Low salaries causing 'brain drain' for UI

Officials say noncompetitive salaries are the major cause of faculty resignations

Those who resigned cited dissatisfaction with compensation as the primary impetus for finding better-paying jobs elsewhere, according to a 2003 survey. Of the 55 percent who responded, approximately 80 percent said they were leaving for better salaries, said Lee Anna Clark, the UI associate provost for faculty.

Budget constraints have contributed to the university's stagnant faculty salaries, and the school can't compete with other universities that have increased faculty salaries over the past few

"We've been working as hard as we can," Clark said. "The reason compensation is not going up relative to other schools is because the Legislature has not been funding the university."

The average full-time UI pro-fessor's salary is approximately $100,800, which ranks the ninth out of the university's 11 peer schools, according to figures a state Board of Regents committee will review today. Those schools include the University of

CAMPAIGNING IN IOWA

Vice President Dick Cheney speaks to supporters during a town-hall meeting on Monday in Ottumwa, Iowa. He told the crowd that President Bush would focus on health care in the coming days.

Cheney says Bush to focus on health care

BY J.K. PERRY

THE DAILY IOWAN

OTTUMWA — Vice President Dick Cheney announced on Monday, standing under the timbers of an airport hangar, that the president would shift his focus to health care in the coming days of the campaign.

The vice president announced the change to a crowd of approximately 400 supporters at a town-hall-style meeting on the grounds of the Ottumwa Industrial Airport. He iterated common stump themes promising a strong national defense, decrying Sen. John Kerry's stance on the war in Iraq — while a small group of protesters gathered across the street from the hangar.

"The president will spend a lot of time this week ... talking especially about the health-care system, and I recommend his comments to you and to follow them very closely," said Cheney, who also campaigned in Des Moines on Monday.

Before the veep's remarks, protesters chanted vehemently outside the hangar, saying, "Ho, Ho. Bush and Cheney got to go home." The dissenters brandished signs reading, "1,000 + American Lives Lost: For What?" and "Dick, why did you cut veterans' health care?"

"Bush and Cheney are looters, and they're robbing the country," said protester Pat Hoekstra, an unemployed engineer from Ottumwa. "One way or the other, we'll be flipping burgers, and they'll be on top." Cheney criticized Kerry's health-care plan — which he said hearkens back to the "Clinton-style plan" that was rejected — citing a recent report by a what he called a nonpartisan think tank in Washington that found Kerry's proposal would total $1.5 trillion.

'That basically breaks the bank," Cheney said. "There isn't any way to have a program that large and recover that much cost without ultimately generating more broad-scale tax increases pretty much across the board."

Today, Cedar Rapids senior citizens and health-care officials in that city will present material concerning the effect of Bush's decision last week to increase Medicare premiums 17 percent. According to a Democratic Party of Iowa press release, the increase "affects almost a half million Iowans, and it [is] 'the largest increase in the program's 40-year history."

Cheney denounced Kerry and runningmate Sen. John Edward's stance on medical liability reform, in addition to making another of the seemingly endless attacks on the Massachusetts senator's voting record on the war in Iraq.

Police charge 2 men selling T-shirts at ISU game

BY SEUNG MIN KIM THE DAILY IOWAN

Illegal vendors beware. UI police arrested two Ohio men after the Sept. 11 intrastate football rumble for selling Tshirts sporting an unauthorized sports logo, and authorities are anning to keep their eyes open for more

The shirts, featuring Calvin of "Calvin and Hobbes" urinating on a helmet emblazoned with the Cyclone logo, were confiscated, and police charged Scott Jefferson, 33, and Marcus Hill, 24, with third-degree intellectual property counterfeiting.

A relatively new charge, the aggravated misdemeanor is punishable by up to two years in prison and a $5,000 fine. Both men have been released from the Johnson County Jail.

No evidence yet shows that Jefferson and Hill were working together, said Charles Green, the assistant vice president for the UI police.

Hill, of Cleveland Heights, Ohio, was allegedly selling the shirts near the intersection of Melrose Avenue and Hawkins Drive near Kinnick Stadium, Green said.

On the west side of Kinnick in Lot 43, police said Jefferson, of Cleveland, peddled his own shirts that displayed the cartoon rascal defaming a piece of Cyclone gear.

Jefferson and Hill could not produce credentials to show they were licensed to sell the Cyclone merchandise, Green said.

Police are investigating a third case of intellectual property counterfeiting at last weekend's game, Green said. No charges have been filed.

It is illegal in Iowa to knowingly make, produce, display, advertise, distribute, sell, or intend to sell a service bearing or identified by a counterfeit mark, according to a law enacted in late April.

UI to survey campus on unwelcome sex advances

The study is part of the school's attempt to 'support a positive campus climate,' says President David Skorton

BY JANE SLUSARK THE DAILY IOWAN

UI officials invited students, staff, and faculty via e-mail Monday to participate in an "Unwelcomed Sexual Behavior" survey to evaluate the number of people who have experienced sexual harassment or unwanted sexual advances at the university within the last 10 years.

"The survey is an important step in a series of actions to be implemented in the university's endeavor to foster and support a positive campus climate," said President David Skorton in a letter included with the survey.

The online anonymous survey grew out of recommendations made by the Gender Climate Task Force in October 2003.

The 39-question survey, created by a survey task force, focuses on people's experiences and how they feel the university responded to instances of sexual misconduct.

"We are trying to get a sense of what people have experienced and the university's response," said Nancy Hauserman, the co-chairwoman of the survey task force. "We're really thinking about how the campus can be welcoming and safe."

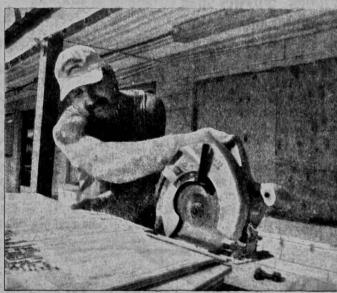

Jennifer Glass, a sociology professor and chairwoman of the Gender Climate Task Force, said there hasn't been a survey for 10 years, making it difficult for the group to make recommendations on how to improve the environment.

There have been high-profile [sexual] crimes since [the last survey], some that have included faculty," she said.

Ten years ago, a survey was given to a sample of 3,000 fac-

Levy focus of school election

Two local women are also running unopposed for the two open board seats

BY TARA FLOCKHART

THE DAILY IOWAN

The renewal of a buildingmaintenance tax will be the main focus of today's Iowa City School Board election; voters will also elect two new board members.

The tax, known as the Physical Plant Equipment Levy, was started in 1965 to pay for projects such as roof replacements, handicap-accessibility improvements, and several major school renovations. The levy must be renewed every 10 years; it is set to expire in June 2005.

The current levy is 67 cents per $1,000 of property taxes, but it is set to double under the renewal. However, this will not raise overall taxes. School Board members will decrease the current cashreserve levy by the same amount to offset the change.

Without the levy in place, our educational programming may find itself in jeopardy," said

Superintendent Lane Plugge. "We would have to turn to our general fund for money."

Two Iowa City women are also on the ballot, running uncontested for School Board seats.

Gayle Klouda, 53, and Aletia Morgan, 46, are running to replace David Franker and Matt Goodlaxson, neither of whom chose to run for re-election. Franker is running against Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, for Iowa's 2nd Congressional District seat.

Klouda, a mother of two, has served on curriculum-review committees, district committees, including a 1999 boundaries group studying school crowding, and as president of the districtwide Parents Organization.

She earned a bachelor's degree in sociology and a master's degree in learning disabilities from Northwestern University; she also has a doctorate in psychology from the UI.

"The rapid growth and high levels of expectations for our schools will be one of my main focuses," she said. "We need to keep funding levels up in order to meet our own standards."

Both women shared their optimism about the anticipated approval of the levy, but they were slightly apprehensive about voter turnout because they were running uncontested. Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

"It has been really quiet. I'm not sure what people are thinking, but [the levy renewal] really needs to pass," Morgan said.

The resignations have forced the UI to enlarge classes, cancel low-enrollment courses, and rely more heavily on visiting professors, Clark said. Some of those who resigned were not replaced by incoming faculty members because of the budget

"The overall number of faculty leaving is not a major concern,"

Clark said. "It's actually fairly steady and not been hugely increasing. Of that number, the percentage of women leaving is a concern."

Forty-two percent of the resigners were women, although they represent approximately 30 percent of all faculty, according to the report. Because other schools are trying to recruit women and minorities, female faculty can find better-paying jobs elsewhere, Clark said.

"It's a bit of a puzzle because when you look at the salary data, there are no differences between women and men," she said. They are equally dissatisfied with compensation."

The only colleges unaffected by resignations were the nursing, education, and engineering schools, she said. The two largest colleges, the Carver College of Medicine and College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, had the largest number of resignations. The medical school lost 30 professors because clinical faculty don't get permanent tenure, Clark said.

People brace for Ivan the Terrible

A hurricane watch was issued late Monday for 420 miles of the northern Gulf of Mexico from Morgan City, La., to St. Marks in the Florida Panhandle. The watch, which includes the greater New Orleans area, means hurricane conditions are possible within 36 hours.

Emergency officials in several Panhandle counties began issuing evacuation orders Monday for all those living in mobile homes, barrier islands, and storm-surge areas. In Escambia County, which includes Pensacola, that order affects 130,000 homes. Earlier, military bases in the region flew out some 275 aircraft, and oil and natural-gas companies began evacuating hundreds of workers from offshore rigs in the eastern Gulf of Mexico.

In New Orleans, a city largely below sea level and extremely vulnerable to hurricanes, Mayor Ray Nagin urged anyone who could leave to get out as soon as possible. The city and its environs are home to approximately 1 million people

At 10 p.m. CDT, Ivan was centered approximately 40 miles west-northwest of the western tip of Cuba, and it was headed northwest at nearly 9 mph. Hurricaneforce winds extended 100 miles from the eye.

Although some forecasters predicted some weakening over the cooler waters of the northeastern Gulf of Mexico, National Hurricane Center Director Max Mayfield said Ivan would still be "very formidable."

"It's going to hit somebody," he warned. "This is a very, very dangerous hurricane."

On Pensacola Beach, Mark Sigler and his son stacked sandbags across the driveway of their steel-reinforced dome house that is supposedly designed to withstand hurricane-force winds. They were not sticking around to

"It's stupid to stay unless you like camping in a disaster area," he said. "There's no reason to be out here.'

Florida Gov. Jeb Bush urged residents to heed the warnings

"This is not the time to be defiant and let people know you are a macho man," he said. "This is a Category 5 storm. Trust me, this is a powerful force of nature you shouldn't be messing with."

At times along its wobbly path, forecasters had predicted Ivan could make direct hits on either the Florida Keys or populous South Florida, only to see it veer west and sidestep both areas.

Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama residents had thought they were in the clear, until Ivan shifted over the weekend and put them in the possible path.
Along Mississippi's 75-mile-long coastline, which has been remade in recent years by splashy gambling houses, managers of some floating casinos allowed employees time off to get their houses secured. But the gambling never stopped.

In the New Orleans area, Lynn Harrington filled her grocery cart with plenty of water, bleach, duct tape, canned tuna, and beans.

In Florida, Ivan's final run has only added to the anxiety in a state that has already endured Hurricanes Charley and Frances in the past month alone. The last time Florida was hit by three hurricanes in a single season was Cedar Key, an island in an area where the Florida peninsula turns into the Panhandle, has been either in the path or in the evacuation zone for the two previous storms and has not been ruled out as a target for Ivan.

Cheney attacks Kerry on health care, Iraq

"When you look at the situation in Iraq, it's very hard to tell what John Kerry believes," Cheney said. "He's had a number of positions on the matter.

"Initially, of course, if you go back and look at his track record over the years, and I don't mean by any means to disparage his military service in Vietnam ... what we have said is he is also accountable for a 20-year record in the Senate."

Since the events of 9/11, Cheney said, the country was forced to take a fresh look at the threats America faces, and he said new strategies must be formulated to protect against chemical, biological, and nuclear weapons.

"The ultimate threat that we face in today's nation is the possibility that at some point one of these terrorist cells, or small group of terrorists, will end up in the middle of one of our cities," he said. "Then the number of American lives put at risk would not be in the thousands, it will be in the hundreds of thousands.'

Closing the event, a serviceman injured in Iraq remarked that when he went to the country his confidence in Bush and Cheney was strong; now, it is even stronger. Many of those in attendance felt this man disproved stories of American soldier dissension in Iraq.

Laura Bush woos women

In Des Moines, the first lady says President Bush bas helped businesswomen

BY MIKE GLOVER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Laura Bush courted women voters in this battleground state on Monday, arguing that her husband has helped bring about a surge in women-owned businesses.

"Women are opening businesses at twice the rate of men," said Laura Bush, noting that 19 million Americans work at a woman-owned business.

President Bush has pushed for broader access to college education, she argued, one of the basics of economic success.

"All opportunity starts with education," Laura Bush said, arguing that her husband's goal is to bolster aid programs "so all Americans can get a college diploma if they want it.

"I'm proud to say a lot of them will go to work for a woman boss," she said.

Seeking to court women voters, Republican organizers of Monday's campaign rally kept the focus tightly on women.

Virtually everyone who spoke at Monday's rally was female — Senate President Jeff Lamberti of Ankeny being the exception — and the issues they hit were largely domestic topics, such as education and health care, that resonate with women voters.

Rep. Linda Upmeyer, R-Garner, said Bush has developed a powerful cadre of women in his administration, and that decision says it all when it comes to his positions on women's issues.

"We all know that W stands for women — women and that our daughters and granddaughters can aspire to be," she said.

Democrats dismissed the effort, aimed at courting a constituency where most polls show

Rodney White, Des Moines Register/Associated Press Laura Bush speaks at a Victory '04 Rally on Monday at the Polk County Convention Center in Des Moines.

Democratic candidate John Kerry has an edge.

"Laura Bush is a nice woman, but her campaign stop can't erase how her husband's wrong choices have led to higher health-care costs and made our country less secure, and Iowa women know that," said Colin Van Ostern, a spokesman for Kerry's Iowa campaign.

Laura Bush's campaign stop, on the same day Vice President Dick Cheney visited southern Iowa, is still more evidence of the intensity of the effort in both camps to compete for Iowa's seven electoral votes. It's a rare week when the state doesn't see at least one member of each of the competing tickets or a very high-profile surrogate.

Iowa went Democratic in 2000 but by barely 4,000 votes, and Bush has vowed to reverse that outcome. Laura Bush said voters should get used to seeing them.

"George and I love visiting Iowa," she said. "We'll be back a lot before Nov. 2."

Laura Bush touted her husband's tax cuts, noting they included a child-care tax credit that is crucial for women.

"Two-thirds of all mothers work outside the home," she said. In addition, Laura Bush said

In addition, Laura Bush said the state can benefit from the recent overhaul of the nation's Medicare program, one portion of which boosted reimbursement rates for rural health facilities.

That shift will bring an extra $56.5 million into Des Moines over the next 10 years and yield a funding increase of $141 million statewide, she said.

"This is vitally important for medical centers," said Laura Bush.

Council hamstrung on new station

BY JESSICA SEVESKA
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa City city councilors left City Hall frustrated after spending their Monday night work session debating which issues should top the 2005 budget.

Councilors agreed to emphasize fire and police safety, but they could agree on only one point: staffing a new fire station on the city's North Side. Even then, they couldn't determine how to fund the measure.

"There is so little flexibility in the budget," said Mayor Ernie Lehman. "It's almost all distributed before we get it."

City Manager Steve Atkins said the state controls 83 percent of the city's budget. Therefore, he said, if councilors wish to use money for a new priority, such as the fire station, they will have to make cuts elsewhere.

The frustration mounted when councilors did not resolve where they should take money from.

Councilor Connie Champion told the group that, although the community wants a new station, she would rather focus on ensuring the safety of staffers at existing facilities. The only way to earn enough for a new fire station, she said, would be economic expansion throughout Iowa City.

The council did agree on one thing Monday night: the importance of prioritizing for the budget and understanding the community's needs. The priorities have yet to be determined

District will keep bus-routing system

The School District is working out the glitches that caused buses to be delayed

BY TARA FLOCKHART
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa City School

The Iowa City School District will continue to use a new computerized bus-routing system despite a series of glitches that delayed arrivals and irritated families last month, Superintendent Lane Plugge said on Monday.

But the program is still a "work in progress," and it will no doubt require a future review along with a continued dialogue with the community, Plugge told the Iowa City School Board. The district, he said, relied too heavily on the new technology.

"There should have been a backup system other than the software," he said.

"We would like to extend our apologies to the entire community for any discomfort involved with these situations," said School Board President Lauren Reece.

Problems began occurring after an over-reliance on a new software program caused miscommunication on bus times and routes, resulting in buses arriving too early or late at their designated stops. Plugge said the difficulties at the beginning of this school year appear to have eased.

The No. 1 concern being addressed is the safety of the bus stops. The timetables and routes of each bus are also being reviewed and altered to fit the district's needs. Updated lists of all students and the routes they are scheduled to take are also being created.

The most challenging aspect in revamping the system lies in the students who must transfer from one bus to another throughout the day, causing bus drivers to at times fall behind schedule, Plugge said.

In order to ensure that these issues will not create problems next year, verification deadlines will be created to double-check all procedures for next year's students. "We are doing everything we

we are doing everything we can to not have it happen again," Plugge said. "We need the community to let us know of any other incidents seen this year, though, to make sure that these routes become fixed permanently."

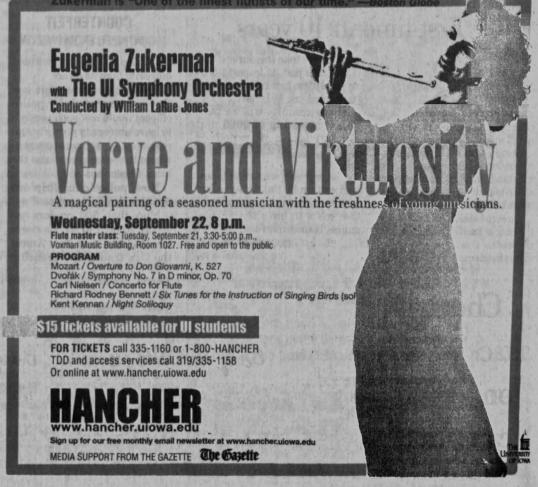

The board also gave final approval of the new school boundaries for Van Allen, Penn, and Wickham Elementary Schools.

U.S. jets blast Fallujah

Officials say strike bit an insurgents' meeting; some Iragis say a market was also bit

> BY BASSEM MROUE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAGHDAD — U.S. warplanes unleashed devastating air strikes on an suspected hideout in Fallujah where operatives from an Iraqi insurgent group were reportedly meeting Monday, and hospital officials said 20 people died.

One strike hit an ambulance as it sped away with wounded, a hospital official said; the U.S. military said innocent lives were spared.

Also Monday, a video posted on a website in the name of the militants - led by Jordanianborn terrorist Abu Musab al-Zarqawi — purportedly showed the beheading of a kidnapped Turkish truck driver. Al-Zarqawi is blamed for a string of terror attacks in Iraq, including bombings and the slayings of other hostages. Washington has a $10 million bounty on his head.

The U.S. military said jets carried out the strike on a site in Fallujah, where several members of a group led by al-Zarqawi were said to be meeting. It was at least the fifth air strike in the past week on the city, indicating the high priority U.S. officials place on destroying al-Zarqawi's group. Warplanes hit the city west of Baghdad after "intelligence sources reported the presence of several al-Zarqawi operatives who have been responsible for numerous terrorist attacks were injured.

"Intelligence reports indicated that only Zarqawi operatives and associates were at the meeting location at the time of the strike," the statement said. "Based on analysis of these reports, Iraqi Security Forces and multinational forces effectively and accurately targeted these terrorists while protecting the lives of innocent civilians."

Iraqi witnesses said a market, homes, and an ambulance

"We did not hit a marketplace," said Maj. Jay Antonelli in a statement, but there was no immediate comment on the accusation that an ambulance was hit.

The military said reports indicated the strikes had achieved their aim, but did not name the operatives. "This strike further erodes the capability of the Zarqawi network and increases safety and security throughout Iraq," the military statement said.

The air strike, which wrecked houses and hurled furniture into trees, sent a huge brown cloud over the residential al-Shurta neighborhood.

Witnesses said one explosion went off in a market as sellers were setting up their stalls, wounding several people and shattering windows. An ambulance was struck while rushing from the area, killing the paramedic driver and five wounded patients, hospital official Hamid Salaman said.

In shakeup, Putin takes more power

As an antiterrorism measure, governors and Parliament members would no longer be elected

BY PETER BAKER WASHINGTON POST

MOSCOW - President Vladimir Putin outlined plans Monday to "radically" change the Russian political system in a way that would increase his own power, portraying the moves as a means of combating terrorism in the aftermath of this month's deadly school seizure.

Putin's plan would eliminate the popular election of governors and individual members of Parliament. The president would appoint governors, subject to the confirmation of regional legislatures. All members of the lower house of Parliament known as the State Duma would be drawn from party lists rather than elected in individual districts.

"State authority must not only be adjusted to work in crisis situations," Putin said at a televised meeting with his Cabinet. "The mechanisms of its work must be radically reviewed in order to prevent crises.'

He added that "the terrorists' long-term plans are aimed at disintegrating the country and shaking the state" and that "the country's unity is the main condition for resisting terrorists."

Putin's announcement came 10 days after the tragic conclusion of a 52-hour hostage crisis in the southern town of Beslan, where terrorists seized a school and 1,200 children, parents, and teachers. The confrontation ended in a flurry of explosions and hours of gunfire that left at least 328 people dead, half of them children, and many more

In response, Putin promised to restructure security agencies but offered few details. He did reshuffle administrators in the North Caucasus region of the country to install one of his most trusted lieutenants. He removed the presidential envoy for southern Russia, Vladimir Yakovlev, and replaced him with Dmitri Kozak, a longtime Putin aide, and simultaneously put Kozak in charge of a new commission charged with security of the southern region that includes Beslan as well as war-torn Chechnya.

Probe needed in Guard documents

On Sept. 8, "60 Minutes" produced a segment on newly discovered documents alleging that George W. Bush did not fulfill his National Guard duties back in the early 1970s. These documents, which CBS says were authenticated by its own unnamed experts and were purportedly written in 1973, were immediately cited by the New York Times, Washington Post, and Boston Globe, among others, in front-page stories questioning Bush's service record.

The four pages of documents, which take the form of typed personal memos by Bush's former National Guard superior, Lt. Col. Jerry Killian, state that Bush refused an order to submit to a physical examination, a refusal that ultimately led to the revocation of his certification to fly National Guard jets. These new charges implied by Killian's memos contradict White House claims regarding Bush's change in certification and are potentially devastating in an election in which the discussion is predomilikely forgeries. Some of the evidence to that end that CBS failed to consider or rather than a 1970s typewriter.

At the very least, this evidence suggests that some sort of investigation is necessary to determine the validity of these documents, a sensible step considering the serious implications against Bush carried by these documents. Unfortunately, this sentiment isn't shared by CBS, which in statement released Sept. 10, stated that "no internal investigation is underway nor is one planned." Thus, despite a mountain of evidence and experts who have concluded the documents are probably forged, CBS has decided against any further inquiry on the veracity of these politically

To say that this is an example of crass and shoddy journalism would be a gross understatement. The severity of the allegations raised by these documents coupled with their obvious inconsistencies demand a thorough inquiry. CBS certainly is not required to divulge the source of these documents at this point, but it does need to answer questions and provide additional evidence that validate the memos, rather than refusing further discussion on the matter.

'W' stands for Weapons

George W. Bush and Dick Cheney's claims that only they can make this country safe are hypocritical. On Monday, the ban on assault-weapons in the United States expired because of Bush's lack of leadership. Legislation that past Presidents Clinton, Bush Sr., Reagan, Carter, and Ford all supported, and which George W. Bush himself says he supports, has died because he has failed to ask the Republican congressional leadership to keep the ban in place. This means that terrorists will not have to import AK-47s into the United States because they will conveniently be able to buy their weapons here.

Trish Nelson Iowa City resident

Assault on public safety

Recent political ads have made the claim that we are safer and stronger, but as the Republican-led Congress allows the assault weapons ban to expire. I question if we are truly safer. Soon anyone with the same intent as the Columbine killers could send their surrogates to any gun show to purchase these lethal weapons. Why would a terrorist even try to smuggle a cargo container full of AK-47s into the country when they can be purchased at any gun shop? What does the future hold for the next D.C. sniper with even greater firepower?

Some claim self-defense as a reason to allow the expiration of the ban; however, once these weapons are unleashed upon us, we are defenseless. Polls indicate two-thirds of Americans favor a continuation of the ban. The powers-that-be are turning a deaf ear to law-enforcement officials throughout this country who have asked Congress to prevent these weapons from reaching the streets. Republicans have made this covert attack on the nation's safety by failing to even consider renewal of the assault-weapon ban. Ledge columns heartless, malicious

Ironically, in the same issue of the DI in which two letters appeared rightly criticizing Josh Bald's outrageously insensitive "jokes" in The Ledge, Bald outdoes himself in that very issue's installment, "Rejected Activities for Beat Iowa State Week" (DI, Sept. 9).

As Ames continues to wrestle with the fallout of the tragic VEISHEA riot, Bald writes, "Hell, just ransack Ames and burn the dump to the ground." As a griefstricken family, campus, and community still mourn the recent death of a young woman at a Colorado campus, and as our own community continues to struggle with the often tragic effects of binge drinking, he writes, "Plant dead bodies in their frat houses, like that one in Colorado where that stupid chick drank herself to death." And as families and the entire world still profoundly mourn the loss of hundreds of innocent lives, including huge numbers of children during the recent terrorist hostage crisis at a Russian school gymnasium, he writes, "Hold 400 ISU students hostage in their campus gymnasium."

These "jokes" go beyond insensitivity. They are inexcusably cruel and have no place in a respectable publication. Although I am an ardent First Amendment advocate. these heartless and malicious attempts at humor have nothing to do with good journalism, nor the democratic dissemination of information, nor free expression.

Not only should Bald be ashamed of himself, but the DI should be mortified at its lack of sound journalistic judgment. This newspaper should conduct an editorial conscience-check, remove Bald as "author" of The Ledge, and apologize to thousands of people who are suffering the tragedies that he seems to find so funny.

And tasteless and disgraceful

Being a faithful Daily Iowan reader, I was very disappointed to see one of The Ledge comments in the Sept. 9 edition. Under the column, "Rejected Ideas for Beat Iowa State Week," there was the quote, "Plant dead bodies in their frat houses, like that one in Colorado where that stupid chick drank herself to death. Now that's comedy." While I agree with your opinion that people are responsible for their own actions, the incident in Colorado was very unfortunate and has caused much pain and suffering. The tasteless way in which the DI presented this misfortune is disgraceful. It is sad that events such as this are taken with disregard. These types of instances brand the greek community with an inseparable stereotype that does not live up to the mission statements we live by. Everyone in college is susceptible to such an accident, not just those involved in greek life. It is important for people to remember that. Samantha Spady, her family, and the Colorado State chapter are in the prayers of the UI chapter of Sigma Pi. Please join us in our condolences instead of making a comedy out of this event.

I see our beloved Cowboy in Chief, Alfred "What? Me Worry?" Neuman, soared to some kind of new heights last week. He blamed the loss of American manufacturing jobs, all umpteen million of them, on Bill Clinton.

Let's see. Bill, as we all know, is recovering from heart surgery. So what should we do? Dump all over him. That'd be classy

Of course, in the Republican geography of things, Bill can do no right. That's why Republicans will point to the extraordinary economic boom that occurred under Bill's watch (seems like 100 years ago, doesn't it?) and tell you, with a straight face, that Ronald Reagan's policies were responsible for the good times. By that logic, of course, the economic upturn in the mid-80s under Reagan has nothing to do with his policies; no, the programs of Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter a decade earlier were responsible. Anyone who believes that, of course, derives her or his income from the Tooth Fairy.

And because Bill could do no right, right-wingers say the recession the United States went through under Dubya the "Clinton" recession, and Boy George "inherited" it. It's a neat calculus — good things happen: Republicans did it. Bad things happen: Bill.
Just for the record: According to the National Bureau of Economic Research, the recession began in March 2001. Bill was not president; he was looking for office space in Harlem. Dubya and the gang were in the West Wing, busily ignoring Osama bin Laden.

Speaking of whom, Stealth President Cheney went off his meds last week in Des Moines and weighed in with a keen little message: To vote for John Kerry is to vote for getting killed by terrorists.

No, really. They need to watch his dosages, because otherwise he says such things as, "Because if we make the wrong choice [vote for Kerry], then the danger is that we'll get hit again."

Why don't they just come out and ay what they really mean: If you vot against us, you're voting for Osama. It's called the fear factor, and it's not make-believe TV. The more Bush and Cheney can make Americans afraid of being attacked, the better their chances of being re-elected. It's not so much an election campaign they're running as it is a scare-in. Never mind that their record of preventing a terrorist attack in the United States is not exactly stellar.

That's why it was so important to slime Kerry's war record. If Kerry is perceived as a war hero, Americans will feel comfortable with him in the Oval Office. If you can somehow make them disbelieve that record — or even cast some doubt on it - Americans won't feel so secure and comfortable.

This becomes more crucial for Bush and Cheney because their own war records are spotty at best: Cheney's succession of deferments, Bush's absence in the Guard. Not to mention that when Dubya joined the frontlines of the Harvard Business School, he still had a year left to serve. There's no record of his ever contacting a Massachusetts Guard unit. We don't even need those Texas Guard documents that surfaced last week (did you ever notice that Bush's Guard record has seemed to dribble out at a snail's gallop over the last four years?) - though they proved to be a nice little distraction. The documents may be forgeries. They may not be. Some experts say the typography technology that the documents possess didn't exist in the early '70s. Other experts say it did.

Who cares? I do find it interesting that the document brouhaha surfaced at the same time Bob Mintz, who served in the Alabama Guard unit to which Bush was supposed to report, said Bush was nowhere to be found. His story got lost in the flap over the documents' authenticity. How convenient. The attention shifts from Bush's record to typography.

And if the documents are forgeries, who did it? The Democrats, who stand to be labeled as Nixon-type dirty tricksters?

Or the Republicans, who in one move can shift the focus from Bush's Guard service by absentia to "dirty politics" by the Democrats?

Hmmm. Maybe we should be

THE DAILY IOWAN

Upon examining the landmark films of the 1970s and '80s, a select group of legendary filmmakers instantly comes to mind. Steven Spielberg invented the summer blockbuster with Jaws (1975) and continued to set new standards in the science-fiction/adventure genres. Frances Ford Coppola launched the careers of more than a dozen of today's superstars, along with helming three of the all-time post-Vietnam classics, The Godfather (1972), The Godfather: Part II (1974), and Apocalypse Now (1979). Martin Scorsese combined self-taught, auteur moviemaking with an academic background in film studies and practically recreated the modern-day, urban-crime picture (see Mean Streets [1973] or Taxi Driver [1976]).

Add Paul Schrader to that list of important mavericks from New Hollywood, or the "movie brat" generation, who contributed to great countercultural touchstones that defined the era on film.

Schrader was invited by the UI Geneva Lecture Series to speak Wednesday in Macbride Auditorium at 8 p.m. The lecture's title is "Spirituality in Films: Not Likely," and Schrader said he plans to discuss an overview of attempts that have been made to address spirituality in the movies. Film, he added, is a difficult medium for such a subject, and he said the lecture will serve as a reaction to how the task is being handled today.

"I don't see myself as a spiritual filmmaker," Schrader said.

However, he acknowledged that his background and familiarity with Calvinism add to some spiritual elements in his work. His 1972 book, The Transcendental Film Style: Ozu, Bresson, Dreyer, deals with the issue of spirituality in cinema.

Prior to his critically acclaimed career as a filmmaker, Schrader worked as a movie critic under the guidance of renowned film journalist Pauline Kael.

"I don't know if it's helped much," he said in reference to his current line of work. Schrader described film criticism as "an autopsy" and filmmaking as "nursing an unborn." The danger of combining the two fields may result in "killing the baby," he said.

Schrader went on to pen four Scorsese morality plays, Taxi Driver (1976), Raging Bull (1980), The Last Temptation of Christ (1988), and Bringing Out the Dead (1999). He also wrote for Sydney Pollack's The Yakuza (1975), Brian De Palma's Obsession (1976), Peter Weir's The Mosquito Coast (1986), and Harold Becker's City Hall (1996). Such films as Blue Collar (1978), Mishima (1985), Affliction (1997), and Auto Focus (2002) are among the works he both wrote and directed.

"I find myself returning to a certain kind of character," he said, and described his antiheroes as "... males, loners, and drifters on the edge of society, who want to have a normal life but can't quite figure out how."

Often, these characters are led down a path to redemption, and Schrader credited the "journey of a soul" inspiration to life experience, literature, and films such as Robert Bresson's Pickpocket (1959).

Schrader's most recent endeavor was directing last month's Exorcist: The Beginning as the replacement for director John Frankenheimer. When Warner Bros. felt his version lacked the gore and commercial appeal they expected, Renny

Schrader said he has now gone back to work on his own original version of the film for a later release. Warner is then planning to either run his cut in theaters

Harlin came aboard to take

Schrader's place and re-shoot 90 or release it straight to DVD.

Whether he's screenwriting, directing, or both, he said every situation is different and interesting.

"Movies are the art of our time," he said. "I have no special feelings for film, but there are always going to be stories and themes that need to be recycled through a popular medium."

Paul Schrader, who will give a lecture at the UI on Wednesday titled "Spirituality in Films: Not Likely" wrote and directed Auto Focus and Mishima and penned several morality plays for director Martin Scorsese, including Taxi Driver and Raging Bull.

IOWA VOLLEYBALL VS. CREIGHTON

TODAY, 7 P.M., CARVER-HAWKEYE ARENA

Hawkeye Pam Kavadas goes for the ball during practice on Aug. 30. The volleyball team is off to its best start since 1994, and it will attempt to continue its success in the opening home game against Creighton today at 7 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

GOING FOR IT: AFTER SIX WINS, THE TEAM GOES AFTER NO. 7 WITH RENEWED CONFIDENCE

BY RYAN LONG THE DAILY IOWAN

In stark contrast to the beginning of the 2003 season (3-4), the current edition of the Iowa volleyball team is 6-1, its best start since 1994. The accomplishment took place over this past weekend, when the Hawkeyes defeated Georgia State (3-2), Weber State (3-1), Grambling State (3-0), and Lamar (3-0). As a result, the Hawkeyes were crowned champions of the Lamar University Cardinal Classic.

"It's a great start for us. I think it really helps create confidence in the players and knowing that they can get the job done," said head coach Cindy Fredrick. "The kids are performing well, playing well together, and executing. And that's the biggest part. That's the most important thing for us."

outside hitter Tiana Costanzo, middle blocker Carolyn Giese, and outside hitter Stacy Vitali. Costanzo was also named tournament MVP. In edition, senior defensive specialist Pam Kavadas pulled in one of her alltime best personal performances by tallying up 41 digs during Iowa's match

The Hawkeyes put together a num- against Georgia State. That total goes ber of superb individual performances, down as the largest number of digs in a including all-tournament efforts from single game in the program's history. The previous mark was Jenny Rees' 38 against Indiana on Nov. 11, 1988.

"They were giving me a lot of balls," Kavadas said. "The blocks were really good, and they just kept feeding the ball to me.'

PACK THROTTLES CAROLINA

BY JENNA FRYER ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Ahman Green ran up, down, and all over the defending NFC champion Carolina Panthers.

Green ran for two touchdowns and caught a third Monday night to lead the Green Bay Packers to a 24-14 victory over the Panthers, who became the sixth-straight team to lose in the Super Bowl and then in their ensuing season opener.

Unable to stop the run or run the ball — the two main principles that carried them all last season - the Panthers were out of sync from start to finish.

Green scored on touchdown runs of 3 and 6 yards and rushed for 119 yards against a Carolina defense

Lacrosse coach doubles academic experience

Tidgewell juggles leading the men's lacrosse club with working toward a Ph.D.

> BY RYAN LONG THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa lacrosse club's head coach has commitments to his team and to his education that are a unique blend of learning experiences, which have helped him to develop career aspirations. Twenty-three-year-old graduate student Kevin Tidgewell is this coach, and it's pretty fair to say he has more on his agenda than coaching the club-sponsored sport. He is working on a Ph.D. in medicinal natural-products chemistry.

The Orange County, Calif., native works in a drug-abuse rotation lab, where he and a small group of graduate students have been studying drug abuse and trying to find new compounds that will help prevent cocaine and

"It's really interesting because it's something where you see stuff happening right away. I've only been in my rotation for three weeks, and I've already developed a compound that we're going to send off for testing to see if it will actually work," Tidgewell said who grew up in Irvine, Calif.

Even though he is in lab every weekday from 8 a.m. until 6 p.m., he still finds a way to balance education with athletics, coaching three days a week for two hours a day.

'Academics are a bigger priority and stand above and beyond coaching, but I still feel pride as a coach, and I have a lot of pride for the players. I feel a connection with the school. Even though it's not a varsity sport, we still take it pretty seriously.'

Known for years as a power running school, Nebraska has changed mindsets. The Cornbuskers, now a passing team, won their first game of the season, but suffered five turnovers, three of them interceptions, in Saturday's 21-17 loss at home to Southern Mississippi. Despite the turnovers, new Nebraska coach BILL CALLAHAN says:

BY ERIC OLSON ASSOCIATED PRESS

OMAHA, Neb. - Take away the glut of turnovers, and Bill Callahan says Nebraska's transition from the triple-option to the West Coast offense has gone smoothly.

"If you have a system as a head coach coming into a new environment and culture, you can do it," he said on Monday during a conference call. "I feel very confident and secure making that comment because of what we've accomplished just in the two games we've been out there.'

He said the Cornhuskers (1-1) have proved they have not sold out to the pass, as some thought would happen.

The Huskers still are a top-10 rushing team, ranking seventh nationally at 318.5 yards a game. They are 64th nationally in passing yards at 210 a game. Their run-pass ratio is nearly even, with 68 rushing attempts and 73 pass attempts.

"When people look at the box score, they're going to say, 'Oh, boy, Nebraska made this transition from the option to the forward pass and have all of a sudden just abandoned the run and are throwing the ball all over. But that's not true," said Callahan, in his first season with Nebraska.

The main sticking point has been the play of quarterback Joe Dailey. The sophomore has thrown seven interceptions in two games and ranks last in the Big 12 in passing efficiency.

We've struggled at quarterback, make no doubt about it."

Callahan said. "There has been plenty of opportunities to do some positive things, and we've struggled. We've turned it over unnecessarily and at untimely times, and it hurt our ability to sustain and endure late into the fourth quarter of this past

He said part of the reason for the relatively easy shift to the West Coast offense is that his assistants are familiar with the Offensive coordinator Jay Norvell was an assistant under Callahan with the Oakland Raiders before coming to Nebraska, and running backs coach Randy Jordan played in the system for the Raiders.

Callahan also praised the work of offensive line coach Dennis Wagner, who came to Nebraska from Fresno State.

Wags had that line at Fresno, and now they're sitting there 2-0 beating two top-ranked teams such as Washington and Kansas State, and that was his crew," he said.

Callahan hopes to see his team take better care of the ball Saturday at Pittsburgh. The Huskers turned over the ball five times in the 21-17 loss to Southern Mississippi, with Dailey intercepted three times. The Huskers led 17-9 late in the third quarter.

"We need to learn how to finish a team off," Callahan said. "We had excellent field position provided by our defense, but we didn't seal the deal. When you have opportunities like that, it's important to finish out on a strong note."

Along with great play, the team's chemistry is also beginning to point the Hawks in the right direction, she said.

'We're real positive, and we're having a lot of fun right now, and I think that's what winning does," she said. "It's a really good feeling just because the whole atmosphere was really fun, and it's really positive to start the season off like this."

"It really was everybody on the team doing her job and nobody wondering if somebody else was going to do what she needed to do," Fredrick said. "Everybody did exactly what she needed to do, and that was the key."

The next match for the Hawkeyes will be against Creighton today at 7 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The Blue Javs are also coming off a dominant performance, capturing the Tiger Invitational in Columbia, Mo. - the team's second tournament title this season.

"Creighton had a good win over Missouri, which was technically an upset. So it tells us that Creighton has a very good team," Fredrick said. "[It] has good strong middles and runs the offense very well. It'll be a tough match for us."

Kavadas and her teammates see the challenge that lies ahead, but they are looking forward to making a statement in the home opener.

"We know it's not gonna be an easy match by any means, and we're gonna go out, and take what we did this [past] weekend, and bring it in to the game," she said. "We're really excited about the game and are very pumped."

that only gave up four individual 100-yard rushing games last season. He did it with ease, giving no indication that this was the first time this year Green Bay's entire offensive unit was on the field together.

Carolina, meanwhile, showed just how bad its patchwork offensive line really is. With three of its starters from last season gone, a rotating group of aging veterans has gamely tried to fill the holes.

But behind 35-year-old Matt Willig, who last started a game at right tackle in 1997, and 33year-old Rich Tylski, who was out of football the past two years, the Panthers could do nothing.

Stephen Davis, who ran for a career-best 1,444 yards last year, was held to 26 yards, and the Panthers had a total of just 38 on the ground.

Jake Delhomme struggled to find time to pass, often throwing his hands up in disgust after hurrying a pass and angrily glaring at the sidelines after several knockdowns.

The lone bright spot came on Delhomme's 30-yard touchdown pass to Muhsin Muhammad that cut the score to 24-14 with 4:46 to play.

But that came one play after star receiver Steve Smith went down with what appeared to be a serious left ankle injury. Smith, who signed a $27.5 million contract extension during the off-season, dropped writhing to the ground when he was tackled after a short catch, and had to be helped off the Carolina was also done in by its own mistakes.

Two turnovers led to 14 of Green Bay's points.

Brad Hoover fumbled at the start of the second half, giving Green Bay the ball at the Carolina 31.

Although Robert Ferguson's touchdown catch was negated by offensive pass interference, the Packers still converted the turnover into seven points when Green ran nearly untouched into the end zone for a 17-7 lead.

IOWA STATE FOOTBALL

'If Tony's not ready to go, Brian has just got to be more consistent for us and we think he will be.'

- Dan McCarney, ISU head coach

Kicker still welcome at Iowa State

BY CHUCK SCHOFFNER ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — His name is still on his locker, he still has a uniform. Brian Jansen will stick around to kick again for the Iowa State football team.

"We're not going to desert him," coach Dan McCarney said Monday.

In a pressure-packed situation, Jansen missed three of the four field goals he attempted in Iowa State's 17-10 loss at Iowa on Saturday.

A freshman walk-on from Overland Park, Kan., Jansen had said getting a chance to kick for the Cyclones was "my dream." The Iowa game was more like a nightmare bothered him since July, Jansen will continue to kick extra points and field goals. Another kicker, redshirt freshman Josh Griebahn, is out with an injury to his left foot, which is in a cast.

"If Tony's not ready to go, Brian has just got to be more consistent for us and we think he will be," said McCarney, whose team hosts Northern Illinois on Saturday.

Yelk was to have done all the kicking for the Cyclones this season — placements, punts, and kickoffs. He got hurt practicing his punting and hasn't been able to work out with any consistency since then.

He'll be fine for a couple of days, McCarney said, then will be too sore to kick.

"I can't tell you if he'll be ready to go. He's day to day, game to game. Obviously we've got to get ready to go without him because there's a good chance he will not be available.'

Yelk has a strong leg, but his accuracy has been an issue. He's just 11-for-25 on field goals for his career and lost the placekicking job to Adam Benike the past two years.

But McCarney said Yelk had a good spring and was kicking better than ever.

"He was very accurate, very consistent," the ISU coach said. "That's why I felt so good about our extra points, field goals, kickoffs, and punting. He was going to handle all of those.

"But we've got to move on. We had to the first two games and possibly this week, too."

"Academics are a bigger priority and stand above and beyond coaching, but I still feel pride as a coach, and I have a lot of pride for the players," he said. "I feel a connection with the school. Even though it's not a varsity sport, we still take it pretty seriously."

The level of seriousness that the players display in both practice and during games is one of his greatest challenges as a student and coach.

"It's hard for me because I'm only 23, and I'm pretty much the same age as most of the guys," he said. "It's hard for me to separate being a friend and being a coach. But I think just because the guys understand that I played Division II lacrosse they sort of know that what I'm saying and the advice that I'm giving them is serious."

Junior defenseman Kevin Egidi agrees: "Coach does a great job establishing a relationship with us. When he wants to be a coach, he's a great coach. When he wants to be a friend, he's a great friend."

Tidgewell was an undergraduate student at Mercyhurst College in Erie, Pa., and played goalie for four years while starting for the school's lacrosse team. During his freshman year, the team finished 10th in the country, and by his senior year, it placed fourth.

This year-round commitment helped him cultivate the win-team here at Iowa.

"Everyone's out there to win and to have fun," Tidgewell said. "When something needs to get done, we're serious, but it's OK to be light-hearted and joke around. They know when to have fun and when to be serious and get down to business."

Besides the coaching and the drug-addiction research, in his previous group rotation, he did a lab project on gene delivery. The idea behind this medical experiment is that a patient with a disease such as cystic fibrosis can take a drug that will change the patient's DNA so she or he will no longer have the disease. This is one method that doctors today are researching.

However, the method still carries its fair share of problems.

MLB players, owners give to Bush campaign

BY FREDERIC J. FROMMER ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Baseball owners once passed up a chance to hire former colleague George W. Bush as the sport's commissioner, but now they're working hard to keep Bush at bat in the White House

More than a dozen current and former owners and family members are among the president's top re-election fund-raisers, an Associated Press review found. Seven are Bush "Rangers," each raising at least $200,000, and six are "Pioneers" who have brought in $100,000

The Bush campaign has also received direct contributions from owners and executives of more than half of the sport's 30 teams, the AP analysis of Federal Election Commission reports found.

Those include $2,000 contributions from owners George Steinbrenner of the New York Yankees, Fred Wilpon of the New York Mets, Carl Pohlad of the Minnesota Twins, Peter Magowan of the San Francisco Giants, and Michael Ilitch of the Detroit Tigers.

Democratic nominee John Kerry, by contrast, has taken in money from only a handful of baseball interests

Bush also has picked up contributions from players and coaches - including a manager he once fired. Bobby Valentine, axed by Bush as manager of the Texas Rangers in 1992, gave the president the maximum $4,000 this year. Valentine said he's not surprised Bush has support from baseball owners.

"People got to work with him side by side and saw his passion for the game and passion for his work," Valentine said in an interview from Japan, where he is manager of the Chiba Lotte Marines. "They saw that he really cared about baseball when he was in it and not just the Rangers as a business entity."

Baseball is part of the Bush legacy. His father, former President George H.W. Bush, played first base for the Yale baseball team, and the younger Bush took up the game as a Little Leaguer in Midland, Texas. He also organized a stickball league at Phillips Academy in Andover, Mass.

With the benefit of family connections, Bush helped put together a group of investors to buy the Texas Rangers and then became its managing general partner from 1989 to 1994. There was talk back then that he might succeed Fay Vincent as commissioner, but the job went to Milwaukee Brewers owner Bud Selig. Bush was a baseball traditionalist, opposing interleague play and the addition of a wild-card playoff team.

His investment of just $600,000 turned into $15 million when he sold his share of the team while preparing to run for governor of Texas.

"The baseball platform was for him to springboard into politics," said Bruce Buchanan, a longtime Bush watcher and University of Texas government professor. "He was the face of the Texas Rangers, as well as a substantial partner in the economic side for some years, and that enabled him to become acquainted with all of these figures."

Three of Bush's former fellow investors in the Texas Rangers Bill DeWitt, Marshall Payne, and Craig Stapleton - are campaign Rangers. Stapleton's wife, Debbie Stapleton, who is Bush's cousin, is a Pioneer.

"George Bush knows a lot of people in baseball," said Craig Stapleton, a co-chairman of Bush's re-election campaign in Connecticut. "So we've tried to talk to people that know George Bush well through baseball. He gets a lot of support from baseball people - not only executives and owners but baseball players."

For example, FEC reports show, Bush received $2,000 contributions from Orioles slugger Rafael Palmeiro, who played for the Rangers when Bush was an owner, and from New York Yankees third baseman Alex Rodriguez, the highest-paid player in the game.

Bush turned to another former Texas Rangers investor, Mercer Reynolds III, to be his campaign finance chairman.

"Having experience in baseball, Mr. Reynolds was able to reach out to many people to encourage them to get involved with the campaign," said Bush campaign spokesman Scott Stanzel. Reynolds was a Pioneer for Bush in 2000.

Youth dominates 'Us versus Them' Ryder Cup

BY DOUG FERGUSON

BLOOMFIELD TOWN-SHIP, Mich. - Vijay Singh and Mike Weir provided a preview of the Ryder Cup, even though neither of them will be playing at Oakland Hills this week.

There was deafening noise, so loud that Weir had to force a yawn to pop his ears when he got to the tee.

The pressure was so great that Weir felt the weight of a nation riding on his every shot at the Canadian Open, where some 40,000 fans were eager to celebrate one of their own claiming the championship for the first time in 50 years.

Crowds were so partisan that they could not stifle cheers when Singh missed a putt.

"You understand that's part of it," Singh said after spoiling the party with his playoff victory Sunday.

And that's a big part of the Ryder Cup, which gets under way Friday in a biennial match that transforms golf from genteel appreciation of good golf to a football mentality of "Us versus Them.'

what to expect - the United States and Europe each have five Ryder Cup rookies.

Ten players have no idea

· Raucous cheering drowning out the groans amid Bernhard Langer's agony when he missed a 6-foot putt on the final hole of the final match, allowing the United States to win in 1991 at Kiawah Island.

raised after making the putt at the Belfry in 1985 to end U.S. dominance and give Europe its first victory in 28 years.

· And the scene no one wants repeated but everyone will never forget, when Justin Leonard holed a 45-foot putt on the 17th hole at Brookline five years ago that caused players to sprint across the green in celebration while the match was still in progress

How intense does it get?

"The only thing that stands still is the shaft of the club, and that's before you take the club out of the bag," two-time Masters champion Jose Maria Olazabal once said. "Everything shakes - hands, legs, everything. That's how it is. That's what makes it so special."

Monday was as quiet as it will get all week at Oakland

Phil Mickelson, who had his worst 72 holes of the year at the Canadian Open (7-over 291), arrived in the Detroit area Sunday night and was the first player at Oakland Hills on a day when the course was not opened to the public. Jim Furyk and Fred Funk arrived later for some casual

The European team left Heathrow Airport in London aboard a Virgin Atlantic flight complete with beauty attendants to give them a massage and were to arrive Monday

Langer is now the European captain, and he has reason to believe his team can capture the Ryder Cup for the seventh time in the last 10 matches, even though the Americans again look stronger on paper.

One of his captain's picks, Luke Donald, won the European Masters two weeks ago for his second victory in two months. Padraig Harrington, the highest-ranked player in Europe, picked up his first victory of the year Sunday at the German Masters.

"For the first time, I think we are going over there not so much as underdogs," Colin Montgomerie said as the team left London. "Of course, it will be difficult - don't get me wrong. Playing away from home is always harder. At the same time, I'll be very, very disappointed if we don't bring back what we're taking with Tiger Woods, who lost his No. 1 ranking two weeks ago for the first time in five years, held a corporate clinic about 20 miles from Oakland Hills on Monday.

The U.S. team was not expected to meet until a 7 p.m.

Five of the American rookies are hardly fresh-faced kids. They include 44-year-old Kenny Perry and the 47-yearold Funk, both of whom played in the Presidents Cup in South Africa last year against an International team comprised of players from everywhere in the world except Europe.

The International team was stronger than anything Europe can muster, with players such as Singh, Weir, Ernie Els, and Retief Goosen. The golf was at a higher level than usually seen in the Ryder Cup.

Panthers' Peppers out for sacks

BY JENNA FRYER ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. - Numbers don't define Julius Peppers. He simply won't let them.

Yet they follow him, and to everyone outside of the Carolina Panthers, they seem to measure his success. A lot of sacks means a good season, a mediocre num-

Based on that barometer, his 2002 total of seven sacks - a year after he registered 12 in 12 games - made last season a disappointment.

"It seems like the media and fans go by sacks to determine what kind of season you have," he said.

"But I can have five sacks and still feel like I have an excellent season. It's about helping your team and knowing your role."

Beginning with his first season with the Panthers, Peppers' job became to disrupt offenses. He was a rookie, so teams didn't know how to prepare for the 6-6, 290-pound defensive end.

Fast as a linebacker and as agile as a receiver, Peppers wreaked havoc on offensive lines and had six sacks in his first six games. He got six more before sitting out the final four games of the season for taking a dietary supplement that included a substance banned by the NFL.

When he returned at the start ready for him. He drew two three defenders who made it their mission to keep him away from the quarterback. It opened up room for others, most notably end Mike Rucker, who had a career-best 12 sacks last season.

teams were

But it also opened up Peppers to outside criticism from those who thought the numbers on the stat sheet measured what kind of season he was having.

The Panthers told him to ignore it.

"We know Julius had an outstanding year," defensive coordinator Mike Trgovac said.

"We were very pleased with what he was able to do within the framework of our defense. I don't really care about his sack numbers. I care about what he can do to help us win games, and if he's doing that to the best of his ability.'

Entering his third season, Peppers feels confident he's got enough experience to handle whatever strategy teams throw at him, beginning with Monday night's opener against the Green Bay Packers.

"Last year was just going through different looks that peoof last season, ple prepared for me," he said.

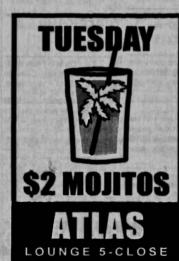

"I tried to get ready for it, but I really didn't understand what they were doing.

"I'm just a little bit older now (24) - there's nothing new to me now, there isn't anything I don't understand."

That's bad news for opposing teams, especially with linebacker Mark Fields back after missing all of last season with Hodgkin's disease.

Considered one of the fastest linebackers in the league, Fields can also line up as a standup end and blow through the offensive line to get to the

His presence will require teams to dedicate defenders to him, freeing up Peppers .
