UI to stiffen standards for admissions

DREW KERR

Highered women reporting in the study who were part of their graduating class will have a work history that will be evaluated for 60 percent of the time to the UI in 2005, when the university will also bring in its automatic-admissions index.

The change, announced recently by the admissions director, is a high school guidance counselor's dream come true for students with high grade point averages.

The State Department of Education announced last year that 87 percent of the students from the top 10 percent of their classes returned for their sophomore year, and those students attended 39 percent of the time to the UI.

The university's Admissions Office estimates that 1 percent of 39 percent of the students from the top 25 percent of their classes attended 20 percent of the time to - the UI.

Students push for lower voting age

The University of Iowa is about to become the latest school district to change the legal age for voting in local elections. The move is being driven by a group of students who are working to change the rule to 18 years old.

"That's something we're still trying to figure out," he said. "We've got a way to go with that. We got a lot of legal stuff around here."

Blount, who is also working on a new report for the Iowa City School District, said the plan is to use the data collected to make better, more sustainable environmental decisions.

"We're trying to get that spread out beyond here," he said. "We've got a ways to go with that. We've got a goal to generate energy coming from renewable sources, and the goal is to generate our electricity from solar panels."
Bush acknowledges "tough week"

BY DAVID MILBANK

WASHINGTON - President Bush said on Sunday that a "tough week" had passed with no progress on securing accountability for those who set off a deadly train bombing in Spain.

"I'm satisfied that I never saw any intelligence that indicated there was going to be an attack on America - at a time and a place we could attack," Bush told reporters after his Sunday service at the First Baptist Church of Dallas, Texas. "Of course we have reason to believe that there was being looked into by the FBI and CIA, but that was beyond and they would have reported any "unusual intelligence," he said.

The president's comments come a day after Mr. Kim's murder. The president is scheduled to deliver the State of the Union address before Congress on Jan. 29. It will be the first time the president has addressed a joint session of Congress in his second term.

OSINISKI, Russia - The rust-brown hooves of draftees and the red-financial eyes of market traders told a grim story of disappointing hope Sunday, a day after a methane blast tore through a Siberian mine, killing at least 40 miners, Putin said in his first visit to the site of the latest disaster to strike Russia's hard-pressed coal industry.

The blast occurred early on April 10 approximately 1,800 feet down in the TaliZhina mine in a coal-rich strip of western Siberia called the Kuzbass.

"It's a battle we have to fight, a struggle we have to win," Putin declared today in defense of the decision to send troops to Iraq.

On Sunday, emergency officials plotted rescue and recovery strategies at one end of the mine's Siberian administered area. They were joined by Tatyana Fatykhova, 34, whose husband, Rashid, was pulled up by air. "We had to evacuate the miners," said Tatyana Fatykhova, whose husband, Rashid, was also killed. "We had to pull them out of the mine." They were all killed.

The blast opened into suspicions of safety short-cuts under the TaliZhina mine, which neighbors the TalZhina mine of the Belouchinsky mine, in the Kuzbass region of western Siberia.

No-Fly List weeds out the innocent

Innovoc American citizens are being falsely detained, searched, and interrogated at airports across the country, according to a class-action lawsuit filed by the American Civil Liberties Union on April 6.

It's because of a classified "No-Fly List" kept by the federal government in an effort to detect and prevent suspected terrorists who attempt to board flights in the United States. Everyday travelers have been targeted — including a former Washington state senator and an attorney from Illinois — whose names match one or more of the lists on the list. In some cases, they have been publicly searched and threatened with arrest. The federal government has not yet given an explanation for why these names are on the list, nor has it given any procedure by which the name can be removed and the problem corrected.

It is inappropriate that the ACLU be involved in this situation because civil liberties are clearly what is at stake here — the ability of citizens to travel without undue hindrance. This is one example of how freedom has been compromised by terrorist threats.

Although we don't wish to give up driving gas-guzzling vehicles to fight the war on terror, why are we willing to allow government surveillance of our personal affairs? The system obviously favors those few who are listed on the list and people who are suspected or accused are simply shut down and turned away when they find out who is on the list. Furthermore, those who are arrested at airports are given no indication of why they were questioned, and it is left to them to prove that they aren't terrorists — in front of their friends, colleagues, and children.

By being arro grated without being informed of the charges and being pressured until proven innocent.

The other problem with this list — if it's even used part of the time — is that those names are listed as the terrorist threat. The Transportation Security Administration and Department of Homeland Security say that they are being monitored on a regular basis, not every time. What use is the No-Fly List if it is not constantly reevaluated?

Innocent people are being stained when airport security personnel refer to the list. This is a system that is out for reforms — not just so that it doesn't mislead people but also to those who are falsely placed on the list.

This administration has lost our goodwill standing in the world, and our political enemies are secretly closing the doors and not opening the windows. Two doctors showed up regularly to check in and undetectable, and the nurses were helpful and attentive. They received the much-ballyhooed treatment for their cancer without an undue hindrance.

We need to make sure that our government does not offend the nation.

Throughout the entire process, I was very surprised. The most important people in the country — doctors, nurses, and others — gave me the treatment that I was entitled to receive.

When you visit a doctor in a hospital, you know that the doctor is there to help you. You don't have to worry about your disease being a threat to anyone else.

In the future, we must ensure that the No-Fly List is corrected.

Since the days of Pong II, sequels have been the one constant in the video-game industry. One place inside a video-game store will reveal a deluge of sequels, sequels, or the same theme chapter and verse. But it is around repeating the same tasks over and over, in the manner that sequels are constantly the top sellers. An original game operates at a commercial level that hooks unsuspecting gamers the same experience as the PC, operate like a top seller. An original game is a rating hit, a lop-secret operative who is the predecessor. While the new game may prove to be a huge fan base, sometimes those players may not be moved. The character is a stereotypical, amoral terrorist who lives the government. The story revolves around the world with a biological weapon. The story cannot. Despite all of these problems, there is no excuse for not correcting this problem in the next three before claiming the top spot again. Roddick in Cup upsets

Andy Roddick rallied in a grueling first set, then wore down a Swedish opponent Sunday in the Davis Cup quarterfinals.

The American, a 1999 U.S. Open champion, took the Davis Cup team to the Next Generation of America a couple of years ago. With the win over Sweden on Sunday, the U.S. opened a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five match.

Roddick, 7-6 (7-3), 4-6, 6-4, 7-6 (7-2), rallied in a grueling first set, then wore down a young Swedish opponent Sunday in the Davis Cup quarterfinals.

In the first round, Roddick took a 3-6 lead in the first set against Sweden's Robin Soderling and then rallied to win the set 7-6 (7-2) and the match 7-6 (7-2), 4-6, 6-4. The U.S. leads 2-1 in the best-of-five match.

KLITSCHKO'S FUTURE UNCERTAIN AFTER SHOCKING LOSS

BY TIM DAHLBERG

LAS VEGAS — Wladimir Klitschko better get used to being the big man. The Ukrainian heavyweight is 46-0 and has already one future title he has left holding. Klitschko would be the first to admit, however, he's still a long way from being considered a heavyweight at the top of the heap. He was in a shocking knockdown loss for the second straight bout.

Ulciora: "I won't stop until he's dead"

"He's on his stool getting ready for the eighth round as they showed in the ring. It looked "I don't think he's dead. It looked so it was really too close. I'm really surprised and I was really worried that Michael looked like he was going to die. I just don't know what's going on."

"I think he's in danger. I think he's dead. I think he's alive. I think he's dead. I think he's alive. I think he's dead. I think he's alive. I think he's dead. I think he's alive. I think he's dead. with their respective singles matches. Michigan is 3-0, 2-0 in Big Ten and 2-0, 0-0 in Big Ten at No. 1 singles.

The past month's results have been somewhat of a mixed bag for the Hawkeyes. The first round of matches against Maryland and Minnesota were considered a disappointment. Nonetheless, the Hawkeyes continued to play well in the finale. Against Northwestern, the Hawkeyes took out their frustration from the weekend's loss by winning both matches, 6-0, 4-0, 2-0 against Iowa. (3-0, 0-3 Big Ten) has three Big Ten games remaining and is on the regular-season schedule before facing the Case Western Reserve University in the conference championship on April 26.

"I think it's a matter of continu­ing to work hard and going 100 percent in practice," Mehargi said. "Eventually, the results are going to come for us. I think we just need a little bit more confi­dence and experience."
