Federal authorities released a composite sketch last week of a woman wanted for questioning in last November's break-in at Spence Laboratories, while the UI announced that the cost of damages from the vandalism was an estimated $450,000.

The person of interest is described as a light-skinned white female with dark hair in her late teens to early 20s, 5-2 to 5-6. She was last seen wearing a gray hooded sweatshirt, light brown khaki pants, white tennis shoes, and a light blue plastic wristwatch. She was carrying a brown crocheted fabric purse with rope handles and a black nylon wallet with a picture of the Tinkerbell cartoon character on the side.

As of Sunday afternoon, there were no new developments relating to the suspect. The FBI is urging anyone with information to contact the Omaha office or submit a tip online.

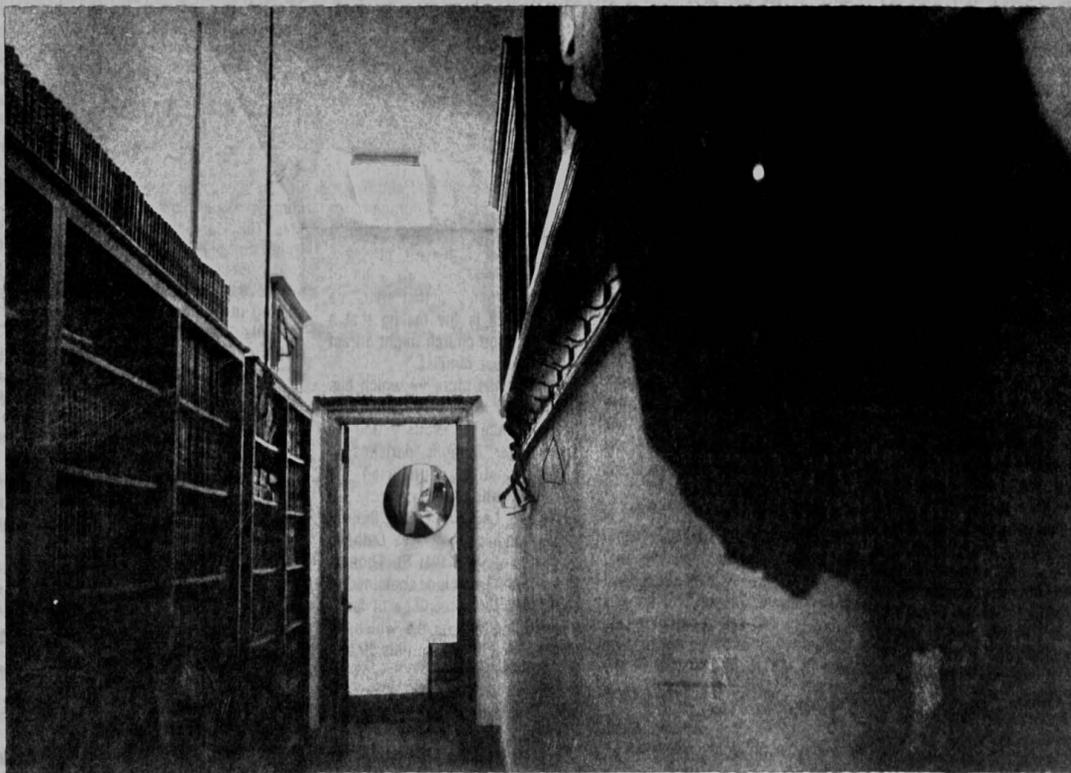

"We're grateful that the FBI seems to be staying on the case and pursuing it," said Steve Parrott, the UI's director of University Relations.

Parrott emphasized that the woman was wanted just for questioning — the FBI is "not accusing that person" of being

SECURITY IN THE COURT

County officials search for ways of upgrading safeguards at the courthouse

BY SEUNG MIN KIM
THE DAILY IOWAN

The man went ballistic — so emotional, police nearby had to subdue him.

Just outside Courtroom 2A, in a building where emotions can run high and violence might erupt without warning, officers ended the outburst that could have turned dangerous. But the incident last year — however minor — reminded Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White of the need for tight security. The existing safeguards at the Johnson County Courthouse, 417 S. Clinton St., he said, are "not much."

Guns, knives, and other prohibited items, such as a can of beer, have been found at the three-story courthouse in recent years. A man was barred from the courthouse after threatening court officials. And on occasion, White needed police escorts at work to guard him from angry residents who marched to his office's front desk.

Recent tragedies, including the murder of a federal judge's husband and mother in Chicago and the shooting rampage in an Atlanta courthouse, have cast a national spotlight on the sometimes volatile conflicts that arise in courtrooms — and the security needed to stop them.

On any typical day, visitors to the Johnson County Courthouse find an entrance without metal detectors and halls without guards. The county's clerks, facing at least one hostile patron per day, sit unshielded in open rooms, unlike their counterparts in other regions.

Johnson County's courthouse security lags behind many of its peer counties, a Daily Iowan review of courthouses around the state shows. The court plans to add two more guards in coming months, but county leaders worry that budget shortfalls will halt further security improvements.

A convex mirror hanging at the end of a hallway in the Johnson County Courthouse is one of the only visible security measures in the building. County leaders and law-enforcement agents say their hands are tied by state and county budget shortfalls — forcing them to improve security incrementally.

UI promises to reach top 10

The university outlines its vision in its strategic plan for the regents

BY SEUNG MIN KIM
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI officials are pledging to catapult the university into the top 10 of public schools in the country by strengthening undergraduate and graduate programs while boosting diversity.

Under a new strategic plan unveiled for the state Board of Regents, university leaders also call for a greater partnership between the university and public agencies, while effectively reallocating resources within the school.

The plan is part of a required blueprint that the state's three public universities send to the regents every five years, outlining each school's vision.

"We reviewed the list of core values and decided not to change much," UI Provost Michael Hogan said.

"It is still realistic to become one of the 10 best in the nation, and it depends on how resources are allocated."

The plan, called the Iowa Promise, is divided into five areas of focus: undergraduate education, graduate education and research, diversity, vitality, and engagement.

Officials cited 47 benchmarks to track their progress, including raising graduation and retention rates, while increasing the number of first-year seminars and students who study abroad.

The UI also wants to aggressively diversify the university community — a goal that drew concern from one regent who urged the university to consider socioeconomic status in evaluating diversity.

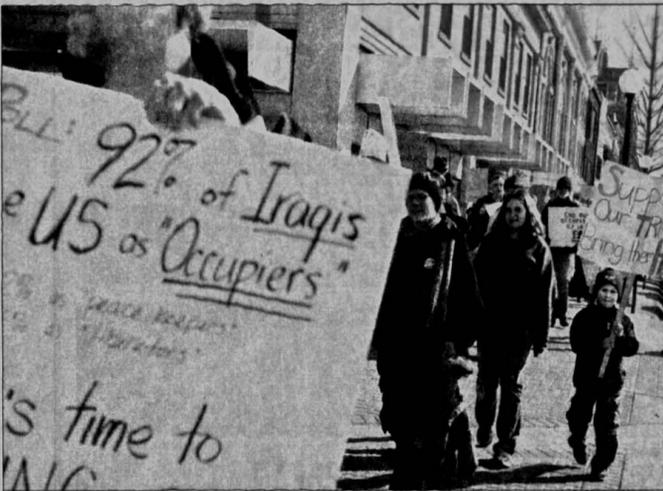

"Sometimes, the way universities become among the distinguished is by whom you recruit, not the value you add in terms of progress," Regent Mary Ellen Becker said.

Nearly 200 locals collected on the Pedestrian Mall on Sunday, all with the same goal in mind: peace.

One day after the two-year anniversary of the Iraq war, such chants as "President Bush, you can't hide, we charge you with genocide" echoed through the downtown streets as protesters marched in a line that stretched nearly a city block.

Before weaving through the streets, speakers jumped behind the microphone decrying the war as both illegal and immoral, calling for the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of U.S. and coalition troops.

"Stop being nice," said Holly Berkowitz, an organizer of the Iowa City branch of the website impeachbushmeetup.com. "[Bush] isn't nice. He doesn't even know the meaning of nice."

UI Spanish Professor Tom Lewis addressed the boisterous crowd with strong words of resistance, calling the Iraq effort a "war crime based on a huge web of lies."

"The sole purpose of this war was to install a puppet government and control the flow of oil," he said, eliciting a large round of applause from the group.

UI Antiwar Committee member Brian Gryzlak, who emceed the event, said protesting puts a human face to the opposition.

"Most network coverage fails to give the other side," he said as musicians in the background belted out anti-war tunes.

Pierce lawyers get records

BY ALEX LANG
THE DAILY IOWAN

ADEL, Iowa — Attorneys in the Pierre Pierce case argued behind closed doors on March 18 for two and a half hours as defense lawyers sought the medical and counseling records of his accuser.

District Court Judge Gregory Hulse issued an order later in the day allowing Pierce's attorneys to view the records until April 15 to collect information.

The defense also requested more information on the accuser's relationship with Pierce and other men.

Hulse set an April 1 hearing to consider Iowa Attorney General's Office attorney Patricia Houlihan's motion to prohibit the records and the accuser's relationship history to be used in the May 10 trial. He also set a pretrial conference on other motions for April 20.

Neither Houlihan nor Tammy Westhoff-Gentry, one of Pierce's attorneys, commented after the hearing.

Pierce has been charged

Pierce former Iowa player

with felony counts of burglary, assault with intent to commit sexual abuse, and criminal mischief, and the former Hawkeye basketball star faces up to 56 years in prison if convicted. He has plead not guilty on all counts.

Police allege that Pierce choked the woman and threatened her with a knife in addition to stealing her laptop computer and camera after he became angry over the woman's relationship with another man.

Pierce was dismissed from the Iowa men's basketball team on Feb. 2 by head coach Steve Alford after the accusations became public. It was the second time Pierce has been in trouble with the law since joining the Hawkeyes in 2001. In 2002, he pleaded guilty to assault causing injury after an incident at his Iowa City apartment. The charge was expunged from his record after he completed community service and probation.

Defense attorneys are seeking telephone calls and e-mails exchanged between the Pierce and the woman in the latest incident and any contact the Dallas County Attorney's Office had with the UI athletics department and university President David Skorton.

Student accused of taking films

A UI student faces a felony charge after he was accused earlier this month of stealing more than $72,000 in film reels from the Main Library since January.

Andrew Annis, 23, was charged on March 9 with first-degree theft for allegedly taking 16-mm reels from the library between Jan. 1 and March 3. Police reports allege that Annis stole 73 of the reels.

Library staff told police the stolen reels amount to $72,800. A library employee said Sunday afternoon that Annis does not work in Media Services, where the film reels are stored.

Annis is listed as the visual-arts coordinator of Project Arts, a program that coordinates performances and oversees five rotating gallery spaces at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

First-degree theft is a Class C felony punishable by up to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

The American Association of University Women announced March 17 that it will support UI employee David Johnson in his battle against the UI over sex discrimination. Johnson contends that the UI's parental-leave policy, which excludes biological fathers only, discriminates on the basis of sex.

In December 2004, Johnson's case was dismissed. He has since appealed that decision, and he will now have assistance from the group's network of members, legal practitioners, and experts.

Leslie Annexstein, the director of the group's legal-advocacy fund, said in a press release that Johnson's case "strikes at the heart of gender stereotypes."

"It pigeonholes women in the traditional role of caregiver and men in the traditional role of the primary moneymaker and job-holder," she said.

President John LePeau said Franklin had long encouraged area churches to plan for their futures.

"We know [Coralville] is a growing area, and there are a lot of Catholic families in that area," he said. "There is the feeling that a neighborhood church might attract some of these families."

St. Thomas More — which has been at its North Riverside Drive location since the 1960s — and the three other Catholic parishes in town collectively purchased the Coralville site approximately 10 years ago, LePeau said. A 1998-99 study conducted by area Catholic churches showed that St. Thomas More's congregation contained a slightly larger percentage of families residing in Coralville, which, he said, is likely the reason his church was chosen to move.

Moving would take a several years, he said. A parish planning meeting is set for April 3.

Congress passed after the highly contested 2000 presidential election. The state distributes money based on the number of registered voters in each county.

"We're extremely happy this is coming to fruition, although we're certainly in better shape than some of our fellow counties," said Johnson County Supervisor Rod Sullivan.

Johnson County Auditor Tom Slockett said the specific upgrades, which will vary from county to county, will include voting machines for the blind and other technology to prevent problems that have arisen in other states.

Improvements could cost the county more than $1 million, he said.

Iowa Secretary of State Chet Culver said in a press release that he hopes to have the modernization in place for school-board and city elections next fall.

"Optimally, we would like to have the upgrades available by the fall elections, but, by law, we have to have them in possession by Dec. 31," Slockett said.

company's board in late December because of a dispute between the UI Hospitals and Clinics and the firm.

Although Neil had already removed himself from the Wellmark board, he and former Regent President John Forsyth, Wellmark's CEO, submitted resignations from the state Board of Regents in January. Neil has previously told The Daily Iowan that he resigned because he did not agree with how the Wellmark situation was handled.

Neil joined the Wellmark board in 1999. According to the company's Wellmark Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Iowa has been the primary insurance company for Iowans for the past 50 years. UIHC receives its largest reimbursements from Wellmark, but the hospital has requested an increase of $39 million to cover the cost of inflation and for special services.

After the insurance company refused the request, UIHC issued Wellmark a termination notice in January. The termination will take effect Jan. 1, 2006.

Phone calls made to Neil's home on Sunday were not returned.

PINELLAS PARK, Fla. — Terri Schiavo lay in her bed Sunday, the brain-dead woman's parents and made competing pleas to the U.S. Supreme Court and Congress on her behalf without food or water.

As protesters and TV satellite trucks gathered outside the hospice, the Senate passed a bill that could prolong Schiavo's life while a federal court considers her case. House Republicans scrambled to bring lawmakers back to the floor for an emergency vote early after Democrats objected by a small handful of lawmakers.

President Bush was short a stay at his White House and returning to the White House to sign it.

An attorney for Schiavo's parents filed a request for an emergency injunction with the federal appellate court to keep the feeding tube reinserted. The bill is passed. He also made a similar request for a federal district court in Florida.

"We feel every minute is urgent. We are considering second as precious in saving Terri," said David Schiavo, an attorney for Bob Schindler.

HOMOSASSA, Fla. — A convicted sex offender escaped from a house in Florida on Sunday, a 9-year-old girl from his home later sexually assaulted, authorities said Sunday.

Medical examiners are investigating the sexual assault by the girl's body. But because she was so young, Evander Couey was the influence of drugs, detectives never know how long before she was slain, Chief Sheriff Jeff Dawsey said.

The sheriff released details of the attack on Sunday. Couey was released from Florida in shackles and booked early Sunday for a probation violation and register as a sex offender. He was being held with Couey, 46, confessed kidnapping and killing after taking a lie-detector test on March 18 in Georgia. The girl's body was found early on March 19, three weeks after she was taken from her bedroom.

Senate passes bill to save brain-dead Florida woman

BY MITCH STACY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PINELLAS PARK, Fla. — As Terri Schiavo lay in her hospice bed Sunday, the brain-damaged woman's parents and husband made competing pleas to the public and Congress on her third day without food or water.

As protesters and TV satellite trucks gathered outside the hospice, the Senate passed a bill that could prolong Schiavo's life while a federal court considers her case. House Republicans scrambled to bring enough lawmakers back to the Capitol for an emergency vote early today after Democrats objected to a vote by a small handful of lawmakers.

President Bush was cutting short a stay at his Texas ranch and returning to the White House to sign it.

An attorney for Schiavo's parents filed a request for an emergency injunction with a federal appellate court to have her feeding tube reinserted once the bill is passed. He also planned to make a similar request with the federal district court in Tampa.

"We feel every moment is urgent. We are considering every second as precious in terms of saving Terri," said David Gibbs II, an attorney for Bob and Mary Schindler.

Schiavo's husband, Michael Schiavo, said he was outraged that congressional leaders were intervening in the contentious right-to-die battle with the Schindlers. They have been fighting for years over whether she should be permitted to die or kept alive through the feeding tube.

"I think that the Congress has more important things to discuss," he told CNN, calling the move political and criticizing House Majority Leader Tom DeLay, who helped broker the congressional compromise.

The House began debate on the legislation late Sunday.

"As millions of Americans observe the beginning of Holy Week this Palm Sunday, we are reminded that every life has purpose and none is without meaning," said House Judiciary Committee Chairman James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., a leader in crafting the bill.

A lawyer for Michael Schiavo said the bill could be found unconstitutional. "It is in our opinion an absolute attack on the notion that we have separation of powers between the co-equal branches of government," attorney Hamden Baskin III told CNN.

Bob Schindler visited his daughter late Sunday and said he noticed the effects of dehydration on her. He said she appeared to be getting tired, but eventually responded to his teasing by making a face at him.

"It tells us she's still with us," he said.

Mary Schindler pleaded for parents nationwide to call their congressional representatives and pressure them to vote for the bill.

"There are some congressmen that are trying to stop this bill," she said outside her daughter's hospice. "Please don't use my daughter's suffering for your own personal agenda."

Outside the hospice, a subdued crowd of about 50 people prayed and sang behind signs bearing such slogans as "Let Terri Live" and "President Bush Please Save Terri." One man played "Amazing Grace" on a trumpet, as a pickup truck pulled a trailer bearing 10-foot-high replicas of the stone Ten Commandments tablets and a huge working version of the Liberty Bell.

Jackson trial goes XXX

BY LINDA DEUTSCH
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SANTA MARIA, Calif. — Michael Jackson's child-molestation trial has started to look like an X-rated show, complete with lurid magazine covers of topless women projected on a large screen in the courtroom.

The prosecution intended from the outset to haul Jackson's reading materials before jurors, implying that he used the magazines to arouse young boys.

But Jackson is on trial for allegedly molesting a teenage boy, not for his taste in magazines.

"They want the jury to get the sense of Michael Jackson as a pervert who doesn't live by the rules and is obsessed with sex," said Laurie Levenson, a former prosecutor and professor at Loyola University Law School. "But this could backfire."

Jackson's lawyer, Thomas Mesereau Jr., might cast it as a desperate ploy to distract from sometimes-contradictory testimony by the accuser, Levenson said. And jurors might question why a battalion of deputies had to scour Jackson's enormous library for books that his accuser might never have seen.

The exhibits that have been splashed on the screen in recent days include commercially available magazines such as Barely Legal and Penthouse.

The boy and his brother said they saw this type of magazine when they were in Jackson's bedroom. In one case, they said, they found the publications on their own while poking through Jackson's belongings.

Now, the prosecution is having a hard time showing that Jackson and the boy handled the magazine together — an important premise of the case.

On March 18, the defense noted that only one magazine submitted in court has a single fingerprint each from Jackson and his accuser. And that magazine was shown to the boy on the witness stand during grand jury hearings and was not tested for prints until after the grand jury returned an indictment.

Prosecutors insist the boy did not put his fingerprint on it at the grand jury. But fans of the television show "CSI" — and there are some on the jury — might wonder why the tests were not done earlier.

Meanwhile, the pile of smut grows larger.

Examiners: Missing girl was sexually assaulted

BY MIKE BRANOM

HOMOSASSA, Fla. — A convicted sex offender entered Jessica Lunsford's house through an unlocked door, snatched the 9-year-old girl from her bed, and later sexually assaulted her, authorities said Sunday.

Medical examiners confirmed the sexual assault by examining her body. But because suspect John Evander Couey was under the influence of drugs, detectives might never know how long she was held before she was slain, Citrus County Sheriff Jeff Dawsey said.

The sheriff released new details of the attack on the same day Couey was returned to Florida in shackles. He was booked early Sunday on a probation violation and failure to register as a sex offender. He was being held without bail.

Couey, 46, confessed to kidnapping and killing Jessica after taking a lie-detector test March 18 in Georgia, officials said. The girl's body was found early on March 19, more than three weeks after she vanished from her bedroom.

Jessica's father, in an emotional statement, expressed a desire to mete out justice of his own.

"I won't get the wish, but I wish I could see him, just one time," said Mark Lunsford, his eyes hidden by dark sunglasses.

Lunsford said he and his relatives would soon begin planning Jessica's funeral.

Couey had not been charged in her death, although that was expected soon.

"If he's not charged today, he probably will be [Monday]," sheriff's spokeswoman Ronda Hemminger Evan told the Associated Press. "It shouldn't take that long."

At Jessica's church on Sunday, the pastor asked for prayers for the Lunsfords.

"Lord, we don't always understand your ways," the Rev. William LaVerle Coats told 175 grieving people during services at Faith Baptist Church, where many people saw the girl for the last time on the night she disappeared. "We accept what has taken place here and ask that you would give us some peace."

Coats asked churchgoers to forgive Couey; Jessica's father said he may have a hard time with that request. "He needs to stand up and be a man now and take his death penalty," Lunsford said.

Earlier, Couey appeared before Circuit Judge Stephen Spivey at the Citrus County Detention Center. He was declared indigent and was told a public defender would be assigned to his case.

He answered that he was doing "all right," when the judge asked how he was. Couey answered all other questions with either "Yes, sir" or "No, sir" replies.

At the end of the hearing, Spivey wished the man luck. "Thank you," Couey said softly, before turning and shuffling away, his shackles clanging together.

Couey was returned to Florida in an unmarked sheriff's vehicle wearing a bulletproof vest; the trip took place under the cloak of darkness.

He was being held in isolation at the jail for his safety, Hemminger Evan said. As a precaution, the timing of his arrival from Georgia was kept secret, although the sheriff's office was not aware of any threats against Couey.

Down the street from the Lunsford home and the church, well-wishers piled dozens of stuffed animals, flowers and candles high on a makeshift memorial. "God's newest little angel," one sign read.

Jessica, a third grader, was last seen in February when she went to bed after attending church. She was discovered missing the next morning.

Her body was found near a mobile home where Couey had been staying at the time of the abduction about 150 yards from Jessica's house.

Couey's half-sister and two others who lived in the home were charged with obstructing police for failing to notify authorities when Couey allegedly told them he had committed a crime.

The head of Palestinian security forces in the West Bank town of Tulkarem, Said Abu Pasha (left), speaks to reporters as he and Palestinian police Officer Zohair Abu Fateh arrive in the West Bank town of Tulkarem for a meeting with Israeli officials on Sunday.

Israelis and Palestinians deadlocked on handover

BY ALI DARAGHMEH
ASSOCIATED PRESS

TULKAREM, West Bank — Israeli and Palestinian commanders were trying to iron out the last disputes over the handover of a second West Bank town to Palestinian security control, but disagreements over security issues signaled trouble ahead for peacemaking efforts.

Israeli officials doubted whether the town of Tulkarem would revert to Palestinian control today, as originally planned, after a meeting of security commanders broke up Sunday in disagreement. Talks were to resume today.

Similar disputes held up the transfer of the isolated desert oasis of Jericho last week. A temporary compromise solved that, but similar disputes appeared in talks about Tulkarem, in a much more sensitive location on the Israel-West Bank line.

The handovers were part of a truce announced at a summit last month in Egypt by Palestinian leader Mahmoud Abbas, known as Abu Mazen, and Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon and reinforced last week at a meeting of Palestinian factions in Cairo.

Violence has dropped considerably in the last five weeks, but two incidents on Sunday underlined the fragility of the situation.

Palestinians opened fire on Israeli police and soldiers searching for stolen cars in the Amari refugee camp next to the West Bank city of Ramallah, the military said, wounding two, one critically.

Several hours later, a

Palestinian man was shot and critically wounded by an Israeli border policeman in the West Bank town of Bethlehem. Border Police spokesman Oren Goanias said the Palestinian tried to steal a weapon from a border policeman.

The violence threatened to upset last week's truce declaration by Palestinian militants. The militants pledged to halt attacks on Israel for the rest of the year — an important boost for Abu Mazen as he tries to resume peace talks.

But Hamas and Islamic Jihad conditioned their support on Israel's stopping all military operations against the Palestinians. Israel has promised to honor the truce if quiet continues.

Despite the incidents, talks about the handover of Tulkarem proceeded. Last week Israel turned over the isolated desert oasis of Jericho to the Palestinians, the first of five towns to revert to Palestinian control under the Feb. 8 summit understandings.

"We handed Jericho over last week, and tomorrow, it is expected that Tulkarem will be transferred to Palestinian responsibility," said Defense Minister Shaul Mofaz. He said plans were underway to transfer a third town, Qalqilya.

Israeli officials, speaking on the condition of anonymity, were not optimistic that the talks on today would lead to a handover the same day.

Tulkarem is on the line between the West Bank and Israel opposite Israel's narrowest section — nine miles from Israel's coast on the Mediterranean Sea. Before Israel erected a section of its contentious separation barrier around three sides of the town, several suicide bombers infiltrated into the nearby Israeli city of Netanya and blew themselves up, killing dozens.

On Feb. 25 a suicide bomber from the Tulkarem area exploded in Tel Aviv, killing five Israelis, in the most serious breach of the truce.

Palestinians want control of all seven roads leading into Tulkarem, a regional market hub, officials said before the Sunday security meeting. However, Israel was balking about two of the roads, officials on both sides said, speaking on condition of anonymity. Israeli officials said the two roads lead to towns where those involved in the Tel Aviv bombing came from.

Similar disputes held up the Jericho handover for several days.

In another development, Israel Radio reported late Sunday that Mofaz approved construction of 3,500 housing units in and around the West Bank's largest settlement, Maale Adumim, east of Jerusalem. The approval would be an apparent violation of Israeli obligations under a U.S.-backed Middle East peace plan.

Defense officials said they were aware of the plan but could not confirm that Mofaz had signed it.

Also Sunday, the Israeli daily Haaretz reported that aerial photos taken for the Defense Ministry show considerable construction in three veteran Israeli settlements in the West Bank, violating Israel's commitment to stop such building under terms of the U.S.-backed "road map" peace plan.

Powerful quake hits southern Japan

TOKYO (AP) — A powerful earthquake rattled southern Japanese on Sunday, swaying buildings and briefly prompting warnings of tsunami. At least five people were injured, and smaller aftershocks continued to rattle the region.

The magnitude-7 temblor, which hit west of Kyushu Island at 10:53 a.m. local time, was centered at an "extremely shallow" depth below the ocean floor, the Meteorological Agency said. An hour after the initial temblor, aftershocks followed — at least one was a magnitude-4.2 quake.

An hour after the initial quake, the agency said the tsunami danger had passed.

Pope makes brief Palm Sunday appearance

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pressing his hand to his head and pounding a lectern in apparent frustration, Pope John Paul II made a brief but silent appearance at his apartment window after missing his first Palm Sunday Mass in 26 years as pontiff.

The frail John Paul did not speak and appeared irritated by his difficulty in responding to an adoring crowd of tens of thousands of pilgrims in St. Peter's Square.

The crowd in the sun-drenched plaza had swelled in expectation that John Paul, convalescing at the Vatican after throat surgery last month to help him breathe, would participate in some way in the Palm Sunday rite ushering in Holy Week.

Pilgrims cheered as the pope appeared at the third-floor window, decorated with a braided palm frond and the crimson papal banner, and waved an olive branch.

BAGHDAD — Iraqis engaged in a tit-for-tat exchange of ambassadors Sunday in a growing dispute over a claim that Jordanian forces killed 24 insurgents in the south of Baghdad.

An American convoy was hit by a mortar shell during a 20-mile southeast march when it was attacked, U.S. officials said. The military returned fire and killed two dozen insurgents. Seven militants and soldiers were also wounded.

No further details were available about the attack or the number of the wounded soldiers.

The clash was the largest involving insurgents since the Jan. 30 elections, a day of bloody attacks throughout the country.

In other violence Sunday, a homemade bomb exploded near the northern city of Mosul, killing a U.S. soldier and three others, the U.S. military said in a statement. At least 10 members of the U.S. military have died since the beginning of the Iraq war, according to Associated Press counts.

In Samarra, 60 miles north of Baghdad, militants jumped their car and opened fire on a U.S. police officer Maj. Sadoun Ahmed Saadoun who went to collect the body. The body also came under fire, prompting a gunfight between three police and the attackers injured. Lt. Mohammed said the assailants were captured.

In the southern city of Basra, attackers targeted a police officer with a roadside bomb, killing one civilian and injuring another, police Col. Karim al-Zubayr said.

Insurgents lobbed mortar rounds into a neighborhood near the walls of an Iraqi military base in Mahmudiyah, south of Baghdad, killing one civilian and two others, said Lt. Col. Saadoun. The victims were taken to a hospital.

Annan pushes for widespread U.N. reforms

BY EDITH M. LEDERER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

UNITED NATIONS — Secretary-General Kofi Annan called on world leaders Sunday to approve the most sweeping changes to the United Nations since it was founded 60 years ago, so it can tackle conflicts and terrorism, fight poverty, and put human rights at the forefront of its work in the 21st century.

After a year of scandals over corruption in the U.N. oil-for-food program in Iraq and sex abuse by U.N. peacekeepers in Congo, Annan's report also sets out plans to make the world body more efficient, open, and accountable — including strengthening the independence of the U.N.'s internal watchdog.

The report to the 191 members of the U.N. General Assembly was released six months before world leaders meet at U.N. headquarters for a summit called by Annan. In its introduction, he urged the leaders to "act boldly" and adopt "the most far-reaching reforms in the history of the United Nations."

"We will not enjoy development without security, we will not enjoy security without development, and we will not enjoy either without respect for human rights," he said. "Unless all these causes are advanced, none will succeed."

One of the major proposals calls for the creation of a Human Rights Council — possibly as a principal organ of the United Nations such as the Security Council or the General Assembly — to replace the Geneva-based Commission on Human Rights. It has long faced criticism for allowing the worst-offending countries to use their membership to protect each other from condemnation.

One of the most hotly awaited parts of the report was Annan's recommendation for changes to the 15-member Security Council, the most powerful U.N. body now dominated by post-World War II powers — the United States, Russia, China, Britain, and France, who all have veto power.

The report calls for an expanded, more representative Security Council, but Annan did not endorse a specific plan, instead backing two options proposed in December by a high-level panel. One would add six new permanent members, the other would create a new tier of eight semi-permanent members: two each from Asia, Africa, Europe, and the Americas.

The Security Council's use of force has also been an issue. It refused to authorize the U.S.-led war against Iraq and the war in Kosovo against the forces of former Yugoslav leader Slobodan Milosevic — decisions that angered some countries.

The report said the Security Council already has the authority under the U.N. Charter to use military force, even preventively, but it needs to work more effectively and use specific criteria to make its decisions.

In cases of genocide, ethnic cleansing, and crimes against humanity, Annan urged all states to accept that there is a "responsibility to protect" those being killed.

The report said the Security Council's decisions on whether to use force should be guided by a set of clear principles, and it urged all states to accept that in cases of genocide, ethnic cleansing, and crimes against humanity, there is a "responsibility to protect" which requires collective action.

On the issue of combating terrorism, Annan proposed a five-point strategy: dissuade terrorism, deny terrorists access to funds, deter states from sponsoring terrorism, develop the capacity of states to defeat terrorism, and respect human rights.

For years, a comprehensive convention against terrorism has been held up over its definition, with some members arguing that one nation's terrorists are another's freedom fighters. Annan said the debate must end and all countries must accept that resisting occupation "cannot include the right to deliberately kill or maim civilians."

He called for adoption of a convention by September 2006. It said terrorism includes any act "intended to cause death or serious bodily harm to civilians or non-combatants with the purpose of intimidating a population or compelling a government or an international organization to do or abstain from doing any act."

Annan also called for swift adoption of a global treaty against nuclear terrorism and swift negotiations on a treaty to halt the spread of the highly enriched uranium and plutonium needed to make nuclear weapons.

Iraq, Jordan call back diplomats

BY RAWYA RAGEH
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAGHDAD — Iraq and Jordan engaged in a tit-for-tat withdrawal of ambassadors Sunday in a growing dispute over Shiite Muslim claims that Jordan is failing to halt terrorists from entering Iraq. Meanwhile, U.S. forces killed 24 insurgents in a clash south of Baghdad.

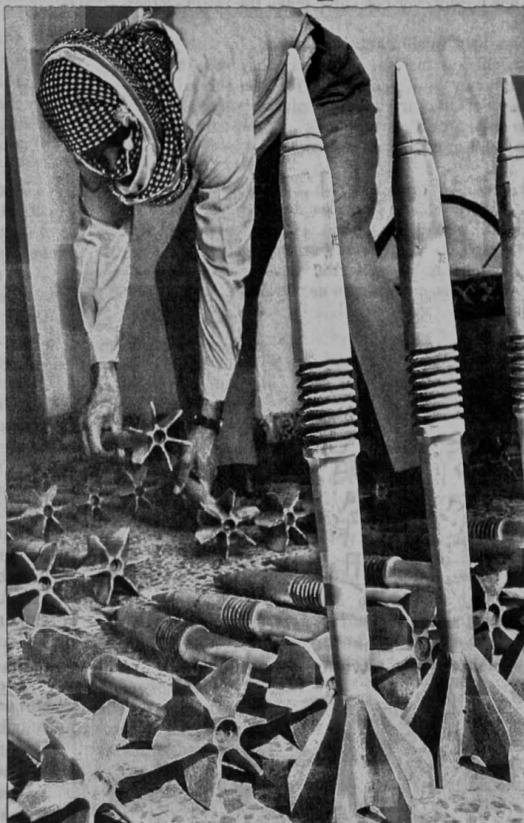

An American convoy was traveling through the Salman Pak area, 20 miles southeast of Baghdad, when it was attacked, U.S. officials said. The military returned fire and killed the two dozen militants. Seven militants and six soldiers were also wounded.

No further details were available about the attack or the conditions of the wounded soldiers.

The clash was among the largest involving insurgents since the Jan. 30 elections, and it came on a day of bloody attacks by militants throughout the country.

In other violence Sunday:

- A homemade bomb exploded near the northern city of Kirkuk, killing a U.S. soldier and injuring three others, the U.S. military said in a statement. At least 1,520 members of the U.S. military have died since the beginning of the Iraq war, according to an Associated Press count.
- In Samarra, 60 miles north of Baghdad, militants jumped out of their car and opened fire on a policeman walking to work, police Maj. Sadoun Ahmed said. Police who went to collect the man's body also came under attack, prompting a gunfight that left three police and three of the attackers injured. Lt. Qassim Mohammed said the injured assailants were captured.
- In the southern city of Basra, attackers targeted a police patrol with a roadside bomb, killing one civilian and injuring a policeman, police Col. Karim al-Zeidi said.
- Insurgents lobbed mortar rounds into a neighborhood just outside the walls of an Iraqi army base in Mahmoudiyah, south of Baghdad, killing one civilian and injuring two others, said Ikkal Sabir, an official at the Yarmouk Hospital where the victims were taken.
- At a checkpoint on the outskirts of Baqouba, a car bomb injured 10 Iraqi soldiers and two civilians, police official Ahmed

Alaa al-Marjani/Associated Press

Insurgents' weapons are displayed after they were recovered by Iraqi security forces in Najaf, Iraq, on Sunday. Insurgents targeted Iraqi and U.S. forces with gunfire, suicide attacks, and mortar rounds Sunday, leaving at least six people dead.

Mohammed said. The U.S. military said 12 Iraqi soldiers were injured in the blast. Insurgents followed up the attack with small arms and rocket-propelled grenade-fire, and three insurgents were killed in ensuing clashes, the U.S. military said. Sunday's diplomatic row erupted even as a Jordanian court sentenced in absentia Iraq's most feared terrorist — who was born in Jordan — to a 15-year prison term.

As news emerged of the largely symbolic sentencing of Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, whose whereabouts are unknown, his Al Qaeda in Iraq organization claimed responsibility for a suicide bombing that killed a top anti-corruption official in northern Mosul. Al-Zarqawi already has been sentenced to death twice by Jordan.

Sunday's events capped a week of rising tensions that included a protest in which Shiite demonstrators raised the Iraqi flag over the Jordanian embassy in Baghdad and claims by the Shiite clergy-backed United Iraqi Alliance that Jordan was allowing terrorists to slip into Iraq.

"Iraqis are feeling very bitter over what happened. We decided, as the Iraqi government, to recall the Iraqi ambassador from Amman to discuss this," Foreign Minister Hoshiyar Zebari told the Associated Press.

Rice seeks China's help on N. Korea

BEIJING (AP) — Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice on Sunday sought further help from China in getting North Korea back to nuclear-disarmament talks and aired U.S. concerns about Beijing's bellicose rhetoric on Taiwan.

As part of a two-day visit to the Chinese capital, Rice took time to attend a Palm Sunday church service at one of the city's few state-sanctioned churches. Although Rice has previously said the United States is not satisfied with religious freedom in Communist China, she let her presence at Guangwashi Christian Church speak for itself.

Rice, a regular churchgoer who has described herself as deeply religious, listened to an English translation of the Chinese sermon. As she and her American delegation left, the minister said "God bless the United States."

Earlier this morning, Rice met Chinese Foreign Minister Li Zhaoxing and other senior officials.

"We have agreed that we have mutual interests in common. When we have differences, we can handle them and address them with respect," Rice told Li.

Condoleezza Rice
Secretary of State

China was the final stop on a weeklong tour of Asian capitals for Rice, and it was the most delicate for America's new chief diplomat. President Bush's second-term pledge to carry democratic ideals around the globe has met with suspicion in China, where government control remains a strong and constant fact of daily life.

The United States is cooperating with China on several fronts, including six-nation talks over North Korea's nuclear program. But Washington has complaints about China's record on human rights, its treatment of dissidents, and the rampant piracy of movies, books, and other goods.

Rice also suggested that European governments would be acting irresponsibly if they sold sophisticated weaponry to China that might one day be used against U.S. forces in the Pacific.

"It is the United States, not Europe, that is defending the Pacific," Rice said, adding that South Korea and Japan are contributing resources to keep the Asia-Pacific region stable.

The European Union soon may lift an arms embargo on China that was imposed after the 1989 crackdown on pro-democracy protesters in Tiananmen Square.

Lifting the embargo would allow sale of technology and weapons that China badly wants to modernize its military. China recently has gone on a military spending spree that Rice said concerns the United States.

China passed a law this month codifying its intention to use military force against Taiwan should the island declare formal independence. Under its complicated and purposely ambiguous policy on China and Taiwan, the United States is obligated to provide defensive weapons to Taiwan if it is attacked by the mainland.

Brutality and intelligence on the cheap

Promoting policies of national security and antiterrorism while secretly outsourcing torture does little to make America's name synonymous with freedom and justice. It does, however, direct venom toward the United States when the federal government sends "terrorist suspects" to repressive countries for torturous interrogation.

Recently, the Bush administration has been trying to use an extraordinary form of executive power known as the "state secrets privilege," as reported in the Chicago Tribune on March 3. Now would be the apt time to use it because it could effectively dismiss some current court challenges being faced by the president and his war on terror. This "privilege," which is not a law per se, was established 50 years ago when the Supreme Court permitted its use if "there is a reasonable danger that compulsion of the evidence will expose military matters." In effect, a case that the government claims to involve sensitive evidence can be kept out of the courts in the name of national security.

Today, exercising this power could eliminate a case brought against the U.S. government by Maher Arar, a Canadian citizen. Arar was detained at New York City's Kennedy Airport and interrogated about possible links to a terrorist suspect. Instead of being sent to his home country, he says he was flown to Syria, where he was beaten and mistreated for the next 10 months. Ultimately, he ended up back in Canada without any charges pressed against him.

This is just one example of the "extraordinary rendition" policy of the government. It occurs every time the U.S. government picks up suspected terrorists and then hands them over to Muslim regimes for interrogation. The Bush administration has come up with several rationales to explain why it conveniently exports "suspects" to other countries, which also happen to be some of the world's most repressive regimes with the worst human-rights records. These countries have included Egypt, Jordan, Morocco, as well as Syria, Pakistan, Uzbekistan, and Saudi Arabia. As reported in The New

Amira Jadoon

Republic, American officials assert that these particular regimes are better "culturally equipped" to elicit information from suspected Islamic militants. Let's explore how a country might be better "culturally equipped" when it comes to extracting information from prisoners.

It may be useful to note that the U.S. State Department has condemned Jordan and Egypt in the past for their methods of torture. Moreover, Syria has been accused of administering electrical shocks, pulling out fingernails, and other atrocities against its prisoners. To top it all off, the United States lists Syria as one of the six state sponsors of terrorism.

Interestingly, the United States is also a part of the U.N. Convention Against Torture, which prohibits sending a suspect to a country "where there are substantial grounds for believing that he would be in danger of being subjected to torture." But then again, history shows us that the United Nations has hardly ever been able to make the world's superpower lose a wink of sleep. Another rationale given by a Bush administration official to New York Times reporter Douglas Jehl was that the rendition policy saves the government manpower and money. So it's acceptable for prisoners to be tortured when there's a chance of obtaining valuable information at a bargain price? Apparently it results in efficient American productivity. That reminds me of corporations that employ cheap child labor in Third World countries.

One explanation for extraordinary rendition, which at least sounds truthful, came from Attorney General Alberto Gonzales. As the New York Times reported on March 8, Gonzales said that when the United States sends a prisoner abroad, the American Constitution no longer applies to him.

We all have to admit, to make that possible, the suspects have to be sent to countries that won't divulge such scenarios as the Abu Ghraib prison scandal.

What kind of jerkhead blows his head off while he's on the phone with his wife? What kind of jerkhead uses his suicide as vengeance?

Hunter S. Thompson did, last month.

I don't care if he was a mad torqued-out saint of insight and humor, that was an jerkhead thing to do. Of course, as the universe had it, ha-ha, she thought the sound of him loading up was his fiddling with the television, signaling the end of their conversation, and so she hung up, casually, before he finished the deed.

As the cover story in Rolling Stone has it, they'd been fighting since the night before, when he fired a pellet gun indoors and missed her head by about a foot. Officially, he was trying to hit something else.

But the next day, on the phone, after they'd fought about it several times, he cooed, "Come home, Anita, everything is all right. Come home," as he loaded up. Read with hindsight, it comes out smooth and cruel, oozing. Come home, honey. Everything is all right. I picked the right target this time. Come home. You know my aim is true.

Bile rises in my throat when I think about it. A crazy, magnetic genius endnoting his life with malice. Jesus. The Rolling Stone story makes it sound like he'd been in physical decline for awhile. And because of it, preparing to off his own good self, even before the bitter last. Tying up emotional loose ends, giving away the good stuff, etc.

Nothing wrong with that. I'm not a big fan of it, but suicide can be an ace in the hole, a way to cease an interminable leaching of illness or age. The fumbling loss, the rage — no longer self-propelled, self-governed, self-controlled. Yes, if I wrote the rules, you would legally be allowed to choose the choice of death's honor versus being increasingly boxed in your head, receding more and more from the way you want to live your life, perpetually trapped.

Does it gnaw at my head, that people having choices means some of them are going to make wrong ones? Hasty ones? Yes. Do I know that my definition of a wrong choice is just that — mine? Yes. Just like I know that death's honor is high-gloss and mythicizing, based less in fact than in feeling. Life is the harder choice, though we get less credit for it. But people deserve to make choices about their death, even riddling it with malice.

Now, a ramshackle transition to Terri Schiavo's story. She's the Florida woman who's been in a vegetative state since 1990; she can breathe but not eat. On March 18, her feeding tube was removed, as it has been twice before. Each time, it was legislated back in — once by a judge, once by Fla. Gov. Jeb Bush. It may well be so again. No matter what the courts resolve, though, whoever loses will always feel wronged, go on to become advocates for their side of the dispute, stumping on the national circuit, in print and person and in front of Congress.

It will probably be her parents. Which is their right. They have declared legal jihad to save their daughter's life, whatever its circumstances; Schiavo's husband is equally armed to the tooth, maintaining she would not chose a vegetative life over death.

The right has sanctimoniously trumpeted this case as a Right To Life issue, gleefully used it to overrule the courts as the courts will not be a good lapdog and just lie down already. The left has demonized this case as an instance of government intrusion.

They are both wrong. This case is about love and legal stewardship. Who is the rightful steward, anymore, of this woman's life? Does it revert automatically to her spouse? Incapacitated, she cannot communicate the choice she would make today; she did not prepare a crystalline-clear legal record of the choice she thought she would make, in these circumstances, prior to her incapacitation.

And while I think her husband is more right, her parents are compelling. Given the gravity of the situation, they deserve to wrangle it out in the courts until it really is done. ■

Trash talk undermines free-speech value

A recent study conducted by the John S. and James L. Knight Foundation revealed that large numbers of American high-school students thought that our nation's First Amendment rights "went too far" and that the government has a right to censor the press.

These findings are disturbing. But is there a connection between these frightening attitudes and the increasing instances of trash talk and gutter humor in the media? The Daily Iowan provides us with useful examples in its humor column, The Ledge. In the March 9-10 editions, the columns were devoted to the "best" and "worst" named places to go for spring break and included plenty of examples of junior-high humor with references to body orifices, sexual practices, feces, and put-downs. By their appearance in back-to-back editions, one cannot imagine that there was much internal discussion among DI staff about their suitability for print.

It is sad that First Amendment rights must be championed for such low-watt stuff. The real beauty of the amendment is in its support of expressing diverse and possibly unpopular ideas and opinions. Its support of gratuitous trash talk is the price paid for its real value. Yet, people have a right to complain about annoyances such as the DI's brand of humor. The right to do something does not pardon poor judgment, and with privilege comes responsibility. The increasing rate of inane offensive speech is perhaps a blessing in that it tells us something about our society. Let's hope we get the message before we all get a bit too comfortable with the antisocial roots of such expressions.

U.S. occupation of Iraq must end

While there are some Iraqis who support the U.S. presence in Iraq, it is well-documented that most Iraqis oppose the occupation. The Cato Institute declared recently that 15 million Iraqis (70 percent) believe violence is an acceptable tool against U.S. occupation. The CIA contends that the resistance is mostly composed of those outraged by the American presence and those suffering "the economic turmoil and destruction caused by the fighting."

Whether targets of the resistance are U.S. forces, or U.S.-trained Iraqi police, or U.S.-installed government officials, the fact remains that foreign military invasions are not embraced with open arms, and people will vehemently resist a foreign power's plan for their country.

Moreover, it is likely that many more American military personnel would be killed if they assumed more visible positions, which increasingly have been transferred to Iraqis. The United States made a conscious decision to shift the burden away from its personnel to avoid the political fallout that comes with increasing American casualties. That decision has benefited the authors of this war simply because we ascribe a lesser value to Iraqi casualties.

As for the legality of this war, the U.N. secretary-general said, "I have indicated [the Iraq invasion] was not in conformity with the U.N. charter." Moreover, the United States did not seek a second resolution to authorize war because such a resolution clearly would not have been approved in the U.N. Security Council.

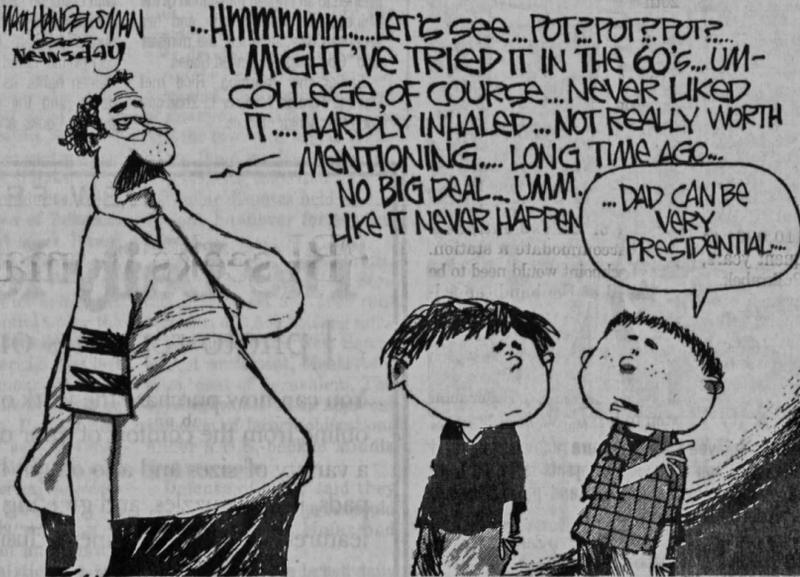

Only when the underlying impetus of the Iraqi resistance is withdrawn can Iraq begin down the road to peace: The United States should withdraw from Iraq immediately and unconditionally.

Looking past Jordan's scowl

Robert Schneider shows in his March 11 column that he's just as banal and myopic when writing about sports as he is when the topic is politics.

I'll grant that Michael Jordan is the best professional basketball player of all time. Jim Thorpe, however, was magnificent as a collegiate and professional football player as well as being the dominant track star of his era. He played professional baseball with some skill as well. Later, Jackie Robinson excelled at track, football, and, in particular, baseball. The quiet intensity and unfathomable courage he showed while helping to integrate America's pastime are more meaningful than all of Jordan's victory scowls.

In-depth report | JOHNSON COUNTY COURTHOUSE SECURITY

Courthouse mulls safety

The courthouse every day has surged since 1992, raising concerns that even a simple disagreement could turn dangerous. Juvenile cases have increased 91 percent, marriage dissolutions by 58 percent. Child-support cases have more than doubled, and domestic-abuse disputes have grown by 158 percent, records show.

County leaders and law-enforcement agents acknowledge the need for improvements but say their hands are tied by state and county budget shortfalls — forcing them to improve security incrementally. The situation worsened in 2003, when further slashing forced the court to reduce the number of attendants assigned to guard judges' chambers.

Current security measures include panic alarms on judges' benches, video court for initial appearances to reduce the risk of a new inmate escaping, surveillance cameras, and judges' benches bullet-proofed with Kevlar.

The county also owns a walk-through metal detector for potentially dangerous events, though White doesn't remember the last time it was used.

Despite the chance for trouble, courthouse officials stress that the courthouse is still relatively secure for employees and visitors.

"It really is a safe place to come," said Lodema Berkley, the clerk of court. "Or half of my staff wouldn't be here."

Still, a few minor events have revealed holes in the system. In January, a sheriff's deputy broke his leg chasing a courthouse visitor who realized he was wanted for arrest. Court employees said one to two patrons get upset per day, especially when paying fines.

The system has suffered glitches, as well. Despite the emergency-buzzer system for judges, Berkley said the chambers are "not very secure" — an observation bolstered by a report from the courthouse security committee, which also examined response rates from the Sheriff's Office.

When facility officials tested the alarms, it took up to 10 minutes to alert deputies that an emergency was brewing at the courthouse, located just up the hill from the Sheriff's Office. The problem has since been fixed, and recent trials show a one- to two-minute response time, said David Kempf, the county facilities manager.

Panel: Improvements needed

Observing what they considered a problem with courthouse security throughout Iowa, state officials in 1999 found more than 150 breaches in a five-year span and recommended all counties draft security plans.

Responding to the mandate, Johnson County officials created a comprehensive plan in December 2003, a strategy divided into short- and long-term components to update security features.

The committee that formulated the plan included representatives from the judicial and law-enforcement branches, who criticized the current setup as being reactive rather than proactive.

"The potential risk for serious injury to the public, court personnel, and attorneys will increase as the types of cases associated with volatility and violence increase," the report stated.

Of the four short-term recommendations, none have been officially implemented in the year since the report was released, but two are close.

The courthouse will soon feature an electronic key-card system to track who enters the facility after hours — a response to a finding that officials didn't know who carries keys.

"The judges have keys, clerk of court staff has keys, the county attorney has keys, maintenance has keys," Kempf said. "There's quite a few out there, so we're trying to get a little better handle on the use of the courthouse."

County officials have also taken what they consider the most substantial step to boosting security — adding two full-time sheriff's deputies to roam the facility. At present, law-enforcement officers are assigned to patrol in sporadic intervals.

In fiscal 2005, the Board of Supervisors budgeted $75,000 to staff extra part-time deputies in the courthouse. Training and other startup costs for the two new deputies will total $150,000 and roughly $110,000 to $120,000 in subsequent years, said Sheriff Lonny Pulkrabek.

"Just an officer presence up there can have a calming effect and be a deterrent for bad activity," he said. "But two officers are not going to make the courthouse completely secure."

Long-range plans include a screening station featuring metal detectors and X-ray machines.

Officials say they are satisfied with the two extra deputies for now but will eventually need money from other sources, such as the now-defunct courthouse security fund proposed by Sen. Joe Bolkcom, D-Iowa City, in February. Implementing the recommendations is a slow process, but officials defended their progress by noting that many are cautious about spending tax dollars.

Many counties 'a step above' Johnson

Meanwhile, courthouses in counties similar in size to Johnson County sport screening checkpoints, more armed deputies, and other advanced security measures, a review of courthouses shows.

For example, bulletproof glass windows — absent from the Johnson County Courthouse — separate clerks from patrons at the Pottawattamie County Courthouse in Council Bluffs.

"I know my people are glad that we have secured our offices so that if irate customers come to the window, we don't worry that they would reach over the counter," said Pottawattamie Clerk of Court Ruth Godfrey.

In Linn County, a screening system with metal detectors and X-ray machines greets visitors, snuffing out most security problems. County officials were in the midst of implementing more stringent security measures when Linn County prosecutor Harold Denton was stabbed in the facility's rotunda.

"I've been in a number of courthouses, and it really varies by the size of the county," Kempf said. "Certainly, I've been in a few that are certainly a step above what we currently have."

But the security measures in a few comparable counties also fall short, opening their facilities to risks that Johnson County officials also fear.

Roughly five years ago, Dubuque County officials considered toughening security but nixed proposals such as a central metal detector in favor of additional full-time deputies.

"The general public has pretty much wide open access through a number of doors," said Dubuque County Clerk of Court Clay Gavin. "The access is not controlled at all."

The better-funded counties tend to provide greater security, officials said. Johnson County Supervisor Pat Harney, a former Iowa City police officer, said Linn County's advanced security measures stem from the money generated by housing other counties' inmates.

"We consider the [screening station] the key," said Carroll Edmondson, 6th Judicial District Court administrator. "We felt that if we had the screen-in, we would resolve 90 percent of the security risks."

History blocking progress

Once deputies are stationed in the Johnson County Courthouse in April, officials have roughly six months to observe security developments before making further recommendations, White said. The metal detector and X-ray machines are badly needed, for instance, but those improvements hinge on the county's finances.

The headache of preserving a 104-year-old courthouse also aggravates the security proposals, slowing the county's progress.

Floor plans for the courthouse were drafted at the turn of the 20th century, an era in which the facility was "open and accessible," Kempf said. With such features as interlocking doors and back corridors, the original stone structure complicates efforts to bring the facility to modern standards.

To install a checkpoint with metal detectors and X-ray machines, officials would have to revamp the building's structure; neither of the two entrances could accommodate a station. The checkpoint would need to be installed at the handicapped-accessible back entrance, requiring an extension.

Officials haven't yet discussed the metal-detector option, but they identified it as a crucial step to boost courthouse security as the county population, once the state's second-fastest growing region, explodes.

"The board is serious about courthouse security," said Johnson County Supervisor Terrence Neuzil. "But it takes time."

"They give the line from the White House, but they don't reflect the opinion of the American populace."

The event went off with almost no resistance, though one passerby shouted at the protesters as they marched, calling them "cowards."

"Cowards start wars, patriots make peace," responded Cat Moore, a co-head of the Iowa City War Resisters League.

Future antiwar efforts in the area include a protest of military recruitment at the UI Career Fair on Wednesday and continued pressure on politicians, said Gryzlak, of Tiffin, Iowa.

A petition in support of a resolution by Rep. Lynn Woolsey, D-Calif., that calls for the immediate withdrawal of American troops collected nearly 100 signatures at the event. It will be sent to Sens. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, and Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, as well as Rep. James Leach, R-Iowa.

The event was one of countless such protests staged nationally as support for the war continues to wane.

In a March CBS News/New York Times poll, just 46 percent said the United States did the right thing in taking military action.

At the onset of the conflict, the poll found a 69 percent approval rate for the war.

Bush, in his weekly radio address on March 19, defended the war and thanked the more than 1,500 U.S. troops who have died in the war.

"Because of our actions, freedom is taking root in Iraq, and the American people are more secure," he said.

Vandals released lab animals, trashed offices, and spilled chemicals in Spence Labs on Nov. 14, 2004 — an action that resulted in canceled classes, displaced faculty, and delayed research. Members of the Animal Liberation Front, a self-described international animal-rights group, claimed

UI Risk Management, Insurance, and Loss Prevention assessed the damage costs. The university will cover the expenses internally because its insurance policy has a $2 million deductible. Parrott said he was not yet aware of where the funds will come from.

The majority of the cost — $275,000 — came from damaged equipment, including computers, refrigerators, and chemicals. Costs for waste disposal and cleanup tallied $150,000, while the cost of extra police security in the days after the break-in was estimated at $25,000.

"That's what it is so far, but the damage figure for equipment could go higher," Parrott said.

If Robots can be accused of anything, too cute would fit — but I mean that as a compliment. With its Laffy Taffy-style jokes, energetic visual design, and delightful voice-over work, this computer-animated adventure from the directors of Ice Age (Chris Wedge and Carlos Saldanha) is just the thing to get us through the post-Oscar doldrums at the theater.

Like Ice Age (2002), Robots is derivative family fluff from 20th Century Fox that lacks the merciless wit of DreamWorks cartoons and the enduring, warmhearted appeal of Pixar animation. However, it's funny and touching enough to stand on its own, but it is also steeped in the anarchic tradition of classic Looney Tunes shorts by Chuck Jones and Friz Freleng.

Our story begins in Rivet City, a world inhabited only by robots and created with a keen eye for sight gags and endlessly creative wonders. Rodney Copperbottom (Ewan McGregor), a young and idealistic inventor, decides to move away from his parents (Stanley Tucci and Dianne Wiest) and head for Robot City to follow his dream.

Maybe he'll finally get a chance to meet the great Big Weld (Mel Brooks) and pitch his ideas.

Unfortunately, Big Weld is nowhere to be found, and the city has been taken over by Phineas T. Ratchet (Greg Kinnear).

Under advice from his maniacal mother (a brilliant Jim Broadbent), Phineas attempts to eliminate available spare parts, forcing "outmodes" to "upgrade" and, thus, turnover a major profit at his all-purpose Evil Corporation.

Meanwhile, Rodney joins forces with a gang of misfit scavengers led by the wise-cracking Fender (Robin Williams). Along with Piper (Amanda Bynes), Crank (Drew Carey), Lug (Harland Williams), and Aunt Fanny (Jennifer Coolidge), the 'bots set out to restore all that was good in Robot City. Their mission: find Big Weld, overthrow Phineas, and repair the "outmodes" along the way.

There's also Cappy (Halle Berry), Rodney's love interest. She works for Phineas but helps the rebels bring him down from the inside.

The film was written by the prolific Lowell Gantz and Babaloo Mandel (Parenthood [1989], City Slickers [1991]). Their script provides the obligatory pop-culture references and toilet jokes that small fries crave, but I was glad to see the juvenile humor toned down in favor of some terrific slapstick sequences. Adults will also appreciate the subtle jabs at modern technology and corporate America buried underneath the Wizard of Oz facade.

That gorgeous and inspired CGI is the real star of the film, though. As Roger Ebert astutely pointed out in his review, the vivid palate is seemingly based on FiestaWare colors. And the robots themselves almost echo retro toys and Tomorrowland images from a '50s Worlds Fair.

Robots works as a coming-of-age fable for the older crowd and an exciting little romp for the kids.

Of course, it follows the basic formula for every other animated fantasy these days: David must triumph over Goliath, win a girl's heart, and find himself in a death-defying chase before the happily ever after dance number. So what? If it ain't broke, don't fix it — just like those lovable robot characters.

Report: Indiana Davis considers Tulane job

Indiana men's basketball coach Mike Davis is preparing to take the vacant head coaching job at Tulane University, Indianapolis' ABC affiliate reported on its website.

According to the reporters of the Hoosier merball team have told "c" that Davis is set to take the job at Tulane, which fired head coach Shawn Finney last week.

Sources also told Varsity Insider that Indiana Athletics Director Greenspan will meet with Davis' board of trustees this week, and that Tulane Director Rick Dickson will answer this week regarding whether he made to Davis.

The Hoosiers finished the season, ending with 15 losses against Minnesota, Ten Tournament and Varsity. Indiana didn't win the NCAA Tournament despite broken-record reminder Hoosiers deserved to go to the fourth state conference tourney.

If Davis leaves, one choice could be Iowa coach Alford.

Alford earned first-ten honors in three seasons, accumulating 2,438 points as a Hoosier. He led the Final Four in 1987 and is still a favorite in the state.

In Indianapolis last week, he was asked about the possibility of returning to Bloomington but he asked for the next best thing.

"I learned a long time ago that you don't answer hypothetical questions," Alford said. "Iowa's 76-64 loss to Cincinnati in the first round of the NCAA Tournament."

The Hawkeyes returned to the NCAA tourney for the fourth season, while Alford's was the most pressure of this season.

COACHING

Report: Indiana's Davis considering Tulane job

Indiana men's basketball coach Mike Davis is prepared to take the vacant head coaching job at Tulane University, Indianapolis' ABC affiliate WRTV reported on its website Sunday.

According to the report, members of the Hoosier men's basketball team have told "confidants" that Davis is set to take the position at Tulane, which fired head coach Shawn Finney last week.

Sources also told WRTV that Indiana Athletics Director Rick Greenspan will meet with the university's board of trustees early this week, and that Tulane Athletics Director Rick Dickson wants an answer this week regarding the offer he made to Davis.

The Hoosiers finished 15-14 this season, ending with disappointing losses against Minnesota in the Big Ten Tournament and Vanderbilt in the NIT. Indiana didn't make the NCAA Tournament despite Davis' broken-record reminder that the Hoosiers deserved to go because they were the fourth seed in the conference tourney.

If Davis leaves, one obvious choice could be Iowa coach Steve Alford.

Alford earned first-team all-Big Ten honors in three seasons and accumulated 2,438 points in his career as a Hoosier. He led Indiana to the Final Four in 1987 and appears to still be a favorite in the state.

In Indianapolis last week, Alford was asked about the possibility of returning to Bloomington to coach, but he asked for the next question.

"I learned a long time ago, don't answer hypothetical questions," Alford said following Iowa's 76-64 loss against Cincinnati in the first round of the NCAA Tournament.

The Hawkeyes reached the NCAA tourney for the first time in four seasons, while Alford faced the most pressure of his tenure this season.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Sean May and sixth man Marvin Williams bullied North Carolina back to the round of 16, leaving Iowa State's six-man rotation gasping for air along the way.

May had 24 points and 17 rebounds, Williams finished with a career-high 15 rebounds, and the top-seeded Tar Heels beat the Cyclones, 92-65, on Sunday to advance past the first weekend for the first time in five seasons.

Williams scored 20 points — tying his season high for the second consecutive game — and Rashad McCants added 17 for North Carolina (29-4), which went to the Final Four in 2000 before the tournament drought. Now, coach Roy Williams has the Tar Heels back in the regional semifinals in his second season, the 10th time he's made it that far in 17 NCAA tournament appearances.

No. 20 Wisconsin 71, Bucknell 62

OKLAHOMA CITY — Maybe Bucknell could've found a scheme to stop Wisconsin's Mike Wilkinson or Zach Morley. Handling both, however, was too much for the upstart Bison.

The 6-8 forwards consistently put themselves in all the right places, especially when things were tight in the second half, carrying the Badgers to a 71-62 victory Sunday in the second round of the NCAA Tournament. The defeat sent 14th-seeded Bucknell back to its Pennsylvania campus with plenty to be proud of nonetheless.

Morley, who was shut out in 28 minutes of a first-round win over Northern Iowa, was 6-of-7 with three 3-pointers and 15 points. His tap-in with 8:41 left put the Badgers (24-8) ahead for good; then he protected the lead with rebounds on the next two defensive stands. He finished with eight boards.

No national champions for the Hawkeyes, but the Iowa wrestling team finished in seventh place with four All-Americans — surprising after a rough outing at the Big Ten meet.

Mark Perry upset the top seed in his division to advance to the finals but lost to Tommy Hendricks of Oklahoma in one of the most-anticipated matches of the tournament.

BY NICK RICHARDS
 THE DAILY IOWAN

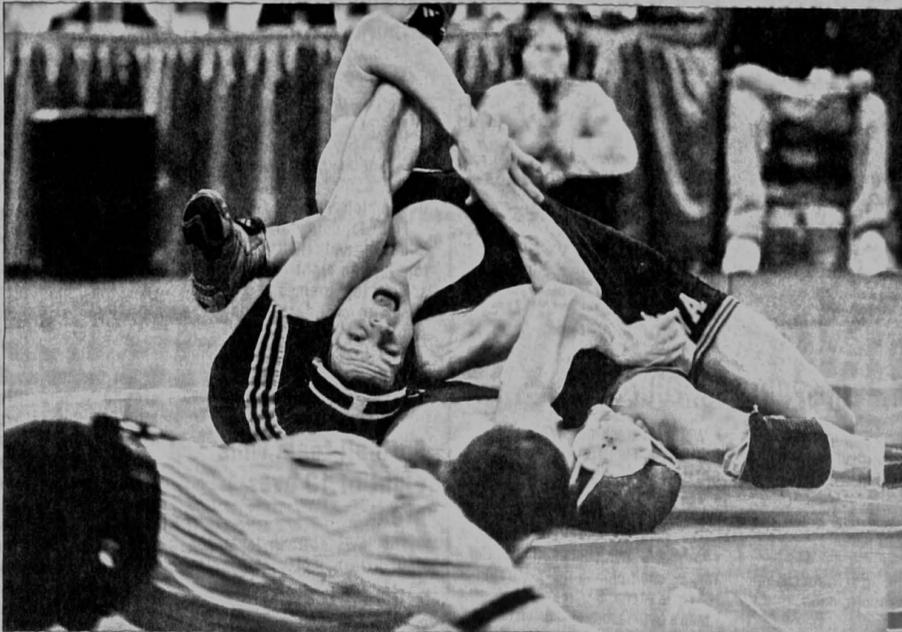

ST. LOUIS — In a season that was deemed a disappointment after a lackluster dual season and a poor showing at the Big Ten meet, the Iowa wrestling team finished seventh at the NCAA Championships — better than expected.

The Hawkeyes had a surprising four All-Americans in Ty Eustice at 141, Joe Johnston at 157, Mark Perry at 165, and Paul Bradley at 184.

However, for the second time in four years, they failed to crown a national champion, and Oklahoma State ran away with the team title — its third straight and 33rd overall.

"It's an accomplishment, but it's not what Iowa wrestling is about," Eustice said after his fifth-place finish at 149, including his first win over third-seeded Dustin Manotti of Cornell.

INDIANAPOLIS — After making the NCAA Tournament for the first time in four seasons, the Iowa men's basketball team couldn't advance past the first round against Cincinnati.

The Hawkeyes opened the game with their worst shooting performance of the season and later crumbled in the second half after cutting Cincinnati's lead to three points, allowing the Bearcats to win, 76-64, on March 17 in Indianapolis.

Iowa missed its first eight shots of the game, contributing to the team's 34 percent accuracy from the field — its second-worst outing of the season.

The Hawkeyes made only 5-of-17 3-pointers, while Cincinnati sank 9-of-18 shots from beyond the arc, including six in the second half.

With seven minutes left in the game, and Iowa's 16-point second half lead cut down to seven, coach Lisa Bluder's team needed to regain its footing.

The Hawkeyes didn't flinch under pressure.

Creighton scored only three points in the final seven minutes, and the Hawks secured a 67-52 victory over the Bluejays in the opening round of the women's NIT in Carver-Hawkeye Arena on March 18. The Hawkeyes will play Nebraska tonight in Lincoln.

CRUCIAL MOMENT:

The Hawkeyes didn't let a disappointing narrow miss for the NCAA Tournament keep them from beating Creighton by 15 points.

Madness didn't affect the team's play.

"I thought the team came out very focused and played very hard," Bluder said. "I thought we played a really good defensive game."

Creighton trailed by double digits during much of the second half but capitalized on long-range shooting to close the gap to 56-49 with 7:04 remaining. Angie Janis and Krisit Woodard hit 3-pointers during a 10-0 run, but then things turned sour for the Bluejays.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WORCESTER, Mass. — Julius Hodge shouted to his fans at the buzzer, saying he knew this would happen all along: North Carolina State was heading to the round of 16, and the defending champion was knocked out — again.

Hodge scored on a slashing drive through the lane with 4.3 seconds left to break a 62-all tie and send the Wolfpack past second-seeded Connecticut 65-62 Sunday in the second round of the NCAA tournament.

North Carolina State (21-13), the 10th seed in the Syracuse Regional, advances to the regional semifinals for the first time since 1989; it will play Wisconsin.

No team has repeated since Duke in 1991-92, but the defending national champion Huskies (23-8) seemed almost a lock to at least move past the second round. They went into the game 27-0 against teams seeded sixth or lower in the tournament. And in 19 years under coach Jim Calhoun, they were 23-2 in the first two rounds of the tournament, reaching the regional semifinals 13 times.

The loss also was a setback for the Big East conference, which has lost four teams so far, including a No. 2 seed and two No. 4 seeds.

Hodge, who yelled, "I told you! I told you!" to Wolfpack fans after the buzzer sounded, was fouled by Ed Nelson on his drive and completed the three-point play. Marcus Williams' desperation 3 at the buzzer fell short.

Hodge finished with 17 points and six assists. Williams led the Huskies with a career-high 22 points, and Charlie Villanueva had 16 points and 12 rebounds.

Villanova 76, Florida 65

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Backup center Jason Fraser scored 21 points and grabbed 15 rebounds to help fifth-seeded Villanova (24-7) make the round of 16 for the first time since 1988. It will play North Carolina.

With leading scorer Allan Ray struggling and Curtis Sumpter sitting out much of the game with an injury, Fraser and guard Randy Foye took over. Foye had 18 points to help pick up the slack.

The fourth-seeded Gators (24-8) were held to 38.5 shooting and got little offensive support for David Lee, who had 20 points, 10 rebounds, three blocks and three steals before fouling out. Matt Walsh finished with 12 points, but was 4-for-13. Anthony Roberson went 1-for-8 and finished with five points.

Jamaal Tatum led the Salukis (27-8) with 22 points. Seventh-seeded Southern Illinois got within 72-68 on Tatum's 3-pointer, but James On Curry answered with a 3-pointer of his own. It also sent Duke (27-5) into the regional semifinals for the eighth consecutive year, the longest current streak in the nation. The Blue Devils will play fifth-seeded Michigan State.

Louisville 76, Georgia Tech 54

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Francisco Garcia scored 18 of his 21 points in the first half and Taquan Dean stopped any hope Georgia Tech had for a rally with back-to-back 3-pointers, sealing a victory that sent Louisville to the regional semifinals for the first time since 1997.

Dean finished with 14 points, all but two on 3-pointers, and also had six rebounds and two assists. Larry O'Bannon added 16 for the fourth-seeded Cardinals (31-4), who have won 20 of their last 21.

Luke Schenscher led the Yellow Jackets with 13, but the rest of Georgia Tech's offense was largely ineffective. Jarrett Jack had 11 points, Will Bynum had eight and B.J. Elder was held to just three for Georgia Tech (20-12), which made a thrilling run to the title game last year.

The Hawkeyes scored 11 unanswered points, including six by senior center Jamie Cavey, to pull away. Creighton's Ally Thrall nailed a 3-pointer with 37.3 seconds left — the Bluejays' only points of the final seven minutes.

"We didn't attack their zone very well," Creighton coach Jim Flanery said. "We didn't move the ball well against their zone, and they got easy baskets."

Iowa struggled in the last 10 minutes of the first half, connecting on just three field goals, and the Hawkeye lead dwindled down to nine points before reaching 14 points at halftime.

The Bluejays turned the ball over 12 times in the first half and shot only 34.5 percent from the field.

"We didn't get off to a good start," Flanery said. "Playing from behind is hard to do on the road."

Cavey led Iowa with 23 points, while Crystal Smith added 13 points and six assists, and Johanna Solverson chipped in 11.

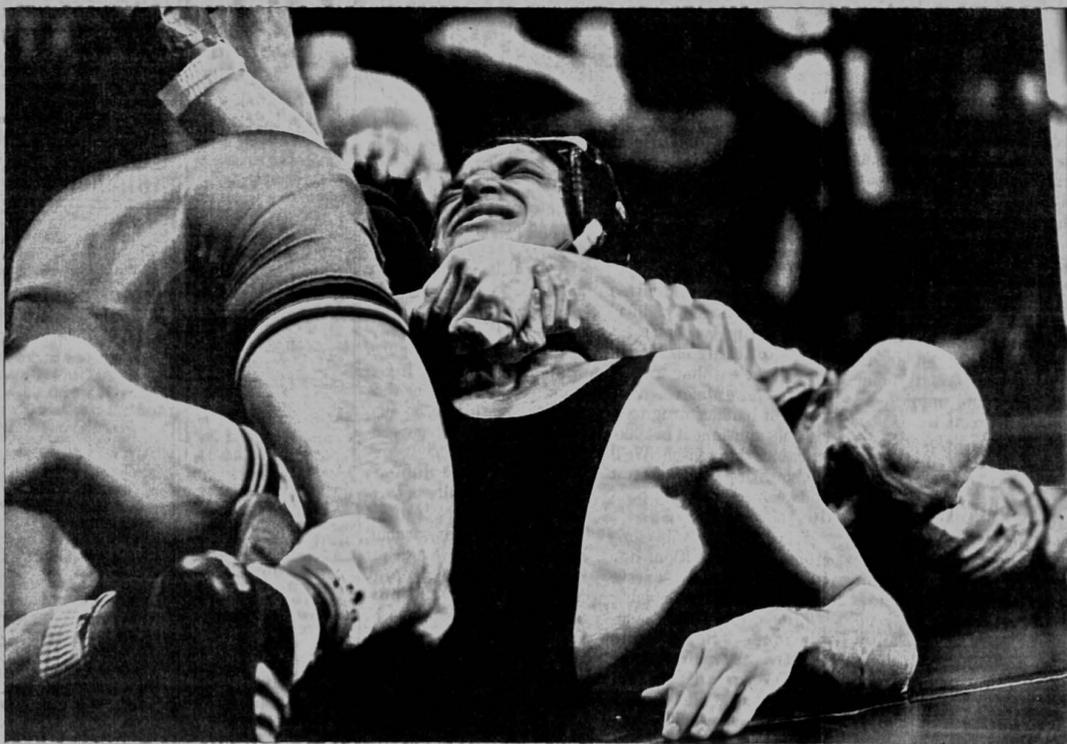

The Hawkeyes advance to play Nebraska tonight at 7. The Cornhuskers (18-13, 8-8 Big 12) beat Marquette, 66-57, in the first round on March 17. Nebraska is led by sophomore guard Kiera Hardy, who averages 18.8 points a game.

"I think this will be another great opportunity for us to go out and get another big road win," Smith said. "If we play hard, like we did in this game, it will be another great win."

The Cornhuskers compiled a 12-3 record at the Bob Devaney Sports Center and beat then second-ranked Baylor in overtime on Jan. 12 in Lincoln.

"It's unfortunate we have to go on the road," Bluder said. "They're a much better team at home."

Hawkeye junior Mario Galanakis strains to keep his shoulders off the mat while wrestling in the NCAA Tournament in St. Louis on March 17. This was Galanakis' first year wrestling for Iowa and his first time in the NCAA meet.

"We want national titles, and we want team titles, but sometimes when you get knocked off, you've got to suck it up and come back and get what you want."

Johnston, a junior, and Perry, a redshirt freshman, advanced to the finals at 157 and 165 respectively, upsetting the top seeds in their divisions, but both came up short in the finals on March 19.

Perry, who was a four-seed entering the tournament, upset top-ranked Troy Letters of Lehigh in the semifinals to reach the championship, which set up one of the most highly-anticipated matches of the tournament against third-seeded Tommy Hendricks of Oklahoma State. He had beaten Perry twice during the season.

Adding to the drama is that Perry is a native of Stillwater, Okla., which caused a stir when he signed with Iowa, and that Oklahoma State head coach John Smith and assistant coach Pat Smith are his uncles.

Perry fell to the physicality of Hendricks, who controlled Perry with hand fighting in the early portion of the first period before Hendricks scored a controversial takedown in which the referee blew a quick whistle while Hendricks didn't appear to have control of Perry.

"I fell out of my game plan," Perry said. "I was fine until they gave him that kind of BS takedown."

"I thought I was sitting on top of his head. Then after that, I kind of went into panic mode, and I don't know why, but probably because he wants to wrestle on his feet. I want to wrestle on the mat."

Each time it seemed like Perry was about to score a reversal, the position was deemed to be potentially dangerous by the referee. The two traded reversals in the final minutes, but it wasn't enough for Perry to overcome the early takedown, and he lost, 5-2.

"Perry's tough — he's a tough kid," Hendricks said. "He beat Letters; he's beat a lot of great kids this year. He's going to do a lot of great things coming up."

After the match, Perry was emotional after shaking the hands of his uncles. Smith was also emotional as he watched his nephew leave the mat, twice looking over his shoulder to watch Perry leave the floor.

Johnston had to pull a pair of upsets at the loaded 157 class to get to the final, as the eighth seed upset the No. 1 seeded Alex Tirapelle of Illinois in the quarterfinals, scoring a reversal with 40 seconds remaining to go up 6-5 and secure the upset victory. He then repeated the upset, defeating Jake Percival of Ohio, the fifth seed, scoring a late escape to win 9-8 to advance to the final against Michigan's Ryan Bertin, the No. 2 seed. Johnston had lost to Bertin in Iowa's dual loss to Michigan Feb. 13 in Iowa City.

Bertin scored takedowns in the first and second periods, which gave him a large riding time advantage. He added another takedown in the third period, and Bertin won the match 8-5.

"I'm satisfied. I'm happy I won," Bertin said. "I came in and thought I was the best wrestler in the country at my weight."

While the Hawkeyes were disappointed in their season, the future has potential. Jim Zalesky's squad returns all of its regular performers and a freshman class that will be a year older.

"It's always good to have All-Americans in the room to motivate the younger guys to get them going," Bradley said. "I think it's going to help us recruiting-wise, too."

Hawks lose their dancing spirit after tough first-round loss to Cincinnati

MEN'S B-BALL

The Hawkeyes trailed by 10 points at the break but opened the second half on a 10-3 run, cutting the Cincinnati lead to 35-32 after Jeff Horner's 3-pointer with 18:04 remaining.

But Iowa went ice cold, and the Bearcats regained their first-half form.

Cincinnati's Nick Williams hit a pair of 3-pointers in less than a minute to stretch the Bearcat lead to nine and begin a 12-0 run. After Horner's basket, the Hawks went more than 6:30 without a field goal, leaving the Hawks down, 49-37, with 11:29 to play.

The Hawkeyes couldn't close the gap to single digits the rest of the way.

"Going into the second half, I knew if I could knock down open shots, it would stretch out the defense," Williams said.

Jason Maxiell led the Bearcats with 22 points on 8-of-11 shooting — highlighted with a one-handed slam on an alley-oop. Maxiell converted both of his attempts from 3-point territory — the first two baskets from beyond the arc in the senior's career.

Maxiell also caused Iowa more trouble on the defensive end.

He grabbed nine rebounds and swatted away six shots, forcing the Hawkeyes to take perimeter shots. Iowa center Erik Hansen didn't take an attempt in 16 minutes, and Greg Brunner made just 7-of-17 shots.

"I think he was just a big presence in the lane," Iowa guard Adam Haluska said. "He was throwing a lot of stuff out of there. He caused us to take some tough shots from the outside that weren't going down."

Brunner led Iowa with 20 points and 10 rebounds for his 11th double-double of the season, despite shooting 41 percent from the floor. Horner scored 12 points, and Haluska added 10, but the duo combined for 8-of-26 shooting and eight missed 3-pointers.

Cincinnati's starting five scored all but seven of the team's points, including James White's 15 points, Williams' 13, and Eric Hicks' 10.

The Hawks couldn't buy a shot in the first half.

Iowa made just one field goal in the first 10 minutes of the game and started 1-of-14 from the floor. The Hawkeyes missed 19 attempts for the game, hitting just 27 percent of their shots.

Iowa missed lay-ups on three consecutive possessions within a minute in the first half with a chance to cut the lead to five early, contributing to the Hawks' lowest-scoring half of the season with 22 points.

Despite the rough start, Iowa came out strong after halftime. Almost three minutes after the break, the Hawkeyes were down 35-32 with the ball when Cincinnati went on a strong run following Brunner's missed 3-pointer.

"We kind of got a momentum swing, and their team made just another big run," Horner said. "We were just never really able to get back into it."

McCain: Baseball 'can't be trusted'

WASHINGTON — Saying Major League Baseball "can't be trusted," Sen. John McCain warned Sunday that legislation might be needed to force the sport to change its steroids policy.

The Arizona Republican joined the chorus of congressmen expressing disappointment with baseball's drug-testing plan after testimony from Commissioner Bud Selig and union head Donald Fehr at the House Government Reform Committee hearing on steroids on March 17.

"It just seems to me they can't be trusted," McCain told ABC's "This Week."

"What do we need to do? It seems to me that we ought to seriously consider ... a law that says all professional sports have a minimum level of performance-enhancing drug testing," McCain said.

Committee Chairman Tom Davis, R-Va., said on

CBS' "Face the Nation" that he agreed with McCain's suggestion that the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency could be called in to govern baseball's testing. The independent agency oversees drug testing and discipline for U.S. Olympic athletes.

Davis, whose committee subpoenaed current and former stars and baseball executives to testify on March 17, said he's willing to wait and see how Major League Baseball handles drug testing and punishment in 2005.

"It has this season. We'll see how it responds when it finds someone testing positive," he told CBS.

Asked about possible government intervention, Rob Manfred, baseball's executive vice president for labor relations, told CBS, "Commissioner Selig said unequivocally in the hearing that if Congress decides that federal legislation is appropriate, that he would be supportive."

In March 2004, McCain's Senate Commerce Committee held a hearing on steroids in baseball, pressure that helped lead to the drug-testing plan that owners and players agreed to in January.

Several lawmakers were particularly critical of two provisions in that agreement: one that allows players to be fined instead of suspended for failing a drug test and another that calls for testing to be suspended if there's a government investigation.

"I was a little dubious about the necessity of having hearings, because I had been told that baseball had installed a weak, but legitimate, regimen," McCain said. "I now applaud my colleagues in the House because what this highlighted was the absolute insensitivity of both the owners and the players to the American people."

horoscopes

Monday, March 21, 2005
— by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A new job or an opportunity to make some money is evident today. A relationship that you value will bring you added pleasure. You can impress and influence someone younger who looks up to you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Too many changes without proper preparation will come back to haunt you. Be careful what you say to others; you may be questioned later about a particular comment you made. Stick to the truth.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You should be able to finish what you started today. If you just stick to what you do best, the rest will fall into place. A new friendship may open doors or turn into a worthwhile partnership.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Concentrate on what you can do to get ahead financially. The odds are in your favor, and the ability to put a deal together is looking good. Change will bring about a whole new outlook.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stand tall, and prepare to grab everyone's attention today. You will be right on target, and you should be able to make some interesting suggestions. You could meet someone you will want to get to know better.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Something may be going on behind your back. Don't waste too much time trying to figure out what everyone else is up to. A surprise may be coming your way with the possibility of a financial gain.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): There will be plenty of action going on around you today. Love is in the picture, making the possibilities endless. Consider what you can do to make personal improvements.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may think you have everything taken care of, but chances are good you'll have to make more adjustments. You may feel anxious, but that is no reason to overcompensate or take on more than you can handle.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You will have plenty to do and plenty to say today. The more you integrate with others, the further ahead you can get. A chance to take part in some sort of competition or challenge will entice you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may want to think twice before you decide to take on something that is too much for you. A good deal is only worthwhile if you can handle your end of it. Caution must be taken with finances.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You'll be impulsive today. Guard against making snap decisions that will get you into trouble. Get involved in something similar to a sports activity that will help you to take out your frustrations in a safe environment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may feel like daydreaming today, but you should focus on being productive and getting a lot done. If you work hard, you will advance. Don't let personal matters interfere with what you know you should be doing.

WELCOME BACK FROM SPRING BREAK

— by Nick Narigon

• Say "Hi" to Mom so she can do your laundry. When she asks why all of your clothes smell like beer and smoke, just tell her you did a lot of bowling down in Puerto Vallarta.

• Go ahead and set aside those phone and utility bills for next month.

• Collect all of your peeling skin in a jar and save as a present for Lindsay Lohan.

• Unpack all of the textbooks you took with you. Begin reading.

• Buy a case of Coke to go with all of the rum you brought back.

• Pray that the package you sent to yourself isn't inspected by the Federalis.
