Two local businesses hit in robberies

Police won't connect the two, but they note some similarities

BY SEUNG MIN KIM
THE DAILY IOWAN

Robbers struck two Iowa City businesses roughly an hour apart Thursday morning, fleeing each location with an undisclosed amount of cash and leaving one employee with minor injuries from being struck in the head with a bottle. Police have not made an official connection between the pre-noon holdups, but Iowa City police Sgt. Brian Krei said authorities have noted similarities in the clothing and description of suspects in the robberies. The first robbery occurred about 10:23 a.m., when police responded to an alarm at El Paso, 609 Hollywood Blvd., where a woman told police two robbers had just fled on foot. The lone employee at El Paso during the incident was treated on site by ambulance personnel. Police describe the first suspect in the El Paso holdup as a heavy-set black male, wearing a gray hooded sweatshirt and armed with a black handgun. The second man is a thin black male between 5-10 and 6 feet tall, dressed in a green shirt and black pants.

County sees spike in young registrants

BY JANE SLUSARK
THE DAILY IOWAN

Johnson County has seen a 30 percent surge in voter registration among young adults since 2000, but local election experts say their effect on the election's outcome will depend on whether they actually show up to the polls — something they haven't done in prior elections.

"In theory, it should have a big effect; in practice, we don't know," said David Redlawsk, a UI assistant political-science professor. "I don't know if [students] registered because they were intending to vote or because they were annoyed."

Voting drives, targeting students and young adults, have swept Iowa City and the UI campus this fall in a massive attempt to motivate the generation to take a more active role in the election.

"For so long, young people have been apathetic, and voter registration has decreased in every presidential election since 1971," said Nick Rugen, a campus organizer for the New Voters Project. "Let's make politicians pay attention to us."

The New Voters Project is nonpartisan, and it sends approximately 40 volunteers to canvass the campus. They registered more than 4,500 people on campus; more than a half a million have been registered nationwide by the project.

Two-thirds of the people who have registered to vote in Johnson County since June 1 are 18- to 24-year-olds. The Johnson County Auditor's Office is showing a record number of 18- to 24-year-olds — 92 percent — have registered to vote.

Vice-presidential candidate John Edwards revs up supporters at a rally in Hubbard Park on Thursday evening.

The VP hopeful says a Democratic administration would help with rising tuition

BY NICK PETERSEN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Amid a crowd of sign-wielding supporters in Hubbard Park on Thursday, Democratic vice-presidential candidate John Edwards vowed to shrink the threat of nuclear weapons across the globe.

"We are going to aggressively make sure this country is safe and reject these politics of fear, which George Bush has not," the North Carolina senator said.

The vice-presidential candidate famous for his ear-to-ear grin swept through the basics of his and John Kerry's platform for the reported 5,000 in attendance, leaving time in his 20-minute speech to stress the importance of getting out college-age voters to swing the election in favor of the Democrats.

At one point, he beckoned UI freshman Jessica Mangler onto the stage to emphasize this point. She said she had talked to 74 people about the opportunity to vote early at the IMU this week.

Mangler, who is interning with the Iowa Democratic Party, said she spends upwards of 20 hours per week campaigning for the Democratic duo because she is concerned about the state of the nation.

Locals split on defense strategies

BY JANE SLUSARK
THE DAILY IOWAN

Each morning Jody Anderson wakes up, flips on a news station, and prays not to hear that her daughter is dead.

"There is not a day we don't think about her," Anderson said. "I'm glued to CNN. When she was a college student, you just kind of hoped she was safe and having a good time. Now, there is a constant fear. You live to hear from her."

UI sophomore Lyndsey Anderson was deployed with the National Guard on Dec. 1, 2003, and she is stationed in Al Taji, 12 miles north of Baghdad. Jody Anderson said that when her daughter recited her oath to the National Guard to serve under the command of President Bush, she was also given the impression she would not be forced to pull out of the university.

"She was told if she was a college student, she wouldn't be deployed,"

Jody Anderson said. "I didn't realize a National Guard member would be fighting a foreign war. I feel sometimes we were deceived."

As a result, Jody Anderson worries about the safety of her daughter and the actions of the president. Sen. John Kerry offers something "new and fresh," but she doesn't believe he would be able to immediately pull out troops, either.

Snyder says he was blackmailed about footage with ethnic slur

BY ALEX LANG
THE DAILY IOWAN

Republican Johnson County sheriff candidate Steve Snyder said on Thursday that he was "blackmailed" by a cameraman who had taped one of his campaign commercials and leaked footage of him making an ethnic slur to the press.

Apologizing for comments in which he used the word "nigger" to describe a black horse, Snyder simultaneously called the leak's timing "odd" and insisted he is not a racist. The DVD, recorded several months ago but revealed only Thursday by a local newspaper, was the latest twist in an already nasty race for the county's top law-enforcement office.

In an interview, Snyder said his former cameraman, Iowa City resident Tim Ovel, had warned him he might use the statement against him.

"It is one more smear," he said. "It's one more week, one more smear. What will we see next week?"

Silent language a big hit at UI

The ASL program is celebrating its 10th year

BY HEATHER LOEB
THE DAILY IOWAN

Imagine a class with silent lectures and tests without pencils, where words are seen — not spoken — and students use their hands to discuss weekend plans. The unusual course caught Jennifer Ruppert off-guard her first day, but the nervousness quickly vanished as the recent UI alumna settled into American Sign Language 1.

"I could not understand a word of what they were saying as they were signing," she said of her first sign-language experience.

Eventually, she not only learned the language, she fell in love with it — a phenomenon echoed by several students in the UI American Sign Language program. The program, which grew from a handful of sign-language classes in the late-70s, will celebrate its 10th anniversary today with several speakers and a deaf storyteller, beginning at 3 p.m. in 315 Phillips Hall.

Today, the university offers several sections of ASL 1 through 4, as well as numerous upper-level courses, said Kimela Nelson, the program coordinator. The department also offers an interdisciplinary certificate in ASL and Deaf Studies. In the 2003-04 school year, 468 students participated in the ASL program, compared with 44 a decade ago. Nelson estimated that the program only meets about one-third of the student demand for sign-language instruction.

Enrollment is high, but numbers are only one part of the story. The true evidence of ASL's popularity comes from the current and past students whose experiences in the program have shaped their perspectives on culture, language, and, in some cases, their future careers.

Ruppert was the first person to receive a certificate in ASL and Deaf Studies from the university. Now a teacher for deaf and hard-of-hearing students in The Woodlands, Texas, she didn't know the effect ASL would have on her when she signed up her freshman year to satisfy the UI's foreign-language requirement.

"If it was not for my ASL 1 class, I do not know how I would have made it through my first semester of college," she said. "ASL was a motivation to get up and go to campus every morning."

Other students said they've already become fascinated with the language less than one semester into their studies.

"Sign language was the first course I've actually wanted to take," said UI sophomore Justin Piasecki, a film major in ASL 1.

Others said the ASL program has helped bridge the gap between the hearing and deaf cultures.

"The program has helped me to understand the dynamic relationship between the hearing people and deaf people," said Amy Kurz, a deaf UI student who will graduate in December.

Nelson said more people are becoming aware of ASL's status as a true language.

"ASL has grammar, syntax, a culture," she said. "People's attitudes have changed, and they're more respectful now."

Homeland security concerns in the land of corn

BY JIM BUTTS
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa, famous for its corn and cattle, would not appear to be much of a terrorist target.

But that hasn't stopped local and state officials from preparing for the worst, just in case. Nor has it kept national-security regulations, such as the Patriot Act, from affecting local residents or stopped Iowa voters from making homeland security a top concern in the coming presidential election.

"Just because we don't have the high visibility of Chicago, New York, or LA, that doesn't mean there isn't a threat," said David Miller, the administrator for the Iowa Department of Homeland Security and Emergency Management.

Mary Gilchrist, the director of the UI Hygienic Laboratory, said that under the Bush administration, the lab has received increased funding and responsibility to deal with the chemical and biological terrorism. Still, she said, it "was impossible to tell" which candidate would better protect Iowans for the next four years.

Iowa City Fire Chief Andrew Rocca, like Miller, Gilchrist, and other government officials, hesitated to say which presidential candidate would better protect residents in Johnson County. He did say he's found a "gap" in coordination between local and federal homeland-security agencies under President Bush.

"I've not seen much by way of training or implementation of training at the local level," he said. "All those things equate to unfunded federal mandates."

Besides protecting Iowa from terrorists, some locals worry about protecting Iowans' civil rights.

For instance, many local librarians are "incredibly irate" about the Patriot Act because it allows the FBI to monitor libraries, said Larry Woods, the director of information systems and technical services at the UI Main Library. Although most librarians are opposed to the law, many hesitate to support either

'Just because we don't have the high visibility of Chicago, New York, or L.A., that doesn't mean there isn't a threat.'

— David Miller, administrator for the Iowa Department of Homeland Security and Emergency Management candidate on the issue, he said.

"John Kerry voted for the Patriot Act," Woods said. "There's no evidence that either candidate would make much, if any, difference."

Scott King, the director of the Office of International Students and Scholars, said homeland-security regulations are also causing havoc for the civil liberties of international students by creating a strict regimen of when and which classes can be taken. The regulations have also deterred many international students from visiting home for fear they might not make it back into the United States.

"I'm not against the appropriate oversight of our students," King said. "But [the current system] doesn't really address what it needs to address. It's overly burdensome to the students and the UI without increasing national security one iota."

E-mail DI reporter Jim Butts at: james-butts@uiowa.edu

The John Kerry Plan

- Increase funding for "first responders," including fire, ambulance, and hazmat services.
- Expand security at ports and border.
- Keep "95 percent" of the Patriot Act intact while changing the rest to protect civil liberties.
- Rebuild strong alliances he says the president has weakened or ignored.

The President Bush Plan

- Continue to strengthen security vulnerabilities, especially against weapons of mass destruction.
- Persist with intelligence reforms, including the creation of a national intelligence director.
- Revamp the military to fit the needs of 21st-century combat and deploy forces away from Cold War-era bases to more strategic locations.
- An aggressive foreign policy of pre-emptive action that "will not wait for new threats to grow and fester."

Bush hits Kerry on health care

BY PETE YOST
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DOWNINGTOWN, Pa. — President Bush criticized Sen. John Kerry's plans for health care and medical-liability reform on Thursday, saying the result would be even higher costs and more federal involvement.

"The Kerry plan would move America down the road toward federal control of health care," Bush told hundreds of supporters in an area outside Philadelphia that he won by 18,000 votes four years ago. Some recent polls show Kerry with a slight advantage in Pennsylvania.

Kerry's prescription for health care is "bigger government with higher costs," Bush said, a claim that the Democrat's campaign says is false.

The number of uninsured Americans increased by 5 million over the past four years, and the government announced last month that Medicare premiums will increase in January by a record amount in dollar terms of $11.60 per month.

Pablo Martinez Monsivais/Associated Press

Bush said medical decisions should be made by doctors and patients. However, the Medicare law he signed will, by the administration's own estimate, move roughly 9 million more people into Medicare HMOs and other managed-care plans.

On the issue of lawsuits against doctors, the president said Kerry has voted 10 times in his Senate career against reforms in the area of medical liability.

"The effects of the litigation culture are real in Pennsylvania ... medical malpractice premiums are soaring," Bush said.

Greens push for socially conscious investing

BY SARA GEAKE
THE DAILY IOWAN

The UI Campus Greens asked the university Thursday to stop investing in major corporations with a history of "discriminating against women and minority groups, exploiting child and sweatshop labor, using environmentally devastating practices, and lending irresponsibility to developing nations."

Saying they were "gravely concerned" with a collection of companies that includes Wal-Mart Stores Inc., Citigroup Inc., Home Depot U.S.A., General Electric, and ExxonMobil, the Greens called on the university to invest at least $500,000 in more socially conscious enterprises at a meeting with the university's Human Rights Committee.

Sticking with corporations known to have human-rights violations contradicts the university's own code of conduct, which bans discrimination, said Green Party student representative Chad Aldeman.

He cited lawsuits the companies have faced on ethnic discrimination, violations of the Americans with Disabilities Act, and low scores on the Human Rights Campaign 2004 Corporate Equality Index. The UI had roughly $133.7 million invested in mutual funds that violate human rights as of June, he said.

Aldeman and fellow Green Ethan Grundberg suggested that the university instead invest the $500,000 — less than one half of 1 percent of the total budget — in such groups as Citizens Emerging Growth, Parnassus, and Russell 3000.

Human Rights Committee members said they will collect information on the accusations within the month, but they made no commitment.

"We're still at an information-gathering stage," said committee head Robin Paetzold-Durumeric, declining to elaborate.

The Campus Greens' proposal also included adopting a new code of conduct requiring that all new investments be socially responsible and 5 percent of all university investments should be socially responsible by Jan. 1, 2006.

"Ideally, all money would be invested in socially responsible mutual funds," Aldeman said.

The Greens also suggested a procedure for public complaints about university investments, requesting that specific details of mutual funds be available to the public.

"I think the university has an obligation to be transparent," Grundberg said.

Campus Greens have gained support from the UI Environmental Coalition, UI Feminist Majority Leadership Alliance, the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender, and Allied Union, Amnesty International, and Students Against Sweatshops.

"We support them because we agree with [the cause] wholeheartedly," said Girija Mahajan of Students Against Sweatshops. She added that the organization is concerned with all human-rights violations, not just those in sweatshops.

The group plans to support the Campus Greens' efforts in building a student-group coalition. They plan to lobby and petition when the time for action arises, group members said.

Campus Greens hope to gain support from the Human Rights Committee as well but acknowledged that changes won't happen overnight.

"I think we understand it's not going to happen in one meeting," Aldeman said.

Law professors put up part of their lives for sale

In a law school fund-raiser, some of the faculty will auction off special services and skills

BY CLARE PIERSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

Bow tie-tying lessons, a tennis match, and a round of golf are some of the intriguing items up for bid at a UI College of Law faculty auction on Saturday, when law professors will offer up special services and talents to the highest bidders.

The auction, the first of its kind, is a fund-raiser for the UI chapter of the Equal Justice Foundation, which promotes equal representation and access in the courts. Money earned will be used for grants ranging from $500 to 3,000 given to UI law students who take on summer public-interest law positions at such places as the ACLU that are unpaid or low-paying. The money is usually used for living and personal expenses, said Kate Auerbach, the president of the UI chapter.

"Without adequate funding, students will be unable to help staff worthy organizations and won't be exposed to legal opportunities outside of private, for-profit law firms," said Jennifer Hitchon, a third-year law student and foundation board member.

Audience members can also bid on a game of How to Host a Murder with Associate Professor Stephanos Bibas, banjo lessons from Professor John Reitz, or a guided tour of UI Museums personally hosted by UI President Emeritus Sandy Boyd. Home-cooked dinners and baked goods have been donated for the auction as well.

"I'm participating in this because I believe, like the [Equal Justice Foundation], that equal access to justice is of critical importance," said Professor Patrick Bauer, who volunteered a discussion about law, politics, and Bob Dylan.

The auction is one part of Parents and Partners Day, a yearly event put on by the law school, that is designed to give friends and family members of UI law students special glimpses into the daily activities of law students. Other events planned for the day include a welcome speech by law Dean Carolyn Jones, a panel discussion by law students, and a tour of the Boyd Law Building.

Jacqueline Krain, the owner of the Iowa City nightclub the Siren, will perform with her band for audience members before and after the auction.

The auction will take place Saturday in the IMU second-floor ballroom at 7:30 p.m. Admission is free.

CITY

Local Habitat group looking for retail home

The Iowa Valley Habitat for Humanity is looking for retail space in Iowa City to open a "Re-Store."

The store will be a center for people to donate used or excess building materials and appliances for resale to the public.

Mark Patton of the Iowa Valley Habitat for Humanity wrote in a letter to the Iowa City City Council that many builders, lumberyards, and home owners often have usable building materials leftover after construction jobs, and usually the material is thrown away. In this project, people would come to pick up extra materials that residents and builders don't want or need and sell them in the store.

The profits from the sales of the donated material will be used by Habitat for Humanity to build houses for those who earn less than 50 percent of the area median income.

City Manager Steve Atkins said the city is acting as the "eyes and ears" for Habitat for Humanity. The council is looking for retail space, but, he said, it is hard to find in a reasonable location in the Iowa City area, adding that the cost of buying retail space is an issue with opening a resale store.

Atkins has also sent a copy of the letter from Habitat for Humanity to the city of Coralville.

Engineering school announces entrepreneur awards

The UI College of Engineering named the winners of the 2004 Hubert Storer Engineering Student Entrepreneurial Start-up Awards last week, an accolade recognizing excellence in engineering-related businesses.

The two student businesses, Bio:Neos Inc. and Ergo Ingenieur, won $2,500 each for their work developing medical-related technologies.

Ergo Ingenieur member Justin Glasgow said his business, which is pursuing a patent, is perfecting a device used in eye exams.

The company's plan, devised along with the help of UI students Bradley Bartels, Samuel Hartman, Samantha Lane, and Jonathan Thompson, aims to create an ergonomically friendly machine for "larger patients who experience discomfort because the microscope is compressing their stomach or chest."

"It was a good feeling to know that this plan was competitive," said Glasgow, declining to elaborate on the technology until the idea is patented.

Bio:Neos Inc.'s main product features "Blowebalab," said company member Brian O'Leary. "Blowebalab is a software solution for bioinformatics labs and pharmaceuticals to aid in the process of mutation identification. Pharmaceuticals are making drugs, and this just makes [finding the mutations] go faster."

The other members of Bio:Neos are Steven Davis, president, and Michael Smith.

8 years for GI in prisoner abuse

The defense attorney calls the sentence excessive and promises to appeal

BY MONTE MORIN
LOS ANGELES TIMES

BAGHDAD — The highest-ranking U.S. soldier charged in the abuse of prisoners at Iraq's Abu Ghraib prison was sentenced to eight years in prison Thursday, the longest term handed down so far in the scandal.

Army Reserve Staff Sgt. Ivan "Chip" Frederick II, who was found guilty of assault, maltreatment, dereliction of duty, indecent acts, and conspiracy, also was reduced in rank to private, ordered to forfeit pay, and given a dishonorable discharge from the military.

Frederick, 38, had faced a possible 10 years in prison, but the term was reduced as part of a plea bargain. Defense lawyer Gary Myers called the punishment excessive and said he would appeal.

As part of the plea deal with prosecutors, Frederick confessed to beating and humiliating Iraqi prisoners while taking souvenir pictures of the abuse. He agreed to cooperate with other prosecutions.

Frederick said he wrapped loose wires around a prisoner's finger and threatened to electrocute him if he fell off a narrow box. He confessed also to punching a prisoner and ordering him to masturbate in front of others "just to humiliate him."

On Thursday, his lawyer placed much of the blame for the abuse in November 2003 on the Army.

Myers argued that Frederick

An artist's rendition provided by the U.S. Army of prosecuting attorneys Capt. Chris Graveline (left) and Maj. Michael Holley discussing their case during the Abu Ghraib trial in Baghdad on Thursday. Staff Sgt. Ivan Frederick was sentenced on Thursday to eight years in prison for abusing Iraqi inmates.

was thrown into a stressful, chaotic environment in which military intelligence officers had encouraged the abuse so that prisoners would be more likely to divulge information during interrogation. He also said the defendant, a Virginia prison guard in civilian life, was never properly trained by the Army for his job as night supervisor at Abu Ghraib.

"Punish him, yes," the lawyer said. "But please try to understand ... there is corporate responsibility. We discovered that he has no abhorrent tendencies."

Army prosecutor Maj. Michael Holley argued that the case was a simple matter of right and wrong.

"He's an adult capable of making decisions," Holley told the court prior to sentencing. "He's an adult capable of telling, as we learned, the difference between right and wrong. How much training do you need to learn that it's wrong to force a man to masturbate?"

The judge, Army Col. James Pohl, offered no comment on the sentence.

Frederick, a resident of Buckingham, Va., is one of seven members of the Army Reserve's 372nd Military Police Company based in Cresaptown, Md., to be charged in the scandal. Another member, Spc. Jeremy Sivits, in his mid-20s, of Hyndman, Pa., is serving a one-year prison sentence after pleading guilty in May to three counts.

A military-intelligence soldier,

Spc. Armin Cruz, 24, was sentenced in September to eight months in prison, a reduction in rank to private, and a bad-conduct discharge for his role in the abuse.

During the two-day trial, which was held at a military base in Baghdad, defense witnesses described Frederick as an "all-American boy" who was warped by "inhumane" working conditions created by the Army.

In a videoconference call to the court, San Francisco psychologist Philip Zimbardo said Frederick found himself working 12-hour days in an overcrowded prison that saw frequent violence among detainees and mortar attacks from insurgents. Frederick lived in a cell without a bathroom.

Castro suffers fractures in fall at public event

The accident focuses attention on the advancing age of the Cuban leader

BY ANITA SNOW
ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAVANA — Cuban President Fidel Castro's advancing age — and ultimately his mortality — were brought home Thursday after he fractured a knee and arm when he tripped and fell at a public event.

In a communist society where the 78-year-old leader has played a larger-than-life role for more than four decades, the tumble was the latest reminder that Cuba's commander in chief is an aging man who will not live forever — with an elderly brother as his designated successor.

"I'm all in one piece," Castro declared on state television Wednesday night after tripping on a concrete step while returning to his seat after an hour-long speech in the central city of Santa Clara.

A medical examination early Thursday confirmed Castro suffered a broken left knee and a hairline fracture in his upper right arm, said an official notice carried by state media.

"His general health is good, and he is in excellent spirits," it said, adding that Castro hoped to be "back in place" soon.

"He asked that it be made known he is in condition to keep overseeing fundamental questions in close cooperation with government and party leaders," the statement said.

Parliament speaker Ricardo Alarcon, who has been by Castro's side more than four decades, said Thursday he was confident the president would recover quickly.

"He is a man of much strength," Alarcon told international journalists in Havana.

Nevertheless, Castro's tumble — captured by Associated Press Television News, but not shown by state television cameras — was sure to cause speculation about the communist leader's health after 45 years of ruling this island of 11.2 million people.

Castro's health has long been closely watched, particularly by his political enemies in Miami, home to a large Cuban exile community.

"Sometimes, people have this idea that he's some sort of god, that he's omnipotent," said Yanisset Rivero, spokeswoman for the Cuban Democratic Directorate, a Miami group that supports dissidents on the island. "It's a sign ... that he's human."

Rights activist Elizardo Sanchez of Havana predicted the incident would not immediately affect government policies, but it "does put on the agenda the theme of the advanced age of various leaders."

In the last several years, Castro's knees have seemed more wobbly, his step less steady. Nevertheless, he maintains a busy schedule that frequently includes all-night meetings with aides and visitors.

Average Cubans did not seem as alarmed Thursday as they were three years ago, when Castro fainted in the scorching Caribbean sun during a live televised speech before a crowd of thousands.

"He needs to get well soon," Georgina Hernandez said Thursday as she walked on the streets of Old Havana. "The Cuban people need him and need him to last a long time."

Taxi driver Emilio Lagos said, "I hope he will have good health for at least 20 more years."

"He's an adult capable of telling, as we learned, the difference between right and wrong. How much training do you need to learn that it's wrong to force a man to masturbate?"

Park rangers rescue 2 stranded climbers in Yosemite

BY BEN MARGOT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. — Rangers completed a dramatic rescue Thursday of two climbers from a snowy mountain and removed the ice-encrusted bodies of two other hikers who died on the peak in an unexpected early blizzard in the Sierras.

The deaths occurred on El Capitan, a forbidding 3,200-foot granite mountain at Yosemite National Park, following a fierce blizzard that stranded nearly two dozen hikers and climbers across Northern California this week. Other than the two deaths, everyone was found or rescued.

The two deaths created a gruesome sight for a helicopter crew that managed to fly close enough Wednesday to spot the bodies, which were blue and dripping with icicles as they dangled from their ropes about two-thirds the way up the precipice.

To retrieve the corpses, rangers rappelled down El Capitan, put the bodies into yellow mountaineering bags, and carried them on their backs hundreds of feet to the summit. Another ranger team, using ropes secured to thick pine trees on the mountaintop, rappelled down to rescue the surviving climbers, who were airlifted off the mountain.

"They're cold, and they're tired, but they're in fine condition," said Jen Nersesian, a park spokeswoman.

The two victims — an unidentified Japanese man and woman — had been ill-prepared for the weather, a ranger said.

The blizzard blew in early Sunday and continued through Wednesday, creating deadly white-out conditions and 50-mph gusts as it dumped several feet of snow across the Sierra Nevada.

The storm made for an anxious week for families of the stranded hikers, but many of them rejoiced Thursday as the weather cleared and crews brought their loved ones to safety.

"Oh, thank God, thank God. This is the greatest day of my life," Rita Bargetto-Snyder said after receiving word that her brother, Paul Bargetto, was safe after becoming stranded at a 9,400-foot-elevation lake east of Fresno.

Paul Bargetto was part of a four-person group — two father-and-son pairs — that had been missing since Sunday. The men, members of a California wine-making family, were rescued Thursday and greeted by about a dozen friends and family members after being removed from the mountains. None of the men needed hospitalization.

"Once the conditions got overwhelming, they stayed put, and rationed their food, and kept warm. They saved themselves," said Jenna Endres, one of the rescuers.

Seven people in all were stranded on El Capitan by the storm: the two Japanese climbers; the two rescued Thursday; another couple who asked for extra supplies but apparently didn't need any additional help; and one climber who was rescued Wednesday.

A half-mile high and a mile wide, El Capitan casts an imposing shadow over the glacier-sculpted Yosemite Valley. The first successful ascent took 45 days, but today most climbers need three or four days to make it to the top — clinging to barely visible outcroppings and prying their way up cracks invisible from the valley floor.

Springtime, when the days are long and the weather is often perfect for weeks at a time, is the best time to attempt an ascent. By June, the wall can be an inferno due to high temperatures. By September, the days are too short and the nights can be chilly. By October, there's always the risk of an early snowfall.

"College tuition in the last few years has gone up so much," said Mangler, who is considering extending her education to graduate school.

At the center of the issue of college tuition in this election is funding for the Pell Grant program, which approximately 3,500 UI students take advantage of.

"George Bush came into office promising to help," Edwards said. "Here's what he did: He tried to cut 84,000 students off of Pell Grants."

According to political fact-checking organization FactCheck.org, the number of students who receive Pell Grants has actually increased during Bush's term, but the president did not increase the maximum grant as he had promised.

Edwards presented a plan to offer Americans up to $4,000 in tax credits for each year of college in addition to providing federal aid to states that keep tuition down.

The vice-presidential hopeful also stumped on health care for the group loaded with voters clad in purple "Iowa for Health Care" shirts.

"George Bush has done something about the health-insurance problem. He made it worse," Edwards said, tacking on a promise to lower the cost of prescription drugs.

He accused the president of working for drug companies rather than the American people. Edwards said that a Kerry administration would lower costs by cutting back drug-company advertising and encouraging the production of generic medicine.

"You deserve a president who will fight for you every day," Edwards said.

He also brought up the recurring Kerry-Edwards campaign theme of overall job loss in the last four years, saying thousands of Iowans have lost jobs during Bush's term. He attacked Treasury Secretary John Snow, who was recently reported to have called job losses a "myth."

"The only solution to this is to make sure that they lose their jobs. Then they'll know it's not a myth," Edwards said.

Later, at 11:29 a.m., authorities say a man entered West Bank, 1910 Lower Muscatine Road, and demanded money before leaving the bank, headed southbound on foot, with an unspecified amount of cash.

In this robbery, the suspect did not flash a weapon and no one was injured. He is described as a 5-6 to 5-10 black male in his 20s or 30s, wearing a gray hooded sweatshirt and black pants or jeans, police said.

When the bank was robbed, around four employees and an unknown number of patrons were present, said bank President Lynn Rowat.

The two businesses are roughly 1 mile apart.

"Police are investigating the similarities and have not determined if they related," Krei said. "But some similarities would be obviously, the clothing, and the description would also be similar, as well as the race of the individual."

Krei said anyone arrested in connection with the Thursday-morning incidents would face first-degree robbery charges, which is a Class B felony punishable by up to 25 years in prison. Anyone with information is urged to contact investigators at 356-5283.

El Paso manager Joe Mendez said the robbery at the Mexican grocery store was the second during its three years of existence. Meanwhile, Rowat said neither branch of West Bank in Iowa City has been robbed since July 2003, when he assumed ownership.

'Nasty' sheriff's race turns nastier

According to a Sept. 28 e-mail written by Adam Weeks and given to The Daily Iowan, Snyder was told: "[Ovel] said that he would like for you to call him sometime to put this all behind both of you. He made it quite clear that will not go to the media as long as he does not hear from people in Waterloo that someone from Johnson County is calling to check on his background and as long as Karen Fessler is not verbally attacked. Give him a call and agree to these terms, and it should no longer be a problem."

Snyder said his campaign was investigating a possible illegal campaign contribution by Fessler to Democratic sheriff candidate Lonny Pulkrabek.

Weeks, Ovel, and Fessler have unlisted numbers and could not be reached Thursday.

David Arbogost, the chairman of the Johnson County Republicans, said the committee knew about the blackmail in the middle of September, conducted an investigation, and found Snyder "blameless" for investigating the possible illegal contributions.

The DVD with the six-second clip released to the media was edited down from an hour of footage, Snyder said, calling the tape "doctored."

The committee "admonished" Snyder in an October meeting and dropped the matter, said Johnson County Republicans Co-Chairman Todd Versteegh. Snyder, Versteegh said, "is not a racist by any shape or means."

Versteegh said the DVD was an hour long, and Snyder immediately apologized for his comment. He added that Ovel was laughing and making similar comments beforehand.

The tape's release came a week after records detailing Snyder's 1987 arrest for assault were released to local media outlets, a leak the state Division of Criminal Investigations is investigating. Pulkrabek — who could not be reached for comment — took responsibility for the release of Snyder's records by one of his supporters.

"The records release obviously backfired," Snyder said.

He said that, despite the "smear campaigns" against him, he has told his campaign and supporters not to turn his campaign "negative." He said he wanted to focus on such issues as jail overcrowding, but the two recent leaks have become issues in the campaign.

"We are going to stay positive," Snyder said. "If we go negative, it will disenfranchise the voters, and they will not vote."

County sees surge in young voter registrations

In the 2000 presidential election, 61 percent of registered 18- to 24-year-old voters cast their vote in Johnson County. UI political-science Professor Peverill Squire said he believes that young voters will follow through with their voter registrations this year and mark their ballots.

"I suspect a good chunk [will vote], simply because once you get registered, half the battle is over," he said.

Rugen said the New Voters Project will send out volunteers on Election Day to pick up students who live in Mayflower and Parklawn dorms because they live a considerable distance from polling places. Volunteers will also knock on doors and make phone calls.

Still, he said, early voting is a way to ensure that your vote is going to count.

"When people votes early, even if they're not registered, they can register on the spot," he said.

Redlawsk said early voting will not necessarily have an effect on overall voter turnout, and grassroots efforts such as knocking on doors are a more effective way to move voters to the polls, adding that early voting attracts people who would normally vote on Election Day anyway.

Experts expect the Democratic Party to gain the most from the surge in young voters. Of the newly registered voters in Johnson County, 31.5 percent identified with Democrats, 17 percent with Republicans, and 51 percent did not choose a party affiliation.

"The evidence right now is [young people] tend to be Democrats," Squire said. "That wasn't the case 10 years ago."

would be able to immediately pull out troops, either.

"I do have some concerns [about Bush]," Jody Anderson said. "I think he jumped in too fast. I'm not sure he'll get my vote again."

Bill Burton, a spokesman for the Kerry-Edwards campaign, said Kerry plans to train the Iraqis to fight for themselves and to get more countries involved in low-risk security positions and financial obligations.

"The first step [Kerry] will take as president is to get on the phone," Burton said. "George Bush's go-it-alone, my-way-or-the-highway policy he presented to the United Nations is not working."

Bush plans to pursue the course of action he has taken since the beginning of the war, said Dan Ronayne, an Iowa spokesman for the Bush-Cheney campaign. He also questioned Kerry's ability to internationalize the war effort.

"John Kerry has taken 10 distinctly separate positions on the war in Iraq, insulting coalition members," Ronayne said. "Now, he says he can do a better job. It's nonsensical."

Lyndsey Anderson is supposed to return home in January, but her mother thinks it is very likely her daughter will be redeployed.

While Jody Anderson anxiously awaits her daughter's homecoming, UI student Mark Lucas is itching to fight under the command of a president he adamantly supports.

"President Bush has always said he will always listen to commanders on the ground," Lucas said. "I don't think anybody could have been commander in chief and put together a better coalition than President Bush."

Lucas is a member of the Army National Guard, and he completed his advanced infantry training last summer.

He supports Bush because he believes Kerry has changed positions too frequently on the war in Iraq, and he disagrees with Kerry's plans to internationalize the troops. Europeans have hesitations because they experienced so much death in the world wars, Lucas said.

"[Kerry] has made a series of different stances, and it's kind of hard to understand how they weave together," Lucas said. "I don't have a lot of respect for Sen. Kerry when he says he wants to internationalize the force."

Japan starts cleanup after deadly typhoon

TOKYO (AP) — Rescue workers and Japanese troops waded through sludge early today to search for victims of mudslides in Japan's deadliest typhoon in over a decade that ripped across the country, killing 67 and leaving 21 missing.

Typhoon Tokage, the record eighth typhoon to hit Japan this year, unleashed towering waves and rapid mudslides that demolished homes and flooded dozens of communities when the storm slammed into western Japan Wednesday.

Tokage, which means lizard in Japanese, headed east into the Pacific Ocean on Thursday after losing power, leaving clear blue skies in its wake and rescue workers combing the sea for victims feared washed away in the typhoon.

Tsutomu Mukai on the small island of Awaji 279 miles west of Tokyo said a mudslide buried his home and killed his 72-year old mother.

"We panicked. We had no time to escape," Mukai, 50, told broadcaster TV Asahi. "I called out, 'Mother, are you alive?,' but there was no answer."

Powerful gusts uprooted huge trees, flash floods submerged cars to their windows, and entire hillsides crumbled in landslides across southern and central Japan. Delivery trucks, tipped over by winds, lay on their sides.

By this morning, the death toll had risen to 67, and 21 others were still unaccounted for, the National Police Agency said. Injuries totaled 281.

Crews rescued a tour group of 36 senior citizens and their bus driver early Thursday after a river overflowed and flash floods nearly submerged their bus in the city of Maizuru in Kyoto prefecture, or state. The group spent the night on the roof of the bus as fast-moving waters delayed help.

"We called to one another to keep moving and to stay awake," one unidentified passenger told public broadcaster NHK. "I was so relieved when the lifeboat came."

Pot policy draconian, but pot is illegal

Students living in the UI's residence halls are warned of the stiff penalties that exist for drug possession and use in the dorms. Thus, when the UI police receive notice that the noisy occupants of a specific room are burning more than candles (which, by the way, is also prohibited), the offenders get burned by the university's policy. Because of the zero-tolerance policy currently in place, students caught with marijuana in one of the university's residence halls are often evicted, even for first offenses.

As a result, the UI Students for Sensible Drug Policy recently drafted and circulated a resolution to reform these policies, collecting more than 1,000 student and faculty signatures in support of the resolution. The group presented the resolution to the UISG Student Assembly on Tuesday, arguing that education and assistance should be emphasized for offenders over stiff penalties that are imposed now. The resolution was not passed because of its wording — assembly members were concerned that no distinction was made between marijuana and other illicit drugs, such as cocaine. Plans are already underway to rewrite the resolution and present it again in November.

We can sympathize with the Students for Sensible Drug Policy's view on this issue — that immediate eviction for possessing a bag of pot is too punitive — but we would also point out that marijuana is an illegal substance, according to state and federal law. In this respect, it's different from alcohol, which the university needs to account for through its policies. The two substances cannot be placed in the same category because one is permissible (for those of legal age) and the other is not. That's why students caught with alcohol in the dorms aren't ordinarily evicted on the first offense (unless they possess large quantities) while students caught with marijuana often are.

One of the arguments behind this effort is that, as noted by UISG Vice President Jason Shore, some students caught with illegal substances in the residence halls are forced to drop out of school after their evictions. This is a legitimate concern. A first-year student found to be in possession of pot should not have to end her or his academic career simply because of one act of poor judgment. To this end, residence-hall officials need to ensure that violators are given ample time to find alternative housing if they are evicted. Education and assistance should also be emphasized for offenders, but only while acknowledging that marijuana is illegal. Being in possession of it ordinarily results in arrest and incarceration.

It is for this reason that the UI's zero-tolerance policy toward marijuana and other illicit substances in the dorms is not wholly unjustified. Many may not agree with the legal status of marijuana in this country — in its Oct. 6 editorial, the DI suggested that legal penalties for pot possession are too harsh, leading to overcrowded jails and costly trials — but this is not within the university's scope of jurisdiction. Therefore, campus policies need to correspond with laws set forth by the state. This is why 19-year-olds are prohibited from consuming alcohol on university property.

We recognize the apparent draconian nature of the university's drug policies but also recognize the need to uphold the law, as insensible as it may be. To dorm residents, we offer one simple suggestion: Don't break the rules, and you won't be penalized.

Ignoring the 'nuances' of

On the Oct. 20 Daily Iowan opinions page, the editorial submitted by the Editorial Board (of which I was a dissenting member for this piece) castigated President Bush and his administration for failing to properly deal with Saudi Arabia. Chief among the complaints was the undeniable fact that human-rights violations are rampant in Saudi Arabia. Also questionable is the idea that the Middle Eastern and Southwest Asian regimes (the former Taliban, Assad's Syria, and pretty much every other nation in the region) are in need of a change in leadership, a change that would hopefully, as in Afghanistan, enable a shift toward the Western principle of equal opportunity.

What is curious is that somehow this is all George W. Bush's fault, and what is laughable is the implicit conclusion (in the exhortation to remember these human-rights atrocities on Nov. 2) that John Kerry will somehow solve the problem.

Even the Deaniacs are correct in believing that oil is the nexus of our relationship with the Saudis. But this isn't a nefarious Bush scheme to fatten the coffers of Halliburton — it's a matter, after 50 years of post-WW II oil dependence, of economic necessity. Saudi Arabia controls 25 percent of all the oil reserves in the world, and the kingdom has exorbitant cash reserves. Economic sanctions, when played against this hand, mean absolutely nothing. The Saudis, like it or not, control the world market for energy.

America and the world could purchase its oil from other Middle Eastern countries or perhaps market it on their own (if Democrats would permit drilling in Alaska), but the Saudis are the ultimate arbiters; they are able to determine the global price of oil by deciding exactly how much black gold of their own to produce. In the past, this has had the effect of keeping markets stable, as during the 1991 Gulf War when the Saudis produced an extra 5 million barrels a day to offset the loss of Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil. Thus, if the Saudi spigot of oil is shut off, the economic impact will be devastating, sending gas prices skyrocketing across the world.

According to author Robert Baer, the Saudis also have $1 trillion in United States banks, as well as another $1 trillion in our stock market. If they choose to withdraw this gargantuan sum of money, the market will collapse. This is a powerful trump card, and both the United States and the Saudi kingdom know it. Thus, any posturing against the Saudi kingdom, regardless of the U.S. commander-in-chief, must be undertaken with this co-dependence in mind.

The editorial also asserts "the Bush Administration's rhetoric focuses on spreading freedom across the globe, on the sharing of our democratic morals and values, yet the reality is that our good work is skewed." Ignoring the fact that Saudi Arabia represents an entirely more complex and intricate international problem than perhaps any other nation in the world, what this administration has accomplished in three years is unprecedented in terms of spreading human rights to the sands of the Middle East. It also bears repeating that both of these feats were accomplished despite the outrage of today's left, who viewed the liberations as bold plays for oil. Is there any reason to believe that a similar military action directed against the Saudis would receive a different reception? Cold cynicism about American foreign policy, once reserved for the fringe elements of the political spectrum, has become mainstream (extra thanks to Terry McAuliffe, when asked outside the D.C. premiere of Fahrenheit 9/11 whether he believed the Bush administration invaded Afghanistan for oil or a gas pipeline, replied, "I do now.") Military action is, from a domestic perspective, a virtual non-option.

Saudi Arabia is a problem. The corrupt ruling family, which shells out lavish allowances to the increasingly numerous princes, is hated by the disappearing middle class, and a terrorist attack on the Saudi oil reserves would have a devastating impact on the world economy. There are no easy solutions to this mess; decades of Western oil dependence and the cauldron of Wahhabi hatred brewing under the relatively calm Saudi surface have coalesced to create a problem that will not be glibly solved by any new president. To pretend that Kerry represents an answer to the human-rights violations in Saudi Arabia, much less the labyrinthine U.S.-Saudi relationship, is not only dishonest, it is specious.

DI centerfold tasteless

If anyone has ever wondered how the UI creates and maintains a culture of harassment and rape permissiveness, there is a perfect example in the centerfold spread of the Oct. 20 Daily Iowan.

A minority woman in a sexually available pose is splattered with mud that seems to come from the tires of an all-terrain vehicle on the adjacent page. The advertised games are touted in gang-bang language, and cycling perpetrators are completely anonymous and unidentifiable (hence not punishable) in their complete body armor and masks. Degrading women and destroying nature are touted as high entertainment. What a blast.

With ads such as these, there is little need to wonder why rape and violence against women are so prevalent in Iowa City. Thanks for the shining example.

So is Ledge column

I feel that the comments made about the Dance Marathon Herky in the Ledge were completely heartless and uncalled for ("Heckling Dance Marathon Herky," DI, Oct. 20). The destruction of this Herky affected more people than just the ones who saw it on their way to the IMU. It took approximately $7,000 away from Dance Marathon.

These funds, as per Dance Marathon style, were going toward helping child cancer patients. That this is taken lightly is very disturbing. I'm sure Josh Bald would not find it funny if he had a loved one who had cancer, because I'm sure all the families who have children that this affects do not, either. If Bald wants to make fun of this event, maybe he can join the perpetrators when they go on trial, or he could repay Dance Marathon for its loss. The Ledge should stay away from making fun of events that concern life and death. Stay with the jokes that it used to make, or it should not continue to be published.

Chris Dunn
UI student

Agreed ...

This is in response to the Oct. 20 Ledge column. I can't imagine why a person would make jokes about vandalizing a symbol of pride. While the Dance Marathon Herky may not have meant a lot to some people, it meant the world to the children who are a part of Dance Marathon. These families put their faith in UI students, and yet a representative of the DI makes fun of the people who represent them.

In just 10 years, Dance Marathon has raised $3.4 million. The money helps pay for hospital bills, provides tutors while kids are receiving treatment, and gives children a chance for a normal life. It's not something to joke about.

The kids need help and supporters, not critics. Dance Marathon Herky represented hope and commitment. It reminded UI students of why they are dancing. It showed the families that they are in our thoughts. Herky may be gone, but Dance Marathon will survive. Instead of looking for the easy jokes, you should think about whom you are hurting. Is it really worth breaking a family's hope for a cure just to get a laugh?

Democrats voting Synder for Sheriff

My husband and I are lifelong Democrats; I worked for Chicago Mayor Richard M. Daley. But this year we aren't voting Democrat, and we aren't voting for Johnson County sheriff candidate Lonny Pulkrabek. Steve Snyder is the man for the job. He has good experience and is a good man. He will look out for all Johnson County citizens and Sheriff's Office employees. He's especially kind to children and animals, and they respond to him because they can sense a good person. Snyder will treat deputies fairly based upon their proven abilities. Snyder's daughter is serving all Americans in Iraq. She obviously learned public service from her father.

I am not working for any Democrats because of their nasty campaign tactics. Pulkrabek has violated standards of decency by his release of confidential papers and his attitude toward fellow officers. These officers are not voting for Pulkrabek unless they're intimidated into doing so. Pulkrabek must be a poor officer to not be promoted in 19 years. He could have taken the test and earned a promotion. The Democratic candidate is not the person I want protecting me. My husband and I urge all voters to consider Snyder.

Of girls who kick butt

BY ALI GOWANS
THE DAILY IOWAN

Author Tamora Pierce explains her success in her refusal to give up, even though she knew her chances of making it big as a writer were slim.

"In the words of the great American philosopher Weirid Al Yankovic, 'Dare to be stupid,'" she said. "Being persistent in many ways counts more than talent."

Persistence has paid off. Pierce's newest book, Trickster's Queen, has been at the top of the New York Times Children's Chapter Book list, taking the first-place spot on Sunday.

The popular fantasy author will read at two Iowa City locations today. She will help inaugurate the children's space at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., at 4 p.m. and will meet with fans at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St., in "Live from Prairie Lights" at 8 p.m. The program will be broadcast live on WSUI.

Though Pierce's audience is portrayed as a young one, Mary Post of Prairie Lights, who organized the events, expects a wide range of fans.

"Half of the interest in her books is from adults," Post said. "An older gentleman approached me and was very excited she was coming."

Pierce said she hates traveling but loves the interaction she gets with her readers when she is on the road. "My fans are the coolest people in the world," she said. "They are smart; they ask intelligent questions. I love talking to people."

Pierce, who has published 22 books over the last 21 years, tries to incorporate strong female characters into her stories.

"I like girls who kick butt," she said. She said that, as a bookworm growing up, she had trouble finding female heroes in the adventure stories she loved.

"Girls wanted to have adventures, too," she said. "Why weren't we in those books? Basically, I write what I wanted to read."

Her latest book is the second part of a series centered on the life of Aly, a girl who uses her skills to help lead a rebellion against oppressive monarchs. Those familiar with Pierce's work will recognize the main character as the daughter of Alanna, the heroine of Pierce's original series, The Song of the Lioness quartet.

She has taken her love of strong women beyond writing. With fellow author Meg Cabot, whose popular series The Princess Diaries has recently been turned into movies, she formed Sheroes, a web forum devoted to celebrating strong females in politics, history, sports, literature, and entertainment.

Sheroes (<http://www.sheroescentral.com>) has gathered 4,100 members from all over the world, Pierce said. The site contains discussion forums on a number of topics.

"After 9/11 we opened up a current events forum," she said, "and it's just continued to grow ever since."

One of the main discussions centers on what makes someone a "Sheroe" or an "anti-Sheroe." An anti-Sheroe, she said, is someone who hurts the efforts of women to move ahead in society.

"I think it's one of the best day's work Meg and I ever did," Pierce said. "People have really responded to it."

Aiding Haiti with water purification

BY ARNA WILKINSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

Turn on the faucet. Head over to the nearest drinking fountain. Take a long sip from a cup. Chances are here in Iowa that the seemingly endless supply of water from the tap will be safe to drink and easy to find.

But this is not the case in Haiti, said UI student Matthew Steele. Steele, a co-founder of the non-governmental group NGOX, teamed up with UI Engineers for a Sustainable World and local musicians to send water-purification packets to the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere.

A benefit concert will be held on Saturday at the Sanctuary Restaurant and Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St., with all proceeds going to purchase the Procter & Gamble purification packets. Musicians performing at the event include Tim Krein, Kathryn Musilek, Brandon Ross, jazz quintet Nutria, and DJ act cruder&dorkmeister.

The demand for clean water in Haiti is now more urgent than ever, said Craig Just, a member of Engineers for a Sustainable World. He contacted NGOX in a plea to provide the water packets to Haiti after the country's nascent infrastructure, still suffering from the effects of a February coup, was ravaged by Hurricane Jeanne in September.

WATER FOR HAITI

BENEFIT
Kathryn Musilek,
Tim Krein, Brandon
Ross and Nutria

When: 9 p.m. Saturday
Where: Sanctuary Restaurant and Pub 405 S. Gilbert St
Admission: $4

Just visited Haiti from Aug. 29 to Sept. 2 with a Procter & Gamble representative to assess the need for the packets. He saw children who normally would have been at school hauling drinking water from streams contaminated with feces.

"It is not just a matter of sending in more aid money," he said. "This is so significantly different from what has been done before."

The water packets are the first product Procter & Gamble will sell in Haiti. Just said. Each packet will cost the equivalent of 7 cents and be available by Nov. 17.

"Getting safer, cheaper water will have an impact on a whole bunch of societal ills," Just said.

This is not the first time musicians have gotten together with NGOX and the engineers' group to raise awareness about the lack of safe drinking water in other countries. Last spring, the One Drop benefit concert was held at the Green Room, 509 S. Gilbert St., along with another performance at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., for the Engineers for a Sustainable World Xicotepec Exchange, a program in which UI students assess water sanitation and provide educational outreach about safe drinking water in Mexico.

Social activism through music is an extension of the philosophy behind NGOX, Steele said. The group, which is not classified as a nonprofit organization by the IRS, relies on a broad network of people in Iowa City, the United States, and abroad to raise awareness for various causes.

"I am an artist, and most of my friends are artists. This is how we get clothes, food, money to people who need them," Steele said. "We don't want to compromise our freedom of speech or our freedom to advocate."

Paul Clavenger, a member of NGOX and a performer in the experimental jazz quintet Nutria, said he hopes his music would bring in new people who enjoy concerts and have a concern about international issues.

"I have played a lot of music for myself, for fun, for the money, but all of those things don't seem like a good reason," he said. "I want to bring people together for a reason."

The price for admission for the Saturday benefit is $4. An educational zine about the history of Haiti designed by local artists will be given to the first 50 attendees.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Both business and personal relationships can be established. Taking care of friends and family will ensure that you receive help in return when you need it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You aren't likely to get the whole story. You won't be able to trust anyone with your ideas or your concerns. You will be labeled as a meddler if you aren't reticent about what you hear.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can take on just about anything and anyone today. Your quick response and insight will impress everyone you encounter. Trust your instincts, and you won't be wrong.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A relative may burden you with additional responsibilities. Take a look over your personal papers; something may not be right. Someone may mislead you regarding finances.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You will have to block some time to deal with someone you are in a close relationship with. If you try to overcompensate for something that is out of your control, you will make the wrong impression.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can make some very impressive decisions that should lead to professional advancement. A little time spent getting to know your peers will result in added support when needed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Romance, luxury, pampering, or anything else that will please you should be scheduled. Traveling to fun-filled destinations, entertaining, or socializing will bring satisfaction.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't bicker over trivial matters. Do what you must in order to keep the peace. You may be called upon to mediate a dispute. Tread carefully.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make a concerted effort to talk about your feelings and your intentions. You will feel better once you know where you stand. Things will turn out better than you expect.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You will have some interesting concepts. Do a little research, and you will discover how plausible your idea is and what you can do to make it a successful venture. You're on the right track.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You should be taking a trip that will enable you to discover more about yourself or an interest you have. This is the perfect time to ask questions and solve problems.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Focus on money matters, and you will spare yourself loss. You will intuitively know what's best for you, so don't let anyone else make your decisions for you. Your home will be your haven.

Woman hurt in celebration dies

BOSTON (AP) — A college student died Thursday after suffering a head injury in a clash between police officers and a crowd of Red Sox fans who poured into the streets outside Fenway Park to celebrate their team's victory over the New York Yankees.

Victoria Snelgrove, a 21-year-old journalism major at Emerson College, was among 16 people hurt in the revelry. The injured also included a police officer.

Most of the injuries were minor, but Snelgrove suffered a severe head wound as police tried to subdue the crowd, authorities said.

YANKEES

Steinbrenner on Yankees losses

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner was more gracious about Wednesday night's Game 7 loss to the Boston Red Sox after being up 3 games to none than he was about losing the World Series to the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1981 after being up 2-0.

His statements then and now: 2004: "I congratulate the Boston Red Sox on their great victory. I want to thank our loyal fans for their enormous support. Of course, I am disappointed because I wanted a championship for them and for our city. You can be assured, we will get to work and produce a great team next year."

1981: "I want to sincerely apologize to the people of New York and to the fans of the New York Yankees everywhere for the performance of the Yankee team in the World Series. I also want to assure you that we will be at work immediately to prepare for 1982."

Cashman will keep position with Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — Brian Cashman's job is safe — at least for now. The rest of the New York Yankees have plenty to worry about this winter.

Soon after the Yankees completed a historic collapse against Boston in the AL playoffs, volatile owner George Steinbrenner told Cashman, the team's general manager, that he will not be fired before next season.

Steinbrenner also informed Cashman he should prepare to be summoned to Tampa, Fla., for meetings in the next few days. The star-studded Yankees need to figure out why they fell apart against the Red Sox after opening a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven ALCS.

Q: Which college team holds the record for most consecutive losses?

IOWA (4-2) VS. PENN STATE (2-4)

SATURDAY, AT PENN STATE, STATE COLLEGE, PA., 11:05 A.M., CDT, ESPN2

READY AND WAITING

Hawkeyes looking for fifth-consecutive win against the Nittany Lions

BY JASON BRUMMOND
THE DAILY IOWAN

Kirk Ferentz ended a streak last weekend against Ohio State.

On Saturday, he hopes to continue another.

No. 25 Iowa has won four-consecutive games against Penn State and five of the last six contests in State College. The Hawkeyes (4-2, 2-1) are also going for their first road win of the year in an expected Beaver Stadium sell-out. Kickoff is scheduled for 11:05 a.m.

Ferentz has more victories against the Nittany Lions during his six-year tenure than any other team, and he's led the Hawkeyes to consecutive road overtime victories in the series.

"We've just been fortunate, and our guys have played well, first and foremost," he said.

Penn State coach Joe Paterno said that this week, he is expecting the return of junior Michael Robinson, who missed the last two games while recovering from a concussion he sustained at Wisconsin on Sept. 25.

The 6-2, 225-pound versatile athlete — he can play quarterback, wide receiver, or running back — is second on the team in receiving yards and third in rushing despite missing action.

"I have coached great football players for 55 years," Paterno said. "If I tell you that Michael Robinson is one of the best football players I have ever coached and one of the best in the country, don't question me."

His return should help the Nittany Lion's offense, which has been averaging fewer than 8 points a game in Big Ten play and has a combined 39 yards rushing on as many attempts during the last two games.

But Penn State's defense has been turning heads.

The Nittany Lions are giving up only 16 points a game, and its defense has kept it in conference games despite an occasionally lackadaisical offense.

Nittany Lion mascot dates back to 1906

IOWA CITY (AP) — For nearly four decades, Joe Paterno has symbolized excellence and integrity in college football while coaching the Penn State Nittany Lions.

So just what is a Nittany Lion anyway?

It's pretty simple, really. The athletics symbol for Penn State, which hosts No. 25 Iowa on Saturday, is the mountain lion that once roamed central Pennsylvania.

The mascot became so revered that a Nittany Lion Shrine, carved from a 13-ton block of Indiana limestone, has stood for more than 60 years in a grove of trees near the university's recreation building.

YOU can BET on it

What? It's not that big of a long shot.

It's just your standard six-team parlay card with over/under on total points, logical point spreads with college and pro-level action.

I can't be the only person who thinks Pitt will beat Rutgers at home by more than 6, Texas will beat Texas Tech at Lubbock by more than 2, Notre Dame will beat Boston College by at least 7, Duke will undoubtedly lose to Virginia by more than 25 — (pause, breathe, moving from Saturday to Oct. 24) — the Eagles and the Browns combined total points will be more than 41, and the Bears and the Bucs, who are about as offensive as Mother Teresa, won't score 32 points collectively.

ST. LOUIS — The best team in baseball now gets a chance to prove it in the World Series. Albert Pujols hit a tying double, Scott Rolen followed with a home run, and the St. Louis Cardinals suddenly erupted against Roger Clemens, starting the Houston Astros, 5-2, Thursday night to take Game 7 of the NL Championship Series.

In a matchup in which the home team won every time, the Cardinals broke through with two outs in the sixth inning. It came in a span of only two pitches, and Busch Stadium became a roiling sea of red.

Jeff Suppan overcame a leadoff home run by Craig Biggio to win an apparent mismatch against Clemens. The bullpen combined for three scoreless innings, shutting down Carlos Beltran and Co., with Jason Isringhausen working the ninth for his third save.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING Long excited for season to start

BY BRYAN BAMONTE
THE DAILY IOWAN

Women's swimming head coach Marc Long has a lot on his plate.

Aside from entering his first season as the head coach after serving as an assistant the previous two seasons, it is now his responsibility to continue the team's ascent in the Big Ten.

He can't wait. "It's really exciting," he said. "It is a great opportunity to work with a great group of student-athletes and something I am looking forward to."

Luckily for Long, he will have a veteran squad to work with — 10 seniors return for the Hawkeyes.

"We have a very experienced team, and we expect them to help the younger ladies and really lead this team," he said.

Last season, the team sent one swimmer to the NCAA championships and had a total of three All-Americans, all of whom return this season.

POINT/COUNTERPOINT

Which team will win the Big Ten?

The Wolverines did it last season, and they can do it again this year. Losing early in non-conference play and bouncing back to win the conference is nothing new for the Michigan football team. Last year, it was Oregon, this year it's Notre Dame, but the formula is still the same: lose early, work out the kinks, and win.

Although the Wolverines are a young team, led by true freshman QB Chad Henne, their level of play has improved with each game. With four games left to play in the regular season, there is still time for more experience and growth.

Michigan's defense has dominated in the second half this season and has excelled at forcing turnovers. Its offense is the third-best in the Big Ten, trailing only Purdue and Minnesota, two teams that fell apart last weekend. With a defense that is tough against the run and an offensive line that has been able to dictate the pace of games and create holes for freshman running back Michael Hart, the Wolverines are heading into the final stretch of the season with a promising combination.

Without Wisconsin on their schedule, and with Ohio State, normally the Wolverines' biggest test of the season, playing as poorly as it is, Michigan is in a good position to repeat last season's feat, and it could be a national title contender in the next two years.

— by Kristi Pooler

Sorry, Kristi. It's over. The Badgers will capture the Big Ten regular-season title. The championship is theirs for the taking, and I don't see any reason that they should lose another Big Ten game. The Badgers' biggest challenge of the year took place last week against Purdue, and they were able to knock off the Boilermakers and Kyle Orton's Heisman Trophy hopes in West Lafayette.

Michigan still has to face Purdue and the hated Ohio State in Columbus, which is definitely not a gimme. The Wisconsin defense, one of the best in the country, has stepped up to every major challenge this season, and this trend should continue the rest of the way. The Badgers also sport one of the most talented backfields with Anthony Davis, Booker Stanley, and Matt Bernstein (984 rushing yards combined).

Even though Wisconsin still has to travel to East Lansing and Iowa City, everything points in its direction. Michigan and Wisconsin don't play each other this season, which is good for the Badgers. If both teams happen to run the table in the Big Ten, Wisconsin would be awarded the trip to the Rose Bowl because Michigan went to Pasadena, Calif., last season, making it the Badgers' turn in case of a tie.

The stars in the cheese state are aligned. Barry Alvarez's squad controls its destiny. The Big Ten title is just four victories away, and it will be within Wisconsin's reach when it journeys to Kinnick Stadium on Nov. 20.

Illness won't keep V-ball team down

BY RYAN LONG
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Ah yes, the famous "kissing disease." Good old mono. It's infected the volleyball team, and the squad is hoping that it doesn't develop into a plague for the remainder of the 2004 season.

Head coach Cindy Fredrick first received word of this sickness on her team during preseason action when freshman middle blocker Megan Gatens caught it through touching volleyballs, slapping hands, and grabbing water bottles. Gatens made a full recovery after a few weeks, but now the illness has made its way toward the starters.

Senior hitter Laura Simpson and freshman hitter Stacy Vitali were forced out of this past weekend's match against No. 24

"We're just really concentrating on the things that we have control of and just doing the little things is going to be key for beating any team."

— Pam Kavadas

Illinois, coming in contact with mono the same way as Gatens. Vitali is ranked second on the team in kills with 203, while Simpson is ranked fourth with 136. This adds a significant problem to the struggling Hawkeyes (9-11, 1-7), who have lost seven in a row.

"Anytime you're with an athletics team, everybody is so close," Fredrick said. "It seems like when you get something like that that's contagious, it goes through teams pretty fast."

Iowa will be without Simpson and Vitali for the next two weeks. While they lose a lot of leadership in Simpson, Fredrick will look for that in seniors Pam Kavadas and Carolyn Giese, who have been the vocal leaders of the Iowa squad.

"It's very tragic that it did happen to us, but we're moving on. They're sick and are not going to get better, so we need to step up," Kavadas said.

With the frontline's depth becoming an issue, Fredrick will have to turn to Gatens and sophomore Meredith Stach to fill in. Giese had a bulk of the kills against Illinois with 18; in order for the rest of the team to be successful, the Hawks will need everyone to emerge collectively. This has not happened since Iowa defeated Michigan State, 3-1, on Sept. 25 at home.

"When you learn to be a champion and a competitor, that's what happens, is that you realize that you have to step it up and you have to be accountable and responsible to do what the team needs you to do," Fredrick said.

The Hawkeyes hit the road this weekend to attempt to get back on the winning track against Purdue (10-8, 3-5) today and Indiana (7-12, 1-7) on Saturday. The Boilermakers upset Illinois on the road, 3-1, on Sept. 24, while Indiana has a good amount of young talent — nine underclassmen and four upperclassmen. This weekend poses a great opportunity for the Hawks to improve their chemistry, Kavadas said.

"We're just really concentrating on the things that we have control of and just doing the little things is going to be key for beating any team," she said. "We definitely have been working on a lot of communication, and I think that's going to be huge for us."

Right guard Brian Ferentz said Penn State's defense reminds him of Iowa's — physical and up front with linebackers who can move and make plays.

'Not to knock the offense, but the games I've seen on TV and watching the film, it seems like the defense has really carried them this year,' he said.

'I think it's a heck of a challenge for us to go in there and try to move the football.'

Kirk Ferentz said the only so-called weakness the Nittany Lions have defensively is inexperience at linebacker with true frosh Dan Connor and sophomore Paul Posluszny both starting, but the pair's attitude and aggressiveness counters their lack of game experience.

He said the Nittany Lions defense doesn't play 'blitz-orama' but depends on a solid base formation, much like the Hawkeyes.

Penn State was the first team this season to intercept a pass from Purdue signal-caller Kyle Orton two weeks ago, sacking the Heisman Trophy candidate three times and holding him to his second-lowest quarterback rating of the year.

'What they're doing with their scheme ... it just really fits with the type of guys they have,' quarterback Drew Tate said. 'It's the combination of the athletes they have and the scheme. It makes it hard for some people.'

The biggest question for the Hawkeyes is how dependable their running game will be with fifth-string back Sam Brownlee getting the nod after the top four on the depth chart sustained injuries.

The 5-10, 200-pound sophomore and true freshman Damien Sims will have the bulk of Iowa's carries Saturday.

'They are tough kids who run hard and know what they are doing,' Paterno said. 'Their running game may not be quite as good as they would like it when they had their other kids, but it is good enough to kill you.'

Iowa used a lot of play action last weekend against the Buckeyes, and it will rely on an adequate ground attack to set up pass plays.

Tate is could become only the second quarterback in school history to throw three-consecutive 300-plus yard games, and his decision-making and field awareness has seemingly improved each week. Against the Buckeyes, the sophomore signal-caller didn't throw an interception, was sacked just twice, and threw the ball away on more than one occasion to prevent a loss.

Tate has spread the ball among several receivers and tight ends, and although the Hawkeyes may not have a go-to receiver, the different strengths that each player possesses have proven to be effective.

'We don't have Braylon Edwards on our team, but that's OK,' Ferentz said. 'Our guys are playing hard, and they're competing hard and giving us everything they have, and that's all you can ask.'

Coach looks for each player to step up

'Jennifer Skolaski went to the NCAA championships for us last season,' Long said. 'We will once again look to Jennifer to be instrumental in the team's success this season.'

'We also registered two divers for the Olympic Trials, and Nancilea Underwood placed fourth at the trials.'

Another plus for the team is that Underwood and Lisette Planken, a diver who made the Dutch national team last season, are returning All-Americans who redshirted last season and should be key members of the team this season.

Because swimming is scored on an individual basis, Long's goal is for each Hawkeye to do her part.

'As far as a team goal, we are just looking for each person to step it up individually,' he said. 'If each person can do that, then we will continue to move up.'

The Hawkeyes will get a firsthand look at where they are this weekend, when they open the season against the Big Ten's best, Wisconsin.

'It is one of the better teams in the country — it has an Olympic gold medalist returning,' Long said. 'It was the highest-placing Big Ten team last season [10th], and it will be good for the girls to race against some really tough competition.'

He will undoubtedly look for leadership from senior Skolaski, the team's most valuable swimmer/diver last season and one of three team captains. However, he expects other swimmers to take the next step, including junior Kelly Werner.

'We are really looking for great performances from the entire senior class,' he said. 'As far as singling out other girls, we expect to do great things ... Kelly Werner is one swimmer we see moving up to the next level.'

Cards in World Series

After posting 105 wins and running away with the NL Central, the Cardinals advanced to their first World Series under manager Tony La Russa, and first overall since 1987.

Next up, the Boston Red Sox in Game 1 on Saturday night at Fenway Park. By all accounts it should be a classic — they also met in the 1967 and 1946 Series. St. Louis won both, each time going the full seven games.

Pujols led the way, hitting .500 with four homers and nine RBIs. Overall, the teams combined for 25 home runs, the most in any postseason series.

Larry Walker singled home an insurance run in the eighth, and the club sporting the famed birds-on-the-bat logo captured its 16th pennant.

For the Astros, it was total disappointment.

They have never reached the World Series since their expansion season of 1962, the same year Clemens was born.

But the Rocket could not hold an early 2-0 lead in his record fourth start in a Game 7.

While Rolen and Pujols did the major damage in the sixth, Roger Cedeno surely deserved some credit for rattling the Rocket.

Cedeno opened the sixth with a pinch-hit single, his 11th hit in 25 lifetime at-bats against Clemens, and immediately began dancing off first base. Clemens made three pickoff throws and stepped off the rubber three times trying to hold Cedeno close.

That's right, ladies, my weekend is planned! But Saturday night, this parlay card of mine will have turned $5 into a couple gallons of Dom Perignon.

The fun of sports betting? Victory tastes sweet.

And it's not just totally feasible parlays such as the aforementioned no-brainer. Did you know the Hawkeyes are 2.5 point dogs at Penn State this weekend? I'll take that action like hotel shampoo.

USC against Washington at home? The Trojans are safer than a prophylactic in the Coliseum.

Oh, baby, I can't wait until college hoops time. Washington's ex-football coach Rick Neuheisel knows what I'm talking about. Talk about some PTP-ers (Prime Time Proposition bets). It's the only time of year you can bet on whether Rashard McCants will hit his head on the rim, if Dick Vitale will reach an octave lower than annoying, or if Jim Nantz will drown in the drippings from his own sappy commentary — all with a click of a mouse. What will happen first (for 3/2 odds): a five seed beats a 12, a one seed gets knocked out, Bob Knight dons a sweater advertising Preparation H, or Steve Alford adjusts his recliner while watching from his home? I don't know, but I can't wait to find out.

Maybe I'm getting ahead of myself. Maybe some of those bets are a bit of a stretch. But mom, the other kids are doing it.

I ran into a kid the other day who's wiring money through Western Union to drop a couple Benjamins on the Iowa game. I inquired at last weekend's tailgate about a minor 'bookie service,' insisting I should share in him the trust that he feels in me. You thought an Oak Tree was shady. It sounded like the next thing I know there'd be a couple of curiously strong men outside of my house waiting to put me in a metal box.

Kids start betting on all sorts of sports at a very young age. If they don't learn from their parents, then they learn from their friends, or their friends' parents.

The first NCAA pool UI junior John Herrity entered was in sixth grade for either two or five bucks — he couldn't remember. Actually, it was two. I know, because I set up the thing up (Confession, Mrs. Principal, Mr. Phys. Ed was in the pool).

Since then, Herrity gambles on sports modestly.

'I like outcomes. I think it's crazy to bet on tip-offs, who's gonna do what first, and stuff like that,' he said.

'With friends I only bet five to 10 bucks or a beer or two at a bar,' he added.

'I'm a college kid; I try not to get too crazy.'

So, John, are you saying the kind of stuff I'm talking about is crazy? There's nothing crazy about a six-team parlay or a 7-point teaser. You said NCAA President Myles Brand thinks college sports betting is a plague? What's he going to say next, smoking causes cancer? There's no problem with this type of insatiable wagering.

Listen, I know that Crusader U. will get up set by Cup Holder Tech, so I'm taking the points. Do you have any idea how much research I've done?

And if you still think I'm wrong ... Wanna bet?

Court: Paul Hamm keeps Olympic gold

BY NANCY ARMOUR
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Paul Hamm can keep his Olympic gold medal. Sports' highest court rejected a South Korean appeal on Thursday, ruling that Hamm is the rightful champion in the men's all-around gymnastics competition at the Athens Games.

"This is, obviously, a great day for me," he said. "The decision from the Court of Arbitration for Sport confirms what I've always felt in my heart, which is that I was champion that night and Olympic gold medalist."

Gregory Bull/Associated Press

Gymnast Paul Hamm holds his 2004 Olympic gold medal during a news conference in New York, on Thursday. Sports' highest court rejected a South Korean appeal Thursday, ruling that Hamm is the rightful champion in the men's all-around gymnastics competition in the Athens Games.

The decision by a three-judge panel from the court ends a saga that began more than two months ago, when South Korea's Yang Tae-young claimed a scoring error cost him the title.

Yang asked the court to order international gymnastics officials to change the results and adjust the medal rankings so he would get the gold and Hamm the silver. But the court panel dismissed the appeal, leaving Hamm with the gold and Yang with his bronze. Kim Dae-eun of South Korea was the silver medalist.

The verdict is final and cannot be appealed.

"An error identified with the benefit of hindsight, whether admitted or not, cannot be a ground for reversing a result of a competition," the panel said.

Yang said he accepted the court's decision and doesn't want to think about it anymore.

"I will perform better in the future so that such an error won't happen again," he said. "I won't stop here. ... My plan is to train very hard and win a gold in the next Olympics in Beijing."

Hamm won the gold Aug. 18, rallying from 12th place with only two events left to become the first American man to win gymnastics' biggest prize. But two days later, gymnastics officials discovered that Yang had been wrongly docked a tenth of a point on his second-to-last routine, the parallel bars.

Yang ended up with the bronze, 0.049 points behind Hamm. Add that extra 0.100, though, and Yang would have finished on top, 0.051 points ahead of the American.

That, however, assumes everything in the final rotation played out the same way — a big if.

"For a variety of reasons related to the reality of athletics competition and the human psyche, simply changing the parallel bars result would not necessarily ... produce the true outcome," said Jeff Benz, the general counsel for the U.S. Olympic Committee.

Soccer hosts Minnesota

The Iowa women's soccer team will close out the home portion of its 2004 schedule this weekend when it hosts Minnesota and the Creighton Bluejays.

The Hawkeyes are coming off two tough Big Ten contests, falling 8-0 to Penn State and 4-1 to Ohio State. Freshman Jamie Maltman recorded her first career goal Sunday afternoon.

Senior goalkeeper Britta Voegel continues to add to her save total, with 469. The goalie will be looking to rack up some more saves this weekend against the Golden Gophers and Creighton.

The Hawkeyes are led by Lindsey Phillips, the team's leading scorer this season with two goals, and Danielle Oswald, who leads the team with two assists.

Following this weekend's play, the Hawkeyes will travel to Ames for the Cy-Hawk series with the Cyclones.

Iowa's Saturday match with Minnesota is scheduled for 7 p.m.; the Oct. 24 matinee will begin at 1 p.m. Both games will be held at the Iowa Soccer Complex.

Field hockey to face Michigan State

The Iowa field-hockey team will look to clinch at least a share of the Big Ten conference title today, traveling to East Lansing, Mich., to take on fifth-ranked Michigan State. The Spartans are 13-2 on the year, 3-1 in Big Ten play.

The 15th-ranked Hawkeyes are riding a six-game winning streak, and they have not tasted defeat in conference play this year. With a win over Michigan State, Iowa would clinch a share of the Big Ten title and would control its own destiny for an outright championship. Iowa would clinch the title outright with a victory in its final Big Ten game against Northwestern on Oct. 29.

Once, Iowa dominated Michigan State, but the Spartans have taken four of the last five.

Purdue looks to stop losses to Michigan

BY JON KRAWCZYNSKI

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Purdue quarterback Kyle Orton has no trouble remembering how he felt after last year's game at Michigan.

"Real sore," he said. No wonder. Orton was sacked seven times en route to a 31-3 loss to the Wolverines.

"We didn't have a chance last year," Orton said. "They took us out of our game right away."

The Boilermakers rolled into Ann Arbor last season undefeated in the conference and in the hunt for a Big Ten title.

They left battered and beaten, the latest installment in what seems like a lifetime of torment at the hands of the Wolverines. Michigan leads the all-time series 39-12, and it has won three in a row and 13 of the last 15 against Purdue.

This time, it's the 13th-ranked Wolverines (6-1, 4-0) who come to No. 12 Purdue (5-1, 2-1) with Big Ten title aspirations.

The Boilermakers see Saturday's game as a chance to finally get over the hump against Michigan and get back into the conference title hunt at the same time.

"It's always important to beat Michigan. Every year it's a big game for us," Orton said. "This year it's different, coming off of a loss. We have to really bounce back in a big way, and this would be a great way to do it, by beating Michigan at home."

Purdue is coming off a tough 20-17 loss to No. 6 Wisconsin last week, and now has to face its biggest nemesis.

Orton has as much to prove as anybody. In his first start against Michigan — at the Big House last year — he was 18-for-37 for 184 yards and two interceptions.

"I think it was a very aggressive game plan last year," Michigan cornerback Marlin Jackson said. "I think the coaches probably have the same thing in mind."

This is how Orton assessed his play against Michigan: "Not very good. They've done a good job disrupting our offense. They ran the entire tempo of the game and we never knew where they were coming from."

The Boilermakers managed just 242 yards of offense. Their three points were the fewest scored in coach Joe Tiller's seven years and it was also the most lopsided defeat in his tenure.

"Michigan got after us, and we've changed some things to shore up protections and get the ball off," said Tiller, who is 1-4 against the Wolverines.

Michigan coach Lloyd Carr can't blame him.

"Any time you have something like that happen, you're going to study that film, and you're going to make changes," Carr said. "I think they've done that."

"I think he has greater confidence today in other receivers than he did a year ago," Tiller said. "And as a result, his mentality going into the game will be different than it was a year ago."

'It felt good being back out there ... looking into guys' eyes.'

Trotter set for first start with Eagles

PHILADELPHIA — Jeremiah Trotter is back in his old spot — for now at least.

With Mark Simoneau sidelined by a foot injury, Trotter is getting ready for his first start at middle linebacker since returning to the Philadelphia Eagles. A two-time Pro Bowler, Trotter has mainly been a special-teams contributor this season. He spent the last two days practicing with the first-team defense for the Oct. 24 game against the Cleveland Browns.

"It felt good being back out there, being the quarterback on defense, looking into guys' eyes," Trotter said. "It felt like I belonged."

He spent his first four seasons in Philadelphia, establishing himself as one of the best players at his position. He had 202 tackles in his second season in 1999 and went to the Pro Bowl the next two years.

A popular player among fans, he left the Eagles following a bitter contract dispute after the 2001 season. He signed a seven-year, $35 million contract with Washington, but failed to live up to expectations in two seasons with the Redskins.

Trotter was released for salary-cap purposes earlier this year, and he came back to the Eagles humbled, with a new role as a special-teams player and significantly less money; he signed for under $1 million.

So far, he has been Philadelphia's top player on special teams, recording 11 tackles and recovering an onside kick in Sunday's 30-8 win over Carolina.

"People who knew Jeremiah, we expected him to be 100 percent into it and have fun," special-teams coach John Harbaugh said. "He likes to play football. He wants to be on the field. On the sideline, he's into it. In practice, he's into it. He's into it in meetings. That's just his personality."

STRETCH RUN

Nick Loomis/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Drew Tate is beginning to heat up, throwing for 300-plus yards in consecutive games — only the third quarterback in school history to accomplish the feat. The Hawkeyes beat Ohio State last weekend for the first time in more than a decade, and they will then start thinking about bowl positioning in the final five games.

Drew Tate leads the Hawkeyes into the critical part of the season with a January bowl in mind

BY JASON BRUMMOND

THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa is in position it has never been in under Kirk Ferentz.

His team will play Saturday following a 33-7 win over traditional Big Ten powerhouse Ohio State in Kinnick Stadium, a victory that came after the program had strung together eight-consecutive losses to the Buckeyes.

But Ferentz hopes the Hawkeyes' win last weekend is more than just a history lesson. He wants to make sure his team responds well, and he said the Hawks need to put any victory celebration behind them.

"That's going to be the challenge for us this week," he said on Tuesday. "Is that a game that helps propel us, or is it a game that distracts us?"

With five games remaining on the conference schedule, Ferentz said the team's margin for error is thin, and it's still working on establishing itself.

But he said there's a "major difference" between being 4-3 and 5-2, which accents the importance of last week's win.

The Hawkeyes will travel to Penn State on Saturday looking for their first victory outside of Iowa City this year — Iowa lost at Arizona State, 44-7, on Sept. 18 and at Michigan, 30-17, on Sept. 25. In 2003, the team's only three losses occurred outside of Kinnick Stadium.

But Iowa has had success in State College during the last decade, and Ferentz is perfect in two trips to Beaver Stadium.

"If you're going to have a good football team, you have to win on the road," he said. "That's just part of the deal, and it's a challenge. I told the guys [this week] there's nothing magical about it."

After this weekend, the Hawkeyes' game against a struggling Illinois team looks to be the closest thing to a lock on their schedule.

'If you're not getting better in October and November, then you're getting worse. The further you get along in the season, the more important [the games] are. The more you win, the more important your next game is. If you're not improving, you're in trouble.'

— Brian Ferentz

Aaron Holmgren/The Daily Iowan

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz yells on the sideline during Iowa's 33-7 win over Ohio State last weekend — his first-ever against the Buckeyes. The six-year Hawkeye coach expects each of Iowa's final five games to be close, 60-minute contests.

Illini coach Ron Turner is benching former Hawkeye signal-caller Jon Beutjer on Saturday, and he will start either a sophomore or redshirt freshman to look for the Illini's first conference win of the year.

But Ferentz said the league has so much parity that he expects every game to be close going into the fourth quarter. Linebacker Chad Greenway said it's almost to the point where Iowa could legitimately win-out or lose the rest of its games.

"You never have a week off," right guard Brian Ferentz said. "You have a bye week — that's it."

The last five seasons, Kirk Ferentz's teams have relied on progress during the year, and the Hawkeye offense, especially sophomore quarterback Drew Tate, has improved dramatically since the Arizona State game.

Last year, Iowa also had two losses following its game against Ohio State, and the Hawks won five of their last six, including a 37-17 victory over Florida in the Outback Bowl. Brian Ferentz said it shows them that the Hawkeyes are not bad despite early struggles, but they still need to continue building.

"If you're not getting better in October and November, then you're getting worse," he said. "The further you get along in the season, the more important [the games] are. The more you win, the more important your next game is. If you're not improving, you're in trouble."

After the two-game road swing, Iowa's final three games are against some of the conference's toughest squads. The Hawkeyes host one of the nation's most explosive offenses — Purdue on Nov. 6 — and arguably the country's best defense — Wisconsin on Nov. 20. Iowa will travel to Minnesota between the two home games to play a Gopher team that has lost two straight after looking nearly unstoppable with its ground game earlier this season.

"We have to take one game at a time and really look at every game as being important and having a major effect on our season," Greenway said. "If we lose one or two more football games, we're essentially not looking at the bowl game we want to be at."

Greenway said the win against Ohio State will help motivate the Hawkeyes, especially after a "rough start" when Iowa lost two in a row and the week before that squeaked by a dismal Iowa State team.

Iowa is a 2-point underdog Saturday but has a good chance to return to Kinnick in two weeks with a pair of victories, setting up three key games to dictate the Hawkeyes' bowl path.

Wisconsin, which does not play Michigan this year, has the most favorable remaining schedule in the league, but Ferentz said he isn't worried about what happens over the next five weeks.

He said the Hawks have a tough game this week, then they look to the next game, and at some point they'll "take inventory."

"I told our guys in camp, 'Forget about the conference race,'" he said. "Every win counts toward a better bowl. If you become eligible, then every win on top of that, no matter who it's against, helps your position."

Iowa's outlook: Week by week

By Jason Brummond
and Nick Richards

OCT. 23 @ PENN ST.

The Hawkeyes look for their first road win of the year at the stadium in which they have won three straight and five of the last six. The Nittany Lions have one of the top defenses in the Big Ten, giving up 305.5 yards a game, but Iowa's offense seems to be coming to life.

Chance of winning: 65 percent

OCT. 30 @ ILLINOIS

If Iowa's guaranteed a win, this is it. Illini coach Ron Turner benched signal-caller Jon Beutjer and will look to an underclassman to take over. The Illini have surrendered 29.3 points a game this season.

Chance of winning: 85 percent

NOV. 6 PURDUE

This game could go either way. Iowa's home winning streak and Purdue quarterback Kyle Orton vs. the Hawkeyes' secondary — something has to give. The Boilermakers' pass defense has been suspect, giving up 243.7 yards a game through the air — Illinois scored 30 points on them, and Notre Dame had more than 500 yards of offense.

Chance of winning: 50 percent

NOV. 13 @ MINNESOTA

The Gophers potent running game vs. Iowa's stout defensive line. Out of Iowa's last three games, this contest offers its best chances of winning. After consecutive losses to Michigan and Michigan State, Minnesota could be on a downward spiral to El Paso.

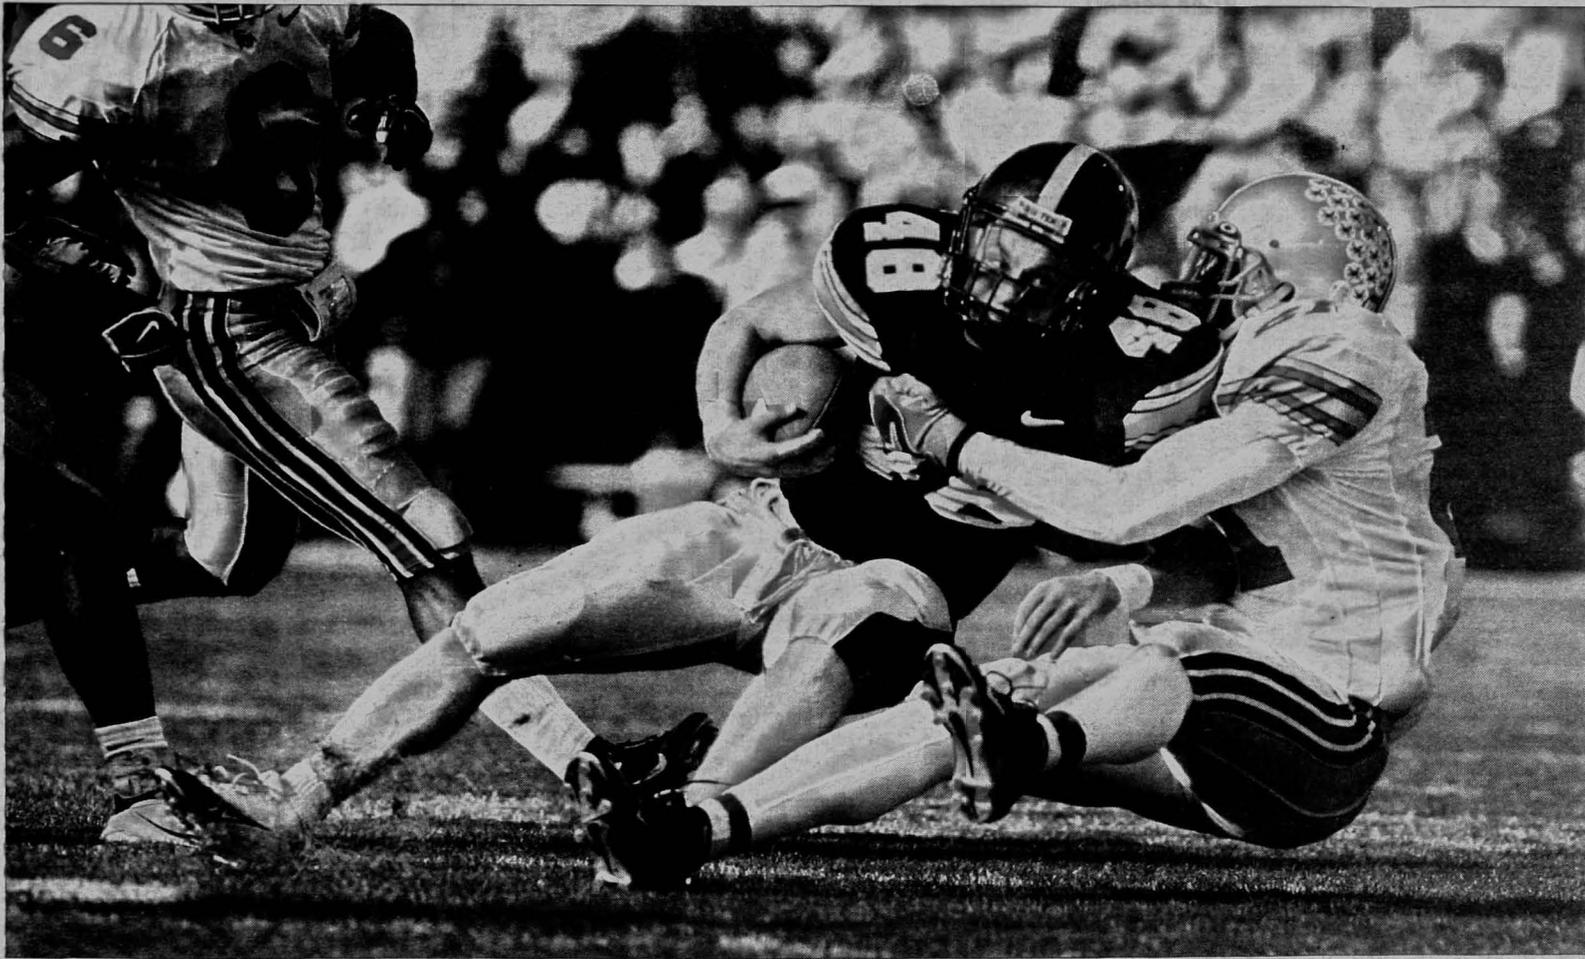

Chance of winning: 60 percent

NOV. 20 WISCONSIN

The Badgers could very well be undefeated going into the season finale, and the Hawkeyes' homefield-advantage should play a significant role. Wisconsin may have the best defense in the country, giving up just 8 points a game and 222.4 yards a game. But if Drew Tate continues improving at the rate he has this last month, he could be scary good by the end of November.

Chance of winning: 45 percent

Brownlee gets opportunity to start

Nick Loomis/The Daily Iowan

Iowa sophomore running back Sam Brownlee gets taken down last weekend against Ohio State. The 5-10, 200-pound Emmetsburg, Iowa native will start for the first time in his college career after junior Marques Simmons left in the first quarter with an ankle injury.

The fifth-string running back prepares to start his first-career game on Saturday at Penn State

BY JASON BRUMMOND
THE DAILY IOWAN

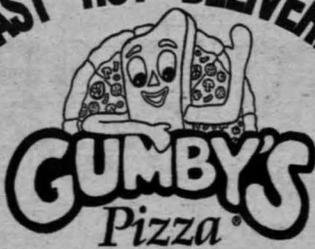

Sam Brownlee, come on down. You're the next starting running back for the Iowa football team. It's hard to fathom that two months ago the sophomore was imitating the opposition's starting back to help the Hawkeye defensive starters prepare for the weekend. Now, three season-ending knee injuries and one bum ankle later, Brownlee is the starter. Iowa has lost three running backs to anterior cruciate ligament tears — junior Marcus Schnoor (Sept. 4), redshirt freshman Albert Young (Sept. 11), and senior Jermelle Lewis (Oct. 2). Junior Marques Simmons suffered a "significant" ankle injury in the first quarter against Ohio State last weekend and will miss at least two weeks. But Brownlee said he can't think about the injuries when he's on the field. "It's always in the back of someone's mind," he said. "Somebody's always one play away from playing. I guess I try not to dwell on that." The 5-10, 200-pound Brownlee has rushed for 96 yards in his college career, including 35 yards on 10 carries on Oct. 16 against the Buckeyes, including a 10-yard pickup on third-and-nine at the end of the first quarter that led to a Kyle Schlicher field goal. In the fourth quarter, Brownlee caught a pitchout on the third-and-one, picking up 3 yards, and tight end Scott Chandler caught an 8-yard touchdown pass on the next play. "He's a conscientious, steady, tough-minded guy," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "We have great trust and faith in him." True freshman Damian Sims, who complements Brownlee's running style, will help the sophomore shoulder Iowa's rushing load. The 5-9, 200-pound Sims, who ran for around 5,000 yards and 65 touchdowns during his prep career, is elusive, quick, and confident, Ferentz said. The six-year Iowa coach said he doesn't have a set plan or formula for how the two backs will be used on Saturday against Penn State, but he said they will rely on both underclassmen to help the Hawkeyes' offense.

The Nittany Lions have the conference's fifth-best run defense, surrendering 125 yards a game and five rushing touchdowns on the season. But sophomore quarterback Drew Tate has thrown for 300-plus yards in consecutive weeks and passing will again likely be the focus of Iowa's attack. But Brownlee has to keep Penn State's secondary and linebacker honest against the run. "Sam runs hard, and he makes you look good," right guard Brian Ferentz said. "There's nothing better than a running back who makes you look good." Kirk Ferentz said unlike Fred Russell or Lewis, who are more patient at the line and wait for holes to open up, Brownlee will attack any opening when he sees it. "He's a very hard runner, and he hits the hole quick," said Iowa linebacker Chad Greenway, who went up against Brownlee when the running back was on the scout team at the beginning of the year. "He's a guy who's tough to defend because in our blocking scheme we need a guy that can just run downhill and hit the hole."

Brownlee is the third football star from Emmetsburg in the last five years to walk on and play a potentially determining role for the Hawkeyes. Center Bruce Nelson, now with the NFL's Carolina Panthers, and linebacker Grant Steen were walk-ons who helped lead Iowa to its Orange Bowl berth in 2002. "They say there's something in the water," Brownlee said. He led Emmetsburg High School to a 32-2 three-year record, rushing for 985 yards and five touchdowns during his senior campaign. The 20-year-old earned first-team all-conference and second-team All-State accolades in the final season of his prep career. He's a walk-on. He's undersized. He didn't even rush for 1,000 yards in a high-school season. But Brownlee will be a starting running back in the Big Ten on Saturday. "The coaches always tell us to see yourself making the big play," Brownlee said. "I think I see myself doing that. I see myself in this position." PREGAME

Booker Stanley, running back

Northwestern at Wisconsin

Key for the Wildcats: As well as quarterback Brett Basanez has played at times this season, he won't have a tougher time this year putting points on the board as he will on Saturday. The Badgers are giving up only 8 points a game, and that minuscule number could even go down with the teams they have left on their schedule. If the Wildcats can't sustain drives, it's going to be a long afternoon.

Key for the Badgers: No one is questioning its defense, but Wisconsin relied on its D to score the go-ahead touchdown. Quarterback John Stocco has been a question mark all season, and he needs to develop some consistency. Running back Anthony Davis was held in check last weekend (66 yards on 18 carries), and if he is slowed down, this offense doesn't move.

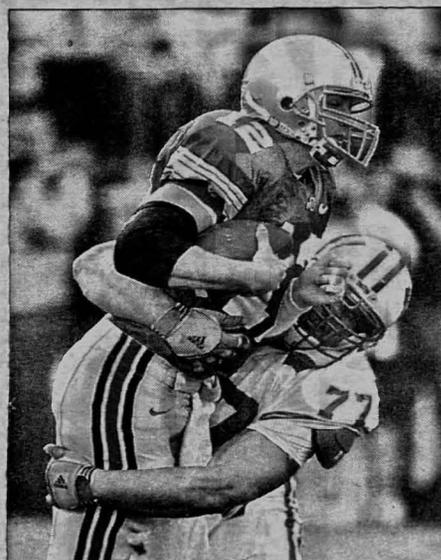

Prediction: It will, of course, be a low-scoring game, but the Badgers should win this by a "big margin," according to their standards. The Wildcats haven't won on the road yet, and they needed two overtimes to edge Indiana last week. Wisconsin will even flirt with a shutout.

Indiana at Ohio State

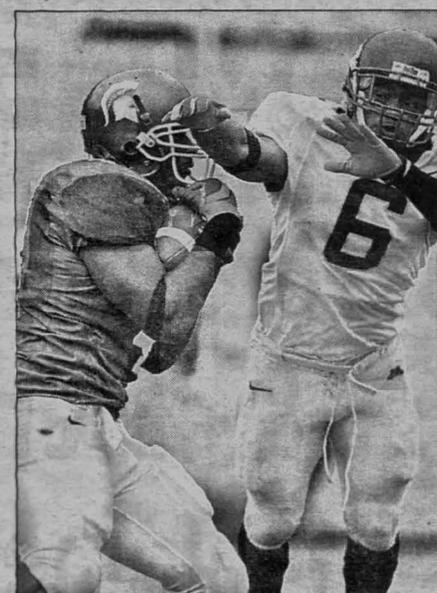

Key for the Hoosiers: This is the first time in years that Indiana has a legitimate shot at beating Ohio State in football. What do they need to do? Put points on the board. The Buckeye offense has looked so inept that if they surrender three or four touchdowns, they aren't going to win.

Key for the Buckeyes: Ohio State is 0-3 in the Big Ten for the first time since 1988, and this is a must-win if it wants to contend for a bowl game this season. Coach Jim Tressel has been hearing from the media and fans to start backup quarterback Troy Smith. He decided to go with Smith and benching Justin Zwick, who has completed 50 percent of his passes and has more interceptions than touchdowns.

Prediction: One of these conference teams will get themselves in the win column in conference play and it's not going to be the Hoosiers. Indiana quarterback Matt LoVecchio has to do well against Ohio State's defense and he's been too inconsistent to secure anything for the Hoosiers.

Justin Zwick, quarterback

Quentin White, defensive back

Illinois at Minnesota

Key for the Fighting Illini: Coach Ron Turner decided this week to bench former Iowa quarterback Jon Beutjer, and he will turn to a trio of underclassmen to take over the signal-calling duties. Chris Pazan, Tim Brasic, or Brad Bower will start on Saturday even though Illinois' offense is averaging 370 yards a game. Senior running back Pierre Thomas is coming off two solid games, but he will have to make things easier for the new quarterback.

Key for the Gophers: Minnesota is coming off an embarrassing loss to Michigan State after a tough loss against Michigan, but the Gophers need to get back on track this weekend to ensure a quality bowl berth. A combination of Minnesota being the Big Ten's top rushing team and Illinois being the conference's worst team defending against the run should almost guarantee a win.

Prediction: A new QB won't help here. Illinois isn't going to a bowl game this season, and it won't win this game on Saturday.

The DI Pregame editor breaks down all of the conference's matchups

Michigan at Purdue

Key for the Wolverines: Michigan's rush defense has been better than its pass defense, and that's not going to benefit it in this game. But the Wolverines lead the Big Ten in interceptions (14), and they'll have to force Purdue quarterback Kyle Orton to make mistakes.

But the Boilermaker signal-caller has just three interceptions this year to 18 touchdowns, so it's going to be a challenge. The more important aspect may be pressure up front. Orton was sacked five times last weekend against Wisconsin, and look for Michigan to throw a variety of blitzes at the senior.

Key for the Boilermakers: Purdue's defense was solid last week, giving up only 14 offensive points, but it will be challenged this week by the emerging Chad Henne. The Boilermakers have been suspect against the pass (243.7 yards a game and just three interceptions), and they'll need to make a statement to stop the Wolverines attack.

Prediction: If Purdue loses, it's practically eliminated from conference title contention. If Michigan loses, it will need someone to knock off Wisconsin (best chance is probably Iowa on Nov. 20).

It may come down to which team's pass defense makes the biggest impact. The Wolverines' talented secondary has a better chance of harassing Orton than Purdue's defensive backs do of stopping Henne. Michigan wins the conference game of the week.

Paterno nowhere past his prime

Never mind the fact that he's 78 and has Coke bottles for glasses.

Joe Paterno is still the man.

Never mind the fact that this year's Penn State team is 2-4 and winless in the Big Ten.

He's still that guy.

Don't tell the Hawkeyes that Paterno can't coach anymore or that he's washed up, because they don't buy it. Not one player or coach believes it. His passion for the game is still light years ahead of most coaches in the country.

"That's a ridiculous statement in my mind [that Paterno is past his prime]," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "I can say that from personal experience. Coaching, seeing his teams, and being on the same field he is, and going to league meetings,

NICK RICHARDS

I just think it's a ludicrous statement."

Paterno's record can't be overlooked. He has won two national titles, has coached five undefeated teams in his career, he's coached 457 games — all at Penn State — and has won 341 games, second only to Bobby Bowden.

Yes, Paterno has fallen on hard times. But anyone would be if he lost the players Paterno has in the past few seasons. Take a look at the players who left after Penn State's 2002 season.

Everyone seems to forget that two years ago, he coached the likes of Larry Johnson, Bryant Johnson, Jimmy Kennedy, Michael Haynes, and Anthony Adams. Larry Johnson was the Doak Walker and Walter Camp Award winner, all five players were drafted in the 2003 draft, and four were first-round selections. He graduated most of the team in 2002, leaving a load of freshmen and sophomores who have taken their lumps over the last 1½ seasons, winning just five games over that time. Fifty-eight of the 101 players on the Penn State roster are freshmen or sophomores. The future will be bright again at Penn State once these players mature and learn from the mistakes they've made the last two seasons.

One run stands out in the minds of many Hawkeyes that demonstrated Paterno's fire and desire to win. After the Hawkeyes' epic 42-35 win over the Nittany Lions in 2002, Paterno, after shaking hands with Ferentz, sprinted down the field to berate the officiating crew, which he thought had missed crucial calls against his team.

"I have great respect for coach Paterno and what he's done with that program," said Ed Hinkel, a native of Erie, Pa. "Chasing down that ref — that just shows how much he wants it."

Many in the Big Ten, including Ferentz and Purdue head coach Joe Tiller, believe next year's Penn State squad could be one of the best teams Paterno has had in years.

"I read a quote Joe Tiller said that he really thought next year might be as good a Penn State team as coach Paterno has had up there in quite some time," Ferentz said. "That's his comment, not mine, and I can see why he said that. I had good feelings about their team coming into the season. They are very, very talented."

Paterno himself said he's looking forward to the upcoming seasons, and he said in the Penn State media guide he's more fired up than he was 10 years ago as a coach.

"I may be more fired up than I was 10 years ago. I've had at least one unbeaten team in the 1960s, '70s, '80s, and '90s. I'd like to do it one more time," Paterno said.

And they say he's washed up?
