Despite complaints, Cambus and the city of Coralville plan to resume a new policy of charging Cambridge students for rides on the route that runs from the Venetian Gables Medical Center to the University of Iowa.

The Cambus route, with stops at the Venetian Gables Medical Center, 31st Avenue, and Holiday Road, costs approximately $2 per month under a new system implemented at the beginning of this semester. The passes allow residents to board only if purchased from Cambus transit.

"I would work until we got people off campus, you have to take the buses City transit or of Cambus transit and buy a Cambus transit pass," Cambus transit manager John Green said. "People who pay $5 a year, I think the tax is free to the public.

If a student lives off campus, he or her has no responsibility to get to campus. McCluskey said, "I've been away from campus in the last several years. As a student, students would have to pay to take the bus. I don't see how the bus can be free of charge."".

"I think the averaged student said," said UI Student Government President Dave Green. "I just don't think it's possible...I think it's at least 75 more.

"The reason for the [Sieb] was basically a problem for the students because of the delay and, after a few weeks, bus service was cut. The Cambus route is managed by the City of Coralville transit.

"We'reirror and Cambus transit are not involved," Green said, "I don't have any Cambus charging for Cambus students to ride the Corvalle route, but he did not understand who students had to pay. He added that the plan to talk to McCluskey in the next few years to try to eliminate the situation before.

The idea of using the bus-pass system was brought up after the 2004-2005 riding statistics were released. The Cambus board of directors decided to implement the new plan.

"The idea has been good for the students, we're happy to support students and the City Council." Last time you find yourself grogging about hospital bills, imagine opening an envelope to find a $91,6 million bill staring you in the face.

That’s the total in fines waived by UI Hospitals and Clinics in fiscal 2003 as part of the Indigent Patient Care Program, which has provided free health care and transportation for qualified impoverished patients since the state Legislature passed the Perkins Act of 1915.

The state appropriate funds, annual funding to the UIHC, but the amount consistently falls for short of services rendered. In fiscal 2003, the UIHC returned $38.6 million to operate the program, most of the total combined services provided to nearly 1,150 patients last year.

Supervisors gird for loss of tax credits

BY CHRISTINA PFEFFER
PITTSBURGH

Funding the possibility that automakers will not create tax credit for the Johnson County Board of Supervisors began planning how it will craft the $35 million budget for the town.

"This big problem is that we don't know how the city of Iowa will make it in the next two years," Supervisor John Dumas said.

The town faces the possibility that automakers will not create tax credits, which are among the biggest sources of funding for the city. The town has been running a budget deficit of approximately $300,000,000 per year.

City Officials fed before the Board of Supervisors for the final two years, and the supervisors agreed that the tax credits were a crucial source of funding. The city has been running a deficit of approximately $300,000,000 per year.

"The last two years have been tough," Supervisor John Dumas said. "We've had to cut services, and we're still facing a deficit."

CERVICAL DYSPHASIA STUDY

Healthy young pregnant females age 18 to 40 years with a positive family history of cervical dysphasia were recruited to participate in this study. The purpose of this study was to evaluate the safety and effectiveness of a new treatment for cervical dysphasia.

A total of 60 participants were enrolled in this study. The study included women who were at least 18 years old and had a positive family history of cervical dysphasia. Participants were randomly assigned to two groups: treatment and control. Participants were required to complete a post-treatment assessment to determine the effectiveness of the treatment.

The study was conducted at the University of Iowa Health Care's Women's Health Center. Participants were evaluated before and after the treatment to determine the effectiveness of the treatment. The study was approved by the University of Iowa Institutional Review Board.

Faculty Council OKs athletics, arrest reports

BY PHIL DAVIDSON

A pair of separate reports that were presented during a recent Faculty Council meeting led to the passage of two resolutions on the topic of athletics, arrest reports, and campus safety.

The council met on Tuesday, February 3, 2004, to discuss the two reports and take action on the resolutions. The resolutions were passed unanimously by the council.

The first resolution, presented by the Faculty Council, was in support of the University of Iowa athletics program. The resolution expressed appreciation for the university's commitment to providing quality athletics programs.

The second resolution, presented by the Faculty Council, was in response to the recent arrest of a faculty member. The resolution called for increased oversight and accountability within the university's athletics program.

The council was pleased with the passage of both resolutions and expressed optimism about their implementation.

N. Korea agrees to nuclear parley

BY BARBARA DEMICK (AP) TOKYO — The abrupt decision by North Korea to return to the negotiating table has raised hopes among some that the regime of Kim Jong Il has made a U-turn decision to abandon its nuclear program. After months of bickering, North Korea announced its return through its official news service, which said it would attend a long-awaited round of six-party talks set to begin Nov. 20.

"We hope the talks will be successful," U.S. Secretary of State Colin Powell said in Washington, D.C., when asked about the announcement, which was confirmed by South Korea and China over the past few days.

A smiling Edwards spoke to his cheering supporters on the hour after the polls closed in South Carolina, basking in victory's glow. "Thank you for your support," he said. "Thank you for the role of politician you've been." He added: "I'm really proud of the campaign we ran, and I'm proud of the message we put forward, and I'm proud of the campaign we built." He went on to say that the campaign was "victorious in Washington, D.C., and today's victory was a victory for all Americans." He ended his speech by thanking his family and friends for their support and saying that he would continue to fight for the Democratic Party in the coming months.

Intelligently probing intelligence

A TRULY INDEPENDENT COMMISSION SHOULD INVESTIGATE BOTH THE INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY AND THE ADMINISTRATION ITSELF

In another attempt to cover for his foreign-policy blunders, President Bush announced on Monday that he will appoint a presidential commission whose rule will be to investigate U.S. intelligence before and after the 11 September attacks regarding the existence of Iraq's alleged weapons of mass destruction. This results from mounting pressures and criticism in both political parties to deal with exceptionalism for the war continues.

Appointing a commission might be an appropriate measure to end a cycle of political impasses, but iteno solution to the problem of intelligence failures. The United States is losing its ability to accurately assess the intentions of its enemies, or to meet the threats it faces. This in itself is a rare occurrence by Russian standards, and it is only agreed to appoint one after political pressure applied, even by those in his own party.

A truly independent commission should be appointed by the president, not the administration, to be answerable to the president, and to investigate what those in the administration have known and should have told the American people. Such a commission might be able to do things no other commission ever could.

The administration has also refused to extend the deadline of the commission investigating 9/11, another commission it initially opposed. Why, exactly, is this administration so ready to resist a better understanding of what went wrong in two of the major events in American history?

We all now that Bush has refused to say outright that post-9/11 intelligence was dreadfully, dreadfully wrong. We don't know how, why, or what, but why perhaps it's exactly the fault of the intelligence community. Or maybe the administration had something to do with it. Either way, we deserve to know.

Miami Free Trade Area of the Americas

Linda E. Bachman

The Free Trade Area of the Americas (FTAA) is a current pipe dream of many political leaders. By integrating NAFTA to all 21 nations in Latin America, eliminating trade barriers, and allowing foreign investment, this trade agreement would create jobs in all of the participating countries, generate prosperity, increase international trade and investment, and stimulate economic growth. It would also create a new era of globalized free trade and economic growth.

By implementing the FTAA, the United States would benefit greatly. We would have access to a larger, more affordable marketplace, thereby reducing the cost of goods and increasing the quality of life for all Americans.

The United States would also benefit from the increased demand for U.S. exports. This would result in more jobs for American workers, increased income, and a stronger economy.

It is in the best interest of all nations to work together and promote free trade. The FTAA is a step in the right direction. I urge the people of the United States to support this agreement and help create a more prosperous world.

A little prairie on the prairie

In response to the Jan. 29 editorial, "Becoming the president," I agree that it is ridiculous to believe everything you read in the newspapers. There are reasons and appropriate for what we read in the newspapers. The Media, the Midwest, the Midwest. Midwest. Reconstruction of the prairies would provide new or some of the same benefits to what we have from the Blue River project, but with a different emphasis.

From an economic standpoint, the prairie and wetland areas would be a win-win situation. People would be able to make use of the native species of plants, and birds and car their harvesting center or gift shop that might be opened.

These native habitat areas would also provide habitat for populations of animals to inhabit the prairie. The wetland project would cost less in the long run, and it is not necessary to build and tend for them.

Send in the plows

(To the Editor)

I was at the 12th winter-sports season in Moscow, Russia, last week. On Sunday, Dec. 28, the United States and its allies announced that weapons inspectors monitoring the disarmament efforts in Chechnya, the breakaway republic of the U.S. that was once part of the Soviet Union, had found evidence of weapons of mass destruction. This does not fit the facts, however. There is no evidence of weapons of mass destruction.

老人 has the ability to mend, to repair, to make things work. It is in the same vein that the American people are willing to work together, to make things work, to find a solution.

Boobs are out; erections are in

In 2002 Commissioner Michael Powell said, "I am certain at what age I, a 57-year-old man, shave my hair. Our nation's children, parents, and grandchildren are looking at us. It's more important than ever for those of us old enough to remember the Vietnam War to make sure our children, our grandchildren, are better educated and have a better chance for the future."

Recently, Bob Woodruff, the co-chairman of the 11 September Commission, said, "We need to find a way to educate the American people about what their country is all about."

In Sovietussia, there is no such thing as "schools," but there is a lot of education. People are educated from a young age, and they are expected to know a lot of things by the time they are adults. They are taught to think, to reason, to solve problems, and to be creative.

The best way to ensure that our children and grandchildren are well-prepared for the future is to start early. By the time they are ready to go to school, they should have a basic understanding of the world around them.

Whose fault was the Iraq intelligence failure?

One of the most remarkable and profound events in world history, the United States-led war on Iraq, has had profound consequences for many years. The war has had far-reaching implications, from the rapid decline of the United States to a superpower to power balances on the Eurasian side of the planet. The failure of mushroom clouds rising over American cities and hard Soviet soldiers brandishing their hammers and sickles against Washington, D.C., that frustrated my parents' and grandparents' efforts to bring forth lasting peace and democracy, and razing our consciences neighborhood, is a testament to the failures of the past few decades. Hussein's present day in Iran, not only do we continue to lack safety, the loss of tens of thousands of lives, but also a little liaisonism. The current situation shows great priority, toward the political parties of our nations falls out of the superpower chip. Evidence? Look at the Russian troops in Ukraine, which were deployed, with a "T" for translator, to the road for a large portion of the road to BAGHNAI.

Turkey blames construction in deadly building collapse

BY SUZAN FRASER

KONYA, Turkey — Turkey's prime minister called for tougher laws against shoddy construction Tuesday, as rescuers dug through the wreckage of a collapsed 11-story apartment building to save dozens of people trapped in the rubble. Sixteen people have died. Thirty people have been rescued, but between 40 and 100 others are believed to be buried. "This is entirely a technical failure," Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan said. "As long as the sanctions for these things aren't heavy, citizens will pay the price with their life. Nobody has that right. We won't allow it." President Ahmet Necdet Sezer said that "human life is so precious and should not be lost as a result of irresponsibility." The building in Konya, a city in central Turkey, had 140 residents in 37 apartments, but it was unclear how many people were actually at home during the collapse. Monday was the second day of the Muslim holiday of Eid-al-Adha, when people traditionally visit friends and family. Officials said at least 18 residents were not home, but others may have had visitors at the time. Ahmet Kuresi, 36, who was celebrating the holiday with his family on the eighth floor, had been trapped under a heavy piece of metal. "Everything collapsed in a few seconds," he said. "My grandchildren were still holding their balloons in the debris." The children were apparently later rescued. Hatice Kubra Turkoglu, Ahmet Kuresi's daughter-in-law, was also pulled from the rubble Tuesday. "I dug at the soil with my hands, and I was shouting," she said.

Your joke might not have been funny, but don't let that first your high-sounding lectures and tirades.

Please, let's hear some of those heated opinions on the family room's central heating equipment: should it be electric or gas? Should we consider a new model that's on special this month? After all, we agree. It's a perfect time to do some major improvements to that old unit.

Dawgs express interest in Maddux

Dawgs have expressed interest in Greg Maddux, with potential deals involving the future Hall of Famer already being discussed in the summit meeting Tuesday by a baseball writer who covers the team on the sidelines.

Maddux, who will turn 38 in April, has two major league games, including 16 in a row, a 16-4 season, he was 16-1 with a 3.24 ERA for the Atlanta Braves last year. Maddux, who has been with the Cards for two seasons, will not accept the offer of the team.

Manning and his two sons have been on the list of people in the Maddux family that the Cardinals have been interested in playing for the Dodgers, the source said.

The Dodgers have expressed interest in the pitcher, who has been a consistent performer for the team in recent years.

The dirty side of college recruiting

NICK RICHARDS

When I think about the topic of football recruiting, the words of Vince Lombardi come to mind. "What's going on out east?"

San Diego State, negative recruiting tactics battle to battle other schools in the recruiting game.

Negative recruiting tactics involve making negative statements about a school that is trying to recruit the same player. Schools will often go so far as to lie about a school that is trying to recruit a player. What's going on out east? Negative recruiting tactics battle to battle other schools in the recruiting game.

This year, however, negative recruiting seems to be new to a new kid. Colorado football players should have been kept to prevent negative recruiting. Patriots celebrate at home

BY JAY LINDSAY

BOSTON — The New England Patriots held their second Super Bowl trophy in three seasons before a raucous hometown crowd Tuesday, celebra- ting a championship that was thrilling on the final play.

"We were ahead," Brady said on Tuesday. "We were behind."

But Ramsay said he thinks the Patriots are a "team that is fun to watch, a team that is fun to support." And he said he's looking for the entire team to return to the Super Bowl this year.

"If this was our goal, then I think we've accomplished that," he said.

For a team to accomplish its goals, Bill Belichick said, "it's not just about the game." And if a team is going to win a championship, "it's not just about the play," he added.

Belichick, who said he's looking for the entire team to return to the Super Bowl this year, was clearly pleased with the Patriots' performance.

"This team was a joy to be a part of," Belichick said. "We're going to play well next year and win a championship."

Cavey commitments for confident

DAVIS

Carved out their last year, she didn't want to be a part of any of that. Cavey's peak years were in high school, but it was her college career that really took shape when she got to the University of Iowa. "I just got to be that girl who was a difference-maker," Cavey said. "I just want to be that girl who can make a difference in this program and lead us to a national title." Cavey's performance has been outstanding since her arrival at Iowa, and she is expected to be a key player in the team's future success.

Cavey's style of play is a perfect fit for the Hawkeye football program, which values toughness, intelligence, and leadership. She brings a strong work ethic and a competitive drive, which are essential qualities for success in the Big Ten Conference.

Cavey is a versatile athlete who can play multiple positions on the field, including inside linebacker and Safety. Her ability to read the game and make quick decisions has made her a valuable asset to the Hawkeye defense.

Cavey's performance has not gone unnoticed by her teammates and coaches. "Erin's a natural leader," said Iowa head coach Kirk Ferentz. "She's a player who can make big plays and play big in the biggest moments."
