Sexual misconduct reported

The suspect is described as a white male, around 5-5, with short blondish hair

BY SEUNG MIN KIM
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI police are investigating a case of alleged sexual misconduct they believe happened in a residence hall Wednesday and involved a male solicitor selling magazines door-to-door.

The suspect is described as a white male, between 5-5 and 5-6 tall, with short and spiky blondish hair and blue eyes. The red-complexioned suspect had a pierced right eyebrow and was wearing a T-shirt and khaki shorts during the reported encounter.

Authorities notified dormitory residents via a mass e-mail Thursday and warned them that the above suspect may make unwanted sexual advances.

UI police Capt. Larry Langley declined to divulge further details of the alleged incident Thursday, citing a pending investigation.

Under residence-hall policies, solicitation of any kind is banned. The notice said officials have received numerous reports of other types of solicitation, including students who claim they are doing so for a class.

"It seems that every fall, there is a wave of people trying to sell magazines," said Kate Fitzgerald, the Residence Services

Insurgents kidnap 2 Americans, 1 Brit

The abductions continue a chaotic week in Iraq that has seen more than 200 Iraqis die

BY ASHRAF KHALIL AND PATRICK J. MCDONNELL
LOS ANGELES TIMES

BAGHDAD — Iraqi insurgents pressed their assault on U.S. forces and their allies Thursday as two Americans and a Briton were kidnapped from their Baghdad house and three Marines were slain, bringing the number of U.S. military deaths in the country this month to at least 52.

The brazen abduction of the employees of a Middle Eastern-based construction company continued a violent week that has left more than 200 Iraqis dead, and it follows a similar kidnapping of two Italian women from their office 10 days ago.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the abduction, but almost all of the more than 120 kidnappings of foreigners in Iraq have been carried out by militant groups seeking to drive out U.S. forces, aid workers, and foreign companies involved in supporting military and reconstruction efforts.

Most kidnappings of foreigners in Iraq have occurred on the nation's lawless roads, but the spread of abductions to homes and offices sparked new fears among an international community already feeling besieged. Some companies have pulled out of Iraq, despite the money to be made on reconstruction projects.

The U.S. Embassy in Baghdad identified the two Americans as Jack Hensley and Eugene "Jack" Armstrong. Their ages and hometowns were not released. The British Embassy confirmed that the third man taken was a British citizen but did not release his identity.

An Iraqi government official said the three men worked for Gulf Services Co., but it was unclear whether they were security guards or held other positions with the company.

After the abduction, police found the corpse of a blond man believed to be a westerner north of Baghdad, news agencies reported, but the body was not immediately identified.

Eighteen months after U.S. forces invaded Iraq and ousted Saddam Hussein, great swaths of the nation remain beyond the control of the U.S.-backed government of interim Prime Minister Ayad Allawi.

PENTACREST PREACHING

Aaron Holmgren/The Daily Iowan

A religious demonstration drew a crowd of 100-200 UI students Thursday afternoon in front of the Old Capitol. A nondenominational group, supported by the Calvary Evangelistic Center of Independence, Iowa, was led by Matt Boughalt, who preached to students for nearly four hours. The group is composed of approximately 20 local volunteers whose main focus is speaking at universities. Much of the demonstration included debates about what the group labeled as "sins" — homosexuality, abortion, and women's rights — that are, according to group members, accepted in the name of "tolerance."

Pricey Kinnick skybox to allow beer and wine

Lower-priced seating will remain dry, UI officials say

BY BRIAN SPANNAGEL
THE DAILY IOWAN

Nearly 2,500 fans who spend thousands of dollars for premium seating at the renovated Kinnick Stadium will be able to consume beer and wine during football games, UI President David Skorton announced Thursday.

Alcohol will remain prohibited for approximately 65,000 fans in lower-priced seats. Skeptics say the move favors wealthy fans and undercuts the university's efforts to curtail binge drinking, but officials argue the presence of alcohol will help sell the premium seats and is consistent with the UI's alcohol policy.

"If we're going to be democratic about it, what's to say the 30-year-old sitting in the end zone is any less responsible than the millionaire up in the skybox?" said Jim Clayton, the coordinator of the Stepping Up Project and one of the 12 members of the task force assembled in June to study the matter.

Steve Parrott, the director of University Relations and a member of the task force, said

Nader brings his controversial run for president to IMU

Nader supporters reject Democrats' assertions that he is a spoiler

BY NICK PETERSEN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Soon after the Florida Supreme Court hears from lawyers arguing whether independent presidential candidate Ralph Nader's name should appear on the state's ballot, the former consumer advocate will stump in the IMU Ballroom.

Nader spokesman Kevin Zeese said Nader will decry corporate control of government during his 8 p.m. speech, but he expects to hear questions dealing with the Democrats' drive to remove Nader from the Florida ballot.

"What's going on in Florida is a disgrace," Zeese said. "The Democratic Party is abusing its power by trying to keep Nader off the ballot."

Ivan slams Gulf Coast, pounding Panhandle

BY PAULINE ARRILLAGA
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PENSACOLA, Fla. — Hurricane Ivan drilled the Gulf Coast on Thursday with 130-mph winds that inflicted far less damage than feared everywhere except Florida's Panhandle, where residents were left with surge-ravaged beachfronts, flooded streets, and homes ripped apart by deadly tornadoes.

The storm was blamed for at least 22 U.S. deaths, most of them in Florida.

"We were prepared for the hurricane, but the tornadoes were bam, bam, said Glenda Nichols, the manager of the Microtel Inn in Marianna, Fla. "There was nothing we could do about it. I put all my guests in their rooms and told them to get in the bathtubs."

Ivan quickly deteriorated to a tropical storm after coming ashore. But forecasters warned it was not done yet: It threatened up to 15 inches of rain and flooding across the South, already soggy after Hurricanes Charley and Frances over the past month.

And more danger could be on the horizon: Tropical Storm Jeanne is tearing through the Caribbean on a path that could take it into Florida early next week as a hurricane.

More than 2 million residents along a 300-mile stretch of the Gulf Coast cleared out as Ivan, a former 165-mph monster that killed 70 people in the Caribbean, closed in on an unsteady path.

Ivan came ashore near Gulf Shores Beach, Ala., around 3 a.m., but it was the Panhandle — squarely in the northeast quadrant of the storm, where the winds are most violent — that took the brunt.

Junior hears lilting song of Brazil

BY ARNA WILKINSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

For UI junior Sheyla Shreck, the country of Brazil has a siren's song.

The 24-year-old returned to the United States less than a month ago from the first UI study-abroad program in the northeast Brazilian state of Bahia. One of seven participants from across the nation, Shreck lived with a Brazilian family while taking specially designed language and cultural classes at an educational center for six weeks during the summer. The lyrical language of Portuguese still lingers in her mouth and mind.

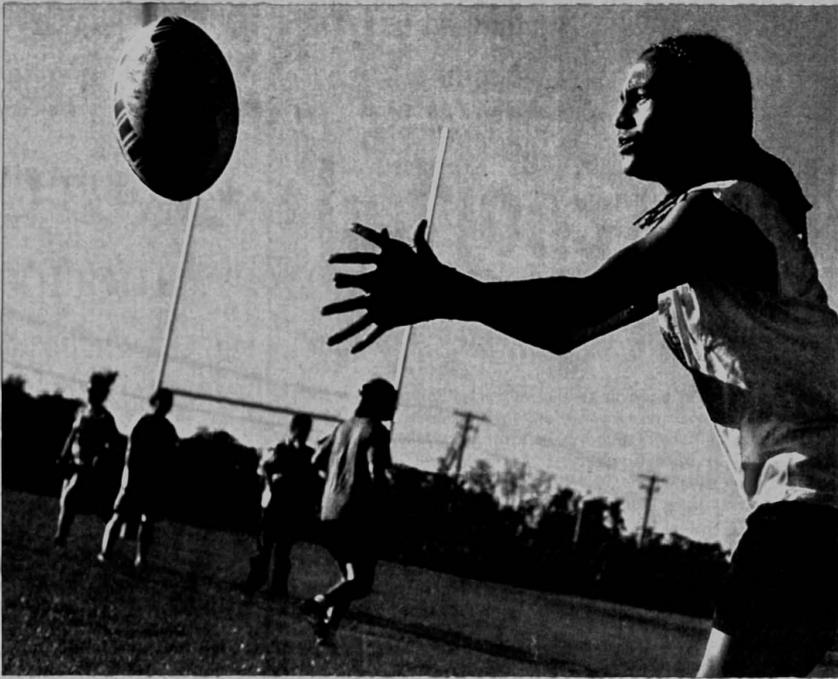

"There is something that keeps calling me back," she said.

Before the program was offered, UI students interested in Portuguese language immersion had to go through more expensive institutions to study abroad, said Janis Perkins, the director of the UI Study Abroad. The new program, one of the few among the Big Ten universities, costs around $3,000 for UI students, she said.

Of those who pioneered the program, Shreck's journey stands out. Originally from São Paulo, Brazil, Shreck was adopted at age 14 and moved to the United States to live with a foster family in Fairfield, Iowa.

The elementary education and Portuguese major had not returned to her birthplace for several years when she heard about the new program from Maria Jose Barbosa, a UI associate professor of Portuguese.

"She was my main motivation for being interested in the program," Shreck said.

Laura Schmitt/The Daily Iowan

Sheyla Shreck practices rugby with the Iowa women's rugby team Thursday evening. Shreck was one of the first participants in a new Brazil study-abroad program sponsored by UI Study Abroad.

Barbosa, who specializes in Afro-Brazilian literature and culture, was also the spark that began the idea for the program. A native Brazilian, she worked with the UI Study Abroad staff for almost three years to create the program in Bahia. The area was chosen because it offered security, Barbosa said, along with a variety of cultural activities and the opportunity for students to analyze the social realities in Brazil.

During her time in Bahia, Shreck was steeped in traditional African art, music, and religion, visited youth education centers in impoverished areas, and hopped buses in her free time to "wherever they would take me."

After the program was over, she visited her biological and foster families, along with the orphanage where she lived, coming full circle.

"When I left, I was a child," she said. "Going back as an adult, my perspective on my life changed. I don't belong here; I don't belong there. I belong anywhere I go."

Senior Center likely to be repaired within 6 weeks

Damages to areas of the Iowa City/Johnson County Senior Center that occurred when a sprinkler pipe broke on Aug. 23 will "quite likely" be repaired within six weeks, said Linda Kopping, the center's coordinator.

Walls, floors, and ceilings that were damaged by the water have recently been torn down and are expected to be rebuilt shortly. The center is located at 28 S. Linn St.

The kitchen, exercise room, ceramics room, and the Visiting Nurse Association suite are all damaged, and they are not available for use. Activities that usually take place in these rooms have been relocated to other areas of the building.

The construction is estimated to cost under $25,000, a portion of which will be funded by the insurance carrier for Iowa Fire Equipment.

Kopping noted that the damage could have been much worse if most of the water and water-damaged materials were not removed right away by the Iowa City Fire Department.

"The seniors have been very understanding and supportive about our situation," she said. "We're happy that repairs are under control and running smoothly."

Local man charged with burglary

Police charged an Iowa City man with first-degree burglary after he allegedly kicked in the locked door of his ex-girlfriend's residence Wednesday.

James Cortese, 23, 707 N. Dubuque St. Apt. 7, forced his way into 118 1/2 S. Dubuque St., with the intention of assaulting the occupants, police allege. Once inside, Cortese allegedly struck a male visiting his ex-girlfriend repeatedly in the face. The man sustained abrasions and bruising to his face.

Iowa City police Sgt. Brian Krei said Cortese turned himself in to authorities Wednesday. His attorney called that day, Krei said.

First-degree burglary is a Class B felony. Cortese could be sentenced to a maximum of 25 years in prison.

South Dodge fire under investigation

Firefighters responded to a blaze late Thursday morning at 914 S. Dodge St., where flames spilled out of a basement window and smoke filled the rest of the residence.

Units from Iowa City, Coralville, and West Branch arrived at 11:55 a.m. and doused the fire in less than 20 minutes. The fire officials estimate that the building suffered $7,000 in damages. No one was home at the time of the fire.

Fourteen on-duty firefighters responded to the call, along with three engine companies, a truck company, and a battalion chief. Officers remained on the scene for two hours.

The cause of the fire is under investigation.

Fest to brew up a good cause

Up to 1,000 fans will sip on pivo, cerveza, and Bier to aid the Englert

BY BRIAN SPANNAGEL
 THE DAILY IOWAN

More than 1,000 fans are expected to sip on more than 200 of the world's finest beers Saturday afternoon to raise money for the Englert Civic Theatre's renovation project. The ninth-annual Brewfest, a lively sampling of 208 beers, has become a local tradition since it began as a fund-raiser for UI Hospitals and Clinics, said Doug Alberhasky of John's Grocery, 401 E. Market St., one of the event's sponsors.

"Because there are so many more upscale beers and beer styles available now, beer tastings are becoming more popular," he said. Brewfest, set to take place in the parking lot of Old Chicago in Coralville, will feature an array of beers, including some from Brazil, France, Germany, and Belgium. Admission to the event, which includes a sampling mug and five tickets for beer, is $15. Additional beer tickets can be purchased for 50 cents. Alberhasky said people attend beer-tasting events come to try new, exotic labels rather than get sloshed. "The Iowa City Brewfest is about tasting the subtle differences in beer," he said. "Some of the recipes are hundreds of years old." Last year, Brewfest raised $5,000 for the Englert, an amount he hopes to surpass this year. "The Englert is doing a good mission for the community, and we want to help them out as much as possible," Alberhasky said. Eric Kerchner, the Englert's director, said he appreciates all the local businesses and community groups that have pulled together to raise money for the theater. "It's going to be a great event, great weather, and just a lot of fun," he said. To date, the Englert has raised 85 percent of the $5 million needed to remodel the facility. Tickets are on sale for the first show, A Christmas Carol, which will open in mid-December. E-mail/DI reporter Brian Spannagel at: brian-spannagel@uiowa.edu

Habitual offender gets 15 years in bank heist

BY SEUNG MIN KIM
 THE DAILY IOWAN

A convicted felon with almost 20 charges dotting his criminal record received a 15-year prison sentence Thursday, roughly three months after he robbed a downtown bank and led police on a chase through a cornfield. Scuffy and clad in green, Casey Joe Booth nodded and said, "Guilty, your honor," to a second-degree robbery charge as a habitual offender. The sentence he was given moments later was the maximum penalty allowable for the Class C felony. The 31-year-old Coralville resident had been charged with first-degree robbery after he walked into Hills Bank and Trust, 132 E. Washington St., on June 25 shortly before 11 a.m. and demanded money from a teller.

According to police, Booth handed the teller a note warning that he was armed. He then left with an undisclosed amount of cash. Booth later fled to a cornfield south of Iowa City, tailed by Johnson and Washington County sheriff's deputies, Iowa State Patrol troopers, and FBI agents. He surrendered roughly four hours after the bank holdup. Court records show Booth was classified as a habitual offender because of previous forgery and cocaine-possession convictions. Because of those, Booth will have to remain in prison for at least 10½ years before he can apply for parole. He has 30 days to appeal. Booth is also required to pay $1,000 in fines. Judge Russell said the sentence was "necessary to protect the community from [Booth's] further actions." He now faces two probation-violation charges on the forgery conviction, as well as one for domestic-abuse assault. Under a plea agreement, any prison sentence Booth might receive for the pending cases may run simultaneously to his current 15-year term, said Assistant Johnson County Attorney Victoria Dominguez. # Fraternity to aid Crisis Center with can-do plan

Phi Alpha Delta will ask Hy-Vee shoppers to donate canned goods Saturday

BY JESSICA SEVESKA
 THE DAILY IOWAN

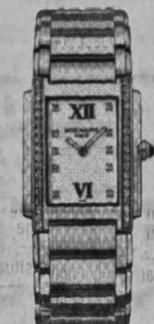

The Crisis Center warehouse is down to 12 cans of vegetables. The center's extreme food shortage is due to a large decrease in donations and an increase in the number of Johnson County residents needing aid. The Crisis Center typically provides food for approximately 4,000 households a year, but last month alone, 1,415 desperately needed food, said Dayna Ballantyne, the center's food-bank director. To help fight the shortage, roughly a dozen volunteers from the UI's pre-law fraternity, Phi Alpha Delta, are planning a fund-raiser Saturday from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. at three local Hy-Vee grocery stores. Travis Padgett, the fraternity's president, said the volunteers will hand out a list of the 10 most-needed items, such as canned vegetables, to shoppers as they enter the stores. The volunteers are hoping that shoppers will buy a canned good or two and drop them off to the volunteers as they leave the store.

"I think it's wonderful that the university is looking to partner with the community to help," Ballantyne said. "It's a wonderful way to bridge the two together, and it's a great asset to provide." Padgett said the volunteers have no goal, but they hope to collect as much food as possible. Table to Table, a food-rescue group located in Old Brick, will team with the Crisis Center as well. Because the center does not have cars, Table to Table volunteers will load cargo vans with the donated food and drive them to the center. Ballantyne said donations account for 80 percent of the center's food. More than 200 volunteers staff the 1121 Gilbert

Court center, taking donations from 8 a.m.-10 p.m. seven days a week. Most people in crisis situations have jobs, she said, but use their earnings for household bills and cannot afford to buy food for their families or themselves. The Boy Scouts of America will also perform a fund-raiser for the Crisis Center on Oct. 9. The scouts will walk door-to-door, asking for canned goods and dropping off plastic bags for residents to fill, which they will pick up next week. The Crisis Center supplies such food as fruit, soup, vegetables, and cereal, Ballantyne said. E-mail/DI reporter Jessica Seveska at: jessica-seveska@uiowa.edu

U.S. intelligence council pessimistic about Iraq

Iraq's future could range from tenuous stability to civil war, report says

BY KATHERINE PFLEGER SHRADER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The National Intelligence Council presented President Bush this summer with three pessimistic scenarios regarding the security situation in Iraq, including the possibility of a civil war there before the end of 2005.

In a highly classified National Intelligence Estimate, the council looked at the political, economic, and security situation in the wartorn country and determined that a tenuous stability was possible, a U.S. official said late Wednesday, speaking on the condition of anonymity.

The document lays out a second scenario in which increased extremism and fragmentation in Iraqi society impede efforts to build a central government and adversely affect efforts to democratize the country.

In a third, worst-case scenario, the intelligence council contemplated "trend lines that would point to a civil war," the official said. The potential conflict could be among the country's three main populations.

It "would be fair" to call the document "pessimistic," the official added. But "the contents shouldn't come as a particular surprise to anyone who is following developments in Iraq. It encapsulates trends that are clearly apparent."

The intelligence estimate, which was prepared for Bush, considered the window of time between July and the end of 2005. The official noted that the document draws on intelligence-community assessments from January 2003, before the U.S.-led invasion of Iraq and the subsequent deteriorating security situation there.

This latest assessment was initiated by the National Intelligence Council, a group of senior intelligence officials that provides long-term strategic thinking for the entire U.S. intelligence community. It was completed in late August.

Acting CIA Director John McLaughlin and the leaders of the other intelligence agencies approved the intelligence document, which spans about 50 pages.

The estimate appears to differ from the public comments of Bush and his senior aides who speak more optimistically about the prospects for a peaceful and free Iraq. "We're making progress on the ground," Bush said at his Texas ranch late last month.

"It states the obvious," White House spokesman Scott McClellan said on Air Force One as Bush flew to a day of campaigning in Minnesota. "It talks about the scenarios and the different challenges we face." He said it did not reach any conclusions and left it up to policy-makers to act on the information.

A CIA spokesman declined to comment. The document was first reported by the New York Times on its website Wednesday night.

In a conference call arranged by the John Kerry presidential campaign, Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., called on the White House to release the new assessment. "The American people need to know the truth," he said Thursday.

It is the first formal assessment of Iraq since the October 2002 National Intelligence Estimate on the threat posed by fallen Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

A scathing review of that estimate released this summer by the Senate Intelligence Committee found widespread intelligence failures that led to faulty assumptions that Iraq had weapons of mass destruction.

Disclosure of the new National Intelligence Estimate on Iraq came the same day that Senate Republicans and Democrats denounced the Bush administration's slow progress in rebuilding Iraq, saying the risks of failure are great if it doesn't act with greater urgency.

"It's beyond pitiful, it's beyond embarrassing, it's now in the zone of dangerous," said Sen. Chuck Hagel, R-Neb., referring to figures showing only about 6 percent of the reconstruction money approved by Congress last year has been spent.

Senate Foreign Relations Committee members vented their frustrations at a hearing during which State Department officials explained the administration's request to divert $3.46 billion in reconstruction funds to security and economic development. The money was part of the $18.4 billion approved by Congress last year, mostly for public-works projects.

The request comes as heavy fighting continues between U.S.-led forces and Iraqi insurgents, endangering prospects for elections scheduled for January.

"We know that the provision of adequate security up front is requisite to rapid progress on all other fronts," Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Ron Schlicher said.

White House spokesman Scott McClellan said circumstances in Iraq have changed since last year. "It's important that you have some flexibility."

Hagel, Committee Chairman Richard Lugar, R-Ind., and other committee members have long argued that administration plans for rebuilding Iraq were inadequate and based on overly optimistic assumptions that Americans would be greeted as liberators.

The criticism from the panel's top Republicans had an extra sting coming less than seven weeks before the U.S. presidential election in which Bush's handling of the war is a top issue.

assistant director for residence life. "And then in the spring, someone comes by with something else. It's kind of cyclical." Residence Services instituted a new policy this semester that shuts the door on unwanted non-residents by locking side entries to all the dorms. Main doors remain unlocked until midnight, and dorms employ after-hours security guards to protect residents and filter uninvited guests.

The UI is reportedly one of two schools in the Big Ten that keeps at least one entrance to residence halls unlocked during the day. Officials have not yet changed that policy because nonresidents need access to offices, fitness centers, and computer labs, Fitzgerald said.

News of Wednesday's alleged sexual misconduct prompted authorities to remind dorm residents to keep room doors locked, confront or report unescorted strangers in halls, and not prop open entrance doors.

Those with more information about the suspect or other unwanted loiterers are urged to call UI police at 335-5022 and contact their residence-hall desk.

Sunni Muslim insurgents control vast areas west of Baghdad, while a largely Shiite rebel militia holds significant sway in areas of the capital and elsewhere. The nation's security forces are ill-equipped to impose order, despite a U.S.-led program to train and equip tens of thousands of soldiers, police officers and other forces.

One of the most troubled and contentious areas is Al Anbar province west of Baghdad, which includes the flashpoint towns of Fallujah and Ramadi. The military said that three Marines died Thursday in separate incidents as the result of enemy fire in the province. They were not immediately identified.

U.S. forces have stepped up offensive operations in the province lately, and on Thursday and early today they launched four assaults targeting the network of Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, a Jordanian militant suspected in a wave of suicide bombings and hostage-takings in Iraq.

U.S. forces bombed suspected Zarqawi strongholds in Fallujah and near the town of Qaryat ar Rufush, southwest of Fallujah, U.S. authorities said.

The latter attack, on a "terrorist meeting site," killed approximately 60 "foreign fighters," a U.S. statement said. It was not possible to verify that figure independently.

If true, the attack would be one of the deadliest in Iraq on insurgents since the U.S. invasion began. Insurgents, however, have long accused the U.S. military of inflating the number of guerrillas killed in American operations.

U.S. forces also launched an offensive in Ramadi, the provincial capital of western Iraq and a place where Sunni insurgents hold great sway. The operation targeted the heretofore little-known Daham network, which U.S. officials said has ties to al-Zarqawi.

favoritism did not play a role in Skorton's decision, adding alcohol will remain banned in general-admission seats for safety.

"If you let people drink in the stands, you might compromise the safety of other people," he said. "People drinking inside will not have the opportunity that other people would have to throw things on the field."

The premium seating will be installed as part of the stadium's $87 million renovation project, which is slated for completion by the 2006 season. The new policy will go into effect at that time and will be reviewed once the season is over.

Alcohol was banned from Kinnick Stadium 10 years ago after rowdy fans threw beer cans and a hog's head onto the field, Parrott said.

Consumption of alcohol will only be allowed in the indoor portion of the premium-seating area; fans with outdoor premium seats will be allowed.

The 47 suites at the newly renovated stadium, leased individually, will cost $45,000-80,000 per season. Season tickets for the 130 indoor club seats will cost $5,000, and the more than 1,000 outdoor club seats will cost $1,900-$2,600 a year.

"I have every expectation that people who lease suites and premium seating to help us finance the renovation of Kinnick Stadium will be responsible in their consumption and respectful of fans around them who choose not to drink alcoholic beverages," Skorton said in a statement released Thursday.

Hard liquor will be prohibited at the stadium, which is consistent with the alcohol policy in place for Hancher Auditorium and the IMU, he said in the statement.

recount — a gap political analysts agree Gore could have closed to win the election had Nader not been on the ballot.

Democrats have fought to keep Nader off ballots in tight races across the nation — a Des Moines woman recently lost her petition to block Nader's Iowa bid. Drake University Associate Professor Lee Joliffe had alleged that signatures on Nader's petition had been altered and were thus invalid.

Iowa Democratic Party spokeswoman Carrie Giddens said her organization wasn't concerned about losing votes to Nader because voters would be more concerned about getting Bush out of office.

Other Democrats across the nation have criticized Republicans for contributing to the effort to get Nader's name on ballots to draw votes away from Democratic candidate Sen. John Kerry.

Zeese denied that Republicans played a substantial role getting Nader a spot on the Iowa ballot, saying his campaign struck 750 names on the suspicion that Republicans had gathered the signatures. He added that Nader's campaign has rejected Republican support.

As for Democratic accusations that Nader will divert key votes from Kerry, Zeese said Nader's election presence provides an essential perspective on the issues.

"Nader is the only serious candidate calling for a withdrawal from Iraq," Zeese said, adding that stances such as abolishing slavery and increasing women's rights were originally minor-party issues.

In a speech followed by a question-and-answer session, Nader will address issues such as the "dual corporate and military operation in Iraq," health-care costs, and the minimum wage, Zeese said.

Ivan downgraded to tropical storm

Ivan spun off at least a dozen tornadoes in Florida, while creating a storm surge of 10 to 16 feet, topped by large battering waves. A portion of a bridge on Interstate 10, the major east-west highway through the Panhandle, was washed away.

Insurance experts put the storm's damage at anywhere from $3 billion to $10 billion. Hurricanes Charley and Frances had combined estimated insured damages between about $11 billion and $13 billion after striking Florida in the last month.

The death toll included 14 in Florida, two in Mississippi, and two in Georgia. In Louisiana, four evacuees died after being taken from their storm-threatened homes to safer parts of the state.

Many of the millions of Gulf Coast residents who spent a frightening night in shelters and boarded-up homes emerged to find Ivan was not the catastrophe many feared.

New Orleans, especially vulnerable to storms because much of it lies below sea level, got only some blustery winds, a mere two-tenths of an inch of rain, and a few downed tree limbs. By Thursday morning, French Quarter tourists came out of their hotels to sip café au lait under brilliant sunshine.

"Leaves in the pool — that's it," said Shane Eschete, an assistant general manager of the Inn on Bourbon Street.

"I know I'm going to hear from the Monday morning quarterbacks," said New Orleans Mayor Ray Nagin, who had urged the metropolitan area's 1.2 million residents to flee three days ahead of the storm. But he added: "Look at the scenes from Mobile and Pensacola — that could have been us."

Bush, Kerry trade barbs

New poll shows the president's convention 'bounce' has vanished

BY TOM RAUM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. CLOUD, Minn. — President Bush pressed hard Thursday to undermine Democrat John Kerry as a prospective commander in chief, accusing the Massachusetts senator of waffling on Iraq and sending dangerously misleading signals to friend and foe alike.

Kerry, addressing National Guard veterans in Las Vegas, said it was Bush who was trying to persuade voters with "a fantasy world of spin" rather than telling the truth about Iraq.

"Mixed signals are the wrong signals to send to our troops in the field, our allies and, most of all, our enemies," Bush said at a rally at a minor-league baseball field in St. Cloud as he campaigned through southeastern Minnesota by bus.

Bush also kept up his criticism of Kerry's health-care proposals, saying his rival's plans would create a multi-billion-dollar government enterprise that would restrict people's choices and drive private companies out of business.

The president campaigned in a state that Democrat Al Gore carried in 2000 and where Kerry is ahead in recent polls — but one that GOP strategists consider highly competitive.

Nationally, Bush had seemed to open a lead in the days following the Republican convention. However, one national poll on Thursday seemed to demonstrate that the "bounce" had disappeared and the presidential contest had narrowed again.

While Kerry addressed the same National Guard convention in Las Vegas that Bush had spoken to two days earlier, the president in Minnesota hammered at a favorite theme: that Kerry had continually changed positions on the war in Iraq.

"The fellow I'm running against has had about eight positions on Iraq," Bush said. "Yesterday, in a radio interview, he tried to clear things up."

That was a reference to Kerry's interview the day before with talk show host Don Imus in which Kerry said that he could not envision invading Iraq "under the current circumstances" but also said it was right to hold Saddam Hussein accountable and that he had made the right decision in voting in 2002 to give Bush war authority.

George W. Bush
president

Under indecisive leadership, Bush said, "the world will drift toward tragedy. This isn't going to happen on my watch." The crowd chanted, "Four more years."

Kerry said the problem was Bush's approach and failure to own up to the seriousness of the situation in Iraq.

He told the National Guard Association of the United States: "I believe you deserve a president who isn't going to gild that truth or gild our national security with politics, who is not going to ignore his own intelligence, who isn't going to live in a different world of spin, who will give the American people the truth, not a fantasy world of spin but a world where we challenge our brave men and women to be able to meet the test of our times."

"Two days ago, the president stood right here where I'm standing and didn't acknowledge that more than 1,000 men and women have lost their lives in Iraq. He didn't tell you that with each passing day, we're seeing more chaos, more violence, indiscriminate killings," Kerry said.

Bigger, bolder Jefferson on revamped nickel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thomas Jefferson appears bolder and bigger on new 5-cent pieces, marking his first makeover since he landed on the nickel in 1938.

The maker of the nation's coins, the U.S. Mint, revealed designs for two new nickels to be issued in 2005. The unveiling Thursday was the latest in a series of design changes for the coins.

A new likeness of Jefferson will be on the front of the two revamped coins, giving the third president a "fresh, contemporary look," Mint Director Henrietta Holsman Fore said. The "tails" side also gets updated.

With the makeover, Jefferson will move from the center of the coin to the side, where he gazes in a close-up profile that shows more detailed features of his face.

"I wanted an image that was large enough so that you could see the determination and intelligence in his eyes. The kindness of his mouth. His sense of humor. The main thing that was guiding me ... I wanted you to get a sense of the character of the person," said artist Joe Fitzgerald, who created the design for the front of the new nickel.

Also on the front of both new coins: The word "liberty" will appear in script — as Jefferson once had written in his own hand. The phrase "In God We Trust" remains, as well as the year.

Giving kids antidepressants no answer

Much ado is being made about children's reactions to antidepressant drugs, namely with the justified concern that a handful of adolescents across the country have been prescribed these medications only to later commit suicide or experience suicidal thoughts. The Federal Drug Administration is now being called upon to put the "black box" label on antidepressants, which is the strongest label for prescription medication and means that doctors need to strictly supervise anyone given the pills.

On the surface, this seems surprising — shouldn't doctors already supervise patients who struggle with depression while watching for warning signs of self-destructive behavior? Depression affects between 5 and 10 percent of Americans, but the disorder can be potentially devastating for those under the age of 18 who have the added stresses of adolescence, which can exacerbate symptoms.

One wonders why heavy antidepressants were prescribed to children in the first place. Prozac is the only antidepressant drug that has been approved by the FDA for use by children under age 18. If other medications besides Prozac are not available for the children who need them, the pharmaceutical companies should be working on versions that are shown to be acceptable for younger patients. Children's versions of many over-the-counter medications are available and highly effective. It is sensible and necessary for children to also have access to prescription drugs when physicians ordered more than 11 million prescriptions for young adults (over the age of 18) in the United States in 2002.

Doctors need to be accountable for these tragic mistakes that have led to the loss of young lives, but parents also need to be involved more closely in decisions made about their children's mental health. A prescription alone is not the answer to a troubling mental affliction — especially when the number of patients suffering depression grows each year. We should examine why some youths are so miserable — some to the point of being suicidal. Depression can be caused by the chemical makeup of the brain, but it is also affected by external influences such as diet and exercise. Therefore, antidepressants must not be viewed as a panacea, particularly among kids, who are at higher risk of suffering side effects.

Treatment should also include counseling. Mental illness needs to be taken more seriously in this country and not written off as an ailment that can simply be cured by taking medication. Instead of overprescribing potentially harmful drugs, we should perhaps further investigate why millions of Americans are suffering from depression and why the disease is affecting children in record numbers.

The Lost Party

If there existed any doubt as to the vast professional disparity between the executives sitting atop the Democratic and Republican National Committees, Terry McAuliffe and Ed Gillespie respectively, such questions were likely erased last week. Even as the crass fraudulence of the CBS "60 Minutes" documents — which alleged misconduct during Bush's National Guard duty — were made apparent to any serviceable vision, McAuliffe one with serviceable vision, McAuliffe was following to news cameras about how President Bush was AWOL from his duty.

For a party whose candidate straddles all sides of the issues, it is refreshing that the Democrats have at least managed to stay on message when it comes to hysterical accusations against our current president, a dubious achievement that McAuliffe nonetheless deserves credit for.

On the heels of CBS's report, the DNC sent out a press release calling Bush a "liar," which, compared to whatever charge Michael Moore thinks will sell enough movie tickets, seems charmingly quaint. But at this point the Democrats, whose potential arsenal of substantive policy issues is rendered moot by their ineffectual nominee, have resorted to the desperate measure of name-calling. Kerry adviser Paul Begala (who inexplicably remains an analyst at CNN while working for the campaign he will be reporting on) has thrown a "gutless wonder" accusation at Bush and a "dirt bag" insult at Dick Cheney.

Even former Democratic Sen. John Glenn got a piece of the pie, comparing the statements of GOP convention speakers with those of Nazis. Al Gore also enjoys invoking the Nazis, having famously equated Republicans to the Nazi "Brown Shirts" this summer. Of course, if you are partial to a more recent historical evil — say, communism — then Gore had you in mind when he called Abu Ghraib "Bush's Gulag."

Even Iowa's own Tom Harkin, whose political vacillations make John Kerry look like a principled stoic, managed to get in the mix in August when he called Cheney a "coward" and then predictably recycled the charges of liar and fraud against Bush. And like Kerry's Christmas in Cambodia, Harkin's inflated recounting of his own service has been exposed as political theater, having referred to himself as a Vietnam veteran (see the Congressional Record, Apr. 1, 1980, for one instance) though he never received the Vietnam Service medal or the Vietnam Campaign medal, the awards given to combat veterans of that war.

It is certainly Harkin's right to launch ad hominem attacks against the Republican ticket, as it is the right of Glenn, Gore, Begala, and McAuliffe. What they don't realize is that the public has long since ceased paying attention to whatever bizarre charges these men make, since Howard "Boy Who Cried Wolf" Dean exhausted American's patience on that matter back in 2003. And given the absurdity of these accusations, it is probably best that no one is keeping score, since the judgment exacted by posterity will be harsher than that of the MoveOn disciples.

So what do all of these men have in common? Consisting of two senators, one vice president, the party chairman, and a current campaign adviser, these men are obviously establishment Democrats. Whereas Noam Chomsky represents the delusional left, these five men ostensibly embody the face of Democratic Party. And here is where the crucial distinction between McAuliffe and Gillespie is made clear.

Establishment Democrats have acquiesced to their party's rabid anti-Bush base and in fact have become mouthpieces for this contingency. Now we are subjected to formerly esteemed politicians and major party figures publicly leveling outlandish charges, doing the work that should be left to attack dogs such as MoveOn.

Consider: Have we once heard Gillespie echo the charges of the Swift Boat vets? Has Bush ever co-opted a Swiftie theme for a speech, even in an address to his own base? Have any establishment Republicans called Kerry a liar, or a fraud, or constructed an analogy to Nazis around him? The Democrats have forgotten that the conspiracy-theorist wing of their base, not politicians in suits on convention podiums, should be the conduit for such charges; they have forgotten that the American people disdain, rather than reward, such displays of unprofessional callowness among the men seeking their vote (see: Dean, Howard). Perhaps on the morning of Nov. 3, this will become clear to the Democratic Party. ■

Don't forget Second Amendment

It seems that a lot of people are freaking out over the 1994 federal assault-weapons ban expiring. Jon Van Laarhoven spelled out how dumb the ban is because it didn't really do much except make its creators look good, reminding the ignorant that AK-47s were already legal even with the ban ("Assault-weapon ban meaningless," DI, Sept. 15).

That's not the only reason the ban is stupid. Another reason is that it is our constitutional right to bear arms. The Second Amendment doesn't specify the right to bear arms for use in hunting only; it simply specifies the right to bear arms. It can be for personal protection of property and family, and in extreme cases, against the government. Guns helped our country become free from Britain. Guns can prevent rapes, home invasions, and muggings, but not if people aren't allowed to have them.

Gun laws are stupid because they do nothing but take guns out of the hands of law-abiding citizens. The criminals still get them easily enough, and they don't have to worry as much about other people having them.

Mike Depew

Stop whining and obey the law

This letter is in response to Brandt Kinzle's letter to the editor ("To serve and protect?," DI Sept. 15).

Like it or not, at nine days away from 21, Kinzle was still 20 years old. That means he still broke the law by drinking underage, and it was still the job of the police to keep him from doing it. He took the risk of being caught. Perhaps next time he should consider how "such violations ... could forever taint someone's future" before committing those violations. If he has a problem with the law, he should take it up with the lawmakers who created the law, not the people whose job it is to enforce it. Or wait the nine days.

In Iowa City, alcohol consumption creates plenty of problems whether it is done at the legal age or not. This ranges from random vandalism and noise to assaults and rape. Drinking is an issue, whether or not we want to admit it. Maybe Kinzle does not cause these problems, but others do. The police cannot predict the future, so they enforce the law on everyone. All officers must do this, whether "younger" or "more mature." His assumption that young officers are "making up for being picked on in high school" is irrelevant and rather silly.

Drugs may be an issue in Iowa City, but that does not make drinking a non-issue. Those who use illegal drugs and get arrested also complain that drug laws are too heavily enforced. Perhaps people just do not like the law being enforced when they violate it. Largely, the job of the police is to prevent people from causing harm to one another. We who are saved from crimes by preventive measures never need to see the police. We might not be thankful enough for what we never have to experience, but we should remember that these laws are there for our protection.

Don't bash Greek system

After reading a recent Ledge column, "What Can Greek Do For You?" (DI, Sept. 14), I am disheartened but not surprised at some of the comments Josh Bald made about the greek community.

While he is, of course, entitled to his own opinion, I feel I must clarify something about being greek that he obviously did not. As vice president of my sorority (one of the 14 here on campus), I resent being depicted as a mere follower who will cater to the whims of whoever happens to be in charge. I would never subject myself to the "merciless hazing" that Bald refers to, and I am confident that many other greeks, males and females alike, feel the same way.

Like any other organization, whether it is a sport or an extracurricular club, being greek can allow you to meet new people, participate in community service (which I am pleased to see that Bald recognized, only to follow with a negative statement), and perhaps most of all, stay involved with events on campus. Bald, whom I presume is not a part of the greek community, seems to be clinging to the same old stereotypes that continue to tarnish the outstanding reputation that our greek system has here at the UI.

Perhaps Bald should have checked all the facts on the greek system before writing his opinion about it. After all, isn't that what good journalism is all about?

Erin Huebscher
UI student

Greek system an asset to UI

I am not sure why Josh Bald finds it funny to play off stereotypes, but I do know that I am tired of it. The greek community does a lot for the UI. Dance Marathon, the biggest philanthropy on campus, was originally set up by the greek system. Every fraternity and sorority donates money to such causes as breast-cancer research or the American Red Cross. While we may be ruining "plots of perfectly good grass," our events help raise money for these organizations. In addition, we provide new students with the experience of every brother or sister in their chapters as they adjust to college life.

Furthermore, the greek community educates its members on the history of science. The ancient Greeks, from whom we get our "moon-man symbols," are responsible in part for the development of our culture and current ideologies such as democracy. Aristotle, Socrates, Plato, and Pythagoras are all philosophers who contributed ideas from which many chapters design their way of life. In embracing these philosophies, in no way am I destroying my individuality; instead, I am enhancing it. By being greek, I am something that 90 percent of the university is not. Moreover, not only were many business leaders greek, but 70 percent of Congress were as well. This is what being greek does, not only for its members but for its community.

UI policy on staff parking

Why is it that if I am parked in a UI lot that I am allowed to park in (by paying $38 a month) and I forget to display my placard, university parking and transportation knows how to find me and deduct the money from my paycheck but can't figure out that I am permitted to park there in the first place? My permit is assigned to the license plate on my car, which is on file, and parking employees must use the plate number to find out whom to charge.

Surely there is some way these items can be cross-referenced. Or is the university just trying to sucker money out of a forgetful employee?

Riverside opens with stalker play

BY AUDRA BEALS
THE DAILY IOWAN

Sometimes blind dates work out. Sometimes they don't. Usually, it's not a big deal if you try to break things off after just the second date, but to say things go terribly wrong is quite an understatement for the main character in the play Boy Gets Girl, which is running at Riverside Theatre until Oct. 3.

Theresa begins to lose control of her life after she tells Tony she doesn't want to see him anymore. The situation escalates quickly from him being merely an annoyance to a stalker, following her and leaving threats at her apartment and office.

The cast is composed entirely of Riverside Theatre veterans and actors with UI connections. The theater's co-artistic directors, Ron Clark and Jody Hovland, each have roles, while artistic associate Michael Sokoloff directs the play. Actors Scot Hughes, Scot West, Nick Westergaard, and lead Leslie Charipar have each appeared in numerous Riverside productions, and Rachel Korach Howell is a UI theater student. And playwright Rebecca Gilman holds an M.F.A. in playwrighting from the UI.

Audience members have the opportunity to interact with the internationally renowned writer, currently the resident playwright at the Chicago Dramatists Workshop, in a talkback session after the Sept. 19 performance.

Additional talkback sessions will take place after tonight's performance with representatives from the Rape Victim Advocacy Program and Iowa City police focusing on the issue of stalking and another on Oct. 1 discussing today's dating culture.

Charipar, a Cedar Rapids native, says her lead role is significant in more ways than one. "For the first time in my acting career, I'm playing someone who's incredibly close to me character-wise," she said.

She and her fictional counterpart share other interests as well. Before pursuing a career in acting, Charipar worked as a professional writer. In a way, this role actually allows her to do both — she plays a journalist whose work is one of the play's ongoing plot lines.

The play is realistic in dealing with stalking and its legal issues. Hovland, who plays a police officer, researched the standard procedures and language used by officers dealing with these particular crimes, Clark said.

Original to the Riverside production are aspects ranging from sound to light to scenic design.

"Everything about the production is solely out of the minds of our designers," Clark said. The music in particular distinguishes the production from any other, he said.

Theresa (Leslie Charipar) waits while co-worker Mercer (Nick Westergaard) calls the police after Theresa receives a disturbing letter from a stalker in Boy Gets Girl. The play, written by UI alum Rebecca Gilman, opens today at 8 p.m. at Riverside Theatre.

Boy gets girl gets stalked as attraction becomes obsession

BY AUDRA BEALS
THE DAILY IOWAN

Theresa, an outspoken journalist played by Leslie Charipar, has not been on a date for 18 months. Despite her initial hesitation, she agrees, on a friend's urgings, to meet Tony (Scot West) for a drink.

We watch through the window of the dimly lit bar as the two attempt to make conversation and struggle with a blind date's inevitable awkward moments, often stemming from Tony's seemingly socially inept comments. The evening, however, is not a complete loss — they make plans for the following weekend.

Flowers begin to arrive at her office. And phone calls.

After that second date, Theresa ends it.

Flowers continue to arrive at her office.

He arrives at her office.

He keeps calling and writing, and the messages he leaves on her work, cell, and even unlisted home phone become violent and threatening.

Under the direction of Michael Sokoloff, the seven actors in Boy Gets Girl transform the fictional characters from the pages of playwright Rebecca Gilman's script into living people on the Riverside Theatre stage.

Charipar's and West's date is perfectly uncomfortable. Both portray their characters exactly as they should — West slightly odd and overbearing and Charipar outspoken and opinionated, undeniably appearing to be the more normal of the two.

As the play continues, Charipar is convincing in her role as the victim, transforming from a strong-willed, independent woman to a venerable, broken version of the person she once was.

Scattered throughout the production is the entertaining performance of Ron Clark as a filmmaker whose remarks about women go beyond offensiveness to the point that they are hilarious in their absurdity.

Jody Hovland's portrayal of the exceedingly professional police officer is quite accurate as well. Her research with the Iowa City police on standard procedure and the interaction between an officer and a victim is evident.

As for the remaining three actors who play Theresa's co-workers — Nick Westergaard, Rachel Korach Howell, and Scot Hughes — their performances were of the high quality expected from Riverside.

To a large extent, the play's success is due to the quality of Gilman's writing. A UI Playwrights' Workshop graduate, she captures everyday life in her work with incredible accuracy.

The design elements are original to this production, and the work in particular of sound designer Kristin Horton contributes greatly to the play, which begins as a comedy and ends as a thriller. As tension rises, the light music of the opening scenes is ominously replaced with a pulsing background sound, heartbeat-like in rhythm, that peaks at crucial moments and has a powerful effect on the production.

This is not a typical horror production relying on people jumping out of closets to scare the audience. This instead is more psychological, with the stalker himself not even appearing in the entire second half of the play.

Boy Gets Girl will make you never want to go on a blind date (again), or at least think twice about it.

Jeanne hammers the Dominican

The storm, just below hurricane threshold, is expected to hit the Bahamas

BY PETER PRENGAMAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAMANA, Dominican Republic — Tropical Storm Jeanne hovered near hurricane strength as it plowed through the northeastern Dominican Republic on Thursday, prompting thousands to flee their homes a day after pounding

Puerto Rico and killing at least two people. Jeanne was forecast to regain hurricane strength and move toward the Bahamas — devastated earlier this month by Hurricane Frances. It could then move toward the southeastern United States, anywhere from Florida to the Carolinas. Eastern Cuba might also be hit, said forecasters.

At least eight Dominicans were injured as trees were toppled and floods struck parts of the east and northeast, emergency officials said. Powerful waves pounded the north coast, along with high winds and driving rain. Phone services and electricity were knocked out in some areas.

More than 8,200 people were evacuated in the Dominican Republic, taking refuge in shelters set up in schools and churches, officials said. "I'm worried because I don't know what's going to happen. Normally, hurricanes don't come here," said Franklin Bussone, a 44-year-old Frenchman from Paris who had boarded up his small waterfront café and pulled chairs and tables off his terrace facing the ocean.

Jeanne became a hurricane early Thursday as winds increased to near 80 mph before hitting land at eastern village of Cabo Engano. Winds later dropped to 70 mph over the northeastern Dominican Republic. Tropical storms become hurricanes when winds reach 74 mph.

The flooded San Isidro neighborhood in Canovanas, Puerto Rico, is shown on Thursday, a day after Tropical Storm Jeanne hit the U.S. territory.

N. Korea says it won't join 6-nation talks

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A delay in planned six-party talks on North Korea's nuclear activities appeared certain Thursday, with the communist nation saying it won't talk until South Korea fully discloses the details of its secret atomic experiments.

China, host of three previous rounds of talks, acknowledged "many difficulties" stand in the way of this month's talks.

"It is down to North Korea and the United States," Foreign Ministry spokesman Kong Quan said in Beijing. "There are many difficulties for the talks to be held as planned."

Kong gave no details but appealed to the participants to "make efforts so we can hold the next round before the end of September, as we agreed earlier."

North Korea relayed its position on the talks when British Foreign Office Minister Bill Rammell visited Pyongyang earlier this week, an unidentified spokesman of the North Korean Foreign Ministry told the country's official news agency, KCNA.

The comments further clouded U.S.-led international efforts to persuade North Korea to give up its nuclear activities.

Afghan president escapes rocket attack

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Assaults fired a rocket at an American helicopter taking President Hamid Karzai on a rare foray into Afghanistan's troubled provinces Thursday, but it missed, and he escaped injury.

Karzai has survived at least one previous attempt on his life. He made light of the attack, which renewed concern about the U.S.-backed leader's safety amid Taliban threats to derail the Oct. 9 presidential election.

Officials arrested three suspects. The U.S. military said the rocket missed the chopper as it approached a landing zone near the city of Gardez, 60 miles south of Kabul. Karzai planned to open a school in Gardez.

"The rocket was fired at the helicopter as it was landing and missed," U.S. spokesman Maj. Mark McCann said.

The helicopter did not touch down and returned the president to Kabul. Two lumbering Chinooks escorted by helicopter gunships were seen over the downtown area shortly before noon.

No one was hurt by the attack, either on the ground or in the air, presidential spokesman Jawed Ludin said.

U.S.: Watchdog mum on Iranian test site

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — U.S. and European diplomats tentatively agreed Thursday to demand a new Iranian freeze on uranium enrichment by fall as they fine-tuned a draft resolution meant to deprive Iran of technology that could be used to make nuclear weapons.

But negotiations over the text being prepared for the International Atomic Energy Agency's board of governors were overshadowed by a U.S. charge that the U.N. atomic watchdog had kept silent about its concerns over a possible nuclear-weapons-related test site in Iran.

"This is a serious omission," a U.S. official said, alluding to the lack of specific mention of the Parchin complex in a report that atomic-agency Director Mohamed ElBaradei wrote for the board on the status of a probe into Iran's nuclear activities.

The U.S. official, who spoke to the Associated Press on the condition of anonymity, said the United States believed Parchin, southeast of Iran's capital, Tehran, was being used to test high explosives, possibly for use with nuclear weapons.

Both Iran and the atomic agency denied the accusations.

STARTING

Gallery garners start against Buffalo

Former Iowa tackle Robert Gallery, the No. 2 pick in the 2004 NFL draft, will be awarded his first start of the season with the Oakland Raiders against the Buffalo Bills, said ESPN.com's Len Pasquarelli.

The start will be Gallery's first in the league. He will take the spot of Langston Walker, who will move into the swing role Gallery had last week against Pittsburgh. In the Steelers game, Gallery replaced Walker for 17 snaps, and he also saw 15 snaps at left guard for Frank Middleton.

Gallery, seen as the "surest" pick in the draft, was unable to unseat incumbent left tackle Barry Sims. He saw action at both left guard and right tackle during the preseason. He is considered more a left tackle, but he will play on the right, a position occupied by Pro Bowler Lincoln Kennedy until his retirement this spring.

ADDED

Syracuse added to Iowa FB schedule for 2006, 2007

Syracuse University has been added to the Iowa football schedule for 2006 and 2007, Iowa Athletics Director Bob Bowlsby announced today.

The Hawkeyes will travel to Syracuse, N.Y., on Sept. 9, 2006, and the Orangemen will visit Kinnick Stadium on Sept. 8, 2007. Syracuse is a member of the Big East Conference.

The two schools have met twice before in football, with each winning on its home field. Syracuse beat Iowa, 10-7, in 1975, and the Hawkeyes won, 41-3, in Iowa City the following year. The 2006 game will be Iowa's first visit to the Carrier Dome.

"We feel good about adding Syracuse to our future football schedules," Bowlsby said. "It has an excellent football tradition. We expect both games to be excellent for the fans of both schools."

Raptors' GM expects Carter to stay

TORONTO (AP) — Vince Carter wants out of Toronto, but the Raptors' new general manager says he isn't going anywhere.

"It doesn't change anything with us," Rob Babcock told the Associated Press on Thursday.

"He's under contract with our team. We expect him to fulfill all obligations of the contract."

The Raptors' all-star guard told the Toronto Star in Thursday's edition: "It's time for the truth: I want to be traded." Carter also said in a letter to fans posted on his website that he's not eager to wait while the team rebuilds. "My frustration comes from the fact that we have not been able to create an equation to win ball games," Carter wrote. "I am at the point in my career where I do not have time to wait two to four years for a

IOWA VS. ARIZONA STATE

ARIZONA STATE, SATURDAY, AT TEMPE, ARIZ., 7:05 P.M., CDT, ESPN PLUS/FOX SPORTS NET

Last week's win over the Cyclones kept the Cy-Hawk Trophy in Iowa City but left some fans and Hawkeye coaches concerned. Going on the road for the first time this season, the Hawks head to ARIZONA — where, rumor has it, it's hot and dry. With a limited number of running backs, the bright lights of a night game, and an opponent thirsting for revenge, the Hawkeyes will have a lot to contend with

WHAT WILL THE ROAD HOLD?

Ben Roberts/The Daily Iowan

Iowa wide receiver Scott Chandler is taken down by an Iowa State defender on Sept. 11 at Kinnick Stadium. The Hawkeyes will play the Arizona State Sun Devils on Saturday in Tempe, Arizona, where the offense will again face challenges.

BY BRIAN TRIPLETT

THE DAILY IOWAN

During his weekly press conference, Iowa football coach Kirk Ferentz acted in his usual manner, professionally addressing questions the way coaches address questions.

He remained optimistic about the Hawkeyes' game on Saturday against Arizona State, while pointing out that there are still things that need work.

But something seemed different during this typically predictable meeting with the media. There was a trend in Ferentz' comments that had never been so prevalent throughout the past two 10-win seasons — comments that reflected the busy cluster of thoughts floating through his mind.

One word continued to flow over and over from the coach's mouth.

"Concerned."

"We have a lot of things to get cleaned up right now, and then you throw on top of that we're playing a very good football team that's highly motivated in its home stadium in a different time zone at night in heat," Ferentz said. "So there are an awful lot of things on our plate right now."

That Tempe, Ariz., is a foreign place to Hawkeye football is out of the coaching staff's control, and so are the injuries to backup running back Albert Young and starting offensive lineman Todd Plagman, but there are some issues than can be ironed out.

With Plagman out of the equation for at least a couple weeks, juniors Ben Gates and Ben Cronin are filling the void, and the Hawkeyes' offensive line is doing all it can to develop some much-needed chemistry in a short amount of time.

"The good news is that we've had so many rotations going that they've all been there at least one time or another, so that's a positive," said Ferentz, adding some humor to the not-so-funny situation.

When asked what his biggest concern heading into the weekend was, he said, "You name it." The special teams, however, seemed to come up often.

Kickoff coverage and the kicking unit were the main issues.

LSU-AUBURN

Game could be postponed

Rivalry could get new chapter

BY JOHN ZENOR

AUBURN, Ala. — Auburn and LSU have played several nickname games in recent years: The Fire Game. The Interception Game. The Cigar Game.

The latest entry might be the Hurricane Game.

Saturday's high-stakes matchup between No. 14 Auburn and No. 5 LSU is in limbo because of Hurricane Ivan. The storm plowed into Alabama and Louisiana and left concerns about safety, travel plans, and available support personnel.

Auburn officials will likely decide this morning whether to reschedule the afternoon game.

Hurricane Ivan already has forced the postponement of one Top 25 game. No. 24

Louisville was slated to play Tulane at the Superdome in New Orleans.

BY KRISTI POOLER

THE DAILY IOWAN

Running a marathon is a difficult task at any point in life, but I have come to the conclusion that training for one as a college student is an even greater challenge. Besides having to deal with an inconsistent sleep schedule, exams, and deadlines, students have the added responsibility of class and our second job — homework.

While training this week, I was presented with the task of balancing my college social life with my workout schedule. Generally, I'm on top of my weekend workouts, and I almost never skip a run, no matter how much fun I had the night before.

If I were to do so, I would only be setting myself up for even more pain and torture during and after the race.

Alou wants Bonds to get more respect

BY ARNIE STAPLETON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILWAUKEE — Felipe Alou wants Barry Bonds to get some respect, and not the kind that pitchers and managers show by walking him all the time.

Bonds

The San Francisco Giants manager said he hopes the public's perception of the surly slugger will change when Bonds joins Babe Ruth and Hank Aaron in the 700-homer club.

"Some of the great things that this man does would be finally and truly recognized," Alou said.

Bonds nearly joined the club Wednesday night, sending the first pitch he saw to the right-field warning track.

He went hitless for the second-straight game, however, going 0-for-4 with a walk in the Giant's 8-1 win over the Brewers that kept San Francisco one-half game ahead of the Chicago Cubs in the NL wild-card race.

Alou is averse to giving Bonds a day off with the Giants in the playoff race, so his left fielder will play Thursday afternoon in the series finale, which will be broadcast nationally by ESPN.

If Bonds doesn't do it in Milwaukee, he'll get the chance to hit his historic homer where he has most of them, at SBC Park, where his shots often splash into McCovey Cove in San Francisco Bay.

The Giants start a nine-game homestand Friday night against the San Diego Padres, his favorite victims. Bonds has hit 78 homers off Padres pitchers, more than any other opponent.

Despite his power, Bonds is far from a beloved player. He's been bedeviled by his often cantankerous disposition and, in recent years, steroid suspicions.

Alou played with Aaron and would like to see Bonds respected in the same manner.

"Hank was a guy who was not Mr. anything. He was Mr. Gentleman," Alou said. "Even to this day he's hoping that somebody would break his record. But not everyone's the same. ... People come from different environments."

"I don't know why Barry is the way he is or why Hank was the way he was. And it would be impossible to make everybody likable to the public."

Milwaukee manager Ned Yost can't fathom why the public doesn't embrace Bonds but said, "I think boeing in a visiting park is a great form of respect."

But what about walking Bonds — is that a great form of respect?

Yost doesn't think so. He ordered his pitchers to challenge Bonds whenever possible this week.

"My whole philosophy is if he's going to hurt you to a point where you can't recover, then you can't pitch to him," Yost said. "Just let common sense rule. In reality, 6.25 times out of 10, he's going to make an out. Statistics say that."

Iowa baseball to play Ontario Blue Jays

Today at 6:30 p.m., the Iowa baseball team will take on the Ontario Blue Jays in an exhibition game at Duane Banks Field. This preseason matchup is open to the public for no charge.

The Blue Jays have been in existence since 1994, and they are made up of some of the best young talent in the Ontario, Can., area. This team was created by the Toronto Blue Jays to promote the sport to Canadians.

In addition to the Hawkeyes, the Blue Jays will also take on Eastern Michigan, Auburn, Florida, Wichita State, and Arkansas. The program has had 30 of its players drafted by major-league teams in its 10-year history.

Soccer heads out to first conference game

Now the fun begins. Winless, nicked up, and going on the road may not be the ideal way to start the Big Ten season, but coach Carla Baker's team is prepared.

Baker believes her team is ready to perform in conference play, and she knows the excitement mounts as the real season begins.

Although the Hawkeyes have not recorded a victory in nonconference play, they earned a tie and more importantly their first point against Wisconsin-GreenBay on Sunday. Now, they will head to West Lafayette for a matchup with Purdue this afternoon. And after today's game, the Hawks will travel to Bloomington for a Sept. 19 contest.

The Big Ten is stacked, and four of Iowa's future opponents — Penn State, Illinois, Michigan, and Ohio State — are ranked nationally. The Hawkeyes know they must prepare for the conference foes, especially if they plan on being a player in the Big Ten. The team failed to earn a victory against conference opponents last season, finishing 0-8-2.

However, Baker knows this is a new year, and she has 13 newcomers who have shown flashes and excited both players and fans. Baker also doesn't mind having Britta Vogeles, who has more saves than any other net-minder in the Big Ten.

Volleyball hosts tournament at Carver

The women's volleyball team will look to improve on its 6-2 record this weekend at the Hawkeye Holiday Inn Classic, in which they will take on Eastern Washington today at 7 p.m.,

Furman on Saturday at 2 p.m., and Chicago State Saturday at 7 p.m.

The tournament will be held at Carver-Hawkeye Arena and will be the third invite that Iowa has competed in over the past three weekends.

The Hawkeyes are coming off a disappointing loss to Creighton on Sept. 14, but they will have good opportunities to jump back into the win column.

Iowa will look to win its second tournament crown this season; it captured the Lamar University Cardinal Classic on Sept. 11. This will be the Hawkeyes' last tournament of the regular season before jumping into Big Ten play against Michigan on Sept. 24.

— by Ryan Long

Men's golf heads to Madison

The Iowa men's golf team will compete in the Northern Intercollegiate this weekend in Madison, Wis.

There are 15 teams in the tournament at the par-72 University Ridge Course, including Illinois, Indiana, Penn State, and Wisconsin. Thirty-six holes will be played on Saturday, with 18 played on Sept. 19. It is the first event of the fall season when at-large consideration can be earned with low scores.

The Hawkeyes are coming off of last weekend's seventh-place finish at the Wolverine Intercollegiate after a disappointing third round.

The team will send sophomores Bennet Hammerberg, Todd Larson, and John Feldick along with juniors Andy Tiedt, Luke Miller, and Brian deBuhr to Madison.

Field hockey hosts Ohio, New Hampshire

The Iowa field-hockey team looks to get hot this weekend before opening up Big Ten play next week. Its record stands at 1-4, and with five of the seven Big Ten teams (excluding Iowa) ranked in the nation's top 20, the Hawkeyes need to start picking up wins this weekend.

Today, the Hawks host Ohio University at 3 p.m. at Grant Field. The Bobcats, part of the MAC conference, are off to a slow start at 1-5, and Ohio has dropped its last two in overtime. Last season, Iowa defeated Ohio on the road, 2-1, in overtime.

At noon on Sept. 19, Iowa will host the University of New Hampshire. The Wildcats also come into Iowa City with a sub-500 record at 1-3. New Hampshire has lost its three games this season by a combined 22 goals.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — C.J. Leak left spring practice as Tennessee's No. 1 quarterback, and a showdown with younger brother Chris appeared to be in the making when the Vols played Florida.

But like much of C.J. Leak's college career, things just didn't pan out.

Chris Leak, already a star as a sophomore, will start at quarterback for the 11th-ranked Gators on Saturday night against the 13th-ranked Volunteers. C.J. will probably spend most of the game on the bench.

He was beaten out by two freshmen for the quarterback job, and he has since shuffled from position to position, offense to defense in an awkward ending to his star-crossed career.

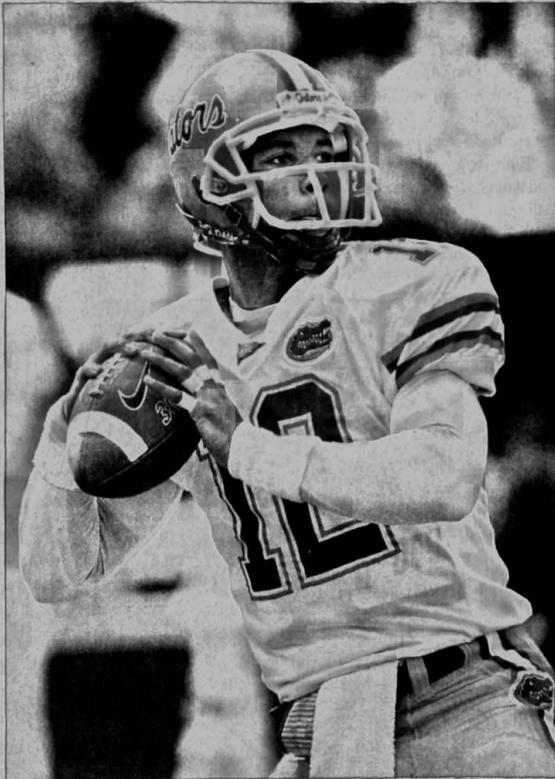

A sixth-year senior, C.J. Leak declined interviews this week.

Chris, meanwhile, is trying to focus on the game only, even if Tennessee fans haven't forgotten his public criticism of coach Phillip Fulmer two years ago and the way he blew off the Vols when he was being recruited.

"Those things are in the past," he said. "I've put it behind me, and I'm just trying to be a Gator right now. I guess that's part of the pageantry of Tennessee-Florida. It's always like that. It's always a big game."

The Leak brothers are close. C.J. has posters of his brother on the wall of his apartment, and Chris has always looked up to his big brother.

Chris had dreamed of following C.J. to Tennessee, but he lost interest in the Vols after the 2002 Georgia game. C.J. started because Casey Clausen Florida quarterback Chris Leak looks for a receiver as he drops back to pass during the first half of the game against Kentucky on Sept. 27, 2003. He and his brother C.J. will meet at the upcoming Florida vs. Tennessee game, though it is unlikely the pair will face one another on the field.

was hurt, but played only two series before being replaced.

"Coach Fulmer never gave C.J. the opportunity he promised him when he transferred to Tennessee — a legitimate chance to start," Chris wrote in his online diary. "I could never trust what the Tennessee coaches tell me. So I'm finished with the Vols."

Chris didn't just sign with another school — he signed with archrival Florida. After that, he annoyed the Vols by attending a closed Tennessee scrimmage with his family.

Tennessee linebacker Kevin Burnett has been the most outspoken, saying this summer that he didn't like Chris. But this week, Burnett said he couldn't talk about the Leaks anymore.

C.J. went to Wake Forest out of Charlotte, N.C., in 1999. What followed was a series of bad breaks for him and good ones for his brother.

Before C.J. even played a game, Wake Forest offered Chris a scholarship to join the team four years later. Chris was 14 and entering his freshman year of high school.

C.J.'s career at Wake Forest was cut short when he severely injured his knee in 2000. He transferred to Tennessee and sat out the next year. Even though he was healthy the past two seasons, he didn't play much because the Vols already had Clausen.

With Clausen gone, this was C.J.'s last chance at starting. But freshmen Brent Schaeffer and Erik Ainge wowed the coaches in preseason practice and moved ahead of C.J. on the depth chart.

C.J. has been tried at safety and tight end.

For Chris, it took just four games last season for him to win the starting job at Florida.

He became the starter after last year's Tennessee game, which the Vols won, 24-10, at the Swamp. He went on to become SEC freshman of the year, throwing for 2,435 yards and 16 touchdowns.

This year he's being counted on to help Florida break a drought of three years without playing in the Southeastern Conference title game.

"He's matured, you can tell," Fulmer said of the younger Leak.

By comparison, C.J. Leak's career passing totals with Wake Forest and Tennessee are 47 completions in 110 attempts for 521 yards, with two touchdowns, and three interceptions.

Ohio State Buckeyes succeed in close games

BY KEITH PARSONS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

RALEIGH, N.C. — Ohio State is 15-5 in games decided by a touchdown or less under coach Jim Tressel, an uncanny run of success that defies explanation.

Or not. "What can I say? It's luck," North Carolina State rover Andre Maddox said.

Maddox later tried to clarify his opinion, likely hoping to avoid becoming bulletin-board material before the Wolfpack host the Buckeyes on Saturday. He pointed to Ohio State's immense talent, particularly on defense, and the fact that many of those games came at home.

Still, his original reasoning might not be far off.

The ninth-ranked Buckeyes (2-0) have yet to force a turnover this season, and they needed a 55-yard field goal on the last play last week to beat Marshall.

"We're lucky, I guess, because typically, if you're at a minus-seven in turnover margin, you're going to be 0-2," Ohio State coach Jim Tressel said. "I've not been around too many teams that can lose the turnover margin and be a champion."

The circumstances around the winning kick by Mike Nugent also gave support to Maddox's theory.

After Justin Zwick completed a 5-yard pass to tight end Ryan Hamby, the clock continued running. The Buckeyes, out of time-outs, hustled to the line of scrimmage, and Zwick downed the ball with two seconds left.

Ohio State was called for illegal motion on the play, but the officials only marked off 4 yards on the penalty instead of 5. Then, the ball was placed on the left hash — admittedly Nugent's preferred spot — even though Zwick grounded his pass pretty much in the middle of the field.

The kick had plenty of distance and hooked just inside the left upright.

No wonder some people have taken to calling Ohio State the "Luckeyes," a moniker the players obviously don't embrace.

"It's the kind of character we have on the team," defensive end Simon Fraser insisted. "Even though the game might not be going the way we want it to — we're not blowing out a team or we may be down — we're going to keep on fighting until the game's over."

That is a mentality that former Ohio State coach Woody Hayes would appreciate. He made the Buckeyes perennial Big Ten contenders on a similar "3 yards and a cloud of dust" philosophy, preferring to win the field position battle until his opponent made a mistake.

Hayes was 205-61-10 in 28 seasons, including national championships in 1954 and 1968.

"That's the way Woody Hayes built that program," N.C. State coach Chuck Amato said. "Coach Hayes is sitting up there and is just beaming from ear to ear that coach Tressel is winning the way he's winning in the new millennium."

'Both teams will be motivated, and it ought to be one heck of a football game.'
— Iowa head coach Kirk Ferentz

Hawkeyes will have to be careful, limit fouls

FOOTBALL

While it is understandable, given that he is in his first season as a starter, sophomore kicker Kyle Schlicher has failed to connect on two field goals and two extra points in his first two games.

The defense has been the Hawkeyes' most dependable unit, but personal fouls have been a problem.

"Those are the things you have to make sure you're not losing ground on," Ferentz said.

gery performed on his left leg, but he will not make the trip West.

Iowa's defense held the Sun Devils to 184 yards of total offense and zero offensive points a year ago in Kinnick Stadium, and Arizona State's quarterback Andrew Walter will seek revenge. The senior, who was named to three preseason watch lists, including the Walter Camp Football Foundation's Player of the Year Award, will look to lead his unranked squad over the No. 12-ranked Hawkeyes.

"Both teams will be motivated, and it ought to be one heck of a football game," said Ferentz, whose team is a 1½ point underdog.

As for Iowa's offense, if sophomore quarterback Drew Tate can beat the hydration problem that forced him to sit out of the second half of the game in the season-opener and forced his fluids to come back out during halftime against the Cyclones, the Hawkeyes should be able to put enough points on the board to keep the winning streak alive.

But it won't be easy. "We've got our hands cut out for us," Tate said.

As long as the Hawkeyes' game plan makes more sense than the Hawks' clichés, Iowa could head into the conference season at 3-0.

Training in Iowa City is a rough path to take

MARATHON

However, this past weekend was the Iowa-Iowa State football game, and, being a football fan, I felt it necessary to attend. In true Hawkeye fashion, I not only tailgated but pre-tailgated on the morning of Sept. 11 AND post-tailgated well into the early hours of Sunday. Needless to say, I was in less than great shape to work out when I woke up Sunday. I did make a feeble attempt to run later that evening, but by mile three, my leg muscles felt like they were starting to atrophy, and I was more than willing to head back to the comforts of my bed, where I could enjoy my hangover like any other college student.

Following such a poor performance, I decided that now was the time to buckle down and give my all in every workout. After all, I didn't spend my summer at home, running for hours around several of Minnesota's great lakes, just to ruin all of my training efforts in three weeks of college. I have decided to put an end to my nights downtown — at least until Oct. 10.

Over the course of this week, I also have found it increasingly difficult to find time that I can devote to my workouts. As a result, I have altered my schedule and become a regular evening and nighttime runner.

Monday night, for instance, after a lengthy day of classes ending around 6:30 p.m., I trekked out to Coralville to purchase a 21st birthday gift for a friend at the mall. By the time I made it back to my house, fixed something to eat, and changed into running gear, it was nearly 9 p.m. and growing dark.

As I set out on my run, the slowly fading sunlight wasn't a great concern to me. However, a 15-mile run takes more than an hour to complete, and at 10 p.m. it's pretty dark in Iowa City around this time of year.

I soon found myself running down a pitch-black sidewalk along Governor Street, trying my best not to turn my ankle by stepping off the curb or falling into a pothole. Although I avoided both these catastrophes, I did manage to run into one of Iowa City's unkempt bushes that flow over the path, and I now have a set of scrapes and bruises along my leg as a souvenir. I have since taken my evening workouts to better-lit streets in Iowa City.

Even in broad daylight, bushes and other vegetation can be quite a challenge for a runner in Iowa City. I don't know if people around here have a tough time with hedge clippers, or if Iowa City simply enjoys the jungle-like growth spilling out onto the sidewalks. Whatever the case, it's a dangerous world out there for a runner, dodging and maneuvering through the plant life. I've been tempted to take matters into my own hands with a weed whacker, but I haven't been that motivated yet.

Running in Iowa City isn't entirely a horrible experience. One aspect I particularly enjoy is the number of runners who populate the streets on any given day. These are people who always find the energy to smile and give passing runners what I have come to call the "runner's nod." It uses slightly less energy than waving and for some odd reason, is extremely motivating.

During my workout on Tuesday, which was a particularly hot afternoon, I happened to pass a fellow runner who had also decided to brave the heat and humidity. As I passed by, drenched in sweat and nearly ready to pass out, she shot me a smile and gave me the nod, and I found myself slightly increasing my pace.

Finding new and challenging running routes around Iowa City can be difficult. I often crave the scenic beauty and tranquility of the wooded running trails in Minnesota on which I trained since high school, or the vibrant and grueling hills of Philadelphia, where I ran two weeks ago. Iowa may not be my ideal training facility, and it certainly produces a new set of obstacles for me every time I lace up my running shoes. Whenever the trail becomes difficult to run, the one thing that keeps me motivated is the knowledge that despite where I am forced to train, the finish line will be in Chicago.

Ivan may postpone LSU game

RIVALRY

Auburn-LSU is one of two heavyweight contests in the Southeastern Conference on Saturday. No. 11 Florida is at No. 13 Tennessee, with the winner clearing a major hurdle toward an Eastern division title.

In other Top 25 action on Saturday, No. 1 Southern California is at BYU; No. 2 Oklahoma plays host to Oregon; and No. 3 Georgia faces Marshall, which gave Ohio State a scare last week. The ninth-ranked Buckeyes are at North Carolina State.

No. 4 Miami gets a bit of a break after its big win over Florida State by hosting Louisiana Tech, while the eighth-ranked Seminoles also step down in competition with a home game against UAB.

No. 7 West Virginia looks to break a four-game losing streak to No. 21 Maryland in a Big East-vs.-Atlantic Coast Conference matchup.

Elsewhere, No. 12 Virginia hosts Akron; No. 15 Utah is at Utah State; No. 16 Iowa visits Arizona State; No. 17 Michigan plays host to San Diego State; and No. 19 Fresno State, coming off an impressive win, plays Portland State.

Two ranked Big Ten teams face potentially tricky road games with No. 20 Wisconsin at Arizona and No. 22 Minnesota visiting Colorado State.

No. 23 Boise State is at UTEP and No. 25 Memphis, playing its first game as a ranked team, is at Arkansas State.

As usual, the Auburn-LSU rivalry combines a dramatic story line with SEC title implications. The two Tigers are the favorites to win the West.

"They compete hard against us and that's what makes a rivalry great," LSU defensive end Marcus Spears said. "No matter what the situation is when we play each other we want to play our best game. It's just important for us to play well."

"It's a great game, a great atmosphere to be a part of."

Often the subplots aren't bad, either.

In 1994, Auburn returned three of its five fourth-quarter interceptions for touchdowns to rally for a 30-26 win.

In 1996, the Auburn Sports Arena burned just outside Jordan-Hare Stadium, smoke billowing above the bleachers. LSU won, 19-15, as Auburn missed three field goals and an extra point.

In 1999, Auburn punctuated a 41-7 win at Baton Rouge with coach Tommy Tuberville and his players firing up victory cigars on the game. Before the game, they danced on the eye of the tiger at midfield.

The teams have played their share of clunkers, too. Since 1998, the average margin of victory has been 20.5 points with blowouts on both sides.

"Most of the time whoever wins this game has gone to the championship game," said Tuberville, who promised he would hold off on a celebratory stogie until he gets home if his team wins. "For us two, the winner will have a definite advantage over the other."

"We all want to play it, and we'd love to keep going on a regular schedule and hopefully this thing will blow over and we can play on Saturday."

Last season, Auburn (2-0, 1-0) entered the game with a five-game winning streak and 4-0 league record after stumbling in its first two games. LSU jumped out, 21-0, in the first quarter and shut Auburn out for 54 minutes of a 31-7 win.

Auburn lost its next two conference games while LSU (2-0) went on to win a share of the national championship.

Linebacker Travis Williams doesn't rate this rivalry up with Alabama or Georgia, but last year's game does ratchet it up in his mind.

"It's a little different, because they kind of handed it to us last year," Williams said. "We've been thinking about this for a whole year."

Auburn had won the previous meeting by the same score as last year's game. "They came out and played hard and had something to prove," Auburn receiver Courtney Taylor said.

Bailey expects heat in Jacksonville

BY EDDIE PELLIS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — He plays both sides of the ball, is considered one of the best cornerbacks in the game and is among the league's most talented stars. But Champ Bailey's advice to his teammates has little to do with football this week.

Bailey

"Drink lots of water," he said. The Broncos would be wise to listen to Bailey. He grew up in Folkston, Ga., just a few miles away from steaming-hot Jacksonville, Fla., which is where the Broncos play the Jaguars on Sept. 19. So concerned about the weather is coach Mike Shanahan that he's diverting from his strict regimen and traveling to Florida on Friday, a day early, so the team can work out one day in the sweltering heat.

"You really don't know how hot it is or how humid it is until you get down there," Shanahan said. "Sometimes you are little bit luckier than other times."

It doesn't look like the Broncos (1-0) will get lucky Sept. 19. The forecast calls for a high of 85 and a 20-percent chance of thunderstorms. With humidity expected to reach around 80 percent, it will probably feel like about 110 at gametime. In Denver on Thursday, it was 84 with about 20 percent humidity.

This is not a great sign for a team that had no fewer than five players — including Bailey — go down with cramps for at least a portion of the season-opener against Kansas City, played on a cool evening in Denver.

"People don't really realize it until they go down there," said Shanahan, who recalled his time as an assistant at Florida in the 1980s. "We were on the turf in Tampa, the temperature was 120 degrees. It was over at half-time. They weren't used to that type of heat. We have a little bit more heat here but we don't have the humidity. But we'll deal with it. We have no choice."

Bailey said he'll have about 25 or 30 friends and family at Alltel Stadium, which is where his alma mater, Georgia, plays Florida in the annual game known as "The World's Largest Outdoor Cocktail Party."

"I have one good memory from there," Bailey said. He was there in 1997, the only time Georgia has won in the last 14 games of the series.

The way he's playing now, though, there's a chance he could add to the good memories Sunday.

Philadelphia Eagles wide receiver Terrell Owens pulls in a 20-yard touchdown against the New York Giants in the first quarter Sunday in Philadelphia. The Eagles will face the Vikings this weekend and Owens will have his chance to try to play super-Viking Randy Moss.

George Widman/Associated Press

Vikings vs. Eagles features Owens vs. Moss

BY DAN GELSTON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — C'mon, T.O., take the bait. Admit you're better than Randy Moss. Say you can run faster, block better, make the most big plays out of double coverage.

After all, the Sept. 20 game seems more like Terrell Owens vs. Randy Moss than the Philadelphia Eagles vs. the Minnesota Vikings. This week, the pair of brash, blunt, and boisterous wide receivers who grab more than a few catches have grabbed most of the attention, too.

Moss struck first after Sunday's game, saying no receiver sees the coverages he does and that when it comes to him against other receivers in the league there was "no comparison."

Owens on Thursday seemed more amused than bothered by the comment. If Moss wants to pump up his own ability, so be it.

Owens made no bold claims of being the best, but it's clear he thought anything Moss can do, he can do just as well.

"I've always given Randy his credit and his just due because he is a great receiver," Owens said. "If he doesn't feel like I'm in comparison with him, that's great. My thing is, if I were thinking of great receivers who I want to be compared with, I'd obviously say a guy like Jerry Rice or Michael Irvin."

Owens also dismissed Moss' claim that no one sees coverage like he does.

"I've been double-teamed throughout my career, so it doesn't matter," Owens said. "I don't see anything different than Randy probably sees. He gets a lot of double coverage, so have I."

So what does Owens do better than Moss? "It doesn't matter," Owens said, before adding, "I think one of my strengths is my blocking, so that's what I take pride in."

Kobe Bryant, center, is flanked by his attorneys Pamela Mackey, left, and Hal Haddon as he arrives for a court appearance in Eagle, Colo., on August 6, 2003. Bryant's interview with the police the night after he was accused of rape was published Thursday in the Vail Daily.

Bryant told police he was innocent

BY JON SARCHÉ
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — In his interview with police the night after he was accused of rape, NBA star Kobe Bryant insisted the sex was consensual, that he stopped when she said "no," and wondered if she would accept money to recant a claim that could damage his reputation.

A transcript of the interview was published Thursday by the Vail Daily, which said it obtained the printout and an audio recording from someone who mailed it anonymously from Denver. A source close to the prosecution told the Associated Press the transcript appeared accurate.

Calls to John Clune, an attorney for the alleged victim, and Bryant's defense attorney Pamela Mackey were not returned. At Mackey's request, District Judge Richard Hart has issued a temporary restraining order prohibiting public release of records or evidence from the case.

The interview was taped by Eagle County sheriff's investigator Dan Loya as he and fellow investigator Doug Winters talked to Bryant for about 75 minutes in the parking lot of the Lodge & Spa at Cordillera and in his room last summer.

The transcript contains profanity and some graphic descriptions from Bryant, who also admitted he had had frequent similar encounters with another woman named "Michelle," and who could testify that he also held her from behind. Bryant, who had been married for two years and had a 5-month-old daughter, said his wife did not know about the other woman.

He told the investigators he was concerned about damage to his marriage, his career, and his image if word of the rape allegation got out.

"Is there any way I can settle this, whatever it is?" Bryant asked.

"Well, what do you mean by settle?" Winters replied.

"If my wife, if my wife found out that anybody made any type of allegations against me she would be infuriated," Bryant said.

At the time, his 19-year-old accuser had already had a hospital examination and had been interviewed by Winters. The felony sexual-assault charge that could have landed the Los Angeles Lakers star in jail for life was dismissed at her request earlier this month because she no longer wanted to testify. Her civil lawsuit against Bryant is pending in federal court.

During the interview, Bryant at first denied having sex with the woman. But after investigators said they had physical evidence indicating the two had sex, he told them she initiated it.

"It was totally consensual," he said.

"What makes you believe it was consensual?" Loya asked.

"Cause she started kissing me, [inaudible] then she bent over and [inaudible]," Bryant said.

Later, Bryant said, "We were still only this close, and she gets up and she gives me a kiss, so I kiss her back, and then, you know, I started caressing her or whatever, and then she puts her hand on my, you know, my thing or whatever, and it kinda goes from there."

THINGS YOU SHOULDN'T SAY DURING SEX

— by Josh Bald

• So, how's your sister?

• I thought you said you would take care of that mole.

• Oh man, I shouldn't have eaten all those baked beans.

• Sweet, Torque is on HBO again.

• I can't believe all the other people here on the dance floor of the Fieldhouse aren't noticing us.

• I didn't know they came in kids' sizes!

• Gosh, I'm sleepy.

• Do you have a shoehorn or something?

• That ain't mayonnaise!

• That's OK, baby, because when the red river flows...

• By the way, what's next week's homework, Professor?

• It's just like throwing a hot dog down a hallway!

quote of the day

“The White House has just got to be thrilled to death that everybody's tormenting about subscripts and superscripts. Why aren't we focusing on the content?”

— Robert Strong, the Texas National Guard administrative officer in charge of air operations from early 1971 until March 1972, on President Bush's Guard service record.

horoscopes

Friday, September 17, 2004
— by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't let matters dealing with authority or institutions linger. The faster you eliminate issues, the sooner you can get on with your life.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The focus should be on partnerships today. If you are single, you will meet someone special; if you are in a relationship, do whatever you can to enhance this connection. A makeover will lift your spirits.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your determination will lead to success. Your ability to make things happen or work will win you the recognition you need to get ahead. Focus on your talents.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Plan to have some fun today. Love relationships are looking good, so don't hesitate to show your true colors, and desires, and needs.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may want to hold back your thoughts. Someone will embellish what you say or try to back you into an uncompromising corner. Problems at home could escalate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can meet someone special through someone you already know. Love and romance are evident, so don't be too shy to make a move. Someone from your past will make a difference.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't be afraid to make a professional change. Follow through with your ideas and plans, and you won't be sorry. View change as an adventure.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Prepare to defend yourself. You are underestimating your value, and others are taking advantage of what you can do. Re-evaluate your dreams.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Money is in the picture today. Winnings, tax rebates, insurance surrenders, or a settlement are looking positive. Changes at home will be to your benefit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You will benefit through the groups you work with and the people you meet. Love is apparent, so take advantage of this by doing something special for your lover or, if single, meeting someone new.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will get yourself in deeper if you try to resolve issues today. Someone will try to trick you into thinking that he or she is on your side. Be careful about whom you trust.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Love, prosperity, and development of your creative ideas will all be in a high cycle.

JERMELLE LEWIS

Iowa running back Jermelle Lewis avoids an Iowa State defender in the 2002 matchup at Kinnick Stadium. Lewis has struggled with academics and injuries while waiting behind proven starters, but now, he's ready to take over the job.

Finally his turn

Jermelle Lewis is prepared to lead Iowa's offensive attack

BY JASON BRUMMOND

THE DAILY IOWAN

Jermelle Lewis hasn't had exactly the career he thought he would.

He missed one season because of academics and another half of one because of injury. When he's been healthy during the past two seasons, he's played behind speedster Fred Russell, who ranks fourth on Iowa's all-time rushing list with 2,760 yards.

The former high-school All-American Lewis has shown flashes during his collegiate career, but nothing that would warrant significant national attention. He could care less.

"I'm not really concerned about the spotlight and what people think outside of here, like critics and all that," Lewis said. "My main focus right now is making sure as a team and as a unit we get better each week and keep improving."

With the departure of Russell, Hawkeye coach Kirk Ferentz said this season is finally Lewis' opportunity to show what he is capable of. With the recent loss of running back depth in Iowa's lineup, Lewis is the only back left standing with meaningful experience, and he'll need to carry much of the team's offense.

The Hawkeyes have had four-consecutive 1,000-yard rushers under Ferentz.

"I've always believed and always will believe that if you can't run with success, it's going to be hard to win consistently," Ferentz said.

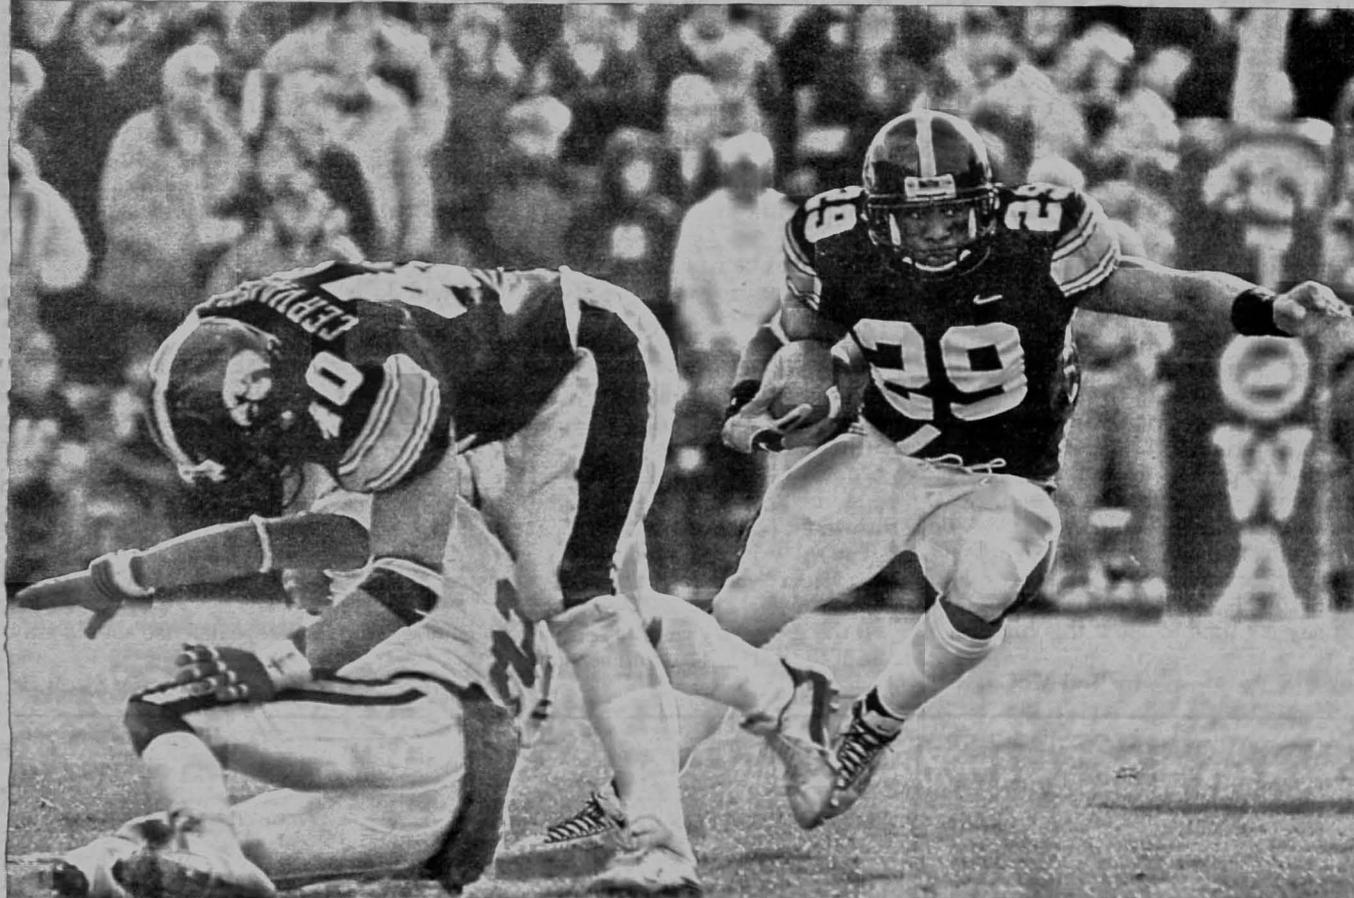

The six-year Iowa coach added that adding an inexperienced quarterback into the mix forces the Hawkeyes to be even more stubborn at sticking to their tradition of running.

"A lot of good championship teams run the football well so that's really what we want to focus on," Lewis said.

PREGAME

'I'm not really concerned about the spotlight and what people think outside of here, like critics and all that. My main focus right now is making sure as a team and as a unit we get better each week and keep improving.'

— Jermelle Lewis

Jermelle Lewis entered this season with 950 career yards and will likely finish in the top 10 of Iowa's all-time rushing list after this season. He ran for 709 yards and eight touchdowns in 2002 — the 27th-best rushing mark in Hawkeye history despite playing behind Fred Russell.

"To control the clock and to control the field position you want to run the football."

With a young and inexperienced offensive line, the Hawkeye rushing attack has not been where Ferentz wants it to be. Iowa's 149.5 yards a game ranks 60th in the nation and ninth in the Big Ten.

Lewis, who sat out the Kent State game to serve a one-game suspension for violating an unspecified team policy, had 102 yards on a career-high 30 carries against Iowa State.

Ferentz said the Cyclones' defensive schemes and blitzing tactics made it more difficult for Iowa to run at times.

"He did what he could last week," sophomore quarterback Drew Tate said. "Iowa State brought a lot of heat — put a lot of guys in the box, so he couldn't do much. But when we needed him big, he ended up doing pretty big."

It doesn't look like Lewis will have much relief in the backfield, either.

Iowa has lost the services of two of its top three backs in the first two weeks of the season — Marcus Schnoor and Albert Young. Schnoor, who started in the opener against Kent State, suffered an anterior cruciate ligament tear in the first quarter and is out for the year.

Young tore his ACL on Sept. 11 against Iowa State after gaining 92 yards and two touchdowns between the first two games. The redshirt freshman from Moorestown, N.J., broke his leg in preseason camp last year after he was expected to play.

Lewis, who suffered an ACL tear in the off-season following Iowa's 2002 Orange Bowl, said he sympathizes with Schnoor and Young because he knows how much the injury affected him.

"Football is real important to me and to have something like that happen — it's such a freak accident and it takes the game away from you just like that," the 5-11, 215-pounder said. "It was always a hard thing to deal with."

In addition to his speed-power combination in the running game, Lewis has proven to be a threat catching the ball, too.

The Bloomfield, Conn., native caught two passes out of the backfield for 44 yards against Iowa State, and Ferentz said the idea to involve the running backs more in the passing game was initiated in the spring.

Russell caught just six passes for six yards last season, but Ferentz said a more all-around back such as Lewis is better suited for the being used as a receiver, similar to former Hawkeye Ladell Betts, now with the NFL's Washington Redskins.

"He brings experience," Tate said. "He's a good running back — catching and running."

Lewis, who has 1,052 yards and five 100-yard games on his résumé, may fly under the radar of Big Ten teams this year who have not seen his full talent in use.

But Lewis isn't concerned about how many yards he racks up.

He isn't worried about how many touchdowns he scores.

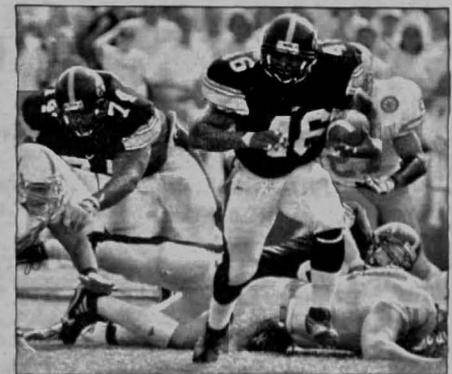

And most of all, Lewis doesn't even think about the presumptions opponents have about him or what commentary he receives from the media and analysts.

He's not out to show them wrong. He's out to prove to his teammates that he can help carry them.

"If he does well, he won't surprise us," Ferentz said. "We hope he will and we anticipate he will."

PREGAME

POINT/COUNTERPOINT

What's the Hawkeyes' biggest concern?

If I were the Iowa signal-caller, the five men in front of me wouldn't be the O-Line, but the Ow-line.

In the Sept. 11 win over Iowa State, the big uglies up front didn't give Jermelle Lewis enough room to run and sometimes didn't allow Drew Tate enough time back in the pocket.

Iowa's running game averaged under 2 yards per attempt, and even though Iowa State's defense may be reputable, it doesn't possess the type of talent that Ohio State's or Michigan's does.

Tate, meanwhile, was sacked five times. That kind of punishment is bound to take a toll on his 185-pound frame. How is the offense supposed to run if it can't get the blocking it needs to put a drive together?

The problem isn't in a lack of talent or coaching, but inexperience. With three first-year starters and the only senior up front being Pete McMahon, the pressure could be the primary issues.

Losing linemen to the NFL definitely doesn't help, either. In the last two NFL drafts, Iowa has lost four offensive linemen to the pros: Eric Steinbach, Bruce Nelson, Ben Sobieski, and Robert Gallery. That's around 1,200 pounds. If you include the loss of guard David Walker and center Brian Ferentz in the off-season from injury, it's no wonder the line has appeared sluggish so far this season.

And when the offensive line isn't a concern to the Hawkeyes, then the lack of discipline is. In two games, Iowa has been hit with 20 penalties for 211 yards. If you give away that many yards, it's a problem. If the offensive line doesn't make room for the running game or give Tate time in the pocket, it's a problem.

Both happening at once — well, let's just say it's time to see if this high-paid coaching staff can earn its pay.

— by Ted McCartan

Yes, the Iowa Hawkeyes are 2-0. They also have a pair of national rankings and the fourth-ranked defense in the country. Hawkeye fans have a lot to be happy about right now, but on the downside, many know the team needs improvement in certain areas.

It is easy to pick on the offense, especially the offensive line, which is a big reason that Iowa ranks 10th in rushing in the Big Ten. But the young O-line will get better with more experience. Plus, the team's two anchors, David Walker and Brian Ferentz, are still nagged by injuries but should be back during early conference play.

The area I believe Hawk fans should be worried about is the defensive secondary. Starting cornerbacks Antwan Allen and Jovon Johnson are now juniors — Allen has started every game of his college career, and Johnson is in his second year as a starter. Yet at times the corners look like freshmen defending the pass. It isn't all their fault.

It seems safeties Sean Considine and Marcus Paschal are late getting over to help when the corners get beat. Although the secondary has only allowed one touchdown pass, it has yet to face a true pass-oriented offense.

That will change this weekend in Tempe, Ariz., when the Iowa defense will line up against Arizona State's pass-happy offense. Quarterback Andrew Walter has thrown for 533 yards and 6 touchdowns.

The secondary will have to improve if the Hawkeyes want a shot at the Big Ten title. Has anyone seen the pass numbers Purdue's Kyle Orton has put up in two games?

If the secondary can make strides each week, the Hawkeye defense should stay one of the nation's best all season.

Ex-Iowa City High back gets second shot vs. the Hawks

Hakim Hill, who rushed for 3,585 yards and 57 touchdowns in his prep career at Iowa City High, is in his third season with Arizona State.

The 6-0, 220-pound junior has rushed for 31 yards on eight carries as a part of the Sun Devils' three-man rotation in the backfield that features sophomores Loren Wade and Randy Hill. Hakim Hill also has two catches for 14 yards.

Hill started four games last year for Arizona State and accumulated 452 yards and three touchdowns, including 17 yards on two carries against Iowa.

He has 801 rushing yards for his college career.

Hill's brother, Khalil, played for the Hawkeyes under Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz in 2000 and 2001.

His father, J.D., was an All-Pro wide receiver with the Bills.

The Sun Devils have a high-powered offensive attack led by senior quarterback Andrew Walter and head coach Dirk Koetter's offensive scheme.

Walter, a 6-5, 235-pounder, entered the season needing just 1,261 yards and 11 touchdown passes to become the all-time leading passer in Arizona State history — currently held by NFL signal-caller Jake Plummer.

Walter has completed 37-of-73 passes this season for 553 yards and six touchdowns while throwing no interceptions.

"Andrew hasn't had to win a game for us yet, [but] that time is going to come," Koetter said. "When we need Andrew to win the game for us, I'm confident he will be ready to do it."

Walter is on the preseason watch list for the Davey O'Brien Award (top quarterback) and the Walter Camp Player of the Year Award.

The Sun Devils use a three-man rotation at running back, featuring starter Loren Wade. The sophomore from Los Angeles has gained 157 yards on 35 carries (4.5-yard average), while backup Randy Hill has 94 yards on 21 carries. Arizona State has averaged 135 yards on the ground in its every balance offense.

Walter's favorite target has been the 6-2, 200-pound junior Derek Hagan. The 2003 honorable mention All-Pac-10 member, has 16 catches for 273 yards (17.1 yards a catch) and three touchdowns. He has more than twice as much yardage than Arizona State's second leading receiver.

True freshman tight end Zach Miller, who was widely considered to be the nation's best prospect at his position in 2003, has been an early contributor for the Sun Devils. Miller has just one catch because he hasn't been thrown at very often, but Koetter promised that he will get more involved in the passing game.

On defense, the Sun Devils have had problems with the running game, surrendering 161 yards per contest, including 235 last week against Northwestern.

The defense is led by junior-college linebacker Dale Robinson, who has led the team in tackles in both of its games and has tallied 23 for the season.

The Sun Devils have five quarterback sacks and three interceptions for the year.

PREGAME

Darius Walker, running back

Notre Dame at Michigan St.

Keys for the Fighting Irish: The Leprechauns must avoid a major meltdown after last week's upset of the Michigan Wolverines. Coach Tyrone Willingham's play-calling has to adhere to classic Notre Dame football and control the line of scrimmage for the Irish to have any chance of winning.

Notre Dame running back Darius Walker looked solid last week with 115 yards and two touchdowns — which may be needed again this week until quarterback Brady Quinn can find his game.

Keys for the Spartans: The Spartans have to find a permanent starter under center. Their three-headed monster under the gun — Damon Dowdell, Stephen Reaves, Drew Stanton — must be solved to build chemistry and for the Spartans to have a successful year.

Prediction: With ESPN's "College Gameday" and Notre Dame up in East Lansing the Spartan faithful will be rocking and carry their team to victory — watch out for the post-game riot, though.

Wisconsin at Arizona

Key for the Badgers: Wisconsin is again without starting running back Anthony Davis and the Badgers are struggling to find an adequate replacement.

Quarterback John Stocco had 295 yards passing through the first two games and they'll need him to come up big against a Mike Stoops-led Arizona defense.

Key for the Wildcats: Arizona got beat up last weekend against Utah and failed to get in the end zone. Quarterback Kris Heavner, who was 19-of-25 last week for 198 yards, has to find a way to get the Wildcats into the end zone.

Prediction: This will be the toughest defense the Badgers have faced this season and they'll need Stocco to make up for the loss of Davis. Wisconsin will win if they can move the ball.

Stocco

Western Michigan at Illinois

Keys for the Broncos: Greg Jennings may be the most underrated receiver in the nation. Somebody else from the receiving core must step up to take the double coverage off Jennings.

Keys for the Fighting Illini: Illinois has to keep in mind this might be their last chance to get a win this season. Quarterback Jon Beutjer should be able to light up the Broncos secondary.

The former Iowa quarterback is third in the Big Ten in passing efficiency and has completed a league-high 70 percent of his throws.

Prediction: In the snooze-fest of the Big Ten, Illinois will edge out the Broncos to capture the who-cares-who-won title of the week.

Minnesota at Colorado State

Key for the Gophers: Minnesota's Laurence Maroney and Marion Barber III are first and third in the conference (13th and 22nd in the nation) in rushing yards. But the competition gets a little tougher this week.

Barber

Key for the Rams: Colorado State quarterback Justin Holland has already thrown for 636 yards and two touchdowns, but the running game hasn't been there in the team's pair of losses.

Prediction: Completely different styles collide in Fort Collins, but Minnesota should come away with the win.

Indiana at Kentucky

Keys for Hoosiers: Indiana is going into the rivalry game in Lexington coming off a huge upset of a ranked Oregon team. The team must keep its emotion high but under control for Indiana to win. Cornerback Herana-Daze Jones won Big Ten Defense player of the week with an interception and fumble recovery could step it up again versus the young Kentucky team.

Jones

Keys for Wildcats: Basketball season can't come soon enough for these Wildcats. It has been a long year for this young team — how sad is it that they are wishing the Tim Couch days would return.

Prediction: The Hoosiers will improve to 3-0 with a win. Indiana could be this year's surprise team in the Big Ten.

Justin Zwick, quarterback

Ohio State at N.C. State

Key for the Buckeyes: Ohio State escaped overtime last week against Marshall, and it will need to play much better on the road at N.C. State. Quarterback Justin Zwick threw 30 passes and two interceptions last weekend and still doesn't look confident.

Key for the Wolfpack: Quarterback Jay Davis had 168 yards and two touchdown passes in his first career start last week — granted, against Richmond.

Prediction: Last year the Buckeyes edged by in three overtime periods; expect another close game this year in the league's best game.

Kansas at Northwestern

Key for the Jayhawks: Sophomore quarterback Adam Barmann has thrown for 409 yards and five touchdowns in the first two games of the season.

Herron

Key for the Wildcats: Northwestern racked up 235 yards on the ground last week against Arizona State, and senior Noah Herron is fourth in the conference with 199 yards.

But the Wildcats have given up a Big Ten-worst 39.0 points and an outrageous 480 yards per game.

Prediction: It should be a high scoring slug fest between two teams that can put it in the end zone but have difficulties stopping it. Northwestern looks tough and should come away with the win.

Central Florida at Penn State

Key for Golden Knights: Central Florida is in a must-win early in the season. A loss on Saturday would send the team to 0-3, crippling the team's chances for post-season play. The Golden Knights have scored two touchdowns in two games this season, they must find their way into the end zone against Penn State.

Mills

Key for the Nittany Lions: It seems Penn State is heading for an up-and-down year yet again. Quarterback Zach Mills and running back Tony Hunt can not lose the ball or Central Florida could surprise them.

Prediction: Mills and Hunt will have great if not career days against the porous Golden Knights' defense.

San Diego State at Michigan

Key for the Aztecs: Matt Dlugolecki has to find a way to weave his passes through the tough Michigan secondary, starring cornerback Marlin Jackson. It will be tough to find yards on the ground, but if they can squeak out over 150 they should be able to make the game interesting.

Key for the Wolverines: The Maize and Blue can not afford to turn the ball over as they did last week against Notre Dame. Jackson should be able to step up and have a huge game against the Aztecs' passing offense.

Prediction: The Wolverines will romp in this one, winning quite handily. The Michigan second team should be able to see playing time on Saturday.

ANDREW WALTER

Walter aims for rebound

Arizona State quarterback Andrew Walter threw one interception last year in Kinnick Stadium and the Sun Devils mustered only 184 yards and 12 first downs against the Hawkeyes' stingy defense.

Walter has one thing on his mind — revenge.

BY NICK RICHARDS
THE DAILY IOWAN

Go to the Arizona State athletics website, and you'll find a link reserved for quarterback Andrew Walter.

Click on the link, and watch the superlatives run away.

"I think he's a great quarterback," Hawkeye senior Sean Considine said. "What can I say that hasn't already been said about him? He's a Heisman hopeful, he reads routes great, he gets the ball to his receivers right on the money, and the ball comes there quick. He's got a cannon for an arm. We've got to be ready for him."

Walter, undoubtedly one of the top quarterbacks in the country, was a Heisman Trophy candidate at this time last year, building on his frenetic finish in the 2002 season. But Arizona State never bought into the Heisman hype.

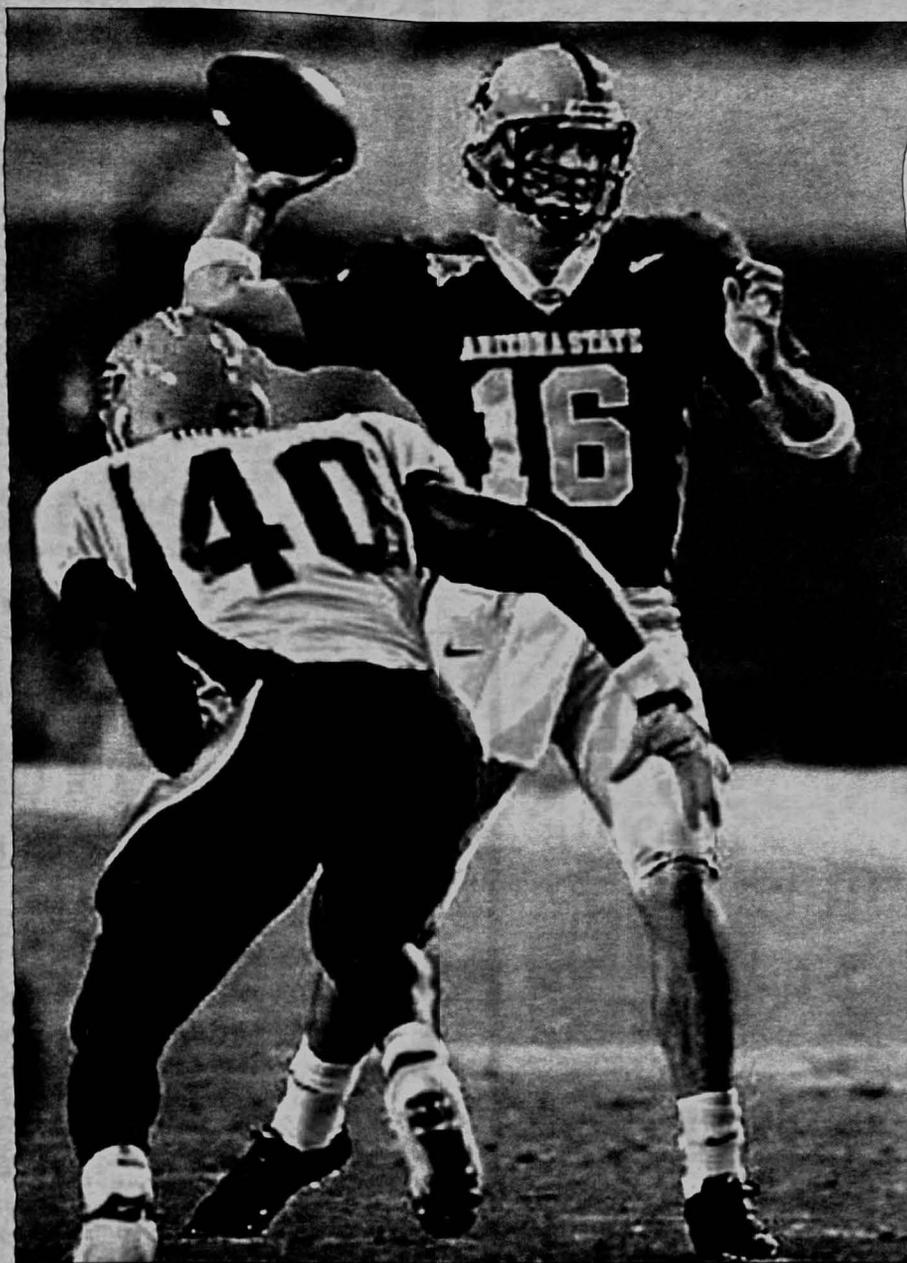

"There has to be a valid reason [to support someone for the Heisman Trophy]," said Mark Brand, an Arizona State associate athletics director. "The only way you're going to win a Heisman is if you win."

The 6-5, 221-pound Walter saw his dominance peak in 2002, when he passed for 3,877 yards and 28 touchdowns, numbers on par with 2002 Heisman winner Carson Palmer. Walter started in just his fifth game that year against Stanford, when he passed for 414 yards and five touchdowns, adding to his growing legacy at ASU.

He finished with the third-best single-season passing performance in Pac-10 history, shattering the school record for passing yards in a season by 999 yards. He also broke the school record for pass attempts and completions and missed tying the ASU touchdown record by one. He set a Pac-10 record by throwing for 400 yards in four games that year.

Heading into the 2003 season, Walter was dubbed by Sports Illustrated as the No. 4 pick to win last year's Heisman Trophy. The week of last year's game with Iowa, Walter cracked ESPN.com's Heisman-watch poll.

Walter put up what would've been amazing stats for any other player last year, throwing for 3,044 yards and 24 touchdowns. However, the numbers were below his ridiculous 2002 output, the Sun Devils finished the campaign

Associated Press
Andrew Walter has completed 37-of-73 yards this season for 553 yards and six touchdowns while leading the Sun Devils to a 2-0 start.

5-7, and his Heisman stock plummeted after the Sun Devils' 21-2 defeat in Iowa City. Walter's, and his teammates, pedestrian performance last year in Iowa City set the tone for Arizona State's disappointing season, one in which many thought they would compete with USC for the Pac-10 title.

Last year's game in Iowa City was a nightmare for both Walter and the Sun Devils. Walter finished the game 25-44 for 160 yards and an interception as the Iowa defense dominated the high-powered Arizona State offense. The

'I think he's a great quarterback. What can I say that hasn't already been said about him? He's a Heisman hopeful, he reads routes great, he gets the ball to his receivers right on the money, and the ball comes there quick. He's got a cannon for an arm. We've got to be ready for him.'

— Iowa safety Sean Considine

Iowa defense recorded two sacks on Walter and pressured Walter into several early throws.

"Any time you've got pressure coming from the front four on defense, that's really where it starts," Considine said. "I thought last year we got some good pressure on him."

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz feels that last year's subpar performance from Walter was not the Andrew Walter he and his defense saw on tape last year.

"I think [last year] was an aberration," Ferentz said. "He had it going pretty good at the end of 2002. That whole team really had that momentum. To me, it looks like they've recaptured that."

While 2003 was a disappointment by Walter's standards, he has picked up where he left off in 2002. Walter has already thrown for 533 yards, six touchdowns, and no interceptions. The Sun Devils have picked up the momentum they had built at the end of the 2002 season, when they lost a close game to Kansas State in the Holiday Bowl.

"I've said many times, Andrew has extremely high expectations for himself," Arizona State head coach Dick Koetter said. "I have very high expectations for Andrew. I don't think Andrew has played his best, but he has thrown for six touchdowns and no interceptions."
