Man charged in adult-shop shooting

BY NICK PETERSEN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Police charged an Iowa City man with attempted murder Thursday in connection with a Tuesday shooting at the Adult Marketplace, 440 Kirkwood Ave.

Wayne Saterfiel allegedly confessed to shooting clerk Jason Broadrick three times in the chest at close range with a 12-gauge shotgun, according to police records. Saterfiel allegedly purchased the ammunition used minutes before the shooting.

UI Hospitals and Clinics officials would not comment on Broadrick's condition, but Adult Marketplace owner Ryan Montague said that when the store manager visited Broadrick in the hospital Thursday, he was conscious yet unable to speak.

The Iowa Division of Criminal Investigations worked with the Iowa City police to track down Saterfiel after a witness came to the police with a description and a partial license number of a car that left the store's parking lot just after the shooting.

Police contend that a car registered to Saterfiel matched the witness' description. They found him and recovered a shotgun near his home.

Montague said the store turned over surveillance tapes and other items to aid the police in their investigation, but he was uncertain whether any of the items helped the police.

There were customers in the store when the shooting occurred, he said.

He added that there was little damage to the store, which reopened Thursday morning.

Saterfiel's bond was set at $32,500. He was scheduled to make an initial appearance in the 6th District Court at 8 a.m. today.

Montague said he was unsure about Saterfiel's alleged motives. The police investigator in charge was unavailable for comment Thursday evening.

UISG execs prepare budget

BY TRACI FINCH
THE DAILY IOWAN

Since April, UI Student Government President Lindsay Schutte and her executives have spent more than 50 hours creating the UISG 2004-05 budget, preparing to present the document to Phillip Jones, the UI vice president for Student Services, at 10:30 a.m. today.

"We have the opportunity to decide where the money goes," Schutte said on Thursday, referring to a rough draft.

The money comes from last year's unused student-organization funds.

Schutte said she is not sure how much money rolled over this year, but in the past, it has totaled between $30,000 and $50,000.

The executives allotted money based on a list of priorities they established at their April 25 executive retreat, with legislation archiving at the top of the list.

"For at least the past three years, all of the legislation that the Senate passed and became part of the Constitution hadn't been archived," Schutte said. "That's our No. 1 thing." The executives are requesting $750 to implement a consistent plan.

The executives rank a website update second on their list of priorities, requesting $3,000 to build and maintain an interactive UISG Student Resource Portal, which is scheduled to become available in August. The new site

Another car bomb kills 10 and injures dozens more in Iraq

Interim leader Iyad Allawi creates new security agency to deal with violence

BY SCOTT WILSON
WASHINGTON POST

BAGHDAD — Insurgents detonated a car bomb Thursday near the municipal government complex in the city of Haditha, killing 10 people and injuring dozens of others, as interim Prime Minister Iyad Allawi sought to reassure Iraqis during a fresh surge of attacks that security is improving.

The bombing in Haditha, a crossroads town approximately 125 miles northwest of Baghdad that was once deeply loyal to deposed President Saddam Hussein, bore the hallmarks of the powerful explosion that killed 11 people in the capital a day earlier. The target was a seat of political power, and the victims were primarily civilians. Of the 10 people killed, three were members of the Iraqi police force, and the rest were apparent bystanders. Iraqi officials said 27 others were wounded.

A few hours after the bombing, Allawi, whose stern approach to the insurgency has made him highly popular, announced the creation of a domestic security

Stepping Up looking for alternative funds

BY TRACI FINCH
THE DAILY IOWAN

If the Stepping Up Project does not find the money it requires to continue operating, the Friday Night Concert Series, Night Games, Up All Night at Iowa, 10,000 Hours, and other alcohol-alternative projects the organization supports will suffer.

The organization's current grant runs out in August 2006, and it will not be renewed. Stepping Up was established in 1996, when the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation selected the UI as one of nine universities deemed to have a problem with high-risk drinking. Stepping Up has received three grants from the foundation.

While the organization has received matching funds from the UI, without a renewed grant, it seems unlikely Stepping Up and the alcohol alternatives it supports will be able to continue, an official says.

"Upon reading the letter and talking with students and Stepping Up members, I felt that signing the letter was not in the best interest of the students."

— Lindsay Schutte,
UISG president

Jim Clayton, a Stepping Up co-coordinator, believes the answer to the group's problem may be in student fees. When current UISG President Lindsay Schutte first came to office in April, the group asked her to sign a letter of intent pledging $1 per student toward Stepping Up.

She refused. "Upon reading the letter and talking with students and Stepping Up members, I felt that signing the letter was not

Lehman gives out 22 development grants

Local nonprofits receive awards for housing, jobs, and other services

BY AMY JESSE
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa City Mayor Ernie Lehman presented $1.9 million worth of awards to local organizations Thursday afternoon at the Community Development Celebration and Awards Ceremony.

The fiscal 2005 Community Development Block Grant and HOME Investment Partnership awards were granted to 22 nonprofit organizations for housing, jobs, and services, said Tracy Hightshoe, a community development associate planner.

The Iowa City School District received the largest award, a $325,000 grant to be used for the Grant Wood Elementary Family Resource Center. Lehman said the School District was the organization he was proudest to give an award to.

"That really is your tax dollars working for all of us," he said, noting that the awards are funded by federal tax dollars.

Three Community Development Awards were also presented at Thursday's celebration at the Rack Barbeque, 1911 Broadway. The awards recognize an organization's contributions toward making Iowa City a leader in community development and quality of life.

Greater Iowa City Area Homebuilder's Association Remodeler's Council was named Outstanding Contractor. Iowa State Bank & Trust received the Outstanding Corporate Citizen award. The Outstanding New Community Development Program Award was given to the Youth Leadership Program.

"Organizations such as today's winners ... demonstrated the ability to work together to make our community a better place,"

Body not that of missing woman

Some hoped that remains found near Mason City might be those of anchorwoman Jodi Huisentrui

BY LESLIE PARRILLA
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MASON CITY, Iowa — The skeletal remains found near a creek are those of an adult white male, Cerro Gordo County Sheriff Kevin Pals said on Thursday.

The bones were found Wednesday northeast of the city limits by farm workers riding ATVs, Pals said.

The remains were taken to Broadlawn Medical Center in Des Moines, where an autopsy was being conducted Thursday by Iowa Medical Examiner Dr. Julie Goodin, the sheriff said.

He said partial clothing and other items were found with the remains.

"There is some other evidence that was recovered at the scene, and we are going to continue to investigate that crime scene, treat it as a crime scene at this point, but we do have some evidence that was recovered that we hope will lead us to the identity of this person," Pals said.

The determination that the remains were those of a white male ended speculation that they might have been those of missing anchorwoman Jodi Huisentrui.

Huisentrui, a 27-year-old news anchor at KIMT-TV in Mason City, failed to show up for work on the morning of June 27, 1995.

Pals said it was disappointing that the remains weren't Huisentrui because it would have given the missing anchorwoman's family answers to her whereabouts and what happened.

"We are very disappointed, and I'm sure north Iowa is disappointed also," he said.

The clothing was initially spotted and the human remains found buried beneath, said Bill Basler, a special agent with the Iowa Division of Criminal Investigation.

Investigators returned to the site Thursday to continue analyzing the scene.

Christie Vilsack lands speaking spot

Iowa first lady to deliver a prime-time speech at the Democratic Convention

BY MIKE GLOVER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Christie Vilsack will deliver a prime-time speech on "Midwestern values" during the Democratic National Convention, and she will push her pet project of literacy throughout the event.

"I'm going to talk about Main Street values because I live on Main Street," the wife of Iowa Gov. Tom Vilsack said, referring to the family's home in Mount Pleasant.

Christie Vilsack's speech on July 27 will come during a night the party hopes to make the case that Democrats relate more closely to the values of working families than does President Bush.

The Iowa first lady likely scored the coveted speaking slot because of her endorsement of presumptive nominee John Kerry before Iowa's leadoff precinct caucuses last January.

The invitation for her to speak at the convention has raised some eyebrows because her husband, who was on

Christie Vilsack

Kerry's short list of potential running mates, did not get a similar invitation.

She dismissed any suggestions of a slight, saying Tom Vilsack will have a prominent role at the podium as a leader of the convention's Platform Committee. He has more than 50 events on his schedule during the four-day convention.

"My husband has a pretty significant role at the convention," she said. "I'm proud to be married to a rising star in the Democratic Party."

Christie Vilsack said she completed her speech on Wednesday and submitted it to convention managers for editing.

An educator for 30 years, Christie Vilsack has made boosting literacy her pet project since her husband was elected governor. She said she will continue that at the Boston convention. She is encouraging delegates and others attending the convention to bring along books to donate to the Boston school system in a "Books for Boston" effort.

She also plans to host an event at the Boston Public Library on July 26 for U.S. senators who have written books. She also will tout a scholarship effort along with the wife of New Mexico Gov. Bill Richardson.

Man charged with assault, possession

An Iowa City man was charged Wednesday with domestic assault causing injury, second-degree theft, and possession of methamphetamine.

Dale Lloyd McCreedy, 39, allegedly threw his girlfriend, with whom he lives, into a wall, on the ground, and over a motorcycle during an argument.

Records show that the fight began when the defendant arrived home late. The woman reported pains in her neck and upper right leg.

While the police were investigating the domestic dispute, the McCreedy's girlfriend told police that the defendant had methamphetamine in his fanny pack. McCreedy gave police consent to search his fanny pack, and police allegedly found a clear plastic bag inside that contained 23 grams of small yellow rocks, which reportedly tested positive for methamphetamine. McCreedy told police that the drugs belonged to his girlfriend.

Also during the investigation, police discovered that the defendant might have possession of a stolen motorcycle. After checking the VIN information, police learned that the motorcycle was stolen between July 17 and July 27, 2001.

According to records, the motorcycle had been painted blue and had a screwdriver sticking out of the ignition. The defendant said he bought the motorcycle for $200, but he failed to provide police with a title.

McCreedy was in custody at the Johnson County Jail with a $25,000 cash-only bond.

County to hire consultant for North Corridor

BY ALLISON FREDERICK
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors approved a motion Thursday morning to hire a consulting firm to assess the county's plans for North Corridor road upgrades.

The agreement allows the Cedar Rapids-based Howard Green Co. to provide consultation services on the proposed road improvements of Prairie Du Chien Road and Newport Road, located north of I-80.

The company plans to conduct an in-depth traffic study of the area; a report is expected to be compiled and presented to the supervisors by the end of December.

Johnson County will pay up to $67,000 for the services. The consultation will be funded by the county's general fund, but future road rebuilding will likely tap into federal funding. A highly unlikely alternative option would involve spending county dollars out of the rural fund.

Supervisor Pat Harney said Iowa City and Coralville have worked with the company on past projects.

"It is going to take a look at the area and see what roads are appropriate," he said. "It isn't designing the roads itself, but it will make recommendations for what is best for growth."

The county will also seek the input of area residents, he said.

Richard Gibson, who lives in the North Corridor area and has been critical of the plans, said he was pleased that the county hired a consultant that will take the project seriously. "I'm glad that [Howard Green Co.] will do a study of the area," he said.

Doug Ripley, Howard Green's senior transportation's planner and project manager, said his experience in the area will assist the county in planning the upgrades.

"I am familiar with the North Corridor and the folks up there," he said. "The process involves looking at the purpose of the individuals roads, as well as traffic and neighborhood characteristics. We can then come up with design elements that will fit that intent."

Howard Green will also look to identify future funding issues that could potentially affect development plans, he said.

A link will soon be available on the Johnson County website providing updates and contact information to facilitate citizen participation in the decision-making process.

A digital drop box for the budget committee comes in as the third priority, needing $1,500. The drop box, which will be used to electronically submit Budget Request Forms, will be available on the interactive website. The electronic information will be automatically entered into a large database.

The highest dollar amount — $8,000 — UISG is requesting is for the 10,000 Hours Show for basic operations.

The budget attempts to put into effect many of the promises made during Schutte's campaign, such as setting aside $2,000 for trips to Des Moines and requesting $500 for collaboration with Iowa State University and University of Northern Iowa, allowing the three schools to meet and exchange ideas.

UISG also budgets $1,000 for attending Board of Regents meetings, which will enable the group to lobby the state Legislature "on a regular basis to maintain open communication about tuition issues," as listed on the platform.

Missing from the priority list, and therefore the budget, is what the February platform lists as the No. 1 issue for Schutte and the Giant Sloth Party — landlord/student relationships. Schutte said the UISG is working with the Office of Student Life and the Tenant-Landlord Association on that issue, adding that the budget did not necessarily include money that will go toward student groups.

"We're coming up with a plan with those two organizations to see if they can work together in a better manner," she said.

The Keokuk native used her and Vice President Jason Shore's platform to a "certain extent" on the retreat, but she said it was "really important" to hear the opinions of the other executives.

said School Superintendent Lane Plunge.

This year's event also marks the 30th anniversary of the Community Development Block Grant. The program is sponsored by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and is administered locally by the city. It has helped return millions of federal tax dollars to local communities.

"There are probably not any nonprofit organizations that haven't benefited from the funds," said Matt Hayek, the chairman of the Housing and Community Development Commission.

Community Development Block Grant and HOME are federal programs that provide grants to states, cities, and towns to tend to the physical, economic, housing, and human-services needs of low- to moderate-income persons.

The event sported the motto "building strong individuals, proud families, vibrant communities." Federal, state, and local officials, as well as housing and community-development advocates, were among the 40 in attendance.

in the best interest of the students," Schutte said. Ultimately, it is the administration's decision, but Schutte still does not support giving Stepping Up more than $20,000 in student fees.

"UISG is the epitome of an alcohol alternative, because it supports nearly 400 student organizations and provides almost $1 million of student fees annually for these groups," she said. "The student organizations function as an outlet and hobby for students, providing an essential alcohol alternative."

Clayton contends that a dollar is just a dollar.

"I can buy Jack Daniel's and Coke for a dollar," he said. Along with student fees, he said, he hopes funding will come from a private sponsorship or the city — he wants to explore all options.

Although some have been critical of the organization, he said it is essential to provide alcohol alternatives to UI students.

"Student fees should provide a direct service to students, not fund a project that many students do not agree with — the mission nor that it exists," Schutte said.

Without Stepping Up, Clayton believes prospective students who experience Stepping Up's programs when they first visit the UI will feel deprived if the programs are canceled.

"Not everybody selects this school because Budweiser Boulevard runs down the middle of it," he said. "Prospective students come here and say, 'Wow, that's great — that's a big plus' — after participating in one of the programs, and 'we don't want to disappoint these people.'"

In addition to arranging alcohol-free activities, Stepping Up has supported an amendment to Iowa City's disorderly house ordinance and the City Council's 19-ordinance.

Marriage ban thankfully falls short

Republicans in the U.S. Senate this week fell short of the number of votes necessary to advance the Federal Marriage Amendment, which would have effectively defined marriage in the United States as a union between a man and a woman. In this election year, opponents and even a few supporters of the legislation accused Republicans and the Bush administration of fighting for the measure as a political tactic rather than focusing on legitimate concerns requiring immediate attention. The demise of the measure is a major blow to President Bush and his campaign to divide the nation on social issues, but it is a major victory for proponents of what America is supposed to represent: freedom, equality, and personal choice.

If the legislation had succeeded, Sens. John Kerry and John Edwards would have needed to take a stance on the issue, clearly an attempt by the GOP to place them on the record as voting against the amendment. Now that it has been shot down, neither Democratic candidate will have to officially voice his opposition to the law, much to the chagrin of the Bush campaign.

Bush is already using Kerry's and Edwards' recent Senate absences against them in the media, ignoring the reality that this is simply an effort on his part to use a highly controversial matter for political gain. Using these kinds of stands by the opposing side so close to the general election is a prime opportunity for Bush's team to sling yet more mud at the Democratic hopefuls for being liberal zealots (or perhaps freedom zealots?). He won't have this opportunity now.

Among the senators voting against the amendment was Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, whom The Daily Iowan applauds for standing up against what is tantamount to an attack not only on the homosexual population but the very ideals upon which this nation was founded. This is not about preserving the sanctity or traditional definition of marriage, both of which were destroyed by heterosexual couples long ago. It is about political leverage and a gross misuse of the system.

The only time in history that the U.S. Constitution has deprived rights from any group of American citizens was with the ratification of the Eighteenth Amendment, which codified prohibition of intoxicating beverages. This amendment was repealed, as can be reasonably predicted for any amendment that restricts marriage as a heterosexual privilege. Why waste time debating the addition of an amendment to the Constitution that is destined to be removed at a later time?

Currently, national legislation on this issue isn't necessary, nor is it apparently desired, based on the Senate vote. Thirty-eight states (including Iowa and every state that borders it except Wisconsin) already have laws that specifically prohibit same-sex marriage, and it is highly doubtful whether any of them will overturn their bans at any point in the near future. The death of this proposed amendment — an amendment championed by Bush as another divisive issue during a time when the nation is already heavily split — should be celebrated by all Americans who expect equal treatment for every citizen, gay or straight.

The Daily Iowan does accept submissions for guest opinions relating to current events in the news. Please keep them between 400-600 words and send them via e-mail with your full name, address, and telephone number for verification purposes.

Blurring the lines

In recent times, opponents of the war in Iraq have been careful to note that their criticism of President Bush and his administration does not mean they are anti-American.

A valid point, to be sure, but sometimes, the line becomes blurred. Take, for example, Josh Ignatieff's June 27 article in the New York Times Magazine. Titled "Mirage in the Desert," Ignatieff brazenly asserts that "America has never been equal to its rhetoric, and sometimes it can sustain belief in itself only by forgetting." Fittingly published near the recent Fourth of July celebrations, Ignatieff also sniffs that "no other nation has made a civil religion of its self-belief."

Ignoring for a moment that American law certainly does not proscribe Ignatieff's relocation to a different country — where, as he apparently desires, people are ashamed of their nationality — what are we to make of his charges? Consider that in the past three years, while France fiddled away, America has brought about the demise of one of the most repressive regimes in the world and ended the reign of a Stalinist dictator who employed rape police to tame his subjects. In the process, we also successfully convinced Libya that being a rogue regime with a nuclear arsenal was maybe not in its best interests. All of this, despite the preening of the European elite and pampered movie stars, whose war-for-oil charges appear suspect to say the least, when the going rate on a gallon of gas hovers around $2.

While Ignatieff undoubtedly admires his novel revelation that America has committed injustices, does this really make us no better than the Taliban? Or Saddam? America's greatness is illuminated by the fact that we corrected those wrongs, whereas the Mideast theocracies and Kim Jong Il are perfectly content to motor along cheerfully, knee-deep in human atrocities.

It is probably a rhetorical question at this point to inquire why the New York Times doesn't feel compelled to address current human-rights violations in, say, Cuba, rather than dwell on bad domestic policy, such as the repulsive Jim Crow laws, that reached their expiration date somewhere in the middle of the last century.

Ignatieff also bemoans poll numbers showing that 46 percent of Americans believe physical abuse short of torture is sometimes acceptable, while 35 percent think that outright torture is acceptable in some cases. Perhaps the same Americans who saw 3,000 innocent civilians incinerated on live television would rather not see the spectacle played out again in their hometown. Perhaps these people think that preventing another 3,000 deaths is worth the discomfort of a handful of admitted terrorists who have professed the desire, and are desperately trying to acquire the means, to destroy our entire country.

Last, Ignatieff goes after you-know-who for having limited post-Saddam plans, while noting that American Gen. George Marshall started preparing for post-Hitler Germany two years before D-Day. Well, if the intelligence in late 2002 (it is worth noting that not even France disputed our intelligence at the time) suggested that we had a few years leeway before invading, perhaps we could have formulated a Garden of Eden.

Unfortunately, as the author (whose inability to countenance the obvious differences between WWII and the Iraq war doesn't prevent him from drawing ludicrous analogies between the two) fails to apprehend, two years down the road was probably not the best gamble foreign policy-wise for a American-hating dictator seeking arms from his fellow despot over in North Korea. Also, you should ask yourself, if Marshall could have ended WWII two years earlier, do you think he would have eschewed that route in favor of two more years of war so the I's could be dotted and T's could be crossed on his postwar plan?

So maybe while Ignatieff takes a break from writing in his Manhattan apartment to walk past the collapsed Twin Towers and the ghosts of 3,000 dead, he should be thankful for the generosity of the American people and the willingness of American soldiers to lay down their lives. All this so that others (who mask their anti-American tendencies behind the façade of "documentary filmmaker") can live in peace while Monday-morning quarterbacking the leaders who pursued risky courses of action that might very well have prevented another 3,000 innocent deaths. ■

The beauty of free expression

In response to Aaron Gott's guest opinion (DI, July 15), I would like to add my thoughts.

Gott remarks that before 9/11 happened, we "didn't have to worry about someone named Michael Moore exploiting our situation ... attempting to tear us apart from within and destroy the integrity of our nation's leader." What he and many others fail to realize is that the United States is a unique country because one of its bedrock principles is the concept that we can speak our minds freely and essentially without reserve. Furthermore, the actual act of freely expressing one's critical opinions about the government, its leaders, and their actions is not just an expression of personal political freedom, it is actually a patriotic duty.

Patriotism does not mean a slavish adherence to the dogma of a sitting administration (regardless of party) whether the country is in the midst of a devastating war or whether the country is in the midst of an economic boom. Patriotism inherently involves constant re-evaluation of one's leaders and their actions and speaking out forcefully when one feels that they have acted inappropriately. Therefore, far from rejecting Moore's political commentary — any thinking individual with any sense of current events and popular culture knows that Moore has no illusions about making neutral, objective media pieces — the America people should embrace it and chew over its ideas and propositions, not hide chained in Plato's cave, looking at the shadows on the wall.

Some will agree with Moore's view, and some will disagree. That's the whole point. But whether one ends up agreeing or disagreeing with Moore's position, he will have hopefully made Americans think and reflect upon whom they have chosen to lead their country and to represent their country to the rest of the world. And maybe, just maybe, a few more might vote their minds this coming November.

Consider the Greens

For the last few weeks, I've been petitioning for the Iowa Green Party, and one of the most common responses I get is that people like what the Green Party stands for but want Bush out of office.

Me, too. I feel the same way, and I would like to share a few thoughts on the topic.

First, to grow the Green Party, I want to get David Cobb (the Green Party presidential nominee) on the ballot in Iowa. Unfortunately in Iowa, we can't just focus on local races because we need to get at least 2 percent in the presidential race to be considered a political party. This will make it easier for us to run candidates for local, state, and national office because we won't have to collect so many signatures. Thus, voting for Cobb is an important action to help grow the Green Party from the bottom up.

Second, I want Iowans to hold their judgment on which presidential candidate they will vote for until Election Day. Anything can happen between now and Nov. 2. Personally, I will only consider voting for Kerry if the polls show him within the margin of error in Iowa on Election Day. Otherwise, I'm voting for Cobb.

Third, Iowa and approximately 10-15 other states are considered "swing states." That means there are between 35 and 40 states in which the outcome is already known. Everyone should encourage her or his friends and relatives in these "safe states" to vote Green. To vote for Kerry in Massachusetts is to throw away your vote. Why not give a big "screw you!" to the corporate-dominated two-party system by voting for Cobb?

Finally, if you can't stomach voting for Cobb or Ralph Nader, you should vote Green down the ticket. Daryl Northrop is running for the U.S. Senate, and I am running for the Johnson County Board of Supervisors.

Please consider these ideas before you vote this fall. For more information about the Green Party, go to www.gp.org.

Indecent exposure?!

Can somebody please tell me why it is that men's nipples are legal while women's are not? The article "Breastfeeding sparks eatery brouhaha" (DI, July 14) reminds me of just how ludicrous we humans can be sometimes.

What makes women's nipples against THE LAW? While breastfeeding in public is legal in Iowa, the fact remains that our modern, "free" and "equal" society decries women for having nipples. This, by the way, is something that everyone has, just like body hair. The only difference is that mothers have nipples that do something! I wonder why we, as a nation, are not more upset that "indecent" exposure laws discriminate against women. These laws make women feel that their normal body parts — parts that play an important role in the growth and development of babies — are offensive and wrong. I would argue that these laws only help to create the offensive situation.

While breastfeeding mothers are granted an exception, it is an exception that should not be linked to indecency. Indecent-exposure laws do not keep shirts on women nor protect a society from indecency, just as "no shirt, no service" policies do not keep shirts on men or keep us civilized. The difference is that indecent-exposure laws are discriminatory and prejudicial when it comes to the sex of nipples. These laws target a population that is more likely to need the right to expose this part of their body in public, which makes the law even worse.

Women should have the same rights as men — to show their nipples in public where nipples are allowed to be seen, and then some. Amy Schoon (the complainant in this controversy) should not be any more offensive to us by either "discreetly" breastfeeding her son in public or "blatantly" feeding him. If the public feels uncomfortable with seeing this natural and healthy phenomenon, then perhaps they should try to be as brave, loving, and selfless as Schoon.

A step back in history (and a lot of taste treats)

Amana, Iowa

BY BETH HERZINGER
THE DAILY IOWAN

Amana meat, Amana beer, Amana wine — more than a trademark, the name identifies a level of homemade quality centuries in the making yet still palatable to present tastes.

The Amana Colonies consist of seven villages founded in 1852 by German settlers seeking religious freedom. They adopted a communal society in which all lands and buildings were owned by the community, and this way of life remained essentially unchanged for 89 years, making it one of the longest lasting communal societies in the world.

Today, the Amana Colonies is listed on the National Register of Historic Places, and the unique shops that line the villages' streets still offer visitors the same Gemütlichkeit (German for warmth, cheer, and friendliness).

Traditional and modern culinary offerings abound in Amana, Iowa, the largest of the seven villages. Enter with an empty stomach, for samples of the many tasty products are offered with a smile. Another defining feature of the Amana restaurants is family-style dining, ideal for larger groups, where endless bowls of side dishes are brought to the table.

After tasting history, visitors can watch it in action at the Amana Woolen Mill, originally constructed in 1859, which still produces quality woolen products on massive looms. They can be seen running from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

History buffs can learn more about the development of the Amana colonies and the communal lifestyle at the Museum of Amana History. Housed in three buildings built between 1864 and 1870, the museum not only contains history but is itself part of it.

Simply strolling through clean, garden-lined streets or lazily lounging on old-fashioned wooden double-bench swings makes a visit to the Amana Colonies a true vacation from the flashy, fast-paced culture of the present, to a time and place where visitors are still greeted with a warm Willkommen.

At NAACP, Kerry notes Bush's lack of attendance

The Democrat also tells the convention, 'We'll make sure every vote is counted'

BY JONATHAN FINER
WASHINGTON POST

PHILADELPHIA — Sen. John Kerry had a simple message for the NAACP's annual convention Thursday: I'm here. He's not.

Unlike President Bush, who had cited a scheduling conflict in declining an invitation to speak at the gathering this week, the Massachusetts Democrat said he "will be a president who is truly a uniter, not one who seeks to divide the nation by race, or riches, or by any other label."

"I understand you've been having trouble getting some speakers," Kerry joked at the outset of a 50-minute speech that touched on a range of issues deemed important to the black community, such as the conflict in the Sudan and the disputed 2000 presidential election, which Kerry called the most tainted in history. "The president may be too busy to speak to you now," he said. "He'll have plenty of time after Nov. 2."

He drew a standing ovation by bringing up the election that brought Bush to power: "We are not only going to make sure that every single vote counts, we're going to make sure that every single vote is counted."

Senate OKs tobacco regulation

BY HELEN DEWAR
WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — In a breakthrough for long-stalled tobacco legislation, the Senate on Thursday night overwhelmingly approved a newly struck deal to regulate manufacturing, marketing, and sales of cigarettes in return for an industry-financed buyout of tobacco farmers.

Despite the 78-15 vote in favor of the Senate proposal, its backers cautioned it could still get derailed in negotiations over the huge, complex, and controversial corporate tax-relief bill to which it is attached. Some House Republican leaders favor the buyout but oppose government regulation. Key lawmakers have indicated uncertainty over whether the bill can be completed this year.

But supporters of the deal, representing anti-tobacco forces and tobacco-producing states, said it embodied the best chance yet to win approval for their respective initiatives.

It was the first time that either house approved regulation of tobacco by the Food and Drug Administration, according to a coalition of public-health groups. It was also the first time that major tobacco legislation appeared to have a good chance of passage since an ambitious tobacco-control bill collapsed in 1998.

"I think we have a good shot at this becoming law," said Sen. Mike DeWine, R-Ohio, who co-sponsored the regulation proposal with Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. "The bill will save lives," he added.

The proposal would give the FDA broad authority to regulate sale, distribution, and advertising of cigarettes and other tobacco products — aimed at reducing addiction and smoking by children and teenagers, according to its sponsors.

Among other things, it empowers the FDA to bar industry advertising aimed at children, end vending machine and self-service sales, require stronger and more conspicuous warning labels, bar or limit use of hazardous ingredients in cigarettes, and prohibit "reduced-risk" health claims if they cannot be verified.

Tobacco companies would have to give the government a list of all ingredients and additives in tobacco products, along with any new documents relating to health and other effects of tobacco use. The FDA could require that ingredients be listed on the products, such as cigarette packs.

Former missing Marine back in U.S.

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — Cpl. Wassef Ali Hassoun, the Marine who disappeared in Iraq and turned up in Lebanon three weeks later, will remain at Quantico Marine base until he is deemed fit to return to duty, a spokesman said Thursday.

Hassoun arrived here on Thursday from Germany, where he had undergone six days of evaluation in a U.S. military hospital.

Lt. Col. David Lapan, a Marine Corps spokesman, said Hassoun would continue to undergo a "repatriation" process until the military support team that is monitoring his recovery decides he is ready to go back to work. His home station is Camp Lejeune, N.C.

Lapan said the process could take weeks or months. He has not been accused of any offense, although the Marines said after he disappeared June 20 in Iraq that he was an "unauthorized absence."

Hassoun has said he was abducted from his base in Iraq. He was not made available at Quantico for questions from reporters.

The Navy has said it is investigating whether the abduction might have been a hoax, but the Naval Criminal Investigation Service is not expected to question Hassoun until his repatriation procedure is completed, the Marine Corps said.

As Hassoun left the Landstuhl Regional Medical Center on Wednesday, he said he was eager to get home.

"I am in good health and spirits, I look forward to my return home to friends and family," he said in a written statement provided to the Associated Press, his first public comment since he vanished June 20 from his base near the Iraqi city of Fallujah.

Hassoun had been flown to Germany on July 9 after reappearing the day before at the U.S. Embassy in Beirut. It remains unclear how he traveled from Iraq to Lebanon, where he was born and still has some relatives.

OPEC to raise production

LONDON (AP) — Oil producers agreed on Thursday to raise production targets by 2 percent — prices from last year.

The cartel met in Vienna, Austria, to discuss the increase. OPEC officials said the increase will be implemented in August.

While oil-exporting nations are happy to maximize production, some worry that global oil prices could suffer if production is too high.

OPEC agreed to a two-step increase in production to try to curb price disruptions in oil.

OPEC to raise oil production again

LONDON (AP) — With the price of oil stuck above $40 a barrel, OPEC agreed on Thursday to raise its daily production target by 500,000 barrels — 2 percent — to try to keep crude prices from lurching even higher. The cartel made the increase automatically, by mutual agreement, and canceled a formal July 21 meeting it had planned for its members at its headquarters in Vienna, Austria, said an OPEC official, speaking from Vienna on the condition of anonymity. The increase will take effect Aug. 1. While oil-exporting countries are happy to maximize profits, OPEC and its de facto leader, Saudi Arabia, worry that global economic growth and the long-term demand for crude could suffer if prices spike to punishing heights. OPEC agreed last month to make a two-step increase in its output ceiling to try to calm concerns about disruptions in oil supplies from Iraq and a possible terror attack on export facilities for crude in Saudi Arabia. The group decided first to raise its ceiling by 2 million barrels on July 1, and agreed to follow up with a second increase of 500,000 barrels on Aug. 1 if market conditions warranted. "The market conditions these days actually call for the implementation of the second part of the agreement. There is a consensus that the extra 500,000 barrels should be implemented Aug. 1," the OPEC official said. A meeting of OPEC representatives to discuss the matter in person would be "a waste of time," the official added.

OPEC's production target is now 25.5 million barrels a day. A senior adviser to one OPEC oil minister said that next week's meeting has been canceled and confirmed that the minister would not travel to Vienna as originally planned. The adviser, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said the minister told OPEC "just to go ahead with the increase." Few analysts expect the increase in OPEC's target to do much to reduce prices. Most of the group's members are already pumping flat out to satisfy strong demand, and oil markets have factored the expected increase into current prices.

Mandela pleads for AIDS donations

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Democracy icon Nelson Mandela called on governments, businesses, and citizens Thursday to donate generously to the war on AIDS, saying "no amount is too small," as the United Nations blamed the epidemic for declining life expectancy in parts of Africa. Mandela's fervent appeal at the 15th International AIDS Conference followed announcements by the European Union and Bill Gates' foundation of contributions totaling $102 million to a U.N.-sponsored global fund to fight the epidemic.

The former South African president, who survived tuberculosis in prison during his country's apartheid era, also called for increased efforts to control TB. The lung disease can be treated for as little as $10 per patient, but it is still the leading killer of people with HIV, which causes AIDS. As the six-day conference wound down ahead of its closing ceremony today, protests continued against President Bush's funding policies and his emphasis on abstinence over condoms as a primary defense against HIV transmission. "Bush is a jerk. Condoms work," shouted approximately 20 youthful protesters as they briefly took over a U.S. government booth at the conference, distributing literature promoting condom use. Much of Bush's foreign policy on AIDS is tied to abstinence programs. Critics say a vow of abstinence is difficult to maintain and, when broken, can lead to unprotected sex, raising the risk of HIV infection that could effectively be blocked by a condom. Thursday was the last day of scientific presentations, with experts calling for urgent work on HIV-killing gels that could help protect women who can't rely on condoms. The gels, known as microbicides, and other prevention methods such as female condoms have gained importance as it has become clear an AIDS vaccine is still a long way off.

Now you've got the Power to make your move.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't expect things to run smoothly at home. Leave any complaints you have until next week, when you will be better equipped to handle emotional matters.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone you've met recently will introduce you to something or someone new. Embrace the opportunity, but don't rule out looking back as well.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If you haven't been taking the best care of yourself, make some adjustments to your lifestyle. It may be time to step back and ease the pressure and stress.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): Nagging will not get you what you want. In fact, today it will work against you, causing emotional turmoil. Consider your motives before you make a decision.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): This is the perfect time to get closer to the one you care most about. Travel or attending a trade show or seminar that interests you will not be futile.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Partnerships will be in a high cycle today. Take control, and promote yourself and your intentions. You can gain ground professionally.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): No matter how hard you try, the pressure will be on and the work insurmountable. Don't fret about what you don't get done. Tomorrow is another day.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Nothing will hold you back or slow you down today. You will attract love, and you should be fully prepared to have some fun. This is the perfect day to promote a creative project.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You will probably take on too much today. Try not to make promises that will hold you responsible for others. Rather, spend time in the quiet of your own home.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may have to answer some questions you aren't prepared to talk about. Don't let personal matters escalate. Deal with whatever issues come up.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your ability to be creative in your everyday activities will spare you from boredom and help you attract new friends today. Share your talents with those who can appreciate your gift.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): It's time to make changes that will allow you the freedom you need to do the things you enjoy. Don't procrastinate any longer.

England's Paul Casey plays from the second tee on the opening day of the British Open golf championship at Royal Troon golf course in Troon, Scotland Thursday. Casey scored a 5-under par 66.

Gary Evans gets a double eagle

TRON, Scotland — A double eagle from Gary Evans, the rarest shot in golf. An ace from Ernie Els on the Postage Stamp, one of the most famous par 3's in the world. The British Open was barely three hours old Thursday when it became clear that Royal Troon, without its fierce winds whipping off the Irish Sea, was in a generous mood. By the end of the day, however, it wasn't spectacular shots that landed Paul Casey and Thomas Levet at the top of the leaderboard at 5-under 66 — just solid golf on a links that might not get any easier. They had a one-shot lead over Michael Campbell of New Zealand. "If you start thinking about what you've got to shoot, then it starts to get very, very difficult," Casey said. It was plenty tough for Tiger Woods, who kept his round from getting away with two key par saves and wound up with a 70, the first time he has broken par in the opening round of a major since the '02 PGA Championship. "As easy as you'll ever see it," Woods said about Royal Troon.

Masters champion Phil Mickelson played in the tamest conditions but could manage only a 73. Casey, a 26-year-old from England, played in the same group with Mickelson and put on a good show, finishing with birdies on two of the last three holes and raising hopes of a British gallery that has gone five years without one of its own holding the claret jug. "I still left quite a few shots on the golf course," Casey said. "It could have been very, very low." Evans and Els had the same thing in mind. Evans had 227 yards to the hole on the par-5 fourth hole when his 5-iron ambled up a ridge on the green and disappeared into the cup for a double eagle. It was the first albatross at the British Open since Greg Owen in 2001 at Royal Lytham & St. Annes. "I gave myself three chances the first three holes, and I didn't make any of them," Evans said. "And when I brought one in, it was fantastic. Happy days." Evans made no more progress the rest of the day, however, and finished at 3-under 68 along with a large group that included Vijay Singh and British Amateur champion Stuart Wilson.

playoff exit. "There's a lot of big bodies out there, and it was tough. I'm glad I was able to perform well and show what I can do." The transfer from Southeastern Community College will undoubtedly strengthen the Hawkeyes' frontcourt, adding size and athleticism to a group that struggled at times last season. "He's a big boy. Man, is he strong," Brunner said. "He will definitely help us immediately and be able to help us a lot with his athleticism and ability in the paint." The two forwards battled the entire evening. Whether it was for position, a loose ball, or a rebound, they continually one-upped each other. Brunner seemed frustrated at times with the quick hands and long reach of Thomas, who knocked the ball loose on several occasions, and he voiced his disapproval to the referees. "That's how it is out here; you're not going to get anything easy," Brunner said. "It was a rough battle out there tonight, and a few times I thought I didn't get the call, but that's just the way it goes." Brunner's team had a 54-46 lead at the half and quickly surged to a 70-56 advantage to begin the second half. Lebeda was tested often by the speed and offensively explosive efforts of Thomas and company. Somehow, the 6-8 Thomas was able to slip under the radar and find space for numerous two-handed dunks in the second half. His 22-point second-half performance was enough to make the game interesting, but it wasn't enough. "I won this whole thing my freshman year, and I hope to do it again," Brunner said. "That's what I'm here for, to bring this whole thing home." Thomas might have stolen the spotlight at moments with his crowd-friendly array of powerful rim rattlers, but Brunner walked off with the victory and a pretty impressive night himself. ## Basketball and wrestling fill void in coaching staff likes the staff we have, and he'll add one person from the outside. What position he puts them in, I don't know if he knows yet which way he's going there." The wrestling team is faced with the task of replacing not one, but two main cogs in the wheel in Brands and Williams. The pair combined for six national titles, and Brands won the 1993 World Championships and the 1996 gold medal at the Atlanta Olympics, while Williams was a bronze medalist at the 2001 World Championships. Both coaches were involved in everything, from recruiting to the individual coaching. The replacements for the two former Hawkeye legends will likely come from outside the Iowa wrestling family. "We're looking outside," Zalesky said. "I really can't comment on that at this point because we still have interviews to do. We're looking to interview people starting next week." He received roughly eight applications for the two spots during the application period, which ended last week. Despite a tight budget this year, Iowa Athletics Director Bob Bowlsby made it clear that the monetary constraints will not be a factor in hiring replacements, which go deeper than just the three prominent positions needing to be filled in basketball and wrestling. "We've absorbed some positions and downsized due to attrition and departures, but the ones we have open now are ones we expect to fill," Bowlsby said. As for Sam Alford, who will stay in the Iowa City with his wife, Sharan, he will maintain one spot for the Iowa program. "Super fan," he said. "I think it's one of those deals when you leave the job, you need to get your nose out of it, and let the guy who comes in do that, and just enjoy watching the games." lessened the significance of the polls. In three of the last four seasons, there have been at least three teams with legitimate claims for the two spots in the BCS title game. Last year resulted in a split national championship, with LSU winning the BCS title game over Oklahoma and Southern California protecting its top ranking in the AP poll by defeating Michigan in the Rose Bowl. USC was left out of the BCS title game despite being ranked first in both polls going into bowl season. Coaches who vote in the USA Today-ESPN poll are obligated to name the winner of the BCS title game the national champion. Writers in the AP poll are under no such obligation. "The system needed to be tweaked," USC coach Pete Carroll said. "We saw that last year firsthand here at USC. But whether this is the answer, we'll just have to wait and see." BCS officials hired mathematicians from the Art and Science Group, based in Baltimore, to help come up with a new formula that would give them a better chance at ensuring there would be no repeat of last season. Weiberg portrayed this as a total makeover of a system that had been tweaked slightly several times since it went into effect in 1998. "While adjustments appear to correct previous inconsistencies, these corrections became cumbersome and confusing," said Miami Athletics Director Paul Dee, whose school has been in the middle of BCS controversies. "I hope the new system will work as predicted." But without a postseason tournament, which most school presidents and chancellors still oppose, Weiberg acknowledged there are no guarantees. "We want to get this right," he said. "We want to have as much consensus as we possibly can. Certainly, the BCS has created interest. That's a positive feature of the overall system. But our attempt here was not to produce a formula that would continue to have controversial outcomes." The new formula will no longer average the weekly rank of each team. Instead, teams will be evaluated on the number of voting points they receive in each poll. A team's score in the AP poll will be divided by 1,625, which is the maximum any team can receive. A team's score in the coaches' poll will be divided by 1,525.

Martin almost traded to Nuggets

Denver (AP) — Kenyon Martin was on the verge of being traded Thursday from the New Jersey Nets to the Denver Nuggets for three future first-round draft picks, a source told the Associated Press.

The deal was the result of several days of on-and-off talks between the teams, the Nuggets successfully resisting New Jersey President Rod Thorn's efforts to acquire Nenê Hilario as a replacement for Martin at power forward.

The draft picks will include one of the Nuggets' own picks, along with two picks from a pool of three formerly belonging to the Los Angeles Clippers, Washington Wizards, and Philadelphia 76ers. There are varying levels of draft-lottery protection on the three picks, though none are protected beyond 2006, according to a source closely involved in the trade discussions who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The trade, expected to be completed later Thursday, will be a sign-and-trade deal — Martin signing a seven-year contract with New Jersey and then immediately being shipped to the Nuggets for the three picks.

The Nets declined to comment Thursday.

Huggins reinstated after DUI conviction

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati basketball coach Bob Huggins will be reinstated at the end of August following his suspension for a drunken-driving conviction.

"We are satisfied that Coach Huggins has taken appropriate steps while under suspension," Athletics Director Bob Goin said at a news conference Thursday.

Huggins coach

He said school President Nancy Zimpher and Board of Trustees Chairman Phil Cox agreed with the decision to end Huggins' suspension Aug. 27.

Goin declined to describe what steps Huggins had taken to be reinstated, saying it was a private matter. University officials talked with people who evaluated Huggins and received reports from them, he said.

"We believe that Coach Huggins will rise to this challenge," Goin said. "The coach is, we believe, prepared to demonstrate his commitment to the university and to the athletics program, and we believe the best way to demonstrate that commitment is to put it into practice."

Prosecutor for the Williams trial wants a change in venue

FLEMINGTON, N.J. (AP) — The prosecutor in the Jayson Williams manslaughter case wants to retry the former NBA star in the county where his limousine driver was killed. But his spokeswoman said the request was not legally valid.

In papers filed with the trial judge on Wednesday, First Assistant Hunterdon County Prosecutor Steven Lember argued that the retrial should be moved to Hunterdon County, where Costas Christofi was slain by a blast from a shotgun handled by Williams.

"Just as the perceived existence of pretrial publicity led the court to change venue to Somerset County, the even-more extensive trial publicity in Somerset County necessitates a return to Hunterdon County," Lember wrote.

Judy Smith, a spokeswoman for Williams, said Lember "failed to make any substantial legal argument why there is a need to transfer the case."

Top programs in midst of filling voids

BY NICK RICHARDS
 THE DAILY IOWAN

With one Hawkeye program already looking to fill two assistant coaching vacancies, a second will be doing the same starting July 30.

With Sam Alford, the father of head coach Steve Alford and the director of men's basketball operations, officially retiring at the end of the month, the basketball program will join the wrestling program as Iowa's major teams looking to replace

Alford men's basketball coach

Hawkeyes June 9 to become the head coach at Virginia Tech, while Williams left Feb. 6 to significant figures on their respective coaching staffs.

The wrestling program is looking to replace assistants Tom Brands and Joe Williams.

train for this summer's Olympics in Athens.

"When coaches leave, it's like when a good wrestler graduates," said wrestling coach Jim Zalesky. "You have to find someone to step in and take their place. It's like any organization or any team. You have to find someone to step in for them."

For the first time in 40 years, the elder Alford will not be on a bench this winter. Sam Alford put together an impressive run in Indiana high-school basketball, going 452-245 in his 29 seasons as a head coach, 300-188 in his famous days at New Castle High, where he coached Steve.

"I'm sure I'll miss the program," Sam Alford said. "I'm sure I'll have some withdrawal symptoms. You do something for 40 years of your life, and all the sudden it's gone. It will definitely be an adjustment."

Rumors have swirled in the recent weeks about who will replace him as director of basketball operations. Among the possible scenarios are current assistant Rich Walker moving into the position and Keith Smart, a former teammate of Steve Alford's, taking Walker's position. While that is one option, the current staff will be maintained.

"I don't think [Steve Alford] knows exactly which way he'll go right now," Sam Alford said. "But I know everybody else in the program is staying in one capacity or another because he

Kobe will return to Lakers

BY JOHN NADEL
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Kobe Bryant's journey through free agency ended Thursday where it began — with the Los Angeles Lakers.

Bryant chose the Lakers over the Clippers, remaining with the team he joined in 1996 at age 18 and later helped win three NBA championships.

"It feels great to be in the city of Los Angeles playing for the Lakers the next seven years," Bryant said after Thursday's news conference where he signed his lucrative contract. "It feels unbelievable."

The decision came a day after the Lakers traded fellow superstar Shaquille O'Neal to the Miami Heat. Now, it will be Bryant — along with incoming coach Rudy Tomjanovich and Heat imports Lamar Odom, Caron Butler, and Brian Grant — who will lead them into the future.

Bryant insisted he had nothing to do with the departures of O'Neal and former head coach Phil Jackson.

"That upsets me. That angers me. That hurts me," Bryant said of speculation that he was involved in the team's decision-making.

"They did what they had to do. That had nothing to do with me. In a perfect world, we would have all come back and won another [championship]."

Bryant, who said repeatedly this past season he wanted to be a "Laker for life," is poised to fulfill that declaration. His contract will be worth more than $136.4 million over seven years.

"I always wanted to be a Laker," Bryant said. "It's in my heart. This is what I do, this the team I want to play for and have a chance to finish out my career here."

One significant obstacle remains for Bryant before next season. He has pleaded not guilty to felony sexual assault and faces an Aug. 27 trial in Eagle, Colo. He claims he had consensual sex with an employee, now 20, at the Vail-area resort where she worked.

If convicted, Bryant faces four years to life in prison or 20 years to life on probation, and a fine of up to $750,000. The trial figures to take several weeks.

Brunner/Lebeda move up in prime time

BY BRYAN BAMONTE
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Ben Roberts/The Daily Iowan

Incoming Hawkeye forward Doug Thomas takes the ball to the hoop during the first half of play between TomVakulskas.com and Lebeda Mattress on Thursday evening in North Liberty. Despite Thomas' 33 points and 23 rebounds, his team lost, 107-96.

As the real season got under way in the North Liberty on Thursday, the court resembled more of a Rucker Park battle, with players showing little respect for their opponents or their well-being. It was a flashback to those old Knicks-Bulls rivalries in which nothing came free or easy.

Lebeda Mattress Factory, led by Hawkeye junior Greg Brunner, was able to keep incoming transfer Doug Thomas and the rest of TomVakulskas.com/Primus Construction from advancing in the single-elimination tournament.

Brunner led his team with a double-double, scoring 28 points and grabbing 20 rebounds for Lebeda, which will advance to the July 19 semifinals. In addition to Brunner's post presence, his ability to find his teammates and dish when double-teamed fueled the team.

"I've been saying it all along — we play well as a team and feed off of each other. You need to find your teammates and play well together if you want to win this thing," he said.

The Hawkeye forward did not escape the matchup with TomVakulskas unscathed, however; he was tested often by Doug Thomas in an impressive exhibition of post moves and slam dunks.

Thomas finished the game with 33 points and 23 rebounds. He not only displayed his strength and aggressiveness on the offensive end, he also flashed his defensive prowess. Out of nowhere, he came to help a teammate by sending a souvenir into the seats, and he cleaned the glass at every opportunity.

"It's hard to get the 'W' out here," he said following his team's

BCS simplifies system

BY EDDIE PELLIS
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

There will be fewer numbers to crunch in the revamped version of the Bowl Championship Series formula.

The big question remains whether those numbers will produce better results for one of the few major sports that determines its champion without a postseason tournament.

The Associated Press poll will count for one-third of each team's ranking under the new formula BCS officials unveiled Thursday in their latest attempt to find a simpler, more equitable way to come up with a No. 1 vs. 2 matchup in the college football title game.

Of course, in describing the new formula, BCS Chairman Kevin Weiberg issued the same caveat that has existed throughout the six seasons of this system.

"There is not a perfect tool out there in this system that will eliminate all controversy," said Weiberg, the Big 12 commissioner who took over as BCS chairman this year.

Under the new formula, which goes into effect this season, the AP writers' poll, the coaches' poll, and a combination of computer rankings will each count for one-third of a team's overall BCS ranking.

Strength of schedule, team record, and quality wins, three components used under the old system, have all been eliminated, the thought being that all are already factored into the computer rankings. In the past, results from the AP and coaches' polls were averaged, then factored in with the other components — a formula that

BCS ranking gives power to the people

The Bowl Championship Series will have a heavier emphasis on polls to determine the participants in the college football's postseason.

Team ranking will be based on three components:

AP Poll (Media) The team's points in this poll will be divided by 1,625 — the highest possible score.

Coaches Poll The team's points in this poll will be divided by 1,525 — the highest possible score.

Computer rank (avg.) Highest and lowest points in inverse order of 1-25 from six rankings are thrown out. The remaining four are added and the total divided by 100.

The final averages from each category are then averaged to create the school's final ranking in the BCS standings.
