Local chiropractor feels the 'energy'

Steve Hammerstrom believes in thinking outside the box

BY JIM BUTTS
THE DAILY IOWAN

His office waiting room is typical of any chiropractor — kids' books and an Etch-a-Sketch sit on a table, Good Housekeeping and other reading materials hang on the pink wall next to comfortable red chairs, and the smell of the room is clean.

But once inside his office at 373 Scott Court, Dr. Steve Hammerstrom is anything but a typical chiropractor.

Wearing jeans and a denim shirt, he often uses such phrases as "pulse points" and "light energy" as he talks about Eastern medical philosophy while bluegrass tunes play over his office speakers.

"When you're dealing with Eastern medicine, you're dealing with energy," he said. "With Western medicine, they're totally missing the boat because they don't do anything with energy."

In a soft, soothing voice, Hammerstrom describes how chronic neck pain in one of his patients was not caused by a physical injury but by emotional stress as a teenager.

"At 15 years old, she broke up with her boyfriend, and her mom and dad were getting divorced at the same time," he said.

The doctor diagnosed the problem as an "overload of emotion" in the patient's cerebellum that had seeped into her trapezius muscle, causing chronic pain. He discovered and treated the problem with a technique he calls "emotional therapy," one of his several nontraditional methods.

The basis of the procedure involves the idea that pent-up

Official wants more classes on Fridays

BY JULIE ZARE
THE DAILY IOWAN

In an effort to improve the UI undergraduate academic experience, a university official proposes to increase the number of classes on Friday, a day when many of the university's students do not have class.

The undergraduate experience subcommittee, one of five working on the UI's 2005-10 strategic plan, may recommend that the university offer longer course periods on fewer days. Such a schedule would include a day packed with fewer courses in the middle of the week instead of at its end.

"It would give students two days to prepare for classes instead of the usual one day as well as decrease the number of students out partying Friday nights," said Lola Lopes, the associate provost for undergraduate education, who proposed the scheduling change.

She said the standard pattern for students avoiding Friday classes is convenient and common among universities nationwide. While first-year classes are often held four to five times a week, longer and less frequent Tuesday-

Group backs slowing retirement funding

BY DREW KERR
THE DAILY IOWAN

The UI Faculty Senate cautiously approved a recommendation Tuesday to delay university payments to individual faculty retirement funds by three years, a decision requiring final approval by President David Skorton.

Following mild argument, the Senate approved — though not unanimously — the proposal, which originated with the General Education Fund Task Force. Skorton established the panel last year to help cut university expenses by $12 million.

After first suggesting that the university reduce the amount it contributes to university employees' voluntary supplemental retirement plans, the task force switched course and proposed a scheme that would withhold money for three years.

Faculty Senate Vice President Richard LeBlond said the proposal could cut an estimated $300,000 from the general-education fund, affecting nearly 70 faculty members. If accepted by Skorton, the university would become the first Big Ten school to implement such a policy. Northwestern University is considering a similar initiative.

The latest recommendation was meant to answer concerns that the plan would hurt recruitment efforts, but those complaints arose during the meeting.

The plan's critics argued the

ACCIDENT

Two cars collided at the intersection of Mormon Trek Boulevard and Rohret Road on Tuesday at approximately 6:50 p.m. All passengers involved were hospitalized, said Iowa City police Officer David Droll. He did not know the cause of the accident or the condition of the drivers. A brown Dodge Ram pickup truck had its entire front end smashed. The other vehicle, a silver Mazda Protégé, had a broken windshield and damage to the front and left side. Authorities were still assessing the accident at 10 p.m.

Officials warn of whooping cough

County health officials are warning the community of an outbreak of whooping cough, with 40 cases reported since Aug. 1.

The typical number of cases reported during this time of year is approximately 10, said Ralph Wilmoth, the director of Johnson County Public Health.

Nine cases of whooping cough have been reported in Iowa City schools, said Susie Poulton, the director of School District health services. Several cases have also been found at Regina Elementary and High School in Iowa City, Wilmoth said.

Economy benefiting some, but some college grads missing out

In the two years since Ryan Schultz graduated from the UI, both 8-to-5 jobs he has held were shipped away for cheaper labor.

The 24-year-old now delivers pizzas in Chicago when he's not surfing through Internet job-search engines and putting together applications for a position in public relations.

Schultz has joined legions of recent graduates searching for quality jobs. They form a substantial voting bloc in a presidential election that pits two candidates with divergent economic policies against each other.

"I don't need four years of the stuff I just went through," Schultz said.

Voters tend to judge presidents by their current economic situation rather than what candidates have planned, many observers believe. Four years of slow economic growth could prove fatal for an incumbent.

But officials in the Bush campaign are confident a recent economic upswing bodes well for the president.

If re-elected, the president will continue across-the-board tax cuts, similar to the ones in his first term, said John Bailey, a deputy policy director for the Bush campaign.

Drug-policy reform defeated

The Student Assembly rejects easing the dorms' drug policy

BY KATE MCCARTER
THE DAILY IOWAN

The UI Student Government's Student Assembly shot down a resolution on Tuesday that would have supported reforming the current residence-hall drug policy, despite evidence of substantial student support.

George Pappas, the president of Students for a Sensible Drug Policy, said he was "very disappointed" that the assembly rejected the resolution. He noted that since Oct. 11, the group had received more than 1,000 signatures from students and faculty in support of the reform.

"It's a major setback. It interferes with the [momentum] we're trying to build," said Alex Wyrick, a group member. "We know the student body is behind us, and it's too bad [student] representatives aren't."

The group's resolution called for a drug policy focusing primarily on education and assistance as an alternative to harsh punishments for first-time offenders. Currently, students caught with drugs are often thrown out of the residence halls.

"The current policy focuses on the arrest and eviction of students after a first offense," Pappas said. "We want to change the zero-tolerance part and give students a second chance."

UISG Vice President Jason Shore expressed his support for the policy before the vote.

"As a former RA, I saw that strong members of the floor community were forced to drop out of school after being evicted from the residence halls," he said.

Despite Shore's endorsement, the assembly voted down the resolution. Members expressed concern over the wording of the document, because "drugs" did not limit the policy to marijuana and could potentially include date-rape drugs, cocaine, and heroin.

Pappas called the UI's policy "the harshest in the state and one of the harshest in the nation." He pointed out that the University of Northern Iowa and Iowa State University do not evict students from residence halls if they are caught with drugs.

After the resolution was rejected, drug-policy group members said they plan to rewrite the document and present it to UISG in November. They hope to eventually get support from the Associated Residence Halls and the Faculty Senate before presenting the proposal to Phillip Jones, the vice president for Student Services, and Residence Services.

The group decided to write the resolution after meeting with UI officials last spring to discuss problems with the current drug policy.

"The dean said that if we could come up with a written proposal that he would consider it," Pappas said. "I'm not sure if he just said that to accommodate me, but I took him seriously. So now, we're starting over."

ELECTION 2004 | Race for President

Kerry, Bush spar over flu vaccine, Social Security

BY DAVID ESPO AND TOM RAUM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — President Bush and Sen. John Kerry vied for the senior vote Tuesday, swapping charges over Social Security and a looming shortage of flu vaccine two weeks before Election Day.

The two rivals for the White House focused on domestic issues as Vice President Dick Cheney raised the terrifying specter of terrorists attacking U.S. cities with nuclear weapons. "You've got to get your mind around that concept," he said, suggesting Kerry couldn't cope with the threat.

Political momentum, often cited, rarely sighted, was the buzzword inside both campaigns. Aides to Bush claimed he had it following the three presidential debates.

But Kerry's team insisted that the battleground states were coming their man's way, and with them, the White House.

Whatever the truth, nationwide polls pointed toward a close finish, with two weeks of campaigning to go. Ditto recent surveys taken in Ohio and Florida, arguably the most hotly contested of the 50 states.

Kerry criticized Bush over the nation's supply of flu vaccine, and said the president had presided over a four-year "all-out assault" on Social Security. The four-term Massachusetts senator said the vaccine shortage was a result of a "failure of leadership" by the man in the White House.

"If you can't get flu vaccines to Americans how are you going to protect them against bioterrorism?" Kerry said in an interview with National Public Radio. "If you can't get flu vaccines to Americans, what kind of health-care program [are] you running?"

Campaigning in Florida during the day, Bush said the problem was nothing of the sort. He blamed a "major manufacturing defect" for the shortage, and sought to reassure his audience at the same time senior administration health officials worked to allay public concerns.

British regulators recently shut down shipments from Chiron Corp., cutting the U.S. supply of flu shots almost in half.

"Our government is doing everything possible to help older Americans and children get their shots," Bush said, a few hours before administration officials said 2.6 million extra doses would be available to partially offset the loss of 48 million in all.

As for Social Security, Kerry said Bush's economic policies have put it "on a dangerous road. Now he's asking for another four years to privatize the program, and undo the sacred compact we've made with our seniors," the Democrat said in an appearance in Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

"I will not privatize Social Security. I will not cut benefits. I will not raise the retirement age," he said. "Because when you've worked hard for a lifetime, America owes you what you've earned."

It was an expansion of charges Kerry first made on Sunday. This time, Bush rebutted them even before the senator spoke.

Urging his audiences to "reject the politics of fear" at the ballot box, the president sought to turn the issue to his own advantage. Seniors will continue to get their checks, he said, "no matter what [Democrats] try to tell you." And the program is "in pretty good shape" for the baby boomers, he added.

Clinton woman sues after son's death

UI Hospitals and Clinics physicians failed to notify a Clinton woman that her son suffered from a terminal medical condition, the woman contended in a lawsuit filed Monday.

Lisa Burke sued the state and demanded financial compensation for the alleged negligence of two UIHC doctors, Arnold Menezes and Daniel Guillaume, that led to the October 2002 death of 13-year-old Durelle Burke.

According to the lawsuit: Since birth, UIHC doctors had treated Durelle for spina bifida, a disabling birth defect that occurs when an unborn child's spinal column fails to fuse properly.

In May 2002, CT scans of Durelle's shunt, a device that helps to drain fluid from the brain, showed abnormalities, according to court records. But no record shows that Guillaume, who was notified of the test findings by the UIHC radiology department, told Menezes or that Menezes read Durelle's radiology report. Lisa Burke was also not notified of her son's abnormal condition.

Menezes later notified Durelle's primary physician in Clinton that the May 2002 CT scan showed no kink or disconnection. But five months later, Durelle died of complications from the shunt malfunction.

Lisa Burke seeks more than $10,000 in damages for the doctors' alleged failure to timely diagnose and treat her son's medical condition.

According to a police affidavit, Pohlman was helping students cross an intersection on Sept. 23 when he approached a 13-year-old girl and groped her.

Pohlman also allegedly made inappropriate remarks to the girl.

Neighbors said for many years Pohlman helped students cross the street, but Burlington School District Superintendent Mike Book said Pohlman is not employed by the district as a crossing guard.

College tuition rises, but less than last year

Officials say tuition at four-year public schools rose 10.5 percent this year, 13 percent last year

BY JUSTIN POPE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

College tuition rose at a somewhat slower rate this year, climbing 10.5 percent at public four-year colleges and 6 percent at private ones, a study found.

State budget cuts have forced public colleges to pass on more of their costs to students in recent years.

The College Board reported on Tuesday that the average tuition for in-state students at four-year public schools is $5,132 this year. Last year, tuition rose 13 percent, the first double-digit increase in a decade.

Including room and board, the overall cost for in-state students at four-year public schools rose 8 percent to $11,354, following a 9 percent increase last year that was the highest since the early 1980s.

At private four-year colleges, tuition, room, and board rose 6 percent to $27,516 this year, the College Board said.

Most students do not pay the full sticker price. If they were to get the same level of student aid as last year — those figures are not yet available — the average student would pay about $8,000 at a public four-year college this year. For students paying only tuition, the average net cost is $1,800 — up sharply from $1,300 last year.

David Ward, the president of the American Council on Education, which represents public and private schools, welcomed the easing of tuition increases but called for a public debate on the "quiet cost-shifting from state support to tuition that continues in far too many states."

James Boyle, president of the group College Parents of America, said continued tuition increases may cause families "to turn away from higher education options for their children."

CARE head for Iraq kidnapped

BY ROBERT H. REID
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAGHDAD — Gunmen seized the head of CARE International's operations in Iraq — a woman who has worked on behalf of Iraqis for three decades — as the British government on Tuesday weighed a politically volatile American request to transfer soldiers to dangerous areas near the capital.

Hassan
director of CARE

Early today, CARE Australia, which coordinates the international agency's Iraq operations, announced it had suspended operations because of the abduction, but it said staff would not be evacuated.

Elsewhere Tuesday, a mortar attack killed at least four Iraqi National Guard soldiers and wounded 80 at a base north of Baghdad. An American contractor also died when mortar shells crashed onto a U.S. base in the Iraqi capital. And three car bombs exploded in the northern city of Mosul, killing two Iraqi civilians and wounding three.

Margaret Hassan, who holds British, Irish, and Iraqi citizenships and is married to an Iraqi, is among the most widely known humanitarian officials in the Middle East. She is also the most high-profile figure to fall victim to a wave of kidnappings sweeping Iraq in recent months.

The Arab television station Al-Jazeera broadcast a brief video showing Hassan, wearing a white blouse and appearing tense, sitting in a room with bare white walls. An editor at the station, based in Qatar, said the tape contained no audio. It did not identify what group was holding her and contained no demand for her release.

Hassan, who is in her early 60s, was kidnapped about 7:30 a.m. while being driven from her home to CARE's office in a western neighborhood of the capital, a CARE employee said.

The employee said the group did not employ armed guards.

In an interview with Al-Jazeera, Hassan's husband, Tahseen Ali Hassan, said his wife was abducted near the CARE office.

"Two cars intercepted her from the front and back," he said. "They attacked the car and pulled out the driver and a companion. Then they took the car to an unknown destination."

He said his wife had not received threats and that the kidnappers had not contacted anyone with any demands. "Nothing like this happened before, because CARE is a humanitarian organization, and she has served the Iraqi people for 30 years," he said.

Hassan has lived in Baghdad for 30 years, helping supply medicines and other humanitarian aid and speaking out about Iraqis' suffering under international sanctions during the 1990s.

She went to work for CARE International soon after it began operations in Iraq in 1991 following the Gulf War, with programs focusing on rebuilding and maintaining water and sanitation systems, hospitals, and clinics.

The kidnapping was the latest attack against humanitarian organizations, many of which have curtailed operations and withdrawn international staff because of the violence in Iraq. It also follows a wave of abductions targeting foreigners in the heart of the capital.

"Our staff are not operating currently there, they're certainly not working there now in light of the current situation," Robert Glasser, CARE Australia's chief executive officer, told Australian Broadcasting Corp. radio.

Although militants have kidnapped at least seven other women over the past six months, all were later released. By contrast, at least 30 male hostages have been killed, including three Americans beheaded by their captors. Hassan's abduction occurred less than two weeks after a video posted on an Islamic website showed the beheading of British hostage Kenneth Bigley.

Social Security checks to rise 2.7 percent next year

BY MARTIN CRUTSINGER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — More than 47 million Americans will get a 2.7 percent increase in their Social Security checks starting in January, meaning an additional $25 per month for the typical retiree. But almost half of that gain will be gobbled up by a record increase in Medicare premiums.

The cost-of-living adjustment, or COLA, announced Tuesday by the Social Security Administration will be the largest percentage gain since a 3.5 percent increase in 2001. The increase last January was 2.1 percent.

The inflation adjustment is based on the amount prices — as measured by the Consumer Price Index — have risen in the July-September quarter compared with the same period a year ago. Rising energy costs have driven inflation higher this year.

The average Social Security retiree will see his benefit check increase from $930 this year to $955 next year.

However, the average retiree will also realize just over half of that increase because the government announced in September that monthly Medicare premiums for doctor visits will rise by $11.60 a month next year, a record in dollar terms.

Democratic presidential nominee John Kerry, who is trying to make President Bush's handling of Social Security and health care major issues in the campaign, told a rally in Pennsylvania the 2.7 percent benefit increase represented "more bad news" because of the large increase in the Medicare premium.

Kerry said the situation will be even worse for 2 million retirees receiving the lowest benefit payments, whose entire cost of living adjustment will be wiped out by the Medicare hike.

Under law, the monthly increase in Medicare premiums cannot be higher than an individual's cost-of-living adjustment. Retirees whose cost of living increase will be less than $11.60 next year will not be forced to pay the entire Medicare increase.

Several Democrats are pushing legislation that would go further and cap the Medicare premium increase to no more than 25 percent of a retiree's cost of living increase.

"American seniors rely on their COLA to help them with the rising cost of prescription drugs, food, clothing, and shelter," said one of the sponsors, Rep. Robert Matsui, D-Calif.

Kerry repeated a charge he made Sunday that Bush is planning a surprise second-term effort to privatize Social Security. "I will not privatize Social Security, I will not cut benefits. I will not raise the retirement age," Kerry said.

Bush rapped Kerry for trying "to scare our seniors."

"In 2000, they tried the same thing; if George W. gets elected, seniors won't get their checks. The seniors got their checks," Bush said Monday in an Associated Press interview.

Karzai's team confident of victory

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — With one-third of the votes counted in Afghanistan's landmark presidential election, Hamid Karzai was leading with 64 percent, and his campaign team said Tuesday it was certain the interim leader will win with the simple majority required to avoid a run-off.

The camp of ethnic Uzbek warlord Abdul Rashid Dostum, currently third, also said on Tuesday that the race is over, but Karzai's main challenger accuses the U.S.-backed incumbent of cheating and refuses to concede defeat.

Karzai's rivals have lodged dozens of complaints with a panel of foreign experts, though it is unclear if the panel will report before the expected release of the official election result at the end of October. Karzai needs at least 50 percent of the vote to avoid a runoff. Election officials have said the tallies are unlikely to change much once 20 percent of the votes have been counted.

Karzai, who has served as president since U.S.-led forces ousted the Taliban regime in late 2001, has mixed results in the returns from northern and central provinces where his ethnic Tajik and Uzbek rivals are strongest. However, he appears set to sweep southern and eastern regions dominated by his fellow Pashtun tribesmen.

NATO helicopters on Tuesday rescued a team of Afghan election workers from snowbound mountains in the country's remotest corner, and retrieved the last four ballot boxes containing ballots from the Oct. 9 election.

Putting freedom over a barrel

On Nov. 2, American women will flock to the polls to cast their votes in what many are calling recent history's most pivotal election. Some may sport a pro-choice button or a "W Stands For Women" T-shirt. Quite a few women will come with friends, male and female, or with a spouse. This is all standard procedure here — voting is such an assumed right that only now, in a highly dynamic election, have many Americans even registered to do so.

Half a world away, though, election procedures, and women's involvement therein, bear no resemblance to ours. Saudi Arabian Interior Minister Prince Nayef announced on Oct. 11 that in the Saudi municipal elections, scheduled for the spring of 2005, things will operate a little differently. "I don't think that women's participation is possible," he said in an interview with a Kuwaiti newspaper.

This blunt, hopeless statement is indicative of the Middle Eastern nation's approach to women's rights. In this monarchy ruled by Islamic law, women are prohibited from driving and mixing in public with men, and an abaya (black cloak) must be worn whenever they are outside their homes. To many in the Western world, such a life is impossible to fathom, yet to millions of women, this is reality. Saudi Arabia is considered the birthplace of Islam, and the religion dominates all aspects of its citizens' lives.

As one of the wealthiest nations in the world, Saudi Arabia occupies a special role in U.S. foreign policy. The country is practically dripping in oil — it is the source of 25 percent of the world's reserves — which helps to explain the close ties America shares with it. This friendship steeped in oil may help satisfy the needs of the Hummers on our highways, but it seems to misplace our values in such issues as, oh, spreading freedom and human rights.

The Bush administration's rhetoric focuses on spreading freedom across the globe, on the sharing of our democratic morals and values, yet the reality is that our good works are skewed.

President Bush aggressively invested troops and resources in the liberation of Afghanistan from Osama bin Laden and the Taliban, citing the need to liberate women from the oppressive rule. We went in to cure the world of its evildoers. In Afghanistan, we met a fair deal of success, as is evidenced by its recent election. Women voted — a practically inconceivable occurrence in a country ruled by the Taliban just a few years ago.

But the world is full of evildoers. Despite the fact that 15 of the 19 hijackers hailed from Saudi Arabia, we have not done enough to rein in that country's power. The nation is committing atrocious human-rights violations, just as the Taliban did in Afghanistan, yet, because Saudi Arabia is our ally, we have not taken an active stance against these violations. Our dealings with Saudi Arabia demonstrate hypocrisy at its worst. The Bush administration's rhetoric focuses on spreading freedom across the globe, on the sharing of our democratic morals and values, yet the reality is that our good works are skewed. In Saudi Arabia, women will not head to the polls in that nation's next election. This difference is something to think about on Nov. 2, when both American men and women head to the polls. Can you measure human rights by the barrel?

In praise of taxes

Taxes are good. Sadly, neither Bush nor Kerry seems to have grasped this very basic concept. Nor have the American people. It's hard to accept that money coming out of a paycheck could possibly be good. But it is.

Let's look back, as my conservative colleagues are so wont to do, at the history of our nation. Before the Constitution and before George Washington was president, the country was ruled based on the Articles of Confederation. What happened? Why did our Founding Fathers, in all their infallible wisdom, move away from this manner of ruling?

It went bankrupt. The Articles did not give the government the power to tax. The government needed money to run. It needed funds to provide a standing army to protect its citizens. It needed money to pay back loans. Governments require money. More than 200 years later, the government is in the same position: In order to run, it must tax. Even more, though, Americans today have come to expect a great number of services from their government. We pay for these with tax money.

Roads, schools, libraries, jails, police, courts, firefighters, and the military are basic services we demand from the government. Such programs as Head Start, Medicare, Medicaid, and Social Security protect us when the American dream doesn't quite pay all the bills. The National Institutes of Health gives grants to researchers, pushing science forward and improving our quality of life. Pell Grants and Perkins Loans help students go to college. The Food and Drug Administration monitors the quality of our food and medicine to keep us safe. Veterans Affairs takes care of our veterans after they have served our country. The list goes on. I'm proud of it. I'm proud to live in a country that takes care of its citizens.

Right now, our demands on the government are particularly onerous. Keep us safe from terrorism. Find and punish those responsible for 9/11. Make our health care affordable. Prevent corporate scandals like Enron's. Keep oil prices low. Keep our military — our brothers and sisters, our cousins and friends — safe when they fight, and honor them when they die.

A wise man once said, "Without pain, without sacrifice, we would have nothing." We ask our military to sacrifice. Willingness to put your life on the line for your country is a time-honored virtue in our country. Is it so much to ask our civilians to pay for services that protect their fellow citizens? Our government may not always do what is best with our money, but it does do a lot of good.

Democrats try to balance a basic understanding that citizens want government services with a fear that citizens vote against taxes. Taking a moderate stance, Kerry plans to increase taxes on the rich. There is a fear in the general populace that he will raise middle-class taxes, and they can't afford that. This is false. Kerry's plan raises taxes for those making over $200,000 a year (a number far too high for my taste, but the "most liberal senator" is really quite conservative for me).

Kerry's tax raise is aimed at those in the top 2 percent of earners. According to the nonpartisan Tax Policy Center, the top 10 percent got 53 percent of the Bush tax cut. How Kerry's tax plan is seen as anything but conservative in a time of war and fiscal crisis is beyond me.

What if, horror of horrors, Kerry discovers, as George H.W. Bush did, that taxes must increase beyond campaign promises? Perhaps he'll raise taxes for people who make more than $100,000 a year. Alas! People say that they can't afford to vote for Kerry. Our country can't afford to vote against him. With the Congressional Budget Office projecting a 10-year deficit climb of $2.3 trillion, plus $1.9 trillion if the Bush tax cuts are made permanent, the future looks grim. We need a president willing to protect our citizens from poverty as well as terrorism. We need a president willing to ask our civilians as well as our military for sacrifice.

A word to the wise if your taxes go up: "Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn."

LETTERS

Religion should not be legislated

This is in response to Michael DePew's letter to the editor ("Kerry not courageous," DI, Oct. 18).

I think there is a fundamental mistake many people are making in relation to Sen. John Kerry and the potential ramifications of his position on abortion, so I will attempt to make this excruciatingly clear.

It is one thing to be a religious person. It is another thing to be in a position of secular governmental power. It is a third, and highly respectable trait, to distinguish clearly between the two things, and while holding any government position, to understand that your beliefs as a religious person should not affect your practice as a secular official.

By violating the understanding that religion and secular government are two separate entities, a government official can begin to legislate one theology or morality over another. For those of us in America who are not Christian, this very dangerous trend in our government, and potential further implications are truly frightening.

That being said, I have an overwhelming respect for Kerry. If for no other reason, because of how clear he has made it that he will not legislate his faith, my vote goes to Kerry.

Creativity needed for booze problems

The Iowa City City Council faced a serious challenge this week — how to curb irresponsible underage drinking. The fundamental problem is one of responsibility. Encouraging and helping to develop responsibility at all levels in youth should be one of the primary missions of the city as well as the university. You cannot legislate responsibility; it has to be given. When you make people responsible for something, they develop responsibility or they face the consequences.

Enacting a 21-only ordinance does not promote responsibility, it removes it. We cannot encourage students to be responsible if they do not have the opportunities to prove themselves so. There have been some wonderfully creative ideas proposed in the last few weeks in regard to this challenge, including bar passes that are removed upon an alcohol-related violation. While obvious logistical difficulties are present, it is exactly these sorts of ideas the City Council should be examining and deliberating upon, not a counterproductive ordinance. I challenge councilors and the entire community to be creative in finding a solution to this problem.

Democrats ignore progressives

This is in response to an Oct. 18 letter to the editor ("Voting for Nader merely symbolic," DI). While I agree that a vote for Nader is only a symbolic action, a vote for David Cobb on the Green Party ticket is not. If Cobb receives 2 percent of the presidential vote in Iowa, the Iowa Green Party will regain ballot status (we had ballot status from 2001 to 2003). This would make it easier for local candidates such as myself run in, and win, local races.

I would like to ask Tegan Raleigh (who wrote the letter) and others: Assuming Kerry is elected, how will you vote in 2008? He would probably be running in another close race against Rudy Giuliani, Bill Frist, or John McCain. It would seem the same logic would apply in this situation. Why should Kerry listen to you if he can always count on your vote? The Clinton years are a perfect example of how a Democratic administration will ignore progressives. How many more election cycles will we have to go through before we understand that if we want to hold politicians accountable, we must do it where it matters most — at the ballot box?

Cannabis supported by the Bible

A reason to fully legalize cannabis didn't get mentioned in the DI editorial "Pot prohibition equals blowing smoke" (Oct. 6) or in subsequent letters is that it is Biblically correct. Spiritual and religious use of cannabis (or kaneh boshm, before the King James version) by obedient Christians and others exists and should be protected within our freedom of religion. People use cannabis as a sacrament to enhance their relationship with the Spirit of Truth, as described in John 14-16 and 1 John.

Man's right to use cannabis stems from spiritual and religious uses for cannabis as a sacrament to Christ God Our Father, the Ecologician, who is responsible for creating all the seed-bearing plants and saying they were all good on literally the very first page of the Bible. Biblically, it is time to stop caging humans for using cannabis.

Wash your hands, people

With half of the country not being able to get flu shots this winter, please wash your hands as often as you can. I am disgusted when I am in a bathroom on campus and people either don't use soap or, worse yet, just walk out without even going to the sink. So do me a favor: Keep yourself healthy, and do your part to keep others around you healthy.

BY LAYNE GABRIEL
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Dave Attell hits Cedar Rapids on Thursday, but not to get plastered and show off the city on national television.

Attell made himself known with Comedy Central's late-night series "Insomniac," on which he visits towns around the country and world, getting drunk and engaging in all sorts of high jinks.

The show has slowly phased out American cities, but after three and a half years, the series is going strong with hour-long specials overseas.

"We just did one in Germany that should be in November, so we went to Berlin to hang out with the U.S. Army," Attell told The Daily Iowan from his New York home. "We had to cut back on a lot of the U.S. things because it got too out of control with people on the street."

For the American shows, he selected cities where he had performed standup, as he will do at Penguin's Comedy Club in Cedar Rapids. Though "Insomniac" gave Attell a license to live it up, the rigorous schedule took its toll.

"It wears you out, physically," he said. "Doing that show is a lot different from being a comic. When you're a comic, you fly in, do a whole bunch of radio, then you do your shows, and then you go out and get drunk. When I'm on the 'Insomniac' show, it takes longer than one night to shoot a show, but it's a pretty intense thing."

Although Attell and his crew have a few days to film each episode, they're always searching for the perfect segments and places to visit.

"You never really know what's going to happen," he said in his trademark East Coast accent. "I think people think that we get a free rein where we go, but people say no to us, so we have to go with that and find other things to do. Yeah, that gets stressful."

The show has taken Attell to

everywhere from Anchorage to Salt Lake City to Tokyo, where he has hung out drunk, checked out the nightlife, and investigated late-night jobs.

"People always say it was dangerous and scary," he said. "Only in some places, people get dangerous and scary. In Brazil, if you go off the main drag, it's really scary — like Third World scary."

Attell's research staff finds graveyard-shift workers for him to tag along with, including garbage collectors, police officers, factory workers, and movers.

The show's unscripted antics make it one of the plethora of reality-TV shows on the air, but Attell takes the genre into a different realm.

"I was watching 'Wild-On E!' — these people are beautiful people going to beautiful places, and that's not me," he said. "I was the ugly version of that. They made people look really stupid or competitively whorish. Everyone's trying to get on TV. This show — well, toward the end, it got like that — but I don't want people to eat bugs or shit — maybe that made it stand out."

Comedy Central pushed the boundaries, though, when Attell visited Amsterdam and spent time at one of the city's famous cafés.

"That's the one where I smoked pot," he said with a laugh. "The thing is, it's so hypocritical. They're not allowed to show me smoking it, but they'll allow me to exhale it. It's like a Clinton thing."

Viewers are more likely to find him at a stool drinking beer or shots, socializing with the locals.

"I drink a lot," he said. "I drink mostly beers or shots like Jäger or Jameson. I told myself once I'm done shooting, I'd better start taking care of myself. That hasn't really kicked in yet."

The 39-year-old comedian went from working the door at a comedy club to gracing television screens all over the country. Attell has done standup for 17 years, and remains constantly on the go. His tour brings him to Cedar Rapids this weekend for shows on Thursday at 7 and 9:30 p.m. with an afterparty following the final show, and Friday at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. in Bettendorf.

"I don't mind going almost anywhere, especially doing just standup," he said. "That's part of the job, the traveling. I like getting there, but I hate the travel part of it. I go to different places all the time. It's all kind of a blur to me."

Morality meets politics in wartime

THEATER Aunt Dan and Lemon

When: Thursday-Saturday, 8 p.m., Oct. 24, 3 p.m.
Where: Theatre B, UI Theatre Building
Admission: $6 regular admission, $4 UI students, seniors, youth

BY SARA CONRAD
 THE DAILY IOWAN

"The difference between a perfectly decent person and a monster is just a few thoughts," said playwright Wallace Shawn, the author of Aunt Dan and Lemon, a Gallery Series production premiering Thursday.

The eerie words inspired UI graduate student William Barbour to direct the play, which projects the memories of an unhappy woman, Lemon, growing up under the influence of her Aunt Dan.

A story about morality, politics, and the sacrifices people make to believe they are still living the American Dream,

Aunt Dan and Lemon takes the stage less than two weeks before the country goes to the polls.

Set in London during the time of the Vietnam War, the play provokes questions regarding compassion in a world at war. The audience is invited to analyze the memories of Lemon in order to understand her moral position in an at-once civilized and immoral world.

Barbour said the concern and skepticism in the play are similar to present-day controversy surrounding Iraq.

"I wanted to do this play, not to make any specific comments about what is decent and what isn't, but rather to allow the audience to look to their own beliefs and then reconcile those beliefs with the actions of our government," he said.

Although he says he does not intend the play to make any conclusions about decency and morality, he hopes it will raise questions that spark discussion on what people allow to happen in order to "preserve our comfortable way of life."

Barbour has directed several plays at the UI — including Tennessee Williams' Spring Storm, Gertrude Stein's Every Afternoon, Mark Perry's The Donkey Play — and adapted and directed Charles Mee's Trojan Woman: A Love Story and Heiner Müller's Hamlet-machine. He won the Iram Award at this year's Iowa New Play Festival for directing Cristina Pippa's When Cows Fly. He is pursuing a doctorate in collaborative performance.

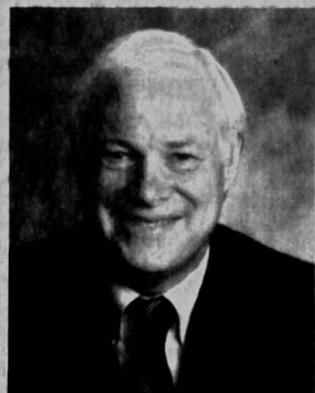

Shawn is famous for his Hollywood gigs, including roles in The Princess Bride, Clueless, and My Dinner With Andre, which he co-wrote. He is also a talented playwright, having garnered a number of Obie Awards, including one for Aunt Dan and Lemon in 1985 and one for the monologue "The Fever," which he performed as a preview in the UI Theatre Building.

The production will run Thursday through Saturday at 8 p.m. and at 3 p.m. on Oct. 24 in Theater B. Tickets will be on sale at the door, one hour before showtime.

UI officials propose more Friday classes

Thursday classes are extremely popular among older students. "The idea of retrieving more Friday classes could be part of the personal-interest aspect in the undergraduate experience," Lopes said.

She has been interested in adding more Friday classes for a number of years. The archetypal 50-minute Monday-Wednesday-Friday classes and 75-minute Tuesday-Thursday classes have existed since she attended the UI in the 1950s.

Under the proposal, the number of 75-minute classes would double, and the total number of classes would be cut in half. Lopes argues that adding more Monday-Thursday classes and Tuesday-Friday classes could benefit undergraduate students.

The committee has yet to formally discuss the option, but some of its members say they will consider its benefits and drawbacks.

P. Barry Butler, a subcommittee member and the dean of the College of Engineering, said typically a proposal that specific would not be detailed in its recommendations. He characterized Lopes' proposal as more of an "operational action."

He said he is willing to listen to her plan.

"Her ideas make sense, and I'll listen, but the idea has little effect on the engineering program, unlike other UI majors," he said. "Engineering students' schedules typically fill up Monday through Friday."

ECONOMY

"The president is trying to address the root causes of the barriers that slow down job growth," Bailey said in a phone interview.

He named health-care costs and problems in securing affordable and reliable energy as a couple of these root causes.

The Kerry-Edwards campaign has criticized Bush's economic plan, citing the administration's record of high deficits and net job loss in the last four years.

"Iowa has lost 28,000 jobs under George Bush," said Colin Van Ostrum, Kerry's Iowa spokesman.

The Massachusetts senator's plan calls for middle-class tax cuts to spur economic growth funded with tax hikes for people earning $200,000 or more per year. He also says he will cut the deficit in half during his first four years.

However, a reputable political fact-checking organization reported that Kerry's numbers don't crunch. According to FactCheck.org, Kerry's proposed tax increases would not cover his almost $900 billion health-care plan.

"He can't cut the deficit based on his spending proposals," Bailey said.

Besides attacking Kerry's economic plan, Bush officials are also promoting the recent turn in the economy.

The chances of a college graduate finding a job have increased in recent years, according to the National Association of Colleges and Employers.

Its annual survey reported that companies expect to hire 13.1 percent more new graduates in 2004-05 than they did in 2003-04.

"This is a good indication that the job market for new college graduates is back on track," the group's director, Marilyn Mackes, said in a September press release.

Employment opportunities had been dropping prior to the fall of 2003, she said in a phone interview.

The survey, which represented data from 199 employers, found that more than half of the businesses were looking to hire.

David Baumgartner, the director of the UI Career Center, said the wax and wane of employment opportunities has been noticeable at the university. This year, the Career Center has been packed with recruiters, he said.

Yet Schultz, who also must work at a bar to get by, even with a $300-a-month unemployment check on top of his job at the pizzeria, still hasn't seen the economic shift. He said that most places are re-hiring employees they laid off in past years.

"I've had more interviews, which is promising, but nothing has led to a job in public relations," he said. "They're going to people who have four to five years of experience."

proposal would discourage visiting faculty members from coming and would limit the number of short-term contracts used to attract academics who help faculty members win grants.

At present, the UI contributes 10 percent to its employees' supplemental retirement plans — known as Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association-College Retirement Equities Funds — while employees contribute 5 percent.

Employees serving the university for fewer than three years could have the school forward their paychecks to their home university to circumvent the proposed policy.

"The $12 million have to come from somewhere," said law Professor Sheldon Kurtz. "It's less bad than other alternatives."

The Faculty Senate was less enthralled with the task force's idea to cut seven of the 207 vacation hours granted to UI employees, unanimously voting against the measure.

The Senate, as an advisory committee, will offer its advice to Skorton, who will make the final call on the task force's recommended budget cuts.

"If the patients don't believe it — you know, they think it's hocus-pocus — it's not going to

Another of the doctor's procedures involves the use of a laser, which looks similar to a handheld supermarket scanner, that uses "light energy" at a "645 nanometers wavelength" to recreate "life energy" or the small bit of light released when cells within the body divide, he said.

Cold-laser therapy and emotional therapy are techniques not currently taught at chiropractic schools, said Felicity Clancy, a spokeswoman for the American Chiropractic Association.

Hammerstrom said he shakes off criticism and accusations of quackery.

to be on the alert for symptoms and signs of it," Poulton said.

Elementary-school-aged children are more prone to contracting the disease than are college students and adults, Wilmoth said.

Whooping cough, formally known as pertussis, is a bacterial respiratory illness marked by harsh spasms of coughing that can persist for several weeks or months.

Often people think they have a bad cold because of the sneezing, coughing, and throat pain, but with pertussis, the "cough gets deeper and deeper each time until the person might feel like they can't breathe," Wilmoth said.

The illness is usually contracted from germs in the air when an infected person sneezes or coughs, he said.

According to the Immunization Action Coalition, most people are immunized against whooping cough as children, but immunity only lasts five to 10 years.

Wilmoth encouraged people to wash their hands and be careful about sharing utensils, but he said the No. 1 mode of prevention is vaccination.

Cases are rising for a number of reasons, he said, but people often mistakenly blame the cold weather.

"Cold weather does not directly cause cases of pertussis. The beginning of school means more people in closer proximity to each other — and because cold weather brings people inside more, it makes it easier to catch," he said.

Outbreaks occurred in 1998 and 2001, when approximately 100 cases were reported.

Wilmoth said Public Health officials are faxing informational memos to local physicians to keep them conscious of the symptoms and treatments. He urges community members to see a physician as soon as possible if they think they have whooping cough, he also urged them to obey their doctors' orders.

"A lot of cases like these wouldn't be an issue if people would follow their doctor's instructions," he said. "Take the amount of medicine they tell you to. Whatever they say, do it."

Rice traded

NFL TRADES

Rice and Holmgren reunite in Seattle

KIRKLAND, Wash. (AP) — The Seattle Seahawks finally got Jerry Rice on Tuesday. The trade that sent the greatest receiver in NFL history from the Oakland Raiders to the Seahawks was formally announced after the league trade deadline passed in the afternoon.

Seattle gave up a seventh-round draft choice in 2005 to acquire the 42-year-old Rice, whom they think can help them despite his age.

The trade reunites Rice, a 13-time Pro Bowl selection in his 20th NFL season, with coach Mike Holmgren. Holmgren was the quarterbacks coach from 1986-88 and offensive coordinator from 1989-91, when Rice was developing into a star with the San Francisco 49ers.

SUSPENDED

Harrison accepts four-year suspension

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Two-time Olympic gold medalist Alvin Harrison accepted a four-year suspension from the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency on Tuesday for drug violations uncovered in the BALCO case.

The 30-year-old sprinter, who won gold medals as part of U.S. relay teams at the 1996 and 2000 Olympics, was charged with violations of anti-doping rules based in part on evidence presented in the Senate in May, then turned over to the doping agency before the Athens Games.

"It's a bittersweet day," said agency Chief Executive Officer Terry Madden. "It's good that another athlete in the BALCO drug conspiracy has been brought to justice. It's a sad day because we now know a conspiracy is out there. Athletes have admitted to it and people are using prohibited substances."

UCONN

Guard returns home to recuperate

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Connecticut freshman guard A.J. Price has been released from the hospital two weeks after being admitted with a brain hemorrhage.

Price has slowly improved since being airlifted to Hartford Hospital on Oct. 4. He was initially taken to a hospital near the campus in Storrs after complaining of a headache and flu-like symptoms.

On Monday, with coach Jim Calhoun standing nearby, Price walked out of the hospital with his parents and headed home to Amityville, N.Y. He hugged his coach, who had been a regular visitor at his bedside.

"I prayed that he got to walk out of the hospital," Calhoun said Tuesday. "Yesterday was a very emotional time."

SIMMONS IS OUT

MARQUES SIMMONS is the fourth Iowa running back to suffer an injury this season

BY NICK RICHARDS
THE DAILY IOWAN

Next man in? Try any man in.

Or whoever is left standing, as Iowa head coach Kirk Ferentz joked at Tuesday's press conference.

No. 25 Iowa added yet another running back to the injured list in Marques Simmons, who started at running back Oct. 16 in Iowa's 33-7 win over Ohio State. He suffered "a significant ankle injury" in the win, said Iowa head coach Kirk Ferentz. He will not play Saturday in Iowa's 11 a.m. tilt Saturday at Penn State, where the Hawkeyes have won in their last three visits. Simmons will miss at least two weeks in a best-case scenario, further crippling an Iowa running attack that is averaging just 96.8 yards per game on the ground, the worst in the Big Ten. He underwent an X-ray Monday, and had an MRI Tuesday to find exactly what the extent of the injury is.

"We're just going to play both [Sam Brownlee and Damian Sims]," Ferentz said. "I don't think we have a set formula yet, but they'll both play in the ball game. We're counting on both guys to do a good job."

Simmons' injury leaves fifth-stringer Brownlee as the starter and the true freshman Sims as his backup. Brownlee ran for 35 yards on 10 carries, while Sims saw his first Big Ten action in last week's win over the Buckeyes, going for 31 yards on nine carries.

"I'm not concerned about Damian," Ferentz said. "I think Damian will perform out there."

In addition to the loss of Simmons, the Hawkeyes added Calvin Davis to the list of walking wounded. Davis, who has been bothered by a knee injury all season, injured his knee against Michigan State. He did not play against the Buckeyes, SEE IOWA FOOTBALL, PAGE 3B

Robinson returns, but role once again a secret

The 'versatile back' will play on Saturday; this is Robinson's first game since the 16-3 loss to Wisconsin

BY DAN LEWERENZ

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Michael Robinson is back, and so are the official secrets.

Four weeks after receiving a concussion in the first quarter of Penn State's 16-3 loss at Wisconsin, the versatile back will return to action on Saturday, when No. 25 Iowa (4-2, 2-1 Big Ten) visits Penn State (2-4, 0-3).

"I think Michael Robinson will play," Nittany Lions coach Joe Paterno said. "He will play in a lot of different spots."

If you want anything more than that, you're asking the wrong guy. Robinson doesn't even appear on Penn State's depth chart this week. And like he did at the beginning of the season, Paterno is being coy about where Robinson could play.

Sox force Game 7 with Schilling gem

CURT SCHILLING pulls a Willis Reed and shuts down the Yankees despite needing ankle surgery

BY RONALD BLUM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Gritting his teeth and grimacing throughout, Curt Schilling willed away the pain in his right ankle, and the Boston Red Sox got the benefit of two reversed calls to move within one win of the most shocking comeback in baseball postseason history.

For the second-straight year, the New York Yankees and the Red Sox will go to Game 7, a winner-take-all battle for the AL pennant between baseball's perennial pinstriped power and a Boston team desperately trying to win the World Series for the first time since 1918.

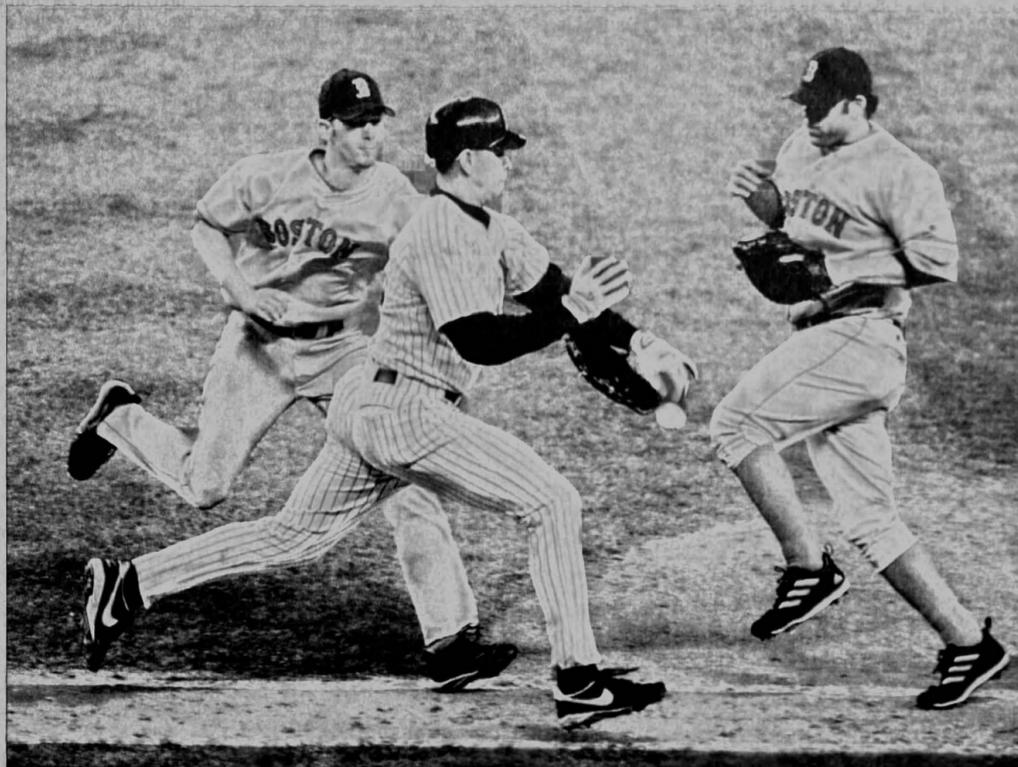

Pitching on a dislocated ankle tendon that forced him out of the opener, Schilling smothered the Yankees by allowing one run over seven innings to lead the Red Sox over New York, 4-2, Tuesday night and pull Boston into a 3-3 tie in an AL Championship Series that was three outs from a sweep just two days earlier.

New York was ahead 3-0 in the series before blowing a ninth-inning lead in Game 4 at Fenway Park and losing in the 12th Sunday night. The Yankees led Game 5 in the eighth Monday, then lost that one, too, another 5-hour marathon that stretched on for 14 innings.

Of the 25 previous major-league teams that fell behind 3-0 in a best-of-seven series, none had forced a Game 7. But back in the Bronx, where they wasted a four-run lead in Game 7 last year, the Red Sox broke through with a four-run fourth against Jon Lieber.

The team trying to reverse The Curse benefited from two big reversed calls.

In the fourth, Mark Bellhorn hit a ball over the left-field wall that was at first ruled a ground-rule double before

Amy Sancetta/Associated Press
New York Yankee Alex Rodriguez knocks the ball out of the glove of Red Sox pitcher Bronson Arroyo (left) as first baseman Doug Mientkiewicz looks on during the eighth inning of the ALCS Game 6 in New York on Tuesday. Rodriguez was initially called safe, but after conferring, the umpires ruled he was out for interference.

it was correctly changed to a three-run homer that made it 4-0. It was Bellhorn's first postseason homer.

Then in the eighth, after Miguel

Cairo's double and Derek Jeter's RBI single off Bronson Arroyo pulled the Yankees to 4-2, Alex Rodriguez hit a ball between the mound and first.

Arroyo picked it up and ran toward first, where just before the base the striding A-Rod slapped the ball away.

A soccer career clouded after injuries

MARGIT VOGELE suffered many injuries and made many sacrifices to play soccer at Iowa

BY BRYAN BAMONTE
THE DAILY IOWAN

Margit Vogele
Iowa soccer player

Margit Vogele has waited for this chance for three years.

Two ankle surgeries and a broken hand have separated her from the field and left her a spectator.

More than three years ago, Margit and her twin sister, Britta Vogele, the goaltender on the Iowa women's soccer team, committed to Iowa.

Although the two first considered choosing different roads, they both made the 1,800-mile journey from California to Iowa City after visiting and falling in love with the town. Everything seemed in place for the two to be a powerful tandem.

And then their plans unraveled.

Unfortunately for Margit Vogele, her soccer future became cloudy after several injuries left her in the trainer's room. She was left with only motivation.

"There have been so many times in the past few years where I've thought that maybe this is not meant to be," she said. "But the more and more I was away from it, the more I realized that I wanted to be out on the field."

Not only did she have to watch her teammates, but she was left without the opportunity to defend her sister, something the two had done since they were little.

"Not playing with my sister for four years was one of the hardest things to deal with," said the senior defender.

Women's golf slices through Razorback Invite

The Iowa women's golf team improved one place in Tuesday's final round at the Lady Razorback Invitational, from 13th to 12th in the 19-team field. Senior Liz Bennett was the low-scoring Hawkeye, just as she has been all season, tying for 12th overall with a 54-hole total of 229.

The tournament was held on the par-72 Pinnacle Golf Course in Rogers, Ark., and before Tuesday, conditions were subpar, causing most scores to be quite a bit above par.

"It was dusty the first day, extremely windy the second day, and the best playing conditions were probably Tuesday," Iowa coach Bobbe Carney said. "[We saw] good play out of Jill Marcum, [who] finished up with a 76 today. That was good play on a tough golf course."

What Carney forgot to mention was Marcum's hole-in-one on the 173-yard par-3 17th. It was the only ace of the tournament, the Hawkeyes' last competition of the fall.

Carney cast any negatives the fall brought in a positive light:

"We certainly had a lot of adversity; things didn't go as planned because we only got one tournament out of Shannon Flemming, Amy [Riepma] has had a bad back all fall, and Karla Murra couldn't make this tournament because she got sick," she said. "But the positive part of that is that we got a lot of experience for young players. In the future, that'll be helpful for us."

Iowa will begin competitive play in the spring on March 4.

Football field too long for ISU offense

BY CHUCK SCHOFFNER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

AMES — For 60 yards, Iowa State can move the football as well as anyone.

The problem, of course, is that the field is 100 yards long.

"We looked like a Big 12 offense between the 20s the last two weeks," coach Dan McCarney said Tuesday.

And like a Pee-Wee League offense inside the 20. The closer the Cyclones get to the goal line, the worse they look.

In 21 trips to the so-called "red zone" this season, Iowa State has scored just seven times — five touchdowns and two field goals. Every other team in the Big 12 has a success rate of more than twice the Cyclones' figure of 33 percent.

In a 19-14 loss at Colorado Oct. 16, Iowa State was 0-for-5 in the red zone.

"I think now it's a mental thing," quarterback Bret Meyer said. "We've just got to get past that. I think we will this week."

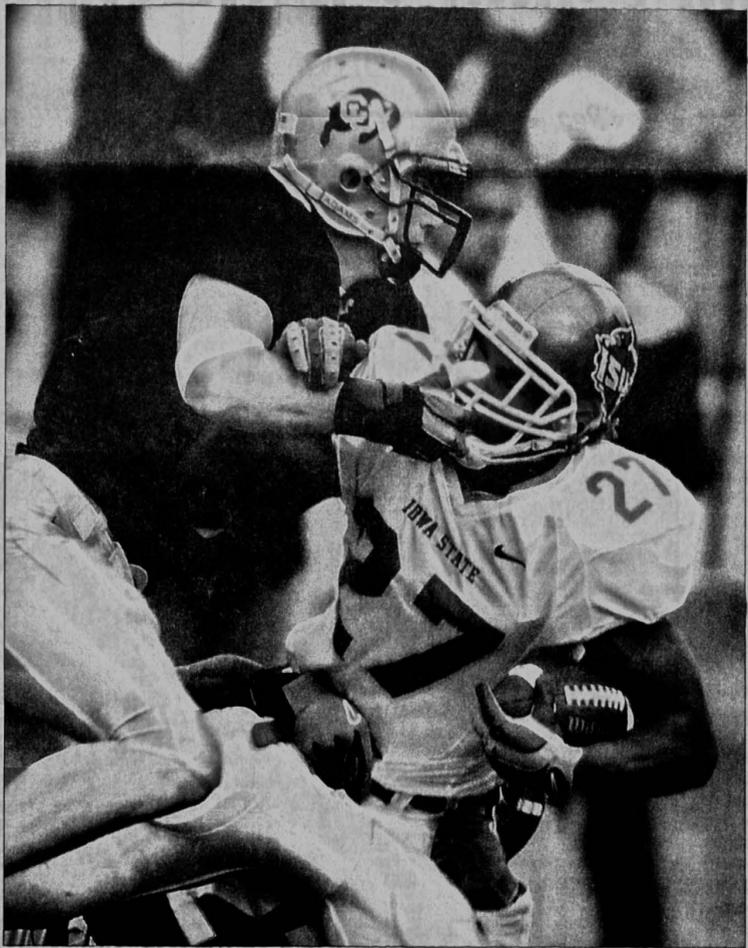

This is a big week for Meyer and his teammates because if they're ever going to win a Big 12 game, this is it. Iowa State (2-4, 0-3 Big 12) plays at Baylor, which is 5-62 in the league since the Big 12 began play in 1996 and has lost its three conference games this season by an average of 27 points.

Iowa State has lost 13-straight Big 12 games and hasn't won a conference game on the road since beating Kansas, 49-7, on Nov. 17, 2001. Lose this one and the rest of the season could look pretty grim.

"Any win would help us out," wide receiver Jon Davis said. "Just the way things going right now, anything good would be good for us."

That would start with getting into the end zone. The offense has scored only two touchdowns in conference play, both on passes from Meyer to Todd Blythe. The feeling is that one close-in TD is all that it would take to get the offense out of its funk.

"I think the first time it happens, I could see maybe a waterfall effect," Meyer said. "We're going to be able to score a lot once we get down there. It's definitely a confidence thing. It's something that can kind of play with your mind, especially with a young offense."

Colorado safety Tom Hubbard (left) is called for facemasking as he pulls down Iowa State running back Stevie Hicks in the first quarter at Folsom Field in Boulder, Colo., on Oct. 16.

"I think we just have to get past that." "It's very frustrating," McCarney said. "If Barney Cotton's got to play tackle and I've got to play guard, we're going to do it. Whatever it takes. We've got to knock it in the end zone, start scoring, stop the nonsense."

Despite two bad outings, Young still the starter

No. 8 Texas will still start quarterback Vince Young after two poor passing games

BY JIM VERTUNO
ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN — Texas coach Mack Brown is sticking with Vince Young as the team's starting quarterback, despite two consecutive poor passing games.

Brown had suggested after the Longhorns' 28-20 win over Missouri that he'd think about whether to bench Young for backup Chance Mock. But he removed that option at his weekly news conference Monday.

"Vince will start," Brown said. No. 8 Texas plays at Texas Tech on Saturday.

The coach said he had wanted to see how Young was feeling after he was knocked out of the game in the second quarter with a bruised sternum. Although Young was cleared to return in the third quarter against Missouri, Brown stuck with Mock, who played the entire second half.

Brown said Young was fine. Together, the two quarterbacks threw for 58 yards in an offense that ranks just 103rd nationally in passing. The Longhorns have been able to compensate for that with a rushing attack that ranks No. 2 and averages 293.5 yards per game behind tailback Cedric Benson.

Part of the reason for sticking with Young is his effect on the rushing attack. "He is such a valuable part of our running game," Brown said. "A big part of Cedric's running success to me comes from [defenses] having to be aware of the ability to make the explosive plays with Vince."

Young ran for 53 yards and one touchdown on five carries against Missouri. He also caught a 48-yard pass from running back Ramonce Taylor.

"I thought he ran Saturday like he ran last year," Brown said. Young rushed for 998 yards and 11 TDs as a freshman but didn't have a scoring run this season until last Saturday. "We're running the ball well enough; I really feel like the passing will improve," Brown said.

Jeter came all the way around to score as the ball bounced down the right-field line. After Boston manager Terry Francona came out to argue, the umpires huddled, discussed the play, then called Rodriguez out for interference and sent Jeter back to first.

Rodriguez raised both hands and put them on his helmet, screaming about the reversal, and the game was held up for 10 minutes while fans tossed debris on the field and Yankees manager Joe Torre argued. Gary Sheffield then fouled out, ending the inning.

After Boston's Orlando Cabrera was ruled safe at first base in the ninth, preventing the Yankees from completing a double play, public-address announcer Bob Sheppard made his second announcement for fans to maintain order. The umpires talked with Kevin Hallinan, the senior vice president of security in the commissioner's office, as Yankees reliever Tanyon Sturtze warmed up.

Helmeted police then came on the field and knelt in foul territory along the stands on both the left- and right-field sides in the top of the ninth.

Schilling, who accepted a trade to the Red Sox last fall for the express purpose of beating the Yankees, took a three-hit shutout into the seventh before allowing Bernie Williams' solo homer on the 91st of his 99 pitches. Arroyo allowed the run in the eighth, and Keith Foulke pitched the ninth.

With the Yankees down to their final strike of the game, Ruben Sierra fouled off a 3-2 pitch, then walked to make it first and second.

With the count 3-2 again, Foulke struck out Tony Clark, sending the Red Sox running out of the dugout for their third straight night of celebration.

After chasing the Yankees all summer and falling short in the AL East race for the seventh-straight season, the wild-card Red Sox caught up to their old rival, an unexpected turn of events given how close Boston was to packing up for the winter just 48 hours earlier.

Knuckleballer Tim Wakefield, who lost Game 7 last year on Aaron Boone's 11th-inning homer, starts for the Red Sox on Wednesday night, most likely against Kevin Brown or Javier Vazquez.

While the Yankees are trying for their seventh AL pennant in nine seasons under Torre and record 40th overall, the Red Sox are attempting to reach the World Series for the first time since 1986.

From the start on a cold night with an intermittent misty rain, nothing went right for the Yankees. Jorge Posada's deep drive to right was held up by the wind in the second, Bernie Williams just hooked a ball foul with two runners on in the fourth.

While the Red Sox looked loose, especially after the initial call of a double on Bellhorn's ball was reversed, the Yankees looked tight, overswinging for the second-straight night and never testing Schilling's ankle with a bunt on the slick grass.

and he underwent season-ending surgery on the knee Tuesday afternoon for a patella injury. He will miss two to three months and will not be available for a bowl game.

"It's a shame anytime a guy gets hurt," Ferentz said. "He certainly was growing and doing a nice job for us. He's worked real hard to try to come back, but it wasn't in the cards."

The Iowa offense will have to perform on a level similar to the one it achieved against the Buckeyes. Despite a 2-4 record, the Nittany Lions have one of the top defenses in the Big Ten, ranking fourth in the conference in total defense, giving up just 305.5 yards per game. It is giving up just 16 points per contest, third in the conference.

"They've got athletes running around, and they've got a good scheme," Iowa quarterback Drew Tate said. "They'll bring guys, drop guys, and they do a good job of disguising things. They're kind of like Michigan with the athletes they have out there."

While the Nittany Lions have been stout defensively, they have struggled offensively. In conference games, Penn State is averaging just 36.3 yards per game on the ground and 7.7 points per game, both last in the conference. The Lions do have viable threats in senior quarterback Zach Mills, who torched the Hawkeyes for 399 yards, a Penn State record, and four touchdowns in Iowa's 42-35 win in 2002, and sophomore running back Tony Hunt, who is averaging 71.5 yards per game and has scored four touchdowns this season.

"Obviously, offensively they don't have it clicking quite yet, but they can get it going," linebacker Chad Greenway said.

Injury updates:

While the Hawkeyes lost Simmons and Davis for extended periods of time, they received positive injury news on Sean Considine, Ben Gates, and Mike Humpal. All three are close to returning to action, and while they might not play this week, the trio is close to returning.

"They are all working back, but we won't be sure on whether any of the three will play this week," Ferentz said. "I think they'll have a chance. We'll be working them on a limited basis today, and just see where things go from there. We'll know more on that as the week goes on."

Robinson starts Saturday vs. Iowa

PENN STATE

He could play just about anywhere. Robinson came to Penn State as a quarterback, and has maintained all along that that's the position he wants to play. In fact, Robinson was playing quarterback — subbing for the already-injured Zack Mills — when he took a shot to the head on a Wisconsin blitz.

But Robinson started that game the same place he's started every game this season, at wide receiver. Last year, he started much of the season at tailback. As a freshman, he got a start at fullback.

That's why Paterno is keeping Robinson under wraps. Arguably Penn State's best player — one Paterno often describes as one of the best football players in the country — Robinson could still play any or all of those positions. And the more Robinson keeps Iowa guessing, the better chance the Nittany Lions will have.

"We are going to use him everywhere we can to win the game," Paterno said. "It would be foolish for me to tell you where we are going to play him, how we are going to play him, and what we are going to do with him, but he is going to be in the football game."

"We are going to try to get the most we can out of him based on what we expect from Iowa. That may sound like I am being evasive, but that is exactly what we are going to do."

Vogele healthy and playing soccer

VOGELE

However, for Margit Vogele, the uncertainty has since departed, and she is finally healthy and out there in front of her sister, trying to ward off potential goal-scorers.

"I give her a lot of credit," said Iowa coach Carla Baker. "I think it really shows her true character and the type of person she is, because she always wanted to play with her sister, and I think that was her motivation."

Margit Vogele knew the return would not mean instant glory — she would walk onto the field during a rebuilding process, and join a team with 13 freshmen. Not much of a concern for someone who didn't play for three years.

"I'm just having a great time being out there able to play soccer," she said. "I take every game and every practice now as if it could be my last."

It will be soon enough as the season winds down. All too soon for the senior from Corona Del Mar, Calif., who is still adapting to the college game — her coach still refers to Margit Vogele as a "freshman" as far as experience.

However, the senior has earned her time and is grateful for the chance to play in the back with her sister.

"I just want to have the best time with her that I can the rest of the way," Margit said. "I know we're not winning, but I just want her to have the best time."

That's humble for someone who has suffered ill fate since signing with the Hawkeyes. She credits her sister with helping her and being the sole reason for her having this chance.

"Although we didn't plan on coming here together, I wouldn't change it for anything," she said. "If we weren't playing soccer together, I probably wouldn't still be playing at all."

Now, after three years of what-ifs, she is out there backing her sister where she belongs.

"One season playing with her has been more than worth it," she said.

Pretty special.

Astros pick Munro to pitch Game 6

BY BEN WALKER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ST. LOUIS — Roger Clemens can relax. For now, Pete Munro is the Houston Astros' pick to pitch them into the World Series.

Ahead 3-2 in the NL championship series, manager Phil Garner studied it: the Rocket on three days' rest vs. a journeyman hit hard last week. On the team flight to St. Louis, Munro was told he would start Game 6 Wednesday against the Cardinals.

"I guess I was kind of overwhelmed," Munro said before Tuesday's workout at Busch Stadium. "I'm sure that they'd rather face me than Roger. I mean, I'd rather face me than Roger."

Instead, Clemens will be held back for a possible Game 7. Or maybe a start in the World Series opener.

"There are going to be a lot of people saying do the opposite, start Roger," Garner said. "But what I feel in my gut is what I have to do."

Garner could have lined up Clemens and Roy Oswalt to face the Cardinals, bringing both back early in hopes of putting Houston into its first World Series.

Auburn moves from turmoil to triumph

A team that lost three star players and a coach to the NFL are holding their own a year later

BY JOHN ZENOR
ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUBURN, Ala. — Auburn bungled an attempt to oust its coach, and three of its stars nearly left early for the NFL.

Almost a year later, the Tigers are unbeaten. And coach Tommy Tuberville and top players Carnell Williams, Ronnie Brown, and Carlos Rogers are the main reasons No. 3 Auburn (7-0) is in the running for the national championship.

"Everybody wants to say coach has got to be laughing," Tuberville said. "I've been in this business 29 years. What happened last year, I've forgotten about. I'm glad it's worked out the way it did."

Couldn't have worked out much better so far.

Auburn has been the Southeastern Conference's best team this season, finally living up to the hype and acclaim that overwhelmed the Tigers in 2003.

Last year's free-fall from a preseason No. 6 ranking has been replaced by a steady, unrelenting climb up the rankings.

That woefully inconsistent offense? It's leading the league.

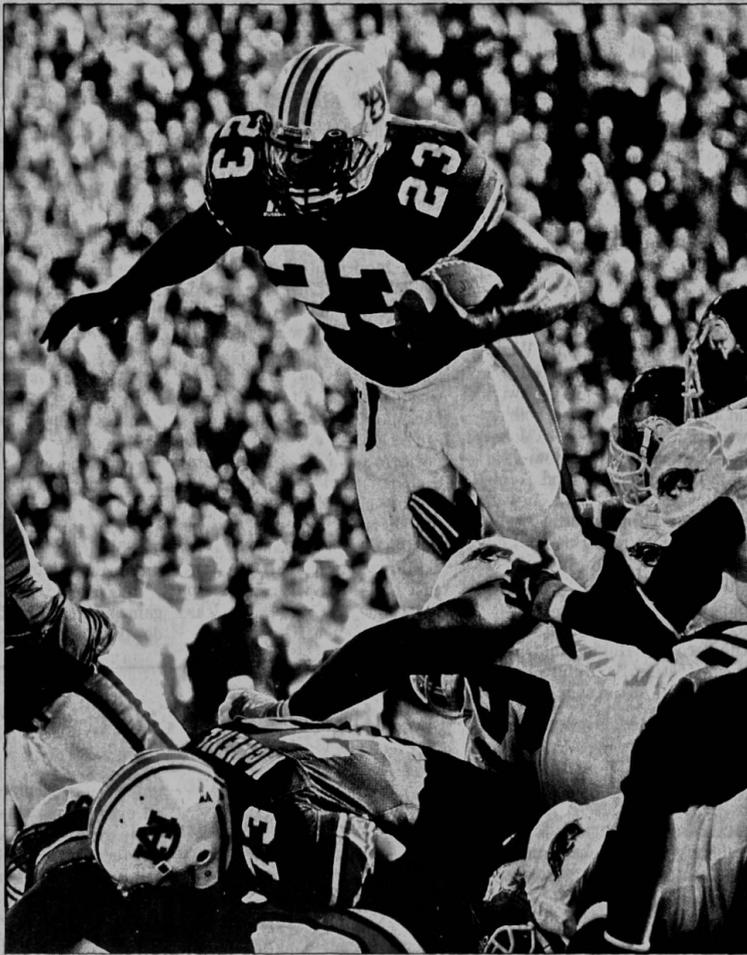

The defense that lost three starting linemen and two All-SEC linebackers? It has allowed the second fewest points in the nation, just nine per game, and is the only Division I-A team that hasn't allowed a rushing touchdown.

And with the Tigers fourth in this week's first Bowl Championship Series standings, Tuberville is more likely to get a lifetime contract than to lose his job.

Then-interim President William Walker was forced to retain Tuberville after an expedition he led to interview Louisville's Bobby Petrino two days before last year's Alabama game became public, angering Auburn fans and alumni.

The university's administration had egg on its face. The football team still had its coach. And the Tigers have won nine straight since Walker & Co. boarded the plane to Kentucky.

"We know about everything that went down with our coach last year, and we know how people downed us last year because they were expecting more," receiver Courtney Taylor said. "We just don't want to be in that position anymore."

Auburn's Ronnie Brown (23) dives on a 1-yard touchdown run in the second quarter against Arkansas during their game at Jordan-Hare Stadium in Auburn, Ala., on Oct. 16. Auburn has been the Southeastern Conference's best team this season.

"I feel like we were at the bottom of the barrel, and now we're just trying to climb our way out."

The Tigers have risen to the occasion this season, including a 34-10 rout at Tennessee.

They've only been challenged once, but answered with a gutsy game-winning drive against LSU. Leading that drive was Jason Campbell, a formerly maligned quarterback whose turnaround has been about as dramatic as Auburn's.

Thriving in a West Coast system implemented by new offensive coordinator Al Borges, Campbell is the nation's fourth-rated passer with 13 touchdown passes, only two interceptions and a 67.6 percent completion rate.

Smith likely to start at QB, but won't get chance to talk about it

BY RUSTY MILLER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLUMBUS, Ohio — His team mired in a three-game losing streak, Ohio State coach Jim Tressel is not planning wholesale changes in his lineup, his offensive play-calling or his defensive staff's approach.

No, the first step in turning the Buckeyes around is keeping most of them away from the media.

That includes quarterback Troy Smith, who will likely start his first game against Indiana on Saturday in place of the injured Justin Zwick.

"I thought Troy did some good things," Tressel said Tuesday, referring to Smith's mop-up duty in last Saturday's 33-7 loss at Iowa. "Now, I've always wanted to be a person who deals with reality. That was Iowa's second [-team] defense. They were playing a vanilla defense."

It was the second time Tressel had qualified his faint praise for Smith by saying the quarterback had succeeded against substitutes. But even that is saying something, considering Ohio State (3-3) ranks 93rd of the 117 Division I-A teams in scoring points.

"I thought there were some things that he did that we can't have on an everyday basis," Tressel said of Smith.

After Zwick threw a costly interception late in the first half and then fumbled the ball away on the Buckeyes' first possession of the second half, Smith was inserted into the lineup. He had difficulty moving the team before completing all three of his passes for 60 yards in addition to running for a 13-yard gain to account for all of the yards in the Buckeyes' only scoring drive.

For the second time in three weeks, Tressel also compared Zwick to Green Bay Packers star Brett Favre. He said Zwick's interception came as a result of trying to throw a pass into double-coverage to jump-start the offense.

"If you looked at Brett Favre's interceptions, you'd probably find the same thing," Tressel said.

Two weeks ago, Tressel threw Zwick's name in with those of Favre, Joe Montana, and John Elway in a lengthy discourse on quarterbacks who "make things happen."

Zwick is completing 50.6 percent of his passes with six interceptions and five touchdown passes. Smith has completed 59 percent of his passes for two touchdowns without an interception.

The no-interview policy is a new wrinkle for Ohio State, which usually permits reporters to speak to most starters and some backups each Tuesday.

Tressel said his seniors came to him and asked him if they could show their leadership by meeting with reporters instead of the underclassmen.

Steve Snapp the Ohio State associate athletic director for communications said the decision was Tressel's in conjunction with the captains.

Unlike most previous weeks, no players joined Tressel at his weekly news conference. Tressel said Tuesday was a busy day for classwork.

Tressel denied that the decision to not allow Smith to talk to reporters had anything to do with Smith's critical comments about the coaching staff three weeks ago. Smith threw a touchdown pass in the Buckeyes' opener, then saw limited action the following week before being kept on the sidelines for three games in a row.

"Everything is not given to every player all the time," Smith said at the time. "Some players have to work hard. Obviously, I'm one of them."

Zwick completed 6-of-14 passes for 74 yards with one interception against Iowa before going to the sidelines. He said he hurt the shoulder early in the game but that it stiffened up at halftime.

Asked to describe how severe Zwick's injury is, Tressel said, "Can I or will I? I mean, no, I won't, but I'm not sure medically I could anyway."

"Right now, Justin is on a day-to-day situation," Tressel said. "He won't throw today, then we'll evaluate it as we go."

Ohio State is 0-3 in the Big Ten for only the second time since 1943.

Vols' Johnson suspended for firing gun

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee starting safety Brandon Johnson was suspended indefinitely because he fired a gun into the air near campus.

Johnson, a junior from Tulsa, Okla., was arrested early Monday and charged with felony reckless endangerment after shooting the gun outside the apartment of tailback Cedric Houston, according to a police report.

Junior defensive back Chris Heath, who was in school on a medical scholarship but not playing, was charged with misdemeanor unlawful carrying of a firearm. Heath was permanently dismissed from the team.

Coach Phillip Fulmer disciplined both players Monday.

Johnson had two interceptions in a 21-17 victory on Oct. 16 over Mississippi. He is not expected to play Saturday when Tennessee hosts Alabama.

Panthers in shambles

BY JENNA FRYER

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Julius Peppers cocked his head back and studied the schedule hanging in the Carolina Panthers' locker room. After examining what opponents the Panthers have to face, Peppers declared: "We're going to still go to the playoffs. I feel in my heart we are going to still make it." Uh, Julius, do you realize just how bad your team is playing?

Eight months removed from the first Super Bowl in franchise history, the Panthers are a mess.

Injuries to star players have left them thin at critical positions, questionable front-office decisions have made them vulnerable on the offensive line, and arrogance has caused the defense to become complacent.

The result is a 1-4 start that has quarterback Jake Delhomme blaming himself while few other players seem open to accepting responsibility.

The injuries started late in the fourth quarter of the season-opening loss to Green Bay.

Wide receiver Steve Smith broke his leg, putting the Panthers' lone game-breaker on the sideline. Running back Stephen Davis needed knee surgery four days later to repair torn cartilage.

Then kick returner Rod Smart injured his knee, and backup running back DeShaun Foster broke his collarbone. All-Pro defensive tackle Kris Jenkins was lost for the season last week with a shoulder injury, and linebacker Mark Fields has missed three games with a back injury.

Peppers said the revolving-door roster threw off the Panthers.

"It ain't talent, it ain't effort — the chemistry just ain't there. ... One week we do something great and the next week we look like the Bad News Bears," he said. "Last year, we had it. Some guys could look at each other and not say anything and still know what each other was going to do."

Miles Kennedy/Associated Press

Carolina quarterback Jake Delhomme (17) is sacked by Philadelphia Eagle Ike Reese (58) during the first half on Sunday in Philadelphia. Eight months removed from the first Super Bowl in franchise history, the Panthers are a mess.

"Now we got new guys in there that we ain't played with, and that's not an excuse, but we've got to work through it. You can't coach it."

But the problems actually started long before Smith crumpled to the ground with a broken left leg.

Rewind to earlier in that game, and Ahman Green was running all over a defense that supposedly was tough on the run. Green gained 119 yards, and Carolina's D hasn't been the same. The low point was two weeks ago in Denver, when unheralded fullback Ruben Droughns ran for 193 yards against the reigning NFC champions.

Even then, the Panthers tried to maintain their swagger, with safety Mike Minter saying, "It's all correctable."

Just not in time for Sunday's 30-8 drubbing in Philadelphia, a rematch of last year's conference title game.

Although the defense played fairly well, the offense was a mess.

But that was always to be expected.

A series of suspect offseason moves created a mediocre offensive line. Todd Steussie was released, Kevin Donnalley retired, and Geno James was allowed to leave via free agency. The Panthers wrongly believed the players they tabbed as replacements would be sufficient.

Bruce Nelson, a projected starter at guard this year, had hip surgery, and Adam Meadows, signed to be the starter at right tackle, unexpectedly retired.

Only two players from last year are back on the line, and one of them, Jordan Gross, was moved from right to left tackle.

The rest of the line has done a poor job of protecting Delhomme, particularly Sunday. Jevon Kearse stormed through for a vicious hit that had Delhomme seeing stars and the Eagles seeing all his passes before Carolina's receivers did.

Delhomme threw four interceptions after the hit but was stoic.

"You can't blame those guys up front," he said. "We just didn't get it done. It seems like it's the same old song and dance for four out of the five games this year."

Bengals get prime-time play on Oct. 25

The Cincinnati team takes on the Denver Broncos in their first NFL Monday night game since 1992

BY JOE KAY

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — They've waited a dozen years for the chance to look into the camera, recite their name and alma mater, then strut their stuff for a national audience on Monday night. Now that the opportunity is here, the Bengals would rather hide in a hole.

A 1-4 start has left the NFL's most forlorn franchise on familiar ground. Fans feel betrayed and players feel besieged heading into that long-awaited night in the national spotlight against the Denver Broncos (5-1).

"They can't worry about what's written about them or said about them," said coach Marvin Lewis, who is trying to rally his downtrodden team by publicly defending it. "And right now, they're going to be attacked — somewhat deservedly so. We've earned it. The only way we're going to get out of it is to go and fix it."

That's the problem. There's no quick fix.

The Bengals knew they'd have a tough time at the start of the season because their defense is under construction, quarterback Carson Palmer is learning, and the schedule is daunting. A series of injuries forced rookies to play long before they were ready, further complicating matters.

Still, no one expected things to be this bad heading into the Bengals' first Monday night appearance since 1992.

"In training camp, if you would have asked us to write down where we'd be at this point, I wouldn't have said 1-4," offensive lineman Eric Steinbach said.

It's not just how much they're losing; it's how they're losing.

Before a game against rival Cleveland last Sunday, receiver Chad Johnson sent bottles of antacid to the Browns' four defensive backs with a handwritten warning that they'd get sick to their stomachs trying to cover him.

During warm-ups, Johnson repeated his prediction live on a nationally televised pregame show. Cornerback Reggie Myles joined him and gloated that the Browns would need a headache remedy as well once the Bengals got done with them.

It was a prescription for embarrassment.

Johnson dropped three passes, and Myles was part of a defense that gave up 449 yards and four touchdown passes in Cleveland's emphatic 34-17 victory. The lasting image was a banner referring to Johnson as the "Head Bungle."

"I don't know what the answer is," a disheartened Johnson said. "There is no answer."

Bucs trade McCardell to Chargers

BY FRED GOODALL
ASSOCIATED PRESS

TAMPA, Fla. — Disgruntled Tampa Bay holdout Keenan McCardell got what he wanted Tuesday when the Buccaneers traded him to the San Diego Chargers for two picks in next year's NFL draft.

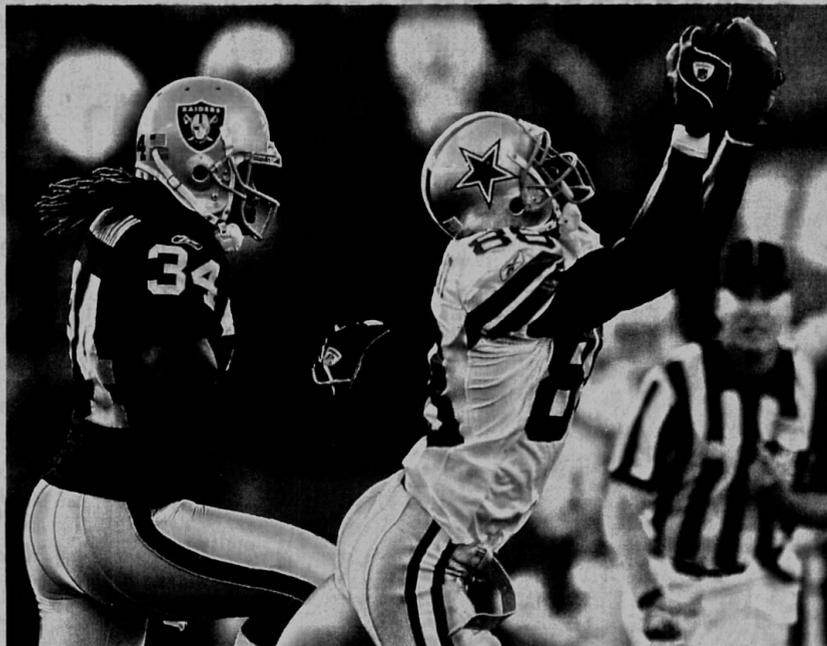

The 34-year-old wide receiver stayed away from training camp and vowed to sit out the entire season if the Bucs did not give him a substantial raise over the $2.5 million he was scheduled to earn under a contract that also would have paid him $2.75 million in 2005.

The deal with the Chargers, who gave up third- and sixth-round draft picks in 2005, came just over a week after McCardell flew to Tampa from his home in Houston to meet with coach Jon Gruden in an unsuccessful bid to end the stalemate.

The trade came two days after San Diego's leading wide receiver, Reche Caldwell, hurt his right knee in a 21-20 loss at Atlanta. Coach Marty Schottenheimer declined to provide an update on the severity of Caldwell's injury on Monday, other than to say it was unlikely he'll play at Carolina on Oct. 25.

Caldwell is San Diego's leading receiver, with 18 catches for 310 yards — an average of 17.2 yards — and three scores. Tight end Antonio Gates leads the team with 37 catches for 422 yards and three scores.

McCardell signed with Tampa Bay as a free agent in 2002 and capped his first season in Gruden's offense by catching two touchdown passes in the Bucs' Super Bowl victory over the Oakland Raiders.

Cowboy receiver Antonio Bryant (right) makes a catch in front of Oakland safety Ray Buchanan in the first half on Aug. 21. Bryant was traded from the Cowboys to the Cleveland Browns on Tuesday for Quincy Morgan.

He was selected to the Pro Bowl in 2003, finishing with 84 receptions for 1,174 yards and scoring a career-high eight TDs.

McCardell requested a trade after Bucs general manager Bruce Allen refused to budge on the team's stance that the former Cleveland and Jacksonville receiver had two years remaining on his contract and was expected to honor those terms.

McCardell, one of just 17 players with more than 700 career receptions, was seeking a deal that would pay him the average for No. 1 receivers — about $4.4 million.

Browns, Cowboys Swap Promising Receivers

CLEVELAND (AP) — Antonio Bryant was traded from the Dallas Cowboys to the Cleveland Browns on Tuesday for Quincy Morgan.

The deal will give the two receivers, both former second-round picks who have shown flashes of being NFL stars, fresh starts.

Bryant landed in coach Bill Parcells' doghouse during a workout in June, when he threw a sweaty jersey at Parcells' face because he was upset about his status behind Keyshawn Johnson and Terry Glenn. Bryant was removed by security from the practice and didn't rejoin the team until training camp.

He has 16 catches for 266 yards this season, and had just one for 22 yards in a loss to Pittsburgh last Sunday.

Bryant caught 44 passes for 733 yards and six touchdowns and started 15 games as a rookie in 2002, before Parcells arrived. Last season, Bryant had 39 catches for 559 yards and two TDs while starting five games.

Morgan caught three touchdown passes this season from Jeff Garcia, but was disappointed with his reduced role over the last 1 1/2 seasons.

Edwards helps motivate undefeated Jets

Coach Edwards uses his experience as a player to jumpstart his team to another win

BY ANDREA ADELSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. — The New York Jets have never won six-straight games to begin a season. Coach Herman Edwards has, and he already used the experience as extra motivation for his team.

Edwards was a defensive back on the Eagles team that started 6-0 in 1981. With the prospect of starting 5-0 for the first time in Philadelphia, Edwards told the Jets during a meeting how special it was to have made history in Philadelphia.

"I said, 'Hey, I'm still one of those guys on the Eagles team,'" Edwards recalled. "The Eagles have all these great teams. I was a part of that team. ... You have to appreciate some of the things you do along the way."

He made sure the Jets appreciated their 22-14 victory over the 49ers on Sunday that made franchise history, even though their five victories have come at the expense of teams with a combined 6-22 record.

Just winning has been huge for the Jets, who struggled through slow starts in its first three years under Edwards and finished 6-10 a year ago. In 2003, victory No. 5 came Dec. 1 on Monday night against Tennessee.

"It was so hard to win five games last year, and all of a sudden, we have five under our belt already," tight end Anthony Becht said after the game. "We have a lot of guys who have been struggling, and fighting, and been here a long time. I'm just happy for everybody on the team."

Edwards set a goal for the Jets to be 5-0 before the season even started. Rookie linebacker Jonathan Vilma remembered hearing about it when he got to the Jets facilities in May. When asked why he chose that goal, Edwards got tightlipped.

"It was one of the goals we had set," Edwards said. "They accomplished it."

Getting to 6-0 will be the toughest task of all. On Oct. 24, the Jets will play at New England, which has won a league-record 20-straight games. Edwards already is playing down the matchup, saying, "This is not the game of all games."

But defensive coordinator Donnie Henderson recognizes the tall task awaiting New York.

"It's a little bit like a playoff game," Henderson said. "They're going to get a lot of attention. There's going to be a lot of people around here. Expectations are going to be high. You're going against a team that has won 20 straight. That's big. How are they going to handle that?"

HECKLING DANCE MARATHON HERKY

— by Josh Bald

- Hey, nice shoe.
- Where's the other one, in your mouth? Snap!
- Who are you supposed to be, Invisible Herky, 'cuz I don't see nothin'. You're like a basketball player in class — nobody can see you.

• What kind of role model do you think you are, partying with some drunk guys and passing out in the middle of Jefferson Street?

• I told you you'd get your ass kicked someday for pushing that Dance Marathon crap on everyone.

• Damn Herk, you're more fragile than a Hawkeye running back. Your pedestal is more empty than Carver during a volleyball game.

• What happened here, did some Crips come by and rough you up for wearing your do-rag crooked?

• What's the matter, getting too cold for you, Herk? Time to fly south?

“This is not my everyday car. It's my most expensive car, and I'm the only person silly enough to put 24-inch "Superman" wheels on a $300,000 Phantom.”
