IC man details measles trip

21-year-old became ill after a March 12 flight home from Washington D.C.

BY NICHOLAS BURGY

A 21-year-old Iowa State native diagnosed with measles last week said he became ill with flu-like symptoms after a trip home from Washington, D.C., and he is being quarantined at his parent's home until Wednesday.

The First Department of Medical Services is asking the state and members of the public to monitor travelers who may have come in contact with the man, who spoke to The Daily Iowan on Monday.

He said he has been vaccinated twice — the last time at age 13 — and added that he contracted the disease on a March 12 Delta Airlines flight from Detroit to Cedar Rapids. On his way back from an exchange program, the University of Iowa freshman student came in contact with a man returning from India who appeared to be ill.

"I looked pretty sick," he said. "I told the airline, 'I'm sick, I'm going to Washington.'"

A travel alert issued by the World Health Organization on Feb. 24, 2006, warned travelers of a "measles epidemic" that has taken him across the United States. The WHO’s alert followed an increase in the number of travelers returning from India who had measles, Coyle told The Daily Iowan.

Travelers returning from India who have measles are at risk of spreading the disease to others. According to the Agency for International Development, more than 90 percent of travelers infected with measles in India did not develop the disease for at least 90 days after returning from India.

In public, White House officials continue to stand on the principle of "executive privilege," saying that there is nothing to hide but not to testify under oath in public.

U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Chris Johnson said the agency inspected the facility and determined that it is in compliance with all federal regulations.

Harney said his biggest challenge was finding the right fit for the job. "It's not easy - if anything, it's more complex in some things," he said. "One can see the need for a change, and I'm sure, if done correctly, we'll have a better result."

Harney was raised in a family of seven including the older of 14 children. He joined the U.S. Army in 1967 and served as a medic. Discharged three years later as a staff sergeant, he remained in the Army Reserves for 30 years while building homes and improving temperature management.

"I've got a strong sense from the budget rat, it will be a matter that we have to address in the future between city and country," he said.

Assistant-living home gets state approval

CMA CITY (AP) - State officials approved funding for a 5-story, 72-unit assisted-living home for seniors in an southeastern Iowa community.

State Development Commissioner Dennis Gronstal said Thursday, March 22, he had been receiving letters from residents of his home town, Marshalltown.

"We don't believe our citizens want to go to a group home," said Don Swartz, the senior assistant for the Department of Human Services.

"This has been reviewed and approved by the community," he said.

Staff members did not meet the minimum group size of the Board of Directors' recommendation. The board's recommendation included a single individual, a married couple or two married couples, and a minimum of two individuals.

The board also reviewed the home's layout and found it to be consistent with the community's needs. The board also reviewed the home's location and found it to be consistent with the community's needs. School groups push for education funding

SIO MNY (AP) - Education leaders in Iowa's school districts are pushing for increased education funding.

"We need to make a change in funding," said Bob Christenson, the senior assistant for the State Department of Education. "We need to make sure that all students are getting a quality education."

Even after founding the University of Iowa Writers' Workshop and leaving Iowa City for 29 years, popular former writer E. C. Boyle says he will always feel like a Californian. "As long as I live," he says, "I'll be a Californian." Boyle told The Daily Iowan.

"I think that this tension between my New York upbringing and the strange societal climate and new generations of the California coast has always hung over me," Boyle said. "I really do think that my Iowa upbringing has always been a part of me."

Boyle added that his experience growing up in Iowa City during the 1960s and 1970s, when people were disaffected and subdual, and straight and religious, has influenced his work. "It's a mix of Iowa and New York," Boyle said. "I always feel like I'm a Californian at heart, but I also feel like I'm an Iowa writer."
Some more gas in Stern criticism

By interpersing his usual witty repartee with political commentary, Howard Stern could boost the Kerry campaign.

It isn’t unusual to hear shock-jock radio personality Howard Stern engage in serious political talk. However, while past disciples have focused on legalization and liberating drug laws, President Bush has been the subject of controversy this month.

Among such intellectually stimulating fare is hosting “Wheel of Gas” reads for women who want breast implants. Stern is detailing war on Bush, when he points as a “tool of the religious right” because of recent efforts to tighten Federal Communications Commission frequency standards and drastically increase fines for infractions. On his website, Stern encourages listeners and viewers to sign petitions and complete the FCC and also to support John Kerry.

Stern’s anti-Bush stance would not be perceived as hypocritical, considering that he has previously applauded in favor of Bush’s actions after 9/11, including vouching for acceptance of the war in Iraq. No political analysts see Stern’s arguments that are far more belated and insightful. During a March 19 broadcast, Stern quipped, “You think Courtenay Love is nut? The President’s 50 times crazier!”

While Stern should be praised for getting people interested in the 2004 election, we wish that if he was going to join the anti-Bush ranks, he would focus more on hard-hitting issues, instead of whether Oprah should be fired for a guest’s most descriptive acts. Stern’s budget, campaign advertisements, and jokes concerning weapons of mass destruction could all be far more for the cure.

Questions as to whether or not Bush backers want to be identified with the man responsible for defining “chirnike” and “fallout knobs” on air. Stern’s entire line of his ban the hypocracy of the Bush standards to President Bush’s war at that time? The New York Yankees play Tampa Bay this morning in the Tokyo Dome. The Yankees have the highest payroll in baseball.
Is the criticism of Tiger Woods warranted?

Just because Tiger Woods is good doesn’t make him immune to criticism, says Woods’ best friend, retired golf star Butch Harmon. "I think it’s because he’s the No. 1 player in the world and he’s been successful for so long and no one can question his talent. But why is he so out of the ordinary? Why is he such a perfect player? Why isn’t he playing this way 20 years ago? Why do people make it so hard for him to be number one?"

Woods has been known to get bored easily, and even with a lack of confidence, Tiger was still able to post a 78 and $116,000 at the Players Championship earlier this month.

Let me throw some numbers at you. In his first year, Tiger parred nine holes, didn’t miss a green, and then he was out of the tournament. Those accomplishments led to a 1996 NCAA title, a 1997 U.S. Open title, a 1997 Masters title, and the 1998 U.S. Open title. He was the first player to win four major championships in a season, and the first player to win four major championships in a season. He was the first player to win four major championships in a season. He was the first player to win four major championships in a season.

Krzyzewski knows ‘fortunate’ when he sees it

BY JIM LITKE

In their respective bids to get to the final four, Arizona, Cleveland and Connecticut experienced some of the requisite drama. Arizona had to hold in the final minute when Luke Walton, who had hobbled in the first half in the NCAAs, was able to make a free throw on the opposite end. Cleveland had to hold off a potential three-point bid from Washington in the final minutes of the game. Connecticut, of course, had to hold off a potential three-pointer from Duke with 1.1 seconds remaining.

That was in 1999, not long after Krzyzewski took over the national championship and the top spot in the rankings. So, yes, they were fortunate.

Duke coach Krzyzewski wasn’t thinking just in terms of this year’s program. “Your movement a little bit. I wasn’t near that year,” he said. “Some year soon,” he said. “Some year soon,”
