19-ORDINANCE

Much ado about bard fest

BY WILLIAM MIKESSELL
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa City bar employees are contending that a provision of a proposed local ordinance allowing alcohol to be served at the Riverside Theatre's Shakespeare Festival is unfair because patrons under the age of 19 can attend plays past 10 p.m., but not their pubs.

Vanderhoef
city councilor

Minors under the age of 19 cannot hobnob in establishments in which alcohol is served unless alcohol sales account for less than 50 percent of their revenues. At its March 16 meeting, the Iowa City City Council approved an exemption to the 19-ordinance for the summer Shakespeare Festival in a measure that allows nonprofit organizations to sell alcohol in parks and on streets.

Ryan Keller, a bartender for the Q Bar, 211 Iowa Ave., said he believes that the council should not make cultural decisions.

"I don't know how Shakespeare is any more eloquent than live music," he said. "I think that it's unfair, rather hypocritical, [and] contradictory of the city to do that."

Doug Roberson, the talent buyer at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., said it is an unfair and arbitrary ordinance that benefits underage Shakespeare aficionados but not teenage rockers.

"The City Council thinks bars are loose cannons and we are trying to get everyone drunk," he said. "I think the whole 19-thing ought to be repealed."

At least one councilor, though, pointed to the difference between the family-oriented plays and the downtown bar scene.

UI reaches into alum ranks for law dean

BY ALEX LANG
THE DAILY IOWAN

For the second time this semester, the UI has brought back an alum to fill vacancies in its administration, though UI President David Skorton says it was a mere coincidence.

Carolyn Jones, a UI alumna and a law professor at the University of Connecticut, was announced as the new dean of the UI College of Law by Skorton on March 19.

Two months earlier, Michael Hogan, a UI alumni and Ohio State University's executive dean of the College and Arts and Sciences, was named UI provost.

"It is nice that these people have ties to the university," Skorton said. "But there were no strategies to pick them like that."

Jones
law dean

Current UI law-school Dean N. William Hines said he is relieved that a successor was found to fill the position, which he will vacate on July 1.

"I think she is going to be a little shocked on the claims of her time," he said. "She'll be amazed at how little free time she has for herself."

When he took office in 1976, there were few demands on the dean's time, Hines said. Now, the dean has to meet with outside constituents as well as dealing with students and faculty.

Jones will likely learn her duties quickly because she is well-rounded and able to take the reins of the school quickly, Skorton said.

He said Jones' combination of excellence in teaching and administrative experience set her apart from the other candidates. He added that when he met her during her UI visit, she was very knowledgeable of how the law school and colleges similar to it operate.

Local Libertarian runs for beliefs

Iowa City man campaigns for Libertarians' vice-presidential nod

BY MARK QUINER
THE DAILY IOWAN

While much of the nation prepares to make a choice between Republican and Democratic candidates, an Iowa City man is fighting an uphill battle to broaden America's political choices and include those outside traditional party lines.

Richard Campagna, a Libertarian Party vice-presidential hopeful, believes he is the perfect candidate to help garner at least 1 million votes, a goal critical in making his party a major contender, he said. In the 2000 presidential election, the Libertarians received 382,869 votes — less than 1 percent of the vote, according to the party's website.

Campagna, one of nearly 40 "dues-paying Libertarians" in Johnson County, plans to campaign in 48 states to achieve his goal, focusing on the most populated states.

"I'm really the candidate closest to the so-called mainstream voters," he said.

The Libertarian role is to combat the Republicans' deviance from a small-government philosophy, Campagna said. He added that Republicans and Democrats are similar — the GOP stands for a small centralized government but in reality pursues big government, while Democrats make no bones about their desire for a large federal government.

"Neither of these two represent my philosophy ... or do the job they are entrusted to do," Campagna said.

He concurs with his party's view of foreign policy in that the United States should return to the Founding Fathers' approach of isolationism and cooperation.

However, his stance on the war on terror differs from party norms — he said the country must see it to completion. Only then would he try to get the nation away from such an aggressive foreign policy.

Another Libertarian goal is to run the nation in strict accordance with the Constitution, said Campagna, who received 100 percent of Iowa's straw-poll nomination.

"The state of constitutional law today is that the federal government can basically do anything," he said.

To reform constitutional law, he said, he would call for a constitutional convention to evaluate and establish strict

Alleged IC bank robber held in DM

Benjamin Joseph Langford, who allegedly robbed an Iowa City bank at gunpoint early last week, was sitting in a Des Moines jail on Sunday after police arrested him on a search warrant from February.

The 47-year-old was apprehended March 17 and charged with first-degree robbery in the Iowa City incident in addition to another charge filed in connection with a Feb. 22 incident at a Spaghetti Works restaurant in Des Moines.

Langford's bond is set at $165,000, employees at the Polk County Jail said on Sunday.

The 5-11, 198-pound white male is also not to have any contact with Spaghetti Works until March 29, according to an order issued by Associate Judge Carol Egly on March 18.

11 arrested during antiwar protest

BY RYAN J. FOLEY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

JOHNSTON, Iowa — One by one, 11 peace activists crawled underneath a gate at the Iowa National Guard Armory complex Sunday and were quickly arrested as they sought to protest U.S. military presence in Iraq.

The activists, led by former Catholic priest Frank Cordaro, said they decided to enter the military complex to convey a message to the Guard commanders that the occupation of Iraq is immoral, unjust, and illegal.

But they were quickly met by Polk County sheriff's deputies, who handcuffed them and took them into custody as a crowd gathered across the street chanting "We want peace."

"We're here in a very small and measured way to pay a price for peacemaking," Cordaro told a crowd of approximately 100 people who gathered on a windy bluff at Camp Dodge, the Iowa National Guard headquarters.

The protesters were issued tickets for trespassing. All but one were released. Christine Gaunt of Grinnell refused to sign her citation and was taken to the Polk County Jail. The arrests were made without incident.

In a statement, those who were arrested said they were "practicing the American tradition of nonviolent civil disobedience."

"The Iowa National Guard was created to protect and serve the citizens of our state. We cannot stand silent as it is diverted to a war and occupation, which are against international, human, and divine law," the statement said.

They encouraged soldiers from Iowa who are fighting in Iraq to "examine your consciences" and "refuse duty in the U.S. military." They want others to follow in the footsteps of Sgt. Camilo Mejia of the Florida National Guard, who became the first soldier who fought in Iraq to seek conscientious-objector status last week.

On March 20, the activists gathered in a church basement in Des Moines to learn how to nonviolently be arrested for crossing a no-trespassing line enforced by sheriff's deputies in previous protests.

But authorities did not enforce that line, prompting Cordaro to devise the plan to crawl underneath the east gate at the STARC Armory. One of the protesters who originally planned to be arrested refused.

Chet Guinn of Des Moines said going underneath the fence was a drastic step that would undermine the group's overall message.

Chief Deputy Bill Vaughn said Sunday's protest marked the first time activists went under or scaled a fence at the complex. As for a much smaller police presence, he would only say authorities decided to change their tactics.

Mark Kegans/Associated Press

Brian Terrell speaks to a crowd of antiwar protesters across the road from the Iowa National Guard headquarters in Johnston, Iowa, on Sunday. Eleven protesters were arrested after crawling under the front gate of the headquarters.

A similar protest in November sparked a federal grand jury investigation during which four activists were subpoenaed to testify and prosecutors sought names of students in a legal activist group. The subpoenas were later withdrawn.

Protesters said attention from that investigation helped their movement pick up steam one year after the war started.

The activists said the U.S. failure to find weapons of mass destruction and the rising death toll from the war — 573 Americans, including 10 Iowans — shows they were right to protest the war.

"We find no satisfaction in that. Our worst nightmares are being realized," said Bryan Terrell, who helped organize Sunday's protest but wasn't arrested.

The protesters who received citations are scheduled to appear in court March 29.

Cordaro and two other protesters, Edward Bloomer and Rita Hohenshell, both of Des Moines, are all scheduled for trial this week on trespassing charges from the November protest.

Gaunt was found guilty last week of trespassing, interference with official acts, and assault on a peace officer from the November protest. She is scheduled to be sentenced March 31.

Musser to appeal 3rd HIV verdict

After being convicted in Tama County on a third count of criminal HIV transmission, Adam Musser plans to appeal this month's guilty verdict.

The 12-member jury decided on March 2 that there was sufficient evidence to convict the 23-year-old of knowingly transmitting the deadly virus — a decision that was preceded by guilty verdicts from Benton and Jones County juries in January and February.

Defense attorney Kelly Steele filed a motion for a new trial on March 15, and no other action on the motion has yet been taken, according to court records.

Musser is scheduled to be sentenced on the third case on May 14. He faces up to 25 years in prison for each of his counts for the Class B felony.

The HIV-transmission charges have been the subject of frequent media attention, resulting in the several changes of venue in order to find jurors who had not heard about the case. Musser, originally charged in Johnson County in February 2003, has asked for another change of venue for his fourth trial, scheduled for April 12. Lawyers from both sides will debate the possible move during an April 1 hearing.

Regents' president to step down

Owen Newlin, the president of the state Board of Regents, will step down from the post when his fourth term ends on April 30.

But Newlin, who announced his decision at a regents' meeting in Des Moines on March 10, said he will continue to serve on the board as a member until his term ends in 2005.

Regent Robert Downer of Iowa City said Newlin's decision came, in part, to ease the transition for the next appointed president.

"It allows him to collaborate and move forward with the new president," Downer said. "It makes for a less abrupt transition."

Iowa Gov. Tom Vilsack will appoint a new president by April 30.

Newlin, an Iowa State University alumnus, has served as president of the regents since 1993. During his tenure, they have dealt with reductions in state appropriations, forcing them to raise tuition at the state's public universities.

In spite of the challenges, Downer said, Newlin maintained a "high commitment to higher public education in the state of Iowa with strong support for all the universities."

Newlin, who lives in Des Moines, was unavailable for comment Sunday.

Sex offender moves

Iowa City police reported on March 19 that a local sex offender has moved to a new address in northeastern Iowa City.

Joseph Harold Rudd, 29, 422 Brown St. Apt. 16, was convicted in Johnson County of assault with intent to commit sexual abuse on Nov. 3, 2000. The Iowa Department of Public Safety and the Division of Criminal Investigation consider Rudd to be at "moderate risk" to re-offend.

Rudd is a black male, 6 feet tall, weighing 185 pounds. He has five tattoos, including one on his back, three on his left arm, and one on his right arm.

Authorities warn that anyone who takes action against Rudd — such as vandalizing his property, making oral or written threats against him, or physically assaulting him — faces possible arrest and prosecution.

The Iowa Sex Offender Registry lists 15 sex offenders in Iowa City as "at risk" to re-offend.

Slight damage to Systems home after fire

Local firefighters were dispatched on March 19 to a small fire at a Systems Unlimited group home, which caused less than $500 in damages.

Two clients occupy the 900 N. Governor St. facility, while three others inhabit an adjoining duplex. Upon arriving at 7:50 a.m., firefighters found the two occupants evacuated and a small trash fire in a basement utility room.

On-duty personnel extinguished the fire quickly, according to a press release issued March 19 after the incident. Significant damage was contained to the basement area, but moderate smoke spread throughout the facility. The unoccupied adjoining duplex was also ventilated to remove light smoke.

Systems Unlimited employees and Johnson County Mental Health and Human Services workers helped the clients during the incident.

The fire was still under investigation as of March 19. Neither Battalion Chief Jim Humston nor other investigators were available Sunday for comment.

No injuries were reported.

International UMass students protest new fee

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Approximately 200 international students at the University of Massachusetts have refused to pay a new student fee, a protest that could result in dismissal from the school and loss of their student visas.

The $65-per-semester fee for foreign students was designed to compensate for cuts to the budget of the university's International Programs Office. It appeared for the first time on spring-semester bills due this month.

Part of the fee will also help pay for a new federal student tracking program called the Student and Exchange Visitor Information Systems — SEVIS — which Congress created to prevent terrorists from entering the country on student visas.

International students nationwide are required to register through the system before receiving visas.

Critics of the fee say it's unfair to ask the 1,600 foreign students to pay for a system created to monitor them and wrong to ask only foreign students to bear the costs.

"Everyone's scared, but I'm willing to take it as far as I can," said George Liu, 31, a graduate student from China. "I don't want to lose my student status, but [the fee] is an insult because it's so discriminatory."

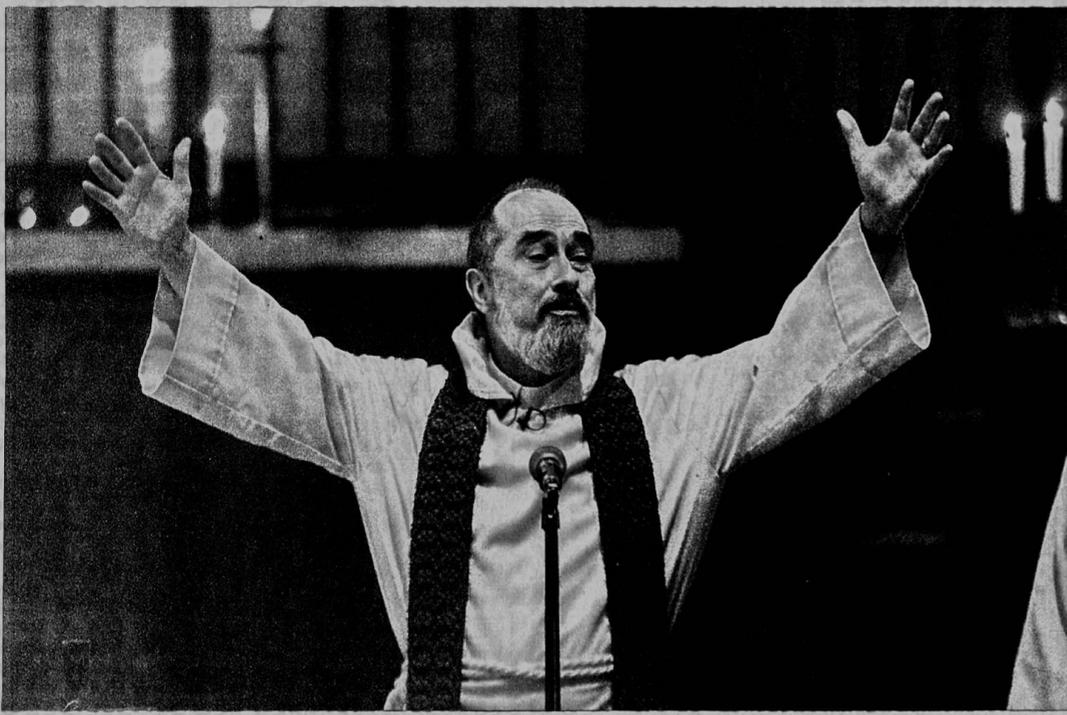

University spokesman Patrick Callahan said the budget for the international student office was cut $240,000 last year, and the new fee would provide a little more than $200,000. A small amount would help track foreign students, as required by the law.

"SEVIS is mandated," he said. "We don't have a choice."

The Graduate Employment Organization, a union that represents 1,000 international graduate students at the university, has urged students not to pay the fee.

The university's website tells students that to remain in good standing, they must meet financial obligations by all required deadlines. The consequences could include dismissal.

Chris Vials, the president of the grad-student union, said school administrators agreed to meet with opponents of the fee. He said a better solution would be a $5 or $10 fee for all students.

Rev. Ron Hines, the superintendent of the Pacific Northwest Conference's Seven Rivers District, dismisses the congregation at the end of the Sunday service at the First United Methodist Church in Ellensburg, Wash. Hines read the congregation a letter from Bishop Elias Galvan of Seattle stating that their lesbian pastor, Karen Dammann, was acquitted by a jury of 13 pastors on March 20 of a charge accusing her of violating church doctrine for living as a homosexual.

Lesbian pastor roils Methodists

BY SHANNON DININNY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ELLENSBURG, Wash. — The acquittal of a lesbian Methodist pastor charged with violating church doctrine drew praise and scorn Sunday across a denomination that may see its divisions over homosexuality laid bare at a major conference next month.

The March 20 acquittal of the Rev. Karen Dammann was celebrated Sunday at the church where she used to preach in Ellensburg, a small town in central Washington.

"I'm very pleased," said Dodie Haight, a member of the congregation who sat through Dammann's trial 95 miles away in the Seattle suburb of Bothell. "I don't think the jury had an easy task, but I think they gave it long, thoughtful, prayerful consideration."

A 13-pastor jury acquitted Dammann, 47, of violating a church ban on ordaining "self-avowed, practicing homosexuals." If nine jurors had voted to convict, Dammann could have lost her ministry.

At one point during Sunday's service, during the sharing of joys and concerns, choir member Charlie McKinney said Dammann had taught the congregation about the power of truth.

"She did a courageous thing and a difficult thing," he said. "She did this as a way to pull bricks from the age-old wall of prejudice, fear, and exclusion."

But there was concern about the fallout for the United Methodist Church, the nation's third-largest denomination with 8.5 million U.S. members. The church has repeatedly voted against loosening policies on homosexuality.

"I'm just stunned at this decision," said James Heidinger, the president and publisher of the Methodist publication Good News. He said the jury committed "intellectual dishonesty" by claiming church standards regarding homosexuality are unclear.

"Everyone knows what the standard is, they just don't agree with it," said Heidinger, whose publication is based in Wilmore, Ky.

"I believe the vast majority of United Methodists are in grief and shock today. I'm personally heartbroken," said Patricia Miller, the executive director of the Confessing Movement, a conservative movement within the church that claims more than 600,000 members.

"I think the issue is, a part of the jurisdiction has broken covenant with the rest of the church and has decided to go the way of the world, as opposed to being faithful to and abiding by church law."

Rifts over homosexuality have developed in other Christian denominations — most notably the Episcopal Church, which confirmed an openly gay bishop last year. Since then, several conservative parishes have threatened to break ties with the denomination.

The Methodist church's stance on homosexuality is on the agenda of its next General Conference, which will begin April 27 in Pittsburgh. The conference, made up of nearly 1,000 delegates from around the world, is the denomination's top lawmaking body.

Church law prohibits the ordination of open homosexuals, and the church's Book of Discipline declares homosexuality to be "incompatible with Christian teaching." However, the denomination's social principles support gay rights and liberties.

Several Pennsylvania delegates to the conference said they doubt whether Dammann's case will have much impact on the recurring debate over whether the Book of Discipline should be changed.

"I'd be surprised if we overturned that, even though there may be some [regional] annual conferences that want to," said the Rev. Arnold Rhodes, the pastor of the Clarion First United Methodist Church, approximately 60 miles northeast of Pittsburgh.

Delegates in the last two General Conferences, which are held every four years, voted by margins of 2-1 or more to keep the existing language, said the Rev. Joel Garrett, the pastor of Trinity United Methodist Church in McMurray, south of Pittsburgh.

STATE

Prosecutors grapple with new court rules

DES MOINES (AP) — Prosecutors across the state are struggling to understand several recent Iowa Supreme Court decisions that seem to change the way they can treat defense witnesses in court.

Among the changes: a specific prohibition on referring to defendants as "liars."

"I think it's just unclear at this time as to where that line is as to how far you can go to raise those things that attorneys have raised for years," said Black Hawk County Attorney Thomas Ferguson.

Two Polk County murder convictions have been overturned under the new definitions of prosecutor misconduct. Both of those decisions have been appealed — but legal observers say they don't know if more reversals are on the way.

State officials said they're still unsure of how to describe the situation to county prosecutors.

"I don't think the sky is falling," Deputy Attorney General Douglas Marek said of the uncertainty. "But it is kind of problematic."

Supreme Court justices issued the prohibition against the word "liar" in their decision on a Mahaska County case eight months ago.

The case involved Deon Graves, convicted in 2002 of dealing marijuana. A judge overturned Graves' conviction on appeal, ruling that he had been denied a fair trial because a prosecutor's line of questioning painted him in a bad light.

Graves, whose testimony conflicted with the arresting officer's, was asked repeatedly whether jurors should believe that the officer had fabricated his version of events. In closing arguments, the prosecutor also repeatedly referred to Graves as a liar.

Justice Marsha Ternus said statements like that are unfair to defendants. The ruling said such questions force the accused into a no-win situation: Either admit their own deceit or get branded a liar, "a particularly unenviable state when the other witness is a law enforcement officer."

That decision has since been cited in two rulings overturning murder convictions in Polk County. "[T]his is something that defense attorneys are going to be taking a look at," said public defender Theresa Wilson, who handled Graves' appeal.

Ex-aide blasts Bush on terrorism, Iraq policies

BY TED BRIDIS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Richard A. Clarke, the former White House counterterrorism coordinator, accuses the Bush administration of failing to recognize the Qaeda threat before the 9/11 terror attacks and then manipulating America into war with Iraq with dangerous consequences.

He accuses Bush of doing "a terrible job on the war against terrorism."

Clarke, who is expected to testify Tuesday before a federal panel reviewing the attacks, writes in a new book going on sale today that Bush and his Cabinet were preoccupied during the early months of his presidency with some of the same Cold War issues that had faced his father's administration.

"It was as though they were preserved in amber from when they left office eight years earlier," Clarke told CBS on an interview Sunday on its "60 Minutes" program.

CBS' corporate parent, Viacom Inc., owns Simon & Schuster, publisher for Clarke's book, Against All Enemies.

Clarke acknowledges that "there's a lot of blame to go around, and I probably deserve some blame, too." He said he wrote to National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice on Jan. 24, 2001, asking "urgently" for a Cabinet-level meeting "to deal with the impending Al Qaeda attack." Months later, in April, Clarke met with deputy Cabinet secretaries, and the conversation turned to Iraq.

"I'm sure I'll be criticized for lots of things, and I'm sure they'll launch their dogs on me," Clarke said. "But frankly I find it outrageous that the president is running for re-election on the grounds that he's done such great things about terrorism. He ignored it. He ignored terrorism for months, when maybe we could have done something."

Rocket attacks in Iraq kill three

Two U.S. soldiers, one civilian killed, and 11 others wounded in attacks

BY JOHN DANISZEWSKI
LOS ANGELES TIMES

BAGHDAD — In a rare daytime bombardment of a civilian area by insurgents, a rocket crashed into the pavement outside the city's International Trade Fair grounds Sunday, killing at least one passerby and wounding 11 others, while an earlier attack west of Baghdad claimed the lives of two U.S. soldiers.

Four other rockets fell inside or near the U.S.-led coalition's "Green Zone," the heavily fortified 4-square-mile district of former palaces and government buildings now being used as the headquarters of the U.S.-led occupation authority and chief administrator L. Paul Bremer. One soldier was reported to have received minor injuries.

The barrage Sunday morning seemed intended to send a message that Baghdad has not been completely pacified one year after the start of the U.S.-led war to oust former dictator Saddam Hussein.

For residents of Mansour, the upscale neighborhood where the rocket hit, it was a case of déjà vu. During last year's war, the same neighborhood had been the target of intensive bombings by allied warplanes and rockets that demolished part of the Trade Fair — at the time occupied by Iraqi troops and their anti-aircraft guns — as well as the nearby headquarters of the Iraqi Intelligence Service.

This month, the Trade Fair was preparing its first postwar exhibition to attract international business. Sponsored by the Iraqi-American Chamber of Commerce, the exhibition was scheduled to begin in early April.

the rocket landed seemed, on a much smaller scale, like a play-back of the war: cars pierced by shrapnel, shattered glass on the asphalt, broken shop windows, rescuers picking up the bleeding wounded and rushing them to the nearby Yarmuk Hospital.

And like one year ago, there was anger on the street directed at the United States. Residents held up fragments of the rocket shell, pointing to letters and numbers on the inside of the jagged cases which some vociferously claimed proved that it was a U.S. — not a guerrilla — attack.

Others said that they held the United States responsible because it has not been able to impose order since it arrived here 11 months ago.

"This stinks," said a businessman in a brown woolen suit and tie, who gave his name only as Mariati. "Innocent people walking by, their lives taken away."

"These actions are done now and then so that the Americans can have a pretext to stay in Iraq," chimed in Adnan Bakr, a 35-year-old salesman from Basra.

At the hospital, several victims receiving first aid lay moaning in the emergency ward as anguished relatives rushed in.

Dr. Raad Abdul Sahed, 24, had seen it all before. He was also a doctor in the hospital a year ago during the war, he said. "I think it was a very shrewd idea of President Bush to transfer the war to Iraq and keep it away from your country," he said.

The physician said that one Iraqi died and 11 were injured, one very seriously, in the attack. A statement released by the U.S. military said two people were killed and five wounded. There was no immediate way to reconcile the two reports.

"This is occupation, not liberation," shouted Bayda Ahmad, 40, the aunt of taxi driver Ahmad Khalid Awad, 27, who lay in a hospital bed in blood-soaked clothing from a leg wound. "Men wounded and children are dying. Bremer should have control over his soldiers. I think things were better under Saddam's regime."

Pakistan battle wanes

WANA, Pakistan (AP) — Fighting between Pakistani troops and suspected Qaeda militants ebbed Sunday as tribal elders said they would try to negotiate an end to the largest battle yet against suspected terrorists along the Afghan frontier.

A 25-member council is to begin talks with the militants today under the protection of a white flag, said Brig. Mahmood Shah, the chief of security for the tribal area in South Waziristan province.

Pakistani forces took advantage of Sunday's pause in fighting to search nearby homes. The military believes a "high-value" target is holed up in the besieged area, but it is uncertain if is Al Qaeda commander Ayman al-Zawahri, Uzbek militant Tahir Yuldash, or another terrorist.

Some 5,000-6,000 Pakistani forces are fighting 400-500 foreign militants and Yargul Khel tribesmen. Shah speculated the shooting had abated because the militants were conserving ammunition.

"They may be facing a shortage of ammunition. Heavy firing has almost entirely stopped, and they are only using light weapons," he said.

Shah said two Chechens were killed trying to break through a military cordon Sunday. The military has arrested more than 100 suspects but has refused to give updates of casualties.

In neighboring Afghanistan, U.S. Ambassador Zalmay Khalilzad told the Associated Press the United States was "very encouraged" by the ongoing Pakistani offensive. He said senior Taliban and Qaeda leaders were plotting attacks on Afghan and U.S. targets from Pakistan.

"We know several key Taliban figures are there, and there is some sense that some of the remaining Al Qaeda leaders are in the border area on the other side," he said.

Sharon presents Gaza withdrawal plan

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Ariel Sharon presented his proposal for a Gaza Strip withdrawal to Cabinet ministers from his Likud Party on Sunday, which met significant opposition but apparently not enough to sink the plan, participants said.

Defense Minister Shaul Mofaz, meanwhile, told a Cabinet meeting he has prepared a plan to strike hard at Hamas ahead of any pull-out, branding the Islamic militant group a strategic threat. The plan includes intensifying targeted killings of militants and stepping up army raids.

In new fighting, seven Palestinians were killed Sunday, the sixth day of a new Israeli offensive triggered by a double suicide bombing last week at an Israeli seaport.

Four Hamas militants and a Palestinian woman were killed in an army raid in Gaza. Late Sunday, Israeli forces killed two armed Palestinians near the Kissufim crossing point between Gaza and Israel, the military said.

Since Sharon said last month that he is considering withdrawing from much of Gaza if peace efforts remain frozen, fighting has intensified in the strip, with both sides trying to claim victory.

Sharon presented his withdrawal proposal to 13 Likud ministers on Sunday and promised to hold a vote on it in the full 24-member Cabinet once he has received U.S. backing.

For now, the Bush administration has withheld judgment, saying it is still studying the idea but that it will not back any unilateral actions that could disrupt the U.S.-led "road map" peace plan. Sharon aides have met frequently in recent weeks with Bush advisers to discuss the plan.

In Sunday's meeting, it became apparent that seven or eight Likud ministers oppose the plan or will support it only if certain conditions are met, said Uzi Landau, a minister without portfolio and one of the opponents.

An enthralling snake dance

The Twin Snakes — which features revamped game-play, graphics, and action — is an amazingly fun remake of a highly respected classic

BY WILLIAM SMITH
THE DAILY IOWAN

GAME REVIEW

Metal Gear Solid:
The Twin Snakes ★★★★ out of ★★★★★

"Some people just need killing."

This was the reason Solid Snake gave for offing his father in the 1998 PlayStation classic, Metal Gear Solid. Unfortunately, the line was removed from the remake of the game, Metal Gear Solid: The Twin Snakes, which is currently available for the Nintendo GameCube. The developers probably thought the line made Snake sound too unsympathetic, but its removal blunts the edge of a historic video-game character. It's one of many subtle changes that will irritate die-hard Metal Gear fans, and it is eerily reminiscent of how George Lucas and Steven Spielberg neutered the re-releases of Star Wars and E.T.

Despite this and a few other problems, Metal Gear Solid: The Twin Snakes is an amazingly fun remake of a highly respected classic. Although the graphics and game-play have been totally revamped, the level structure, story, and dialogue are almost identical to the original.

The story centers on Solid Snake, one of the world's most elite soldiers, who was introduced to the world in the 1988 NES game Metal Gear. By now, Snake has retired to a life of solitude in Alaska, where he hopes to find some peace. However, a nuclear-testing facility on one of Alaska's islands is taken over by a special military unit called FOX-HOUND. The renegade group is threatening to launch a nuclear weapon if its demands aren't met, so the government brings Snake out of retirement as the only man who can stop it.

While the plot outline sounds like a hackneyed Arnold Schwarzenegger movie, the story is developed convincingly and takes on a life of its own. Hideo Kojima, the creator, writer, and lead programmer of the Metal Gear series, has a knack for turning recycled ideas into his own creation. One of his earliest and best games, Snatcher, was a blatant reworking of the film Blade Runner.

Part of the reason Kojima's games have such an emotional impact is the outstanding voice acting, and Metal Gear is no exception. All of the dialogue has been re-recorded by the original cast, even though 95 percent of what they say is the same. That doesn't mean it sounds the same, though.

Almost all of the accents have been dropped in the remake, giving the acting a dryer feel than the original. Some of the deliveries also lack the punch found in the original version, which plays down the game's more shocking revelations. David Hayter's performance as the gravel-voiced Snake, however, is dead on.

The most important change in the remake is the completely revamped game-play and graphics. While the original Metal Gear Solid practically reinvented stealth-based game-play, it is a little dated by today's standards. Kojima greatly expanded the game-play for the sequel, Metal Gear Solid 2: Sons of Liberty, bringing it close to perfection. The developers took both the game-play and the graphics engine from the sequel and applied them to the remake, making it look fantastic and play superbly. Now Snake can shoot in first-person mode, hang off ledges, hold up guards, and drag around dead and sleeping enemies.

The developers also included more action in the movie-like cut-scenes, which proves to be the most cringe-inducing addition. There is nothing wrong with spicing up these scenes, but the over-the-top manner in which it is done makes the game feel sillier than it should. One of the sequences finds Snake briefly hopping onto a missile fired from a helicopter, spring-boarding into the air, and throwing a grenade at a flying chunk of debris before it crushes him while he's still in mid-flight. Metal Gear has always had a comic book feel to it, but these additions take it too far into the direction of Saturday-morning cartoons.

Despite the problems, almost every gamer will be enthralled for the 12-15 hours it takes to complete the game. Nintendo wisely priced the title at $40 instead of the standard $50, which is a welcome change after price-gouging consumers for the extra materials needed for Final Fantasy: Crystal Chronicles. Now, Kojima should remake the original NES Metal Gear, which came out 16 years ago. Gamers would pay the full $50 for that.

Cashing in on the '80s

NEW YORK (AP) — The renewed VH1 has imagined itself as the antidote for the itchy remote-control finger.

If you've seen VH1 in the past year, chances are it happened something like this: While mindlessly channel surfing, you stop on a picture of a forgotten 1980s band. Does that singer from a Flock of Seagulls still have a haircut that looks like a science experiment gone wrong?

Does he even have hair at all anymore? The hair, the clothes, the music.

Before you know it, 20 minutes have passed, and you've dropped the remote.

Somewhere, Brian Graden and Christina Norman are smiling. The architects of VH1's reconstruction know that the first step for success is simply to get you watching again, even if by chance.

Graden, a programming whiz at MTV, was given the assignment of resurrecting VH1 two years ago. After a good run in the late 1990s, the network long considered MTV's big brother had grown stale. Channel surfers were finding things like the 98th airing of "Behind the Music" with Poison, Graden said.

"You think I'm exaggerating," he said. "But I'm not."

Norman, the company's general manager, recalled a trip to the ladies' room early in her tenure where she listened to what was playing on VH1 over the loudspeaker. It was the voice of the "Behind the Music" narrator. And it was dull.

"We were speaking in a monotone to the audience all day," she said. "If we weren't excited about what we were putting on the air, how could we expect the audience to be?"

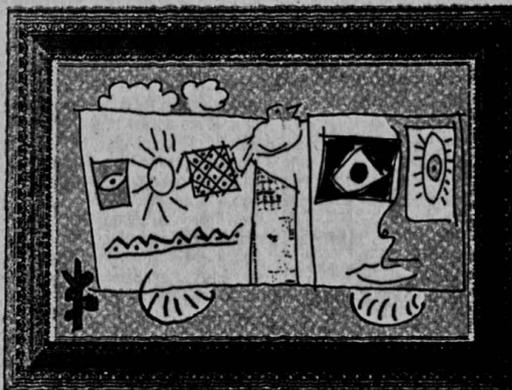

They started experimenting with new ideas. Some fell flat; VH1 viewers weren't interested in old movies, such as The Godfather, because those were available elsewhere. The short-lived "Music Behind Bars" series, about inmate musicians, was a public-relations disaster.

It was at the end of 2002, when "I Love the '80s" began drawing solid ratings, that they hit upon a direction.

Many people consider VH1 primarily a music channel, but executives were surprised by research that found music was the third thing mentioned by viewers when they thought of the network. Nostalgia and storytelling came first.

"People think of VH1 in a multidimensional way, not just as a music channel," Graden said. "So the obvious place we went is to tap into the broader sense of nostalgia, period, across all of pop culture, but still leading with music."

How Picasso might see the bus.

But really the bus should be seen as the cleanest, easiest, most convenient and most reliable way to get around town.
Truly a transportation work of art.

...NOT A POLITICAL CONVENIENCE STORE...

Academic power games

About once every semester during a writing workshop, I get yelled at by a hectoring academic feminist who doesn't like the politically incorrect statements that invariably show up in my work. Usually, this person can't help but drop a few F-bombs to help articulate her or his position, through remarks such as "I think the author is a f—ing misogynist."

ANTHONY F. HARRIS

For the record, I have no problem with women; I'm even pulling for Condoleezza Rice for president in 2008.

Academic feminists are those few women's studies majors who take themselves and their field a bit too seriously. They differ from regular feminists in the sense that normal feminists don't view bikini calendars as a threat to women.

Academic feminists are easy to spot by the rigid worldview they present. If a random assortment of academic feminists came together to have a debate about women and the media, it's a safe bet all of them would complain that women are portrayed negatively. In a discussion about women's role in the workplace, the echo-feminists would overwhelmingly decry that women get paid 76, or 54, or whatever cents for every dollar a man earns. It took feminist group-think to support and eventually pass Orwellian, hostile-environment harassment legislation. It's harder to find support for the pro-life movement within academic feminism than it is to find support for America within Al Qaeda.

Despite all this, academic feminists facing criticism always insist on calling themselves a diverse group. It's funny how a movement that reminds me of schizophrenia distilled through politics can be so predictable.

Luckily for America, academic feminists rely primarily on one thing to thrive: academia (duh). Without the women's studies industry, feminism would be forced to consider equality of freedom rather than equality of status. That's why a great way to lower tuition would be to ax the women's studies program. It would stop the academic exploitation of insecurity and resentment in America's young women. More importantly, dumping the women's studies program would encourage women drawn to divisive identity politics to move into more practical fields of study, such as political science, where women can develop as individuals and become exceptional role models for young girls everywhere, like Condoleezza Rice.

The textbooks in introductory women's studies classes usually include a base anthology full of essays from academic feminists (usually edited by Gloria Steinem, whose legacy consists chiefly of her absolute failure to pass the Equal Rights Amendment) who take the feminist party line on every issue from critiques of pop culture to complaints about traditional family structure. More often than not, relevant criticism of feminism, or of any other key liberal ideals such as support of welfare funding, gay marriage, and affirmative action, is nowhere to be found in these anthologies. This one-sided, politically motivated approach to education spits in the face of people who enroll in classes to enhance their critical thinking skills.

Academic feminism, through the anti-social behavior it elicits from its adherents, invades the entire UI. Nothing in the university library has had more snide commentary scribbled in the margins by more people than books that challenge feminist dogma, such as anything written by feminist critic Camille Paglia. The new graffiti on campus address rape through jarring but naïve slogans such as "men can stop rape." It's naïve because anyone low enough to commit rape isn't going to be moved by the message.

One good thing about institutionalized liberalism, such as the women's studies program, is that it's given me a few good ideas to present to David J. Skorton.

Imagine siphoning tuition money to run classes that unashamedly promote conservatism. Imagine if conservatives like me, Ann Coulter, and the entire staff of National Review wrote essays and used them to compile a textbook (edited by George Will) for those classes. Imagine if all the disciples from conservatism classes took their ideological baggage to the rest of the college and tossed profanity at students who expressed colorful opinions contrary to conservatism. Imagine those disciples becoming professors. Imagine adherents to conservatism classes lobbying for their own program and having the chutzpah to name it something such as "men's studies," as if one ideology represented all men. Imagine the entire fascist process being called "progressive" by college administrators.

Imagine the power conservatives would wield if they were as Machiavellian as feminists.

LETTER

Turning a deaf ear

I was fascinated by an article that recently appeared in The Daily Iowan titled "Living beyond hearing fine for some at UI" (March 10). I can certainly understand how deaf people want the same opportunities as hearing people to thrive and express themselves within their chosen community. However, failing to acknowledge deafness as a disability is simply irrational. Hearing is a primary means of sensory input for nearly all creatures and thus a primary tool for survival. For humans, it allows us to detect that speeding car, that would-be attacker, or that crying child — not to mention its key role in interacting with the rest of the human species. Thankfully, people can mitigate and overcome the absence of these and other inputs by rational thought and creativity.

What I found particularly troubling were the comments by William Ennis regarding the oppressiveness of cochlear implants and how their use is somehow a denial of one's "true identity." Who is Ennis to say what is any one individual's true identity? These so-called leaders of the deaf community are the ones being oppressive by foisting on people their particular prejudicial views about the deaf and hearing alike. They are also being oppressive in attempting to co-opt people into their "culture" by having the audacity to tell them who they are.

Pride should be taken from one's individual achievements and not simply from their biological traits or from the achievements of others with whom one happens to share biological traits. The more people continue to Balkanize themselves based upon factors over which they have no control (deafness, skin color, etc., etc.) the more difficult it will become for people to relate to one another as individuals and thus advance beyond such irrelevant differences.

Hamas, Hezbollah, and other Mideast terms

A lot of people are understandably confused about certain Middle East entities. We read about "terrorist organizations" such as Hamas and Hezbollah but don't know who they are or what their aims are. Likewise, we hear a lot about Al Jazeera but don't know its objective as a news channel.

GUEST COLUMN

Hezbollah, which in Arabic means "party of God," is a Lebanese political party. Lebanon has a parliamentary system of government, with representation by Christians, Shiite Muslims, and Sunni Muslims. Hezbollah consists of Shiites, the more radical branch of Islam; its platform is antagonism toward Israel. However, fewer than half of Shiite voters in Lebanon support the group's tendencies toward violence, and hardly any Sunnis support it. Hezbollah is infamous for its role in the 1984 bombing of the American Marine barracks in Lebanon.

Hamas, which means Islamic Resistance Movement, exists solely in Palestine. It is totally Sunni and came into existence during the first intifada (uprising) in 1987. No one knows exactly how many members Hamas has. Certainly, the number is increasing as young people, feeling a sense of hopelessness about their future, join up. The group's only goal is to achieve freedom for its country.

Which brings us to the media outlets of Al Jazeera and Al Arabiya, both of which have received unfair critiques in the United States (but not Europe). Neocons in Washington make the same old cry that Al Jazeera is a puppet of its Arab masters, but that's not at all true. On the contrary, most Arab governments were shutting down Al Jazeera offices just 10 years ago because of the satellite station's penchant for discussing sensitive subjects.

Al Jazeera, which means "peninsula," is based in Qatar. In the early '90s, when the BBC decided to downsize its Arabic service, some of the Arabs working for the BBC started up the first independent Arab satellite news service. The project was sponsored by a wealthy emir in Qatar, who vowed that Al Jazeera would be free to air its views; in the '90s, this was shocking. At first, students would even video and exchange programs while governments, including Egypt and Saudi Arabia, blocked the station. Even Jordan and Yasser Arafat in Palestine closed Al Jazeera offices.

Al Jazeera prides itself on presenting opposing views. And it does this admirably, according to Arab intellectuals who have long awaited such a move. The station was the first to break the taboo of interviewing Israelis, which riled up no small number of Arabs. There were even Al Jazeera reporters in Tel Aviv and Jerusalem. In fact, Israel takes advantage of the channel even though it's usually anti-Israel.

Muhammed Al Khalil, teaching at Zayed University in Dubai, said of Al Jazeera: "It is not really balanced, but no one is, with the exception of the BBC. CNN International [as opposed to the U.S. version] leans a bit toward the right." I asked Khalil about the Fox News Channel. He laughed: "Fox is upside down."

Dr. Faisal Qassami started a program similar to CNN's "Crossfire," called "Opposite Direction," the first of its kind in the Arab world. It changed forever the way politics is discussed in the Middle East. Debate rages around such topics as "fundamentalism versus progressive," "women versus men in the workplace," or a slew of other blood-heating discussions. In a typical show, two Iraqis, one a Shiite ultra-conservative, the other a Sunni, will debate (sometimes scream) the pros and cons of American intervention. Sometimes, says Khalil, the good doctor/host has to physically separate panelists. But this is good. We learned this a long time ago in the West.

Al Arabiya and Abu Dhabi TV are the newest Arab news satellite channels on the block; both are based in Dubai. You've actually seen Abu Dhabi TV before in Nebraska; the news network took over for CNN after the U.S. media giant was kicked out of Iraq when the war started. Because it is located in the United Arab Emirates, a nation recently cited by the Americans as being a model for Arab nations, most Westerners find its coverage to be fairly balanced.

Which brings us to a new U.S. initiative: Al Hurra (The Free One), the American attempt to bring "unbiased" news to the Middle East. Its message: We're not a U.S. puppet, an assertion not believed by most Arabs; nevertheless, quite a few are watching, thanks to all the gorgeous Lebanese women hosting various programs. Perhaps trying to imitate the style of "20/20," a recent news/entertainment program featured pigeon keepers. If you ever wanted to know how to raise and train pigeons, this was the show for you.

Things are really changing in the Middle East.
Scott Sutton, a Nebraska native, teaches English in Dubai.

The terror of the knee-jerk

DIARRHEA OF THE KNEE-JERK MOUTH. We see a lot of it this time of year — hell, any time of year, flaring up at different hot spots around the globe. Symptoms include social crisis, verbal hives, spasmodically clenched hands, political blind spots, and the trademark violet-puce dribble of Big Ole Whoops at both corners of the mouth; these sadly can be quite furtive and only obvious in the clear light of recent hindsight. Preventative measures mostly center on not leaping to conclusions and avoiding inflammatory speech until the recent hindsight period has been achieved.

Currently, the most worrisome outbreak is in Spain. "ETA had been looking for a massacre in Spain. Unfortunately, today it achieved its goal," Interior Minister Angel Acebes said on March 11, when his Popular Party hadn't yet been voted out of power. "Those responsible for this tragedy will be arrested and they will pay very dearly for it."

"ETA must be defeated," Socialist party spokesman Jesus Caldera said, calling the members of the group "those terrorists, those animals."

Diarrhea of the Knee-Jerk Mouth. Because while Prime Minister Jose Maria Aznar was right to call the recent train attacks mass murder, and while ETA has waged violence for decades in pursuit of an independent Basque state, evidence coming in points to Al Qaeda being the perp of these attacks.

This evidence might be conflicted or nuanced by other yet-forthcoming evidence but — it's evidence. Not just some politicians running at the mouth, but some agencies leaping to conclusions, making grandiloquent accusations about a predictable enemy because they don't know how to stand up in front of their people full of grief and shock and horror and — inhale, instead of spewing forth.

Why does this happen? Again, again, and again, all across the globe, to officials of all stripes and experience. I understand that each official who stumbles and spews forth does so as a single human being, lost grappling with both what's happened — more than 200 dead, more than 1,000 injured. In the face of the violence, and violation, officials are expected to offer words of stalwart comfort: answers. And then, justice.

But vengeance is not justice, and inflammatory statements are not the right answers (even were they to eventually turn up true) to unanticipated social crisis. Displacing rationality and due process is sweet recompense for perpetrators of such, and cultural mouthpieces should learn that by rote long, long before they have to respond to such.

Maybe the United Nations should foist an addendum onto the oaths of higher office for all its member countries: With all the Honor and Reason a Human Being of exceptional political stature may possess, I do Hereby Swear that in moments of Crisis and Strife, I will Breathe Deeply and Keep My Mouth Shut until Some of the Facts Are In.

Don't limit it to leaders, though; include it in the credo of any agency that bears weapons, either pen or sword. The military, law enforcement, columnists and pundits, judiciary, the FBI — when the Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City was bombed, almost nine years ago, 168 people died. Arabs did it. Arabs, of course — the FBI immediately issued an all-points bulletin for "two Middle Eastern males, 25 to 28 years of age."

Diarrhea of the Knee-Jerk Mouth. And Big Ole Whoops.

Spain, you have our condolences and commiseration. No matter what reasons are claimed for this and no matter whose they turn out to be, ETA for a separate state or Al Qaeda wounding you for participating in Iraq or otherwise, there is no reason enough for this. And no matter what missteps your leaders make in grappling with and responding to these attacks, we are so, so sorry. ■ alcohol sales in parks and streets by nonprofit organizations.

Among the organizations that will hold festivals this summer, Riverside Theatre is the only nonprofit group expressing interest in selling alcohol.

The ordinance needs two more rounds of approval before it can go into effect.

If councilors had failed to amend the ordinance, Riverside Theatre would not have been able to apply for the 50-percent exemption, even though ticket sales would make up a majority of its revenue.

The 19-ordinance does not count cover charges toward the 50-percent threshold.

Separating Riverside Theatre from bars in the 19-ordinance exemption will allow families to stay at the festival if plays run past 10 p.m.

"I doubt if a lot of 18-year-olds would be there without their parents, anyway," said Councilor Connie Champion.

"I think her biggest strength is that she knows Iowa's law school," said UI interim Provost Patricia Cain. "She was a student here, she came back and taught here. She understands the community built by Bill Hines."

Cain, who is also a law profesor, said Jones is one of the best scholars in the area of tax law. She added that she has known Jones for a long time because they both practiced in the same area.

To set off budget cuts and constantly changing tuition, the Carroll, Iowa, native has pledged to undertake more fund raising for the College of Law. She wants to reach out to alumni and others who have benefited from the college to help fund its programs.

Hines, who taught Jones as a professor, called her a "terrific student" and "a leader around the law school."

"She was a high-profile student, the kind deans get to know," he said.

After receiving her B.A. in English from the UI in 1976, Jones attended the UI law school and earned a J.D. in 1979. She also received a master's in law from Yale University in 1982.

Jones began her teaching career in 1982 at the University of St. Louis, and she moved to the University of Connecticut in 1990. As an administrator there, she spent much of her time handling faculty issues.

Hills Bank and Trust, 132 E. Washington St., in response to reports that a lone male entered the bank and displayed a handgun while demanding money.

The robber, who was wearing a black T-shirt, plaid shirt, and a jacket, seized an undisclosed amount of cash and fled on foot.

Authorities pinpointed Langford as the suspect in the Iowa City robbery after several witnesses allegedly identified him from the bank's security-camera images.

Langford, who has an extensive criminal history, including a 1988 first-degree robbery conviction in Johnson County, was considered "armed and dangerous" by police. A second-degree theft charge and possession of a schedule II controlled substance charge were also listed in court records in connection with the incident.

Court records also show that Langford appealed his Johnson County conviction, contending that his due-process rights had been violated because the conviction was made using a police officer's allegedly perjured testimony. The appeals court denied the application, as did the Iowa Supreme Court.

Langford also has a forgery charge from a Feb. 9 incident, along with a withdrawn fugitive from justice charge.

Information officers from the Des Moines police were not available Sunday for further details on either the March 17 arrest or his other charges.

A preliminary hearing is set for March 29 in Polk County.

Hamas founder killed by Israeli air strike

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip (AP) — Sheik Ahmed Yassin, the founder and leader of the Hamas militant group that targeted Israelis in suicide bombings, was killed by missiles fired from Israeli helicopters as he left a mosque at daybreak today, witnesses said.

Hamas confirmed the death in an announcement broadcast over mosque loudspeakers and vowed revenge against Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon.

Witnesses said Israeli helicopters fired three missiles at the wheelchair-bound Yassin and two bodyguards as they left the mosque, killing them instantly.

Altogether, four people were killed and 12 were wounded in the attack, witnesses said.

Yussef Haddad, 35, a taxi driver, said he saw the missiles hit Yassin and the bodyguards.

"Their bodies were shattered," he said.

Yassin was by far the most senior Palestinian militant killed in more than three years of Israeli-Palestinian fighting.

Sharon's government has gone after militant leaders using Israeli helicopter gunships in a controversial policy that has resulted in a number of civilian casualties.

Nichols' bombing trial to open

Victims' relatives hope to find answers to the 1995 bombing, which left 168 dead

BY TIM TALLEY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

McALESTER, Okla. — Since her two grandsons were killed in the Oklahoma City bombing, Jannie Coverdale's thoughts have been locked on the horrific event and on answering the question that has haunted her ever since: Why?

"The last nine years, I've just put my life on hold," she said. "Almost everything I do, it has something to do with the bombing."

Coverdale hopes to find answers in bombing conspirator Terry Nichols' trial on 161 state murder charges. Opening statements are scheduled for today.

Prosecutors are seeking the death penalty — something many victims' family members and survivors believe he deserves.

They are bitter about the life sentence Nichols was given after his 1997 federal bombing conviction. Bomber Timothy McVeigh was executed.

"In this country, we execute people for committing a single murder," Coverdale said.

"If Terry Nichols does not get the death penalty, we might as well abolish the death penalty in this country."

Nichols was convicted of federal conspiracy and involuntary manslaughter charges for the deaths of eight law-enforcement officers in the bombing, which killed 168 people. The state charges are for the 160 other victims and one victim's fetus.

Prosecutors allege that Nichols worked with McVeigh to plan and execute the April 19, 1995, bombing that destroyed the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building.

Defense attorneys claim Nichols was set up by unknown coconspirators. They plan to introduce witnesses who claim they can identify others involved in the plot, including John Doe No. 2, a mystery man some claim to have seen with McVeigh on the day of the bombing.

'If Terry Nichols does not get the death penalty, we might as well abolish the death penalty in this country.'

— Jannie Coverdale, grandmother of 2 victims

"I will always feel that there were other people involved," Coverdale said.

Many who lost family members in the bombing feel Nichols should be held legally accountable for the deaths of victims who were not part of his federal trial.

"I still don't think that my wife has been vindicated or my purposes satisfied for him killing her," Roy Sells said about his wife, Lee, a legal secretary for the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Others oppose the trial because of its cost and the fact that Nichols is already serving life in prison. The case already has cost the state about $3.4 million, not including prosecution expenses and security costs.

"We think it's a waste of money, a waste of time," said Jim Denny, whose two children were injured at a daycare center in the building.

"This is a black mark on our justice system."

Bud Welch, a death-penalty opponent whose daughter, 23-year-old Julie Marie Welch, was killed, said the trial "has nothing to do with the healing process."

"Family members are being victimized again," he said.

The trial was moved to McAlester, approximately 130 miles from Oklahoma City, because of pretrial publicity.

A handful of survivors and victims' family members came for jury selection, and more are expected when testimony begins.

A fund created in 1996 to pay family members' expenses at Nichols' federal trial in Denver will pay for up to 10 people each week to attend Nichols' state trial, said Diane Leonard, whose husband, Secret Service agent Donald Leonard, was killed in the blast.

People who watched the trial's early stages expressed support for the judge's careful, methodical approach to picking a jury, which took just nine days of questioning.

"We saw what happened when you don't get a good jury with the federal trial," said Darlene Welch, an aunt of bombing victim Ashley Eckles.

Member of football family passes away

IOWA CITY — Jeff Parker, son of Iowa football defensive coordinator Norm Parker, has passed away at the age of 33. Parker, a victim of Down's syndrome, suffered a number of strokes recently and died on March 20 as a result of complications from the strokes.

Funeral arrangements are being handled by Coles Funeral home in Chelsea, Mich. Visitation will be Tuesday with services at Chelsea's St. Mary's Church. "We're all deeply saddened by the loss of Jeff. Our constant thoughts are with Norm, and Linda, and the rest of the Parker family," said Iowa football coach Kirk Ferentz. "Jeff was truly a part of our football family, and there isn't a person connected with Iowa football that he hasn't touched."

Jeff Parker worked part-time in the Iowa football equipment room and was a constant presence at Iowa football functions. He is survived by his parents and sisters Chelly, Joyce, and Suzy and a brother, Jim.

IOWA SOFTBALL

Hawkeyes split 12 games over break

The Iowa softball team split a busy 12-game Spring Break slate with six wins and six losses, leaving the Hawkeyes at 15-12 on the season.

At the National Invitational Softball Tournament in San Jose, Calif., on March 12-14, the Hawkeyes went 3-2, defeating No. 20 Arizona State, 3-0, in the third-place game.

Alli Arnold two-hit the Sun Devils, striking out six, and third baseman Kylie Murray provided the offense with a two-run homer.

Iowa swept Sacramento State in a double-header on March 17, winning the first game in eight innings.

In the second game the Hawkeye bats awoke, putting up four runs in the third inning en route to a 6-0 win. Lisa Birocci boosted her record to 6-4, throwing a complete game and striking out four.

At the Capitol Classic in Sacramento, Iowa struggled, dropping four of five. Nevada ended Iowa's weekend with a 2-0 win Sunday.

The Hawkeyes will return to action on Wednesday with a double-header against Illinois State in Normal, Ill.

Skolaski finishes 21st in NCAA meet

Iowa junior Jennifer Skolaski competed in the NCAA championships in College Station, Texas, last weekend as the Hawkeyes' lone swimmer to qualify for the meet. The Madison, Wis., native placed 21st in the 200 backstroke, 26th in the 100 backstroke, and 60th in the 400 freestyle.

Skolaski's 100 backstroke time of 1:01.53 was six seconds more than her 2003 NCAA meet time of 55.44 — earning her eighth place.

The three-time national qualifier in the trio of events, Skolaski placed 20th in the 200 backstroke and 30th in the 500 freestyle a year ago.

Auburn won the team title with 569 points; Wisconsin (10th with 135 points) was the highest-placing Big Ten school.

BY BRIAN TRIPLETT
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa wrestling coach Jim Zalesky and his troops have preached recently that what takes place during the post-season determines how the team will be remembered.

Although this year's Hawkeyes won't be thought of as national champions, they will go down as the squad that helped the program take a step back in the right direction.

Led by its lone individual champion, Cliff Moore (141), who along with Paul Bradley (184), Ryan Fulsaa (197), and Tyler Nixt (174), earned All-American status, Iowa secured second place with 82 team points at the 2004 NCAA national championships in St. Louis on March 18-20.

Defending champion Oklahoma State dominated the meet, finishing with a score of 123.5 and chalking up its 32nd championship.

"We had guys who did what we need to win a team national title, and we had people like myself and others included who didn't do their part to win that team national title," 125-pound senior Luke Eustice said, after a disappointing showing in which he failed to repeat as an All-American. "You need everybody to wrestle up to his seed, and we had guys who wrestled beyond their seeds, but we had the guys who didn't wrestle up to their seeds. So until that happens, it's gonna be tough to win a national title."

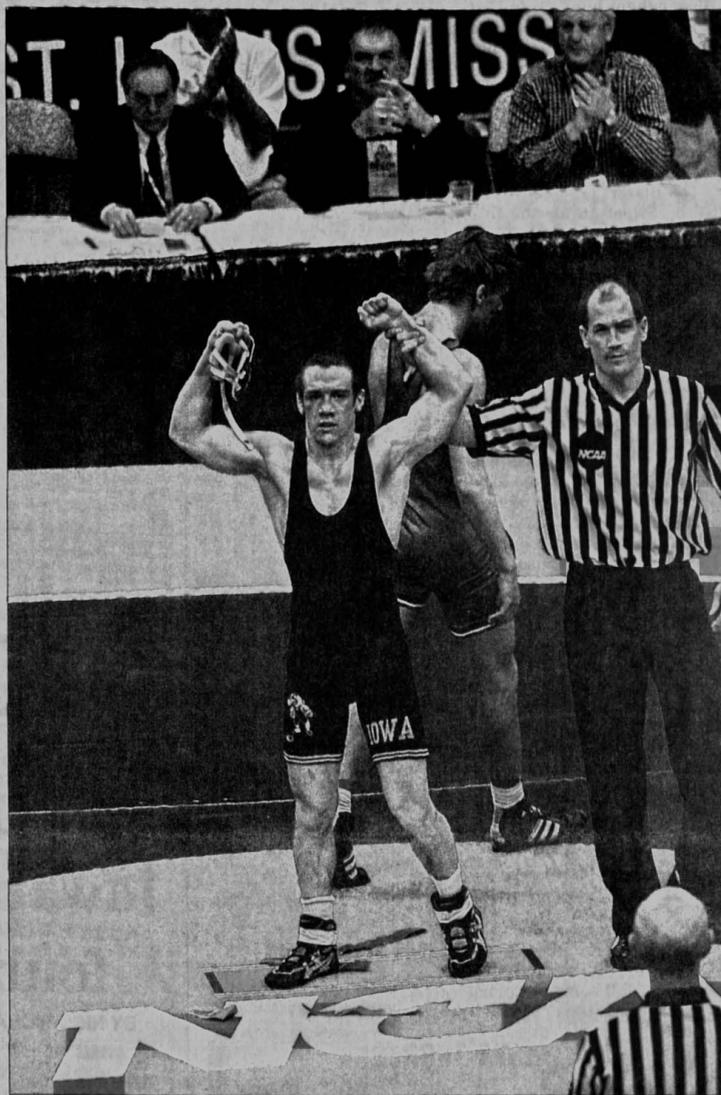

The second-place finish marked quite an improvement from last season's eighth-place showing, but Hawkeye coach Jim Zalesky said he's not satisfied with finishing as the runner-up.

"Last year's finish, that was rock bottom — but these guys are fighting back, and doing what the coaches tell them, and staying with the coaches, and listening to us," he said.

"You gotta take little steps sometimes to get back to where you want to be."

For the second-straight tournament, Moore, who ended his career with 20-consecutive wins, emerged as the only undefeated Hawkeye.

March Sadness: Iowa men, women fall in first rounds

Women fall prey to pressures of NCAA tournament

BY ROSEANNA SMITH
 THE DAILY IOWAN

BLACKSBURG, Va. — It wasn't the ending Lisa Bluder and one of the most honored senior classes in Iowa women's basketball history wanted, but Jennie Lillis wasn't about to make excuses after an 89-76 loss to Virginia Tech.

At a postgame press conference, Lillis answered questions about a failed defensive plan, the pressure of playing in the NCAA Tournament, and the effect of the raucous crowd of nearly 5,000 packed into the wooden seats of Cassell Coliseum.

"I think it's the NCAA Tournament," she said. "Everyone is playing the best she can. I think we were psyched up and too ready to go."

MORE ONLINE: [The crowd] maybe hurt us a little, but that's not something we are going to make an excuse for."

In her play on Sunday, that same attitude permeated Lillis' composure. She beckoned to the 40 or so Hawkeye fans concentrated directly behind press row for a stronger vocal chorus of "we believe" at the end of the first half.

At the time, Iowa trailed by just three points, 18-15, after Lillis converted on a missed shot by Crystal Smith.

The Hawkeyes started slowly, falling behind 10-2 in the opening minutes but a 6-0 run of their own picked up the intensity.

A key series of possessions began with two boards and an assist from Jamie Cavey; Lillis scored four of the six points in the run — but the Hokies

Hawkeye coach Mike Lorenzen named Coach of the Year for second time

BY NICK RICHARDS
 THE DAILY IOWAN

The GymHawks quest for their first-ever Big Ten title came up short on March 20 as the team placed third at the Big Ten championships in Minneapolis.

Iowa finished with a score of 196.5, falling to Michigan, who won their sixth-consecutive Big Ten title and their 13th overall, and Penn State, who edged out Iowa for second with a score of 196.625.

"We were a little disappointed," said senior Alexis Maday. "We had good momentum going, and I don't know if we were tired or a little worn down because we came out so fast. But like (coach) Mike (Lorenzen) said, Michigan had the meet of their lives, which always seems to happen to us. Their was no catching them after the first two events."

Despite falling short of a team championship, the team garnered several top individual honors. Senior Alexis Maday capped an incredible Big Ten career, winning Big Ten Gymnast of the Year honors, only the second GymHawk to win the honor and the first since Lori Cole in 1991. Maday was also named first-team All-Big Ten for the fourth time, the

A season of strikes and gutters for the Iowa Hawkeyes ended on March 16, when St. Louis' Anthony Drejaj drilled a 3 at the buzzer for a 70-69 victory in the first round of the National Invitation Tournament.

Iowa ended up in the NIT after losing its first game in the Big Ten Tournament, 79-70, to Michigan on March 12 in Indianapolis.

The end was another downer for fifth-year coach Steve Alford, who has taken to the Hawkeyes to the NCAA Tournament just once, in 2001, and hasn't gotten out of the first round of the NIT two of the last three years. This was the first season in which Alford recorded a winning record in the Big Ten, going 9-7, good enough for fourth place, prior to the conference tournament.

But the trials of the 2003-04 season, which included two Hawkeyes being sidelined by injury and academic problems and two more leaving the team, may very well pay dividends in the next couple of years.

Kentucky receives early exit from UAB

BY TOM WITHERS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The NCAA Tournament's top seed got sent back to its ol' Kentucky home.

Mo Finley made a 17-foot jumper with 12.2 seconds left and ninth-seeded Alabama-Birmingham hung on to stun the heavily favored Wildcats, 76-75, Sunday in the second round of the St. Louis Regional.

Kentucky's Gerald Fitch missed a 3-pointer with 2.2 seconds left, and Chuck Hayes' tip rolled off the rim just before the final horn.

The Blazers (22-9) advanced to the Sweet 16 for the first time since 1982 with their second big upset of Kentucky in the NCAA Tournament.

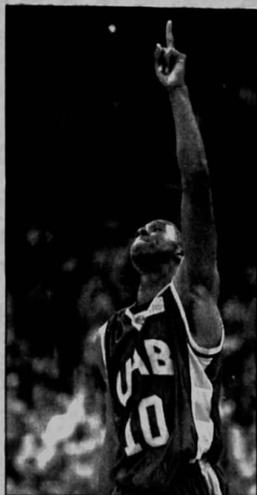

UAB's win came almost exactly 23 years to the day that the Blazers beat Kentucky in the second round of the 1981 tournament — a victory the school had claimed as the turning point in its basketball program, which is celebrating its 25th anniversary this season.

This one might just top it. Using a "40 minutes of Hell" attack that their coach Mike Anderson learned under Nolan Richardson at Arkansas, the Blazers took it to the Wildcats from the outset.

Richardson got to see every second of it, too, cheering and waving his arms in the stands for the Blazers like he was on the sideline coaching the Razorbacks.

"Forty minutes of Hell Part Two," Richardson screamed in the middle of UAB's cheering section that had turned into a mosh pit. "I knew they had a chance."

For the second-straight year, Kentucky came up short in its quest for an eighth NCAA title as the tourney's favorite. The Wildcats were the second No. 1 seed to be dispatched this weekend, following Stanford which got beat by Alabama on Saturday. So in the span of 24 hours, Alabama, a state best known for its football, has rocked college hoops with two heart-stopping upsets.

Kentucky rallied all the way back from a 10-point deficit in the second half and took a 75-74 lead with 29.3 seconds left when Kelenna Azubuike dunked in a miss.

UAB called its last timeout before Finley made the shot that will go down in Blazers' history.

Dribbling on the right side, the 6-3 senior used a pump fake to get Hayes in the air, and then stepped inside the 3-point arc to drain his jumper.

Kentucky called time to set up a play that ended with Fitch getting a clean look from the left wing. It went off the mark as did Hayes' attempt and the Blazers bounced off their bench in celebration.

Iowa track finishes fourth in Texas

BY NICK RICHARDS
THE DAILY IOWAN

After a surprising indoor season, the Iowa women's track and field team continued its string of success with the start of the outdoor season at the Texas Southern Relays. The team finished fourth in Houston with 60 points, one champion, seven top-10 finishes, and one qualifying event for the NCAA regional competition May 28-29 in College Station, Texas.

"Having one qualifier is a good start," Hawkeye coach James Grant said. "We will try to keep moving on from there." Freshman Peaches Roach, participating in her first outdoor meet as a Hawkeye, was Iowa's lone champion, taking the high jump at 5-10 1/4. She had a terrific indoor season, which included the Big Ten title in the event. However, a 15th-place finish at the NCAA indoor championships on March 12-13, in which her top jump of 5-8 was well behind the winning jump of 6-3 1/2, left a bad taste in her mouth.

IOWA BASEBALL

Iowa split eight-game stint in Florida

Jack Dahm's Hawkeye baseball squad entered Spring Break with a rather bleak outlook following a 1-5 start. After a solid 4-4 trip in Florida, the club returned to Iowa with a much sunnier forecast. Iowa (5-9), ended its eight-game tour of the Sunshine State on a down note, dropping a 4-1 decision to Army on Sunday in Sarasota. Despite the disappointing finish, the Hawkeyes showed newfound grit in clawing out three wins by two runs or less — a 5-3 defeat of perennial America East power Maine on March 13, a 9-7 slugfest over host school Stetson on March 1

SPORTS

Women's tennis falls to No. 21 Notre Dame

While most Hawkeyes enjoyed March Madness during Spring Break, the women's tennis team battled No. 21 Notre Dame.

However, there were no upsets; the Hawkeyes fell to the Fighting Irish, 6-1, dropping their overall record to 8-3.

"It was a really good match for us to experience because its real similar to what we're going to go through with the Big Ten," Hawkeye coach Paul Wardlaw said. "It revealed that we're going to be a lot more disciplined. The key is how we're going to respond when things are difficult."

The bright spot for the Hawkeyes was at the No. 1 doubles slot, where Megan Racette and Hillary Mintz defeated No. 38 doubles team Christian Thompson and Catrina Thompson, (9-8, 7-5). No. 4 singles player Anastasia Zhukova scored Iowa's only point after capturing a victory over Lauren Connelly in straight sets (7-5, 7-5).

"The encouraging thing is that we can play with Notre Dame, and we look forward to playing it over the next few years," Wardlaw said.

Hawkeye tennis drops three matches in Ala.

The Iowa men's tennis team was swept during its three-meet road trip in Alabama, losing to New Orleans on March 17, No. 47 South Alabama on March 19, and Troy State on Sunday.

The Hawkeyes (3-8, 0-2) lost 6-1 in the first match of the trip to New Orleans. Iowa freshman Scott Elwell recorded his first career collegiate dual meet victory with a 7-5, 6-0 win in the No. 7 singles competition.

The Hawkeyes were shutout 7-0 by the nationally ranked Alabama State Jaguars. Iowa then lost 4-3 against Troy State to close out its spring trip. The Hawkeyes won the doubles point but managed to win only two singles matches against Troy State. Aaron Schaechterle and Matis Jasicek won their singles matches.

"The purpose of the [trip] is to play outdoors," Hawkeye coach Steve Houghton said. "There were guys that played well, but we were inconsistent."

Iowa will face Purdue on Saturday at the Recreation Building with competition beginning at 10 a.m.

THE LEDGE

SIGNS THAT YOU HAD A ROUGH SPRING BREAK

By Jesse Ammerman

• The break has traditionally been a time to experience wondrous new things. All you really experienced, though, were the brutal repercussions of Florida bylaw 12.131.4.

• An unintended benefit of your trip to Mexico, you suppose, is that you now know the proper Spanish terms for "E. coli" and "dysentery."

• Your shocking antics failed to catch the attention of MTV camera crews, but they did earn you some notoriety among the Dubuque-area news stations.

• Though your parents have long pledged to help you reach your goals, they continually refused to hold the beer bong aloft when you needed it most.

• At this point, every utterance of the word "tequila" induces a violent spasm of spasmodic vomiting, the likes of which you haven't seen since your grades were last posted online.

• Cute and innovative as it was, your whipped-cream bikini did not hold up well at all against those mid-March Iowa winds.

• The fines have less to do with the speed at which you were driving than the strange, exotic manner in which you propositioned the officer after being pulled over. As if that cop would even go for a guy like you ...

• Instead of the bronzed hue you were going for, your skin took on more of a bold magenta tone.

Quote of the Day

I find it outrageous that the president is running for re-election on the grounds that he's done such great things about terrorism. He ignored it. He ignored terrorism for months [in early 2001], when maybe we could have done something.

— Richard A. Clarke, the former White House counterterrorism coordinator.

- ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stop and think before you start something that you can't finish. Trying to get others to do things your way will be futile. Do the work yourself.
- TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A secret love affair will lead to disaster. Focus on what you can have — not what you can't. Chances are you're only looking for some excitement.
- GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The more time you take to find out what everyone around you is up to, the more you will learn. Travel plans for your next vacation should be on your mind.
- CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't make a decision based on someone's promises. You are likely to discover something about someone you work with that isn't in your favor. Ignore people who are trying to undermine you.
- LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your bold approach to everything you do will pay off and put you into the spotlight today. Don't put up a front. Be honest about your intentions.
- VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make sure you don't let yourself get run down. Taking care of yourself and your own physical well-being should be on your mind. Eat well, but don't be tempted to overindulge.
- LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't let someone get you all worked up. Panic is for the unprepared, and you certainly are not that. Channel your energy into something productive, and you will have no regrets.
- SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will have plenty to contend with if you get together with your peers today. The ideas you have may be criticized, but beware of someone who is also likely to steal them. Protect your interests.
- SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Mental and physical stimulation will lead to an interesting turn of events. Do things you enjoy. Social events will lead to a passionate relationship.
- CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Trouble could be brewing at home if you have been in your own little world or overly concerned with your work. Admit your own faults, and compensate where necessary with someone you care about.
- AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Some problems from your past may arise, but if you are open to what happened and how you handled it, you should be able to rectify the problem now. Take a break from people who influence you in the wrong way.
- PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep a close eye on your money and your possessions. Being overly generous will not bring you popularity or satisfaction. Rely on your past experience to do the right thing.
