Regents list priorities in 2004-05 plan

BY DONOVAN BURBA
THE DAILY IOWAN

The state Board of Regents will discuss a new, long-range agenda at its meeting June 15-16 in Okoboji, Iowa, in addition to officially approving the fiscal 2005 budget.

John Forsyth regents president

John Forsyth spearheaded the formation of the Board Work Plan for 2004-05 in an effort to give the regents a big-picture, strategic approach.

"Thinking about big complex institutions, like the regents universities, they all have plans set out," Forsyth told

The Daily Iowan. "You can't do things one meeting at a time."

The proposed plan includes 13 priorities. Among them are developing long-term fiscal strategies, promoting economic growth by regents institutions, and seeking the best investment returns.

Forsyth and regents President Pro Tem Robert Downer held conference calls with each individual university president in developing the plan, talks that generally lasted between an hour and an hour and a half, Downer said.

The presidents "have in all cases been most receptive to the initiative," he said.

"They want to have the process laid out so they know what to expect and can prioritize their own time to avoid

Building on Campus

The UI is undergoing an unprecedented 61-project, $750 million construction surge

BY NATE GREEN
THE DAILY IOWAN

The UI is undergoing a face-lift of unprecedented proportions.

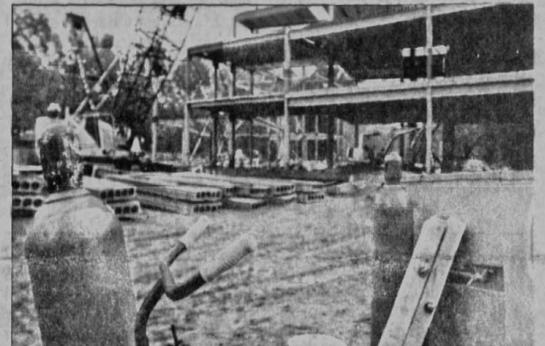

In all, 61 capital-improvement projects with a price tag of more than $750 million are either in progress or set to begin during the 2004-05 academic year, according to a state Board of Regents memorandum released Thursday.

Of the $750 million, the regents are expected to approve approximately $270 million in projects at their June 15 and 16 meeting at the Lakeside Laboratory on West Lake Okoboji.

Rod Lehnertz, the director of planning for the UI Facilities Services Group, said it is the most construction the campus has ever seen, adding that the recent surge is a result of long-range planning.

"Preparation typically takes place years in advance," he said. "We started planning the Art Building in '98 and the Kinnick renovation and the journalism building back in '99."

UI Vice President for Finance Doug True said the $750 million total may be misleading — it reflects three or four years worth of projects and comes from a variety of funding sources.

"It is important to understand that each project is funded uniquely; very little money is coming from the state," he said.

Student room-and-board fees will completely fund a $49 million west campus residence hall, he said, and an $86.8 million renovation of Kinnick Stadium will be paid for solely through athletics donations and ticket revenue.

Revamping the Chemistry Building for $35.2 million is one of a few examples of a project funded almost wholly through state funds, True said.

Council to discuss holding utility vote

JIM BUTTS
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa City City Council on June 14 will discuss holding a special election for a non-binding vote on a new utilities agreement with MidAmerican Energy Co.

If the election is held, a "yes" vote on a new franchise agreement with MidAmerican would authorize but not require a city deal with the power company.

MidAmerican representatives requested the election at the June 1 council meeting to help advance their side of a long-standing argument — whether Iowa City will continue its relationship with MidAmerican or create a city-owned municipal electrical utility.

"It provides the residents with an earlier opportunity to show their opinion on a municipal utility," said Alan Urlis, the MidAmerican director of media relations. "That way you're taking a step toward resolution on an issue that's been ongoing for three years."

The special election could pre-empt a similar referendum on establishing a municipal electric utility to be held on the November 2005 ballot.

Bush: No NATO troops for Iraq

SAVANNAH, Ga. — President Bush said Thursday that he did not expect NATO to provide troops to Iraq, abandoning hope for such help after partners in the alliance raised objections.

In a news conference ending the three-day Group of Eight meeting of world leaders, which Bush hosted in Sea Island, Ga., the president said his only hope for the military alliance would be help in training Iraqi troops if the new interim government requests such help. "I don't expect more troops from NATO to be offered up," he said. "That's an unrealistic expectation. Nobody is suggesting that."

Administration officials had been hoping that passage Tuesday of the U.N. Security Council resolution endorsing U.S. plans for Iraq would make it easier to recruit more international funds and manpower. Bush said Wednesday that "NATO ought to

Branstad recalls Reagan

BY NICK PETERSEN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Forty years after Terry Branstad, the former Iowa governor and UI student, first heard former President Reagan give a speech on television, he will watch state officials pay their last respects to a man who inspired his interest in politics.

Branstad, who served as governor from 1983-98, was not even old enough to vote and Reagan was only toying with the idea of political office when he heard Reagan's famous speech endorsing Barry Goldwater during the 1964 campaign, the former president's first foray into politics. Reagan's political message and charisma immediately captured Branstad's attention.

"The Goldwater campaign was a disaster," said Branstad, who was a high-school junior at the time. "He wasn't able to convey the conservative agenda. Reagan did a phenomenal job of doing this."

— Terry Branstad, former governor

As chairman of the UI College Republicans in 1967, Branstad traveled with several carloads of students to attend a fund-raising dinner at Veterans Memorial Auditorium in Des Moines to hear Reagan speak again.

"He inspired me to want to get involved," Branstad said. "I think he did that for our whole country."

Branstad supported Reagan early and often, backing him in his failed attempt to obtain the Republican nomination for president in 1976 when the party instead chose Gerald Ford.

The two first met at a district convention in Des Moines when Branstad served as state representative and Reagan's campaign chairman for north-west Iowa. Reagan pulled him into a side room of the Renaissance Savery Hotel in Des Moines to escape the shouting crowds so Branstad could brief him on his speech. Branstad said Reagan's upbeat personality was apparent both in front of a crowd and in person.

"He was proud of his Iowa roots, his enthusiasm was infectious, he had a great sense of humor, and he could tell a story," Branstad said.

Branstad recalled one story from Reagan's days at WHO radio in Des Moines. Reagan looked out the window of his apartment and saw a man

'Musical genius' Ray Charles dies

BY ANTHONY BREZNICAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Ray Charles, a transcendent talent who erased musical boundaries between the sacred and the secular with hits such as "What'd I Say," "Georgia on My Mind," "Hit the Road, Jack," and "I Can't Stop Loving You," died Thursday. He was 73.

Charles died of acute liver disease at his Beverly Hills home at 11:35 a.m., surrounded by family and friends, said spokesman Jerry Digney.

Blind by age 7 and an orphan at 15, the gifted pianist and saxophonist spent his life shattering any notion of musical categories and defying easy definition. One of the first artists to record the "blasphemous idea of taking gospel songs and putting the devil's words to them," as legendary producer Jerry Wexler once said, Charles' music spanned soul, rock 'n' roll, R&B, country, jazz, big band, and blues.

He put his stamp on it all with a deep, warm voice roughened by heartbreak from a hard-scrabble childhood in the segregated South. Smiling and swaying behind the piano, grunts and moans peppering his songs, Charles' appeal spanned generations.

His health deteriorated rapidly over the past year, after he had hip replacement surgery and was diagnosed with a failing liver. The Grammy winner's last public appearance was alongside Clint Eastwood on April 30, when the city of Los Angeles designated the singer's studios, built 40 years ago, as a historic landmark.

"Ray Charles was a man we particularly admired both as a friend and as an artist. We had a great time recently reminiscing together, and we will all miss him very much," Eastwood said Thursday. He filmed Charles extensively for a segment in the 2003 documentary The Blues.

Bruce Hornsby, another singer and piano player, recalled hearing Charles perform at a tribute to Elton John about a year ago. Charles was feeble, and he was walked to the electric piano, but backstage he held artists like Brian Wilson, Diana Krall, Norah Jones, and John Mayer in thrall.

"When he started singing, that was it," Hornsby said. "Everyone else was playing for second."

Charles won nine of his 12 Grammy Awards between 1960 and 1966, including the best R&B recording three consecutive years ("Hit the Road, Jack," "I Can't Stop Loving You," and "Busted").

Gov't: 4,600 jobs sent offshore in 3 months

BY LEIGH STROPE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — More than 4,600 workers in the United States saw their jobs sent overseas in the first three months of the year, the Labor Department said Thursday in a report tracking such job losses for the first time.

The 4,633 displaced workers were only a fraction — approximately 2 percent — of the 239,361 private-sector, non-farm workers who lost their jobs for at least 31 days from January through March.

But the Labor Department figures aren't comprehensive. They only include layoffs at companies employing 50 workers or more, where at least 50 people filed for unemployment benefits during a five-week period and were out of work for more than 30 days. Approximately a third of all mass layoffs extend for more than 30 days, the report said.

Offshoring, or the outsourcing of jobs to other countries, has affected blue-collar workers in America's factories for years. But the issue has been magnified in a presidential election year with an exodus of white-collar service jobs, particularly in call centers and technical support.

The Bush administration is sensitive to the issue — it was criticized for an economic report in February stating that offshoring jobs "makes sense," followed by comments from President Bush's economics team supporting that view. The White House's nominee for a new position to focus on the loss of manufacturing jobs withdrew over criticisms his company cut U.S. jobs and shifted work to China.

But economists, including Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, say the United States must compete in a global economy that also will help create new jobs at home.

"The protectionist cures being advanced to address these hardships will make matters worse rather than better," Greenspan said in a February speech to the Omaha, Neb., Chamber of Commerce. "Protectionism will do little to create jobs, and if foreigners retaliate, we will surely lose jobs."

The report also found that 9,985 workers were laid off because work was relocated domestically, both within a company and to other companies. There were 119 layoffs due to outsourcing domestically and internationally, with 16,021 workers losing jobs. The average job loss was 135 workers.

Two-thirds of the work relocation cases were in manufacturing, and two-thirds of the workers who lost jobs were in that industry.

The Midwest had the largest proportion of workers laid off from work relocations, at 34 percent, followed by the South (31 percent), the West (27 percent), and the Northeast (8 percent).

Of all layoffs, the West was hit hardest with 43 percent, followed by the Midwest (29 percent), the South (16 percent), and the Northeast, 12 percent.

Gaming panel votes to lift moratorium

JOHNSTON, Iowa (AP) — The Iowa Racing and Gaming Commission voted Thursday to begin the process of lifting a moratorium on new casino licenses in the state.

The commission voted 4-1 to remove the limit, but the change won't become official until after the commission holds a series of public meetings.

Several counties seeking to bring gambling to their communities asked the commission to lift the moratorium, which was imposed in 1998. The commission sought guidance from the Legislature, which referred the question back to the commission.

Approximately 250 people, most of them from the six counties seeking to build casinos, packed into a meeting room to show their support for expanded gambling and the economic boost they say gambling would bring to their communities.

"We are crying out for economic development in the rural areas," said Rep. Mary Gaskill, D-Ottumwa.

Ed Gallagher, a Waterloo attorney and the president of the nonprofit organization hoping to sponsor a riverboat in Black Hawk County, said the 600 jobs created with a new casino are badly needed.

Opponents, including Michael Hartwig, the vice president of community affairs for the Iowa Family Policy Center, asked the commission to delay action until after a study to research the social impact of gambling is completed.

In passing a bill permitting gambling expansion, the Legislature also required a $100,000 study.

★★★ out of ★★★★★

When I think of children's movie franchises, I am usually reminded of such soulless and depressing series as Pokémon, The Mighty Morphin Power Rangers, and The Adventures of Mary-Kate & Ashley. Long gone are the days of the Star Wars, Back to the Future, and Indiana Jones episodes, when parents could take their kids to a sweet and sincere fantasy-adventure that wanted nothing more than to entertain all age groups — and did. Those older movies put their whole heart into spinning an involving yarn with enchanting characters and vocally projected a sense of awe, innocence, and inspiration in their storytelling.

Today's family films, regrettably, seem to be mass produced with as much care and artistic craft as the hot dogs churned out of the Oscar Mayer factories (and that's not saying much for the folks at Oscar Mayer). Recent movies aimed at kids are often too preoccupied with establishing a recognizable, moneymaking brand name and forget to give us a work that will be remembered as something more than a ridiculous fad. Harry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban, the third installment in the sensationally popular series, proves that these films are more than just a passing fancy or a two-hit wonder.

Chris Columbus, the director of the previous two Potter entries — Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone (2001) and Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets (2002) — hands the directorial torch to Alfonso Cuarón (best known for the acclaimed and sexually candid Mexican film of three years ago, Y tu mamá también). Cuarón, however, may not be the strangest choice for the job; he did helm adaptations of Frances Hodgson Burnett's A Little Princess in 1995 and Charles Dickens' Great Expectations in 1998. While J.K. Rowling's best-selling Potter novels, which I have yet to read, may not have reached the level of classic literary prestige as Burnett and Dickens, they're certainly the hottest pop phenomenon on the book scene this side of Tolkien.

In Azkaban, the students at Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry are a little older, and, appropriately, their new adventures are a good deal darker than what we've seen before. Not only does the film have a thrilling visual darkness, but the tones and themes have reached a surprising realm of maturity and uneasiness. As a result, Azkaban is the best Potter movie yet.

Harry (Daniel Radcliffe), the boy wizard, returns for his third year at Hogwarts and is reunited with his best friends Ron (Rupert Grint) and Hermione (Emma Watson). Most of their professors are back for another term, as well, including Snape (Alan Rickman), McGonagall (Maggie Smith), and Dumbledore (Michael Gambon, replacing the late Richard Harris).

Robbie Coltrane reprises his role as Hagrid, the beloved school groundskeeper, who now teaches his own class. Familiar antagonists, such as school bully Draco Malfoy (Tom Felton) and Harry's mean Uncle Vernon (Richard Griffiths), also appear.

Rounding out the cast of delightful British character actors are David Thewlis and Emma Thompson as new school faculty members with mysterious pasts and motives and Timothy Spall in a surprise role near the end. The always interesting Gary Oldman, as Sirius Black, plays the prisoner to which the title refers. Black was allegedly involved in the murder of Harry's parents, and, now that this convicted killer has escaped from jail, he's making his way towards Hogwarts to get Harry.

This fantasy trilogy is not a great one (the films are too long and tackle an excess number of subplots), but it is a good, solid set of family movies that relies on imagination and clever wit to rouse both the young and young in spirit.

Practicality of mistreating prisoners

In upholding both the spirit and the letter of international treaties, the United States should set an example for the world. ...These rules protect our soldiers.

"There's a reason why we sign these treaties: to protect my son in the military. That's why we have these treaties, so when Americans are captured, they are not tortured. That's the reason, in case anybody forgets it."

In questioning Attorney General John Ashcroft this week, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., reminded Americans why we should care about the treatment of prisoners being held by our military.

It is the responsibility of Ashcroft to provide Congress with all documents pertaining to the Bush administration's role in the treatment of prisoners. The recently disclosed memoranda, which advise the government of loopholes in prohibitions against torture established by the Geneva Conventions, reflect a dangerous atmosphere of acceptance of prisoner mistreatment.

Ashcroft appeared before Congress saying President Bush had "made no order that would require or direct the violation" of laws, either national or international, that prohibit torture. Yet the very reason Ashcroft spoke to the committee was that these memos advise members of the administration on how to inflict pain and humiliate prisoners without falling under the definition of torture, particularly pointing to the paralegal status of Guantánamo Bay. He also pointed to the investigations at Abu Ghraib as evidence that the administration does not tolerate torture. However, only weeks ago, the administration refused to use the word "torture" in relation to the events there. Both at Guantánamo Bay and at Abu Ghraib, prisoner guards need to be held directly accountable for allegations concerning mistreatment of those under their watch, as do their superiors.

After the infamous Stanford Prisoner Experiment of 1971, the United States military must be well aware of the potential for abuse by guards, even in an environment that does not encourage it. In that experiment, the students who were designated as guards started abusing those designated as prisoners within days. In an eerie similarity to the Abu Ghraib photos, prisoners were stripped, hooded, and forced to simulate sodomizing one another before the experimenter shut down the trial. With this information, the administration and the military have the responsibility to actively enforce the humane treatment of prisoners, rather than picking apart the legal wording of our laws.

In upholding both the spirit and the letter of international treaties, the United States should set an example for the world. In applying them unequally, we set up a dangerous precedent for the rest of the world to follow. These rules protect our soldiers. As a draft looks more and more likely, and with the elimination of the college exemption, the mistreatment of American prisoners becomes a vital issue on a very personal scale.

Accountability, not a leap of faith

In recent months, serious federal money has started flowing to religiously affiliated social services. Of the $14.5 billion in social-service grants to communities given out by five federal agencies in the last fiscal year, nearly $1.2 billion went to faith organizations, according to a report from the White House Office of Faith-Based and Community Initiatives. The White House has established faith offices in several Cabinet departments to help with grants for such things as alcohol treatment and low-cost housing assistance.

President Bush, who created a faith-based-initiative office in January 2001 as one of his first executive orders, iterated in a speech last week that taxpayer dollars shouldn't be barred from organizations with "a rabbi on the board, cross on the wall, or crescent on the door." But here's the rub: That cross, star, or crescent may prevent the oversight that lets taxpayers know whether they are getting their money's worth. And, as Hendrik Hertzberg puts it in the May 31 New Yorker, the church-state wall could end up with gaps "wide enough to drive a tractor-trailer full of federal cash through."

Congress is on the sidelines. Lawmakers failed last year to pass legislation establishing a moderate set of rules for federal funding to faith-based groups. It gave Bush an opportunity to fund the groups by executive order, with virtually no oversight.

Anecdotal evidence and a few academic studies show that faith-based social-service programs help people lead more stable and productive lives.

In Los Angeles and other cities, for instance, the Volunteers of America, founded in 1897 by the son of the founder of the Salvation Army, has kept people off the streets by combining job and education services with shelter. It offers — but does not require — religious education, and it has won awards as an effective charity.

None of the studies is empirically rock-solid, and no wonder. What's missing, and impossible to achieve under current law, is overall accountability. The director of one of the government's faith-based offices, who asked not to be named, said Monday, "We don't track outcomes, and we don't fund outcomes." Bush, in his speech last week, acknowledged that although his administration had given "$1.1 billion in grants to faith-based groups, it's kind of hard to fully account for it. I would call that an estimate."

Federal laws generally prohibit government from, for instance, auditing the tax records of religious organizations. If such groups receive taxpayer dollars, these prohibitions should be eased. Federal funds should not support proselytizing. Hiring in social-service programs should not be discriminatory, though religious groups are free to discriminate in their privately funded affairs. These are not onerous conditions.

Allowing religious organizations to bring their ideas to prison, welfare, and homeless programs could give new meaning to serving society. In exchange, there should be a visible bottom line so taxpayers can see what they're getting for the money.

Magical, magical 21

As we recently found out, Iowa City's nightlife is not going to look quite the same this summer. And it's not just because the bulk of the university's undergrads won't be here to make their presence very visibly and audibly known on the Pedestrian Mall on weekend nights. Or because drink specials have changed.

On second thought, though, maybe that is part of the reason. After all, several bars won't have any drink specials because they won't have any drinks.

It's because they committed the one sin that is above all other sins among watering holes across the United States: serving alcoholic beverages to individuals under the magical age of 21. What an utterly despicable act.

PETE WARSKI

Twenty-one. One really has to wonder where that number came from. Is it a legacy of the fact that the 21st Amendment to the U.S. Constitution repealed Prohibition? Maybe on the surface Americans hated it and wanted to get rid of it, but deep down there was a need to keep some semblance of it embedded in our society. What better way to do that than shift prohibition from the general population to a politically disenfranchised sector? To popularize the notion that somehow it's inherently dangerous and wrong for those of you under that number of years to imbibe, but perfectly acceptable for the rest of us?

Well, it worked. And Prohibition in this country continues, albeit to a lesser degree. The 21st Amendment worked perfectly for us. It gave us back the right to enjoy that spirited beverage at the end of a long day, but it also served — intentionally or not — as the number that would be the legal age for doing so. A memento, if you will, of the social experiment that didn't work but that is still enforced among an age group.

Most would agree that there should be a drinking age. It would be a risky proposition to grant 12-year-olds the license to tinkle tequila, no doubt. Is it too outlandish, however, to point out how counterintuitive it is to give 19-year-olds weapons and heavy machinery to fight and die in Iraq while simultaneously slapping their wrists when they look at beer? And is it preposterous to say that maybe the enforcement of this law is just a bit draconian? Each of the bars whose liquor license was revoked was cited on four separate occasions for serving alcohol to minors. Does it mean that four people risked their lives in each of those situations? Drinking or being in mere possession of booze under age 21 is intrinsically perilous, remember.

Were that the case, it would perhaps be appropriate to put businesses out of business for their errors (or indifference) in age verification. But it isn't. Perhaps if we expressed equal outrage over the misuse of liquor by legal bar patrons, some progress would be made. But we don't. And perhaps if some effort was made to quell the illusion that society would effectively be destroyed if we allowed 20-year-olds to drink, we would focus our law-enforcement efforts on more crucial areas. But no such effort has been made.

So now we have several more former bars in and around downtown sitting vacant, destined to one day be reopened as the same thing. And those bars will eventually be ticketed and closed, and the vicious cycle will continue. It's because of a stubborn obsession with an irrational drinking age that cries out for reform. It's fairly obvious that this iron-fisted enforcement policy is futile. If it worked, wouldn't we see progressively fewer offenses?

Certainly there are those who would argue against making an issue out of bars that close in College Town USA for serving to Johnny Minor. There are more important things happening around us, right? Yep, there sure are. Assaults, for instance. Drunken driving. Arson. Rape. Domestic abuse. Are we to believe that all these other offenses are committed solely by minors and that they will cease to occur if we simply get a grasp on our underage-drinking problem? Maybe we should just bar minors from this town entirely. That way they wouldn't be around to cause their shenanigans. I'll drink to that.

Building projects abound at UI

BUILDING

Regents President Pro Tem Robert Downer agreed that it is the most construction he has seen at the UI, but he attributed it to many years of deferring projects and maintenance.

"There isn't anything going right now that isn't needed," he said. "It just seems they all got bunched up."

And while Downer pointed to the recently approved Chemistry Building renovation as a "well-planned project, 20 years overdue," he offered a different view of the newly completed $10 million Karro Athletics Hall of Fame and Visitors Center.

"The Hall of Fame Building was a good object lesson of something that should have been better integrated into the Kinnick Stadium renovation. It points to the need for long-range planning," he said.

Despite the large number of construction projects already underway, Lehnertz said, he has heard few complaints from the university community.

"There have been many inquiries and a lot of excitement," he said. "The construction may be an inconvenience, but we have tried to effectively communicate and plan for alternative routes."

UI Student Government Pres-

Ben Roberts/The Daily Iowan
Construction continues Thursday on the new Art Building, located across Riverside Drive from the existing facility. The building is expected to be completed in July 2005.

ident Lindsay Schutte said she had not heard of any complaints from students about construction but did express concern about the projects' implications in the face of budget cuts and rising tuition.

"When you have $12 million to cut out of the university budget and students paying more out of their pockets every year, it is kind of hard to handle," she said. "But it gives me a lot of pride knowing that UI administrators care about the university and want to improve student quality of life. I just hope these projects are not at the expense of the academic integrity of the university."

Regents to set priorities

stops, and starts, and rapid shifts in what they're expected to bring to the board," he said.

Downer and Forsyth said the presidents had similar concerns. Forsyth expects a "reasonable" amount of discussion about the proposal, but he does not foresee anybody removing a priority from the list.

"No one gave us anything that was mutually exclusive," he said. "No one was telling us to turn left when everyone else was trying to go right."

Barbara Boose, the regents' communications specialist, noted that the plan is the first of its kind in the board's history.

"There's always been a set schedule" to talk about such issues as tuition and fees, she said, "but this is just in the bigger picture."

The plan, if approved, will be reviewed every six months, with a new one created each year.

The regents will also approve the operating budget for the next fiscal year during its June 15-16 meeting. UI President David Skorton cut $2 million from the general education fund on May 17, reductions that are reflected in the fiscal 2005 budget.

Included in the cuts were a $300,000 reduction in athletics funds, $250,000 in utility use, and another quarter-million dollars in custodial service. While Skorton said the proposed 2005 budget is the school's "best attempt" to maintain quality and focus on the university's most important fields, he remains troubled by the inability to raise faculty salaries.

"I am very concerned with the very little increase in faculty salaries and salaries of scientific and research staff," he said.

harassing a woman on the sidewalk. Reagan aimed his gun at the man and yelled at him until he ran away in fright.

In 1984, when Reagan was in Des Moines campaigning for re-election, Branstad recalled the woman using the chance to thank Reagan.

"What I didn't tell you at the time was that the gun wasn't loaded," said Reagan, shaking her hand. "The most I could have done is thrown it at the man."

When Branstad became governor, he met with Reagan several times to advise the president about the Midwest farm crisis of the 1980s, a time when many farmers faced major financial difficulties.

"I told him not to come back to Iowa until he had an agricultural debt-reduction plan," Branstad said with a laugh.

Branstad said Reagan not only helped him politically but also aided the nation at a time when Americans thought the best days were behind them.

"He restored the pioneer spirit of optimism and opportunity, which is that if you work hard and get a good education, you can accomplish wonderful things," Branstad said.

be involved" in Iraq — a contention quickly rebutted by French President Jacques Chirac and Turkish Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan.

Although Bush did not specify the cooperation sought, White House spokesman Scott McClellan, asked twice in recent weeks about a large military mission for NATO in Iraq, did not discourage the notion, saying "those discussions are really just getting underway."

Bush met jointly and individually with leaders from industrialized nations on Sea Island. The G-8 chiefs, joined by heads of government from several African and Muslim nations, agreed to cooperate on a broad range of issues, from democratic reforms in the Middle East to development of an AIDS vaccine.

But the meeting was dominated by Iraq and the Bush administration's efforts to secure more international help for the interim Iraqi government. Bush's hopes of winning NATO involvement, foreign troops, and debt relief for Iraq were thwarted at various points this week by France, Germany, and Turkey.

"We understand that the Iraqi people need help to defend themselves, to rebuild their country, and, most importantly, to hold elections," Bush said Thursday morning after a meeting with Chirac.

But other leaders here for the G-8 were doubtful about prospects for Iraq. "The resolution is a political basis, is an attempt to improve the chances of stabilizing," German Chancellor Gerhard Schröder told reporters. "Whether that attempt can succeed is an open question. I MidAmerican for requesting the special election, saying the utility was trying "to circumvent the process that has been established." He called on the City Council to reject the request for a special election and require the MidAmerican vote take place on the same ballot as the municipal power referendum, in November 2005.

"The City Council can simply say, 'You guys get in the ring together and duke it out,' and that's all we're asking," Baker said. Councilor Connie Champion said she did not have a problem with a special election but felt the vote would be unimportant because it was nonbinding.

"I just think it's silly, but I don't deny them the right to do it," she said. "I think they think there will be an overwhelming approval at the ballot, and I don't think they'll find that."

Councilor Bob Elliott said he needed to review all the information before deciding whether to support a special election. He said it was too early to tell the future of the city's power supply.

"It's like asking who do you think is going to win the World Series, and I'd say I think there's a lot of baseball to play before we even know who will be in the World Series," he said.

If the special election is approved, it would be paid for by MidAmerican Energy, as required by Iowa Code.

DO'S AND DON'TS TO FAKING YOUR OWN KIDNAPPING

by Josh Bald

- DO make sure to tell a friend, "Hey, I think I'm going to get kidnapped today," so he or she can verify your story.
- DON'T eat anything for at least 24 hours before you are "found." Authorities will be suspicious of your healthy complexion and why your breath smells like barbecue sauce.
- DO stock up on restraining devices that show you were bound and abducted, such as rope and duct tape — you know, like that crazy chick in Wisconsin did a couple months ago.
- DON'T simply toss yourself in a ravine next door to your apartment and wait for someone to find you — you know, like that crazy chick in Wisconsin did a couple months ago.
- DO make it appear there was a struggle — break all your roommate's possessions and toss them around the apartment.
- DON'T claim a masked man abducted you. What, do we live in the Wild West? Is he going to tie you up and leave you on some railroad tracks?
- Once you've grown tired of being a "kidnapping victim," DON'T call the police from the trunk of your car almost four hours after being "abducted."
- DO seek psychiatric help if you're doing it to win back your boyfriend, you attention-starved wacko. He isn't coming back. But hey, I'm available.

Greek athlete final of 5,000 at the Athens Olympic summer games

Olympic first

BY RO

ASSOCIATED PRESS ATHENS, Greece — The long stadium look from the ground needed a little cocoon.

The unfinished Athens Olympic stadium was a Greek track on wheels as cranes continued to build the site for the Summer Olympics that begin in Athens.

With construction hard hats perched on the ballyhoos, the stadium roof and a half sitting on the ground, the stadium became prime real estate. It hosted its first event before the Aug. 13 opening ceremony.

The podium was in the starter's pistol, directed visitors and to a store of strollers. Six weeks of dirt off leading to an event.

But the nine great shape, scoreboards is athletes seem commotion track. For the culmination anxious wait.

"I think it'll recruiting become, when they look [at] the facility usually," said a Freshman of the school.

The school was in the fall of 2002 when new athletics facility house eight indoor as 12 outdoor Athletics Hall completed. In the 2002 meeting the facility was completed in the next season. The next season said the completion in the fall of 2004.

Greek athletes Eleni Nikolopoulou and Kalliope Astroppekaki run in the final of 5,000 meters during the Greek track and field championship at the Athens Olympic stadium on Thursday. This is the debut of the Olympic stadium 64 days before the opening ceremony for the 2004 summer games, two years after the work started.

Olympic Stadium gets first test at Greek track championships

BY ROB GLOSTER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATHENS, Greece — From the air, the long-awaited Olympic stadium looks like a butterfly. From the ground, it seems to need a little more time in its cocoon.

The unfinished centerpiece of the Athens Games got its first test Thursday, hosting the Greek track and field championships as bulldozers and cranes continued preparing the site for the Summer Olympics that begin in two months.

With construction workers in hard hats peering down from the ballyhooed steel-and-glass roof and a handful of spectators sitting on pipes destined to become prime seats, the stadium hosted its first — and only — event before the Aug. 13-29 Olympics.

The pounding of jackhammers was interrupted by a starter's pistol. Temporary signs directed visitors to their "seats" and to a storage area for baby strollers. Six workers in overalls swept dirt off the marble steps leading to an entrance.

But the nine-lane track is in great shape, one of the two scoreboards is working, and few athletes seemed bothered by the commotion surrounding the track. For many, it was the culmination of a long and anxious wait.

"I'm very impressed. It's almost done," said Ekaterini Thanou, the defending Olympic silver medalist in the women's 100 meters. "We have two months more to finish some small things."

Organizers will use the three-day championships as a way to test the 75,000-seat stadium that will host the Olympic opening and closing ceremonies as well as track and field events. It will be a run-through for 700 volunteers, as well as countless police and other security personnel.

Though organizers said they would have staffers purposely try to circumvent metal detectors during the championships to see if the security system works, there was little sense of urgency on a sun-swept Thursday morning.

A reporter who showed up 15 minutes before the start of the first event, the men's discus throw, got bemused looks from the 11 police officers at one security checkpoint when he offered to open his laptop bag for inspection. The police waved him through without opening the bag.

Security seemed tighter at night, with all visitors directed through metal detectors.

Proposed facility always pushed back

COURTS

"I think it'll be a difference on recruiting because a lot of people, when they look at schools, look [at] the facility first thing, usually," said the 2004 Big Ten Freshman of the Year.

The school has toyed since the fall of 2002 with the idea of a new athletics facility that would house eight indoor and as many as 12 outdoor courts near the Athletics Hall of Fame. The date of the new facility's completion has been pushed back repeatedly. In the 2002 men's media guide, the facility was scheduled to be completed in the spring of 2004. The next season's media guide said the complex would be done in the fall of 2004.

Now, many question whether the dream of a new complex will ever become a reality.

"I don't think it's a dead issue," Houghton said. "It's funny. The diving coach, Bob Rydze, is a friend of mine. I'm 55 years old, and he's probably a little older than I am. For the last 10 years, we've been in this thing together. At one time, what was supposed to happen was, the Hall of Fame, swimming, and tennis were all supposed to be built concurrently in that area."

While enough funding was raised to erect the Hall of Fame, Houghton and his friend are still waiting for their programs' new home.

"Bob and I used to joke that we hope this gets built before we retire," Houghton said.

New York Yankees John Flaherty crosses the plate to greet teammates after hitting a sixth-inning grand slam off Colorado Rockies pitcher Scott Dohmann Thursday in New York.

Yanks slam Rockies

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — John Flaherty hit a grand slam, and Jose Contreras got through seven shaky innings to lead the New York Yankees past the Colorado Rockies, 10-4, on Thursday.

After the erratic Contreras wasted a three-run lead, Flaherty singled home the go-ahead run and followed up with his third career slam in New York's 13th-straight interleague win.

Contreras (3-2) allowed Todd Helton's two-run homer in the third and solo shots to Luis Gonzalez and Choo Freeman — Colorado's No. 8 and 9 batters — in the fourth.

But New York came back and completed a three-game sweep, winning for the 14th time in its last 16 games and improving to 30-9 following its 8-11 start. Colorado has lost five straight, one shy of its season high.

Bernie Williams tripled and singled twice in his first three at-bats, reaching 2,000 hits for his career.

Alex Rodriguez hit a tying double in the fourth off Jason Jennings (5-6).

Tigers 7, Braves 4

DETROIT (AP) — Held hitless by Russ Ortiz until the sixth inning, Detroit rallied for a victory over Atlanta.

Carlos Pena hit a two-run double, and Dmitri Young singled in the go-ahead run for the Tigers, who took two of three in the series.

Bobby Higginson singled leading off the sixth for Detroit's first hit against Ortiz, who wound up with a no-decision. Mike Maroth (5-3) pitched seven innings for the win.

Chipper Jones hit a three-run homer for the Braves.

Tigers manager Alan Trammell wasn't around to see his team come back from a 4-1 deficit — he was ejected for the first time this season in the fifth inning by plate umpire Paul Emmel for arguing balls and strikes.

Expos 8, Royals 0, 1st game

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Zach Day pitched a six-hitter for his second career shutout, and Montreal ended a three-game skid with a victory over Kansas City in the first game of a double-header.

After Wednesday night's game was rained out, the start of this one was delayed by showers for 1 hour, 52 minutes.

Brad Wilkerson homered and drove in three runs for the Expos.

BCS to play 5 games at current 4 sites

COURTROOM

Judge denies Bryant bid on rape-shield law request

DENVER (AP) — The judge in the Kobe Bryant sexual-assault case on Thursday rejected arguments by the NBA star's attorneys that the state's rape-shield law is unconstitutional.

The rape-shield law, which has withstood other challenges since it was enacted in the mid-1970s, generally bars defense attorneys from using information about the sexual history of alleged assault victims.

Defense attorney Hal Haddon argued that the law violates Bryant's right to equal protection under the law because under another state law, a defendant's sexual history is presumed to be relevant and is admissible at trial.

State District Judge Terry Ruckriegle said Bryant's sexual history will not be brought up in court, making that argument irrelevant.

COMING BACK

Sosa likely to play next weekend

CHICAGO (AP) — Sammy Sosa should be back at Wrigley Field next weekend after a detour through Tennessee.

Sosa will go to Jackson, Tenn., on June 13 for a three-game rehab assignment with Double-A West Tennessee. He'll return to Chicago next Wednesday and, if there are no problems, be activated for the Chicago Cubs' June 18 inter-league game against Oakland.

"I didn't know the injury I had was going to take so much time," Sosa said Thursday. "I feel great now. I'm happy to know that I'll be playing in Wrigley Field again next Friday."

The prognosis for closer Joe Borowski isn't nearly as optimistic. Tests showed "some damage" in his right shoulder, and he will be examined by Dr. Lewis Yocum this weekend. Yocum will then consult with Dr. Stephen Gryzlo, the Cubs' orthopedist, on a diagnosis and treatment.

ON THE MARKET?

Lemieux: Penguins not for sale — yet

PRESTO, Pa. (AP) — Mario Lemieux might soon put the Pittsburgh Penguins up for sale unless the team works out a deal for a new arena.

Lemieux, speaking to reporters Thursday for the first time in seven months, said slot machines in Pennsylvania could be the club's last hope to replace 43-year-old Mellon Arena.

"If there's no arena in sight, then we have to explore all of our options," Lemieux said. "The franchise right now is not for sale, although I've had many inquiries, but it might be in the future."

Lemieux revealed he recently received three unsolicited and "encouraging" inquiries from out-of-town parties interested in the Penguins, though he didn't disclose their names or locations.

Pistons dominate Lakers to take lead

Los Angeles forward Luke Walton deflects the ball away from Detroit center Elden Campbell during game 3 of the NBA Finals Thursday night. The Pistons beat the Lakers, 88-68.

BY CHRIS SHERIDAN

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — As the entry pass floated inside to Shaquille O'Neal, Elden Campbell reached his left arm around and knocked it away. As O'Neal stood planted in the paint, Richard Hamilton picked up the loose ball and flung it forward.

The only player running downcourt was the 36-year-old Campbell, the backup center who was a rookie back in 1991 — one season after the Detroit Pistons were at the end of their glory years. Campbell caught the ball and went flying in for a left-handed jam, and the decibel level at the Palace went off the charts.

The play early in the fourth quarter not only gave the Pistons an 18-point lead, it symbolized the way the entire night went Detroit's way in a 88-68 victory Thursday night over Los Angeles in Game 3 of the NBA Finals.

Detroit's defense was suffocating, its offense was opportunistic, and its fans were in a frenzy.

Now, an NBA championship is very much within the Pistons reach, and it even seems like a distinct possibility. No Eastern Conference team has won a title since 1998, but these Pistons are proving that the time may have arrived for that drought to end.

Holding Kobe Bryant without a field goal in the first half and limiting the Lakers to the lowest point total in their storied franchise history, Detroit showed no aftereffects from its crushing Game 2 loss. The Pistons regained control of a series they've dominated for all but a few minutes.

Hamilton scored 31 points, and Chauncey Billups had 19 as Detroit's backcourt gave the Pistons just about all the offense they needed. Throw in double-figure rebounding performances by Ben Wallace and Rasheed Wallace, three steals apiece from Campbell and Tayshaun Prince, and it all added up to a lopsided game that could even be called a mismatch in favor of the team that entered the series as huge underdogs.

Status of tennis facility unknown

'Clearly, we have the worst tennis facility in the Big Ten — that's been true for a number of years now. Several schools around the Big Ten have built really nice facilities, and we haven't.'

— Steve Houghton,
 Iowa men's tennis coach

In the wake of progress, sacrifices often must be made.

A prime example is the upcoming facelift to Kinnick Stadium.

While the football team and fans alike will enjoy the benefits of a reported $86.8 million upgrade, others must pay a price. For example, the Iowa men's and women's tennis teams and numerous recreational players will be forced out of the Klotz Tennis Center when it is razed in early August to make way for a new south entrance to the football stadium.

Once the bulldozing begins, there will be no outdoor tennis courts left on campus.

"I've been connected to those courts one way or another since I was a freshman in college in 1967-68," recalled Steve Houghton, the men's tennis coach and former Hawkeye tennis player. "It's going to be a little nostalgic for me in a sense. Those courts have meant a lot to a lot of people. It's kind of sad to see them go."

The move leaves both the men's and women's teams searching for a new facility to practice in next fall, as well as a place to host home matches next spring.

Earlier this spring, Harry Ostrander, the director of Recreational Services, proposed a multimillion-dollar project to build an indoor and outdoor tennis facility — ideally on the university's west campus — to the school's Board of Regents. But the plan was rejected.

"At this point in time, we're intending to take the request back to the regents," Ostrander said. "I'm not exactly sure when.

That decision will be made by Vice President [Doug] True. But it looks like at this point in time that we're going to be without any outdoor tennis courts for at least a period of time."

Ostrander and Houghton said the men's and women's tennis squads will likely use the courts at City Park, near Hancher Auditorium, next season.

While the situation isn't ideal, Houghton admitted the squad's old stomping grounds were getting a bit decrepit.

"Klotz Courts were already in bad shape anyway," the coach said. "They were really cracked bad. So from a pure playing standpoint, City Park is probably better than Klotz Courts right now."

"Clearly, we have the worst tennis facility in the Big Ten — that's been true for a number of years now," he said. "Several schools around the Big Ten have built really nice facilities, and we haven't."

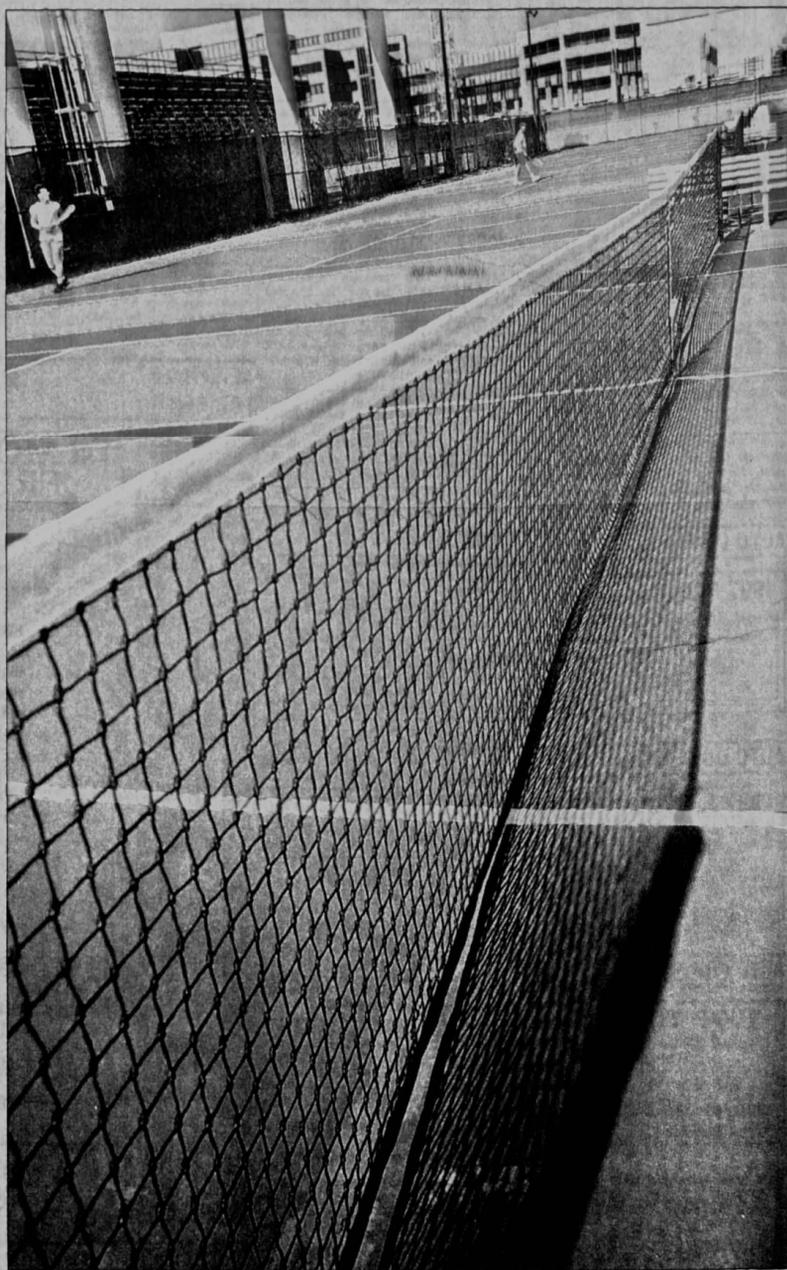

Houghton said the Iowa's Recreation Building indoor facility also isn't on par with most top programs around the nation, because of its surface, which is more suited to track competition.

"It's not a normal tennis surface, mainly because it's a shared surface with the track team," he said.

The tennis teams' facilities hurt them in recruiting, too, Houghton said.

Megan Racette, an All-Big Ten performer for the women's squad in 2004, agrees with Houghton. She said a new facility could be a huge shot in the arm for both programs' efforts in luring recruits to Iowa City.

Tennis players enjoy their Tuesday afternoon at the Klotz Tennis Center on the south side of Kinnick Stadium. The UI campus will soon be without outdoor courts because of stadium renovation.

Cubs score 10 in fourth to beat Cardinals, 12-3

CHICAGO — Moises Alou hit a three-run homer, and Derrek Lee had a two-run shot as the Chicago Cubs tied the team's modern record with 11 hits in the fourth inning, sparking a 12-3 drubbing of the St. Louis Cardinals on Thursday.

Todd Walker hit a solo homer, Aramis Ramirez went 3-for-3 with a walk and three runs scored, and Carlos Zambrano held the Cardinals to five hits to give the Cubs a split of the four-game series.

Zambrano (7-2) did not allow a hit until John Mabry's two-run homer in the fifth. But it hardly mattered with the game so far out of reach. Zambrano allowed two runs in eight innings, striking out seven to win his third-straight decision.

Dan Haren (0-1) got a rough welcome back to the majors in his season debut, allowing 10 hits and 10 runs in 3½ innings. Haren was recalled from Triple-A Memphis when Jason Marquis missed his scheduled start because of back spasms.

After being on their best behavior in their first two meetings this year, the Cardinals and Cubs were back to their feisty old selves Wednesday. Matt Morris nearly beamed Lee with a fastball, prompting both benches to clear. No punches were thrown, but it took umpires about five minutes to restore order.

Crew chief Rick Reed said umpires would watch both teams closely for the series finale Thursday, but they needn't have bothered. The Cubs got their revenge in a far more satisfactory fashion with their huge fourth inning.

Ramirez and Todd Hollandsworth led off with singles, and Lee followed with an RBI groundout. Corey Patterson drew a walk before he was caught stealing, and it looked as if Haren might get out of the jam.

Not even close. The Cubs ran off nine-straight hits before Ramon Martinez grounded out to end the inning.

The Cubs finished the inning with 10 runs and 11 hits, all but three of them singles. Every player had at least one hit, and Ramirez and Hollandsworth had two.

The Cubs also had 11 hits in an inning on Aug. 25, 1922, against Philadelphia, also in the fourth inning.

The Cardinals had their chances to end the outburst earlier. Michael Barrett singled to shortstop — a bad hop left Edgar Renteria without a play at second and his throw to first wasn't in time. Alou followed with his three-run homer, a shot so far Marlon Anderson didn't even bother chasing it.
