Diamond industry takes steps to retain its luster

BY MARK QUINER

Local jewelers say they are able to show a little better these days, knowing that there is an effort to ensure that their diamond’s support armed forces.

In recent years, the threat of “conflict diamonds” — gems that are used to support armed groups — have spurred the industry to create an international certification system called the Kimberley process, to try to stop the flow of such diamonds into the world’s marketplace. A number of jewelers say they use only those diamonds that have gone through the process, giving consumers increased confidence in the products.

Robert Malek, a sales representative for diamond retailer and wholesaler Lazare Kaplan in New York, said that if the process can be seen as a way to stop the flow of conflict diamonds, it could help the industry.

Mike Dubuque, the owner of Hands Jewelers, 109 E. Washington St., said he is able to give reasonable guarantees to consumers that he is not using any diamonds that are from war zones. He said that he has been able to find a supply of diamonds that have gone through the process, giving consumers increased confidence in the products.

Sprinklers not to be required in greek houses

BY WILLIAM BISSEL

The Iowa City City Council will not hear a final recommendation that would have required all UI fraternity and sorority houses to install automatic fire sprinklers during next week’s demolition.

Housing and Inspection Services reported Fire Mar­shal Robert Jensen last month that automatic fire sprinkler systems during next week’s demolition.

Jensen’s advice to mandate implementation of sprinkler systems in the houses, favored by community leaders, who said installing the estimated 80,000 fire-prevention systems in nearly $50,000 fire-prevention systems in nearly the houses would be too expensive, the housing board of appeals voted, 5-2, on March 5 against the safety measures, said holding inspections acceptable.

In addition, the UI houses are considered to be “taverns,” and UI Public Health Counselor Michelle Thomas added that such widespread installation would interfere with access finding or make it more time consuming when it comes to finding a place.

BY DREW KEPLER

A report released this week by the Iowa City’s Office of Municipal Audit showed that one of the wastewater treatment plants — the new 33rd Street site — had 11 water violations in 2011.

The audit found that the 33rd Street site, which opened in September 2010, had five water violations in its first six months of operation. The other six violations were in its last six months.

The audit also found that one of the wastewater treatment plants, the 46th Street site, had three water violations in 2011.

The Iowa City’s two wastewater-treatment plants, 33rd Street and 46th Street, have nearly 3,000 violations in total, the audit found.

The Dow, the world's premier market benchmark and a perennial target for critics who say it is too weighted with energy stocks, is scheduled to get a shot in the arm with the inclusion of the three new names, which will bump International Paper Co., AT&T Corp., and Eastman Kodak Co. to the Dow for the new composite. The changes will take effect April 19 and not change the level of the 30-year member index. (The method of calculation will be slightly altered to take into account the different stock structures.)

Djiboutian police said they arrested a man linked to the radical group.

Updated 2:07 p.m. ET

Djiboutian police said they arrested a man suspected of belonging to or aiding a Turkish far-left group.

It was not immediately clear if the man was in custody.

The arrest comes after a four-month investigation by the Istanbul police, which uncovered a network of Turks and Germans linked to the so-called Marxist Front.

Police said the man was arrested in the Istanbul district of Sultanahmet.

The Marxist Front is a far-left group that has operated in Turkey since the 1970s.

The group has been linked to a series of bombings in Istanbul, including one in 1998 that killed 44 people.

Police said the man was arrested after a raid on his apartment in Sultanahmet.

The raid was carried out by a team of Turkish and German police officers.

The investigation, which began in 2003, involved the cooperation of the Turkish and German police forces.

The investigation was prompted by a series of bombings in Istanbul, including one in 1998 that killed 44 people.

Seattle's Pretty Girls Make Graves will bring its brooding, brash, indie rock to Gabe's Saturday in support of its new album, Pretty on the Inside.

The Washington-based band, which has been compared to early Joy Division, combines a West Coast sensibility with an Eastern, post-punk sound. The result is a distinctive sound that has earned the band a dedicated following. The group's latest release, Pretty on the Inside, is a departure from the band's earlier work, which was heavily influenced by punk and post-punk genres.

Pretty Girls Make Graves' music is characterized by a mix of driving rhythms, moody guitar work, and evocative vocals. The band's songs often explore themes of alienation, identity, and personal struggle, with lyrics that are both introspective and politically charged.

This Saturday, Pretty Girls Make Graves will perform at Gabe's, offering fans a chance to hear the band's new material as well as some of their older hits. Whether you're a die-hard fan or a newcomer to the band's music, this is an event not to be missed.

Upon signing the Defense Obligation of Military Affairs, Americans found themselves embroiled in a war that many, if not all, had opposed. The reason for this was the Bush administration's decision to go to war in Iraq. The Iraq War has been a major factor in shaping public opinion, and it is a topic that continues to be discussed in the media.

The Bush administration has been criticized for its handling of the Iraq War. Many Americans believe that the war was a mistake, and that it has cost the lives of many American soldiers. The Bush administration has also been criticized for its failure to provide adequate funding for the war, and for its lack of a clear strategy for achieving its goals.

The Bush administration has also been criticized for its handling of other issues, such as the economy and the environment. The Bush administration has been accused of not doing enough to address these issues, and of focusing too much on the war.

The Bush administration's critics have been vocal, and the administration has faced a number of challenges in recent years. The Bush administration's policies have been criticized, and the administration has faced a number of legal challenges as well.

NEW YORK — Michigan must be on the list of teams no one wants to face when spring training starts here on Friday. A week from today, the Wolverines can be seen in the first of their three NIT championship games in the Sports Authority Field at Mile High in Denver. The team, which has been in the NIT championship this year, is the team that won the last NIT game.

“We've seen Washington this year, and I think we have a chance of taking them,” said senior Alexei Masly. “We're not going to lose — we're going to win.”

The Michigan Wolverines have been in the NIT championship every year. They have been in the championship every year since 2000. Masly said that the team has made the championship every year since 2000.

“It's very important for us to remember the past,” said Masly. “I want us to win.”

Michigan is ranked eighth in the nation, and they are one of the teams that make it to the NIT championship. The team made the tournament with a 24-8 record. They are led by senior guard Tim Worrell and Sabean’s 7-5 hero, Aaron (755).

Michigan's coach, Greg Mays, who has been dealing with shoulder soreness, said, “We're going to win.”

“I think we have a chance of taking them,” said Masly. “We're not going to lose — we're going to win.”
