Jurors: State case weak in alleged rape

Former UI freshman MICHAEL JASON MADEJ was acquitted on a charge of third-degree sexual assault

BY TRACI FINCH
THE DAILY IOWAN

Lack of evidence and a "weak" case were the deciding factors in finding former UI freshman and accused rapist Michael Jason Madej not guilty, jury members said Sunday.

The jury acquitted Madej, 18, on April 8 on a charge of third-degree sexual abuse after fewer than three hours of deliberation. A UI student said Madej raped her in October 2004, but the prosecution did not show sufficient grounds, jury members said.

"For me, in my case, I would just have to say that I kind of felt that there just wasn't enough evidence from the state to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Michael Madej was guilty," juror Rona Duke said.

UI senior Ben Lozano, another jury member, agreed, calling the state's case "sloppy." He said he questioned why certain drug tests were not performed on the woman's urine, such as tests for GHB, a common date-rape drug.

"It just seemed strange to me about why those tests weren't done," he said.

After drinking downtown and using the restroom at Milio's, 20 S. Clinton St., the woman testified that she does not remember anything in the early morning hours of Oct. 16 until waking up naked on Madej's Hillcrest Residence Hall futon.

She said that she believes she may have been drugged, but the tests that were performed were negative. A state criminologist testified that the woman's urine-alcohol level likely was above 0.2 that night, although she said she only consumed about four to five alcoholic drinks.

"I think she had more to drink than maybe she's recalling," Duke said.

NOT A LONE PROBLEM

In Iowa City, it seems that everyone — professors, city councilors, and even students — is concerned with binge drinking. And as do groups in other college towns, the Iowa City Alcohol Advisory Board is scrounging for alternative answers to a national concern.

A group emerged last year from the 21-only debate and concern about underage drinking — a collection of bar owners, local leaders, and students seeking solutions to an issue that refuses to die.

The Iowa City Alcohol Advisory Board, however, is by no means alone in its hunt for answers. College towns across the nation, facing similar problems with underage and binge drinking, have formed their own groups, most with great success. Such organizations are now giving momentum to improving safety at the downtown bar scene, board members said.

"We support Iowa City as it is," said Leah Cohen, the owner of Bo-James, 118 E. Washington St., and the board's co-chairwoman.

"We never kicked off a season like this before"

— Charles Swanson,
executive director for Hancher

Hancher will open with party

BY CHRISTINA ERB
THE DAILY IOWAN

Charles Swanson, the executive director for Hancher Auditorium, hopes the 2005-06 performing arts season will kick off with an unparalleled experience for students and local residents.

The season will open Sept. 24 with Plena Libre, a Puerto Rican band whose members encourage the audience to join them on stage to dance.

"We never kicked off a season like this before," Swanson said, adding that Puerto Rican snacks will be served in the lobby prior to the performance. "This has a party feel to it. The music is infectious. It's music a lot of people want to dance to."

While the upcoming season maintains Hancher's tradition of family-oriented performances, Swanson said, he hopes the diversity of the shows will appeal to all ages. Already the box office is being flooded with orders, he added.

"We hope to draw in as much audience as we can," he said, adding that Hancher will host a hip-hop week in January. "We are hoping there will be something of appeal in a season to as many people as possible."

The Mingus Big Band, Cirque Éloize, South Africa's Ladysmith Black Mambazo, and the Academy of St. Martin in the Fields will return next season. The Producers and Thoroughly Modern Millie will also be highlights.

However, Swanson said he expects the return of the Broadway musical Mamma Mia! to bring in the highest profit.

"It's one of those shows that people enjoy seeing again," he said. "We felt like, without a doubt it, was OK to bring them back. Our audience loves Broadway."

Courthouse Security | DEPUTY SHERIFF DAVE STANTON

Employees: Deputy patrol makes courthouse feel safer

Since April 1, Dave Stanton has been on duty at the Johnson County Courthouse. Stepped-up security at the facility has been a concern since a 2003 report.

BY SEUNG MIN KIM
THE DAILY IOWAN

Roughly a week after an armed deputy began patrolling the Johnson County Courthouse, officials said the 417 S. Clinton St. building is safer for employees and members of the public who frequent the three-story building.

Stationing an armed officer in the facility hasn't stopped courthouse patrons from becoming irate, especially in the clerk's office, employees said, but the presence of the deputy quells any bubbling tension.

"If [the deputy] hears someone's voice going up in tone, he comes in and stays until the issue is taken care of," Johnson County Clerk of Court Lodema Berkley said. "They're still radical at the counter, but they mellow out a little bit more now when they see the officer."

Deputy Sheriff Dave Stanton, who began his new duties at the courthouse on April 1, said he hasn't seen any breaches of security at the courthouse, nor has he had to search patrons for possible contraband.

He said he spends his days walking around the facility, making sure judges' chambers are secure and that all individuals in the courthouse are behaving properly.

"There's been a positive input from the vast majority of people," he said. "People come up and expressed their thanks, and I even get the occasional smile."

The recent addition of deputies in the courthouse assuaged some security concerns that courthouse officials have had for several years.

A county committee had advised the county Board of Supervisors to add law-enforcement personnel to patrol the facility in December 2003, but those recommendations were

Confab calls for humane drug plan

BY MATTHEW SORAPARU
THE DAILY IOWAN

Drug-policy activists throughout the Midwest convened in the IMU over the weekend to tout student involvement and promote changes in drug-violation procedures at public universities nationwide, including the UI.

The conference, sponsored by the Students for a Sensible Drug Policy, encouraged a proactive, treatment-based approach to deter drug possession — a “zero tolerance” offense at the UI that can lead to expulsion from the residence halls.

“We believe that many aspects of the country’s current approach to drugs have failed,” said Scarlett Swerdlow, the national group’s executive director. “Punishment should not include threatening students’ ability to get an education because of past mistakes.”

Drug-related convictions can disqualify students from scholarships, lead to expulsion, and create an assortment of future problems, she said. Such punishments can cause further dependency on drugs or alcohol, thus harming more than they help, she contended.

The problem has touched the UI as well, leading a handful of students to drop out, said UI senior George Pappas, the drug group’s UI chapter president and a member of the group’s national board of directors.

“I knew a group of five people who got kicked out of the dorms and arrested for having [a minuscule amount] of marijuana,” he said. “One of them ended up transferring to a community college, and another dropped out of school completely. It started a downward spiral.”

Jess Sellers, the director of the University Counseling Services and the Center for Collegiate Behavioral Health at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, said recurring problems can be prevented if universities commit themselves to treating — not just punishing — drug offenders. Such solutions will lessen the chance of a relapse, he said.

“Universities shouldn’t just throw people off of campus but give them an opportunity to get better,” he said. “I would like to see students taking more responsibility for themselves and for each other.”

Sellers said his plan seems more the exception rather than the rule; he knows of only two other universities that offer treatment housing.

“I’m amazed that colleges and universities haven’t done this sort of thing before,” he said. “We all need to get more involved.”

Ethan Nadelmann, a prominent drug-policy activist who led one discussion, said such involvement is imperative for students to make their voices heard.

“Universities have become accustomed to an apathetic student body,” said Nadelmann, the founder and executive director of the New York-based Drug Policy Alliance. “Read the rule book so you know it as well or better than the administration. Nobody can become an expert.”

Turnout at the conference was lower than expected, and many scheduled speakers did not attend. Among them were Phillip Jones, the UI vice president for Student Services, who said he could not attend because of a heavy schedule, Charles Green, the assistant vice president for the UI police, and Von Stange, the director of UI Residence Services.

IC man to plead guilty in sex-abuse case

A man who allegedly sexually abused an 11-year-old girl while he was HIV-positive will enter a plea of guilty on April 19, online court records show.

Matt Powills, 41, was charged with second-degree sexual abuse and criminal transmission of HIV; it is not known what he will plead guilty to.

Police alleged that Powills sexually abused the girl from August to November 2004 at his Iowa City home.

He allegedly performed oral sex on the 11-year-old, touched her vaginal area, rubbed his genitals on her vagina, and had the girl manually stimulate his genitals, police reports show.

Police reports did not indicate if the girl had contracted the disease.

Second-degree sexual abuse, which was filed because the girl was under the age of 12, and criminal transmission of HIV are Class B felonies. Each carries a maximum penalty of 25 years in prison.

Duplex fire displaces two

No one was injured in a fire that broke out in an Iowa City duplex on April 8 that caused an estimated $50,000 worth of damage.

“Discarded smoking materials” generated the accidental blaze at 705 Eastmoor Drive, according to an Iowa City Fire Department press release.

Shortly after 9:48 p.m., firefighters encountered heavy smoke and flames that were poking through the roof of the one-story building.

Fire crews had the blaze under control in approximately 15 minutes and extinguished it in an hour, according to the press release. The Red Cross responded to the scene to assist the building’s two displaced residents.

The fire was the second in two days in Iowa City. A fire broke out at an Iowa City house on April 6, and one firefighter was injured.

Investigators determined that the fire at 117 N. Van Buren St. was also accidental and started as a result of “careless disposal of smoking materials.”

That blaze caused an estimated $49,000 worth of damage and displaced six people.

Event student lobby

BY SARA GEAKE
THE DAILY IOWAN

More than 50 participants from eight Iowa colleges gathered the weekend in Iowa City to develop strategies to lobby legislators in support of Israel at the Iowa Israel Advocacy Conference.

“We wanted to engage students politically,” said Weaver, the president of the Israel Student Union. “We wanted to engage students in support of Israel at the Iowa Israel Advocacy Conference.”

The conference kicked off April 8 with a talk by M. Bard, the author of Myths: A Guide to the Arab Conflict. The peace process is moving forward, he said, but Palestinians must keep their pressure on.

“In order [to understand conflict], you need to look at politics,” he told The Daily Iowan. “You need to look at history, geography, and religion.”

The conference’s featured speaker, Rep. James Leach, spoke of his experience with the region at a luncheon April 9, quoting Albert Einstein and Yasser Arafat.

“Timeliness is an important substance,” Leach said about negotiations. “The U.S. has been on top of this issue at all times.”

Leach, who visited around six years ago, said conflict need to be de-escalated now because of new technologies. Weapons today are so advanced that a potential war could annihilate mankind, he said.

STATE

Lawmakers seek end to budget logjam

DES MOINES (AP) — Lawmakers this week are searching for an end to a budget stalemate and putting the finishing touches on economic-development efforts they hope will be the signature of this year's Legislature. In the House, key committees are crafting details of a new Iowa Values Fund designed to lure high-tech businesses to the state, replacing one struck down by the courts. Bargainers are still hashing out where they'll get the money. In addition, the full House will move early in the week to approve a package of incentives aimed at luring an auto racetrack to Newton. "We'll get that issue out there," said House Majority Leader Chuck Gipp, R-Decorah.

The House, controlled by Republicans on a 51-49 margin, has been methodically approving a series of measures fleshing out the state's $5 billion budget.

Those measures now await approval by the Senate. There has been little progress in a chamber split evenly between Republicans and Democrats at 25-25.

"We all know we have to pass a budget, but right now we're a very long way apart on the budget," said Senate Republican Leader Stewart Iverson of Dows. "I don't know how we break the impasse, but we've got to do that, or we'll be sitting here on July 4."

"It's difficult to say right now," said Senate Democratic Leader Michael Gronstal of Council Bluffs. "Hopefully, Republicans will move back to a position of listening."

Event pushes students to lobby for Israel

BY SARA GEAKE
THE DAILY IOWAN

More than 50 participants from eight Iowa colleges gathered over the weekend in Iowa City to develop strategies to lobby politicians in support of Israel at the first Iowa Israel Advocacy Conference.

"We wanted to engage the students politically," said Claudia Weaver, the president of Hawkeyes for Israel, the student group that organized the event.

The conference kicked off on April 8 with a talk by Mitchell Bard, the author of Myths and Facts: A Guide to the Arab-Israeli Conflict. The peace process is moving forward, he said, but the Palestinians must keep their promises.

"In order [to understand the conflict], you need to look beyond politics," he told The Daily Iowan. "You need to look at history, geography, and religion."

The conference's featured speaker, Rep. James Leach, R-Iowa, spoke of his experiences with the region at a luncheon on April 9, quoting Albert Einstein and Yasser Arafat.

"Timeliness is as important as substance," Leach said about peace negotiations. "The U.S. has to be on top of this issue at all times."

Leach, who visited Israel around six years ago, said war and conflict need to be dealt with now because of new technology. Weapons today are so advanced that a potential war could harm mankind, he said.

"The students here are going to be the next members of Congress. They're going to be the decision-makers."

— Claudia Weaver, president of Hawkeyes for Israel

"It's a really extraordinary thought what responsibilities exist that never existed before," he said.

Iowa's four other congressmen sent statements to be read at the lunch backing Israel, and Hawkeyes for Israel presented Leach with 300 letters from UI students thanking him for his support.

"Our congressional record in the state is absolutely amazing [in matters with Israel]," Weaver said.

The conference continued through Sunday with sessions about engaging students on campus and lobbying at state and national levels.

"The students here are going to be the next members of Congress," Weaver said. "They're going to be the decision-makers."

She hopes the conference, which grew out of last year's Israel Education Week, will continue as an annual event.

"I think our campus is very interested, especially for having a small Jewish population," she said.

UIHC researchers to study bladder drug

BY JESSICA SEVESKA
THE DAILY IOWAN

Urologists at the UI Hospitals and Clinics received approval last month to study a new drug that will treat patients with two common types of bladder sickness.

Painful bladder syndrome and interstitial cystitis are conditions that affect approximately 10 million Americans a year, said Karl Kreder, a UIHC urologist and the lead researcher in the study.

He was awarded a grant by the National Institutes of Health to study the two syndromes. The UIHC is one of 10 medical centers across the United States that will research a new FDA-approved medication designed to combat both conditions.

Interstitial cystitis is a painful inflammatory condition of the bladder wall. Painful bladder syndrome causes pelvic pain during bladder filling and a high increase in urinary frequency, said Mary Eno, a UIHC research assistant. Some people with painful bladder syndrome urinate up to 70 times a day, she said.

It is unknown what causes the illnesses, which often afflict women. Eno said Kreder has treated area residents with the syndromes for years.

The study will be conducted over the course of two years using 25 volunteers over the age of 18 who have symptoms of the two syndromes.

"It won't be easy to find volunteers, because we're targeting people who haven't been diagnosed yet," Eno said.

The medication will be tested in a double-blind study, she said; half of the research

HOW TO HELP

Research participant requirements:

- Men and women over the age of 18
  - People with increased daytime and nighttime urinary frequency who have never sought treatment
  - People who have not been treated for lower abdominal or pelvic pain associated with a full bladder and do not have a urinary-tract infection
- To participate, contact Mary Eno at 866-309-0834, toll free.

participants will receive the medication, and the other half will receive placebos. The researchers and the volunteers will not know which research participants receive the medication. Participants will visit the UIHC four times over a 12- to 14-week period.

Participants will receive blood and urine tests at no cost and will be compensated for parking expenses. Some people are leery of starting a medication, Eno said, so the hospital is also offering the 25 participants educational training about painful bladder syndrome and interstitial cystitis.

The syndromes can be affected by diet, she said, so the educational training will explore preventative awareness.

UI researchers said the drug name will not be released for privacy reasons and in order to prevent promotion of the drug. The study will begin when the researchers find enough volunteers with the conditions.

Speculation rages on Rudolph aid

BY HARRY R. WEBER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MURPHY, N.C. — Kenny Jane Wade understands the anti-government sentiment that may have led some people here to help feed and shelter serial bomber Eric Rudolph during his years on the lam.

Wade, who owns a cabin near where some of Rudolph's stash of explosives was found this week, said the mistrust has been part of mountain culture since the days of the so-called revenuers — federal agents who arrested people for making moonshine during Prohibition.

"My grandfather owned a store," said Wade, a 58-year-old retiree. "He knew people who ran moonshine, and he wouldn't turn them in, because he knew their families would starve."

Although no one has admitted assisting Rudolph during his five years on the run in the Appalachian wilderness, investigators suspect he had help. Some here are wondering if there will be additional prosecutions now that Rudolph is talking to authorities as part of a plea deal to spare his life.

Rudolph became an almost mythic figure during his years evading police, and many in the region mocked the government's inability to root him out. Two country-western songs were written about Rudolph, and a top-selling T-shirt bore the words: "Run Rudolph Run."

When he was captured scavenging for food behind a Save-A-Lot food store here, authorities said he was healthier and better groomed than they would have expected from a man surviving in the woods.

Skip Long, who lives in a cabin not far from Wade's, described the residents of Murphy as good law-abiding Christians. He said if Rudolph had knocked on his door, he would have let the law know.

"People don't put up with foolishness here," Long said as he pulled out the .22-caliber deringer he carries in the pocket of his overalls.

Charles Stone, a retired Georgia Bureau of Investigation agent who helped oversee the bombing probe, said he doesn't expect Rudolph to give up the names of anyone who is still alive.

"Obviously, the deal is — he tells you everything he knows," Stone said. "But the investigators have to know what type of questions to ask him. Mr. Rudolph is intelligent enough. I don't think he's going to give up information the government doesn't already know or has reason to suspect."

"My observation is I don't believe Mr. Rudolph would turn snitch. I might stand corrected tomorrow." After all, Stone said, "I didn't think he'd plead guilty."

Rudolph is scheduled to enter his plea Wednesday to carrying out the deadly bombing at the 1996 Atlanta Olympics and setting off three other blasts in which two people were killed and more than 120 injured. The plea deal calls for four consecutive life sentences without the possibility of parole.

Although he is believed to be a follower of a white supremacist religion that is anti-abortion, anti-gay, and anti-Semitic, some investigators, including Stone, said opposition to the government was a more likely motivator for those who may have helped.

Investigators also have said it's possible Rudolph, an outdoorsman and former soldier, could have survived alone. But Long doesn't buy it.

"I don't think you could make your way up here without driving. You'd have to drive or have someone drive you. There's no taxis, no MARTA," Long said, referring to the Atlanta rail system. "If there were accomplices, they should be prosecuted."

People around town said they've heard others say they don't think Rudolph did anything wrong. Wade said she never sympathized with Rudolph, but added, "I understand why a lot of people would help him or sympathize with him."

Kerry: Trickery and intimidation must end

Kerry supporters say voting irregularities made it difficult for some Democratic voters to cast ballots in the November election

BY MICHAEL KUNZELMAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Many voters in last year's presidential election were denied access to the polls through trickery and intimidation, former Democratic presidential candidate John Kerry told a voters' group Sunday.

"Last year, too many people were denied their right to vote, too many who tried to vote were intimidated," the Massachusetts senator said at an event sponsored by the state League of Women Voters.

"There is no magic wand. No one person is going to stand up and suddenly say it's going to change tomorrow. You have to do that," he said.

Kerry supporters have charged that voting irregularities in largely Democratic areas made it difficult for voters to cast ballots in the November election. A lawsuit in Ohio cited long lines and a shortage of voting machines in predominantly minority neighborhoods, but the Ohio Supreme Court dismissed the suit.

Kerry also cited examples Sunday of how people were duped into not voting.

"Leaflets are handed out saying Democrats vote on Wednesday, Republicans vote on Tuesday," he said. "People are told in telephone calls that if you've ever had a parking ticket, you're not allowed to vote."

Kerry has never disputed the outcome of election, saying voting irregularities did not involve enough votes to change the result. Bush won the pivotal state of Ohio by 118,000 votes, giving him enough electoral votes to win re-election.

The Republican National Committee dismissed Kerry's comments Sunday.

"While President Bush and members of Congress are working to move our country forward, it's disappointing that some Democrats are focused on rehashing baseless allegations more than five months after the election," RNC spokeswoman Tracey Schmitt said.

Earlier this year, Kerry joined Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton, D-N.Y., in filing voting-reform legislation. The Count Every Vote Act would create a federal holiday for voting, require paper receipts for votes, and authorize $500 million to help states upgrade voting systems and equipment.

Congress' investigative agency, the Government Accountability Office, has also begun looking into the handling of provisional ballots and malfunctions of voting machines. The study could lead to changes in the election process.

Kerry, using crutches as he recovers from knee surgery, suggested the United States should spend as much time promoting democracy at home as it does abroad in such countries as Iraq.

"We need to go about the business of making our own democracy in America work better," he said.

looking at the underage, excessive drinking, and trying to improve the image of downtown, because there's a lot of false information about downtown Iowa City."

In the board's early months, members researched the effectiveness of other commissions in college towns. A strong model was the Liquor Advisory Commission of Champaign, Ill.

Formed in 1993, Champaign's city-sanctioned Liquor Advisory Commission worked to restructure training for bartenders and mandate that bars have last calls no later than 2 a.m., with a 2:30 a.m. closing time. The extension has prevented patrons from leaving all at once and has also curbed after-hours parties, said commission member Ryann Hubbard.

The average number of underage drinking tickets given out five years ago in Champaign was as high as 6,000. In the last three years, that average has been cut in half, said Paul Berg, Champaign's deputy liquor commissioner.

Although the numbers show that Champaign's methods are effective, Cohen said, Iowa City's alcohol board has taken a different route to reach its goals, which include reducing the amount of newspaper and window advertising and working for more alcohol education.

The board has also implemented a bar-monitor program, people who specifically look for excessive drinking and encourage bar safety.

Iowa City and Champaign are not alone in creating advisory boards. More than a dozen college towns from California State in Fresno to Bloomsburg University in Bloomsburg, Pa., have formed commissions.

Unlike the other towns, Stanford University's Alcohol Advisory Board is composed solely of professors and students. Board Chairman Ralph Castro said 95 percent of Stanford students live on campus, where most of the social scene thrives. The board reports to the school's administration, not the City Council.

A main accomplishment of Stanford's board is enhancing alcohol-safety education through its incoming-student orientation, Castro said.

Although many college-town advisory commissions have made progress in combating excessive drinking, some city leaders are waiting for the proof that Iowa City's board is doing its job.

"I don't think [the alcohol board] is getting at the heart of the problem, which is actually controlling what's in the bars themselves," said City Councilor Dee Vanderhoef. "I'm still skeptical."

'My testimony was basically the truth,'
— Michael Jason Madej

When the woman regained consciousness, one witness testified, she seemed "out of it" and was taken to UI Hospitals and Clinics, where she was examined by sexual-assault nurses.

After collecting evidence and searching Hillcrest, a UI police officer found Madej. He was later arrested.

The October 2004 incident has haunted Madej for seven months, he said Sunday, and he is eager to get on with his life. The Lemont, Ill., native was suspended from the UI after the allegations and is now attending community college — he plans to enroll in a four-year institution eventually.

"My image got shattered. My reputation got ruined. My family and I — we had a hard seven months," Madej said, adding that the day he took the stand was "the most nerve-racking" day in his life.

"My testimony was basically the truth," he said. "That's the truth."

Madej told the four-woman, eight-man jury that he met the woman on his way home from a downtown bar and that they went back to his Hillcrest room to have consensual sex. "We were kissing and touching and undressing each other, and we got into my [loft] bed," Madej told the jury. When he asked the woman if he should put on a condom, she said yes and assisted him, he said.

During sex, two condoms ripped or fell off, Madej testified. The woman said she found part of a condom while going to the bathroom the next day.

Prosecuting attorney Anne Lahey suggested that both condoms broke because the woman was asleep — there was no lubrication for the intercourse, she said.

When the woman said she was tired and wanted to go to sleep, Madej obliged, he said.

The woman said that when she awoke, two or three men on Hillcrest's third floor teased and laughed at her.

Lozano said he was disturbed that the case was only against Madej when several witnesses testified that the other men also harmed the woman verbally.

"It seems to me that it should have been more against all of those guys, as opposed to just Mike Madej," Lozano said. "They all contributed to [the woman's] horrible experience."

Cardinals prepare for conclave

BY NIKO PRICE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

VATICAN CITY — Cardinals began "an intense period of silence and prayer" before their conclave to choose the next pope, saying on April 9 they would stop speaking publicly to protect the strict secrecy surrounding the centuries-old tradition.

The throngs of pilgrims who attended John Paul II's funeral on April 8 flowed out of Rome, leaving mainly tourists in a quiet, rainy St. Peter's Square. The Vatican said a decision on calls to put John Paul on a fast track to sainthood would rest with the next pope.

Italian Cardinal Francesco Marchisano celebrated the second Mass for John Paul in St. Peter's Basilica, a daily rite over nine days that began with the funeral Mass. His homily praised "this infinite humanity" that he called the late pope's hallmark.

The Vatican also released photographs of the pope's tomb, a white marble slab, slightly raised off the floor and tilted, with the Latin letters IOANNES PAULUS PPII, and the dates of his 26-year reign. It also bears the first two letters of Christ's name in Greek, a common symbol with roots in early Christianity.

The grave is in the small grotto once occupied by the sarcophagus of Pope John XXIII, which was moved into the main floor of St. Peter's Basilica after his 2000 beatification because so many pilgrims wanted to visit his tomb.

The unanimous vote on April 9 by 130 cardinals to maintain public silence about John Paul's successor was unprecedented. But in an era of continuous news updates and constant speculation, Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro-Valls called the media ban an "act of responsibility."

Andrew Medichini/Associated Press

Priests surround the altar during a commemorative Mass led by Italian Cardinal Camillo Ruini in St. Peter's Basilica at the Vatican on Sunday. Cardinals, clergy from the Roman diocese, and crowds of pilgrims packed the basilica for one of a nine-day series of funeral Masses for the late Pope John Paul II.

He asked journalists not to ask the cardinals for interviews and said they should not take the prelates' silence as an act of "discourtesy."

"The cardinals, after the funeral Mass of the Holy Father, began a more intense period of silence and prayer, in view of the conclave," Navarro-Valls said. "They unanimously decided to avoid interviews and encounters with the media."

At least two cardinals later turned down requests for interviews.

The lack of access to the cardinals was unlikely to stem the speculation about John Paul's successor, with worldwide interest peaking in what could be a tight competition between reformers and conservatives.

Navarro-Valls said 115 prelates will participate in the conclave, which will begin April 18 — all the cardinals under the age of 80 except for Cardinal Jaime Sin of the Philippines and Cardinal Alfonso Antonio Suarez Rivera of Mexico, who are too sick to attend.

John Paul II a tough act to follow, many say

VATICAN CITY — The next pope won't have it easy.

He'll have to confront the spread of Islam and Protestant evangelism. He'll have to balance calls for social activism with demands to focus on traditional doctrine. He'll have to battle secularism in Europe and sex scandals in America.

But his biggest challenge was manufactured in the Vatican itself: He'll have to escape the shadow of one of the most beloved popes in history.

"I won't say I won't love the new pope, but it won't be the same," Francesca di Leonforte, a 23-year-old psychology student from the Sicilian town of Nissoria, said on Sunday in St. Peter's Square. "We'll develop an affection for the new pope, but we'll never forget OUR pope."

John Paul II, who was buried on April 8 amid the greatest collection of mourners high and humble ever assembled, wrenched the papacy from the medieval walls of Vatican City and took it out into the world, becoming history's most traveled pope.

The media-savvy pontiff also entered the homes of hundreds of millions of faithful on television, and many developed a deep affection for the kindhearted old man with the uncanny charisma.

He sought out the young, the poor, the oppressed — and "I won't say I won't love the new pope, but it won't be the same. We'll develop an affection for the new pope, but we'll never forget OUR pope."

— Francesca di Leonforte, a 23-year-old psychology student from the Sicilian town of Nissoria they responded. At his funeral, crowds pleaded with the church to declare him a saint.

The Polish-born pope also displayed a common touch and keen understanding of the power of symbolism, which inspired even those who sharply disagreed with him on issues of faith. Many people seemed to warm to the pope and regard him as genuinely holy even if they did not share his religious beliefs.

By any account, his will be a tough act to follow.

Next week, 115 cardinals will gather under the frescoed dome of the Sistine Chapel to decide who will take over where John Paul left off. In one of the most secretive traditions known to humanity, the red-robed "princes" of the church will cast ballot after ballot starting on April 18 until they choose a new leader.

When they are in agreement, the chosen one will say

"Accepto," a puff of white smoke will emerge from the chimney, bells will toll, and a cardinal will appear at the central window of St. Peter's Basilica to declare "Habemus papam" — "We have a pope."

From that moment, the church's new leader will be playing to a tough crowd.

"Whoever he is, it will be very difficult for him, because there will be such huge expectations. He will be continuously compared to his predecessor," said Maria Komatowska, a 49-year old doctor attending Mass in Warsaw, Poland.

"The next one will have to work hard to prove he is worthy of being there, worthy of replacing John Paul II," Italo Ramos, 19, said at a coffee shop in Sao Paulo, Brazil. "Everybody knows it won't be easy to replace John Paul II. He was the perfect example of what a pope should be."

To be sure, not everyone adored John Paul. Many criticized his refusal to allow discussion of contraception and women in the priesthood. Many said he centralized Vatican control of the church too much. Many said he did too little, too late, to respond to sexual abuse by priests.

"I'd like to see someone who's more progressive in terms of sexuality, women's equality, and social issues," said Alicia Mendoza, 39, who traveled from the Navarra region of northern Spain to join the crowds in St. Peter's Square.

But John Paul, who died April 2 at the age of 84, captured the world's affection like no other pope.

"He was unique. He was humble. He knew how to transmit love and hope with only a glance, a gesture, a smile," di Leonforte said. "He would walk by, and you felt that he was looking just at you."

Death toll in Afghan crash increases to 18

Two more American soldiers were found in the wreckage from the April 6 crash, which was the deadliest incident in Afghanistan for the United States since the fall of the Taliban in 2001. Bad weather and bad visibility may have been to blame for the accident; there was no sign of enemy fire.

BY STEPHEN GRAHAM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

KABUL, Afghanistan — The death toll from the fiery crash of a U.S. helicopter in Afghanistan rose to 18 after searchers found the remains of two more American soldiers in the wreckage, the military said on April 9.

Investigators dispatched from the United States were heading to the site of the April 6 crash, the deadliest for Americans since the fall of the Taliban in 2001, to examine whether bad weather was to blame.

Thirteen U.S. service members and three civilian contractors were initially confirmed dead in the crash of the CH-47 Chinook near Ghazni, 80 miles south of the Afghan capital, Kabul.

Spokeswoman Lt. Cindy Moore said the remains of two other soldiers listed as missing were found on April 8, raising the number of American troops killed to 15.

All the remains were taken to Bagram, the American base north of Kabul. From there, they will be flown to Dover Air Force Base in Delaware for identification, Moore said.

The names of the victims and the nationalities of the three contractors have not been released.

Moore said investigators from the U.S. Army's Combat Readiness Center at Fort Rucker, Ala., were traveling to Afghanistan on April 9.

The helicopter crashed as it returned to Bagram from a mission to deliver mail and supplies and transport personnel in the insurgency-plagued south. The charred wreckage was found in an area of desert near a cluster of brick kilns.

Officials reported no sign of enemy fire and suggested bad visibility and strong winds may have caused a fatal pilot error or technical problem. A second Chinook made it safely back.

According to U.S. government statistics, 137 American soldiers have died in and around Afghanistan since Operation Enduring Freedom began after the 9/11 attacks in the United States.

Accidents, including a string of helicopter crashes and explosions caused by mines and munitions left over from the country's long wars, have proven almost as deadly as attacks from Taliban-led insurgents.

The previous worst incident in Afghanistan was an accidental explosion at an arms dump in Ghazni province in January 2004 that killed eight American soldiers.

The military said late on April 8 that a soldier was injured by a land-mine explosion near Bagram. The soldier was inquiring in a village about an earlier rocket attack on the base, but there was no evidence militants had laid the charge deliberately, the military said.

The soldier, who suffered injuries to his legs, was evacuated to a U.S. military hospital in Germany.

About 17,000 U.S. soldiers remain in Afghanistan training a new Afghan army and battling a stubborn Taliban-led insurgency that has revived since the end of winter.

Incidents reported April 9 included the killing of an Afghan official in the border province of Zabul, which police blamed on Taliban insurgents. Further north, Afghan officials said they had arrested a district mayor in eastern Laghman province for alleged links with rebels and handed him over to U.S. forces.

No other hospital in this region offers more options.
And more hope.

When it's a neurological illness, you need more than a hospital. You need comprehensive care. The kind only an academic medical center can provide.

At University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, Iowa's only comprehensive academic medical center, we don't just treat disorders. We work to solve them. Teams of neurologists and neurosurgeons collaborate with skilled nurses and neurological sub-specialists to surround problems and often develop new ways to treat them. As a result, these world-class experts have pioneered a world of advancements.

Some are national leaders in the use of deep brain stimulation to treat Parkinson's disease. Others are performing a remarkable procedure that's showing promise in eliminating epileptic seizures. In many cases, specialists here are first to offer today's leading-edge treatments for stroke, brain tumors and other conditions.

If you're suffering from a neurological disorder, the people who know how to treat it best are right here. That's the academic difference.

AMENDING THE TRADITIONAL MEANING OF LIBERTY

Last week, residents of Kansas overwhelmingly approved an amendment to that state's Constitution defining marriage as an exclusive institution between a man and a woman. The amendment will prohibit the state from recognizing nuptial and civil-union rights between homosexual couples.

This is a troubling trend that is gaining momentum in states across the country, including Iowa. During last November's national elections, 11 states placed on their ballots initiatives to ban gay marriage, and it passed comfortably in all of them. The movement isn't likely to slow down, either. In relation to the national controversy over gay rights, there are several points that voters should keep in mind before making a decision on the issue:

- Gay marriage and gay civil unions are already illegal in most states, including Kansas, where the anti-gay amendment passed, and Iowa, where it has been discussed. Writing such a ban into state and federal Constitutions is superfluous and mean-spirited: Constitutions are intended to regulate governmental authority while protecting individual freedom and liberty. They aren't created to take away personal rights. Amending them to ban gay marriage is a political move and a diversion from issues of legitimate importance.

- The repeated contention that "activist judges" are attempting to change the traditional meaning of marriage is flawed. Efforts to write anti-gay policies into state and federal Constitutions can qualify as "activism" just as much as courts that seek to preserve equality.

- The policy of separating church and state still applies. Supporters of constitutional amendments against gay marriages and civil unions cite Biblical doctrine and personal religious faith as reasons for their stance. But this country doesn't have an official religion, and crafting laws based on the teachings of a single faith or belief system is tantamount to imposing religion on the general population. To the extent that gay relationships don't threaten public safety — which they don't — and to the extent that various institutions of faith and belief may have various interpretations of marriage, it is simply not justifiable to codify one interpretation of it into the law of the land.

- Marriage and civil unions are not synonymous with each other. Outlawing both in a single constitutional amendment not only curbs the freedom of homosexual couples to be in a formally recognized relationship, it also threatens their capacity to enter contractual agreements, jointly construct living wills, share certain types of accounts, set up custody arrangements, and so on. An apparent effort to preserve moral values can quickly turn into a general attack on the freedom and rights of law-abiding citizens.

- On the issue of values, one of America's most cherished is equality of freedom, liberty, and opportunity. Advocating for this while simultaneously decrying legal recognition of homosexual relationships is a contradiction.

Indeed, the law in Iowa and most other states specifies that marriage be formed only between a man and a woman. We acknowledge what has already been established, but we lament the fact that constitutional amendments are being implemented where they are clearly unnecessary. It is our sincere hope that such an amendment never materializes in Iowa, which we see as nothing more than a manifestation of ill will and intolerance for those who happen to be different.

federal government most in the last 25 years? Guess what — it isn't the Democrats.

Denigrating septuagenarians who receive third-degree burns to their labia may excite the faithful, but it is hardly an argument for limiting access to the courts for all of us. Never mind its immateriality to a discussion of medical malpractice. McDonald's, with all its resources, lost this one to a jury settling prior to an appellate review. My guess is that it happened while Schneider was still in grammar school.

Rather than focus on the courts, how about we focus on the insurance and financial industries? I'm sure I'm not the only one that has noticed that premiums across the spectrum of health-care provision have risen in tandem with the exposed malfeasance in corporate America. Could it be that premiums have risen to recoup investment losses and sustain profits?

The cost of lawsuits amounts to approximately 1 percent of overall health-care costs. It will surely be a hallelujah day when we give up our rights to justice to gain that penny on the dollar.

I would have to see the evidence before I'm willing to accept that obstetricians flee a liberal bastion such as Mississippi because of the easy access to courts there rather than the restrictive attitudes to choice. And heaven forbid we should hold the tobacco industry accountable for decades of systematically exploiting the gullible and ignorant with an addictive product. Why shouldn't the opium and meth industries have their own mahogany-paneled boardrooms?

If "increasing government regulation is anathema" to conservatives, one wonders why they wish the government to regulate our constitutionally guaranteed access to the judicial process. Far from giving "approval," most Americans don't wish to have petty, self-serving politicians meddling with the one branch of government as yet untainted by partisanship. Although the cynical might say we have the best system of justice money can buy, most of us still have faith in a system of constitutional laws.

Personal responsibility

Craig Seeley's April 8 letter to the editor is the quintessence of what bugs me about the right wing and society in general.

While pornography certainly is negative for children, comparing the mere desensitizing effect it has in general to easily one of the most traumatic experiences one could survive seems unfounded. Further, pornography is illegal for minors, and any pornographer who values her or his business (and they all do) is almost assuredly bound to push for constant identification checks from clerks.

And whether the glorification of sex in our society nurtures predatory behavior is irrelevant, because it is usually protected by the First Amendment. It's also illogical to blame mere influences, even if they are negative, for the actions of others. While negative influences should definitely be curbed, they should not at the expense of constitutional rights. Yes, we are bombarded with influences every day, both negative and positive. But it is up to us, as individuals, to behave properly. It is up to us, as individuals, to be responsible enough to accept the consequences of our own actions.

It's called personal responsibility. Instead of trying to undermine that with overly cautious censorship, I suggest Seeley and anyone who agrees with him to work on behaviors that yield more immediate and destructive consequences rather than the whispers of an admittedly degenerating society.

Talking trash about downtown

Walking down Iowa Avenue on Sunday, I picked my way through bottle caps, cigarette butts, cups, stray papers, and vomit. On other occasions, I have seen condoms, tampons, underwear, and bras lying either on the street or sidewalk. I was reminded of an article that appeared in The Daily Iowan last December about the appalling amount of money and workers' hours this city spends on downtown trash and litter removal, especially on weekend mornings. Obviously, publicity of this problem in the DI did nothing.

I could blame the city and its workers for not keeping up with the trash removal, but I'm sure they are doing the best they can. The question I have is whether bar-goers will ever stop making a landfill out of this city every weekend. My guess is no, but I'd like to be proven wrong.

Where's the outrage?

After the pope died, one of the first places I visited on the Internet was the Democratic Underground. I figured I would easily find a quote that would symbolize the absolute worst the left has to offer; I would have bet money on finding a statement similar to, "The pope spread intolerance through religion, and I won't mourn his passing." But surprisingly, the most inflammatory statement I discovered there was: "The psychics were right about the pope and hopefully will be right about Bush."

Not even this quote is as inflammatory as it seems, as the writer clarified: "I read on a thread somewhere that the psychics predicted that the pope wouldn't live through the month of April, and sadly, they were right. The pope will be missed. The thread also discussed that Bush would not be president in the fall, and I'M PRAYING that it comes to fruition."

Apparently, all the customary hate-filled posts (such as "leader of the mega-cult is finally dead") were deleted, because the Democratic Underground LLC is trying to clean up its image. A Jan. 3 New York Times article used the site as an example of how "the blogosphere's tendency toward crackpot theorizing and political smack down could not be suppressed for long." The source of this was a Democratic Underground poster who sincerely wondered if the recent south Asian tsunami was caused by the war in Iraq. A Democratic Underground administrator responded to the Times article by using an entire thread to explain that he doesn't buy into "Kooky Tsunami Conspiracy Theories."

This hasn't stopped the Democratic Underground from buying into other kooky conspiracy theories. Members still complain that George W. Bush stole the election ... the 2004 election.

While it needs to censor its craziest members to sate the fickle socialites at the New York Times, the Democratic Underground hasn't gotten around to deleting the inhumane posts written about Ronald Reagan after his death. As efficiently as reality television, the posts on Reagan highlight humanity's most unattractive and mediocre personality traits.

There's smug moral indignation: "I feel as much sorrow today as Reagan felt for AIDS victims. Zero."

Ridiculously saturnine humor: A creepy, cynical "here's to you, pal, see you in hell" was a common response to Reagan's death.

Slightly hyperbolic recollections of history: "For anyone who lived through those years [Reagan's presidency] and remembers what actually happened, it was eight years of darkness."

Then there's simple, unrestrained hatred: "I've waited for this day for 24 long years, now I'm celebrating."

Thankfully for the Democratic Party, these statements don't represent common American left-wingers. These aren't the words of liberals but of radicals, who will cling to any cause, left or right, that allows them to exert moral superiority over others. Those who would cheer the deaths of Reagan and the pope are cut from the same cloth as the poor, misguided woman on Celsius 41.11, who said: "If a dictator provides free health care, then I like that dictator! If a dictator provides university and education for everyone, then I like that dictator!" If no one will keep her or his promise to move to Canada, perhaps the government could distribute travel brochures for Cuba.

While celebrating the deaths of influential conservatives isn't representative of liberalism, neurotic self-effacement is. Even those who disliked the celebration of Reagan's death had to qualify their reservations. One post whined: "I like being able to categorize liberals as the more humane and generous political group. I don't want to give people reason to doubt that." It isn't the cruelty of celebrating a 93-year old man's death that bothers liberals; it's the threat of losing the ability to consider themselves compassionate by association.

Despite the moderate left's attempts to distance itself from the Michael Moore crowd, radicals are not being discouraged from calling themselves liberal. As long as liberals keep pointing to things they don't like and asking, "where's the outrage?" and as long as they propose to remedy their grievances "by any means necessary," radicals will always use liberalism's deeply cherished discontent to justify outrageous acts of their own. ■

Real costs of medical negligence

Robert Schneider's April 8 column, "Risky Medicine," dryly parrots President Bush's party line on so-called frivolous lawsuits while avoiding the fact that tort reform is a gift to the insurance industry, which contributed $2 million to Bush's 2004 campaign.

According to HealthGrades, 195,000 Americans die each year because of medical mistakes, more than AIDS or traffic accidents. In 1999, the Institute of Medicine reported that medical errors cost the economy $29 billion every year in excess medical expenses and lost productivity. Only one in eight patients who are seriously injured or killed by medical negligence files a lawsuit — far from the culture of blame that Schneider paints.

Donald Zuk, the CEO of one of California's largest malpractice insurers, was quoted in a 2004 Wall Street Journal article, "Insurers' missteps helped provoke malpractice 'crisis,'" saying: "I don't like to hear insurance-company executives say it's the tort system — it's self-inflicted." California imposed liability caps for malpractice in 1975. Twelve years later, doctors' premiums had nearly tripled to an all-time high. Proposition 103 in 1988 instantly froze malpractice-insurance rates, and within three years, doctors' premiums had dropped more than 20 percent. Three of the state's largest insurers (including Zuk's company, SCPIE) refunded policy holders nearly $69 million.

Bush is gutting Medicare and Medicaid while the United States is one of the last industrialized nations in the world to not offer socialized health care. Insurance carriers are the cause of our exorbitantly priced health services, and so-called conservatives would rather give them a payout than evaluate the root causes of rising costs or fix our ailing system.

PLUMBING WEIRD FOR WEIRD'S SAKE

Was Klaus Nomi an alien, David Bowie wannabe, or the greatest new-wave performer of his time?

image-before-everything construct who was often weird just for weird's sake.

To complement the image-conscious personality of Nomi, director Andrew Horn has delivered a documentary shimmering with creative and visual grace. But even more laudable is that Horn generates a conclusion to his film that is both powerful and sad (Nomi died from AIDS before the public even knew what AIDS was) without being heavily manipulative.

And from the least expected of places, this eloquent, emotional climax stems from the interviewees, who almost derailed the film during its first act, as they discard their faux façades for a few minutes and remorsefully recount how they abandoned Nomi on his death bed because they were afraid of catching the "gay cancer" — as AIDS was so disgustingly called during the ignorance of its early outbreak. Not only did I feel sympathy for Nomi during his lonely final days, but admittedly, by film's end, I also felt compassion for his friends, who really did regret their final actions toward Nomi — and that's a surprise I wouldn't have imagined an hour earlier in the film.

No one knew what to make of Klaus Nomi when he broke in to the late-70s New York music scene. The question wasn't so much of who is that performing, but rather, what is that performing. Boy? Girl? Human? Robot? Alien? David Bowie wannabe?

With a receding hairline — anchored by a mighty widow's peak — slicked and sculpted into horns, eyebrows flared out in heavy eye shadow, and a slender body clad in plastic costuming reminiscent of campy sci-fi B-movies, Klaus' stage presence commanded immediate attention. Then as the new-wave pop beats began synthesizing from the band, Klaus would open his mouth. And people not only watched, they listened. Because out poured a classically trained opera falsetto that surfed across the music and steeped the audience in an eerie atmosphere.

Like a really good episode of VH1's "Behind the Music" (but minus the cliché-spewing narrator), The Nomi Song documents the rise and fall of the late-new-wave performer.

However, I was apprehensive about the movie at first. As expected, the film's early segments introduce us to the German-born singer (whose last name was actually Sperber) by interviewing those who knew him. And frankly, Nomi radiates pretentiousness and artificiality. And so do the interviewees for that matter. These friends and acquaintances of Nomi — one who actually sports the stereotypical black turtleneck — are mostly art snobs trying desperately to portray themselves as hipper than thou.

If I were ever stuck in a room with these personalities, I'd probably vomit.

However, a strange thing happened halfway through the film. I noticed The Nomi Song was entertaining me despite the onslaught of contrived individuals who would normally push my interest away. The subject and characters of The Nomi Song may reek with pretensions, yet the stink of self-importance never wafts off from the documentary itself. The filmmakers subtly wink at the audience, well aware of their subject's compositivity, and they never deny that Nomi was an

Cubs mum on Prior's return

CHICAGO (AP) — Mark Prior threw 30 pitches off the Wrigley Field mound Sunday morning, but the Chicago Cubs weren't ready to say whether the right-hander will start Tuesday against San Diego. Cubs manager Dusty Baker and pitching coach Larry Rothschild said they will make a decision Monday. Prior has been on the disabled list with elbow inflammation.

"We'll let you know something tomorrow," Baker said. "He was throwing pretty good out there. We want to wait in case we're wrong or something. It's really about how he feels. He's in a positive frame of mind."

Rothschild added: "I think we'll see how he feels later today, but everything indicates that he should be ready to go."

Earlier, the Cubs considered giving Prior an additional restart in the minors Tuesday. Prior pitched six innings for Triple-A Iowa in a rehab start in Albuquerque on April 7, allowing seven runs.

Jeff Gordon rallies to win at Martinsville

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Jeff Gordon showed that he might be the new king of short-track racing Sunday, coming from four laps down early to win his sixth NASCAR Nextel race at Martinsville Speedway.

Fourth on a restart with 46 laps to go, Gordon wasted no time. He followed Mark Martin past Ryan Newman on the 46th lap, went under Martin to move into second place three laps later, passed Sterling Marlin for the lead with 34 laps remaining.

From then on, it was sailing to his 71st career win and second in six races this year was his sixth victory at 0.526-mile Martinsville, the shortest and fastest track in the premier series. Only Rusty Wallace, with six wins, has more among active drivers.

For Gordon and all Hendrick Motorsports, it was an emotional day. The last time he carried 10 friends and family to the organization crashed near killing everyone on board.

INTERRUPTION

Scottish soccer fans jeer pope

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) — Fans at a Scottish Cup soccer game jeered during a minute of silence for Pope John Paul II Sunday, forcing the tribute to be cut short.

The booing by Hearts came before the semi-final against Celtic, which has many Catholic fans. Referee Stuart Dougal ended the minute of silence halfway through because of the noise. The game was suspended in Britain and overseas.

Hearts chief executive Gordon Anderton criticized the conduct and apologized to Celtic and the Scottish Football Association.

"It is disturbing that Hearts fans failed to see the significance of this occasion," said. "There is no room for that sort of behavior in the game."

Team sweeps double-header, evening record to 4-4

BY TED MCCARTAN
THE DAILY IOWAN

In one game, they did it with pitching. In another, it was hitting. In another, a little small ball did the trick. But however they did it, the weekend was a good one for the softball-team Hawkeyes. After starting its Big Ten season 1-3 on the road, Iowa leveled its record out at 4-4, thanks to its 3-1 performance at home over weekend.

The No. 19-ranked Hawkeyes swept a double-header on Sunday against Indiana, topping the Hoosiers, 5-0, in game one and 3-0 in game two, thanks to complete-game shut-outs courtesy of Lisa Birocci and Ali Arnold. Birocci had 10 strikeouts and gave up only one hit in her Game 1 gem, and Arnold fanned 11 and allowed only two hits in Game 2.

Five different Hawkeyes scored in the first game, but scoring didn't come as easy in the later one. In fact, Iowa's two through six hitters went a combined 0-12, so the Hawks were forced to get a little crafty offensively to manufacture runs. The 7-9 hitters were each responsible for one of Iowa's three runs.

"The difference was our short game," Hawkeye coach Gayle Blevins said. "We simply couldn't hit. Sometimes you just match up with a pitcher that you struggle with. The difference in a game like this is, you got to create; we worked that short game and put a little pressure on them, and that was the difference offensively."

She was relieved with the wins, a nice way to end the weekend after a loss to Purdue on April 9.

"Today was critical for us to put ourselves back in position," she said. "I'm disappointed with the game we lost."

In the loss to Purdue, Iowa made three errors in the sixth inning. The errors eventually loaded the bases for the Boilermakers, who capitalized when Andrea Hillsey scored the go-ahead run.

"You can't make three errors in the same inning and expect to survive anything," Blevins said.

Arnold, who started the game, was then relieved by Birocci, who struck out two of the next three batters she faced.

Elise Amendola/Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Tiger Woods is the Masters champion once again, turning back a surprising challenge Sunday with a shot of sheer magic and a birdie putt to win a playoff he never expected.

A spectacular finish of birdies and bogeys finally ended when Woods produced the most important shot of all — a 15-foot birdie putt on the 18th extra hole to capture his fourth green jacket and finally put away the gritty Chris DiMarco.

Woods knew it was over when the ball was a foot from the hole, taking two steps to the left as a smile creased his face and his right fist punched the air with fury.

Everything else about this Masters was up in the air to the very end.

First came the most improbable birdie on the par-3 16th, when Woods skipped his chip shot up the slope and watched it crawl 25 feet down to the cup, where it paused for two full seconds before dropping.

"I would rank that as one of the best ones I've ever hit," Woods said. "It turned things around. It was pretty huge."

Then came an even bigger surprise. The greatest closer in golf looked like a first-timer at Augusta National, making a mess out of the last two holes to finish with two bogeys and allow DiMarco one more chance.

Woods made sure that was all he got.

DiMarco again came up short of the green and chipped up for a tap-in par. He took his hat off and ran his hand through his hair, crouched, and kept looking up at Woods and down at his feet, afraid to watch, perhaps knowing what was about to happen.

When the ball disappeared, DiMarco walked slowly to Woods and congratulated him.

Woods closed with a 1-under 71 and won for the second time in a playoff at a major, wrapping up a long and bizarre week at Augusta National that included two rain delays, an eagle putt that Woods rolled off the green and into the creek, a record run of birdies to get back into the contention, and, finally, the fight of his life.

It showed at the closing ceremony, where he cried while dedicating this Masters victory to his father, who was too ill to leave his hotel room.

"Every year that I've been lucky enough to win this tournament, my dad's been there to give me a big hug. And today, he wasn't there," Woods said, his voice cracking and his eyes filling with tears.

"I can't wait to get home, and see him, and give him a big bear hug."

Woods never needed so many heroics to win his previous three Masters. DiMarco was responsible for that.

"This was one fun victory, but also a lot of work because I was playing with one heck of a competitor," Woods said. "Chris has got no backoff in him. He'll come at you ... and that's what he did today. He put up a heck of a fight."

Reavis wins vault at NCAA championships

Even though the seventh-ranked men's gymnastics team fell short of reaching the team finals at the NCAA championships, juniors Michael Reavis and Michael McNamara had a meet to remember.

On April 9, Reavis won the NCAA vault championship with a 9.550, beating Guillermo Alvarez of Minnesota by .150 points. In winning the title, Reavis became Iowa's 12th individual champion. He was also named an All-American for the third-consecutive year.

McNamara took second place in the floor-exercise final, and his score of 9.587 earned him his first All-American honor in his career. Graham Ackerman of California defended his title on floor by scoring a 9.6.

Senior Linas Gaveika also competed in the individual finals. He placed sixth on high bar with a score of 9.375, earning him his fourth All-American honor and his third straight on high bar. He also placed ninth on pommel horse with a score of 8.812.

As a team, Iowa finished fourth in its qualifying session on April 7 — its score of 218.725 was not enough to advance to the team finals.

Illinois, Oklahoma, and California advanced, with all three scoring more than 220 points. The Hawkeyes' score put them in seventh place for the second-straight year.

Six teams competed for the top two places in the regional to advance to the NCAA championship.

Utah, ranked No. 1 in the nation, won the meet with a score of 196.800. No. 13 BYU took second, and No. 12 Oregon State placed third. No. 22 Minnesota and No. 20 Southern Utah finished fourth and fifth.

The GymHawks finished the season with a score of 192.350. Although no Hawkeyes placed first in any event, two Iowa women achieved season-high scores. Freshman Amanda Rudolph scored a 9.8 in the floor exercise to tie for 16th, and freshman Beth Dilick tied for 22nd on the vault with a score of 9.7.

Senior Annie Rue was the top finisher for the Hawkeyes with a seventh-place performance on the bars. Junior Liz Grajewski tied for ninth on the floor exercise with a score of 9.85.

Iowa baseball beats Big Ten favorites Michigan, 7-6

The baseball team displayed some domination this past week-end in capturing three out of four games from Michigan in Ann Arbor. The Hawkeyes (9-15, 5-3) won, 13-12, on April 8, split a double-header on April 9, 4-2 and 5-3, and were victorious Sunday, 7-6.

The series victory for Iowa makes a strong statement in Big Ten play, considering that Michigan (18-10, 1-7) was picked to be this season's Big Ten champions.

The weekend tone was set for the Hawkeyes during their April 8 victory after they were trailing, 11-3, heading into the eighth. The Hawks put together an incredible rally, with 10 hits and 10 runs, and they stranded only one runner. They were then able to hold on for the one-run victory.

Iowa now sits in third place in the Big Ten standings; the Wolverines are in last.

The Hawkeyes will continue play this week when they participate in some nonconference games. Iowa will play Northern Iowa on Tuesday and Northern Illinois on Wednesday. Both games will be in Banks Field, and they are scheduled to begin at 6 p.m.

Iowa women's tennis beat Badgers

The Iowa women's tennis team clipped the 33rd-ranked Wisconsin Badgers on Sunday afternoon, 4-3, in Madison, Wis. The Hawkeyes (10-7, 4-2 Big Ten) took control of the match by sweeping the doubles point and jumping on the Badgers early. The Hawkeyes went on to split the six singles matches, with the early doubles point securing the upset.

Zhukova sophomore

Veselinovic freshman

Lee freshman

Anastasia Zhukova, Milica Veselinovic, and Jacqueline Lee were all victorious in singles play at the 3, 4, and 5 positions.

On April 8, the Hawkeyes faced the No. 2 team in the nation in Evanston, and they were swept, 7-0, by the Wildcats. Coming back against Wisconsin on Sunday should provide the Hawkeyes with some momentum as they enter the Big Ten stretch.

The 55th-ranked Hawkeyes will host Penn State and Indiana on Friday and April 17.

Men's tennis Big Ten losing streak is increased to five

BY BRYAN BAMONTE THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa men's tennis team was knocked off Sunday, 5-2, by 64th-ranked Northwestern, and their conference losing streak was extended to five.

With the loss, the Hawkeyes fall to 9-8, 1-5 in conference play.

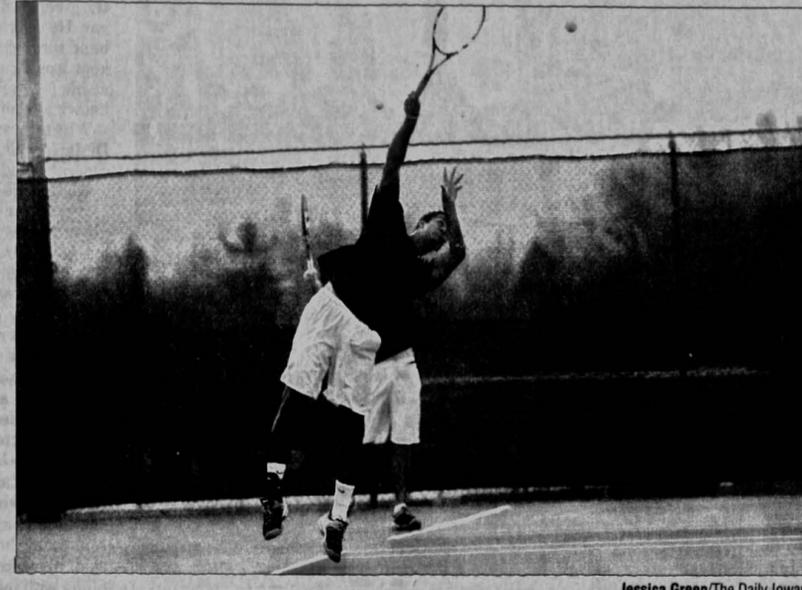

After gaining ground early in the match by securing the doubles point, the Hawkeyes were unable to stay the course and didn't have enough in singles play to upend the Wildcats.

"We took the doubles point, which was really important, because we hadn't been doing that lately," Iowa coach Steve Houghton said. "We had changed a few things with our doubles [pairings], and after losing close at the [No.] 1 position, we took the next two and took the point."

One of the marks against the Hawkeyes lately had been their inability to grab momentum with the first point in the match — which led Houghton to tinker with his lineup and gave Iowa a 1-0 lead.

However, the Wildcats didn't fold in singles play, taking five of the six matches as they cruised to victory.

"Of the six singles matches, three were competitive, and three weren't really close," Houghton said. "They are definitely a team that is very good, but they were one I thought we could play with, and we did at half the positions."

The other half wasn't close for the Hawkeyes — their 2, 4, and 6 players were unable to keep their matches close. Iowa's lone singles victory came at No. 5, where Brett Taylor extended his winning streak to double digits.

"Well, no surprise," Houghton said about Taylor's win. "He has been doing in from the beginning and kept it going today."

Houghton was pleased with the team's improvement in doubles play, pointing out that the Hawkeyes had an improved week of practice and seemed to work harder than they had in previous weeks.

"I mean, they know they just have to go out there and fight," he said. "I think the main thing now is to continue to have strong weeks of practice and then hopefully, finish with better results."

Northwestern was seemingly a missed opportunity — the Hawks felt they could clip Northwestern at home if they played at a higher level than in previous Big Ten matches.

Chicago back in playoffs

ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — The Bulls are back in the playoffs for the first time since Michael Jordan ruled. Few would have expected Chicago to be playoff-bound when the team opened the season 0-9, matching the franchise record for worst start. The last time the Bulls were in the postseason was the 1997-98 season, when Jordan led them to their sixth NBA title.

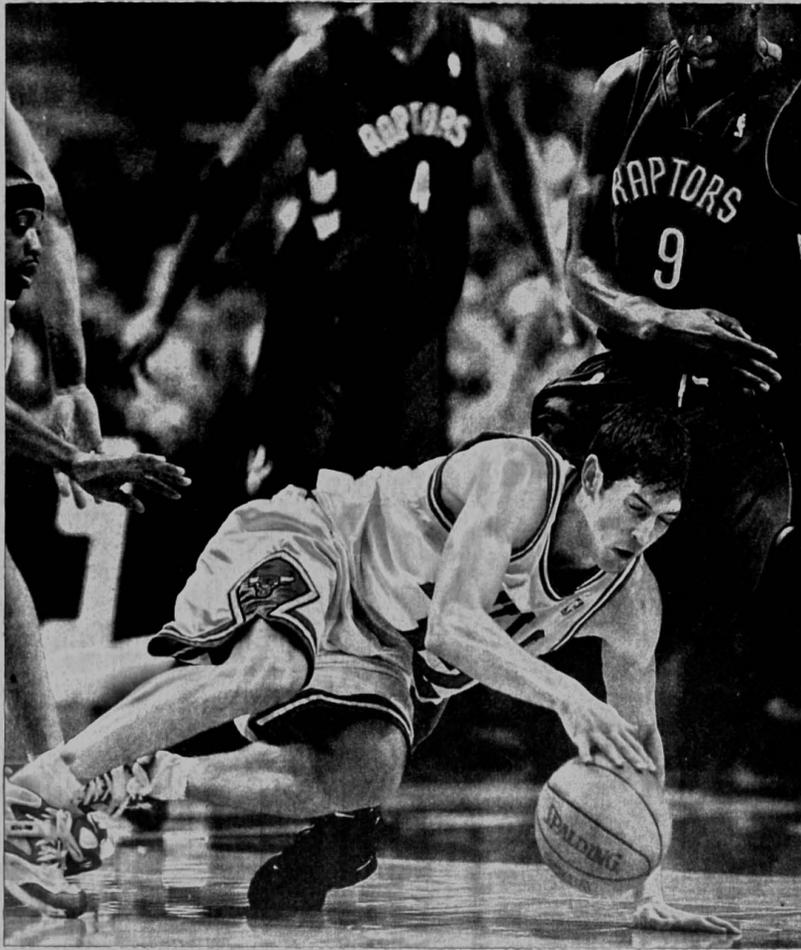

Chicago, winners of 12 of 13, are fourth in the Eastern Conference and clinched a playoff berth with a 110-97 win over the Toronto Raptors on April 9 before a sellout crowd of 22,281 at United Center.

"I believed we were going to get better for sure, but I didn't know it was going to get this good," guard Kirk Hinrich said after Saturday's game.

The Bulls had been abysmal since Jordan & Co. won the last of Chicago's titles. They lost 341 games from 1999-04, so inept they made even the Los Angeles Clippers look good. They're on their third coach since Phil Jackson left, and so many players have come and gone, they could form their own league.

The Bulls didn't have much of an identity or a plan when general manager John Paxson took over. He kept prep-to-pro projects Tyson Chandler and Eddy Curry and shed anyone who wasn't a tenacious, defensive-minded player.

He picked up Hinrich in his first draft, then hit upon a bonanza last summer. In addition to taking Rookie of the Year candidate Ben Gordon with the No. 3 pick, he traded for Luol Deng, the seventh pick. He added Chris Duhon and signed Andres Nocioni, who had spent the last two years playing in Spain before helping Argentina win gold at the Athens Olympics.

Chicago Bull Kirk Hinrich (bottom) dives for a loose ball as Toronto Raptors Pape Sow (9) and Rafer Alston (left) watch on April 9 in Chicago.

Add that to staples Antonio Davis, Adrian Griffin, Othella Harrington, Eric Piatkowski, and Jannero Pargo, who perform consistently from the bench.

"I feel like this team's really coming together," Chandler said. "We're playing our best basketball at the end of the season."

But not everything has been smooth. After staying healthy most of the year, coach Scott Skiles has had to deal with two injuries to key players.

With Shaq out, Pistons beat Heat

BY TIM REYNOLDS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Shaquille O'Neal is the sick one. Without him, the Miami Heat are doing plenty of suffering. Richard Hamilton scored 17 points, Tayshaun Prince added 16, and the Detroit Pistons stymied Miami for three quarters, then held off a late charge to win, 80-72 Sunday and end the Heat's franchise-record 18-game home winning streak.

With O'Neal out for a third-straight game because of a stomach virus, the Heat set season lows for scoring in a game (72), half, and quarter, and established another low by shooting 34.6 percent. They have lost two straight for just the fourth time all season.

Eddie Jones had 19 points for Miami, which hurt itself by shooting 14-for-26 from the foul line. Dwyane Wade had only five points on 1-for-6 shooting before fouling out with 4:13 left, ending his streak of 51-consecutive games in double figures.

Udonis Haslem scored 13 points and grabbed 11 rebounds, while Alonzo Mourning, who started in place of O'Neal, had 10 points, a season-high 14 rebounds, and five blocked shots.

Ben Wallace had 12 points and 14 rebounds for Detroit, which won its sixth-straight game, outscored the Heat 38-22 in the paint, and downed Miami for the second time in three meetings this season.

What once looked like a certain Detroit rout turned interesting in the fourth.

Miami, which trailed by as many as 20 midway through the third quarter, went on a 22-8 run to get to 66-60 on Eddie Jones' 3-pointer with 7:03 remaining. Damon Jones' 3-pointer with 1:12 left drew the Heat to 74-70, but he missed another try from behind the arc 25 seconds later, and the Pistons held on.

The Pistons, who moved closer to clinching the Central Division title, used an 18-4 second-quarter run to build an 11-point lead. By halftime, it was 42-30, with Miami setting season marks for futility on several levels.

The Heat's first-half point total was five fewer than Miami scored at Memphis on April 8 — the previous season-worst. The 10 second-quarter points were one fewer than Miami got in the fourth against Dallas on Nov. 11. And the 31.7 percent effort from the floor matched the Heat's one-half worst this year.

The Heat's previous low-scoring effort was 77, also against Detroit, on Nov. 26.

Wade picked up two fouls in the first 5:03. Without him, Miami managed to outscore Detroit 15-7 over the remainder of the quarter, with Haslem getting seven points — including a three-point play off a one-handed jumper as the shot clock expired with 3:26 left, part of a 9-0 Miami run.

The Heat, who shot 8-for-18 in the opening quarter, missed 14 of their first 16 shots in the second — and one of their makes came on a goaltending call against Rasheed Wallace.

Meanwhile, the Pistons got six points from Antonio McDyess and four from Lindsey Hunter during the 18-4 burst that put them up 35-24. They kept the lead the rest of the way.

Pedro Mets

BY CHARLES O'CONNOR

ATLANTA — Pedro Martinez pitched a two-hitter, New York Mets finally first win of the season overcoming John Smoltz's strikeouts in a 6-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Carlos Beltran hit a home run off Smoltz, and Cliff Floyd and David Wright connected in the inning to send Randolph to his first loss as a manager.

Martinez (1-0) retired the final 16 batters, struck out nine, and walked one. After the bullpen coasted on opening day in Atlanta, the Mets' new pitcher, Martinez, pitched a 43rd career complete game.

Smoltz (0-2) tied his record for strikeouts in a 1-0 through seven innings. But Jose Reyes led off with a single, and Miguel Cabrera sacrificed before Beltran's 2-1 pitch over the fence, chasing Smoltz.

That clutch swing helped relax the Mets, who started the first time since they lost their first game in their second existence. Boosted by victory, they now head to New York for their home opener Monday against Houston.

Held to a combined 1-0 while never leading in two games of the season, the Mets added three more runs in the eighth and one in the ninth to break the game open.

Floyd greeted reliever Martin with a homer, and Doug Mientkiewicz hit a double off the chase Martin, and Wade had a two-run shot off Colon for a 5-1 lead.

Beltran added a run in the ninth on a single to Sosa.

Martinez didn't strike out as many as he did in his first start, but he was just as sharp. He struck out four in the fourth inning on Estrada's RBI double.

Andrew Jones tripled, and Atlanta's other hit, Martinez signed a million, four-year deal with the Mets this season and delivered a season of stopper, ending his streak. When it was over, Randolph received handshakes in the dugout.

Smoltz pitched 7 1/3 innings, giving up eight hits and three runs with no walks. F

TORONTO (AP) — Orlando Hudson doubled home the winning run in the ninth to lead the Toronto Blue Jays to a 4-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox on Sunday.

Eric Hinske went 3-for-4 with two RBIs for the Blue Jays, who took two of three from Boston — their first series win against the Red Sox since sweeping them May 30-June 1, 2003.

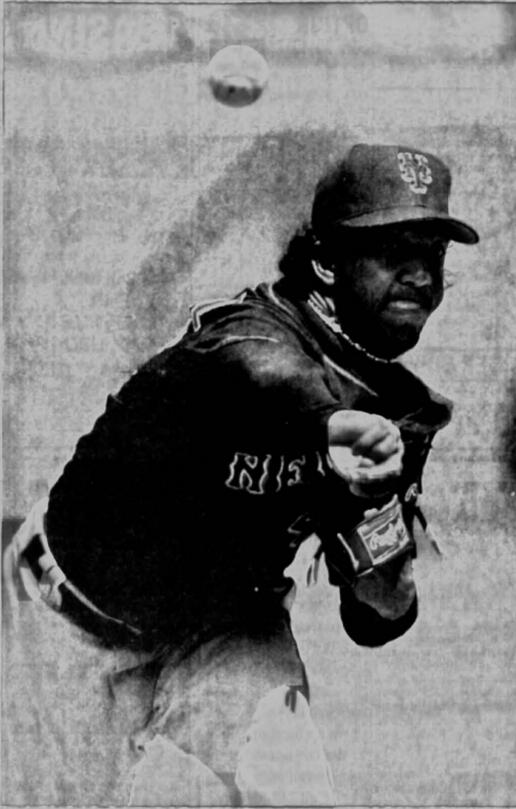

Reed Johnson hit an infield single off Mike Timlin (1-1) that second baseman Mark Bellhorn bobbled before Hudson doubled off the wall in left.

Miguel Batista (1-1) got the win despite blowing a save chance in the top of the ninth.

Orioles 7, Yankees 2

NEW YORK (AP) — Carl Pavano reached for the right side of his head and walked toward the dugout. Melvin Mora's line drive up the middle had knocked him out of his second start for the New York Yankees.

One pitch after Jason Giambi dropped his foul popup for an error, Mora hit a line drive off the pitcher's head so hard that the ball ricocheted into foul territory down the right-field line. Pavano wound up in a hospital, and the Baltimore Orioles went on to a 7-2 victory Sunday.

New York Met pitcher Pedro Martinez delivers a pitch against the Atlanta Braves in Atlanta on Sunday. Martinez pitched a complete game, and the Mets won, 6-1.

Pavano remained standing but was quickly replaced by Tanyon Sturtze. The Yankees said Pavano (0-1) was alert when he came out, but the team sent him to Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center for a precautionary examination. A CT scan was negative, and he is expected to travel with the team to Boston.

ATLANTA — Pedro Martinez pitched a two-hitter, and the New York Mets finally got their first win of the season Sunday, overcoming John Smoltz's 15 strikeouts in a 6-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Carlos Beltran hit a go-ahead homer off Smoltz in the eighth, and Cliff Floyd and David Wright connected later in the inning to send Willie Randolph to his first victory as a manager.

Martinez (1-0) retired his final 16 batters, struck out nine, and walked only one. After the bullpen cost him a win on opening day in Cincinnati, the Mets' new ace finished this one himself for his 43rd career complete game.

Smoltz (0-2) tied his Atlanta record for strikeouts and led 1-0 through seven innings. But Jose Reyes led off the eighth with a single and moved up on Miguel Cairo's sacrifice before Beltran drove a 2-1 pitch over the right-field fence, chasing Smoltz.

That clutch swing seemed to relax the Mets, who started 0-5 for the first time since 1963 — when they lost their first eight games in their second year of existence. Boosted by the victory, they now head to New York for their home opener Monday against Houston.

Held to a combined four runs while never leading in the first two games of the series, the Mets added three more in the eighth and one in the ninth to break the game open.

Floyd greeted reliever Tom Martin with a homer to center. Doug Mientkiewicz followed with a double off the wall to chase Martin, and Wright hit a two-run shot off Roman Colon for a 5-1 lead.

Beltran added a run-scoring single in the ninth off Jorge Sosa.

Martinez didn't match Smoltz's strikeouts, but he was just as sharp. His walk led to the Braves' only run in the fourth inning on Johnny Estrada's RBI double.

Andrew Jones tripled for Atlanta's other hit.

Martinez signed a $53 million, four-year deal in the off-season and delivered in the role of stopper, ending the losing streak. When it was over, a smiling Randolph received hugs and handshakes in the dugout.

Smoltz pitched 7½ innings, giving up eight hits and two runs with no walks. He set the

Report: Clemente's son admits to using steroids in minors

NEW YORK (AP) — Roberto Clemente's oldest son said he unknowingly took steroids from a trainer in Puerto Rico while rehabbing a knee injury in the minor leagues in the 1980s.

Roberto Clemente Jr. told the Daily News he met Luiz Perez after undergoing a second operation for chronic pain in his right knee in 1987 while with the San Diego Padres organization.

Perez told Clemente Jr. he needed to start taking B-12 injections, along with steroids testosterone and androstenedione to help increase his strength.

"He might as well have been speaking Chinese to me," Clemente Jr. told the newspaper. "I didn't know what they were, but he said they would help me, and I said, 'OK, great.' Today, you know what those things are, but then I couldn't even imagine anything like steroids, which could make you feel great and at the same time could be killing you."

Clemente Jr., who was 6 when his Hall of Fame father died in a plane crash in 1972, estimates he got about 150 shots, and he added 20 pounds of muscle.

"I didn't think I was doing anything wrong. I was just trying to rehab my knee," the News quoted him as saying.

Clemente Jr. stopped taking the shots after almost a year when he left to play winter ball in Venezuela. Within a year, he began feeling tingling sensations at the site of the injections.

In the winter of 1989, he signed with the Baltimore Orioles, but his career was over at 24 because of a back injury. He never made it above Single-A.

quote of the day

"[Eric Rudolph will] be caged for the rest of his life, and from a retribution aspect, that's probably worse than a death sentence for him."

— Charles Stone, a retired Georgia Bureau of Investigation agent who helped oversee the Rudolph bombing probe. The anti-government extremist will plead guilty to carrying out the deadly Atlanta Olympics and setting off three other blasts, which killed two people and injured more than 120.

horoscopes

Monday, April 11, 2005
— by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get down to business early today so you have plenty of time later in the day for socializing and romance. You may have to take care of the needs of an older relative. Organization will be the key to fitting everything in.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Digging your heels in and refusing to budge may work against you in the end. Don't oppose the very people who are trying to do something to help you. Anger will not help you find a solution to a disagreement.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If you find yourself a little confused about someone you recently met, stick to your longtime friends. Problems with authority figures or while traveling can be expected. Do something to help a cause you believe in.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good times are ahead if you take part in activities that include a lot of people. You will make new friends or even get involved in a business partnership. Put a little time aside for love and romance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may know exactly what it is you are trying to accomplish. Expect some opposition along the way. Take the path of least resistance, and steer clear of people who like to play devil's advocate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Hope you've planned a day trip or business trip. You will make the greatest gains if you are en route both personally and professionally. Your mind is open to change and new ideas.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't get angry about the things that aren't happening in your life. Do something about it, and hold on to what you've got. There will be plenty of people trying to take your cash without your giving it away.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A new partnership will give you a positive spin on something you've been trying to do for some time. You can make deals and sign contracts. Consider starting or expanding your own business interests.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A stubborn colleague may put a hold on what you are trying to accomplish today. Prepare to deal with this person before it's too late. Do whatever it takes to drum up the support you need.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can't win at a personal level, and chances are good that you will have trouble with your peers today. Book into a spa, get a massage, go to the hairdresser, get a consultation with a makeover expert, but don't just sit around trying to force people who aren't going to budge.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can expect to face difficulties with someone regarding emotional issues you probably don't want to deal with. You aren't likely to be able to talk someone into changing her or his mind, so don't bother. Prepare yourself for your next big adventure.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The more you do with friends or the more involved you become in your community, the more you will get in return. Consider the relationships you have with different people, and if you haven't been getting anything back, you may want to let go.
