More than 600 members of the UI's 10,000 Hours Project gather at IMU Main Lounge on Sunday to listen to popular musician Ben Folds and celebrate the completion of a project aimed at bettering Iowa City and its residents.

Wearing a bright blue 10,000 Hours show T-shirt, UI junior Mark Kresowik stood outside the IMU Main Lounge on Sunday night, handing out high fives and bouncing with excitement.

The co-director of volunteers for the 10,000 Hours Project grinned as over more than 600 UI students and community members passed through shimmering streamers to be serenaded by musician Ben Folds. For Kresowik and other participants, this was the culmination of more than year of raising awareness about volunteering.

"When you have worked on something for this long — the most important thing you have done in your entire life — to see it finished, it's amazing," he said.

Each one of the enthusiastic people at the event had spent the past few months volunteering for at least 10 hours at local organizations to add to the group's goal of 10,000 hours of community service. After the opening band Strange Attraction performed, project co-director Jack Pruski announced that the volunteers exceeded this goal, with more than 13,752 hours logged.

The crowd pressed forward shortly after, clapping and laughing along with Folds' lyrics. The musician pounded out songs on his piano, pausing to tell the audience how glad he was to be a part of the project.

"Iowa City — I am going to rock this bitch for lots of people who worked really hard," he said.

UI sophomore Alison La Rocque was one of those fans. She and three of her friends are continuing their pledge to volunteer by making an informational video for nonprofit organization Table to Table. They had no previous experience producing videos, but they were inspired to donate their time after hearing about 10,000 Hours.

"[The 10,000 Hours show] was my main motivation," she said.

"You really feel good about what you are doing."

With more than 60 community organizations involved in the project and $60,000 raised in grant money, the show was seen as a success by those involved, said Laurie Haag, a program developer for the Women's Resource and Action Center, who served on the project's advisory board.

"I think that volunteering is really an important part of our community," she said.

"Anything that we can do to encourage and reward that spirit is worth the effort."

Fifty volunteers, all under the age of 25, began the project in the fall of 2002. Seven hundred UI students attended three fairs hosted by the group that presented information about local community-service opportunities.

Regent: UI may cut programs

BY CHRISTINA ERB
THE DAILY IOWAN

Bob Downer, the new president pro tem of the state Board of Regents, said on May 1 that the push to shave expenses at Iowa's three state universities will probably force administrators to cut programs with fewer than a dozen students and little promise for growth.

Still, Downer told UI faculty at an American Association of University Professors meeting, the UI's situation — in terms of state support — is far better than budget scenarios at the Universities of Colorado, South Carolina, and Virginia.

"There are numerous mixed signs today in terms of where we are headed, particularly with funding," he said, quickly quelling fears that the

UI professor emeritus, wife found dead

A note found at the scene outlined concerns over the couple's health, authorities said

BY ALEX LANG
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI engineering Professor Emeritus Donald McDonald and his wife, Barbara, were found dead on May 1 in their garage, sitting inside SUV vehicle and holding hands while a compact disc of flute music played.

A hose connected to a second SUV's exhaust pipe filled the car with carbon monoxide, authorities told the Associated Press.

Authorities said a note found at the scene outlined concerns over the couple's health. Johnson County Sheriff's Lt. Steve Hayslett said the incident has not been ruled a suicide, and a decision won't be made until the autopsy report is completed early this week.

Donald McDonald, 72, was diagnosed with prostate cancer and had undergone heart-valve replacement surgery, while his wife suffered from chronic back pain.

He served as a professor in the College of Engineering as an environmental scientist, focusing on microorganisms for 30 years before retiring in the late 1990s.

Police said the two were discovered by Donald McDonald's son-in-law, who visited to borrow something.

"No, I had no inkling [he would do something like that]," said Professor Jerald Schnoor, a colleague of Donald McDonald's in the UI College of Engineering.

Schnoor said he knew McDonald had health problems but thought he had "overcome them." He added that he had not spoken to him in a few months and was unaware of McDonald's current condition.

Barbara McDonald was Donald McDonald's third wife; they had been high-school sweethearts. They started their romance again after Donald McDonald's second wife was dying of cancer and Barbara wrote to offer her condolences.

Schnoor said the two were married approximately 10-15 years ago.

"They were a very loving couple who enjoyed their time together," Schnoor said.

"...He was a well-liked professor. He had a good sense of humor."

Iraqi general will not lead Fallujah Brigade, U.S. says

WASHINGTON POST

FALLUJAH, Iraq — Eleven U.S. service members in Iraq were killed in four separate attacks by insurgents on May 1 and Sunday, including six who died in a mortar attack, the military reported. Meanwhile, the former Iraqi general chosen to head a new force here denied there were any foreign fighters in the city, calling into question his commitment to American military objectives, and a top U.S. commander said later the general would not be allowed to lead the armed men he has already assembled.

Thomas Hamill, an American contractor held hostage since April 9, was recovered Sunday by U.S. troops after apparently escaping from his captors, military officials said. Hamill, a truck driver for a Halliburton Co. subsidiary, approached U.S. soldiers operating near a pipeline in the northern city of Tikrit, where he apparently fled from a building.

In Fallujah, Jassim Mohammed Saleh, the former Iraqi major general entrusted by the Marines with forming a new security force in the violence-wracked city, said in an interview with Reuters news service that "there are no foreign fighters in Fallujah." He also insisted that one-time members of

Army: Prisoner abuse not broad

BY ROBERT BURNS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A high-level Army investigation of prisoner interrogation techniques in Iraq has found no evidence that abuse by U.S. military police or intelligence officers is widespread, officials said Sunday.

The review continues, however, and the Army has not determined whether all six soldiers charged with abusing Iraqi prisoners will face a military trial.

The investigation, led by officials in the office of the Army's deputy chief of staff for intelligence, is looking broadly at interrogation methods in Iraq. It is not a criminal investigation of the cases that occurred last fall involving the Army Reserve's 372nd Military Police Company, officials said.

Among the most pressing questions is the extent of prisoner abuse and whether it is condoned or encouraged by U.S. military or civilian intelligence officials who have overseen the interrogations.

Brig. Gen. Janis Karpinski, the Army Reserve commander who oversaw the prison system until recently, said in weekend interviews with the New York Times and Washington Post that she knew nothing of the alleged abuse until it was reported. She suggested it may have been encouraged by military intelligence officers, who kept tight control of the cellblock where the abuse occurred.

"I think there are bad people masquerading as soldiers doing bad things to detainees," she said in an interview Sunday evening on ABC News. She said when she first saw the photos of abuse, "I really had to take a couple of seconds because I thought that I might really get sick from it."

Attempts to reach Karpinski, who has returned from Iraq, were unsuccessful Sunday.

Amnesty International, the London-based human-rights group, said it has uncovered a "pattern of torture" of Iraqi prisoners by coalition troops. The group called for an independent investigation into the claims of abuse and said it received "scores" of reports of ill treatment of detainees.

Dan Senor, a spokesman for the U.S. occupation authority in Baghdad, said the reported abuse is being aggressively investigated by the military.

"Careers will be ended, and criminal charges are going to be leveled," he told CNN's "Late Edition."

Gen. Richard Myers, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said he was confident that the vast majority of American soldiers involved in the Iraqi prison system are acting properly. He said it was clear from the high-level Army investigation under way that abuse is not widespread.

"I would say that categorically," Myers told ABC's "This Week." "There is no, no evidence of systematic abuse in this system at all," including the U.S. military prison system at Guantánamo Bay, Cuba, where approximately 600 suspected terrorists are detained, he said.

"We review all the interrogation methods. Torture is not one of the methods that we're allowed to use and that we use. I mean, it's just not permitted by international law, and we don't use it," Myers said.

The Joint Chiefs chairman said that as soon as the initial allegations came to light, an investigation team was sent to Iraq at the request of Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Wolfowitz. The central focus has been the Abu Ghraib prison west of Baghdad, but Myers said the investigation is looking at prisons throughout Iraq to determine the extent of abusive or illegal handling of prisoners.

Supreme Court set for major decisions

BY CHARLES LANE
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — After hearing the final oral arguments of the term last week, the Supreme Court enters an intense two-month period of opinion-writing that legal analysts expect to produce some of the most momentous legal pronouncements in recent memory — and no one has more at stake in the outcomes than President Bush.

To a significant extent, what the court will be ruling on is the Bush administration's effort to carve out greater presidential power and privilege in the realms of foreign and domestic policy.

That is the theme that unifies cases concerning the administration's executive detention of two U.S. citizens whom the president has declared "enemy combatants," its rejection of federal court jurisdiction over pleas for freedom by suspected terrorists held at the U.S. naval base in Guantánamo Bay, Cuba, and its effort to keep the internal workings of Vice President Dick Cheney's energy task force off-limits to the public.

As such, the cases represent key tests not only of the president's antiterrorism strategy but also of his political standing in an election year. Bush has faced criticism at home and abroad from those who say that his approach to governance is excessively secretive and violates civil liberties.

The terrorism cases alone "are the most monumental cases to confront the court in at least a decade," said Tom Goldstein, a Washington lawyer who frequently argues at the Supreme Court.

In addition, the court will have to work its way through a mountain of other major cases that are not directly related to the war on terrorism but whose cumulative importance will mark this term as an unusually eventful one.

The Bush administration also has a major stake in a California atheist's challenge to the mandatory classroom recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance including the phrase "under God."

The justices will also determine whether disabled people can sue the states for damages when denied access to public buildings, they will rule on patients' right to sue their health insurance companies for damages when denied benefits, and they will decide key questions regarding the scope of the right to remain silent in police custody.

Chief Justice William Rehnquist likes the court to stick to a firm schedule according to which all majority opinions must be circulated to all justices by the beginning of June. Then June remains for the drafting of dissenting opinions and the revision of majorities. The whole process is supposed to be wrapped up by the beginning of July, in time for the court's summer recess.

The result is a constant flurry of work as the justices, aided by their law clerks, endeavor to produce their own assignments and to review a stream of writings flowing out of the other eight chambers in the court.

"The last day of oral arguments is a little like the last day of final exams, and then you wake up the next day and have to grade all the papers," said David Frederick, a former law clerk to the late Justice Byron White.

Meanwhile, the court's normal work of accepting or rejecting appeals petitions and ruling on last-minute applications for stays of execution continues unabated.

For clerks, "the accumulated fatigue that sets in is hard to express unless you've been through it," Frederick said.

In the terrorism cases, which are closely related, the challenge for the court is not only to write opinions that are persuasive in each case but to write opinions that make sense taken together.

Likud Party voters dump Sharon's Gaza plan

BY RAVI NESSMAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Ariel Sharon's Likud Party rejected his plan to pull out of the Gaza Strip and parts of the West Bank in a referendum Sunday, an embarrassing defeat for the premier.

The result, based on partial results, left the future of Sharon's "unilateral disengagement" from the Palestinians in doubt and his leadership in disarray. The outcome could precipitate a major political crisis — a Cabinet reshuffle, a split within the party, or even early elections.

With half the ballots counted, opponents of the plan had 60 percent of the vote, and supporters had 40 percent.

The premier, who had said he considered the polling a vote of confidence in his leadership, said he respected the results but would not resign. Close supporters said disengagement was inevitable, despite the referendum outcome.

Sharon said he would consult with party and government officials on his next steps and suggested he would continue to push ahead with his plan.

"One thing is clear to me: The people of Israel did not want me to sit for four years with my hands folded. I was chosen to find a way to bring this nation the calm, peace and security that it so deserves," he said in a statement.

The White House said it still supports Sharon's withdrawal plan, and it will soon consult with the prime minister on how to move forward.

"Our own view has not changed: The president welcomed Prime Minister Sharon's plan to withdraw settlements from Gaza and a part of the West Bank as a courageous and important step toward peace," White House spokesman Scott McClellan said.

Though security was intensified for the vote, Palestinian gunmen in Gaza killed a pregnant settler and her four young daughters as they headed into Israel to campaign against Sharon's plan. It was the deadliest attack on Gaza settlers in two years.

Israel retaliated with an air strike on a Gaza radio station affiliated with the militant Hamas group, lightly injuring seven Palestinians in the 14-story building, and with another strike on a car full of militants in the West Bank city of Nablus.

Supporters of Sharon's "disengagement plan" argued that the violence underscored the hopeless burden of staying in Gaza. Opponents said any withdrawal would be seen as a reward for terror and encourage more attacks on Israelis.

Sharon initially said he would consider the vote among the 193,000 Likud members as binding, but in recent days he appeared to back away from that.

"The meaning is not that [Sharon's proposal] is wrong," said Vice Premier Ehud Olmert, a strong supporter of the plan. "There is no alternative for the people of Israel. This move cannot be stopped ... We have to find a way."

herky on parade

iowa city • coralville • university of iowa

Good morning!

The Iowa City/Coralville community awakened today to a collection of artworks that – when officially unveiled at 9 a.m. – bear an amazing resemblance to Herky, the official mascot of the intercollegiate athletics program at The University of Iowa.

Herky on Parade is the official name of the public art program. Seventy-five fiberglass statues of Herky decorated by professional and aspiring artists were installed last night in locations as far east as Southeast Junior High School and Sycamore Mall and as far west as Coral Ridge Mall. Several Herkys are located on the University campus and in downtown Iowa City and Coralville. Yet another is greeting arrivals at the Eastern Iowa Airport.

The Parade is a joint effort of The University of Iowa, the cities of Iowa City, Coralville and University Heights, and the Iowa City/Coralville Convention and Visitors Bureau. It has four basic objectives:

- To build grassroots awareness of the 75th anniversary of Kinnick Stadium and the coming renovation of the historic home of the UI's varsity football program.
- To attract visitors to the greater Iowa City/Coralville community during the spring, summer and fall of 2004.
- To provide a substantial economic impact on the Iowa City/Coralville economy as a result of the money spent by visitors to the community.
- To "Take the Hawkeye spirit to the streets."

Herky on Parade is already a success. It has strengthened the relationships between the University and the participating communities. It has engaged educators and students at the University and in our community's two junior high schools and four high schools. It has engaged professional artists in eastern Iowa and as far away as Colorado. And it has touched alumni of the University as far away as Atlanta and New York City.

We hope you enjoy and take pride in Herky on Parade.

1 year later, mission unaccomplished

One year ago this past Saturday, President Bush stood on the deck of the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Abraham Lincoln below a banner that read "Mission Accomplished" as he addressed the nation.

"Major combat operations in Iraq have ended," he said. "In the battle of Iraq, the United States and our allies have prevailed."

Have we really? Or is this just another case where the words of the president have proven to be less than accurate, if not outright deceptive? Speaking at the White House on April 30, Bush defended his words of 12 months ago, reminding the audience that he said aboard the carrier that "there was still difficult work ahead" while claiming victory for America.

It's curious that, in referencing the "difficult work" that has characterized the year since, Bush made no mention of the more than 600 Americans who have died in Iraq since he stood below the banner proclaiming our success. Also interesting is his failure to acknowledge that, one year later, the very justification for initiating this conflict has been discredited. But we can just forget about that part anyway — the old reason doesn't matter anymore. Saddam Hussein was ousted simply because he was a "danger," certainly not because he had weapons of mass destruction that he was poised to launch at us.

What about that date of June 30 for Iraqi sovereignty? Seems odd that we would declare our mission accomplished and still be bogged down with violence in such places as Fallujah one year later, with no plan for pulling out in the foreseeable future.

Wishing that you could eat your words, Mr. President? Or make everyone forget that you said them in the first place?

And how about that banner that was prominently displayed in full view of cameras that projected Bush's words to the nation? Who put that there, and why did they do it if its words weren't true? At first, the administration asserted that it was placed by the carrier's crew. Later, however, Bush's aides acknowledged that his administration had paid for it and arranged for it to be placed there.

We should reflect on the words of the president one year ago and recognize the need to question what we hear from our leaders. Though it seems particularly easy to single out Bush, this applies to all who are seeking office during this election year. After all, no one is immune to the curse that seems to befall all politicians at one time or another — manipulating messages for political gain.

A mother of a holiday

ONE CHRISTMAS, I gave my mother earrings. A pair of horrendous 3-D white-plastic snowflakes plastered with iridescent glitter so clunky and uneven that it could have been elf snot.

I thought they were ... actually, I don't know what I was thinking. I might have briefly confused Mama — more of the diamond-solitaire style — with a few of my teachers. Several from elementary school and one from high school would have gladly worn those snowflakes. (She did, once — but not gladly.) I might have even liked them myself. Likely, though, I was scrimping on family gifts. That way, I could have enough money left over to buy myself something at the Christmas Bazaar in the school gymnasium.

ALLISON HEADY

She had given me the gift-buying money: Oh, the generous nature of a 10-year-old. Doesn't it just warm your heart?

Admittedly, I still buy myself gifts sometimes — a red ball skirt, a set of Chicago knives — but not with money (mine now, saved) earmarked to be spent on other people. And not on their holidays.

So this Mother's Day, I'm giving her daffodils. Their fairy circles range from a light custard yellow to a gentle creamsicle, and their petals are just barely off-white. Must have had an identity crisis, mid-winter, because they were supposed to be pink — but no, they're not ashamed; not a touch of blush to be seen. Gardener herself, Mama'll love them anyway; they were first, as bulbs, her gift to me.

And I'm going to hand-deliver them. One day recently when I got home, I hit "play" on the blinking machine. "Allison, how are we ever going to have a relationship," she plaintively chided me, "if all I do is talk to your answering machine? I mean — you know?"

Embroidered in all studio classes, I don't have any finals and so can afford the luxury of a short road trip after the studios close down; most of you probably can't split town this coming Sunday. But you're going to procrastinate on finals anyway — hit the Kathryn Musilek and Troubled Hubble show this Friday; decide to do laundry; lie out in College Green; you might as well procrastinate for your mom, too.

So think about her. If she was abusive and vile, and contact would do far more harm than good, obviously be frugal in your thoughts. But if she wasn't, or there's a chance a worthwhile adult relationship might be repaired or reconstructed out of an unhappy adolescent one, give her a call. Send a greeting card, even if Miss Anna Jarvis (founder of our modern-day Mother's Day) did say doing so was "a poor excuse for the letter you are too lazy to write." Send an e-mail card, even.

If you send a gift, per se, don't send the equivalent of those snowflake earrings. Get her the perfume she likes to wear, not the Ralph Lauren some local department store is pushing this spring. Can't remember the name of hers? Bribe your little sister; if she does that reconnaissance, you'll foot the bill, and it can be from both of you.

Make it something that'll live on longer than flowers. A juicy good book, say Lover, by Lisa Zeidner, or the Green Integer version of Rilke's Duino Elegies. Send several free-rental coupons, along with movie-style candy. Jot a note; she can decide if she wants to watch Ever After all by her middle-aged secret girly self or put Kid Sibling in front of Shrek so she and Dad can go have a nice private "talk" without interruptions.

Because more than at her birthday, this is an official chance — as an adult — to acknowledge her as such: adult. Your mother, who does not wear snowflake earrings except under the duress of a daughter's gift. Your mother, wonderful and flawed. Your mother, but not just. ■

Cracking down on Coke

To the tune of many hundreds of thousands of dollars a year, the UI sold our right to choose a soft drink on campus to Coca-Cola. Worse, the UI accepts this money from a corporation that violently busts unions at bottling plants in Colombia and steals groundwater from drought-plagued communities in rural India. When the Indian villagers resist, they are beaten and arrested. In Colombia, eight Coke workers have been murdered since 1994.

The UI has a moral obligation as an institution of higher learning to hold its business partners accountable on human rights. We have a fine Code of Conduct for all licensees of the Hawkeye logo. Coke flagrantly violates many aspects of the code, as documented by the respected International Labor Rights Fund, an organization that sits on the board of two monitoring organizations to which the UI belongs: the Fair Labor Association and the Workers Rights Consortium.

The UI contract allows Coke to use the Hawkeye logo and to call itself "The Official Soft Drink of the Iowa Hawkeyes." Thus, at the same time that Coke sponsors the Hawks on the field, it sponsors violence and poverty in Colombia and India. The exclusive contract between the UI and Coke is a shameful relationship that we must all call into question. To President David Skorton: Immediately suspend the Coke contract. In the spirit of the Code of Conduct, urge the WRC to investigate Coke's human rights record. Use the UI's considerable leverage to pressure Coke into respecting human rights.

Call a spade a spade

Coming from Chile, a country whose history includes torture, I know torture when I see it. And what is going on with the Iraqi prisoners is illegal under the Geneva Convention. Yes, the same convention that the American military complained was not being met when the first American prisoners were shown humiliated on television at the start of the war.

Torture is banned around the world, but it is still being practiced under most regimes. It is a horrible practice that forever scars the prisoners (I know many tortured from Chile, including close family members). So when you cover these "abuse" accusations, please use the correct term. This is torture. The same torture that Saddam used, that the Iraqis were "liberated" from.

Real mature

We are writing in regard to the April 26 article "Authorities investigate early a.m. Currier fires," and a comment printed comparing fourth-floor Currier residents to 4-year-olds. We would like to refute this claim by pointing out that no 4-year-old has the capability to cause the level of destruction and debauchery characteristic of the fourth floor of Currier. What 4-year-old has the physical capacity to effectively rip an emergency exit sign from its mountings, slam an inch-deep dent in a service elevator door, fill two bathroom sinks with vomit, and cause irreparable damage to scores of ceiling tiles and light fixtures?

What kind of 4-year-old has the jilted imagination to steal a wheelbarrow, pilot it past the front desk, transport it up the elevator, defecate in it, and abandon it in the hallway? What 4-year-old has enough misguided anger to render a pop machine useless of dispensing anything other than Mr. Pibb? This evidence clearly suggests that any responsible (or irresponsible) parties who may or may not live on the fourth floor of Currier are at least 12 or 13.

Kerry on Defense

In 1984 Senate campaign, Sen. John Kerry proposed cutting $54

billion as part of a "long-range proposal to cut $200 billion from the Defense budget over four years" and called for cancellation (not reduction) of at least 27 weapons systems and reductions in 18 other systems. (Chris Black, "Kerry Asks Cuts In Defense Outlay," Boston Globe, May 30, 1984.)

Show some respect

On the day the World War II Memorial was opened to the public, I was outraged to read about a University of Massachusetts student's editorial on Pat Tillman's death. Tillman was a former NFL player who turned down a $3 million contract to join the Army Rangers.

In an editorial published in the school paper, UMass graduate student Rene Gonzalez referred to Tillman as "Rambo," a man who acted out in "nationalist patriotic fantasies." Gonzalez also proceeded to discredit Tillman's work in Afghanistan, saying, "What he did was make himself useful to a foreign invading army, and he paid for it. It's hard to say I have any sympathy for his death because I don't feel like his 'service' was necessary. He wasn't defending me, nor was he defending the Afghan people. He was acting out his macho, patriotic crap, and I guess someone with a bigger gun did him in."

Like Tillman, thousands of other men and women are risking their very lives so that cowards like Gonzalez can sit behind a desk and be critical of our government's actions. But criticizing the soldiers who are allowing you to voice criticism? Also, what human being has little sympathy for someone who has died, regardless of whether or not he did so as a soldier? I cannot describe in words how furious I was after I reading Gonzalez's editorial. Criticism of government is an important ideal of democracy; criticism of a soldier, however, is despicable. Whether you are a Republican, Democrat, Green, independent, agree with the war, or disagree with the war, I hope that you at least recognize and respect the heroic and patriotic duties that the men and women of our armed forces undertake.

Beef mythology

In response to "What's Your Beef" (DI, April 30):

Myth No. 1: "If cattle did not graze pastures and rangelands, that land would go to waste." This presupposes that cattle in this country are fed grass. Unfortunately, cows raised on grass take a long time to reach slaughter weight; instead, feedlots fatten cattle by feeding them corn, dubious animal-based protein supplements, antibiotics, and growth hormones. Most cattle never spend a moment of their lives on pasture; they go straight from weaning to feedlots, where seas of cattle are confined, wading in their own pathogen-filled excrement.

Myth No. 2: "Cattle are a vital part of sustainable agriculture." Domestic livestock production in the West has caused more species extinction and decline than any other human endeavor. When a cow consumes forage, those plants are not available for native wildlife species. In a single day, a cow consumes more than a threatened desert tortoise would consume in a year.

To make room for cattle on public lands, many species are exterminated. Cattle have been bred for thousands of years to be docile, and they are extremely vulnerable to predators. The U.S. Wildlife Services operates lethal predator-control programs, many of which involve cruel trapping methods. In 2000, Wildlife Services killed 87,000 coyotes, 6,000 foxes, 2,500 bobcats, as well as hundreds of badgers, mountain lions, and black bears. That year, $13 million of your tax dollars was spent to kill these animals; it makes for an expensive steak. Over the years, more than 98 percent of prairie-dog communities have been exterminated in the West. This is a real problem for native wildlife species (including endangered black-footed ferrets, hawks, owls, and snakes) that rely on prairie dogs and their burrows to survive.

The author is correct that there is no simple solution to the problem of world hunger. It is a sad statement though, that in this country, our livestock never go hungry. We live in a country of fattened cattle; meanwhile, thousands starve.

Beau knows Jack

In response to Beau Elliot's April 27 column, "Get out your wetsuits," and most of his other articles, I would like to point out a few things that should be obvious to a rational person. First of all, media gossip is not fact. Elliot mentioning rumors such as McCain fathering an illegitimate black child and the Bush administration somehow striking a deal with the Saudis to drop gas prices prior to the election as support for his opinions is absurd.

As for the mental Ice Age comment, it is a fact that people at all education levels between high-school graduates and a master's degree are more likely to vote right-wing. Sounds like a large part of the intelligent population to me. Also, it is not funny, cute, nor intelligent to call the president "Dubya" repeatedly; it simply illustrates stupidity. Maybe some of your readers enjoy it, but I am guessing the sarcasm you so love to use in your articles is lost on them. Try plainly stating your point with words no larger than four letters.

Oh ordinary, thy name is Godsend.

Jessie (Rebecca Romijn-Stamos) and Paul Duncan (Greg Kinnear) live a contented city life with their son, Adam (Cameron Bright). Paul is a respected high-school biology teacher whose ethics has kept him teaching in the inner city instead of taking a more lucrative job in the suburbs. Jessie is a brilliant photographer looking to break out in the photo scene, while young Adam, on his 8th birthday, wants only a high-school varsity letter jacket. The Duncans are a picture of American normality.

But ordinariness takes a back seat the day after Adam's 8th birthday, when, after buying a pair of sneakers with Jessie, Adam loses control of a basketball, triggering a chain of events that ends with a car jumping over a construction site and slamming into dear Master Duncan's head, killing him instantly. Coming to the couple's rescue is Dr. Richard Wells (Robert De Niro), a famed geneticist and Jessie's teacher during her undergraduate days who tells the Duncans that he has perfected the process of human cloning and that he can bring their Adam back to them. The Duncans eventually agree to the procedure and are forced to move to a large beach house well away from the city to avoid any unnecessary attention to the illegality they wish to perform.

Jump ahead eight years, and we are brought to Adam 2's birthday party. Wells warns the couple that Adam 2 might experience problems once he passes the age at which Adam 1 was killed, but the Duncans are not ready for the complete change in disposition of their test-tube tot. Adam 2 begins to have popcorn thriller than it is in answering any moral issues about human cloning. There are discussions on the matter as Paul constantly brings up the ethics involved in Wells' procedure, but screenwriter Mark Bomback wants morality to take a back seat to provocation. Instead of making his script a part of the worldwide discussion about human cloning, he wants the script to use cloning only as a device to drive the action. Although cloning is the centerpiece of the film, it is surprisingly unessential to the picture's message, which seems to be more about trusting doctors than duplicating humans.

night terrors about burning down schools and bludgeoning people to death. Have the Duncans and Wells really opened Pandora's Box — bringing evil into the world — or is Adam 2 a victim of a Dr. Frankenstein-esque researcher looking to reanimate life?

Because Godsend doesn't push the envelope, it fades quickly into mediocrity. Nick Hamm's direction is amazingly uninspiring; instead of allowing the horror to play out on screen, he instead relies on the ever-popular "gotcha" scare to invoke some kind of reaction from his audience. Bright is a freaky little boy in Godsend, but without M. Night Shyamalan at the helm, can he really be as effective as Haley Joel Osment was in The Sixth Sense (a film that Hamm mercilessly rips off every chance he gets)?

And so we come to De Niro, whose agreement to act in Godsend follows a trend for an actor who is regarded by many as the greatest of his generation. That Bobby has done nothing of worth in seven years makes one wonder if he enjoys deprecating himself. He seems to care less about his Oscar-rich legacy than he does about making some more money in boring, brainless films. Sure, we can look back at Taxi Driver and The Godfather Part II with appreciation, but unless De Niro becomes more selective with his film choices, his status as a reputable thespian will be questioned.

Like the experiment that drives its plot, Godsend is a film gone horribly wrong — lacking the direction and foresight to make it work. Cloning may someday be part of our future, but let's hope that Godsend clones are nowhere to be found.

Bringing a bit of Carnegie Hall to the Iowa cornfields

BY JESSICA FISCHOFF
THE DAILY IOWAN

REVIEW The Maia Quartet

Iowa City has long served its citizens with an array of musical performances, bringing talented artists from diverse musical genres to the area. While perhaps not the most popular form of music among UI students, the classical music available locally is some of the best in the region. Among the local musicians responsible for putting on these concerts is the Maia Quartet, the School of Music faculty quartet in residence.

The group — violinists Amy Appold and Margaret Soper Gutierrez, violist Elizabeth Oakes, and cellist Hannah Holman — was formed when the members were students at the Cleveland Institute of Music, and it has since played concerts all over the world. On April 25, the quartet performed at Clapp Recital Hall.

One of the unique aspects of the recital was Ned Rorem's Quartet No. 4, in which each of the 10 movements is a musical depiction of a Picasso painting, including an intense portrayal of the inner battle between one's more rational humanistic side and the raging temper of a bull in "Minotaur."

The quartet then changed the mood in such movements as "Child Holding a Dove," which has a tranquil, innocent feeling and a flowing melody. The 10 paintings that inspired the piece were displayed in the Clapp lobby.

The Maia Quartet's ability to evoke the emotions musically that the paintings inspire visually was just one of the factors setting the performance apart from many of its past Iowa City recitals. Another was the accompaniment of violist Christine Rutledge and cellist Anthony Arnone, both of whom are also School of Music faculty members. The sextet's high-energy performance of Johannes Brahms' Sextet in B-Flat Major concluded the concert and brought audience members to their feet in a well-deserved standing ovation.

Talent aside, the Maia Quartet is a powerful force in inspiring music students, and it gives many local residents and students the chance to see one of the country's most dedicated classical-music groups.

Kelli Everett, a sophomore music performance major at the UI, is one such inspired student. "It's such a great educational opportunity to have a renowned group such as the Maia Quartet play so many local recitals," she said. "It almost makes you feel like there's a little bit of Carnegie Hall right in the middle of Iowa."

Fallujah situation still up in air

former President Saddam Hussein's Baath Party should be allowed to return to the government or the army, saying they were "capable of administering the country in times of crisis."

Saleh's comments contradict U.S. intelligence reports — and his orders from Marine commanders. A senior U.S. military official said there were approximately 200 foreign fighters inside the city as of April 30. The top Marine commander in Iraq, Lt. Gen. James Conway, said at a news conference on May 1 that Saleh and his deputies "understand our view that these people must be killed or captured."

At the time, Conway said Saleh and his lieutenants "have not flinched."

Although a Marine spokesman said Saleh's force had expanded to 600 soldiers on Sunday — double the size it was a day earlier — it remained unclear exactly where those troops were. Several men who claimed to be participants told reporters who traveled into the city that they were still waiting for uniforms and orders. Until they got them, they said, they planned to patrol their neighborhoods in civilian clothes.

As questions mounted about Saleh's performance and his background, Gen. Richard Myers, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said the former general would not be given command of the new force, named the Fallujah

— Unnamed U.S. military official

Brigade. "He will not be their leader," Myers said on ABC's "This Week" program.

Saleh, who is originally from Fallujah but had been living in Baghdad, served as the commanding general of the Iraqi army's 38th Infantry Division before the U.S. administrator of Iraq, Paul Bremer, dissolved the entire Iraqi army almost a year ago. Earlier in his military career, Saleh served in the Republican Guard, an elite branch of the army used at times by Saddam Hussein to suppress internal dissent. It was not immediately clear what rank Saleh held in the Republican Guard.

A senior U.S. military official in Baghdad said intelligence officers still had not finished a background check on Saleh, but there were reports that "he doesn't play well with others." The senior official suggested that Saleh would eventually become a commander of one of the battalions within the Fallujah Brigade and that former Maj. Gen. Latif Mahal Hamoud Sabawi would become commander of the brigade. Conway said Sabawi is "very well respected by the Iraqi general officers" and "demonstrates a level of leadership that tells me he could become that brigade commander."

But Myers, who appeared on three Sunday morning news shows, cautioned that neither of the generals had been approved by the Pentagon. "They have not been vetted. They have not been placed in command. They are not in charge," Myers said on "Fox News Sunday."

Myers said the leadership of the Fallujah Brigade also would have to be approved by the U.S. occupation authority in Baghdad and Iraq's interim Defense Ministry.

The decision to form the Fallujah Brigade and put Saleh in charge was made from "the bottom up," the senior official said. "Now we have to have a policy to catch up with what is happening on the ground."

A Marine spokesman did not have any immediate reaction to Myers' comments, and it was not clear whether Saleh would comply with a U.S. order to relinquish command of the new force.

One U.S. military official said that step could prove tricky. "We've just told him he can form a brigade and take over the city," the official said. "Now we're telling him that he has to step aside? Do we just expect him to go home?"

Myers also denied that Marines had withdrawn from Fallujah. "The reports that the Marines have pulled back — not true," he said on the Fox program. "The Marines are still where they've been."

In fact, two Marine battalions — the 1st Battalion, 5th Marine Regiment, and the 2nd Battalion, 2nd Marine Regiment — have pulled out of positions in or near the city. The 1st Battalion vacated its forward operating base in a beverage factory inside the city and moved to a base five miles outside the city on April 30.

Word of Hamill's recovery, described by Kimmitt as a "providential pickup," came on an otherwise grim day for U.S. forces in Iraq.

The mortar strike in western Iraq that killed six U.S. service members also wounded 30, a military spokesman said.

In addition, two soldiers and two members of the Iraqi Civil Defense Corps were killed in a roadside bomb attack early Sunday morning, said Air Force Lt. Serena K. Wallace, a spokeswoman for the U.S. military command in the capital.

Attackers described as members of a militia controlled by Muqtada al-Sadr, a rebellious Shiite cleric, attacked a U.S. military convoy with rifles and rocket-propelled grenades on May 1 near the southern city of Amarah, 180 miles south of Baghdad, a U.S. military official said.

night, where they will remain until November to commemorate the 75th anniversary of Kinnick Stadium. The parade was organized by the UI athletics department and Iowa City/Coralville Convention and Visitors Bureau to "take the Hawkeye spirit to the streets."

"Hopefully, this will get people excited about the football program and the area in general," said Coralville Mayor Jim Fausett, adding he hopes that statues will also bring economic development and tourism to the area.

Created mostly by local artists and students, the statues mimic the "Cows on Parade" program that placed cow statues throughout Chicago. The Iowa parade is being sponsored by local businesses, and any business that donates $5,000 or more to a Herky will be able to keep the statue in November, when the parade will end.

Elizabeth Rhoads Read, who designed the Cowboy Herky, Racing Herky, Andy Warhawk, and the Dick Tracy Herky, said it took her approximately 40-60 hours of work per statue.

"Public art is fun," the Cedar Rapids resident said, adding that she is excited to see the public's reaction at the unveiling.

Iowa City Mayor Ernie Lehman described "Herky on Parade" as a win-win situation, something that all ages can enjoy — the parade, he said, is one of the few events he's seen without a downside.

Although he saw approximately 40 of the statues before they were unveiled, he said, it was too hard to pick a favorite.

"I think Herky is the most recognized symbol in the state," he said, noting that more people would probably recognize the university's mascot than they would Gov. Tom Vilsack.

When the parade is over, the decorated Herkys will be auctioned. A portion of the proceeds will be used for the Kinnick renovation.

UI salaries rank below those of peer schools

regents might privatize the three state-funded universities.

Regent Sue Erickson Nieland agreed that privatization is not a concern. Funding "has been decreasing, and we'd hate to see it decrease anymore," but at this point, it is probably still higher than the institution in question.

Talks of consolidation drew sharp criticism from UI professors who attended the meeting. "Wait until they hear English and arithmetic are taught at every elementary school," said Katherine Tachau, a UI professor of medieval history, adding that medieval classes are small, with only one course nearing 70 students.

UI officials, too, recognized that consolidating colleges is a possibility. "When times are tough, we have to find ways," said Steve Parrott, the director of University Relations.

Downer also echoed UI President David Skorton's fears about losing university faculty and staff because of a lack of funds, noting that "salaries have fallen to the near bottom of their peer institutions."

One factor for salary decline is that state-funded universities have lost a significant amount of funding in the past 25 years, Downer said. However, he added, students bear the real burden with sharp tuition increases.

"They are the ones, who through their tuition have made it possible that we have not had huge reductions," he said in regard to faculty and staff salaries.

In 2001, the UI and the state's four other regent institutions received 63.7 percent of their funds from state appropriations. Today, 49.6 percent of funds come from state appropriations.

"It's so dreary, it's hard to find any possibilities," Downer said, though he added that Iowa "has a high level of public support for education" — an important element in keeping Iowa institutions a state priority.

As he ended his speech, he reminded the group of roughly 20 that the regents have achieved many goals this year. For example, the Legislature approved moving back the date for setting the next year's tuition, allowing university officials to more accurately determine what the rate should be for the school year. "It shows to a modest degree that the Legislature is trying to be helpful," he said.

Engineering Professor Robert Ettema echoed Schnoor, saying, "[Donald McDonald] was a very pleasant man to work with," though he did not have the opportunity to work on a project with him directly.

Donald McDonald was known for his work studying the wastewater from Iowa's only nuclear-power plant, the Duane Arnold Energy Center in Palo, and he also tested the water quality of the Mississippi River and Coralville Reservoir.

Schnoor said his work was important in assessing the effect of heated water from the nuclear plant on the surrounding waters.

"He did some very good and innovative work with the water quality," Ettema said.

Lorenzen to leave UI gymnastics team

BY NICK RICHARDS
 THE DAILY IOWAN

The architect of one of the most amazing turnarounds in women's gymnastics history is moving on. GymHawks' coach Mike Lorenzen, who was named Big Ten Coach of the Year for the second time in his career this season, resigned from his post on April 30 to take a marketing and promotions job at Camp Woodward, an elite gymnastics training facility in western Pennsylvania where Lorenzen had been part of the summer staff. Lorenzen's resignation will become effective May 31. "I've been offered a once in a lifetime job opportunity at Camp Woodward to follow in the steps of my mentor, and I don't feel that I can turn it down," he said. "I will continue to do recruiting work and everything I can to prepare the program for transition until my final date."

"He built this program the last five years," said departing senior Alexis Maday. "It will be different without Mike here, but what he's started and what he's built will be here until the day gymnastics is no longer a part of this school."

Mike Lorenzen
 UI Women's gymnastics coach

Lorenzen will replace his mentor, Ed Isabel, one of the biggest names in the gymnastics world, at Woodward. "Everyone in the gymnastics world knows who Ed Isabel is," Maday said. "It is such an offer that he can't turn that down. We can't let him turn that down." The timing of Lorenzen's move leaves the GymHawks in a transition period. The team returns a strong core of current junior Annie Rue and current sophomores Liz Grajewski and Kortny Williamson, but it will lose the spectacular senior class of Stephanie Gran, Brandy Killian, Maday, and Nicole Wong, all of whom were at the heart of the program's remarkable turnaround. "We're really sad to lose him," said junior Mindi Levitz. "We wish him the best. We're confident the program will go on because he has helped us to go in the right direction."

MVP

Minnesota's Garnett wins NBA's MVP

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota's Kevin Garnett has won his first Most Valuable Player award, sources told the Associated Press on Sunday. The Timberwolves said there would be a major announcement regarding Garnett on this afternoon at Target Center. Two team officials, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said Garnett would receive the NBA's MVP award. Players and coaches were unavailable for comment when word of Garnett's honor came, but it was not a surprise considering the season he had. Writers and broadcasters from each NBA market vote on the award, and ballots are due before the playoffs begin.

Birocci breaks strikeout record

Iowa pitcher Lisa Birocci broke her own single-season school strikeout record Sunday, K-Ing nine Wisconsin Badgers to push her total to 267 on the year. Birocci, a junior, had 260 whiffs last year.

The record-breaking performance came in game one of Iowa's double-header sweep of the Badgers, which leaves the Hawkeyes with a 37-19 record, 14-4 in the Big Ten. Ali Arnold pitched the nightcap for Iowa, striking out four in the 5-0 win. On April 30, Minnesota's Piper Martin no-hit Iowa in Minneapolis, the fourth no-no of her career. Birocci took the loss for the Hawks despite allowing only two runs on six hits. Iowa followed up the setback with a 6-2 win over the Gophers on May 1. Natalie Johnson led the way, smacking three hits and scoring two runs. Arnold earned the win.

The Hawkeyes' next home game is their last of the regular season, when they take on William Penn on May 6 at Pearl Field.

BACK FOR MORE

Future Hall of Famer playing again

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Rickey Henderson is back in baseball. The 45-year-old outfielder resigned Sunday with the Newark Bears of the independent Atlantic League, where he played last season before returning to the majors. Henderson has the most runs (2,295), stolen bases (1,406), and walks (2,190) in major-league history. The likely Hall of Famer excelled during 56 games with Newark last year, then joined the Los Angeles Dodgers in July. He played in 30 games with the Dodgers, his ninth big-league team, and batted .208 with two homers, five RBIs, and three steals. "The Newark Bears are a premier organization, and I will always appreciate that they allowed me to showcase my skills last season, giving me the chance to return to the majors with the Dodgers," Henderson said in a statement released by the team.

Trying to make the most of playing host

BY TED MCCARTAN
 THE DAILY IOWAN

With team tents, lawn chairs, cow bells, and coolers, the crowd that spawned across the south edge of Lake Macbride for the Big Ten rowing championships was tailgate-esque. It was the first time Iowa hosted the event, but judging by the number of vocal fans clad in maize and blue shirts in attendance, it looked as if it was being held in Ann Arbor. Michigan won the regatta, its second-straight Big Ten championship, scoring 128 team points. Iowa finished sixth out of the seven teams competing, scoring 42 team points. In the main event — the first Varsity-8 grand finals — 10th ranked Michigan edged top ranked Ohio St. in the 2,000-meter race by two seconds. "In terms of the regatta, it was a really exciting event," Iowa head coach Mandi Kowal said. "It went down to that last race to decide who was going to win the championship." Iowa didn't qualify for the grand finals but finished second in the petite finals with a time of 7:01.5. "We definitely wanted to beat Minnesota in the petite final, and when that didn't happen, it was disappointing, but we improved from the morning to the afternoon," senior Megan Manijak said. Despite finishing second to last, Kowal still found bright spots in her team's performance. "The novices had some better races which I'm excited about, and our varsity crews had some better

Iowa splits doubleheaders

"I warned these guys exactly what could happen. I told them, 'Don't think that we've accomplished anything yet. Because we played well yesterday doesn't mean anything if we don't go out and play well on Sunday.'"

— Iowa baseball coach Jack Dahm

BY KELLY BEATON
 THE DAILY IOWAN

After Iowa swept a May 1 double-header over Northwestern, Jack Dahm, equipped with the wisdom brought about by 297 career wins, knew his task. With a team laden with youth, the first-year Iowa baseball coach would have to guard against the two most dreaded words in the coaching lexicon: "let down." "[Saturday] after the game, I warned these guys exactly what could happen," said Dahm, who came to Iowa City this year after a 10-year career at Creighton, where he became the school's all-time winningest coach. "I told them, 'Don't think that we've accomplished anything yet. Because we played well yesterday doesn't mean anything if we don't go out and play well on Sunday.'"

Alas, his troops failed to heed his advice, as the Hawkeyes dropped both ends of a twin bill Sunday, falling 8-2 and 3-0. The squad had been in search of its first win in a four-game series since May 17-19, 2002, when Iowa took three of four from rival Illinois.

While Hawkeye hitters erupted for a double-digit run total in a 10-4 win in game two of the May 1 double-header, Sunday illustrated Iowa's struggles at the plate this season. The Hawkeyes (14-28, 7-13) compiled just a pair of earned runs on 10 hits combined in the two losses to Northwestern (19-21, 1, 8-12).

Northwestern starter Dan Konecny handcuffed Hawkeye hitters in the game one 8-2 Wildcat win. The 6-4 righty no-hit Iowa through the first 5 1/3, until an RBI base hit to the right side by Jim Reid made it 5-1 in favor of the Wildcats in the bottom of the sixth.

"I felt good," Konecny said. "I felt like I had my stuff, just letting it go." Iowa was equally baffled by Northwestern fireballer George Kontos in game two, as the freshman frequently hit 91 mph on the Jugs gun, paving the way for his 3-0 shutout victory. The loss marked the 10th time this year that the Hawkeyes were held to two runs or fewer and the fifth time they were blanked.

The Black and Gold were burned by a couple of blunders on the base paths in the loss, such as in the bottom of the sixth, when Reid got caught stealing.

"We try to create some pressure, and sometimes in big situations, we try to do too much," Iowa catcher Kris Welker said. "I think we try to press too much and get a little tight ... It's nothing we're going to change; we're always going to keep our intensity on the bases."

Sunday was a stark contrast to Iowa's domi-

Tennis team has best showing ever

BY RYAN LONG
 THE DAILY IOWAN

The women's tennis program made some major strides this past weekend at the 2004 Big Ten championships in Evanston, Ill. The Hawkeyes run in the tournament was the furthest in the program's history after they upset No. 2-seeded Indiana, 4-3, in the quarterfinal match. This was a big step for Iowa considering that they fell, 7-0, to the No. 21-ranked Hoosiers on April 17 in Iowa City.

Iowa lost, 4-3, in the semifinals to No. 6 seed Ohio State, which was coming off of a 4-2 upset of No. 3 seed Illinois. Although the loss to the Buckeyes came as a great disappointment, it did not take away from the accomplish-

50 athletes qualify for regionals at Musco

NICK RICHARDS
 THE DAILY IOWAN

A big crowd at the sixth-annual Iowa Musco Twilight saw the Iowa men's and women's track teams win a combined six events, five meet records broken, three Cretzmeyer track records fall, former City High prep Joey Woody run the fastest 400-meter hurdles in the country, and an astounding 50 athletes qualify for the NCAA regional meet May 28-29 in College Station, Texas.

"People were stepping up when conditions weren't as we'd like it, but I'm happy with the performance," Iowa women's coach James Grant said.

Despite battling inclement weather for the second-straight meet with cold temperatures plaguing the final events, the women's team had an impressive day. Seniors Sarah Arens and Shellene Williams led the way for the team, with Arens winning the 3,000-meter steeplechase in a Cretzmeyer track and Musco meet record of 10:38.53, which also qualified her for regionals. Williams won the 200 in a meet record and collegiate-best time of 23.50. Williams didn't run the 400 — her best event — but did run the anchor leg of the 1,600-meter relay, which the Hawkeyes won in

Reports: Martinez halts contract talks

BY STEPHEN HAWKINS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ARLINGTON, Texas — Pedro Martinez had his shortest outing of the season for Boston and lost on May 1 in his first start since saying he will test the free-agent market following this season.

The three-time Cy Young winner pitched just four innings against Texas in the second game of a double-header that the Rangers won, 8-5, to complete a sweep. Martinez (3-2) left trailing 6-1 after allowing a season-high nine hits with three strikeouts.

"It was just a game where I made mistakes, and they made me pay," said Martinez, who spoke only about the game. "I had a little struggle with the breaking ball. The whole game just didn't work out today."

Before speaking after the game, Martinez said through team officials that he wouldn't address further his decision not to talk with the Red Sox during the season about a new contract.

Manager Terry Francona said Martinez just had an off night and that it wasn't related to the pitcher's decision regarding free agency.

"You send him out there, you expect almost greatness," Francona said. "You have to be human sometimes. Again, he didn't locate and paid the price."

In his previous shortest outing, Martinez allowed seven runs in five innings against Baltimore.

Martinez, who had an 8-1 record with a 1.45 ERA in 11 previous starts against Texas, told several Boston newspapers on April 30 that he will become a free agent after the season. Martinez's agent, Fernando Cuza, wouldn't comment when reached on May 1 by the Associated Press.

General manager Theo Epstein said the primary focus for the Red Sox remains trying to build a team that can compete for and win a World Series. "Sometimes, however, our commitment to building winning teams, every year, means that we will have disagreements with our players about the length and precise value of their next contracts," Epstein said in a statement May 1.

Epstein said such disagreements were unfortunate but inevitable and would be resolved in time. Martinez wasn't specifically named in the four-paragraph statement.

"We respect our players. We tell our players the truth. We listen to our players. We protect our players," Epstein said. "We negotiate with our players in good faith, and we make every effort not to discuss these negotiations in public."

Martinez is making $17.5 million this season, his seventh in Boston. He has been the AL ERA leader four of the last six years.

"I'm just really sad for the fans in New England who had high hopes that at this time I could say, truly, that I was going to stay in Boston, but now they're going to have to compete with the rest of the league," Martinez told the Boston Herald.

WASHINGTON POST

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Smarty Jones came to Churchill Downs with a great story; he left April 30 with a garland of roses draped across his neck.

With a powerful surge heading into the far turn, the Philadelphia Park-based colt separated from a pack of stalkers, lit out after runaway leader Lion Heart, and ran him down in the stretch to take the 130th Kentucky Derby on a sloppy track.

The 2½-length victory, before 140,054, capped as unlikely a progression to glory in America's signature horse race as Funny Cide produced the year before. Born at his owners' Someday Farm just outside of Philadelphia, Smarty Jones was one of two horses Roy and Pat Chapman did not sell as they planned to get out of the racing business in 2001. Now, he is the first undefeated horse to win the Kentucky Derby since Seattle Slew in 1977.

"My wife calls us backyarders," said Roy Chapman, 77, as he sat in a wheelchair, breathing oxygen through a tank because he suffers from chronic asthma and emphysema. "I call us ham-and-egggers. We've had a lot of claimers, but we've had a lot of fun. We never expected to get here."

Unbeaten in six starts, Smarty Jones went off the tepid 4-to-1 favorite in the 18-horse field. He won the 1¼-mile Derby in a slow 2 minutes 4.06 seconds on a very unstable track.

With the victory, Smarty Jones collected a windfall $5,854,800 for his connections, the largest single payoff in horse racing history. The extra $5 million came courtesy of a bonus offered by Oaklawn Park to any horse who could sweep the Southwest Stakes, the Rebel, and the Arkansas Derby and then go on to win in Kentucky.

The Kentucky Derby this year looked as wide open as any in memory, with no stand-out runner and an intriguing mix of speed horses, stalkers, and closers. With the sharp, controlling speed of Lion Heart, who had showed tenacity in finishing second in his two prep races for the Derby, and the superior stalking ability of Smarty Jones, the closers never got into the mix. Many struggled in the slop just to get around the track.

Tapit, the Maryland-based runner trained by Michael Dickinson and ridden by leading mid-Atlantic jockey Ramon Dominguez, passed a string of horses on the backside but faded to ninth. Morning-line favorite The Cliff's Edge, the Blue Grass Stakes winner, lumbered up to finish a non-threatening fifth. Speed dominated.

When the gate opened, Lion Heart, ridden by veteran Mike Smith, went right to the front. Six runners lined up behind him, Smarty Jones among them, jostling for position going into the first turn.

their first meet of the year with a qualifying mark of 3:45.02.

"Because she ran last week, unless a big week like nationals is coming, very rarely does she run back-to-back meets," Grant said.

The women's team also saw a win from senior Michelle Lahann, who won the 1,500 meters in 4:24.18.

The men's team saw the most success in the throwing events. The Hawkeyes took three of the top four spots in the hammer throw, with senior Brad Daufeldt won the event with a throw of 207 feet, 10 inches. Adam Hamilton took second in the event with a throw of 200-5, and Chris Voller took fourth at 171-6. The shot putters also performed extremely well, with all four throwers qualifying for the regional meet. Ken Kemeny took second in the event with a throw of 60-8, Andy Banse was fourth at 55-10, Shane Maier was fifth at 55-0, and Robbie Beyer was sixth at 54-1.

"The throws were just great," men's coach Larry Wiczorek said. "It's good for guys like Brad Daufeldt to make 200 feet in front of a home crowd."

Unattached competitor Joey Woody, a former City High product who starred at Northern Iowa and is the favorite to advance to the Olympics in the 400-meter hurdles, ran a 48.94 — the fastest time in the United States this year.

After a week off, both teams will return to action in the Big Ten outdoor championships May 14-16. The co-ed meet will be held at the Rankin Track and Field at Purdue.

"It's very important that we are off next weekend and that we are rested and prepared for Big Tens," Grant said.

aces overall, compared with the previous race that we had," she said.

The Big Ten has four teams ranked in the top 20 nationally, and its conference championships were one of the most competitive throughout the country.

"In the Big Ten, I think you have some large state schools that can create big novice programs," Kowal said. "You also have great institutions, and people want to go there and row."

Manijak shares Kowal's sentiments, and she thinks that the Big Ten deserves more respect compared with the Eastern schools.

"They think they're the best at rowing; all the Big Ten schools just feel like they have something to prove," Iowa's first team All-Big Ten senior said.

Manijak was one of two Iowa rowers to be honored by the Big Ten. The other, Michelle Tran-nel, was named to the All-Big Ten second team.

The Iowa rowers will next compete in the Lexus Cup Central/South Regionals on May 15 and 16.

"We will go there and try to make some better racing situations," Kowal said. "We have earned her 28th overall victory of the season, breaking the school single-season record for wins by a freshman. Laura Dvorak set the old mark at 27 during the 1991-92 season.

Iowa came out on fire against Indiana by capturing the meets doubles point. Megan Racette and Mintz defeated Linda Tran and Sarah Batty (8-5) at the No. 1 position. Tran and Batty had not lost all year in Big Ten play.

Deni Alexandrova and Anastasia Zhukova out played Dora Vostag and Laura McGaffigan (8-5) at the No. 2 spot. The singles were not as clean and came down to the final match. After Mintz earned her record-setting victory (6-1, 6-2) over Tran and Hilary Tyler defeated Cecile Perton (6-4, 6-4) at the No. 6 spot, senior Alexandrova made her presence felt by finishing off Karie Schlukebir in three sets (6-4, 4-6, 6-4). Sculkebir was the Flight Winner for being the best No. 5 singles player in the Big Ten. Alexandrova was more than pleased with both her own and her team's effort.

"It was huge, it was definitely huge," she said. "We lost to them, 7-0, two weeks ago and I was expecting to win but I wasn't expecting it to be so emotional."

The Hawkeyes battled Ohio State on May 1 in another tight match. The Buckeyes won the doubles point after Racette and Mintz fell at the No. 1 spot to Erika Fisk and Jackie Leskovar (8-6), while Chelsea Glynn and Tyler lost to Lindsey Adams and Emily DeCamilla (8-2) at the No. 3 position. The Hawkeyes would now need to win four matches at the singles spots in order to claim the match. Racette defeated Lindsay Williams (6-2, 6-1) at No. 1, Zhukova won over DeCamilla at No. 4 (6-2, 6-2), and Alexandrova won for the second straight day (7-5, 7-5), defeating Adams at No. 5.

Iowa's meet once again came down to a single match where Mintz lost in an emotional battle to senior Fisk (5-7, 6-3, 6-4), who she had defeated in a previous match this season.

"I'm real proud with how we competed this weekend," said Wardlaw. "If we wanted one player out there it would be Hillary Mintz, basically on what she's done for us this year. But it was awfully close and Mintz battled her heart out."

Yankees top Royals for 6th-straight win

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Mussina settled down after a shaky start, Hideki Matsui hit a go-ahead single in the seventh inning, and the New York Yankees won their sixth straight game Sunday with a 4-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals. The Yankees completed a three-game sweep of the Royals, who have dropped four in a row and 14 of 17. They fell to 1-10 on the road this season.

Mussina (2-4) allowed eight hits in the first four innings as Kansas City jumped to a 2-0 lead. But then he retired 11 in a row as the Yankees came back.

Jason Giambi's fifth home run tied it at 2 in the fourth. Giambi's shot off Jeremy Affeldt (0-3) landed in the upper deck in right field.

Mussina went seven innings — and did not give up a hit after the fourth. Tom Gordon worked a scoreless eighth, and Mariano Rivera got three outs for his ninth save in nine chances. He retired three straight batters with two on to end it.

Spurs shut down Lakers

BY T.A. BADGER

SAN ANTONIO — Tim Duncan scored 12 of his 30 points in the final period, including three straight jumpers during a decisive 10-0 run, as the San Antonio Spurs rallied for an 88-78 win over the Los Angeles Lakers in Game 1 of their second-round playoff series Sunday.

Los Angeles, leading 65-62 after three quarters, committed 10 turnovers and scored only 13 points in the fourth quarter, being held without a field goal for a six-minute span.

"We tried to force-feed Shaq, and they got four or five turnovers out of that that helped them get back into the game," Lakers coach Phil Jackson said. "By and large, we were victims of our own inability to execute."

The win was the Spurs' 16th straight since late March. Game 2 in the best-of-seven series is Wednesday night.

Duncan drew double-teams almost every time he got the ball in the second half, causing him trouble both posting up and driving. After scoring 15 points in the first two periods, he had only one basket in the third.

He scored on a lay-up and a jumper in the opening minutes of the fourth, then made his three-straight jumpers in the 10-0 run.

"There's not a whole lot of secrets about what we do and what they do," Duncan said. "It's about going out there and imposing your will."

San Antonio's 10-0 spurt ended with a breakaway dunk by Manu Ginobili off a pass from Duncan, putting the Spurs ahead 83-71. San Antonio outscored the Lakers, 17-3, on fast-break points.

Tony Parker added 20 points and nine assists, while Ginobili had 11 points.

The Spurs also corralled Kobe Bryant in the fourth quarter, limiting him to six points on 2-for-6 shooting after he scored 12 in the third to put the Lakers ahead.

"They did what they wanted to do, and then late they had a big spurt in them, and we didn't," said Bryant, who led the Lakers with 31 points. "They wanted to get into transition and run it, and that's what they did."

Hornets survive Heat to force Game 7

BY BRETT MARTEL
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS — The Heat and Hornets will have one more chance to shove, scream, and squabble. The only first-round series in the NBA playoffs to last beyond six games will go the distance. On a day when the New Orleans Hornets were the verbal and physical aggressors, defensive specialists P.J. Brown and George Lynch gave Baron Davis enough offensive help to force a deciding Game 7 with an 89-83 victory Sunday.

"It's going to be a war, just like every other game in this series. It might be a little more intense," said Miami guard Dwyane Wade, who led his team with 27 points. "It's a great series — two great teams going at it. That's what you watch the playoffs for, to see who's going to duke it out in Game 7."

The series will conclude Tuesday night in Miami.

The host team has won each game so far, and the Heat have a 15-game home unbeaten streak. In NBA history, the team with home-court advantage has won its Game 7 on 70 of 85 occasions.

The mind games and brute force that have helped define this series picked up even more in Game 6, compounded by a foot injury to senior referee Joe Crawford that left only two referees on the floor for most of the game.

Robert Traylor was called for a technical when he flattened Eddie Jones on a shot attempt in the fourth quarter, then Traylor was thrown out of the game as he continued to shout at the Miami bench.

Davis also exchanged words with the Miami bench twice in the final quarter and had to be pulled away by teammates the second time. Lamar Odom, Lynch, Jamaal Magloire, and Stacy Augmon also were called for technicals for their behavior toward opposing players.

"It just left a nasty taste in your mouth. I don't know what they were trying to do," Miami forward Caron Butler said. "All we did was come to play basketball. Now we're ready to go back to Miami and redeem ourselves. And we look forward to the challenge."

New Orleans never trailed and led by double digits for most of the game, but Miami — after trailing by as many as 18 in the fourth quarter — got as close as 85-81 on Caron Butler's runner with 1:07 left. Brown then made a pair of free throws, and Miami could get no closer than four the rest of the way.

"The only positive was we didn't quit," Miami coach Stan Van Gundy said. "That could have been a 25- or 30-point game."

Mickelson two shots back at HP Classic

BY MARY FOSTER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW ORLEANS — Playing in his first tournament since winning the Masters, Phil Mickelson moved into position to make it two in a row on Sunday at the HP Classic. Mickelson shot a 69 in the third round to move into a tie for second with Charles Howell III, two strokes behind leader Joe Ogilvie.

Ogilvie shot a 66 on Sunday for a 17-under 199.

The final round was pushed back to today because of rain delays in the first two rounds.

Mickelson began the day in a six-way tie for third at 12-under, and moved to 14-under on the front nine before a bogey on No. 9.

He offset that miscue with birdies on 11, 14, and 15, to move within a stroke of Ogilvie. But a bogey on 18 dropped him two off the lead and left him at 15-under 201.

Ogilvie, looking for his first PGA Tour victory, had six birdies and no bogeys on the round. He had his best finish last week in the Shell Houston Open, finishing tied for 19th, but has made eight of 11 cuts this season.

Second-round leader Danny Ellis shot an 10-over 82 to fall way off the pace after opening rounds of 63 and 66. He was at 5-under.

Howell shot a 1-under 71 in the harsher conditions on Sunday after rounds of 66 and 64.

Justin Rose and Hidemichi Tanaka were a three strokes back at 14-under 202.

A group of six players, including Vijay Singh, former champion K.J. Choi, and Guy Boros, who shot a third-round 63, were tied with a 13-under 203.

The $5.1 million tournament was delayed during the first and second rounds because of bad weather. Friday, heavy rain prevented any play.

The weather remained threatening Sunday morning, but the course was dry enough to allow play to resume and 77 players finished their round.

Players had described the course at English Turn as defenseless in the first and second rounds when the rain softened it and there was no wind. On Sunday it got tougher as a brisk north wind caused problems and scores rose.

Organizers planned to send golfers off two tees Monday morning to complete the tournament.

SPORTS BRIEF

Injuries, illness hit Timberwolves

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minnesota Timberwolves finished Sunday's practice with only nine players because of illness and injuries.

Centers Michael Olowokandi and Oliver Miller both sat out because of flu-like symptoms, and center Ervin Johnson fell on his wrist during practice and was sent for X-rays as a precaution.

Coach Flip Saunders said Johnson would play Tuesday, when Minnesota hosts the Sacramento Kings in Game 1 of their Western Conference semifinal series.

The Timberwolves are already missing point guard Troy Hudson and swingman Wally Szczerbiak. Hudson is out for the postseason with a sprained ankle, and Szczerbiak is expected to miss at least another two weeks with three cracked bones in his back.

Szczerbiak, who was hurt in Game 3 of Minnesota's loss to Denver in the first round, said Sunday that he's doing better but is still a little stiff and sore. Saunders and Szczerbiak left open the possibility of him returning at the end of the Sacramento series.

PHILADELPHIA — Back at home, the Philadelphia Flyers dominated the Toronto Maple Leafs and regained control of the series. Keith Primeau had three goals and Michal Handzus scored twice, leading the Flyers to a 7-2 victory over Toronto on Sunday in Game 5 of their Eastern Conference semifinal series.

Philadelphia can eliminate the Leafs with a victory in Toronto on Tuesday night. If necessary, Game 7 would be Thursday. The home team has won each game in the series.

The victory was costly for the Flyers, who lost goaltender Robert Esche and defenseman Vladimir Malakhov to undisclosed injuries. Sean Burke replaced Esche after the first period and stopped eight of nine shots.

After being outplayed in two straight losses in Toronto, the Flyers controlled the game from the start, taking a 2-0 lead in the first six minutes and holding the Leafs without a shot until the final minute of the first period.

Mark Recchi and Branko Radivojevic also scored for the Flyers, who have never lost a best-of-seven series in which they led 2-0, going 16-0.

Leafs goalie Ed Belfour allowed six goals on 18 shots, before being replaced by Trevor Kidd less than four minutes into the second period.

Joe Nieuwendyk and Gary Roberts scored for Toronto.

Energized by a noisy sellout crowd of 19,825, the Flyers played with more intensity and determination than they showed in the two losses at the Air Canada Centre. They outshot Toronto 29-11.

Philadelphia Flyers' Michal Handzus celebrates his goal against the Toronto Maple Leafs in the second period of their second-round playoff series game Sunday in Philadelphia. It was the sixth goal against Ed Belfour, who was replaced in the period by Trevor Kidd.

Recchi picked up a loose puck after a turnover by Leafs defenseman Bryan McCabe, skated in and wristed a shot past Belfour for a 1-0 lead 3:51 in.

Handzus made it 2-0 just 1:52 later with his first goal of the playoffs. Handzus took a drop pass from Simon Gagne and shot it through a screen past Belfour.

Primeau's first goal came on a short-handed breakaway with 1:06 left in the first period. Primeau beat McCabe to a loose puck, skated in on Belfour, made a nifty move to go around defenseman Brian Leetch and one-handed a shot in.

Agent awareness in the NFL

BY MARK MASKE AND
LEONARD SHAPIRO
WASHINGTON POST

The NFL's off-season has been filled with controversies over players' contracts, and some of the sport's top officials say they blame the players' agents.

Now the leaders of the NFL Players Association say they are prepared to do something about it, perhaps with tougher screening methods for prospective agents, more persistence in getting agents to take advantage of the union's resources, and possible punishments for those agents involved in this off-season's confusion.

Union chief Gene Upshaw said he believes that the agents in the high-profile disputes involving Philadelphia Eagles wide receiver Terrell Owens, Washington Redskins line-backer LaVar Arrington, and Cleveland Browns wide receiver Dennis Northcutt made mistakes. Upshaw said he expects some or all of those cases to be examined closely by the union's agent disciplinary committee and sanctions possibly imposed.

"I'm hoping there's not a trend going on, but we have seen an awful lot of mistakes," Upshaw said. "I am concerned because every time a mistake is made, the player is the one left holding the bag. . . . We have a discipline committee, and they will look at this. There will be some cases they take action on, no doubt about that. I usually don't get involved in that process, but I've been more involved than usual because so many players are losing so much money."

Buffalo Bills cornerback Troy Vincent, the new president of the Players Association and the head of the agent disciplinary committee, said the Owens, Arrington, and Northcutt cases are "a major concern" to the union.

"We are cracking down on those agents who are not living up to our standards," Vincent said. "Most agents do a very good job. But we've had some major mistakes with contract language — not so much with the dollars and cents and negotiating a good deal, but with the language."

David Joseph represents Owens, who was traded to the Eagles last month as part of a settlement that resolved a dispute arising from the failure of Joseph and Owens to meet a February deadline to file the paperwork necessary to void the remainder of Owens's contract with the San Francisco 49ers and make him an unrestricted free agent. Agent Jerome Stanley and Northcutt missed a similar deadline, and Northcutt remains at odds with the Browns. Arrington has filed a grievance against the Redskins alleging there is $6.5 million missing from the contract extension that he and his agent, Carl Poston, negotiated with the team in December.

The union oversees the certification and discipline of agents, but concern also is being voiced from other corners of the league.

"The agents are a concern because these kinds of mistakes cause controversy, dissent, friction, and bad feelings between the player and the club and the league," said Harold Henderson, the NFL's executive vice president of labor relations. "It's friction that you don't need in a negotiation-based system. The rules should be applied clearly, and some of these people don't know some of the rules. . . . Because it affects their future business, they [agents] never will admit a mistake. They fight everything. They'll lay the blame with someone else, and they'll cause lawyers to over-reach just to get out of it.

"I'd like to see it policed more carefully."

Henderson said there are too many certified agents, and the best in the field have too many clients while others have few clients and almost no experience. Vincent said the union needs to "create a better screening process" and work harder to educate the agents that it does certify. Players also must do their part, Upshaw said, by picking good agents and firing those who make costly mistakes.

"The most amazing thing is the loyalty you see on the players' part," Upshaw said. "You try to tell them, and they say they trust the guy. It's like the old saying, 'You can't tell a guy his wife is ugly.' And, in some of these cases, she's fat, too. But they don't want to hear it."

Said veteran NFL agent Peter Schaffer: "In some of these cases, you're talking about the difference between [a player] having financial security for life and not. Mistakes are made in every walk of life. But, to me, missing a deadline or not reading a contract is inexcusable, bordering on malpractice. I don't know if it should be up to the union to fix it. Yes, the union is in charge of licensing and monitoring agents. But a player should make sure that the person representing him is not just competent, but highly skilled and able to keep up with the changes in the business."

The union's agent disciplinary committee is a five-member panel of current and former players consisting of Vincent, Trace Armstrong, Robert Porcher, Robert Smith, and Larry Izzo. The committee can issue a complaint against an agent, who then is given a chance to respond before the committee decides on possible disciplinary action ranging from a reprimand to a fine to a suspension to lifetime decertification. An agent can appeal any disciplinary action to arbitrator Roger Kaplan, and normally is allowed to continue to represent players during the appeal. Cases generally take six months or more to be resolved.

Richard Berthelsen, the union's general counsel who serves as counsel to the committee, declined to comment on the status of any particular case before the group, but said: "Given the lessons we've learned this off-season, the [agents'] emphasis needs to be on contract language as much as dollars and cents."

Joseph denied any wrongdoing in the Owens case, and said of possible disciplinary action: "They well may try to go after me. I can't control what they do. If they do, it would be unfortunate. I don't want to get into a screaming match with the union. They were very supportive in this. Whatever course of action they choose, that's their decision. At this point, in my mind, they did a good job. We feel we were vindicated."

Rosales Gets First LPGA Tour Victory

STOCKBRIDGE, Ga. (AP) — Jennifer Rosales won for the first time on the LPGA Tour, shooting a 7-under-par 65 Sunday to overcome all the big names ahead of her at the Chick-fil-A Charity Championship. "It's great to win when all the top players are playing," Rosales said after her one-stroke win at Eagle's Landing Country Club in suburban Atlanta.

The 25-year-old Filipino began the day four shots behind Song, who turned 18 on Saturday and hoped to surpass Hall of Famer Marlene Hagge as the youngest winner ever.

But the talented teenager fell apart in the final-day spotlight, soaring to a 78 that left her nine strokes behind the winner.

"If I keep putting myself in positions like this, hopefully it will happen soon," Song said. "I was a little tight at the start."

ahead of the final group, saved par at the par-5 final hole despite knocking her second shot into the temporary clubs seats lining the left side of the green.

She was allowed to drop next to the stands, winding up with a terrible lie in the thick rough. She blasted out onto the green, missed a long putt, and tapped in for par.

That was good enough. While Rosales paced nervously behind the scoring tent, sneaking in a cigarette and talking with family on her cell phone, several golfers had a chance to pull even with the leader's 14-under 274.

OSTRAVA, Czech Republic (AP) — Former NHL player Jonas Hoglund scored two goals Sunday to lead Sweden to a 3-1 victory over the United States in a qualifying round game at the world hockey championships.

Sweden, already in the quarterfinals, is tied with Slovakia for first place in Group F with seven points. Slovakia beat Denmark, 8-0, earlier Sunday.

The Americans, who needed at least a tie with Sweden to reach the quarterfinals, now must get at least a point against Denmark in the qualifying round finale Tuesday.

KEYS TO WRITING A SUCCESSFUL TERM PAPER

by Jesse Ammerman

- Though the technique works for some rap artists, slandering your mother and boasting of unexpectedly intricate sexual scenarios might actually hurt your cause here.
- When listing resources in the bibliography, include your credit-card number and any spare cash that you might have on hand. This will give your TA an idea of what type of grade you expect to receive.
- Generally, plagiarism is a risk to be avoided. Even the most well-trained eyes can tell when you've lifted entire passages and illustrations from Clifford's First Halloween.
- When doing research, try using at least a few sources other than this month's make-out quiz in Cosmo.
- Even if you're pressed for time, it is recommended that you use a word-processing program rather than the usual Magic Marker.
- The introduction of a sexy femme fatale will add important elements of lust and intrigue to your story. What this vixen actually had to do with the Yalta Conference of 1945 and its ensuing impact on the Cold War can be left for your professor to decipher.
- Finding the right quotes to support your argument is always a challenge. An important reference might be singer-songwriter Paul McCartney, whose all-knowing pearls of wisdom can be found in such pieces as "Band on the Run" and "Silly Love Songs."
- Filling eight to 10 pages can prove difficult at times. Cut out some nice glossy magazine photos to help bolster your page total.

quote of the day

"America is a country that doesn't know where it is going but is determined to set a speed record getting there."

horoscopes

Monday, May 3, 2004 by Eugenia Last

- ARIES (March 21-April 19): Help an organization that lobbies for environmental or social causes, and you will find a comfortable place for yourself. Put your talents to good use.
- TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The more meetings or interviews you set up or the more time spent perfecting what you are working on, the better. Today you must strive to advance.
- GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Pursue your creative dream. Meeting new people who are interested in the same thing you are could lead to an interesting partnership. Children may play a role in your life today.
- CANCER (June 21-July 22): Focus on what you can accomplish, not on what you can't. You may not have any luck getting others to do what you want, but you can make some changes at home that will please you.
- LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Short jaunts to a friend's place or a group meeting will offer you interesting information that will help you with a project you are trying to get off the ground. Partnerships may seem a little quirky today, but they will be excellent for you.
- VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may be reverting back to some old ideas today. You may have gotten off track, but with a little effort, belief in yourself, and research, you can change your course.
- LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You will be feeling a little anxious, but that can be rectified by spending some time with someone you love. Put some money toward enhancing your looks, and you will feel ready to conquer the world.
- SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Force yourself to deal with all the little things you've been brushing off. Settle any differences with your peers. It's probably been keeping you from moving forward.
- SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Being a crusader for a cause you believe in will motivate you and introduce you to people who can aid you in other ways. An intellectual organization will support your ideas.
- CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be your own worst enemy today. Don't interact with colleagues or peers if you don't have to. Do the work yourself.
- AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Think about the possibilities, and work toward making them happen. Pick up the slack, and move in a direction that will make a difference to you and those who care about you.
- PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Prepare to invest in something you believe in. Your ideas and talent must be put to better use. You may be burdened with an added responsibility — take care of it quickly and without complaint.
