$ crunch may lead to cutting sports

More than 900 college teams nationally have been cut since 1994. For the first time, the UI is taking a serious look at two options to deal with an expected budget shortfall: eliminating a team or cutting support.

BY JASON BRUMMOND
THE DAILY IOWAN

In passing conversations over the years, UI Athletics Director Bob Bowsby has assured Hawkeye coaches he would never cut their programs. Several recalled him saying that, as a former college athlete, he could sympathize with the needs of smaller sports.

But with the UI General Education Fund Task Force looking to trim $12 million in expenses and Bowsby's recent statements that he may have no other choice, coaches of the UI's non-revenue sports worry that a national trend of cutting sports programs — more than 900 over the past 14 years — may have at last reached their doorstep.

"You see other programs getting dropped around the country — yeah, absolutely, people are concerned," said men's swimming coach John Davey. "There is definitely a national trend toward that."

From 1988-89 to 2001-02, 616 men's programs and 301 women's were dropped in Division I, according to an NCAA report. Simultaneously, 934 women's teams were added along with 442 men's — a net increase of 633 for women and loss of 174 for men.

The coaches said they would rather see their budgets slashed significantly than having a program dropped, even if it wasn't their own. Men's track and cross-country coach Larry Wiczorek said he would do "whatever is required to keep all our sports going."

He said the frequent slashing has numbed university reactions nationwide to a "depressing" trend.

"People in the world say, 'Hey, we can't knock down these trees — they're 100 years old,'" Wiczorek said. "Well, how do you knock down an athletics program that's been around for more than 100 years?"

Whatever happens, coaches said, they remain loyal to their boss and confident he will examine all other avenues before resorting to drastic measures.

In an interview, Bowsby said Title IX compliance, natural recruiting areas, facilities, and the quality and potential growth of an athletics program would factor into consideration if a team needs to be cut, among "dozens of other factors." He wouldn't speculate further on criteria in the UI's case.

If a program needs to be dropped, it is "almost impossible" athletics officials will look to a women's team, said Dr. Christine Grant, a UI sports-studies professor who was famous for her Title IX advocacy during her 27-year tenure as the Iowa women's athletics director.

The temptation is to use the regulation as a scapegoat, but "excessive and unnecessary expenditures" have actually caused athletics departments to drop teams, she said. Ballooning coaching salaries and recruiting expenses that cost an "arm and a leg" take a serious toll on programs that are edging toward bankruptcy, she said.

Women's programs tallied more expenses than men's in every both-sexes program at the UI except for basketball. Under a NCAA mandate, women's teams have a higher scholarship allotment in every sport but swimming, which typically causes total expenses to be higher.

But collegiate athletics shouldn't be about finances but about the learning experience, UI coaches say. Men's tennis coach Steve Houghton said the "life lessons" student-athletes acquire from athletics are equal regardless of a sport's size.

"If the individual programs are directed the right way, I think it's a great part of the whole educational experience," he said.

That solution may provide short-term assistance when the General Education Task Force makes its budget recommendations to President David Skorton on Friday. If the athletics department receives a $300,000 to $400,000 decrease in support, it may have to consider dropping one of its 24 athletics teams.

It is impractical to think schools will take action on their own because that is "competitive suicide," Grant said. She said the best solution to fixing the financial crisis is a national movement to reduce expenditures, which has seen growing discussion in the last three or four years.

"I'm very hopeful that we're now going to see some action at the national level so that we can make athletics programs more fiscally responsible and retain the participation opportunities for all of our students," she said. "There is growing concern that if leadership is not taken at the national level, then we're going to see a sudden increase in the dropping of men's sports, and that would be a tragedy."

Iowa St. will put festival on hold

BY CHUCK SCHOFFNER

AMES — Iowa State University is suspending its annual spring festival to try to save it.

ISU President Gregory Geoffroy, reacting to the riot that caused thousands of dollars of damage after this year's event, said on Tuesday that the student-run festival would not be held in 2005.

That will give the university and community time to look for ways to prevent such trouble in the future. If he is satisfied with the results of that work, Geoffroy would reinstate the celebration in 2006.

Fraternity booted; house is 'unsafe'

BY CHRISTINA PREISS
THE DAILY IOWAN

Residents of the UI's Beta Theta Pi fraternity house will be evicted next month because city inspectors have deemed the structure unfit for human habitation, citing poor conditions observed during a March inspection.

"It was unsafe, unfit, and unsanitary," city housing inspector John Bovey said. "There were a lot of things that would take more than a weekend clean-up to fix."

Occupants were notified to vacate the 816 N. Dubuque St. residence by May 17 — just days after final exams.

Doug Boothroy, the director of Housing and Inspection Services, called the city's move "pretty unusual."

"Only extreme circumstances lead to [an eviction]," he said.

Bovey cited missing and broken windows and doors, malfunctioning fire equipment, and other various building violations as reasons for the eviction. He said there were trash bags lying on the floors, which were observed to have small teeth marks on the outsides, indicating a possible vermin infestation.

Schutte stresses Iowa student-government partnerships

UISG president wants to bring the student governments of UNI, ISU together to form a unified front when lobbying for funds from legislators and the state Board of Regents

BY DREW KERR
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI Student Government President Lindsay Schutte said she plans to do something during her term that hasn't been done in the past — seek the opinions of her counterparts at Iowa's other regents' universities.

"There have been attempts to formalize the relationship between the universities in the past; some have worked, some haven't," Schutte said on Tuesday.

"We've had some great ideas but lacked implementation."

Schutte joins Sophia Magill of Iowa State University and Brandon Moe of the University of Northern Iowa at the helms of their respective student assemblies.

As presidents, the three met for the first time at the April 21 state Board of Regents meeting, where they discussed their plans for the year.

The leaders agreed that tuition stabilization, financial aid, work-study programs, and maintaining a steady graduation rate top their list of priorities. William Rock, ISU's Government of the Student Body vice president, said progress will be made when the three student governments band together rather than merely representing individual universities.

"Between all of us, we have nearly 70,000 students. That's a pretty healthy talent pool to draw from," he said.

Though the campuses are scattered across the state, a common meeting ground for the three is Des Moines — particularly the Statehouse.

Rock noted that Iowa City's distance from Des Moines is an impediment that has caused the UI to be a "limited resource" in the past.

"The Legislators are really used to seeing us. They wonder why they're seeing only us sometimes," said Rock, who has visited the Statehouse four times since spring semester began.

In an attempt to increase support from state legislators, ISU's student government has implemented an ambassador program, assigning student lobbyist to their home counties. The initiative — dubbed "Committee of 99" — was sparked by former UISG President Nate

Pen-pal program leads to the 'write' stuff for students

BY LINDSEY DERYNCK
THE DAILY IOWAN

One by one, the Cedar Rapids fourth-graders hopped off their school bus and raced to Shelter No. 6, anticipating grilled hot dogs, hamburgers, and their first encounter with the big kids.

And one by one, the UI students who have learned about their favorite movies, foods, and holidays over the past seven months appeared at City Park on Tuesday — just as eager, just as hungry.

The first face-to-face meeting with the Cedar Rapids Grant Wood Elementary students and their UI pen pals was a chilly afternoon of board games, soccer, Wiffle ball, and other sports. The picnic was the climax of monthly letters sent back and forth, which helps the youngsters develop interpersonal skills while encouraging them to pursue college, said Mary Kopecky, a Grant Wood teacher.

The letters will also help students hone their writing skills, said Kopecky, who has incorporated the program into her curriculum for more than a decade. "It is an opportunity [for them] to understand about college life and working toward that," she said.

Sponsored by Opportunity at Iowa, the program allows UI students to mentor kids from West Liberty and Cedar Rapids through letters.

"We think of this program as a form of early intervention" that dispels myths about higher education, said Adele Lozano, the UI's multicultural outreach coordinator, who oversees the program.

UI students, meanwhile, can earn volunteer hours and gain a sense of community involvement, said Lozano, adding that the program's popularity has skyrocketed since she took over six years ago. She said she is flooded with inquiries from students who want to correspond with one of the 150 fourth-graders involved in this year's program.

Recruiting begins in September, and the pairs are usually formed in October. A schedule and monthly e-mail reminds the volunteers when to send the letters.

UI senior Brett Darrow, who learned about the volunteering opportunity through the Chemical Engineering Honors Society earlier this year, said he spent up to an hour every month writing letters and finding pictures to send his pen pal, Dakota Kessler. So far, they've found common interests in hockey, fishing, and log homes — Kessler wants to build them, Darrow lives in one.

we were to have another disturbance very quickly on the heels of the one we had this year, it would put the long-term future of VEISHEA in very, very serious jeopardy," he said. "And we just cannot afford to let that happen."

The spring festival, known as VEISHEA, began in 1922. The name is an acronym for what were then ISU's major colleges: veterinary medicine, engineering, industrial science, home economics, and agriculture.

Violence has marred the event several times in recent years. Riots broke out in 1988, 1992, and 1994 and a man was fatally stabbed in 1997. But school officials said the riot that erupted in the early morning hours April 18 was the worst in the festival's 82 years.

Rioters threw rocks and bottles at police, smashed windows, set fires in trash bins, and toppled street lights. Police used tear gas and batons to control the crowd, estimated at around 1,000 people. Thirty-eight people were arrested.

"In the past, we had groups of people who were what I'll call happy rioters," Ames Mayor Ted Tedesco said. "This group was mean. They were out to hurt, or injure, or even kill someone. They threw rocks at our officers. I don't think that can be tolerated."

Twenty of those arrested were students, who face disciplinary action from the student judicial system that could include expulsion.

Geoffroy said he, Tedesco, and student President Sophia Magill will appoint two groups to look at what can be done to save VEISHEA.

One will examine the causes of this year's violence and make recommendations on how similar trouble can be prevented.

The other will look at improving relationships among students, the university, the city of Ames, and local residents.

Both groups are to report to Geoffroy in November. He'll review their recommendations and decide if VEISHEA will be reinstated.

"I would certainly like to see a VEISHEA in 2006," he said. "I am optimistic that those reports will bring forward good recommendations that we can implement."

He put the event on hold for a year because he wanted to make sure everything was in order before it was resumed, he said.

"I think it's absolutely imperative that the next VEISHEA we hold, we get it right," he said.

Student leaders said they were disappointed there would be no VEISHEA next year but that they understood the need for a thorough study.

"If this is the decision made by President Geoffroy, I think it's imperative we work together and move forward on this," said Magill, a junior from Charter Oak.

ISU, on the other hand, "took [it] and ran" with the campaign, said Rock, an agricultural business and economics major. ISU's program, however, has had trouble filling the spots and is looking to the UI and UNI for support.

"If [legislators] talk to someone who says, 'My parents elect you; I elect you,' it should carry some weight."

Schutte welcomed the invitation, though she said it may take two or three years to be fully functional.

"If [legislators] talk to someone who says, 'My parents elect you; I elect you,' it should carry some weight," the Lee County native said.

UNI Student Government Vice President Joe Murphy said he would love to offer assistance, but he has found it hard to recruit representatives.

Future meetings between the student leaders remain to be set, but Schutte said informal communication will be a cornerstone of her presidency.

anonymity, said the eviction is related to merely "a couple of renovation issues."

"It's one of the oldest buildings on campus and the problems are from the age of the house," he said. "It doesn't seem like anything's too bad, but I guess the city is just looking out for our best interests."

Jeff Tble, a Beta alumnus, is one of many alumni trying to improve the conditions of the house after city officials reported its unfit conditions. He noted that unlike many fraternities on the UI campus, the 20-bedroom house remains vacant for the summer so the house can undergo necessary renovations.

"I think the next step is a fairly large capital expenditure to bring the house up to snuff," he said.

Calls and visits to the fraternity's property remained unanswered both Monday and Tuesday.

Bovey said there are plans to fix the problems cited, so the residents may move back in, but he could not specify a time frame.

Beta Theta Pi was the first fraternity founded west of the Mississippi River. The UI chapter was founded in 1866.

Firefights erupt in Fallujah, Najaf

BY JAYSON KEYSER

FALLUJAH, Iraq — U.S. warplanes and artillery attacked Sunni insurgents holed up in a slum in a thunderous show of force that rocked Fallujah on Tuesday, sending huge plumes of black smoke into the night sky. The assault came after American troops killed 64 gunmen near the southern city of Najaf.

Death toll in Iraq:
• 64 Iraqi gunmen killed near Najaf on Tuesday
• 115 American deaths in April, the same number lost during the invasion of Iraq
• 1,200 Iraqis (estimated) also killed this month

Hayne Palmour IV, North County Times/Associated Press

A Hellfire missile, fired from a Cobra helicopter, hits a building that insurgents were seen running into after they fired on Marines in the Jolan section of Fallujah, Iraq, on Tuesday. The mosque (left) has a hole in its dome from a Hellfire missile that hit it a couple of weeks ago.

An American soldier was killed Tuesday in Baghdad, raising the U.S. death toll for April to 115 — the same number lost during the invasion of Iraq that toppled Saddam Hussein last year. Up to 1,200 Iraqis also have been killed this month.

The second-straight night of battles in Fallujah came as the extension of a fragile cease-fire ended in the turbulent city west of Baghdad. Marines have been preparing to begin patrols in the city later this week.

Tuesday's battle appeared far heavier than the previous night's clashes, in which a Marine and eight insurgents were killed — suggesting U.S. forces were trying to wear down gunmen in the Jolan neighborhood, a district of narrow alleyways and ramshackle houses.

An AC-130, a powerful gunship that can unleash a deluge of ordnance, joined 105-mm howitzers in opening up on insurgent targets in the neighborhood. Gunfire and explosions reverberated for nearly two hours, and an eerie orange glow shone over the area while showers of sparks descended like fireworks.

Fires were visible in the Jolan neighborhood, and mosque loudspeakers elsewhere in the city called for firefighters. U.S.

aircraft dropped white leaflets over Fallujah before nightfall, calling on insurgents to give up.

"Surrender, you are surrounded," the leaflets said. "If you are a terrorist, beware, because your last day was yesterday. In order to spare your life, end your actions and surrender to coalition forces now. We are coming to arrest you."

Fighting also broke out in Baghdad and in the south, where U.S. forces are in a standoff with militiamen loyal to radical Shiite cleric Muqtada al-Sadr, who is wanted on murder charges for allegedly killing a fellow cleric.

U.S. forces killed 64 Iraqis on Monday and Tuesday in battles with militiamen outside the Shiite holy city of Najaf, Brig. Gen. Mark Kimmitt said.

The United States is trying to avoid a resurgence of the intense fighting ahead of June 30 — the date for installation of a new Iraqi government.

At the United Nations, U.N. envoy to Iraq Lakhdar Brahimi briefed the U.N. Security Council on plans for a caretaker government that would take over from the U.S.-picked Governing Council. He also warned that there would be a "very bloody confrontation" unless an agreement was reached to end fighting in Fallujah.

John Negroponte, who has been nominated as U.S. ambassador to Iraq, acknowledged Tuesday that the caretaker government would have limited powers because the Iraqi security forces were not yet strong enough. The United States would keep control of security forces, and the new government may not have the authority to pass laws, he told a Senate panel in Washington.

Several U.S.-allied Iraqi leaders demanded the government receive full sovereignty. Mohsen Abdel-Hamid, a Sunni Arab on the Governing Council, said the prospect of the United States retaining some sovereignty is "not acceptable; this is totally rejected."

'Terrorism' in the midst of the corn

Des Moines officials say antiterrorism dollars are being channeled into the wrong parts of Iowa

Des Moines area officials are upset because they say too much antiterrorism money is going to rural parts of the state while population centers — which they contend are more likely to be targets of terrorist attacks — are losing out.

According to the Des Moines Register, Iowa's capital and largest city will receive less than 1 percent of the $28 million initially allocated to the state by the federal government to defend against and respond to potential terrorist activity.

Ten counties with considerably smaller populations than Polk County (where Des Moines is located) will receive more funding. Sioux County, a rural and predominately agricultural district in the extreme northwestern corner of the state, will garner nearly $50,000 more than the state's most populous county.

While Iowa's cities complain about getting the shaft, however, we'd like to point out that this state, as a whole, probably isn't high on the list of potential terrorists' targets in the United States. Des Moines and Cedar Rapids lack the symbolic and strategic icons that attract such attention. Sure, we have a State Capitol building, but so do 49 other cities in the country.

Thus, the argument that bigger cities in Iowa are at higher risk than small towns is dubious. Sioux County might not get nuked, but Des Moines probably won't, either.

We'd also like to point out that, while terrorism receives far more publicity than any other problem in this country, it isn't the only problem, or even close to being the biggest problem. Far more Americans (more than 40,000) die in car crashes each year than in terrorist attacks.

Iowa should obtain its share of these federal funds, but population centers shouldn't receive priority over rural areas, and we shouldn't have to use terrorism as an excuse to spend money on resources that we need anyway.

Items such as police and fire department equipment, severe-weather warning systems, and road construction are just as important in rural areas as they are in urban centers.

Terrorism should not be ignored, but there are bigger issues that need to be addressed, regardless of whether hijacked planes and tainted mail are a threat. Do we need to wait for a similar media frenzy to develop over traffic fatalities before we spend money to make our highways safer?

These funds are necessary to provide for the general welfare of the public. Let's not pretend, though, that bigger cities are inherently more important than small towns, or that terrorism is the sole governing factor for the federal budget. Farmers need police and fire protection, too, even if terrorists most likely won't crash a plane into their silos.

Life as high Chapelle

I burst into my friend's house and found him pouring copper-colored scotch into a brandy snifter. "Ah, Sebastian," he said coolly as he sat down. "What a pleasant surprise. Would you care for a glass? I must say the aroma is rather spirit, but it leaves a taste that lingers with the subtle beauty of a northern sunset —"

"Spare me your insipid pleasantries," I hissed through my teeth. I pointed an accusatory finger in his face; "I know what you've done, and I am disgusted."

He swirled his scotch calmly. "Frankly, my good man, I'm afraid that I haven't the foggiest idea of what you could be talking about," he said with a puzzled smirk.

"Oh really?" I replied, my voice saturated with contempt. "Then perhaps I can refresh your addled memory by reconstructing the scene of your odious deed. It was Tuesday before last. You and I were enjoying an espresso with our mutual acquaintance when she mentioned her current beau's plans to become a student of philosophy. You responded to the news by adroitly remarking, 'Well, that's just fabulous, because I heard that the Philosophy Factory outside of town is currently hiring.'"

"Oh how we laughed, didn't we? And you, you the gracious raconteur that you are, accepted our raucous 'How droll!' and 'Such rapier wit!' with your characteristic humility, didn't you?" I spat out.

"Sebastian, your retelling of this story exhibits your characteristic penchant for wearisome circumlocution. To the point, please."

"The point?" I shouted. "The point is, my devious and deceitful friend, that you stole your oh-so-comical remark from 'That '70s Show!' I happened to be watching a rerun when I saw Topher Grace deliver your remark of two weeks past virtually verbatim!" I leaned in close and whispered with hatred, "But now I've found you out, you scoundrel. You thought you'd get away with it, didn't you? But now you know —"

"Know what precisely?" he interrupted, gently pushing me back with two fingers in my chest. "I admit I 'stole' the bon mot from 'That '70s Show.' To be candid, it was far more clever than anything I could have conjured up myself."

He took a delicate sip. "Expose me if you must, but I warn you that if you do, no one will care. Why should they?"

"I am hardly the first, nor the last, nor the only person to repeat television programming in a social situation," he continued calmly. "I invite you to stroll through downtown on a typical Friday night after 1 a.m. How many times do you hear, 'I'm Rick James ... bitch' or 'Hu-whut? Yeeaaaahh. Hoh-Kay!?' It's akin to being in an echo chamber. Go into one of the bars, and locate a group of three or more males. I assure you over half their conversation will be consumed by recounting the entirety of an episode of 'Chappelle's Show' or their favorite series on Cartoon Network."

"You're making excuses." My anger was simmering under a quickly deteriorating façade of civility. "Some of us who attempt to engage actively with the world around us can converse meaningfully about topics other than what is fed to us through the almighty cathode tube."

"Oh, really?" he said with an arched eyebrow. "May I ask what you did today, my engaged and meaningful friend?"

Caught off guard, I stammered, "Well, I uhhmm, went to class ... cashed some checks at the bank ... came home and made some food —"

"Fascinating, truly fascinating," he said sarcastically as he finished the last of his scotch. "I hate to shatter your idealistic delusions, Sebastian, but the truth is that television is simply more interesting than real life. People are more attractive, situations are more outlandish, and jokes are punctuated by crowds of people laughing."

"Because television is more entertaining than life, people spend their lives watching television. So on the rare occasions when they actually communicate with each other, the only thing they have to talk about is ... you guessed it: television."

I shook my head in horror. "When did you acquire a perception of humanity so grim and soulless?"

"Huh-What?"

"I said, when did you acquire ... wait, you're doing that thing from Chappelle's Show, aren't you?"

"Yeeaaaaahh!"

"You sicken me."

"Hoh-Kay!" ■

There are local elections, too

Our campus has seen its fair share of national political candidates this year. But we haven't heard much about our local candidates. Iowa has a primary election on June 8, and on the Democratic ballot, we will see the most important race that will affect students.

The race for Johnson County sheriff is a highly contested race that will determine how students will be treated by law enforcement. The sheriff handles all routine and emergency calls for Johnson County. If you are sick of public-intoxication tickets and disorderly house tickets, then do something about it.

We as citizens can't elect the police in Iowa City, but we can elect our sheriff. There are two candidates running, one of whom I highly encourage all students to vote for.

Lonny Pulkrabek is the student-friendly candidate. He has worked for the Johnson County Sheriff's Office for more than 17 years, and he has more than four years of experience working in the county jail. Lonny serves as a resource member for the Johnson County Jail Task Force and understands the need to resolve the issue of jail overcrowding. Instead of taking OWI and public-intoxication offenders directly to jail, Lonny will work to help initiate a program of release.

At the same time, Lonny will work closely with the media to inform members of the public about their legal rights and the jail-population issue. Lonny is the former trainer of the K-9 unit, where he trained Turbo, the former Johnson County K-9. Lonny worked with the unit to locate lost persons and stolen property.

Lonny has a clear vision to involve the community in the safety and security of our county. He has outlined a plan for preparedness for homeland security. He will continue to protect our citizens from terrorism and bioterrorism by bringing in more services through state and national grant money.

Lonny has a long history of involvement in our community, including memberships in the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce, the Johnson County Democratic Party, and the Johnson County Safe Kids Coalition. He is the only candidate who supports the Sheriff's AFL-CIO affiliated union, where he serves as a founding member of the PPME local.

Most students won't be on campus for the primary, but that doesn't mean you can't vote in it. Request an absentee ballot from the Auditor's Office by calling 356-6086. Get your ballot and vote for students' rights. Vote for Lonny Pulkrabek.

At least it's not bondage

In response to Philip Kopp's letter (DI, April 23), I would like to say that as a concerned pagan, I am highly offended by the existence of no fewer than 20 distinct Christian organizations on campus. We need to take a stand against all this Jesus nonsense.

Seriously, though, one of the great things about the UI is its diversity. It's wonderful that we can have campus organizations such as SPIRAL (the pagan student group), the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender, and Allied Union, and other non-mainstream groups, and almost no one complains or protests.

Not all university environments are so accepting; consider the recent controversy surrounding Cuffs, Iowa State's bondage and sadomasochism group.

Not everyone thinks the same way or believes in the same god, but that doesn't give anyone the license to dismiss different beliefs as "nonsense." If you have a problem with the pagans here, or any of "this diversity madness," then maybe the UI isn't the place for you.

Sharon: Violence will bring harsher response

BY MARK LAVIE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Israel's response to Palestinian violence after a pullout from the Gaza Strip would be even harsher than it is now, Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon said Tuesday.

Interviewed on Israel's Channel 10 television for Israel's independence day, Sharon defended his "unilateral disengagement" plan, including a pullout from the Gaza Strip. Members of his Likud Party will vote on the plan in a referendum on May 2.

After a pullout, Palestinians could no longer explain violence by saying that Israel was occupying their land, Sharon said, "and Israel's responses [to violence] would be much harsher."

He refused to give specifics beyond noting that Israel is already taking stiff measures, an apparent reference to the killing of Hamas founder Sheikh Ahmed Yassin on March 22 and his successor, Abdel Aziz Rantisi, three weeks later.

In Gaza Tuesday, tens of thousands of Israelis streamed to Gush Katif, a bloc of Israeli settlements, to celebrate Israel's independence day and protest Sharon's pullout plan.

Also in Gaza, an unusual confrontation late Monday resulted in the deaths of three — a Hamas militant and two armed men who tried to steal the militant's explosives, according to Hamas and Palestinian security officials.

Hamas said the two gunmen were collaborators with Israeli intelligence, while Palestinian security officials said they were criminals who were involved in a car-theft ring that brought stolen vehicles from Israel to Gaza.

Hamas said the bomber was on his way to try to infiltrate Israel, accompanied by another Hamas member and a guide, when they were stopped by the armed men.

The robbers forced the bomber to lie on the ground and tried to steal the bomb, but the militant detonated it, killing all three. The other Hamas man and the guide escaped.

There have been cases of rival groups stealing each other's explosives, but no group claimed the two gunmen. Their families did not go to the hospital to retrieve the bodies, indicating that the two were not militants, who are revered in Palestinian society.

A Hamas official said that

Ariel Sharon
Israeli prime minister

whatever their intention, the two should be considered agents of Israel. "Anyone who tries to stop a fighter from doing his work is a collaborator," he said, speaking on the condition of anonymity.

In the northern West Bank, Israeli troops raided the Tulkarim refugee camp with armored personnel carriers early Tuesday and conducted house-to-house searches. Soldiers exchanged fire with Palestinian gunmen, killing two and seriously wounding a third.

Israeli military officials said one of the dead was Ashraf Nafa, 21, the Hamas leader in Tulkarim. The other was Amjad Amra, 21, from the Islamic Jihad group. The officials, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said both had links to Lebanese Hezbollah guerrillas and planned attacks against Israelis.

Syrian forces clash with 'terrorist band'

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Gunmen attacked a former U.N. office in a diplomatic quarter of Damascus, setting off a battle with police that pelted nearby buildings with bullets and grenades.

The fighting killed two attackers, a policeman, and a civilian, the government said.

Syria has not seen such violence since the 1980s, when the government put down an insurgency by Islamic militants.

The vacant building was formerly occupied by the U.N. Disengagement Observer Force, which oversees an agreement between Israeli and Syrian forces in the Golan Heights. It was extensively damaged by fire during the gun battle.

"Unidentified terrorists attacked a U.N. office building in Damascus, and this office is surrounded by many embassies as well," Syria's ambassador to Washington, Imad Moustapha, said in a telephone interview from Washington.

He said it was too early to know the motivation of the attackers or whether they were Islamist.

Aid groups: N. Korean victims need medicine

BEIJING (AP) — Victims of a North Korean train explosion, their skin charred and faces blackened by chemical burns, are wasting away in hospitals with little medicine, aid workers said Tuesday in a plea for more help.

But North Korea rejected doctors from rival South Korea, the Seoul government said.

The North said it would, however, accept cement and diesel fuel from South Korea. It estimated property damage at $356 million in the city of Ryongchon, where it said last week's explosion was equal to 100 one-ton bombs.

The official North Korean news agency KCNA said the blast destroyed at least 8,100 homes and more than 30 public buildings.

International aid agencies have not put a price tag on reconstruction. The North's damage estimate is far above what donors have promised, fueling speculation that Pyongyang is trying to gain as much aid as possible.

"Aside from the reconstruction operations, North Korea is generally facing serious economic problems," said Koh Yu-hwan, a South Korean expert on the North. "Through this incident, it probably ... hopes to get assistance."

The death toll from Thursday's blast stood at 161, including 76 children from one destroyed school. More than 1,300 people were injured and many more were left homeless, aid agencies said.

The Fog of War

When: Today, 9 p.m.
Where: Bijou ★★★★ out of ★★★★★

If you can imagine Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld sitting in front of a camera truthfully answering questions regarding the U.S. involvement in Iraq, then you can begin to envision the magnitude of the brilliant documentary The Fog of War; one of the most important films to be released in years.

Fog focuses on more than 20 hours of interviews with Robert McNamara, the secretary of Defense under both John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson. The film is arranged around 11 "lessons" of war that the 85 year-old McNamara has learned through his experiences with World War II, the Cold War, and the Vietnam War. What McNamara brings to the film is not firsthand grunt experience of war; it is instead the knowledge to recount the thinking and planning that went into the wars of the 20th century.

The greatest quality that he possesses is his candid speech and truthful disposition. Now far removed from the Washington politics that he built much of his life around, McNamara is able to reflect on the accomplishments and the mistakes during his time in office. He recounts how close the United States truly was to nuclear war with the Soviets (a visit in 1995 to Cuba and a meeting with Fidel Castro affirmed that the Cubans did have Soviet missiles pointed at the United States) and how the Vietnam War might not have escalated had Kennedy not been shot. We believe McNamara because we feel that this may be the last time the man, who has been demonized as a warmonger, has the opportunity to address the American public with the insider's view of the turbulent decades of the '50s and '60s.

While some directors may have made The Fog of War a gloss piece, Errol Morris is intent on letting McNamara speak for himself and answer all the tough questions. As he did with his at-times-brilliant Mr. Death, Morris refuses to allow his direction to alter the film's course. Unlike Michael Moore, whose antics are sometimes abrasive and discourteous, Morris remains out of the shot, allowing McNamara to answer for his own actions without guidance. Morris has reached a level of documentary with Fog that is worthy of being called art, and his hard work and determination leave an indelible mark on the screen.

Although overt references to the present conflict in Iraq aren't present in Fog, similarities abound. McNamara, in historical footage, descends from an airplane and recounts that the Americans are trying to win the "hearts and minds" of the Vietnamese in much the same way that George W. Bush said Americans would win over the hearts and minds of the people of Iraq. Morris is not so much making an antiwar statement as much as he is asking our present administration and viewing public to learn from the mistakes of our past in order to prevent making them in the future. The film itself is like a textbook on the politics of war and could easily be included in a 20th-century politics course at any university in the country.

The title The Fog of War comes from an old Chinese saying noting that war is so complex and convoluted that it is difficult to ever make sense of it.

Although McNamara may not have all the answers, he does offer the truth, and in this day of political fabrication and falsehoods, the truth is the film's greatest accomplishment.

Billy Joel's house call

BAYVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — A 93-year-old woman whose house was damaged when Billy Joel slammed into it with his car had never heard of the Long Island singer until the accident, but now she expects him to pay for repairs.

Maria Dono of Bayville returned from a shopping trip Sunday afternoon to find Joel speaking with police outside her house.

"He hit my bushes and the wall. He'd better come fix it," Maria Dono told the New York Post for its Tuesday editions. "I'm sure he has money."

Claire Mercuri, a spokeswoman for Joel, said the 54-year-old singer's "main concern" was to repair the damage.

"He's taken immediate steps to make sure it's repaired as quickly as possible," Mercuri told the Post.

Joel had been driving on Bayville Avenue when his 1967 Citroën skidded on the wet road and hit Dono's house. There was no evidence of alcohol or drug involvement, and Joel is not suspected of any crime, Nassau County police said.

Duke's Deng considers NBA draft

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Duke freshman Luol Deng has made himself available for the NBA draft but is not ruling out a return to school.

Deng, who led the Blue Devils to the Final Four, will not hire an agent for now, keeping open the option of returning for his sophomore season. He has until June 17 to remove his name from consideration and retain his college eligibility.

The 6-8 forward issued a statement Tuesday but was not available for comment.

Duke Sports Information Director Jon Jackson said Deng likely would not comment on the issue until after he has decided whether to return to Durham in the fall.

"The opportunity to pursue a career in professional basketball has been a dream of mine," Deng said in his statement. "With help from my family and coaches, I will continue to gather information to make the best possible decision regarding my future."

Deng, a native of Sudan who came to the United States from England, had an impressive freshman season, averaging 15 points and seven rebounds. Deng was the MVP of the Atlanta Regional and led Duke in scoring in its final three games, including 16 points in the 79-78 loss to Connecticut in the national semifinals.

NBA

James, Anthony, Wade lead rookies

NEW YORK (AP) — LeBron James, Carmelo Anthony, and Dwyane Wade were unanimous members of the NBA All-Rookie Team announced Tuesday.

Chris Bosh and Kirk Hinrich also made the first team in voting by the league's 29 head coaches.

James won all six Rookie of the Month awards in the Eastern Conference this season; Anthony won all six in the West.

James, taken No. 1 overall in last year's draft by the Cleveland Cavaliers, is just the third rookie to average at least 20 points, five rebounds, and five assists (Oscar Robertson and Michael Jordan are the others). He won the Rookie of the Year award last week.

Anthony led all rookies in scoring average at 21 points and helped the Denver Nuggets reach the playoffs for the first time since 1995.

The second team members were Dallas' Josh Howard and Marquis Daniels, Milwaukee's T.J. Ford, Miami's Udonis Haslem, and Washington's Jarvis Hayes.

TRIAL

Deliberations begin in Williams trial

SOMERVILLE, N.J. (AP) — A jury began deliberating Tuesday in the case against Jayson Williams, the former NBA player accused of manslaughter in the shotgun slaying of a limousine driver.

The jury got the case after three months of trial, 43 witnesses, and widely divergent versions of what happened the night in 2002 when Costas "Gus" Christofi was killed.

Christofi, 55, was killed in Williams' bedroom while the former New Jersey Nets player was giving friends and members of the Harlem Globetrotters a tour of his mansion. Williams was playing with one of his shotguns when it went off.

Chris Doyle didn't run a single 40-yard dash for NFL scouts. He didn't go through bench press tests, personality interviews, or footwork drills.

But talk to some of the 12 ex-Hawkeyes now headed to the NFL, and they'll tell you that Doyle's strength and conditioning coach is one of the biggest reasons they'll continue their careers on Sundays this fall.

The most notable, of course, is offensive tackle Robert Gallery, taken by the Oakland Raiders with the second overall pick in the April 24 draft. The Masonville native arrived in Iowa City five years ago as a 240-pound tight end, but under Doyle's regimented conditioning, lifting, and nutrition program, Gallery bulked up to 323 pounds without sacrificing speed and quickness. That combination of size and speed made Gallery one of the most highly touted offensive line prospects in years.

Not surprisingly, the future Raider can't help but smile when he talks about the man behind "The Mountain."

"He's become a great friend to me," said the 6-7 Gallery. "He's a guy you can sit around and drink a beer with — you know, a guy who really cares about you and isn't afraid to show it."

While Gallery was a top-10 lock from the moment the season ended, several of his less highly regarded teammates had a daunting schedule of workouts to prepare for the NFL combine in February and Iowa's pro days (in which scouts visit Iowa City

Iowa women's golfer Liz Bennett practices her chip shot at Finkbine Golf Course on Tuesday afternoon. Bennett, a native of England, is leading the Hawkeyes in scoring for the second-consecutive year.

The new, bent grass at the Iowa's Finkbine Golf Course will be thoroughly broken in this summer following an extended off-season hiatus. Although many players on the improving women's golf team will make frequent visits to their refurbished home course, the leader of the Hawkeye squad will spend her "off-season" playing in numerous European tournaments.

Liz Bennett, a native of Sway Hampshire, England, finished her third Hawkeye campaign April 23-24 in Columbus, Ohio. Although Iowa's eighth-place finish at the season-ending Big Ten Tournament wasn't the finale Bennett or coach Bobbe Carney were hoping for, Iowa's improvement from the fall to spring seasons has given the team a push into summer like a gale-force wind.

"It's really encouraging that we were better in the spring than we were in the fall," Carney said. "It's the opposite of what most teams do."

She attributed the improvement to a renewed sense of focus and a simple team goal — to constantly improve — that unified her squad. Iowa was around No. 96 or 98 nationally after the fall season, she said. And now, following the six-tournament spring season, the Hawkeyes are up to No. 75. To qualify for the NCAA regionals, the team needs to improve to 60, which is its goal for next year.

ELI MANNING, I HOPE YOU FAIL.

Just when I thought I couldn't despise New York sports franchises any more, along you come, showing in front of a live television audience that you are the epitome of a selfish, cocky athlete.

On a day celebrating the transition of you and your peers from boys to men, you remained a boy. We all saw you halfway roll your eyes as you were selected No. 1 overall by the San Diego Chargers in the NFL draft.

To the other 254 draftees, these two days were a dream come true. To you, it seemed as if Archie asked you to go mow the lawn. But then three picks later, you, and Daddy, and big brother Peyton got what you all wanted — a trade to the New York Giants.

No way were you going to make millions in year-round 80-degree weather on a team that didn't make the playoffs last year. You wanted to go to the Big Apple to be a contender, right? Because the Giants made the playoffs last year, right? Oh, they didn't?

Did it have anything to do with the huge market that NYC brings to the table? No, you just wanted to play football, right? Is that why you threatened to go to law school if you had to throw for the Chargers?

It's just sad what professional athletes can get away with. You think if any regular Joe shows up for work on the first day rolling his eyes because he doesn't like the assignment, he can run to Daddy and make it all better?

Not only that, your presence caused the coming absence of Kerry Collins, a nine-year proven veteran who took the Giants to the Super Bowl in 2000, and you already snagged your LONDON — For the first time, the International Olympic Committee has taken out cancellation insurance on the Olympics: a $170 million policy to cover the risk of the Athens Games being called off because of war, terrorism, earthquakes, or flooding.

The policy is not to compensate individual victims of any disaster but to guarantee that the IOC and national committees and sports federations have enough money to continue operations.

The Athens Olympics, the first Summer Games since the 9/11 terror attacks, will be the most heavily guarded in history. The security budget is nearing $1 billion — more than three times the amount spent on protecting the 2000 Sydney Games.

IOC President Jacques Rogge told the Associated Press on Tuesday that coverage for full and partial cancellation of the Aug. 13-29 games had been signed with a London-based syndicate of insurance companies.

The IOC is paying approximately $6.8 million for the policy; the syndicate is led by New York-based insurance giant AIG, two Olympic sources, speaking on the condition of anonymity, told AP. AIG had no immediate comment.

The contingency policy covers a "whole range of issues such as terrorism, earthquake, flooding, landslides — things such as that," Rogge said by phone from Lausanne, Switzerland.

He said the move represents "standard prudent judgment" and does not reflect any lack of confidence in the Athens Games, which have been troubled by construction delays and security worries.

IOC Finance Chairman Richard Carrion said the scenario of Olympic venues not being ready on time is not covered by the policy, nor is the possibility of teams not showing for the games.

The Athens policy also protects the Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Tommy Maddox and coach Bill Cowher react to the Cincinnati Bengals scoring a game-winning touchdown in the final seconds on Nov. 30, 2003. The 2002 NFL comeback player of the year, Maddox met with Cowher on Tuesday to talk about the Steelers pick of another quarterback in the NFL draft.

With the addition of Ben Roethlisberger at quarterback, Tommy Maddox reconsiders his position with the Pittsburgh Steelers

BY ALAN ROBINSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PITTSBURGH — An angry Tommy Maddox met Tuesday with Steelers coach Bill Cowher, presumably to discuss the team's use of a first-round draft pick on quarterback Ben Roethlisberger.

Maddox, Pittsburgh's starting quarterback for the past two seasons, left the Steelers' training complex without talking to reporters; there was no word on what they talked about.

The meeting came three days after the Steelers added Roethlisberger, the only quarterback they have drafted on the first round since 1981. Roethlisberger is expected to become the starter by the 2005 season.

Maddox initially planned to talk to Cowher on Monday, but told his agent he was too upset to meet then. He also wanted to talk to Steelers Chairman Dan Rooney or President Art Rooney II about his contract situation, but it is believed Tuesday's meeting was only with Cowher.

Maddox, the 2002 NFL comeback player of the year, is upset because the Steelers indicated to him before the draft they would choose a right tackle and not a quarterback.

Maddox also expected the team would renegotiate his $750,000 salary — the lowest for an NFL veteran starting quarterback, but he now realizes the addition of Roethlisberger may change that.

With the Steelers already close to the NFL's salary cap and Roethlisberger all but certain to get the richest rookie contract in their history, it is unlikely they can pay Maddox more money.

For now, the Steelers plan to go into the season with Maddox as the starter, though Cowher has not ruled out Roethlisberger starting sometime this season.

However, some scouts expect Roethlisberger may take longer to become a starter than either the Giants' Eli Manning or the Chargers' Philip Rivers, the quarterbacks drafted ahead of him.

Despite Maddox's unhappiness, Cowher said he doesn't expect Roethlisberger's presence to affect how Maddox plays or practices. Wide receiver Plaxico Burress also expects Maddox to respond to the competition.

"I've been playing with him for two years now, and I pretty much know he'll step up and defend his position," Burress said.

The Steelers have not said what they would do if Maddox, who will be 33 in September, asks to be released to pursue a job with another team. With nearly every NFL team now set at quarterback in advance of training camp, Maddox may not be able to find a team that would let him compete to start.

Even if the Maddox goes into the Steelers' training camp in late July as the starter, Cowher will not promise there won't be a training-camp competition.

GOLF

British Open still is big money
LONDON (AP) — The oldest championship in golf is now the richest major, thanks to a modest increase in prize money at the British Open coupled with a higher exchange rate.
The Royal & Ancient Golf Club said the purse would be $7,152,000, with nearly $1.3 million going to the winner. But that's only if the exchange rate for the British pound — at $1.788 on Tuesday — remains the same. The purse is only 100,000 pounds higher than the 2003 British Open, but the exchange rate was about $1.60 last summer. "We have increased the prize money in line with inflation, and this again keeps the Open purse highly competitive," Royal & Ancient secretary Peter Dawson said.

The Masters had a record $6.5 million purse this year. The U.S. Open and PGA Championship have not announced their purses, although they were $6 million last year, and the U.S. Open is not likely to raise its purse more than $500,000.
The British Open will be played July 15-18 at Royal Troon, where Justin Leonard won in 1997. Leonard won 250,000 pounds that year from a total purse of 1.6 million pounds.

O'Neal and others still unable to commit to Olympic team

BY CHRIS SHERIDAN

Shaquille O'Neal shook his head, frowned slightly and shrugged when asked whether he'll play at the Athens Olympics.

"I'm still not sure," the Los Angeles Lakers' center said.

He's not the only one.

There are more questions than answers right now for the USA Basketball selection committee, with only six players considered locks to show up in Greece: Jermaine O'Neal, Tim Duncan, Allen Iverson, Tracy McGrady, Mike Bibby, and Richard Jefferson.

Among those wavering are Jason Kidd, Karl Malone, Elton Brand, Ray Allen, and Kevin Garnett.

Vince Carter already ruled himself out, and Kobe Bryant's availability hinges on the schedule for his sexual assault trial in Colorado.

"It's not troubling, but it is what it is," Stu Jackson, the chairman of the USA Basketball selection committee, said on Tuesday. "In a perfect world, we'd like to have a roster in place by May 1. But given the circumstances, that seems unlikely."

Among the reasons for the hedging are nagging injuries, fears of terrorism, and family plans, including a wedding and a birth.

Shaquille O'Neal said his participation in the Aug. 13-29 Olympics will depend largely on how far the Lakers advance in the NBA playoffs, and Minnesota's Garnett sent a similar message to USA Basketball officials.

Bryant, O'Neal's teammate with the Lakers, is accused of sexually assaulting a hotel employee in Colorado. He did not have to surrender his passport when he posted bail, with the only requirement on overseas travel being that he inform the court.

The American team will hold training camp in Florida in late July before traveling to three cities — Cologne, Belgrade, and Istanbul — for pre-Olympic exhibitions.

"You'd better be ready to play 8-on-5 in Belgrade," quipped Kidd, counting the two referees and the crowd as the three extra opponents.

The Nets' All-Star point guard has said his participation will depend on his left knee, which could require surgery after the NBA playoffs. Malone and Brand also have injury concerns, and Malone has indicated he's not enthusiastic about traveling to cities where anti-American sentiment has grown.

"The players are definitely concerned about it," Jermaine O'Neal said. "It definitely sits on your mind. Every day you've got TV, and you see how the terrorists are trying to figure out ways to be effective."

Houston Rockets center Yao Ming, who will play for China, shrugged off a question Sunday about security concerns in Athens, implying he's satisfied with arrangements at the athletes' village.

The U.S. team, citing logistical reasons, will use Olympic housing being provided on cruise ships in Piraeus harbor.

Allen wasn't exactly thrilled when he heard that news.

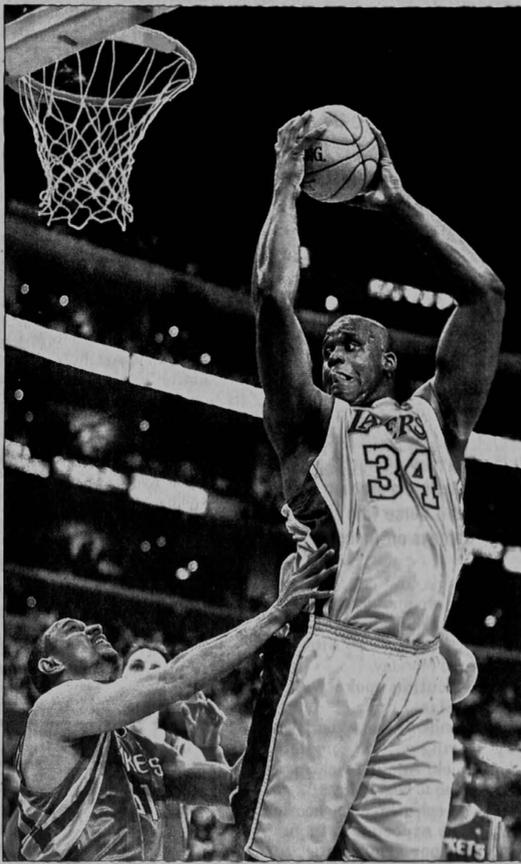

"Sure, I have concerns," Allen said earlier this year. "The walls have been penetrated. As Americans, we never thought they could get through with a suicide bomb. That's something we have to concern ourselves with now, at all the venues."

Allen, expecting a child in September, has since said he is strongly considering relinquishing his roster spot. That would deprive the Americans of their best pure outside shooter.

Kidd is the U.S. team's best point guard, and Shaquille O'Neal is the world's most dominant center. The absence of Garnett, Brand, and Malone would leave a void at power forward, and not having Bryant would subtract the game's most dynamic player.

American teams are 109-2 in the Olympics, with losses in 1972 and 1988.

These days, the level of competition no longer tilts heavily toward the Americans — even at full strength. A U.S. team of NBA players lost to Argentina, Yugoslavia, and Spain at the 2002 World Championships, and the American team that won the Olympic gold medal in Sydney needed a last-second miss by Lithuania to survive its semifinal game.

Bledsoe re-signs with the Bills

ASSOCIATED PRESS

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Drew Bledsoe renegotiated his contract with the Bills on Tuesday, giving Buffalo nearly $4 million in salary cap relief.

The new three-year deal, which includes some incentive bonuses, will replace the old contract the Bills assumed when they acquired Bledsoe from New England in 2002. That original deal had seven years remaining on it, including a $7 million bonus due Bledsoe in November.

The Bills will no longer have to pay that bonus.

"Drew made some concessions for this year and the next couple of years," Bills president Tom Donahoe said. "It's not just about shuffling money."

The 11-year veteran was scheduled to make a base salary of $5.9 million this season, a figure that would balloon to $12 million in 2008.

"This is something I'm really excited about," Bledsoe said on a conference call Tuesday. "At this point in my life, having a little extra money isn't going to make a big change in my life. This allows us to have stability, both personally and within the organization."

Bledsoe admitted he was hesitant to restructure the original deal, saying he was initially willing to risk being cut two months into the season if he wasn't performing.

But after realizing the potential negativity of the $7 million bonus looming over the organization throughout the summer and into the fall, Bledsoe sought out Donahoe.

"I know it would have been a distraction, one way or the other," Bledsoe said. "I've learned over my career that the more you can alleviate distractions, the better off you are."

The renegotiation comes after Buffalo traded for a first-round pick in the NFL draft on April 24 to select Tulane quarterback J.P. Losman.

The team hopes to groom Losman as Bledsoe's successor.

Besides dealing away their first-round pick next year, the Bills also sent two a second- and fifth-round pick in last weekend's draft to Dallas for the Cowboys' No. 22 overall pick.

"I'll do everything I can to teach him and help him along and help him develop as a quarterback," Bledsoe said about Losman. "There certainly won't be any information withheld from him by me."

Despite selecting Losman, the Bills maintained Bledsoe is their starter heading into next season.

"We still have great confidence in Drew, and we've told Drew that," Donahoe said. "But we have to prepare for tomorrow."

Bledsoe was supposed to be the team's quarterback for the long-term future when Buffalo acquired him from New England. He was strong in his first season in Buffalo, setting 10 franchise passing records and helping the Bills to an 8-8 finish — a big turnaround for a team that won only three games in 2001.

"This is something I'm really excited about. At this point in my life, having a little extra money isn't going to make a big change in my life. This allows us to have stability, both personally and within the organization."

NCAA puts Auburn men's hoops on two years' probation

fending off accusations of providing money and cars to prospects, Auburn already Cut one scholarship for the 2004-05 season

BY JOHN ZENOR
ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUBURN, Ala. — Auburn's basketball program was put on two years' probation on Tuesday, with the NCAA cutting one scholarship but clearing the university of major rules violations.

Auburn was exonerated of accusations involving large sums of money and expensive cars given to high-school prospects Chadd Moore and Jackie Butler. But the NCAA found that an AAU coach, Mark Komara, was acting as a representative of Auburn when arranged to wire $3,125 for Butler and get a 1996 Dodge Stratus for Moore.

Komara is believed to be the first summer-league basketball coach designated a representative of a school, said Thomas Yeager, the chairman of the NCAA's Division I Committee on Infractions.

The university, which denied the major accusations, already had imposed its own penalties, including the loss of one scholarship for the 2004-05 season. The NCAA cut that scholarship for 2005-06, too, but did not ban postseason play or televised games.

"I think it's always disappointing to be called to task by any organization in which you have violated established regulations," said Auburn interim President Ed Richardson. "But I think that it was clearly identified that the sanctions that were provided, we feel were justified."

Hal Baird, the athletics assistant to the president, said the sanctions were severe enough to invoke a clause that adds an eighth year to the contract of new coach Jeff Lebo.

The NCAA cleared Auburn assistant coach Shannon Weaver of offering $50,000 and a car to Moore's mother. Auburn also was found innocent on charges of offering Butler $70,000 and a car worth more than $40,000.

"The committee found that much of the information associated with these allegations was in conflict and thus was not sufficient to support findings," Yeager said.

Neither player made official visits to Auburn, and the university had maintained that neither was offered a scholarship. Both were sophomores at the time of the alleged offers.

Auburn provided records to the NCAA that the university maintains show Weaver was actually under the care of a dentist in Scottsboro, Ala., when he allegedly made the offer to Moore's mother, Clara Moore.

Coach Cliff Ellis, who was not implicated by the NCAA, was fired March 18 and replaced by former Chattanooga coach Lebo. Moore and Butler played summer ball for Komara, who the NCAA alleged was a representative of Auburn and was involved in improper recruitment.

Yeager said there was ample evidence to show Auburn coaches' contact with Komara surpassed their relationships with others involved in recruiting. Among the examples he cited were telephone records showing Auburn coaches made more than 1,100 calls to Komara and fewer than 200 to others involved with recruiting. Yeager also said Auburn coaches helped make hotel and airline reservations that Komara paid for.

Although the NCAA acknowledges high-school and summer-league coaches play a special role in college recruiting, Yeager said, Komara's actions exceeded that role.

Mike Walker, a Mississippi sports agent, made the initial allegations in March 2001.

Bryant hearings focus on accuser's history

BY JON SARCHÉ
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

EAGLE, Colo. — A nurse who examined the alleged victim in the sexual assault case against Kobe Bryant was questioned by attorneys behind closed doors for more than three hours Tuesday.

The woman, a sexual-assault nurse at Valley View Hospital, was preceded on the witness stand by three young men whose identities were not known.

Their testimony could play a major role. Judge Terry Ruckriegle is using the hearing to decide whether the sexual history of the 19-year-old accuser can be used against her at the NBA star's trial.

The day ended with arguments on a defense motion to suppress certain evidence. More arguments were expected Wednesday on the evidence question and on the relevance of the alleged victim's sexual history, state courts spokeswoman Karen Salaz said.

The defense contends injuries found on the woman could have resulted from sex with numerous partners before and after her encounter with Bryant, and they want to make those arguments to a jury.

The prosecution says the woman's sex life is irrelevant in determining whether she was raped. Her attorney, John Clune, has denied she had a sexual partner after Bryant and before she went to police.

Scott Robinson, a Denver defense attorney who is following the case, said the woman's comments to the nurse during the exam would not carry medical confidentiality protections because it involved allegations of a crime.

Ed Andriesci/Associated Press

L.A. Lakers' NBA star Kobe Bryant passes through security accompanied by attorney Pamela Mackey before a pretrial hearing on Tuesday in Eagle Co. The sexual-assault nurse who examined the alleged victim was questioned by attorneys on Tuesday.

"I think [the defense wants] to find out everything the young woman told the nurse and utilize every possible scrap of physical evidence to support its arguments," Robinson said.

Ruckriegle has already barred defense access to the woman's medical records, though experts say witnesses will likely be called to discuss her purported suicide attempts and anti-depressant use.

Bryant has said he had consensual sex with the woman last June at the Vail-area resort where she worked. If convicted of felony sexual assault, the 25-year-old Los Angeles Lakers' star faces four years to life in prison or 20 years to life on probation.

More than two dozen witnesses, including the accuser, former boyfriends and college roommates, have already testified in private during hearings this spring. Nine defense witnesses appeared Monday.

Prosecution spokeswoman Krista Flannigan said Tuesday it was unlikely the sexual history hearing will be completed this week. Another hearing is scheduled to begin May 10.

This week's three-day hearing was also expected to include closed-door arguments on a defense motion to have certain evidence thrown out on grounds it was gathered illegally.

The evidence includes some of Bryant's statements to investigators, a T-shirt stained with the woman's blood and a rape kit performed on Bryant at the hospital in Glenwood Springs.

Justice Department turns over BALCO documents

BY ROB GLOSTER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — A Senate committee obtained secret documents that could help U.S. Olympic officials keep drug cheaters out of the Athens Games.

The Justice Department's decision to turn over the materials subpoenaed by the Commerce Committee was considered virtually unprecedented during a federal investigation.

Still, it's unclear whether anti-doping authorities will have access to the documents, obtained during a grand-jury probe of an alleged steroid-distribution ring.

The Commerce Committee, chaired by Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., had sought "documents relating to U.S. amateur athletes' alleged purchase of banned performance-enhancing substances from the Bay Area Laboratory Co-Operative [known as BALCO] and their possible use of such substances."

U.S. Olympic officials hope to use such documents to open their own cases against admitted drug cheaters — invoking a U.S. Anti-Doping Agency rule barring athletes who acknowledge the use of steroids and other banned substances.

It was not immediately clear whether the documents include grand jury testimony. Dozens of elite athletes, including track star Marion Jones, were asked by the federal grand jury in San Francisco about steroids.

Because grand jury proceedings are secret, it's unclear whether McCain's committee could give the U.S. Olympic Committee or the anti-doping agency access to such material. McCain has promised to keep the material secret, but he also has vowed to use the documents to make sure the U.S. team is drug-free for the Athens Games.

Legal scholars said Tuesday they were shocked the documents had been turned over to McCain's committee in the middle of an investigation, and they said the law is murky on whether such material can be passed on to the USOC or the anti-doping agency.

Rory Little, a Hastings College of the Law professor and a former federal prosecutor, said, "It's a very large question what they can do with grand-jury material once they have it."

Legal experts speculated that McCain's committee could publish a report, perhaps under seal, and forward it to the USOC or the anti-doping agency.

Nicholas Wynia/The Daily Iowan

Robert Gallery and Grant Steen talk as Iowa strength and conditioning coach Chris Doyle oversees their workout on Sept. 3 in the Jacobsen Building. Gallery signed with the Oakland Raiders, while Steen signed as a free agent for the New England Patriots.

Doyle's commitment is rare

to put prospects through the paces) in March.

Doyle and his staff came through, preparing the players with a regimen that he described to The Daily Iowan as "very specific to the pre-draft period, from pre-combine prep to pre-interview prep."

This year's draft was Doyle's fifth at Iowa, and he said each year of experience gives his staff and the players a better notion of what's coming.

"It's like they give you a take-home test," Doyle said, explaining the pre-draft approach. "You know the questions, you just have to come up with the answers."

Such commitment to players technically no longer on the team is rare, said offensive tackle Jared Clauss, who was taken in the seventh round by the Tennessee Titans.

"To tell you the truth, we take it for granted," he said. "Going to the combine, going to different places, and talking to guys from around the country, this doesn't happen everywhere. People charge their seniors to work out. It's understandable why they [charge], they're taking time out of their job to do it, but we really have it good here. We really have an unselfish group of coaches who care about us and take care of us."

Doyle, for his part, sees working with ex-Hawkeyes as the least he can do.

"These guys have given everything for four or five years to Iowa football, and if some extra effort on our part can get them to the next level, that's part of our job," he said. "I don't want to speak for how other people do things, but to turn your back on someone like that is embarrassing."

"We feel a sincere obligation to these guys."

Clauss was one of more than a dozen seniors who woke up at 9 a.m. five days a week to work with Doyle and his staff, looking to add an extra five pounds or shaving a tenth of a second off a 40 time. Such improvements might catch the eye of a scout and move a player up an NFL team's draft board.

"I know the reputation of Coach Doyle and his staff in terms of preparing us for the combine and pro days is very strong," Clauss said. "Teams know that we're going to be ready to run, and they really like coming in here — from what I've heard from some people — and working us out."

But Doyle refused to take credit for his players' success, and if word is out about his work, the Quincy, Mass., native remains the consummate program guy.

"I don't think the reputation of Chris Doyle helps guys," he said. "I think the reputation of Iowa football helps guys. In the draft and free-agent period, teams are beginning to see the value in getting Iowa football players."

Bennett looking for consistency

GOLF

To achieve this, Bennett will focus on her short game while shooting on the other side of the Atlantic.

"I still need to be more consistent," she said in between sips of tomato soup. "There just can't be that one bad round that ruins the tournament."

Two major differences will mark Bennett's summertime training schedule. While her Iowa teammates will enjoy the state-of-the-art bent grass at Finkbine, Bennett will play links-style courses, marked by knee-high grass in the rough off the fairway and shifting, gale-force winds. However, these physical differences in the environment aren't what will make Bennett a better player. The increased competition, both in the number of tournaments and in the ability of the players, are what give her an edge.

"In the Midwest, there aren't as many opportunities to compete in the summer," she said. "In Europe, there are tournaments nearly every weekend."

In at least two of these tournaments, Bennett will encounter a friendly face. The No. 2 golfer on the Hawkeye squad this past season, Laura Holmes, is also a native Briton. The journalism and communications major will also spend the summer abroad, but, unlike Bennett, Holmes will be staying longer and looking for a job.

"When I got done this past weekend, I was a little emotional," said the resident of East Yorkshire, which is a five- or six-hour drive from Sway Hampshire. "The girls on this team have been like my family.

I'll miss them."

Holmes and Bennett agree that a factor in Iowa's spring success was the increased sense of team unity. The two said the confidence the team members had in one another was able to improve their individual performances by taking away stress.

"We had the feeling that if anyone struggled, someone else would be able to make up for it," said Holmes. "Next year, the team will have to fill in my spot and have a strong five or six players for every tournament."

beloved No. 10 jersey away from the punter. THE PUNTER!

I'm glad you got your wish. I hope you can't handle the pressure that New York fans will put on you. I hope you get booed just like Jeter and

A-Rod, not just for my personal satisfaction, but so next year's top selections don't sit there and mope around like you did, knowing that if they whine enough, they can get their wish.

Two-hundred-and-thirty-six picks following Manning's in Madison Square Garden last weekend, tight end Eric Jensen's name was called. A modest Wisconsin native selected from the UI to the St. Louis Rams, Jensen knew the draft was soon coming to an end and anxiously wondered if his dream would come true that day.

That wasn't the only thing on his mind during the process, however.

"I just can't believe that a guy would say 'No' to a team and say, 'No, you're not good enough, I want to go to a better team,'" said Jensen. "If you're that good of a player, why wouldn't you want to go to a team that's not so great and make it great?"

I'm with you, Eric. And Eric Jensen, I hope you succeed.

IOC has approximately $160 million in financial reserves

OLYMPICS

bulk of the 28 international sports federations on the Olympic program and the 202 national Olympic committees sending teams to the games. Many of those organizations rely heavily on games-related revenue.

The policy is meant to ensure that the IOC and Olympic sports bodies can continue to operate for another four-year Olympic cycle if the games are called off.

Rogge said the IOC needs just more than $200 million to keep running in the event of cancellation. The committee already has approximately $160 million in financial reserves.

"We will certainly have the required amount after the successful completion of the Athens Games," Carrion said.

The IOC policy does not cover corporate sponsors or TV networks, which have billions of dollars riding on the games. Many have their own insurance. Host-city organizers also underwrite their own liability coverage.

The IOC said it will also negotiate individual cancellation policies for future Olympics, including the 2006 Winter Games in Turin, Italy, 2008 Summer Games in Beijing, and 2010 Winter Olympics in Vancouver.

Rogge said the IOC began exploring insurance in 2001, but the industry was reluctant to offer terrorism coverage after the 9/11 attacks. The IOC had no coverage for the 2002 Winter Games in Salt Lake City.

Carrion said the IOC considered two other options — taking out a credit line to absorb the bulk of the risk and a combined insurance-credit arrangement for Athens and Beijing. The executive board decided in February to go with the standard contingency insurance.
