Regents reach leadership deal

BY CHRISTINA EBB

Regent Robert Dowless announced on Tuesday that he will vote for Regent John Forzych for the 2004-06 term. Dowless delivered his announcement after the board was deliberating on the month-long split on the leadership issue among the Iowa Board of Regents, President OwenUSEN’s announcement.

After weeks of turmoil, speculation and an unprecedented meeting with the governor last week, Dowless was preparing to make his decision in the board’s executive session on Monday. He later explained that, if elected, he would maintain the current Regents’ posture on the complex issue of leadership at the Iowa Board of Regents.

"I don’t think a position that a position that is a position that the Regents need," Dowless said on Monday. "I believe the Regents would have to agree to pursue their preferences until April.

After weeks of considerable deliberation between Dowless and Forzych, the two regents have decided to vote in tandem. Dowless said he will vote for Forzych on April 30 and remain on the board until the April 30, 2004, meeting.

Regents' key elements to improve education in Iowa

The Iowa Board of Regents will be meeting on Monday at noon in the Dental Science Building on the University of Iowa campus.

The board will be considering a number of proposals that could improve education in Iowa. These include:

- Increasing the amount of funding for higher education in Iowa.
- Creating a new program to support education in Iowa.
- Implementing new policies to improve the quality of education in Iowa.

For this meeting, the Board of Regents will be considering the following proposals:

- A proposal to increase the amount of funding for higher education in Iowa.
- A proposal to create a new program to support education in Iowa.
- A proposal to implement new policies to improve the quality of education in Iowa.

All of these proposals are intended to improve education in Iowa and are expected to be discussed in detail at the meeting.

Iowa Senate approves $5 million budget

Bill still awaits House approval of changes made by the Senate

The Iowa Senate has approved a $5 million budget for the University of Iowa. The bill still awaits House approval of changes made by the Senate.

The Senate approved the bill, which would provide $5 million for the University of Iowa, on Tuesday. The bill will now be sent to the House for further consideration.

The budget provided $5 million for the University of Iowa, which is the largest university in the state. The budget also includes funds for the University of Southern Iowa, which is the second largest university in the state.

The Senate approved the budget after a lengthy debate, which included discussions about the need for increased funding for the University of Iowa.

The budget includes funding for a variety of programs, including:

- Research funding
- Student aid
- Faculty salaries
- Building repairs

The Senate also approved a number of amendments to the budget, which were intended to improve the quality of education in Iowa.

The budget will now be sent to the House for further consideration. It is expected that the House will consider the budget in the coming weeks.

Schutte to veto policy bill

Bill proposes legislation be submitted two weeks in advance

BY DREW KERR

IOWA CITY - University Student Government President Lindsey Schutt, summing up her five-month relationship with the policy that bears her name, Tuesday night said, "She plans to present the bill, weigh its constitutional power on just the fourth piece of legislation yet in front of her."

The proposed constitution, submitted by Sen. Barry Punn, calls for future legislation to be submitted two weeks prior to the Senate Assembly meeting, which it would then go to the Senate, for review by both senators and FIVC's two president for retainance.

After brief debate, drawling student government senators, the legislation was passed with just two pages within the assembly. Schutte, however, called the policy "incapable" as an idea.

"The time span is really unrealistic," she said, adding that issues arise quickly and the legislation is not flexible enough to allow for changes.

Measure no assurance of troops, official says

WASHINGTON — Even though the United Nations intends to send a large peacekeeping force to Iraq, the effort may initially be prevented from entering the country because of the new security procedures that have been put in place, a Pentagon official said Tuesday.

"I do think there are quite a few countries who aren’t going to be happy about it," said Pentagon spokesman Paul Wolfowitz. "So for example, the statement that we’ve received from the United Arab Emirates is that they don’t want any involvement in Iraq."

Wolfowitz also said the pentagon was waiting for "positive " indications from several other countries before it would allow the U.S. forces to enter Iraq. He added that he didn’t expect any response from the United States on Tuesday.

The situation in Iraq is complicated by the fact that the United States is trying to establish a government in the country that can combat the insurgency. The U.S. military is under pressure to withdraw from Iraq as quickly as possible, but the government is still struggling to gain control of the country.

The U.S. military has been operating in Iraq since the start of the war in 2003. The U.S. military is currently estimated to be about 150,000 troops in Iraq. The number of U.S. troops in Iraq has been decreasing since the start of the war, and the U.S. military is now considering ways to reduce its forces in the country.

The U.S. military has been faced with a number of challenges in Iraq, including the possibility of a civil war, the threat of a terrorist attack, and the possibility of a successful uprising by the insurgency. The U.S. military has been under pressure to withdraw from Iraq as quickly as possible, but the government is struggling to gain control of the country.
The Punisher, a comic book hero and a popular action figure, was brought to the screen in a 1989 movie starring Dolph Lundgren. The film, directed by John Cassavetes, was a disappointment to fans of the comic book, but it did provide some action and excitement. The film was criticized for its low budget and lack of production value, but it did manage to bring in a decent amount of money when released.

The Punisher, played by Lundgren, is a former special forces soldier who becomes a vigilante after his family is killed. He starts killing dealers in drug kingpin Kingpin's organization. The film's opening scene, a shooting scene at a high-rise building, was directed by Cassavetes and remained an iconic part of the film's legacy.

The Punisher's character development is one of the film's strengths, as he goes through a transformation from a simpleGANARA NCE-transformer to a complex character who is driven by his desire for revenge. Overall, the film is a good example of how action movies can balance action with character development.

The Punisher received mixed reviews from critics, with some praising its action sequences and others criticizing its plot and dialogue. The film's box office success was modest, but it did manage to capture the attention of audiences who were looking for an action-packed experience.

With the success of the 1989 film, there were several attempts to bring The Punisher to the screen again, but it wasn't until 2004 that a new film was released. This film, directed by Marc Webb, was a much better attempt at bringing the character to the screen, and it received much better reviews than the 1989 film.

In conclusion, The Punisher is a classic action film that remains a favorite among fans of the comic book and action movies alike. Despite its limitations, it remains a masterpiece of its genre and a classic of 1980s cinema.
Shouldn’t car manufacturers also be sued for producing vehicles that exceed the speed limit? And where are Thomas Edison’s heirs? If he hadn’t invented the light bulb, there wouldn’t have been a light pole for the car to hit. And where are the government and the industry that produces this most dangerous product knowing that people may see and then unknowingly make the same mistakes?

Rethinking service requirements

I qualify for vocational rehabilitation services. The Social Security Administration says I am unable to do any work, but the Vocational Rehabilitation Division is not so sure. I have consulted with both agencies, and it appears that they do not agree on my qualifications or my ability to work.

I disagree that a desire to help people is a profession, not a job. The profession requires ongoing education, new skills, and changing technology, not just a desire to help people. The profession advances society free of the inequalities and discrimination.

Each year, a percentage of the people are required to enter into the workforce, and this is a profession. It would be better served by the profession than by a job.

All deaths are tragic, but suing a beer company for advertising its product isn’t — it’s stupid

Previous lawsuits usually make a good conversation topic — and this one is classic.

A woman in Texas, Sun. in the U.S. is suing the Coors Brewing Co. for allegedly promoting underage drinking through its portrayal of alcoholic beverages as being youthful and sexy. This results from her 18-year-old son being killed in a high-speed car accident after consuming Coors Light.

We can only hope that she has a good attorney and that this case is tried by a jury. If she wins, we will have seen both an end to expensive lawsuits and a change in the drinking culture.

Maurice Clarett's attorneys have asked the U.S. Supreme Court today for emergency relief to lift the stay imposed by a federal appellate court that prohibits the Ohio State football star from seeking vindication in court for his side of the story.

The Ohio State football player was suspended indefinitely by the school after he initially prevented police from entering his dorm room. The school ultimately cleared him of a charge of sexual assault.

Clarett's attorneys filed the request with the Supreme Court today. Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg will handle the emergency appeal.

On Sunday, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 6th Circuit in Cincinnati reversed the decision by Justice Harold RETZEL to vacate the student athlete's decision to seek vindication in court. The appellate panel ruled Clarett could not recover damages, that the plaintiff could not be stopped from entering the dorm, and that the court subsequently found that the students who shared the dorm also had been removed.

The judges found that the school had a legitimate interest in preventing the sexual assault from occurring, and that the appellate court had vacated the decision by Justice Harold RETZEL to vacate the student athlete's decision to seek vindication in court. The appellate panel ruled Clarett could not recover damages, that the plaintiff could not be stopped from entering the dorm, and that the court subsequently found that the students who shared the dorm also had been removed.

DIVERS

"It probably ends one of the most powerful women divers history has ever seen," said coach Bob Rhyne. "She has competed for her country so very fast, she’s athletic, and she’s an excellent swimmer.

Planken came to Iowa from Denver's Rollins College. Although she嘴ood at swimming, she had an exceptional work ethic and was one of the most intense divers on the entire floor. She never gave up, no matter how tough the competition."

"I had questions as to whether I was a true athlete," said Planken. "I was definitely not one of those divers who just did it because they were good at it. I wanted to be the best."

"I'm not a gambling man," said Planken. "I'm not going to gamble on anything. I'm going to work hard for everything I get."
Reserves lift Pacers to victory

INDIANAPOLIS - The Bulls' Patrick Ewing, Ron Artest and Jermaine O'Neal combined for 58 points, a group of reserves rescued the Pacers and New Jersey Nets through a fourth-quarter garbage time and the Pacers pulled to within 1-0 in the first-round NBA playoff series on Tuesday night.

The series will move to Indiana for Game 3 on Friday night.

Jefferson also had a technical foul, and he reached around the waist to have an 82-72 lead with 7:21 to play. He also had the most points scored in the third quarter.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. - Once again, the New Jersey Nets were the victims of the New York Knicks this time in the National Basketball Association. The Knicks won 99-81 and took a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series.

"We're no better today; that's a really good team," Nets star Jason Kidd said Tuesday at the Nets' training facility in Holmdel, N.J. "(The) Knicks are just really good at what they do."
