Search for shooter continues

Laura Schmitt/The Daily Iowan

Iowa City police officers discuss a reported shooting/armed robbery at the Adult Marketplace on Tuesday night. Police said a suspect, described as a white male in his 20s with dark hair, entered the shop and shot clerk Jacob Broadrick several times.

BY JESSICA SEVESKA
THE DAILY IOWAN

Police are still searching for the man who shot an employee at the Adult Marketplace, 440 Kirkwood Ave., during a reported armed robbery at approximately 10:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Jacob Broadrick, a 22-year-old Coralville resident and clerk at the shop, called 911 at 10:29 p.m. and said he had been shot in a robbery.

Iowa City police Lt. Jim Steffen said Broadrick was shot several times; no one else was injured during the incident.

Broadrick was taken to UI Hospitals and Clinics emergency treatment center, where he was treated for his injuries. Authorities have not released any information about his condition.

Police describe the suspect as a white male with dark hair in his early 20s who may have been carrying a shotgun.

Steffen said police have not identified any witnesses to the incident.

Iowa sees slow dip in HIV/AIDS diagnoses

But health officials warn that the decrease may not continue

BY LINDSEY IGNACE
THE DAILY IOWAN

With the number of people infected with HIV/AIDS on the rise, according to a U.N. report released on July 6, and the constant barrage of new and sometimes frightening information about the epidemic, it makes one wonder — how's Iowa doing compared with the rest of the world?

"Iowa is considered to be a low-incident state," said Randy Mayer, an HIV/AIDS surveillance coordinator for the Iowa Department of Public Health.

The current trend in Iowa is a slow, small, and steady decrease of HIV/AIDS diagnoses. In 2003, there was an overall decrease of 19 percent in diagnoses from the previous year among U.S.-born and foreign-born persons in the Hawkeye State. Among U.S.-born persons, this continues a downward trend in diagnoses, Mayer said.

But a new diagnosis doesn't mean a new infection. People can be infected for years before they get tested, said Myke Shela, the director of case management at the AIDS Project of Central Iowa.

"We can only hope that a decrease in diagnoses also

Quick Facts

- Among Iowa's 99 counties, Johnson County ranks third in the number of people living with HIV/AIDS.
- There were approximately 1,193 people living with HIV/AIDS in Iowa at the end of 2003.
- There were approximately 281,931 people living with HIV/AIDS in the United States at the end of 2002.
- There are an estimated 37.8 million people living with HIV/AIDS in the world today.
- It is estimated that 25 percent of people in Iowa who are HIV positive do not know it because they have not been tested.

means a decrease in new infections," Mayer said.

Just because the rate of diagnoses is going down doesn't mean that the disease is under control, he said. There is a large number of people living with HIV/AIDS in Iowa, and as those numbers go up, more people that need care and medicine, he said.

"The decrease in diagnoses in 2003 among U.S.-born persons [in Iowa] may not continue into 2004," Mayer said.

Man sues, alleges police officer used excessive force

Missouri resident Robert Rohrback says his civil rights were violated in a Nov. 10, 2002, incident

BY NICK PETERSEN
THE DAILY IOWAN

A Missouri man filed a lawsuit against an Iowa City police officer, the Iowa City police, and the city of Iowa City in 6th District Court on Wednesday, asserting that the police officer used excessive force against him.

In the suit, Robert E. Rohrback said police Officer Jorey Bailey used "several types of physical force" on Rohrback in "willful and wanton disregard for [his] rights and safety," in a Nov. 10, 2002, incident.

Rohrback alleges that the on-duty officer "approached a group of males and without warning sprayed them with OC." OC, or oleoresin capicum, is an ingredient in pepper spray.

He contends that Bailey then "battered [Rohrback] in that Bailey repeatedly used physical force to inflict blows on [his] body."

The lawsuit claims that the city of Iowa City is responsible for the alleged excessive force by "failing to adequately train and supervise Bailey." The suit also states that Iowa City is legally responsible for the actions of the members of its police force.

According to the lawsuit, Bailey violated Rohrback's civil rights protected by the Constitution, the laws of the United States, and the laws of Iowa.

Rohrback alleges that he sustained personal injuries, medical expenses, and other miscellaneous damages from the encounter. He also contends that Bailey's "outrageous" conduct caused him "severe" emotional distress. Rohrback is seeking both actual and punitive damages from Bailey in an amount to be determined by a jury. He is seeking actual damages from the city and police.

The city of Iowa City had received no formal complaint as of Wednesday afternoon and thus did not have a response. It will have 20 days to file a response once it receives the complaint.

Iowa City resident Betty Norbeck discusses her political concerns with Rep. Ed Fallon, D-Des Moines, on Wednesday. Fallon will go door to door in Iowa City today to discuss his potential campaign for governor in 2006.

Governor-hopeful turns back the clock

Ed Fallon, who uses old-fashioned politicking, says state should not be a 'corporate trough'

BY NATE GREEN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Trekking across sultry Iowa in an non-airconditioned 1984 Volkswagen van, pounding the pavement to "door knock" neighborhoods, and pitching political anecdotes in face-to-face encounters — Rep. Ed Fallon, D-Des Moines, is politicking the old-fashioned way.

This unorthodox, old-school approach, the 12-year state representative believes, will lead him to the 2006 Iowa governorship.

"I know this isn't the normal way to run for governor; it's not a big flashy TV ad. But it's worked for me as an Iowa legislator," Fallon, 46, said in between household stops. "The state is big — that's why I'm starting early. I haven't lost an election yet and don't plan on losing this time."

The Fallon VW van — a veritable campaign headquarters on wheels — is driven by Petaluma, Calif., native Jan Hansen. In addition to her chauffeuring duties, the 57-year-old full-time volunteer prepares campaign literature and basically whatever else is needed.

"I'm the chief cook, washer, and brochure-folder," she said, adding she was attracted to Fallon's campaign because of his principled agenda. "He is one of the few politicians who give politics a good name — one who actually votes with integrity."

Fallon's three-day Tour de Iowa, which will end today, has focused on listening to voters' concerns and expressing his belief that Iowa is headed in the wrong direction on a number of fronts.

Sen. Sam Brownback, R-Kan., talks to reporters on Capitol Hill Wednesday after Republicans lost in their attempt to amend the Constitution to ban gay marriage. Supporters of the amendment stand behind Brownback.

Senate blocks measure banning gay marriage

The GOP-controlled body hands Bush a major defeat

BY HELEN DEWAR
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — The Republican-controlled Senate on Wednesday blocked a proposed constitutional amendment to bar same-sex marriages, effectively killing the White House-backed measure for the rest of this year and handing President Bush a big election-year defeat.

The vote was 50-48 against bringing the initiative to a vote, 12 short of the 60 needed to limit debate and move toward final action on the amendment. It would have taken a two-thirds majority — 19 votes more than the GOP got Wednesday — to pass the amendment itself.

Bush had pushed hard for the amendment, but, with six Republicans joining nearly all Democrats in blocking the initiative, the vote appeared to cast doubt over how well the marriage issue is likely to play in the president's re-election campaign and many of the closest congressional races.

New homeless shelter draws fire

In an argumentative meeting, a city board OKs the construction of a new facility

BY JIM BUTTS
THE DAILY IOWAN

Residents with concerns about increased crime and decreased property values were overruled Wednesday when the Iowa City Board of Adjustment approved the construction of a new homeless shelter at 429 Southgate Ave.

In a contentious meeting overflowing City Hall with residents, business owners, volunteers, and former homeless people, the board voted 3-1 to grant a special exception allowing the shelter to be built in a commercial zone.

"Every night we turn people away — men, women, and children of the community," said Chrissy Canganelli, the executive director of Shelter House, 331 N. Gilbert St. "Land for new development is scarce and expensive."

Besides the price, she said, the location was ideal because it was within walking distance of other homeless resources and downtown.

Raymond Tinnian, an attorney representing the Waterfront Neighborhood Association, said the new shelter would be detrimental to his clients' neighborhood, which borders the proposed facility. Tinnian, who represents more than 40 of the area's residents, cited statistics about criminals who used the Shelter House's address as their home addresses.

"Transients drawn in from out of state commit a disproportional number of crimes," he said. He contended that 60 to 70 percent of those who use Shelter House come from outside the county.

Tinnian said the larger, 70-person facility will attract a larger group of homeless people and create more crime. "If you build it, they will come," he said, using a famous line from the movie Field of Dreams.

The threat of violent crime from homeless people was exaggerated, Canganelli said.

"Every single person who commits a crime prior to coming or after coming to the shelter is being tagged to the shelter," Canganelli said. Many of the comments and personal testimonials by those at the meeting were "fears that are based on unknown assumptions," she said.

The proposed two-story, 29,000-square-foot facility will include a cafeteria, kitchen, laundry, and living quarters. The current shelter will most likely be sold to help pay for the new facility, Canganelli said.

Tinnian vowed to appeal the board's decision to district court.

"We feel our chances are very good that the district court will agree with us," he said, adding that the Waterfront Neighborhood Association will offer to purchase the land at Southgate Avenue from Shelter House and additionally donate $10,000 to the shelter.

New city transit center lands daycare

BY JIM BUTTS
THE DAILY IOWAN

As many as 100 Iowa City kids ranging from 6 weeks to 6 years will interact with art, science, and theater when Iowa City's first downtown daycare center opens next spring.

The Iowa City City Council unanimously approved a five-year lease with Apple Tree Children's Centers for a daycare in the new Court Street Transportation Center in a special meeting held Wednesday.

Located on Dubuque Street between Burlington and Court Streets, the transportation center will include a new Greyhound bus station, a 600-space parking ramp, bike lockers, and a commercial space, in addition to the nonprofit daycare.

City planners said they created a space for a downtown daycare because of high demand that the private market has not been able to fill because of the downtown's high-property costs.

"There is a high need, especially for infant care and after-school care," said Justine Retz, the resource and referral coordinator for 4Cs, a nonprofit company that assists parents looking for childcare. She advised the city on finding a daycare provider and attended Wednesday's meeting.

Also attending the meeting in full costume was Apple Tree's mascot, Apple Blossom the Bear. Apple Blossom offered hugs and posed for pictures with many of the city councilors Wednesday.

"I think it's really a good thing downtown and an important piece of the transportation center," said Mayor Ernie Lehman while holding three miniature Apple Blossoms that daycare officials had handed out.

Although Apple Tree officials said kids would have the chance to laugh and sing with the bow-clad bear on regular occasions, kids at Apple Tree would not get the chance to sing along with a certain other adult-sized animal.

"You won't find TVs. You won't see kids watching Barney," said Leann Andre, a regional manager for Apple Tree.

DM woman sues Brothers

A Des Moines woman filed suit on Monday in the 6th District Court against Brothers Bar & Grill, 125 S. Dubuque St., asserting that the establishment provided alcoholic beverages to the man with whom she was involved in a vehicle crash later that night.

In the lawsuit, Barbara Hansen contends that in August 2002, the motorcycle she was a passenger on crashed into Jerome Griffin's Nissan Sentra after the car went through a stop sign.

The plaintiff says Brothers was negligent for allegedly selling or giving the driver of the car alcoholic beverages because the bar employees knew or should have known that he would become intoxicated.

Hansen is also filing negligence charges against Donald Hansen, the driver of the motorcycle she was on, a bar in Oxford that allegedly provided Griffin with alcohol that same night, the owner of the car Griffin drove, and Griffin himself.

Records show that Barbara Hansen believes that the aforementioned parties' alleged negligence is the proximate cause of her alleged injuries.

According to the suit, the plaintiff is seeking judgment for an amount that will fully and fairly compensate her for her injuries and damages, including past and future medical expenses, pain and suffering, and past and future loss of earnings.

Judge refuses reduced HIV sentence

Sixth District Court Judge Patrick Grady on Wednesday denied Adam Musser's request to reduce his 50-year sentence and send him to a local halfway house.

The 23-year-old was sentenced last spring for up to 50 years in prison for four convictions of criminal transmission of HIV.

Musser argued during a June 30 motion to reduce his sentence that criminal transmission of HIV is not a forcible felony and there are no minimum sentences required by law.

Musser asked the court to reduce his sentence and send him to Hope House, a Coralville halfway house.

Kelly Steele, Musser's attorney, said Musser has hired another lawyer, Steven Japantich, to continue his appeals.

Huss requests release from sex offender facility

DES MOINES (AP) — A man who was found not guilty by reason of insanity in the 1986 mutilation death of his girlfriend asked the Iowa Supreme Court on Wednesday to release him from a program for predatory sexual offenders.

Assistant State Public Defender Mark Smith said Loren Huss doesn't belong in the Cherokee Mental Health Institute unit for sex offenders.

After Huss was found not guilty by reason of insanity in 2001, the court had to prove the crime was sexually motivated to commit him to a facility. Smith said prosecutors never did that.

"The court has to determine the offense was sexually violent and the person did it," Smith said outside of court Wednesday.

Smith claims the court never proved the killing was sexually motivated and that Huss was entitled to a trial, not just being committed by a judge.

Prosecutors dispute the claim, saying that they did prove the killing was sexually motivated and that a judge could decide to commit Huss.

Huss, 41, was charged with first-degree murder in the mutilation death of his girlfriend, Marilyn Sheets, 22, whose body was found in a blood-soaked apartment in Des Moines. Her nose had been bitten off and her eyes gouged out.

Originally, Huss was convicted of the killing and imprisoned from 1986 until 2001, when the conviction was overturned by the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Several months later, a judge found him not guilty by reason of insanity and released him to a psychiatric hospital.

Last year, the Supreme Court determined he was no longer dangerous because he had not shown signs of mental illness in years. The state requires people be released if their sanity has been restored.

Democratic vice-presidential candidate Sen. John Edwards, D-N.C., greets the crowd at a campaign rally Wednesday at the State Capitol in Des Moines.

Edwards stresses his 'small-town' values

BY MIKE GLOVER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Targeting Iowa for his opening solo swing as the Democratic running mate, John Edwards said his small-town values will let him forge a link throughout rural America.

"I know what values are, I grew up with them — work, faith, responsibility, family," Edwards said during a rally outside the State Capitol. "Those are the kind of values you and I grew up with."

Edwards was picked by John Kerry as his running mate last week, and he has spent the intervening days campaigning with Kerry. Wednesday's visit marked the first time Edwards has campaigned on his own since being selected. Beginning in Iowa was a clear signal the state's seven electoral votes are being targeted by the Democratic ticket.

During his bid for the nomination, Edwards stressed his modest upbringing and small-town roots, and he dismissed Republicans' claims that they espouse the values of ordinary Americans.

"Why don't we focus on the things people face in their life every day," Edwards said. "Where I grew up, you didn't determine somebody's values by what they say in a political ad."

Along with wife Elizabeth, Edwards spoke to more than 1,000 cheering backers on the steps of the Statehouse, noting that both he and Kerry have lots of ties to the state.

Both sides of the Democratic ticket spent more than a year stumping in the state in the campaign for Iowa's leadoff precinct caucuses.

"The time that I spent in Iowa is so important to what I am today, and I know John Kerry feels exactly the same way because we've talked about it," Edwards said. "We heard your voices. You are part of what we are."

Iowa went Democratic in 2004, but by barely 4,000 votes. Fielding a ticket with such long ties to the state likely strengthens Democrats efforts to win the state again.

The core of Edwards campaign was his argument that he grew up in a small North Carolina town in a family of modest means, and he was the first in his family to go to college. That's a message that will resonate throughout the crucial swing states of the Midwest where the election likely will be settled.

Iowa Democratic Chairman Gordon Fischer said Edwards gives Democrats a major boost in the state.

"People are familiar with him; he's been here a lot," Fischer said. "He's a small-town guy who fits with Iowa."

Republicans, however, are far from writing off the state. Vice President Dick Cheney has already campaigned in the state, and he has a stop in Waterloo planned on Friday.

Edwards, however, said the GOP ties can't match his and Kerry's. Edwards passed along a piece of advice from Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin.

"He said tell the people of Iowa that they should believe Dick Cheney cares about Iowa when he goes to all 99 counties, which I did," Edwards said.

Edwards said that months and months of grass-roots campaigning gave him a special feel for the worries of rural voters.

"It wasn't just speaking, it had to do with listening," he said. "Hearing on Main streets and in houses all across the state of Iowa the problems that people face every single day, what you wanted your president and vice president to fight for, the values you wanted us to stand up for."

Edwards was joined by Gov. Tom Vilsack and wife Christie. Vilsack had been on the short list of possible running mates for Kerry, and he said that Edwards brings more to the campaign than his powerful speaking style.

Politics, timing threaten Iowa's leadoff status

DES MOINES (AP) — A combination of politics and electoral timing could mean the end of Iowa's traditional status of leading off the presidential-nominating season, a veteran activist said Wednesday.

"It's a major threat," said David Nagle, a Waterloo lawyer and former congressman who was instrumental in cementing the leadoff status of Iowa's caucuses and the New Hampshire primary.

Nagle said there's been a quiet shift in tradition this year that could have enormous impact down the road.

For years, he said, the calendar for the next election cycle has been set at the national nominating convention, but that won't happen when Democrats gather in Boston later this month.

Instead, Democrats will name a commission to study the issue of setting an election calendar, with a report due after the election. In essence, Nagle argued, that leaves the fate of Iowa and New Hampshire resting with the outcome of the election.

Baghdad blast kills 11

As a suicide bomber hits the center of the capital, a provincial governor is assassinated

BY SCOTT WILSON
WASHINGTON POST

BAGHDAD — A four-wheel-drive vehicle filled with explosives detonated Wednesday at the main entrance to the fortified convention center in the center of Baghdad, killing 11 people, most of them Iraqi civilians, and injuring more than 40 others.

Triggered by a suicide bomber, Iraqi officials said, the blast occurred at 9:15 a.m. (12:15 a.m. CDT) as many Iraqi civilians waited to pass through a crowded checkpoint leading to the convention center, which contains a number of government offices and booths at which American contractors advertise job openings. The force of the explosion rattled hotel windows more than a mile away, collapsed plaster roofs of nearby shops, and gouged huge chunks out of the cement blast walls that rim the compound once known as the Green Zone, which houses the U.S. Embassy and the interim Iraqi government.

"These people were here to find work," said Prime Minister Iyad Allawi. "This is naked aggression against the Iraqi people. We will bring them to justice." Allawi, who visited the site with Deputy Prime Minister Barham Saleh, said the attack may have been a reprisal for the aggressive steps he has taken against the insurgency since assuming office.

Insurgents on Wednesday also assassinated the popular governor of the northern city of Mosul, Iraq's third largest, as his convoy traveled from the town of Beiji. Witnesses said attackers fired on the convoy carrying Youssef Kashmola, killing the governor and his deputy. As Iraqi officials vowed to crack down on the insurgents, the Philippines moved to withdraw its 51-member peacekeeping force in hopes of saving the life of Angelo dela Cruz, a Filipino truck driver held by militants.

Also, the owner of a Saudi company told Al-Jazeera television his company would stop work in Iraq to win the release of an Egyptian employee held captive.

British panel cites 'flawed' intelligence on prewar Iraq

But the commission says Tony Blair did not mislead the public

BY JILL LAWLESS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON — Prime Minister Tony Blair escaped harsh criticism in an official inquiry into prewar intelligence on Iraq, which faulted him Wednesday for informal decision-making and pushing available intelligence to the limit but found no deliberate distortions.

Blair said he took full, personal responsibility. But he told Parliament, "No one lied; no one made up the intelligence" after the much-awaited report was released.

The commission — headed by Lord Butler, a retired civil-service chief — found prewar Iraq had no usable stockpiles of chemical and biological weapons and that British intelligence was flawed, unreliable, and incomplete. The five-member commission interviewed Blair, senior Cabinet figures, and key intelligence officials.

But while criticizing Blair's "informal" governing style, it absolved him of misleading the public over Iraq, a charge that has dogged the prime minister since he took Britain into the U.S.-led war. Protesters — including some who wore masks depicting

prime minister

Blair with a Pinocchio-like long nose — greeted the announcement by gathering outside the news conference where the report was released and carrying signs that featured Blair's face and read: B. liar.

Butler's judgment vindicates the British government of some of the harshest charges against it, a week after a Republican-led U.S. Senate committee excoriated a "broken corporate culture" at the CIA and said there had been a "global intelligence failure" on Iraq. CIA Director George Tenet resigned before the report was released.

The verdict takes some pressure off Blair, whose popularity and credibility have been battered by the war and continuing violence in Iraq and by the failure to find any weapons of mass destruction.

Israel to prevent Jerusalem burial in event of Arafat death

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel is worried about chaos that might follow the death of Yasser Arafat and will do everything possible to prevent the Palestinian leader from being buried in Jerusalem, according to a contingency plan obtained Wednesday by the Associated Press.

The five-page document, prepared by the Foreign Ministry, lays out a series of forecasts about what might follow Arafat's death: the collapse of the Palestinian Authority, a challenge by Islamic militants, and upheaval in other parts of the Middle East.

Despite Israeli efforts to isolate the Palestinian leader, Arafat continues to wield tremendous influence. The plan shows that he will remain a subject of concern to Israel — even in death.

The plan includes recommendations on how to contain what Israel expects to be an extremely volatile environment. The stickiest issue, it says, will be where to bury Arafat.

Officials close to Arafat say he has never indicated where he wants to be buried, but the assumption is he would want to be laid to rest at the Al Aqsa Mosque compound in Jerusalem's Old City, a supreme honor for Muslims.

Israel will strongly oppose burying Arafat in Jerusalem, the document says. Israel and the Palestinians both claim Jerusalem as their capital, and Israel has continually resisted Palestinian attempts to gain a foothold in the city.

The document makes no reference to Arafat's health, despite signs in recent years that it is deteriorating.

Resolution needed for Values Fund

Hope is fading for quickly restoring an Iowa economic-stimulus package to ensure that pledges are upheld to new or expanding business — all because of stubborn partisanship.

Gov. Tom Vilsack rejected a Republican compromise Monday to help restore the Iowa Values Fund. He signed the $503 million economic-stimulus bill in June 2003. However, he vetoed $310 million worth of tax cuts in addition to rejecting new laws limiting punitive-damage awards in civil lawsuits and regulatory changes related to workers' compensation awards. Republican lawmakers challenged the vetoes in a lawsuit that the Iowa Supreme Court upheld, which effectively negated the entire legislation. Republicans have drafted a compromise. But their proposal is hardly a stretch toward Vilsack's position by their demand for tax cuts and insistence on limiting the ability of injured workers to collect benefits and damages.

So far, $80 million in Values Fund commitments have been made to companies and communities throughout the state, including some in Coralville and Iowa City. If a deal isn't made for a special session to restore the funding, the money for which prospective companies are vying may not be available until Republicans and Democrats reach an agreement in the 2005 legislative session.

Both sides contend they are doing their best to compromise while accusing the other side of being stubborn. Again, they are both right. Vilsack has voiced his willingness to support up to $82 million in business tax cuts, although he won't budge on the civil-lawsuit and workers' compensation changes. Neither will Republicans. They say such regulatory changes are essential to attracting businesses to Iowa. It's debatable whether the business benefits from new workers' compensation and civil-liabilities regulations will outweigh the potential harm to workers and Iowans. However, the effect of not having the Values Fund available to such businesses is clear. If the Republicans wish to demonstrate their commitment to the Values Fund, they should accept the tax cuts for businesses and save the partisan bickering over the new regulations for the regular session next year.

Vilsack received a political pie in his face when the state Supreme Court ruled his vetoes unlawful, but the decision also backfired on the Republicans when the Values Fund was declared invalid. Now, lawmakers are fighting a new battle after the war. Republicans wield their majority vote, but the Democrats control the clock and the veto. Neither side wants to relent, but the only losers in this battle so far are Iowans. This deadlock stems from partisan battle that Vilsack temporarily and illegally sidestepped. Now, one side needs to step up and end it by stepping down.

GUEST OPINION

Before 9/11, we didn't worry too much about terrorist attacks from Osama bin Laden. The average American citizen didn't spend too much time thinking about Saddam Hussein and his desire and ability to create weapons of mass destruction or that he was aiding and abetting terrorists. We definitely didn't have to worry about someone named Michael Moore exploiting our situation and making money by creating a home movie full of lies, attempting to tear us apart from within and destroy the integrity of our nation's leader.

It's no surprise that such a movie would be conveniently put in theaters just months before the presidential election. In fact, I bet the DVD will come out around late October this year. Moore is a new kind of terrorist. He hasn't destroyed any skyscrapers or planted improvised explosive devices on supply routes in Iraq. He's attempted to destroy something as important — our unity and our commitment to justice.

I can't even begin to counter all of the spin, deception, and lies in Moore's Fahrenheit 9/11. There aren't enough congressional libraries in Iraq, and I have limited Internet access, not to mention the fact that most of my attention is devoted to fighting a war. But I can tell you my story.

Moore created the misconception that the Army targets America's impoverished communities for recruitment. I come from a middle-class family. I was a financially stable student at Iowa State University when I enlisted in the Army. I did this because I love my country and wanted to defend it. I still feel exactly the same way.

He also attempted to create the illusion that American soldiers do not want to be in Iraq. I am very proud of myself and what I am doing. I do not know of one person in my unit who does not feel the same way.

Moore doesn't want anyone to think that we should be in Iraq — that before President Bush waged his greedy oil war, Iraq was a sovereign state, governed by Saddam, a man who had never been a threat to us, a leader who never killed an American. He failed to mention that Iraq was actually a totalitarian dictatorship, controlled by an extremist with a huge appetite for power. I didn't hear anything about the soldiers who were tortured and killed in the Gulf War and in the early stages of this war. Moore didn't say anything about the millions of Kurds he murdered with mustard gas, or the fact that women and children were forced to cover their whole bodies. And then they were raped by his henchmen.

This war is about oil — for France, Germany, and Russia — three of the countries that opposed anything but lax weapons inspectors and loose, unenforceable U.N. trade sanctions. Maybe it was because they were illegitimately trading weapons and money for that oil. Now those weapons are being used against soldiers such as myself.

So if not all soldiers are poor and forced to be here in Iraq, and Saddam wasn't a peaceful leader of a sovereign state, and this war isn't actually about oil, isn't it likely that Moore's other points don't quite represent the truth? Support your country and the soldiers defending it. Don't base your vote on the inaccuracy and deception of Moore.

Aaron Gott, a South Amara resident, wrote this opinion while stationed in Baghdad.

AIDS? What AIDS?

This week in Bangkok, Thailand, the International AIDS Conference kicked off, notably lacking necessary world leaders — our own George W. Bush was conspicuously absent from the sessions planning work that will combat the AIDS epidemic around the globe. (The United States has previously had significant impact on the conference.) However, Bush did send 50 representatives in his place, down from the 236 sent last year.

Bush is not alone in dismissing the event, however. Though international conference participation has been inconsistent in the past, and though leaders from Canada, Brazil, Rwanda, Russia, and India were also missing this year, forcing a summit-meeting cancellation, simply continuing a pathetic precedent is inexcusable.

Holding the conference in Thailand could theoretically create controversy because of that nation's thriving sex industry, which is blamed for the sudden eruption of AIDS cases in the country during the early 1990s. Despite this setback, Thailand is a model for many countries in dealing with such crises because of its aggressive condom-promotion campaigns in red-light districts. And, though never located in Southeast Asia before, the conference boasts a record turnout of more than 17,000 delegates this year.

U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan opened the conference with a warning that the epidemic could soon become unmanageable in Asia, where nearly one of every four infections internationally were contracted last year. As this battle is being fought, it is estimated that 38 million people worldwide are suffering from HIV/AIDS, while 20 million have already died from the illness in the past two decades.

Once a disease associated with homosexual men in the United States, women actually bear the brunt of the global epidemic, and many experts agree this extra burden is due to social and sexual inequality and lack of access to proper health care. In fact, Human Rights Watch reported earlier this week that women in the Dominican Republic face double discrimination — as females and as AIDS patients — and are disproportionately denied access to treatment as a result. This case alone demonstrates the larger global problem. And, as a result of women's struggles, children are also disproportionately affected as they contract the disease from their mothers.

The AIDS epidemic is certainly nothing new. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention first released statements about a new kind of virus resembling forms of pneumonia in the summer of 1981, though scientists believe the disease existed long before the report was issued. By 1985, at least one AIDS case had been reported in each region of the world, prompting the first International AIDS Conference. Twenty years later, with a crisis of epic proportions on our hands, we sent a group of people who could fit onto a single school bus to represent our nation.

I guess I'd like to know why, when we seem so concerned about the freedom of other nations — so concerned that we invade and "liberate" others — we aren't working to liberate some of those same people from this long, painful, deadly illness that will ultimately claim lives through less-severe conditions, such as the common cold. HIV eats away at the victim's immune system, and if you've ever been with someone whose health was failing in such a devastating way, you might be angry that we aren't doing more. If we as Americans are supposed to be concerned about the good of humankind, I'd love to know why we seemed to ignore one of the most important meetings of the year.

I think this goes to show that if it's not continuously thrown in their faces, like the war in Iraq, the American people are able to put important issues on the back burner — even if these are perhaps the very topics that should consume them. Ambivalent attitudes or lack of knowledge do not put pressure on the government to take action. Look at it this way: While casualties in Iraq, for instance, are huge, it's safe to say that they don't rise up into the millions. Millions of people are dying of AIDS. While this is not meant to devalue the lives lost in Iraq, I do wonder if maybe countries in Africa and Asia most affected by the AIDS epidemic don't have as much to offer us politically or economically. Could we really be so self-absorbed? I don't know the answer, but having to ask the question is sickening.

Recent opinion polls show that while a large majority of Americans oppose gay marriage, at least narrowly oppose the Constitution to protect the practice, which became an issue after Massachusetts' state court legalized same-sex marriages and San Francisco's city council performing them.

Reflecting the political expressed reluctance, the Constitution to divide social issues at the expense of traditional values over marriage, also said they believe current laws adequately protect marriage and expect that the amendment be interpreted as an

Despite divisions in the Senate, Senate Republicans vowed to keep approval of the amendment in jeopardy for judges and hoping would energize conservative voters to help elect more Supreme Court justices in this fall's election.

This issue is not going to be resolved in the Majority Leader Bill. Sen. Jeff Sessions, R-Ala., will be back again and will eventually prevail. Bush said he w

Hoover House hypocritical

I could be wrong, but I'm betting that Hoover House Restaurant owners Carl and Janet Nelson do not have any offspring.

How ironic that a restaurant that hosts wet T-shirt contests as a promotion would object to breasts being used for what nature intended — the feeding of infants. Carl Nelson asserted that he and his wife "cater to kids" and that his wife was only demanding discretion, even after Amy Schoon (the patron alleging discrimination by the restaurant) cited the Iowa law that allows breastfeeding in public places. From this, I detect a very mean-spirited and narrow-minded person lurking close by.

Too bad the Hoover House is so aptly named after the namesake of "Hoovervilles," the shantytowns that proliferated during the Great Depression. I can't help but wonder what President Hoover would have thought about the wet T-shirt contests.

Nice, quiet college town?

Is Iowa City becoming one of those scary metropolises in which people actually have to lock their doors at night and walking the streets after dark is a threatening proposition?

While we're not actually suggesting that residents shouldn't lock their doors here, it does seem that this year has already seen more than its share of high-profile crimes. Is this really the safe, friendly college town that we often make it out to be? Or is it devolving into a place where convenience-store owners need to keep firearms behind the counter and we have to carry Mace just to walk our dogs around the block? (Perhaps if the dog was big enough, though, Mace wouldn't be necessary.)

Sound a bit exaggerated? Maybe so, but consider some of what has happened just this year. The same bank downtown — Hills Bank and Trust, 132 E.

Washington St. — was robbed twice in fewer than four months, marking the fifth time that it had been hit since 1998. And that's just blocks away from the Iowa City Police Department, by the way.

Then there were the owners of Petland, 1851 Lower Muscatine Road, who were robbed in the alley behind their store last March by a suspect toting an assault rifle. And just last night, a clerk was shot at the Adult Marketplace, 440 Kirkwood Ave., in what was reportedly an armed robbery. That, by the way, is just blocks away from the Crowded Closet, 1213 Gilbert Court, the latest commercial building to be set ablaze in a string of unsolved arson cases that have occurred this year.

Maybe these crimes all receive more publicity than they deserve. Maybe this is just an over-reaction. But they do leave us wondering what illicit activity will happen next to grab headlines in Iowa City.

Cinderella meets Roaring '20s

The Disney version says if you wear pretty clothes, keep your hair neat, and wash your face, you will marry a prince. This is about much more. This is the story of two people's quest for love with all the "bibbidi-bobbidi-boo" set aside.

Glass slippers, fairy godmothers, pumpkin carriages and spells that last until the stroke of midnight are the things fairy tales are made of, but UI Martha-Ellen Tye Opera Theater's version of Cinderella isn't your typical magical story.

The opera Cinderella — libretto by Jacopo Ferretti with a score by Gioacchino Rossini — has different characters from the ones in the version we learned via Walt Disney. And in the opera, every hint of magic has been removed, director Gary Race said.

The wicked stepmother and ugly stepsisters are replaced with a stepfather and outwardly beautiful stepsisters, while Cinderella and her prince, Don Ramiro, aren't exactly charming. There is no fairy godmother to help her get ready for the ball, but there is a mentor who acts as a kind of father figure to the prince. While searching for a bride, Don Ramiro trades places with his valet, pretending to be a servant so that he can observe the women and make a choice based on something other than appearance. Even the glass slippers are traded in for a pair of matching bracelets.

Race, the UI's opera director and an associate professor of music, cut Rossini's opera down to two hours, translated the work into English and updated it to the 1920s. The masquerade becomes a flapper party, the characters dance the Charleston, and some expressions from the '20s are used, but the opera remains mostly true to Rossini's original, he said.

Race and scenic and costume designer Margaret Wenk created costumes and brought an overall feel to the production that's very much like The Great Gatsby, he said.

In addition to being a visually interesting period, this was also an ideal setting for his Shrek-inspired attempt to turn away from a superficial culture and focus on inner beauty, he said.

"I always wanted it to be about two people falling in love for who they were and not what they looked like," Race said. "The Disney version says if you wear pretty clothes, keep your hair neat, and wash your face, you will marry a prince. This is about much more. This is the story of two people's quest for true love with all the 'bibbidi-bobbidi-boo' set aside."

Elisabeth Bieber, who plays the 1920s maid-turned-princess, emphasized the different messages in the two versions of the story. "The prince is trying to find a woman who is actually a good person rather than just a hottie, and there's more focus on Cinderella's part to find somebody who really will love and respect her," Bieber said.

The 24-year-old will be a graduate student studying voice at the UI in the fall, and she has appeared in several Martha-Ellen Tye Opera Theater productions. Fellow cast member Dennis Willhoit, a graduate student working for his doctorate in voice, also has been involved in numerous opera-theater productions.

His current role as Don Ramiro is not your typical Prince Charming, he said. He does not start out as a suave, debonair guy; for most of the opera, he is pretending to be a servant. Even when he becomes the prince again, he is still very down-to-earth, he said.

As part of the UI Division of Performing Arts, the opera theater presents productions in the fall and spring, but the ones that take place during the summer are most like a professional company, Race said.

The UI Summer Orchestra, an ensemble of 32 undergraduate and graduate students, performs the "fun" and "very spirited" Rossini score, said William LaRue Jones, the conductor and UI director of orchestral studies.

"As a comedy, there are quite a few jokes in the opera, and it's definitely family-friendly, but really it's directed toward anybody," Bieber said. "It's just a good love story."

Cinderella meets the movies

Stuck on the couch this weekend? Here are five more versions of the classic fairytale, some traditional and some updated, available on video or DVD.

Disney's Cinderella (1950)

This classic in its own right featured memorable songs and feats of pure animation. Comic relief comes from the added characters, such as the misadventures of her mouse companions.

Roger and Hammerstein's Cinderella (1965)

Originally a network television special, this musical version features a very young Lesley Ann Warren as Cinderella and Stuart Damon as the charming prince. It has with an irrestibly sweet score.

The Slipper and the Rose (1976)

This British adaptation directed by Bryan Forbes adds a few twists to the classic story — the prince is as much of a focal point as Cinderella. The dreamy pace may get tedious.

Roger and Hammerstein's Cinderella (1997)

Another Disney adaptation, but this time with an overblown budget and hipper attitude, this film stars Brandy as Cinderella with Whitney Houston as the fairy godmother.

Ever After (1998)

Drew Barrymore stars in this film that attempts to strip the magic from the story and give the facts. Anjelica Houston emanates pure evil as the wicked stepmother.

BASTILLE CLAY

Dressed up as a Frenchman for Bastille Day, Michael Burt of contemporary ceramic studio Fired Up, 112 S. Linn, gives a few painting tips to a customer. Volunteers gathered to paint dog dishes and pots that will be auctioned in support of the Iowa City Humane Society. The store is co-owned by Burt and wife Nancy Westvig, who opened the first studio of this kind in Iowa in October 1998. Customers choose their ceramic piece to decorate which range from traditional kitchen dishes to piggy banks shaped like frogs and trucks. Other theme nights include women's night, men's night, and couples' night, and although Burt said several sororities have held decorating parties, no fraternities have, "which is odd, because we have beer steins."

TOUR DE FRANCE

Virenque a French hero on Bastille

SAINT-FLOUR, France — Frenchman Richard Virenque won the first mountain stage of the Tour de France on Wednesday, a 160-kilometer leg that included the longest of the five-time Lance Armstrong a Ullrich.

Virenque won on a stage with a strong solo ride, step closer to his goal of becoming the first Frenchman to win the Tour, to become the time winner of the jersey as best climber.

Virenque won the stage, the longest of the race, in 4 hours, 24 minutes and 12 seconds. It was his 11th victory in a career marked both by performances and the doping scandal in 1998.

Armstrong was on stage, sprinting at the end of the stage, come in just behind champion and overtook Thomas Voeckler.

TOUGH SCHEDULE

Iowa State football ticket sales

AMES (AP) — Iowa State sold fewer season tickets for the upcoming football season compared with the same time last year, university officials said.

As of Tuesday, ticket sales for the 2004 season were in the mid-16,000 range, compared with 17,000 for the 2003 season, a spokesman said.

"We're happy with the numbers," he said. "It's a tough market, but we're doing better than it has been [during] the last five or seven years."

The number of season tickets sold had improved from 2000 to 25,000 last year.

Earlier this year, Athletics Director Brian Veale set a goal of selling 17,000 season tickets in 2004, generating an additional million in revenue.

The Cyclones have sold some season packages for $21 while also offering selected sections for $10.

Last year, Iowa State sold 45,617 for six home games and a season-best 53,488 for the season.

SWIMMING

Phelps may double event for Olympics

LONG BEACH, Calif. — Michael Phelps might swim at the Olympics in six individual events this year, but he should still have a chance to win at least equal Mark Spitz's seven gold medals.

Phelps could give the U.S. a meter backstroke at the Games.

"It probably would be a question," his coach, Bob Bowman, told the Press on Wednesday.

Phelps finished world-record holder at the 200 backstroke at the Olympic trials.

U.S. men's coach Steve Nunn said he was fine with the idea of Phelps competing in six events. "A move that is in the best interest of the U.S. will benefit all of us,"

Shaq to Miami, Eastern Conference

BY STEVEN WINE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — The Lakers and Heat completed a trade Wednesday sending Shaquille O'Neal to Miami, with Los Angeles getting Caron Butler, Lamar Odom, Brian Grant, and a first-round draft pick in return.

The deal, ending O'Neal's eight-year tenure in Los Angeles, had been on the verge of completion since Saturday, when O'Neal met in Orlando with Heat president Pat Riley and agreed to the trade. NBA attorneys approved it on the same day the league's two-week

O'Neal

Butler

moratorium on player movement ended.

Acquiring O'Neal is literally a big deal for the Heat, who will count on the 7-1, 340-pound center to transform them into a championship contender.

"I never imagined that we would acquire Shaquille O'Neal," guard Eddie Jones said. "It's once-in-a-lifetime trying to get a player like this guy. It's an unbelievable, unbelievable move."

At 32, O'Neal is coming off a season when he averaged a career-low 21.5 points, and he has missed 15 games each of the past three seasons with foot and leg injuries. But he's an 11-time All-Star with career averages of 27.1 points, 12.1 rebounds, and 2.6 blocks, and he changes the balance of power in the Eastern Conference, where there's a dearth of dominating centers.

The trade marks a return to Florida for O'Neal, who began his NBA career in 1992 with Orlando and still has a home there. He led the Magic to the finals in 1995, signed with the Lakers as a free agent in 1996 and helped them win three NBA titles.

Days after the Lakers lost this year's championship series to Detroit, O'Neal demanded to be traded, weary of feuding with Kobe Bryant and feeling disrespected by owner Jerry Buss. He's under contract for $27.7 million this coming season and $30.6 million in 2005-06.

O'Neal joins a Heat team that has reached the conference finals only once in its 16-year history and went 42-40 last season, instantly becoming South Florida's most high-profile athlete.

With the departure of three starters, Riley will build his team around O'Neal, Olympian Dwyane Wade, and Jones.

TOUR DE FRANCE

Virenque a French hero on Bastille Day

SAINT-FOUR, France (AP) — Frenchman Richard Virenque won the first mountain stage of the Tour de France on Wednesday in a leg that included the first jousting between five-time champion Lance Armstrong and rival Jan Ullrich.

Virenque won on Bastille Day with a strong solo ride, moving a step closer to his goal for this tour: to become the first seven-time winner of the pink spotted jersey as best climber.

Virenque won the 147-mile stage, the longest of the Tour, in 6 hours, 24 seconds. It was his seventh victory in a long career marked both by outstanding performances and the lows of a doping scandal in 1998.

Armstrong was sixth in the stage, sprinting at the finish to come in just behind French champion and overall leader Thomas Voeckler.

TOUGH SELL

Iowa State football ticket sales behind

AMES (AP) — Iowa State has sold fewer season tickets for the upcoming football season compared with the same time last year, university officials said.

As of Tuesday, ticket sales for the 2004 season were in the mid-16,000 range, said Jared Sturtevant, a spokesman for ticket operations. A year ago, nearly 17,000 tickets were purchased, he said.

"We're happy with how sales are going," he said. "It's better than it has been [during] the past five or seven years."

The number of season tickets sold had improved from 18,000 in 2000 to 25,000 last year.

Earlier this year, Iowa State Athletics Director Bruce Van De Velde set a goal of selling 30,000 season tickets in hopes of generating an additional $1.4 million in revenue.

The Cyclones have reduced prices of some season-ticket packages from $215 to $199, while also offering tickets in selected sections for $99.

Last year, Iowa State averaged 45,617 for six home games, with a season-best 53,488 for the Iowa game.

SWIMMING

Phelps may drop event for Olympics

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Michael Phelps might drop one of six individual events that he could swim at the Olympics, but he should still have a chance to at least equal Mark Spitz's record of seven golds.

Phelps could give up the 200-meter backstroke at the Athens Games.

"It probably wouldn't be out of the question," his coach Bob Bowman told the Associated Press on Wednesday.

Phelps finished second to world-record holder Aaron Peirsol in the 200 back at the U.S. Olympic trials.

U.S. men's coach Eddie Reese said he was fine with the decision. "A move that is the best for him will benefit all of us," he said.

Angle looking to future

BY KELLY BEATON
THE DAILY IOWAN

Shooting is a lost art on college basketball's canvas these days.

Dunks and 3's are the thing. Mid-range J's? Passé.

Perhaps then it bodes well for the Iowa Hawkeye men that their newest 6-6 small forward is a throwback to the days of short-shorts and Chuck Taylors.

One look at J.R. Angle's repertoire of running one-handers and wrap-around reverse lay-ups harks back to grainy black-and-white images of Purdue legend and Lebanon, Ind., native Rick Mount — who lit up the nets to the tune of 2,595 points in high-school. Which figures, considering Angle first discovered the shot while scouring over film of Mount, and Angle hails from Trafalgar, Ind., located in the heart of the Hoosier State.

"It's hard to defend, and you really don't have to jump that high," said the 19-year-old incoming Iowa recruit. "You don't have to be that athletic to pull them off."

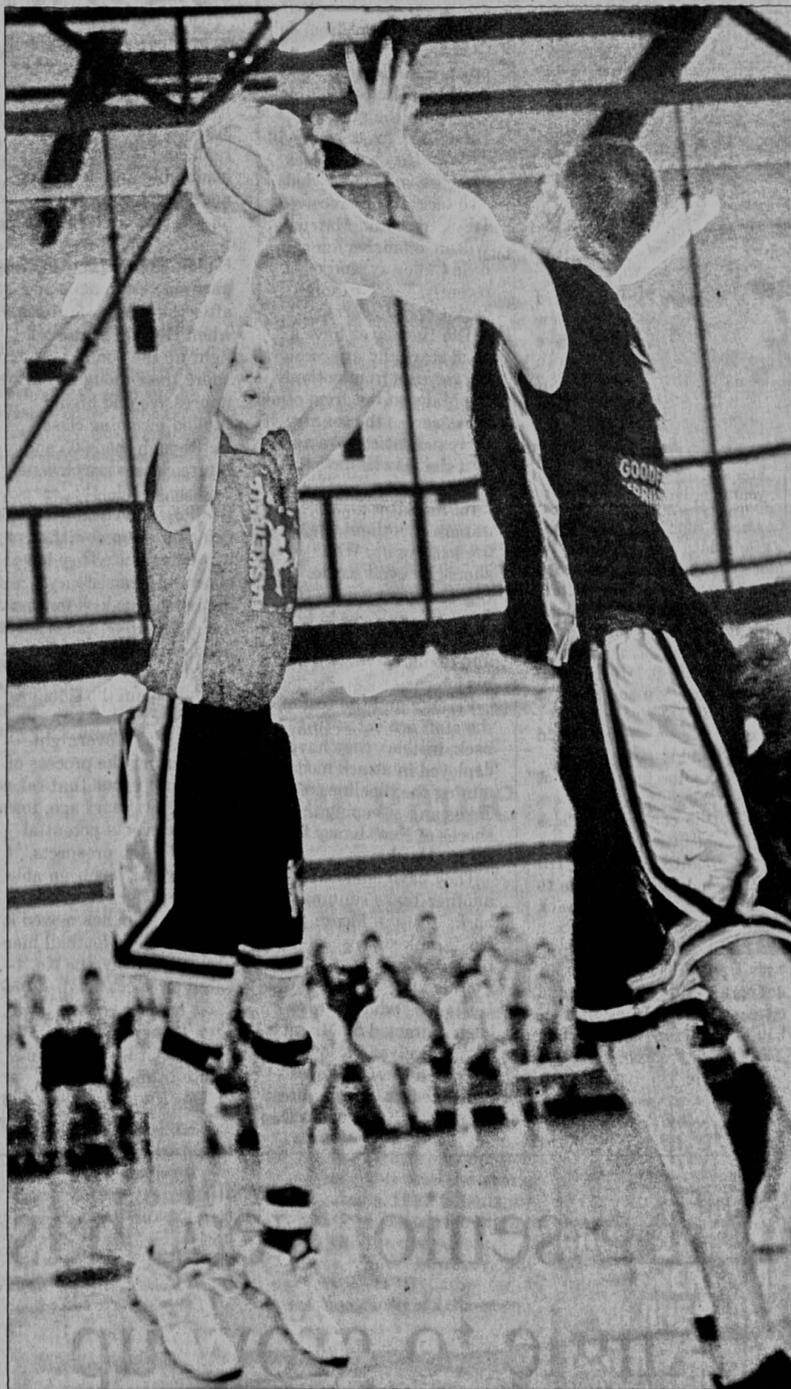

Sounds like a white guy who grew up 94 miles from French Lick, hometown of Larry Bird.

"I really try to pattern my game after Larry Bird," he said. "My dad, he always had me watching him when I was little. People kind of say I look like him, kind of shoot like him. I guess that's a nice compliment."

A recent graduate of Indian Creek High School, Angle averaged 28.6 points a game, 7.7 rebounds, and 3.8 assists during his senior campaign. He's now getting his first taste of life as a Hawkeye, taking part in his first week of action in the Prime Time League in North Liberty.

"He's going to be a nice addition to what we do," said Pierre Pierce, Angle's future Iowa teammate and current cohort with Mike Gatens Real Estate/Hodge Construction. "He can handle it pretty well, drive it well — he's a big kid, tall, so he's going to help us out in a lot of areas."

Angle said he hopes to aid the Hawkeye cause next season by becoming a key contributor off the bench.

Aaron Holmgren/The Daily Iowan

J.R. Angle, who averaged 28.6 points per game as a high-school senior, goes for a jump shot in the Prime Time League last week. The Indiana native will suit up for the Hawkeyes next season and is the second recruit under coach Steve Alford to hail from the Hoosier State.

Football recruiting off to good start

BRYAN BAMONTE

Kirk Ferentz has a knack for turning the unwanted into All-Americans. He has the ability to decipher and project a player's worth. The numbers and rankings are not his blueprint; rather, he employs a simpler approach to uncover the readiness of a player to step in and play Iowa football, Kirk Ferentz-style.

That style has brought the Hawkeyes to the national foreground and made the town of Iowa City a glowing exhibition of how Big Ten football is supposed to be played.

It hasn't been an easy path for the one-time NFL assistant. His first two seasons as head coach of the Hawkeyes were disappointing; Ferentz led his team to a 1-10 record in 1999, followed by a 3-9 performance in 2000.

However, the coach was quickly able to restore pride to this football town in the 2001 season.

The recent inability the Hawkeyes to recruit top-tier, five-star talent has not hurt, as they have been able to make three consecutive trips to bowl games, including a BCS appearance in 2002.

When the final commitments were signed by the 20 future Hawkeyes in February, Iowa had a nice 2004 recruiting class. It even nabbed a five-star linebacker, Kyle Williams. The only problem is that while the class is a solid group, it was only ranked the sixth-best in the conference and 38th in the nation, according to Rivals.com.

And even though many Iowa fans were disappointed with the 2004 class, times are changing. It seems that the Hawkeyes have finally earned the respect of some top-flight high-schoolers, if the Hawks' 2005 class is any indication. Recently, the Hawkeyes received an

Disappointing Astros fire Williams, hire Garner

BY JOEL ANDERSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — The Houston Astros made it clear they're making one final push for the postseason, firing manager Jimmy Williams Wednesday and bringing in Phil Garner.

A season that began with World Series aspirations for the Astros has been slipping away, so general manager Gerry Hunsicker wanted an immediate and "dramatic" change.

"There's a cloud that hung over our team for so long," he

Garner
new Houston manager said. "Time is of the essence. We can't waste too much time here."

Garner, a former Astros player, is taking over on an interim basis. The team will conduct another search at the end of the season.

"I'm excited. I'm a Houston boy, and I'm looking forward to it," Garner, a former manager with Detroit and Milwaukee, told the Associated Press in a phone interview. "We got some boys on the team who I think can do something really special. This is an opportunity that I've been waiting for."

Williams' job security had been the subject of speculation for about a month, right about the time Houston's surprising slide down the NL Central standings began. He was fired during a clubhouse meeting with Hunsicker, owner Drayton McLane, and other team officials.

"He indicated that he was not surprised," McLane said. "He knew something wasn't clicking."

The season began with expectations of the club's first World Series appearance in its 42-year history after the off-season acquisition of former New York Yankees teammates Andy Pettitte and Roger Clemens.

But Houston was 44-44 heading into the All-Star break, a remarkable disappointment for a team that was tops in the NL Central for the first month and a half of the season.

Pitching coach Burt Hooton and hitting coach Harry Spilman were also fired.

SPORTS

POINT/COUNTERPOINT

Which NBA conference is now the powerhouse?

Fresh off a surprise win in the NBA Finals, and with the addition of the Big Aristotle, the Eastern Conference is now just a bad dream. Shaq's impending trade to the Miami Heat for an undersized power forward and two small forwards signals a shift of power not seen in the NBA since Michael Jordan left the Bulls after the 1998 finals. Now the Eastern Conference has the best all-around team in the league in the Pistons and the league's most dominant force.

I don't think some of you understand how truly unstoppable Shaquille O'Neal is. The league hasn't seen a force as amazing as Shaq since Wilt Chamberlain filled the lane in the '60s and '70s.

This trade has huge ramifications on the league. Admittedly, the Western Conference is still loaded. Players such as Tim Duncan, Kevin Garnett, Dirk Nowitzki, and Tracy McGrady will still roam the West. A team from the West could still easily win the title. But the question will remain: Who guards Shaq?

The answer is nobody. The only thing that stops Shaq is his teammates not giving him enough touches. While the Heat did give up a couple of good players in getting Shaq, they get way more in return. The Lakers did not get one All-Star out of this deal.

Brian Grant won't be able to guard any of the above-mentioned players, and Odom is a 3, along with Caron Butler and Devon George. The Heat kept the versatile Dwayne Wade, who is becoming one of the top players in the NBA.

If anything, this year's finals showed that you can guard wing players such as Kobe and T-Mac. The only way to guard the most dominant force in basketball is to not give him the ball, as Kobe and the rest of the Lakers did. Shaq is still the most dominant player in the league, and without any other centers in the East, no one will be able to stop him. Add Wade, and the Heat suddenly jump to the top of the heap in the now-superior Eastern Conference.

— by Nick Richards

Despite his numerous aliases, Shaquille O'Neal is but one man. Trading him for two rising young stars, a dinosaur, and a draft pick isn't going to shift the power from the West to the East. It'll only solidify the West's dominance for the future.

Shaq Diesel is the most dominant center since Wilt Chamberlain. But let us not forget that Tim Duncan has won two MVPs in the last three years, and most recently another formidable big man from the Western Conference — Kevin Garnett — was chosen as the most valuable asset. Big Shaq Daddy has only won one, in 2000.

Even if Big Aristotle's scoring average goes up from his 21.5 points a game next season, when he won't have to share the ball with score-whore Kobe Bryant, Miami has only one person to share the load with Shaq Fu: Dwayne Wade. The Heat traded away three of their starters and now the no-names on their bench (Rasual Butler, Whang Zhizhi?) are responsible for filling the gap.

What did the three new Lakers leave behind in South Beach? A combined 21.4 rebounds a game, compared with Kazaam's 11.5 in 2004. And of all the Heat to step in, don't expect it to be Rafer Alston — who played more minutes off their bench than any of the others. Alston, a.k.a. "Skip to My Lou," is bidding against Wade for PT, who is now sharing the spotlight as Steel's sidekick. (Side note: Shaq starred as a superhero in the 1997 film Steel: Heroes don't come any bigger. Miami should wish they did.)

So what's the big deal about this O'Neal guy? His numbers have gotten consistently less consistent over the last five years. Granted, they're still pretty good, but you have to wonder if the hack-a-shack strategy opposing coaches use are taking a toll on his aging body. Even if Shaq postpones his acting and rapping career and concentrates more on basketball, you still can't count on him for 82 starts a season. The cliché is still true: The best are out West.

oral commitment from Jake Christensen, a four-star prospect ranked as the third-best dual-threat quarterback in the nation.

Joining Christensen will be Iowa City native Alex Kanellis, a four-star defensive tackle, wide receivers Trey Stross and Marcus Wilson, offensive lineman Kyle Calloway, and most recently, Texas running back Corey Robertson.

The Hawkeyes have a head start and are receiving recruits from not only the Midwest but from other areas across the country. If early indications are a sign that the Hawks have finally made the leap from a mid-level recruiter to the national spotlight, things are looking up. What should be even scarier to Big Ten opponents is that Ferentz continues to take his team to the top; youth and talent can only make his job easier.

Ferentz and the rest of the staff are not sitting back; instead, they have deployed in attack mode, mining the pipelines of Texas and sweeping the shores of New Jersey for future Hawkeyes.

They have made offers to another Texas running back, Kestahn Moore, the No. 2-ranked prospect at his position in the state. Florida wide receiver Jessie Hester Jr., who has also been contacted by Miami (Fla.), received an Iowa offer, and the Hawkeyes continue to receive interest from offensive lineman Dan Doering, the highest-rated offensive lineman in the 2005 class.

It is undoubtedly going to be an exciting campaign for the 2004 Hawkeyes as Ferentz will have his hands full with a new starting quarterback and replacing (although their leadership and heart cannot be replaced easily) seniors Robert Gallery, Bob Sanders, and Nate Kaeding. The most exciting part may be what happens after the season, for once, when Hawkeye fans can light up the bonfire and share their thoughts on the impressive and highly ranked incoming class.

Although the 2005 and future classes are obviously not foreseeable, the Hawkeyes have more things going for them now than at any other time. They have shown the consistency many recruits look for in a team. The three-consecutive bowl campaigns and the fact that Ferentz will continue to roam the sidelines are major pluses.

It is not an overnight experiment; the process of "building" is one that takes time. A few years ago, Iowa was not even a potential choice for top prospects. But Ferentz has been able to not only get Iowa on their lists, he has moved it up the college-football hierarchy. Recently, the No. 1-rated prospect for the 2006 class made a visit to Iowa City. Unheralded in the past but precisely appropriate in the present.

Challenging senior year has forced Angle to grow up

While the lanky 200-pounder has displayed an array of offensive skills in his brief stint in Prime Time, Angle and his summer-league coach admit he still has some work to do getting down and dirty on the defensive end.

"He didn't guard anybody," said Gatens Real Estate coach and league director Randy Larson following his squad's win on July 5.

Larson was quick to add that Angle has done a commendable job of quickly fitting in with his summer-league teammates, though. And who could ignore the gunner's offensive game?

"If a guy can only do one thing," Larson said, "shooting's a good thing to do."

Angle admits he has to get more focused while in his defensive stance — he didn't shy away from his coach's criticism.

He's used to being under the spotlight — including the negatives that come with it.

The highly regarded recruit first committed orally to Iowa in August 2001; with early commitments comes intensified scrutiny.

Last February, during what proved to be the final home game at Indian Creek for both Angle and his father and coach, Larry Angle, the sharpshooter became the all-time leading scorer in Johnson County (Ind.) history. Not everyone was cheering when J.R. made his trip to the bench, however. Soon after his exit, teammate Justin Ray passed the ball to Angle while the prolific scorer was seated on the pine.

Ray was reportedly playing out the wishes of a few disgruntled Indian Creek parents and fans who felt that Larry Angle force-fed his son the ball in the squad's offense. Ray also reportedly received a cash incentive by the angered members of the Indian Creek contingent to pull off the stunt.

The Angles were forced to endure another ugly incident earlier in the season, around Jan. 30, when former Indian Creek player Shawn Michael Abel vandalized their home, slashing the tires of the family's three cars and stealing several items, according to the Indianapolis Star. Another former player remains a suspect in the case.

Abel has since paid the Angles $5,564.84 in restitution.

Larry Angle resigned as coach at Indian Creek following the tumultuous season.

J.R. Angle has since moved to Iowa City for good, and he is looking to the future, ignoring the past. He also said the incident has made him a stronger person.

"It made me grow up," he said. "I'm sure anything that I come across here at Iowa won't be as bad as that. I got the worst out of the way, hopefully."

"I just block them out and keep playing basketball. And I've had so many people compliment me on just being the bigger person. You know, I think I came out smelling like a rose. And they were the weeds."

A battle against the elements

British Open modeled to be a true test of golf

BY DOUG FERGUSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

TROON, Scotland — From the time Phil Mickelson, Tiger Woods, Ernie Els, and the rest of golf's top players set foot on Royal Troon, they have lavished this piece of linksland with praise.

The greens are among the purest on the British Open rotation. The rough is thick, but not deep enough to lose a caddie. A 200-yard shot can be either a 9-iron or a 2-iron, depending on the wind.

And unlike the U.S. Open last month at Shinnecock Hills, opinions are not likely to change.

Justin Leonard won at Royal Troon in 1997 and hardly noticed anything different when he returned, a tribute to the Royal & Ancient philosophy of letting Mother Nature have more of an influence than a lawn mower. Tournament officials even considered turning on the sprinklers until it rained Tuesday night.

"I think the R&A does an incredible job of setting the golf course up fairly and maintaining the course the way it is meant to be played, and not worrying about what the winning score is," Leonard said. "The weather dictates that. I think that's the way it should be."

It wasn't like that at Shinnecock Hills.

Still fresh in the minds of players is the debacle on Long Island, when the U.S. Golf Association tried to protect its most precious commodity — par — by keeping water off the greens until shots no longer stayed there. Scores soared into the 80s, and no one managed to break 70 in the final round.

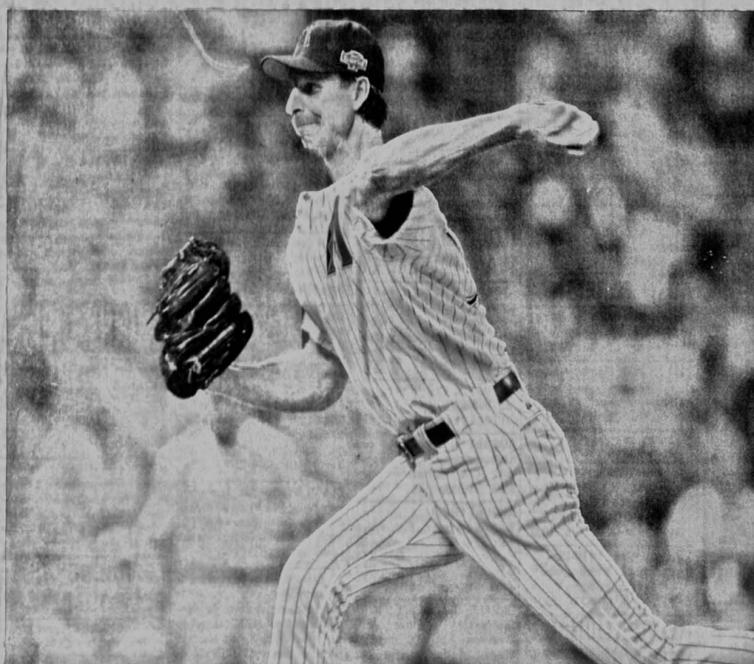

Robert Allenby was asked to give three examples of how he knows this is the British Open. He didn't mention the traditional yellow-and-black scoreboards, fish and chips, or even brilliant views of the Ailsa Craig jutting out of the sea.

"The greens are playable," Allenby said. "The greens are not running 15 on the Stimpmeter. And the course is set up the way it should be set up. It is set up to be a true test of golf."

Arizona pitcher Randy Johnson, who pitched a perfect game on May 18 against the Atlanta Braves, is being pursued by a number of contenders, most publicly the New York Yankees.

Second half could be full of surprises

BY MIKE FITZPATRICK
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Almost everybody was stunned to see Roger Clemens get knocked around in the All-Star game. The second half of the season could be filled with big surprises, too.

Texas and St. Louis are in first place. The Padres and Mets are only two games out. And Randy Johnson could shake up the entire pennant race if he's traded by the lowly Arizona Diamondbacks.

The Yankees and Red Sox are sure to make a run at him, adding another chapter to their storied rivalry. Or maybe a different team — perhaps Anaheim — will pry him away before the July 31 non-waiver deadline.

"This isn't the Florida State League, where the first-half winner automatically gets a berth in the playoffs," Yankees general manager Brian Cashman said. "We have to keep the pedal to the metal, and you're always concerned about what Boston or others may do. I'll continue to make phone calls and see what's cooking."

Looking for its seventh-consecutive AL East title, New York has a seven-game cushion over the Red Sox, who lead the wild-card race by a slim margin.

Yet the Yankees are in need of a starting pitching, and they've openly coveted Johnson, the five-time Cy Young Award winner who has five career postseason wins against them.

The 40-year-old left-hander, who pitched a perfect game in Atlanta on May 18, is stuck on a team with the worst record in the majors.

He's making $16 million this season, and he is due $16 million in 2005, the final year of his deal. And he said during the All-Star break that he would consider waiving his no-trade clause if Arizona wants to send him to a contender.

Sounds like a perfect match for one of baseball's big spenders — and maybe a relief for everybody in the National League.

"There's not that many difference makers out there. Lord willing, they're all going to the Red Sox or the Yankees anyway," San Francisco general manager Brian Sabean said.

Led by Barry Bonds and Jason Schmidt, Sabean's Giants are in the thick of a three-team race in the NL West, wedged right between first-place Los Angeles and third-place San Diego.

The NL East is just as muddled. Three teams are within two games of first-place Philadelphia, including the surprising Mets. Atlanta, seeking its 13th-straight division title, is only a game back, just ahead of Florida.

"It's a four-team battle," Marlins manager Jack McKeon said during the All-Star game. "Any of those four clubs could win."

Ali captivates crowd at All-Star game

BY JOEL ANDERSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

HOUSTON — Derek Jeter could barely utter a word, almost frozen with fear when he met Muhammad Ali the day before.

So imagine how Jeter felt when the former heavyweight champ came at him with his fists raised in a classic fighter's pose Tuesday night.

"It was a little scary when he started throwing punches," Jeter joked. "I was scared. I didn't want to get hit."

Ali was an honored guest for the ceremonial first pitch at the All-Star game, returning to the city where he fought four times and relinquished his heavyweight boxing title by refusing to join the military during the Vietnam War.

The selection of Ali for the gathering of baseball's best was considered a peculiar choice by some, but Commissioner Bud Selig dismissed such criticism. Ali has said he became interested in baseball once his 13-year-old son, Asaad, joined a Little League team in their community of Niles, Mich.

"Muhammad Ali is one of the sports legends of our generation," Selig said before the game. "I don't think that that's valid criticism."

Ali, now 62, fought four times at the since-deserted Astrodome, beating Cleveland Williams in 1966, Ernie Terrell in 1967, and Jimmy Ellis and Buster Mathis in 1971.

But Ali became known for much more than being a terrific and mouthy heavyweight champion in April 1967, when he moved his legal residence to Houston to fight induction into the military at the downtown U.S. Armed Forces Examining and Entrance Station.

He was roundly criticized for the decision around the country, and he was indicted 10 days later by a federal jury for violating the Universal Military Training and Service Act. He was convicted in Houston on June 20, 1967, and was sentenced to five years in prison and a fine of $10,000.

Ali never went to prison as his case went through appeals, but he was stripped of his titles and forced to stop boxing for more than three years. His refusal gave more steam to the growing antiwar movement, and the U.S. Supreme Court overturned his conviction in 1971. Ali returned to the ring shortly thereafter.

He became the world champion twice more, and eventually retired in 1981.

Ali has returned to Houston several times over the years, including a 1997 benefit for Parkinson's disease, the ailment from which he now suffers.

This time, however, Ali returned to Houston for a welcome worthy of a champion.

LITTLE-KNOWN PARTY FOULS

by Josh Bald

• Going home with the host's life-sized cutout of Mike Piazza.

• Clapping too soon for the climatic "telling off" scene.

• Every hour, asking the blind guy if he saw those two girls making out.

• Parking your car on the flower garden. My petunias!

• Resetting all the clocks to 4:20.

• Continually demanding more volume when sitting next to the speakers.

• Dressing up the keg in baby clothes and sneaking out with it.

• Making a lasso out of the garden hose and proclaiming yourself the Cowboy of Love.

• After the Natty Light runs out, you ask "where the good beer went?"

• Challenging the fridge to a fight.

• Go up to girl. Say, "Do you have your tickets...to the gun show?" Flex.

• Dancing the Lindy Hop.

quote of the day

I would argue that the future of our country hangs in the balance because the future of marriage hangs in the balance. Isn't that the ultimate homeland security, standing up and defending marriage?

— Sen. Rick Santorum, R-Pa., defending a constitutional amendment banning gay marriage. On Wednesday, the Senate scuttled the amendment, 50-48.

ARIES (MARCH 21-APRIL 19): Expect the unexpected, and you will be prepared for whatever comes your way today. Everyone will want a piece of you, so say no if you find yourself becoming anxious.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Plan a little social event with friends or relatives. The more you can talk about your plans with people you trust, the closer you will come to knowing what you want to do in the future.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Hard work will pay off. You can make a career change or at least start working toward it. A love interest may develop at work.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will find it difficult to control your emotions today. Try not to get into a situation that could potentially lead to an argument.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can make some money if you are ready to talk business today. Financial ventures will lead to bigger and better things in the future. Put money into something that will benefit you in numerous ways.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Consider the difference you can make if you put your talent to work for worthwhile reforms. Your quest to do what's right will lead to meeting new people and possibly forming a new partnership.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may find it difficult to concentrate today. Someone you are working with may cause trouble. Try to stay out of the way, but if attacked, defend yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will attract a lot of attention today, which will probably lead to meeting someone who will make a difference to your future. Focus on creative projects.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may be more tied down than you want to be today. Alterations at home will be beneficial. If someone wants to change the dynamics of your relationship, go along with it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be moving at full speed today, but don't neglect someone who has been in your corner since the beginning. Emotions will run wild; they must be channeled into passion, not anger.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): If you are looking for a job, lean toward the positions that will allow you to use your imagination. If you are already working, give whatever project you are working on your own little twist.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Love is evident, so take advantage of it. Ask someone out who interests you or plan an evening with your current partner.
