LIVING IN THE LAND OF 10,000 HOURS

Agencies see flood of volunteers

BY CHRISTINA ERB

The 10,000 Hours Club's offer to exchange an afternoon may be 2,000 times overbooked. Local community service has flooded local volunteer agencies with applications from students and residents eager to donate time.

The most dramatic increase, perhaps, was seen by Shelter House, 203 N. Gilbert St., one of more than 60 local volunteer organizations offering the same concept.

In February 2003, for instance, the facility heard only 18 volunteer hours, and outreach services overwhelmed Pungo Bay. But in the months following February of this year, the number has more than doubled.

Since then, the agency has seen in person at least 350 people interested in volunteering.

"Volunteers are trained," she said. "Safeguard they can do right now."

"It gives me a chance to be a role model in someone's life, and to see him grow up and change is neat. To be there for him, even if it's not a chance we have to train and give them, too."

UI ups bar in raising funds

BY ALEX LANG

"Raising the bar" and "keeping the donor base growing" are just the reasons for raising the UI's Good Better Iowa campaign, which has raised more than $800 million to $1 billion, officials announced Thursday.

"The year has seen the largest gifts in history for the state of Iowa," UI President David Ward said at a press conference. "This is an unprecedented time of achievement."

"The Good, Better, Iowa" campaign — aimed to exceed $900 million at the close of 2005 — started in 2000. It has raised more than $750 million for need-based aid, scholarships and retaining faculty, and helping to construct new buildings.

Since the original capital campaign started in 1982, it has raised $3.5 billion, which comes after 1999. Skorton stressed, "Private gifts wanted and should not take the place of state appropriations."

Only 22 other universities have surpassed billion-dollar fund raising projects. The UI is the third-coldest to attempt that feat.

Amanda Stymie, the 30,000 Hours volunteer coordinator, said she is eager to reveal people, each one working at the shelter, for their dedication to the Mission. The Mission is a not-for-profit, 501(c)(3) human services organization that relies on volunteers to provide care to those in need.

Elliott cited City Counselor Ross Williams, an executive director of the Center for Community Development, for his support in establishing the Mission. Williams said he was impressed with the Mission's ability to provide care to those in need, and he recommended the Mission as a valuable community resource.

Community leaders, too, said they have been impressed with the Mission's work. City Manager Bob Elliott said, "The Mission is doing a great job of providing care to those in need. We are grateful for their continued support." Mayor John Wells said, "The Mission is an important part of our community, and we are proud to support their work."

Spyware attracting attention

Newest computer security problem comes from downloaded software

BY MATTHEW DALY

WASHINGTON — It's the newest computer-security problem to attract the attention of Congress: spyware, or software designed to collect computer user personal data without their knowledge.

Recently plugged-in users of an online download Internet software, authors of recent information security news sites pop-up advertisements and other software, it often is difficult to uninstall.

Little known to users, spyware can be as subtle as a statement that many consider is the biggest problem for Internet users since e-mail.

The federal government has become responsible for half of all PC crashes and viruses that it has been forced to purchase a multimillion-dollar support system, for computer makers, Internet-service providers, and technicians.

In some cases, it makes a computer unusable.

A laboratory in Washington state found one of its computers had been infected by a virus that may have come from the Internet.

The security experts are warning that hackers might use spyware to steal personal information such as Social Security numbers.

"If we don't do something about this," says one computer virus expert, "we could be looking at a major computer security disaster."
Undermining the war on drug prices

The possibility of losing jobs is one advantage that drug companies are involved in

As the idea of importing drugs from Canada and other nations to reduce the high prescription drug costs in the United States gains support, the Bush administration has shown support for pharmaceutical companies, seeking to increase the flow of foreign drugs. The Bush administration has used rhetoric and pressure to promote the idea of importing drugs, claiming that it will help reduce costs and improve access to medications.

The argument presented is that importing drugs will reduce the overall cost of healthcare in the United States, allowing reimporting drugs. Those donations have been a significant source of funds for the Medicare system, and the government has received a large percentage of these funds. The administration's approach is to promote this idea to pharmaceutical companies.

From 1995 through 2000, the GDP and Bush received more than $42 million from drug companies. These contributions seem to have ensured that the Medicare donations will continue and that the administration's approach to pharmaceutical companies will prevail.

NCAA approves academic reforms

"This is the beginning of a sea change in college sports."

— NCAA President Mark Emmert

BY STEVE HERMAN

INDIANAPOLIS — The NCAA approved a sweeping package of academic reforms Thursday that will penalize schools that consistently fail to improve their graduation rates.

It was the latest in a series of legislative maneuvers by NCAA, and different radiations in Division III, but the NCAA has yet to act on legislation. Athletes will have to stay afloat and a substantial number of academic reforms will be made on these reforms. NCAA President Mark Emmert said, "We're on the same page.

This is a previously set legislative target for each school that is being met. The new standards already in practice will make the reforms in place.

The NCAA's most recent version of the reforms was made in 2007.

Another piece of the package, approved last fall, required athletes to complete at least 50 percent of their degree requirements each year to remain eligible. The latest reforms will make the colleges more accountable for ensuring that athletes stay in school.

The graduation rate "cut line" will be the same in all sports.

Reforms that fall below that mark will lose eligibility the following year and the NCAA has yet to act on legislation.

HAWKEYE HISTORY

Basketball team cops with death of Street

In the 100-year history of Iowa basketball, there have been several outstanding players during the time, but many would say the 1910s were the shining time. In 1910, the Hawkeyes were in the process of reconquering the Big Ten and were standing at 4-3 in conference play. The Hawkeyes went on to win the Big Ten title and the NCAA championship, a feat that was not repeated until 1980.

In Chicago, Michigan State coach Bill Ives said the team had been laser-focused during the last two or three weeks. It was a team that had the ability to win the national championship. But the rally for the MSU team happened in the last few games, starting with the victory against Indiana in the NCAA tournament.

The Michigan State team started slowly in the first half against Wisconsin, trailing by 10 points at one point. But the team came back in the second half, led by the three-point shooting of Nick Collison and the scoring of Mateen Cleaves. Michigan State went on to win the game, 58-54, and advance to the NCAA tournament final.

After the game, Ives said, "This is what our team is all about. We were able to bring our best game to the table and win." The team will now face either Arizona or Connecticut in the championship game on Monday.

The Michigan State team has been a consistent performer throughout the season, finishing with a 35-3 record and a Big Ten championship. The team has been led by Collison, who was named the Big Ten Player of the Year, and Cleaves, who was named the Big Ten Freshman of the Year.

The NCAA tournament has been a rollercoaster ride for the Michigan State team, with a few upsets along the way. But the team has been able to stay focused and consistent, and that has been key to their success.

Michigan State fans celebrated their team's victory in the locker room and on the court, with confetti and cheers. The team will now have the opportunity to win the national championship, and many believe they are the favorites to do so.

The championship game will be played on Monday, and the winner will be crowned the national champion. It promises to be an exciting game, with both teams playing at their best.

But for now, the Michigan State team can celebrate their victory and look forward to the championship game on Monday. They have shown that they are a team to be feared, and they will be a force to be reckoned with in the final game.
Jeter homers out of his slump

With the longest hitting streak by a Yankee in 27 years, Jeter ended his 0-for-32 slump with a grand slam.

The last time New York Yankees shortstop Derek Jeter had gone hitless in 32 straight games was 1975, but when he finally broke through with a grand slam against the Oakland Athletics on Thursday night, Jeter didn’t even feel like celebrating.

In New York, a sad-sack, bad ol’ baseball team could be in the last game of the season and a lot of people wouldn’t notice. And Jeter’s hit was an event that could be noticed by those who were in the house and those who were watching on TV. The game was played in front of 22,647 fans at the Oakland Coliseum in Oakland, Calif., and it was a good game.

But if you’re looking for a reason to celebrate, Jeter’s hit was it. He had been on base once before that game, but he had been out for a total of 18 games. That’s a long time.

And when he finally got up there, the crowd was electric. They were cheering for him, and they were cheering for the Yankees. They were ready to see Jeter break his slump.

And he did.

He hit a home run.

And when he hit it, the crowd went nuts.

And when he hit it, Jeter went nuts.

And when he hit it, the Yankees went nuts.

And when he hit it, the entire world went nuts.

Jeter hit a home run.

And when he hit it, the world was saved.

The game was a good one, and the Yankees ended up winning it 5-2. And Jeter had four hits on the night, and he also drove in three runs.

Jeter is now hitting .315 for the season, and he has 10 home runs and 24 runs batted in.

But the biggest thing about this game was the fact that Jeter finally broke his slump. And that’s the real reason to celebrate.

Jeter is a great player, and he’s a great hitter. But he’s also a great person, and he’s a great teammate.

And when he finally did break his slump, the world was a better place.

So let’s all celebrate.

Jeter broke his slump.

And that’s something to cheer about.

Redskins likely to set payroll record

With the Redskins estimated total payroll between $110 and $120 million, the Houston Texans have the next highest payroll.

By NUNO DEMASIO

The Washington Redskins are likely to set a record in payroll in NFL history, with a projected figure between $110 million and $120 million, according to sources familiar with the team’s negotiations.

The league doesn’t release financial information of its 32 teams. During one of the most turbulent drafts in recent years, the Redskins would have the league’s highest payroll, based on new signings, releases, restructured contracts, etc., sources said.

Redskins’ negotiations with free agents are well advanced.
