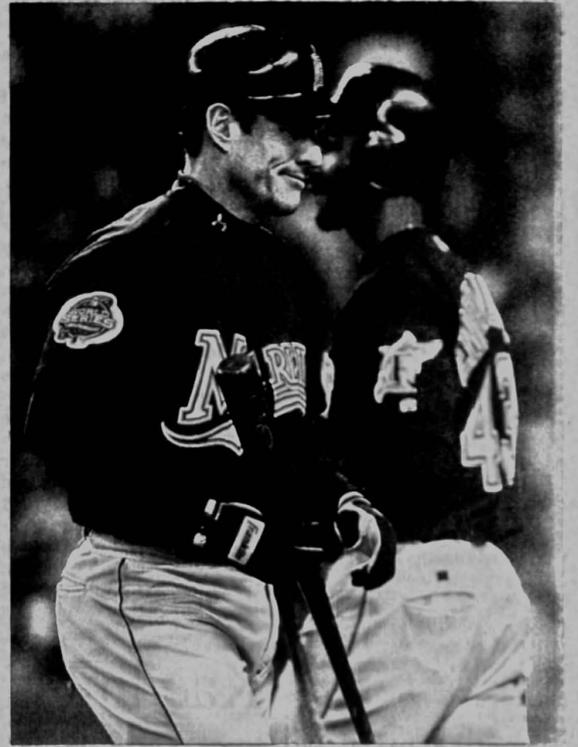

Pettitte nearly recorded his first postseason shutout in 29 starts. Third baseman Aaron Boone's second error of the game, a two-out misplay in the ninth, set up Derrek Lee's RBI single.

At that point, manager Joe Torre pulled Pettitte, who waved his cap as he got a standing ovation from the 55,750 fans chanting his name.

Pettitte gave up six hits, struck out seven, walked one, and did not permit a runner past second base until the last inning. Jose Contreras relieved and got the final out.

Pettitte is a familiar if not frightening figure on the mound, and once again his timing was impeccable.

The Yankees also lost the opens in their playoff series against Minnesota and Boston this year before Pettitte won Game 2.

Now, the Series shifts to Pro Player Stadium for Game 3 on Tuesday night. Marlins ace Josh Beckett will start against Mike Mussina.

Pettitte improved to 13-7 lifetime in the postseason and never let the Marlins threaten. Catcher Jorge Posada threw out Luis Castillo trying to steal in the first inning, and the Yankees got a lucky break when a ball that deflected off Miguel Cabrera's leg was called fair and turned into a double play.

Not that the Yankees needed much help to beat Mark Redman on this night. Pettitte's complete game also allowed New York to give ace closer Mariano Rivera another day of rest.

Nick Johnson helped out with three hits for the Yankees. He may not get to play again for a bit, as the Yankees will lose the designated hitter at Miami, with Jason Giambi likely to move back to first base.

Sapp helps keep UNI unbeaten in league

CEDAR FALLS (AP) — Northern Iowa is still unbeaten in the Gateway Conference heading into its four biggest games of the season.

Thank goodness for Benny Sapp. Sapp caught a touchdown pass, returned one of his two interceptions for a touchdown, and recovered a fumble in Northern Iowa's 26-20 victory at Southwest Missouri State on Oct. 18.

And if that's not enough, he also broke up a pass in the end zone, forcing Southwest Missouri State to settle for a field goal.

"We expected him to be an impact player when he came here," UNI coach Mark Farley said. "We've seen that ability in him to do that, and [on Oct. 18], he showed what kind of impact he can make in a game."

Northern Iowa (6-1, 3-0 Gateway) is tied for first place in the league with Southern Illinois, which is 7-0 overall.

The Panthers finish the season against those four contenders, so they don't need help for anyone else to win the conference title.

'Tis the season to plan your holiday party.

Injury report

The laundry list of injuries continued for Iowa following its duel with Ohio State.
Defensive tackle Jonathan Babineaux suffered a broken ankle; he is lost for the season. Coach Kirk Ferentz also disclosed after the game that his son, Brian Ferentz, who started the season's first six games at center, will undergo surgery to repair an MCL injury in his knee and will also be lost for the remainder of the season. Cornerback Jovon Johnson also slightly tweaked the ankle injury he suffered against Michigan and left the game in the second half.
Tight end Mike Follett also went down with an ankle injury, the severity of which is unknown. Quarterback Nate Chandler also suffered a bruised knee while scrambling to the sidelines, but he remained in the game.

He hit 665 bombs after the deal.

The Cubs traded away stud pitcher Lou Brock to division rival St. Louis. He had 2,567 hits and 855 stolen bases in 15 complete seasons with the Cardinals.

The Red Sox are hexed by the "Curse of the Bambino." Ever since they sold Ruth, defined by many to be the game's best ever, they haven't won a title. Ruth played on the club's 1918 title team, but two years later, the Sox sent him to the Yankees. Let's just say, the Bronx Bombers have won a few since the deal.

The Cubs are damned by the "Curse of the Billy Goat." In 1945, a local tavern owner attempted to bring his goat into Wrigley during the World Series. Because of the farm animal's unbearable stench, he was asked to leave. As he left, he proclaimed the Cubs would never play another World Series at Wrigley Field. The curse is 58-years-old and going strong.

The storied franchises' histories have crossed paths on many occasions. In 1918, the last year the Red Sox won the Series, they beat, you guessed it, the Cubs. In the 1932 World Series, former Red Sox slugger Ruth hit the historic "called shot" at Wrigley. In 2003, fans from both teams agonizingly witnessed the league pennant slip away in front of their eyes.

If this year's Series were Boston-Chicago, Fox could be having a heyday. It could have been Pedro Martinez pitching to Sammy Sosa and matched up against Mark Prior. It could have been the Bambino against the Goat. It could have been Samuel Adams and Old Style; Fenway Park and Wrigley Field. Just think — all of the history, a buffet of the story lines — a ratings dream.

It could have meant I would have watched my Cubs last night, instead of waiting yet another year.

Kaeding's TD highlight of game

"It was reminiscent of 2001, where we had some problems," Ferentz said of the play. The Hawkeye coach added that shaky play in the kicking game, such as Hall's blocked punt, cost his squad a chance at notching the road victory. "When you let a guy come up the middle, that's a bad thing, boy, and we did it today."

The Buckeyes saw a soft spot in the Hawkeyes' blocking scheme on film earlier in the week.

"Mark Snyder is our ranger-team coach, and every week, he gives us what he thinks will put pressure on them," said Ohio State coach Jim Tressel. "[He] gives us a look every week of a rush and a return that we prepare. We had two different ones for this particular week, and this was one of the two, and the kids executed it very well."

The visitors were bitten by plays in the third unit virtually from the outset, as Ohio State kicker Mike Nugent led off the day's scoring with a career-best 53-yard field goal with 9:56 remaining in the first quarter to put the hosts up, 3-0.

Just 34 seconds after Nugent's boot, Michael Jenkins notched an emphatic play of his own. After hauling in a 33-yard punt by Bradley, the OSU returner sidestepped an initial diving tackle attempt by Iowa's Bob Sanders and wove through the rest of the Iowa coverage with ease, tallying a 52-yard score to make it 10-0.

"We always say the punt's the most important play in football, and it worked twice for us today," said OSU quarterback Craig Krenzle. "Anytime you get quick points like that, it helps out."

Sanders, who tallied 10 tackles on the day, also pointed to the kicking game as being Iowa's Achilles' heel.

"Special teams and just critical mistakes we made during the course of the game cost us," he said. "They capitalized and put points on the board, and that's what ended up hurting us."

Iowa's predominantly poor play on fourth down overshadowed one play most Hawkeye faithful won't soon forget. With his squad trailing by two touchdowns early in the fourth quarter, and with the Hawkeyes lined up for an apparent 23-yard field-goal attempt, Nate Kaeding, the school's all-time leading scorer, added to his legend.

The record-setting place-kicker took a Larry Bird-style touch pass from his holder, Bradley, and swept around the right side of Ohio State's line with the ease of a quarterback who had executed a flawless bootleg to draw his squad to within 17-10.

Both squads' special teams accounted for all three of the game's touchdowns.

"That's just the way it goes," said the Hawkeyes' kicker. "Every time you go out there, you know that your play could determine the game, anybody's position."

What looked like a play that might turn the tide of momentum and determine the game in Kaeding's squads' favor ended up but a footnote in Iowa history because of a late mistake in another facet of the Hawkeye attack.

For a third time on the day, Iowa quarterback Nate Chandler and center Eric Rothwell had a poor exchange of a snap with the Hawkeyes forced to forge one last-gasp drive trailing by seven with 4:18 left on the game clock. Facing a second and 15 with Chandler in the shotgun formation, Rothwell snapped the ball hard and high, so much so that even the 6-7 signal-caller could not corral it, netting the Buckeyes a decisive safety that accounted for the final 19-10 OSU margin.

The center exchange hurt the Hawkeyes on two earlier occasions, the most notable coming early in the third quarter on first down with Iowa

Kaeding scored all 10

DEFENSE

"If a team's not scoring on your defense, you're going to win most of the games. It just didn't work out today."

The contest marked the second time this season Ohio State has managed a victory without scoring a touchdown on offense. Buckeyes coach Jim Tressel said it's better than losing two games without scoring an offensive touchdown, but his team is not where he'd like to see it on the offensive side.

The Hawkeyes only touchdown came from an unusual source. Iowa kicker Nate Kaeding darted into the end zone on a fake field goal in the fourth quarter to put his team within a touchdown and give the Coralville native his first career touchdown.

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said his kicker campaigned heavily for the call on the sidelines.

"After the drive stalled, I just figured that we might as well take our chance at getting seven, and he agreed, and we just went from there," said Kaeding, who accounted for all of Iowa's 10 points in the game.

After the score, Kaeding saw Ohio State's Chris Gamble — whom Kaeding knew from the All-American team — grinning in the end zone.

"I had to go let him know about that," Kaeding said. "I just gave him a high five. I didn't want to say much to him, kind of like, 'How do you like that?'"

Unfortunately for Iowa, the Hawkeyes failed to score the rest of the way out, giving them their second loss of the season.

Iowa quarterback Nathan Chandler, who threw an interception in a late-game desperation drive and had trouble grabbing the snaps from the new face at center, Eric Rothwell, said it was difficult looking his defense in the eye after the game.

"It was a 3-3 game out there as far as the offense was concerned," Chandler said. "Our defense did a great job ... We didn't come out, and we didn't play the mistake-free football you need to play against these guys in order to win."

Top: Dispirited Iowa cheerleader Emily Abramsohn watches the replay of a botched snap that flew over Nathan Chandler's head and out of the back of the end zone late in the fourth quarter.

Nicholas Wynia/The Daily Iowan
Dominant: Iowa linebackers Matt Roth and Chad Greenway corral OSU running-back Chris Gamble in the backfield. Despite the score, the Iowa defense held OSU to 185 yards of total offense.

Nicholas Wynia/The Daily Iowan
Middle left: Nate Kaeding runs into the end zone after faking a field goal in the fourth quarter. Kaeding scored all 10 Iowa points.

Nicholas Wynia/The Daily Iowan
Middle right: Running back Fred Russell is brought down by OSU linebackers Fred Pagac Jr. and A.J. Hawk. Russell found little running room, gaining only 44 yards on 22 carries.

Nicholas Wynia/The Daily Iowan
Bottom: Matt Roth, Abdul Hodge, and a host of Hawkeyes tackle OSU quarterback Craig Krenzel. Hodge led the Hawkeye defense with eight solo tackles and 16 total tackles.

NFL: WEEK 6

Vikings go to 6-0; Panthers lose first game

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MINNEAPOLIS — The Minnesota Vikings can beat the NFL's top teams, too.

Daunte Culpepper threw for 277 yards in his return to the lineup, Minnesota's defense knocked Steve Beuerlein out of the game, and the Vikings beat the Denver Broncos, 28-20, Sunday.

Randy Moss had 10 catches for 151 yards, and his lateral to Moe Williams on the final play of the first half led to a 59-yard touchdown play for Minnesota (6-0).

The Vikings' first five victories came against opponents with a combined record of 8-20.

Titans 37, Panthers 17

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Carolina picked up its first loss by losing four fumbles that led to scores.

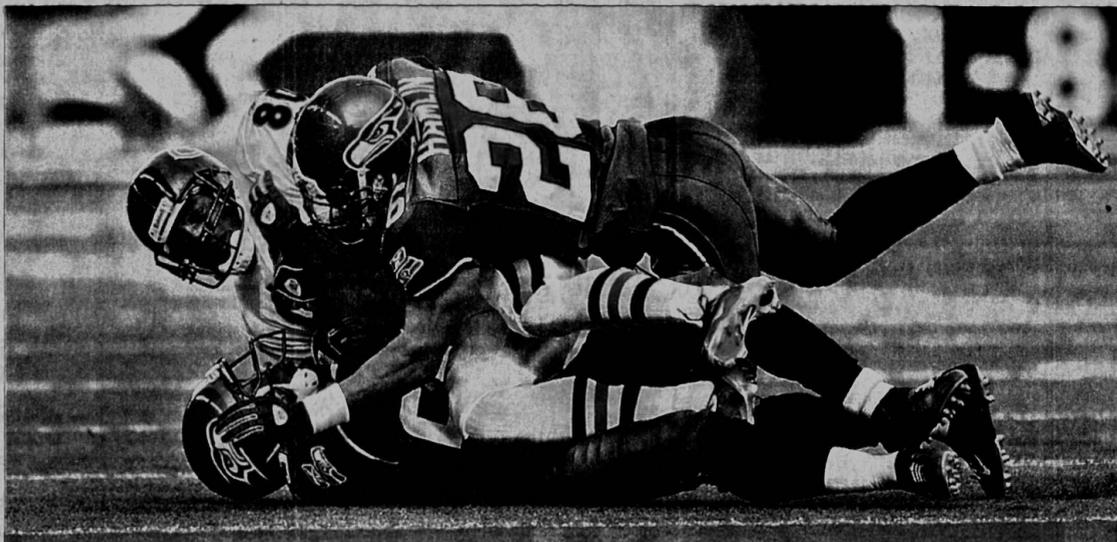

Steve McNair threw for one touchdown and ran for another, and Keith Bullock scored on a 35-yard fumble recovery for Tennessee (5-2). The Titans also scored with a 50-yard pass play on a fake punt.

Eagles 14, Giants 10

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Brian Westbrook scored on an 84-yard punt return with 1:16 to play for the Eagles (3-3).

Chargers 26, Browns 20

CLEVELAND — LaDainian Tomlinson ran for 200 yards and a touchdown, helping San Diego end a nine-game losing streak that dated to last season. Steve Christie kicked field goals of 44, 50, 43, and 32 yards, and Kwamie Lassiter returned an interception 38 yards for a TD for the Chargers (1-5), who entered as the NFL's lone winless team.

Patriots 19, Dolphins 13, 0T

MIAMI — Tom Brady hit Troy Brown on an 82-yard scoring play in overtime for the Patriots (5-2), who moved atop the AFC East.

New England ended an 0-for-13 skid at Miami (4-2) in September and October.

Bengals 34, Ravens 26

CINCINNATI — Baltimore rookie QB Kyle Boller fumbled twice and threw an interception, setting up a 24-point swing that allowed Cincinnati head coach Marvin Lewis beat the team he helped win a Super Bowl as defensive coordinator.

Cowboys 38, Lions 7

DETROIT — Terry Glenn caught three first-half touchdown passes to help Dallas (5-1) match its win total from each of the past three seasons. Under new coach Bill Parcells, the Cowboys have won five-straight games for the first time since 1994.

Rams 34, Packers 24

ST. LOUIS — Marc Bulger threw three touchdown passes, and Isaac

Bruce became the 18th player in NFL history to top 10,000 yards receiving as St. Louis improved to 4-2.

Brett Favre threw two touchdown passes for Green Bay (3-4), but his effort at a comeback fizzled after a 1-yard TD toss to William Henderson pulled Green Bay within 21-17 in the third quarter.

Saints 45, Falcons 17

ATLANTA — Aaron Brooks threw for 352 yards and three touchdowns, and Deuce McAllister scored twice to lead New Orleans (3-4).

Atlanta — blown out 36-0 by St. Louis on Oct. 13 — fell behind 35-14 at the half by giving up a staggering 369 yards.

49ers 24, Buccaneers 7

SAN FRANCISCO — Terrell Owens made a 75-yard scoring romp through Tampa Bay's defense, and Garrison Hearst ran for 117 yards and a touchdown to lead San Francisco (3-4).

Seahawks 24, Bears 17

SEATTLE — Shaun Alexander's 25-yard touchdown run with 58 seconds left lifted Seattle to the best start in franchise history, 5-1. Alexander gained 101 yards on 21 carries, scoring twice.

Seattle's Marcus Trufant sealed the win when he intercepted a pass by Chris Chandler with 37 seconds on the clock. Chicago (1-5) lost for the 17th time in its last 20 games.

Bills 24, Redskins 7

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Travis Henry ran for a career-high 167 yards and scored twice, and Josh Reed had eight catches for 109 yards and a touchdown for Buffalo (4-3).

Jets 19, Texans 14

HOUSTON — Vinny Testaverde led New York (2-4) on a long drive in the waning minutes to set up an 8-yard TD run by LaMont Jordan with 1:21 left.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

We didn't expect to live. Nobody out there with any brains expected to live. The way to live is to kill because you don't have to worry about anybody who's dead.

— William Doyle, a former U.S. Army Tiger Force sergeant during the Vietnam War. An Army investigation reveals that the elite group mutilated and killed hundreds of unarmed Vietnamese during 1967.

WHAT THE UI IS DOING TO COPE WITH NEW BUDGET CUTS

by Jesse Ammerman

- Laying off all current faculty; classes to be taught instead by Mexican day laborers trucked in from Texas.
- Replacing dorms with makeshift village of shanties, lean-tos, and yurts.
- Encouraging students with meal plans to trap, kill, and cultivate own food sources.
- Limiting all chemistry and biology coursework to what's been explained by Bill Nye, the Science Guy.
- Assuring English and philosophy majors that "Choose-Your-Own-Adventure" books can be every bit as informative as actual lectures and discussions.
- Selling Old Capitol dome, Hancher, and a couple old Korn CDs to a pawn shop.
- Admissions Office leaving Calvin Hall to operate from rented storage shed in Coralville.
- David Skorton to donate extra plasma, hit up parents for cash.

horoscopes

Monday, October 20, 2003 by Eugenia Last

- ARIES (March 21-April 19): Follow your own path today. Share your ideas with like-minded people. Financial gains can be made; be smart with the money you receive.
- TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not raise personal issues with loved ones today. You may have to make a decision that will be difficult, but necessary. Satisfy your own needs, or you will not find long-term happiness.
- GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your ability to find solutions for others will be right on target, but leave your own situation alone today. Something important should come in the mail.
- CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't let depression lead to spending. Look at the possibility of changing your position. Once you make your move, you will be glad you did.
- LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be sensitive to the needs of those you love, and you can avoid upset, anger, and even an unnecessary argument. If you force others to do things your way, you'll be blamed later on.
- VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep your mind on what's important, and don't get involved in what others are doing. Keep your thoughts to yourself, and avoid making waves with authority figures.
- LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): New friends and connections can be made and should lead to an interesting turn of events. Volunteer your services. This is not the time to spend money, but offering your time will make a difference.
- SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't let the green-eyed monster rear its ugly head. If things aren't going according to plan or you feel someone is paying too much attention to another, be patient. Remember: Your own success is the best revenge.
- SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make arrangements to get out of the house and keep busy. Take part in a community event, but let any personal matters rest. Emotional issues will have a way of sorting themselves out.
- CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The less you do to help others with money matters, the better. Focus on your own portfolio or bank balance for now. Be creative, and network with people who can help.
- AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may have to deal with a partnership that hasn't been running too smoothly. If there has been reason to distrust your partner or you have not been loyal yourself, you may want to dissolve.
- PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You will have an opportunity to make career moves. A partnership may be inviting, but be sure that you see eye-to-eye about important matters before you get involved.
