FACULTY COUNCIL

UI group OKs leave roll-over

BY ALEX LANG
THE DAILY IOWAN

The UI Faculty Council approved a resolution Tuesday to allow faculty and staff to roll over unused family-care leave from year to year.

Under the new plan, if faculty members do not use their full 40 hours of family leave in a year, they may use the extra time in following years. No faculty member may have a "bank" of family-care leave greater than 80 hours.

The policy is the result of a joint effort between the UI Faculty and Staff Councils. The proposal must still be approved by the Faculty Senate. There is no concrete timetable for when the new policy will go into effect.

"My vision is that sometime during the next year, the benefit will be in effect," Staff Council past President Cheryl Reardon said. "To me, I see this as an enhancement."

She added she saw this new policy as a great help to those with elderly or very young family members.

Susan Buckley, the associate vice president for Human Resources, said that during the 2004 calendar year, only 46 faculty members used their entire 40 hours of family-care time.

Reardon said the policy's only disadvantage was that the university might wind up paying more to retiring faculty members if they use family-care days in place of vacation days. She did not have an estimate on how much this could cost the UI.

Also at Tuesday's meeting, the council "accepted in principle" a new policy for awarding emeritus status for retiring research scientists and research engineers.

Ed Dove, an associate professor of biomedical engineering, said he wasn't sure the best way for those staff members to receive emeritus privileges — including parking spaces and access to university research tools — was to give them the new status.

The council also discussed ways to become more involved with the Homecoming celebration. While the members decided the plan to build a faculty parade float was not feasible, the council did discuss the possibility of creating a band to play in the parade.

Coralville project to proceed

Despite a number of changes, officials say they're pushing ahead with the hotel/conference center

BY SEUNG MIN KIM
THE DAILY IOWAN

Coralville's hotel and conference center, a project originally slated to break ground next month, has faced a barrage of changes in recent weeks, but officials promised Tuesday that it will proceed as councilors approved the center's design.

City officials also began preliminary negotiations with representatives from Hilton Hotels on Tuesday, days after the city dropped Marriott, the original operator of the $70 million center.

Coralville officials had planned to use Marriott as their hotel operator but ousted the company from the deal, worried that it would not complete the project in time, said city administrator Kelly Hayworth.

"It's the same project, and we're working with experts to make sure we're making the right progress," Hayworth said.

Mayor Jim Fausett said the council's approval means the construction process can proceed, even if a hotel operator is as yet unnamed.

Talks between Coralville and Hilton began with officials exchanging basic information about the project, Hayworth said, adding that he hopes to find a hotel operator within two weeks.

Other hotel companies, such as Hyatt, are being considered for the contract — Coralville's only stipulation being that the hotel provider be a full-service hotel.

Michael Kelly, a graduate student in the civil-engineering department, lifts weights on April 5 in the Field House. The UI is proposing to build a $55 million recreation center, following a nationwide trend among universities in an effort to attract students. When Kelly was asked what he thought of the current facilities, he replied, "They're OK, they work."

UI joins trend in bulking up rec space

BY JANE SLUSARK
THE DAILY IOWAN

A proposed $55 million UI recreation center would be part of a nationwide trend of universities revamping their fitness facilities to attract students, according to a recently released report.

A survey of 700 colleges released last week by the National Intramural-Recreational Sports Association of Corvallis, Ore., found that 333 were either putting funds toward expanding or building recreation centers or had plans to do so in the near future.

"Students value and place a high importance on recreational facilities," said Barry Brown, the association's marketing director. "It's a very popular trend."

Of the 333 schools, 223 reported financial information, which indicated that the schools were spending a combined $3.17 billion on improvements. The average project cost was around $14.2 million.

The UI's proposed 150,000-square-foot facility, which will be located at the intersection of Madison and Burlington Streets, was part of the Student Services master plan finished in April 1998.

"We looked at focus groups and surveys, and one thing that kept coming up was recreation," said David Grady, the director of University Life Centers.

"It indicated the UI didn't provide rec services that met [students'] expectations."

Michael Barron, the director of the UI Admissions Office, said the current facilities, especially Fitness East, are grossly overcrowded, and additional space is needed. Daily traffic at the new recreation center is expected to hit between 7,000 and 8,000 visitors.

Negroponete promises better intel results

Negroponete
"Our intelligence effort has to generate better results. That is my mandate, plain and simple. ... The things that need to be done differently, will be done differently."

WASHINGTON — President Bush's choice to be the nation's first director of national intelligence promised Tuesday that he would aggressively, if privately, correct political leaders who mischaracterized intelligence in public statements and said he is determined to use his new authority to make the 15 intelligence agencies cooperate fully with one another.

"Our intelligence effort has to generate better results," John Negroponte, a career diplomat whose most recent post was U.S. ambassador to Iraq, told the Senate Intelligence Committee during his three-hour confirmation hearing.

"That is my mandate, plain and simple. ... The things that need to be done differently, will be done differently."

Republicans and Democrats on the committee greeted Negroponte's testimony with relief, anticipating that he would start his new job soon and end the suspended animation under which the agencies have been operating since Congress created the post of director of national intelligence in December.

Ex-UI student 'trumps' beauty pageant

BY DANIELLE
STRATTON-COULTER
THE DAILY IOWAN

Former UI junior and Miss Illinois Jill Gulseth did not win Monday's Miss USA pageant, but she thinks she may have scored the sweeter deal: a possible contract from Donald Trump's modeling agency.

"He told me in front of the other runners-up, 'I wanted Miss Illinois to win; I'm just telling it like it is,'" said Gulseth, the pageant's third-runner-up.

She said Trump, one of the pageant's owners, gave her his contact information with instructions to call Trump Model Management, fulfilling her goal of becoming a professional model.

The 21-year-old said she's more than happy with her performance in the 54th-annual event.

"How can you not be if you're in the top five of 51 beautiful and intelligent women?" she said.

Her sorority sisters at Pi Beta Phi said they were thrilled to watch the pageant over artichoke dip and chicken fingers at the Summit Restaurant & Bar, 10 S. Clinton St.

"We knew she was predicted to do really well," said Bridget Merrill, a UI junior and Pi Beta Phi member. "But making it to the top five was really exciting; we were really excited as she made it to each level."

A few of the more than 70 sorority members tried to leave congratulatory messages on Gulseth's cell phone after the pageant, Merrill said, but they were too late: Her voice-mail box was already full.

Gulseth said that although she was happy with the competition's outcome and her subsequent modeling offer, she was a little disappointed with her closing interview. As the last of the finalists to answer randomly selected questions, she said, the anticipation of her turn on the live NBC broadcast weighed on her nerves.

"I felt that I buckled under the pressure a little bit, but I did my best, so I'm proud of myself for that," she said.

Her brother, UI senior Mitch Gulseth, said he was proud of his sister.

Group forms to stop Wal-Mart

Some Iowa City residents believe that a proposed Iowa City Wal-Mart Supercenter will drive out other business.

BY ELAINE FABIAN
THE DAILY IOWAN

A handful of Iowa City residents are uniting against Wal-Mart's plans to replace its existing facility near the airport with a Supercenter.

Iowa City Stop Wal-Mart, an organization created to keep the retail giant from building the facility, held a strategy meeting Tuesday night to formulate ideas while preparing to lobby the Planning and Zoning Commission and other city leaders.

The commission is considering whether to suggest that the Iowa City Council rezone a 57-acre section of land to complete a tentative, $3.1 million agreement with the company. The council voted 5-2 in favor of the agreement last month.

"Obviously, people are discouraged, but I still think if people contact commissioners and councilors, we can get two more votes," said Gary Sanders, who organized the event, which was attended by seven people.

Organizers hope to mobilize more support, push local unions to denounce the company, and force councilors to realize the deal might surface as an important election issue.

"It is more difficult to explain to someone why you said no than why you said yes, and the council needs to do it, but this council won't," Larry Baker said at the meeting.

Kathy Coelman, a former employee at the Iowa City Wal-Mart, 1001 Highway 1, attended the meeting to speak out against the company. Although she only worked for Wal-Mart for 1 1/2 months, she said putting another Supercenter five miles from the Coralville location is "stupid."

She wants to see the group rebroadcast some programs on Public Access TV about what some perceive as the threat of bringing Wal-Mart into communities.

The group members also expressed disappointment in local businesses for not formally opposing the sale.

Sanders, the chairman of Iowa City Stop Wal-Mart, said community business owners do not think the Supercenter will affect their businesses.

"Paul's Discount — kiss it good-bye. Aldi, Cub Foods — kiss them all good-bye," he said. "They still believe in the philosophy of business, and they don't want to rock the boat."

Cub Foods officials said the Supercenter will not affect their company "because our core business is food, not general merchandise."

"Ultimately, we believe providing customers with a quality difference they can taste, unsurpassed selection, and value they can appreciate is the best way to compete," said Chris Murphy, the director of public relations and consumer affairs for Cub Foods.

Some question need for new elementary school

BY KELLY REHAN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Plans for a proposed elementary school north of Iowa City met skepticism on Tuesday from concerned parents and residents, who questioned the need for a new facility and the resulting expense.

The 465-acre development area in question, located in both the Iowa City and Clear Creek-Amana School Districts, would accommodate projected jumps in student enrollment, district administrators said.

"I think it's good future planning, but I interpret that some community members think we have other needs to spend the money on," Superintendent Lane Plugge said at the Iowa City School Board's bimonthly meeting. "I didn't think it would become this controversial."

Some community members, however, argued the School District should spend the money elsewhere or at least postpone the purchase until officials are certain that a new school is needed. Under the agreement, the district would contribute $200,000 to the project, with the cities of Iowa City and Coralville each adding an additional $56,000. The board will pay approximately $16,000 per acre, but the land is worth up to $45,000 an acre.

"There's an element of uncertainty here," said community member Lori Nelson. "There's a false sense of urgency, but if we do want a school, is this the best site?"

Casey Cook, a local appraiser who has followed the issue, told the board the district will profit from the site.

"I want to give the board very strong encouragement, because I think it's a wise use of dollars,"

Cook said. "The worst-case scenario is that if it doesn't work out, you sell it and use it for some valid public purpose."

The site is located within the Camp Cardinal Development Area between Melrose Avenue, Highway 218, Highway 1, and the Walnut Ridge subdivision. In a tentative agreement among Iowa City, Coralville, and South-Gate Development Co., the district will receive approximately 13 acres to build a new school.

The board hopes to decide what to do with the land by its next scheduled meeting on April 26.

Supervisors eye land-use plan

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors met Tuesday with county planning and zoning administrators to discuss a plan to reassess residential, commercial, and agricultural zones.

Before making any changes to the County Land Use Plan, the supervisors said, they want to evaluate the success and failures of the current plan. To do so, they will likely seek the assistance of the East-Central Iowa Council of Governments.

"I would like to see an objective view of what we've done over the past five or six years [since the current plan's inception in 1998]," said Supervisor Sally Stutsman.

The supervisors also stressed the importance of public input during future discussions. Because a major goal of the current plan is to protect agricultural land, Stutsman identified county farmers as a key demographic for feedback.

"I'd like to see a lot of people at future visioning meetings," she said. "I want to hear from the farming community."

No timetable has been set for the completion of a new plan, but supervisors hope that a formal plan will be in the works by year's end.

FORT HOOD, Texas — President Bush on Tuesday said he would station 10,000 U.S. military base for the first time in Iraq, saying that the move would help protect the many more who were made sacrifices for the cause of liberating Iraq and spreading democracy in the Middle East.

Bush thanks U.S. troops

BY JIM VANDEHEI
WASHINGTON POST

FORT HOOD, Texas — President Bush on Tuesday praised soldiers stationed at the largest U.S. military base for their service in Iraq, saying the 146 soldiers from here who died and many more who were injured made sacrifices for the worthy causes of liberating a nation, diminishing the threat of terrorism, and spreading democracy in the Middle East.

An audience of 25,000 soldiers, some recently returned from Iraq and others soon to ship out for a first or second tour, gathered under a spring sun to listen, politely and often quietly, to Bush compare their efforts toppling Saddam Hussein's statue in Baghdad to the fall of the Berlin Wall. It was, Bush said, "one of the great moments in the history of liberty."

The president, greeted by flag-waving soldiers, many accompanied by wives and children, was here to mark the two-year anniversary of the liberation of Baghdad this past weekend. Bush delivered what has become a fairly standard speech about what the military is accomplishing in Iraq and why, he says, the effort will go down in history as a turning point in the twin campaigns to pre-emptively fight terrorism and spread democracy in the Middle East.

"You are making possible the peace of Iraq, and you are making possible the security of free nations," he said. "... The establishment of a free Iraq at the heart of the Middle East will be a crushing defeat to the forces of tyranny and terror and a watershed event in the global democratic revolution."

global effort to plant democracy and freedom where dictators and oppression rule. Bush's accusation that Saddam harbored stockpiles of chemical, biological, and nuclear weapons, which has been discredited, was discarded from his Iraq speeches long ago.

Increasingly, the president uses speeches to troops to praise

American ideals and send a signal to other nations the administration is targeting for democratic change. "As the Iraq democracy succeeds, that success is sending a message from Beirut to Tehran that freedom can be the future of every nation," Bush said here. The administration is working publicly and privately to encourage democratic forces in Iran, Lebanon, and elsewhere to demand free elections.

More than 140,000 U.S. troops are still serving in Iraq, though that could start to change in the next year or so. Some military and administration officials say Bush could begin withdrawing a number of troops by early 2006, assuming the Iraqi military gets better equipped and trained.

Bolton called 'serial abuser' by ex-intelligence chief at State

Despite criticism from Democrats, Bolton appears to have the support of the Senate committee, and the panel seems ready to approve his nomination as ambassador to the U.N.

BY BARRY SCHWEID
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — John Bolton appeared a step closer to confirmation as ambassador to the United Nations despite scathing testimony Tuesday by a former State Department intelligence chief that he was a "serial abuser" of analysts who disagreed with his hard-line views.

A committee vote to send President Bush's nomination of Bolton, who has frequently dismissed the United Nations as irrelevant and misguided, to the full Senate could come as early as Thursday, depending on whether his Democratic foes request a few days to review State Department documents they sought to have declassified.

Carl Ford Jr., a former chief at the State Department's bureau of intelligence and research, denounced Bolton as a "kiss-up, kick-down sort of guy" who directed an abusive tirade at analyst Christian Westermann for questioning whether Cuba was developing biological and chemical weapons.

But the pivotal Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, Sen. Lincoln Chafee of Rhode Island, said he was "still inclined" to vote to confirm Bolton, who is now undersecretary of State for arms control.

The Constitution gives Bush considerable leeway to name ambassadors and "I see the bar as very high" for rejecting his choices, Chafee told reporters after the hearing was adjourned.

Ford was the only witness called besides Bolton, who testified for more than seven hours Monday, although Sen. Chris Dodd, D-Conn., told a reporter a "whole slew" of U.S. officials could have echoed Ford's accusations of harassment.

John Bolton
U.N. ambassador nominee

Meanwhile, the committee released a transcript of an interview last week with Westermann in which he said Bolton "got very red in the face" and was "quite angry" that he disagreed about Cuba's weapons programs.

It was their first meeting, Westermann told committee investigators, and Bolton "wanted to know what right I had in trying to change an undersecretary's language."

Westermann said he tried to explain procedures for making assessments public but Bolton "really wasn't in a mood to listen."

In a second transcript, Neil Silver, who was Westermann's supervisor, said Bolton asked him to consider having Westermann moved to another job. But, Silver said, Bolton's request "wasn't in terms of firing."

Westermann remained in the job, but Silver said "he was upset about the issue."

With Republicans in the majority, Bolton's nomination could be approved by the committee Thursday or early next week. Bolton was probably more vulnerable in the committee because Republicans outnumber Democrats there only 10-8. They have a safer margin, 55-44 with one independent, in the full Senate.

C'ville project goes on

Despite its recent ouster, Hayworth said Marriott was still an option for the hotel and conference center.

The Iowa River Landing District, touted by officials as a landmark attraction for Coralville, has hit several snags recently, as contractors were swapped and hotel companies dropped.

In December 2004, construction bids for the project came in $10 million over budget. Last month, Coralville officials revealed in a lawsuit that they had lost upwards of $3 million after an Austin, Texas-based consulting firm had allegedly duped the city about the project's budget and progress.

Before city officials expelled Marriott from the project, councilors had been set to approve the contract with the hotel operator, according to the council's agenda.

Because of the dismissal, the only resolutions councilors approved Tuesday night were an amended layout plan and a guarantee to other companies involved in the project that they wouldn't lose money if Coralville wasn't able to sell bonds for the center.

The amended plan approved was the one presented in March, which was a more efficient configuration of the conference center that reduced the overall size while keeping the number of rooms the same.

Officials had hoped to break ground on the hotel and conference center early next month near the Interstate 80-First Avenue interchange, which would be adjacent to a $180 million environmental arena that includes a 4.5-acre indoor rain forest and a 1 million gallon aquarium.

Because of recent changes, Hayworth said the chances of groundbreaking ceremonies commencing as scheduled were "reasonable." The final date would depend on the other groups involved, including the hotel operator, financiers, and construction companies.

"We would like to get it all together" before the groundbreaking, Hayworth said.

Negroponete ready for intel job

Negroponete is the first person in U.S. history to get such broad legal and budgetary authority — coupled with a political mandate by President Bush — to reorder the $40 billion intelligence world to better understand and counter the threat from terrorist groups as well as other, more traditional threats.

The position of intelligence director was the most symbolic part of the 600-plus page intelligence-overhaul bill. It was initially opposed by Bush, and many intelligence experts say the law focused too heavily on creating bureaucratic structures and not enough on helping operatives in the field and the analysts who interpret intelligence.

But Tuesday, even doubting senators expressed hope. "We need change, and not just a month or year of change, but sustained, fundamental change," said committee Chairman Pat Roberts, R-Kan.

"Mr. Ambassador, the process of change begins with you."

Roberts, who has frequently criticized the law, told Negroponete: "I hope you'll be able to provide leadership and, quite frankly, a kick in the pants when needed" to the tradition-bound, turf-conscious intelligence agencies.

Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., called his appointment "historic in its global reach and its national reach."

Roberts said after the hearing that the committee might vote on the nomination this week, and that "I think he will be confirmed" shortly afterward by the Senate.

Negroponete gave only a few hints at what initiatives he might bring to the job. He proposed a formalized lessons-learned process for intelligence analysts and operatives, using formalized devil's advocacy to avoid groupthink, "creating a sense of community" among the agencies, and "genuine teamwork between our military, foreign, and domestic intelligence agencies."

"I am not prepared to describe in detail exactly how I plan to carry out the job," he said.

Tension arose over Negroponete's defense of his role as U.S. ambassador to Honduras in the 1980s, when critics say he played down human-rights abuses by militias allied with the Honduran government.

Negroponete said that "whatever activities I carried out, whatever courses of action I recommended in Honduras, were always entirely consistent with applicable law at the time."

A protester yelling, "We need a truth commission to show the U.S. supports torture!" was escorted from the chambers and warned not to return.

"Studies show students are definitely interested in health and wellness," Barron said. "A very high percentage of our students have taken part in athletics, cheerleading, or drill team and don't go on to college sports but want to be active."

Grady said that the UI is building the new recreation center to remain competitive with schools nationwide. The university performed a market analysis of other institutions to evaluate their plans.

"It's absolutely critical to remain competitive, as I've traveled around the country and seen how recreational facility changed even the campus environment," said UI

'Students value and place a high importance on recreational facilities. It's a very popular trend.'

— Barry Brown, marketing director for the National Intramural-Recreational Sports Association of Corvallis, Ore.

Recreational Services Director Harry Ostrander.

The recreation facility would include fitness centers and a swimming pool. The current pool, located in the Field House, was built in 1927.

The state Board of Regents will likely approve the contract in August, after which UI officials will begin to design the building. Construction is tentatively scheduled to begin in the spring of 2007.

A portion of the $55 million budget will go towards converting the Field House pool into recreation space.

Intramural activities will continue to be held at the Field House, Ostrander said, allowing students to use the new recreation space when intramurals hold their tournaments.

Students will pay $160 more in student fees per year to fund the project; entry fees collected from UI faculty, staff, and community members will also contribute. Ostrander estimated that nonstudents will pay $5 for day passes and between $250 and $300 for yearly passes.

New pope must watch Vatican's finances

BY VICTOR L. SIMPSON

VATICAN CITY — The next pontiff will not only have to care for the souls of his 1 billion-member flock worldwide, he will have to mind their pocketbooks, taking into account the falling dollar, the cost of sex-abuse settlements, and the Vatican's expanding diplomatic mission.

Pope John Paul II demanded financial accountability and promised greater transparency after years of secrecy and a banking scandal, but in the last years of his papacy the Holy See fell back in the red.

"The dollar has really hurt them," said the Rev. Thomas Reese, a Vatican expert. "We're not only talking about money coming from the United States. All the rich guys in the Third World also give in dollars."

Vatican officials bristle at what John Paul once called "the myth" that the Holy See is immensely wealthy.

The Vatican owns an immense collection of art treasures, and there have been occasional reports that church leaders were considering selling Michelangelo's statue of the Pieta, sculptures by Bernini, or other masterpieces to pay its debts or help the needy. Officials responded that the artworks are "a treasure for all humanity" and cannot be sold.

In a rare disclosure last year, a Vatican accountant said the Holy See's real estate is worth 700 million euros, roughly $908 million. That does not include St. Peter's Basilica and the Sistine Chapel, which the report termed priceless and valued at a symbolic 1 euro.

The Vatican went through 23 years of spending more money than it took in, until 1993, when the situation improved dramatically after a revised code of church law made clear that Roman Catholic dioceses around the world should assist the Holy See.

Its most recent financial statement — in July — reported a deficit for the third-consecutive year. It listed 2003 revenues of $250.2 million and expenditures of $262 million, for a deficit of $11.8 million.

The statement on running the Holy See is not a conventional balance sheet, and it does not include revenues from museums, stamps, and other items, which are covered by another report focusing on the Vatican city-state.

Vatican experts blame the deficit on heavy personnel costs — 2,674 people work in Holy See offices, more than half of them lay people. The Vatican also greatly expanded its diplomatic activity during John Paul's papacy and now has a costly network of representatives in 174 nations.

In presenting the financial report, the chief of the Holy See's economic affairs office cited Europe's sluggish economic recovery, a poor investment climate, and the rising strength of the euro against the dollar. Salaries are paid in euros.

EARLY STAGES OF THE KRESOWIK-MCCARTHY ADMINISTRATION

The team's recent lobbying trip to Des Moines shows its commitment to following through on campaign pledges

Now that the UISG election is over, it's time to evaluate progress our new student-government leaders have made and whether the Kresowik-McCarthy ticket is following through with the promises it made two months ago.

To be sure, one aspect that hasn't faded from Mark Kresowik's demeanor as time has passed is his energy and charisma. We've already seen his diligence following through this week in Des Moines as he lobbied state legislators for better university funding.

Knowing state and local leaders on a first-name basis is commendable — it shows Kresowik is actively involved and has taken the time to get to know the issues and talk to those in the position to affect policy. He carries himself with a friendly and confident persona and does his best to make personal connections, which is arguably more important than simply spouting facts and figures before an audience. To achieve what UI students want, we need to put a human face on it.

Perhaps this has at least in part encouraged some Iowa Senate members to recommend a $30 million allocation for the state's regent institutions — $10 million less than what was requested but still a definite step in the right direction. State budget constraints are a harsh reality, and their effects on tuition are obvious to everyone, from those who pay it to those that search for the funds to make the university operate. The Kresowik-McCarthy team rightly focuses on presenting UI students as genuinely concerned about issues that influence them. The UISG website is devoted to this concept: Its home page contains links from which addresses and contact information can be obtained for state legislators who determine policy for the UI.

Kresowik

We're pleased that Kresowik has shown thus far his willingness to back up words with action. His trips to Des Moines and efforts to reverse apathy among students are laudable. With the momentum he has built up during the earliest part of his administration, we can expect that his voice will carry weight with UI officials and state lawmakers in the months ahead. But a great deal of work remains to be undertaken: Indeed, tuition and university funding will continue to confront UISG members over the next year (and undoubtedly beyond that), and whether we like it or not, talk of a 21-only ordinance will likely resurface at City Hall next month.

Keeping this all in mind, the energy, enthusiasm, and personal touch of the Kresowik-McCarthy ticket are traits that should reassure UI students. We are encouraged by what we've seen of our newly inaugurated UISG leaders, and we hope that more progress lies ahead.

Death to executions

In the wake of the tragic death of Jetseta Gage, some Iowa legislators have called for reinstatement of the death penalty in this state. Iowa, one of 12 states (in addition to the District of Columbia) without the death penalty, abolished the cruel punishment in 1965. Iowa was right to get rid of it then, and though emotions are running high right now because of Jetseta's homicide, it is still right for Iowa to stay free of executions.

I am a conservative, so my opposition to it may be surprising, given most conservatives' support for the death penalty. I square my views on capital punishment with other conservative views because I believe in the "culture of life." We should err on the side of life, not just with Terri Schiavo or with fetuses, but with those that a jury of 12 determine to be guilty of murder.

KEVIN WHITE

Some argue that the point of punishing the guilty is to provide retribution to the victims and to society. This is not the case. In a civilized culture, we punish criminals in order to deter others from committing similar offenses in the future. But for the sake of argument, let's assume the "retribution" viewpoint: Does executing murderers actually provide more retribution than making the suspect live every day in a small, dank cell contemplating his actions? It would seem that life in prison provides no less retribution than execution.

As for the deterrence rationale, it is important to examine who these murderers are. People who willfully kill other humans have no value for life. If they do not care for the lives of others, quite likely many of them do not value their own lives. As such, the threat of execution may deter a potential murderer no more than the threat of spending the rest of one's life in a prison cell. Studies consistently validate this viewpoint, as most indicate that capital punishment does not deter any more than life imprisonment.

Furthermore, as DI editorial writer Margaret Poe pointed out in her argument against capital punishment on this page on April 5, a Duke University study shows that each execution costs the state of North Carolina $2.16 million more than life imprisonment. This difference in cost results from numerous trials, number of attorneys, and more lengthy trials. But the effect is not just financial.

Rapidly advancing technology over the past two decades is helping us better determine a suspect's innocence or guilt. It's also exonerating people that a jury of their peers determined guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. Eighteen people sentenced to death in Illinois from 1977 to 2000 were exonerated. The problem there got to be so bad that former Illinois Gov. George Ryan commuted the sentences of all death-row inmates. While some may argue that better technology such as DNA testing is helping us better separate the guilty from the innocent, I see it as a sign that we are not just executing those truly guilty of murder.

Moreover, when an innocent person is found guilty of murder and is executed, there is no way to reverse that should later technology (or other situations, such as new witnesses coming forward or the truly guilty party admitting to the crime) prove her or his innocence. With a man serving a life sentence, there is always the possibility of freeing him if he is found to be innocent.

When it comes down to reality, is executing a person any more of a punishment than life imprisonment? It would seem that having to live every day of one's life with the fact that he is a murderer, all while inhabiting a small, cold cell with no privacy and few freedoms, is as harsh or harsher a punishment than death.

In emotionally charged situations such as the slaying of Jetseta Gage, it is understandable that people may support the death penalty. But given its costs and its imperfections, Iowa is right to not allow the death penalty, and it should not change course at this time. ■

Immigration overload

It's sad but perhaps not surprising that so many in the U.S. Senate have rushed to attach pork to emergency-spending legislation designed to pay for military action in Iraq and Afghanistan. It's a must-pass bill, and so it is an ideal vehicle. Now, because the House version of the bill contains a host of immigration provisions, it seems that senators may rush to attach their immigration bills and amendments to the legislation, too.

The House provisions, known as the Real ID Act, are an unfortunate mishmash of policies, none of which constitutes a solution to the problem of illegal immigration. Instead of tackling the issue head-on, the provisions would make it more difficult for people to seek asylum in this country — even though asylum-seekers represent a tiny proportion of illegal immigrants — prevent states from making their own policies on driver's licenses, and allow the Homeland Security secretary to waive, at his sole discretion, environmental laws that have hampered the construction of a fence along the southern border near San Diego.

However poorly thought-out these provisions are, their presence allows members, under Senate rules, to add their own immigration measures. As of Monday night, the matter was still under discussion, but amendments could include bills governing the status of farm and seasonal workers, altering the current temporary-worker-visa system, helping illegal immigrants attend college, and barring immigrants who don't pay child support. Many provisions are on the table, in other words, and some are interesting: As the president has said, the temporary-worker-visa system is overdue for an overhaul.

But passing bits and pieces of immigration reform as amendments to other legislation isn't the right way to go about it. From the number and scope of bills on offer, it's clear that a lot of people in both the Senate and the House have thought hard about immigration. They deserve the chance to air those thoughts in public debate. Senate leaders should do their best to persuade members to hold their fire, hold a proper debate, and craft a proper bill, taking time to think through the implications.

Accountability is key

In response to Beau Elliot's April 12 column, I offer my agreement. But it is important for us to realize that the only reason why our politicians use daughters, wives, murdered children, and popes as political footfalls is because constituents keep buying what they're selling without accountability. Maybe it's too inconvenient to follow all of their moves, so we only pay attention to the emotional headlines.

I'm making a call to everyone who is sick of under-the-table politics and headline-grabbing politicians to start demanding more information and context from our media about our representatives. Let's pay attention to the deals made by our representatives in Iowa and in Washington, D.C., that do more for our politicians' re-election campaigns than they do for us. Maybe we might begin to bring sensibility back to politics in Iowa.

Who let the National Rifle Association control the vote not to ban assault weapons in the United States? Who voted in favor of drilling in Alaska when nobody was paying attention? Daily Iowan, please give us more information about all of the votes of our representatives in Des Moines and Washington. Let's demand accountability from our politicians.

Alcohol's effect on judgment

When will our culture come to recognize that no one can provide consent to anything, including sex, when her or his blood-alcohol level is at 0.2? If our laws were written to include this fact, then we wouldn't get stuck in these she-said, he-said disputes.

The old myths about a woman being fair game under any circumstances need to end. No woman is asking to be taken advantage of just because she has had too much to drink. We need to recognize a zone of sexual non-consent for alcohol use, just as we do for girls who are too young or women who have other impairments that affect their judgment.

I've always wondered whether we should stop prosecuting muggers who rob men who have had too much to drink. After all, aren't the drinkers just asking for it by their behavior? Why should we hold those perpetrators responsible for their acts? It seems completely understandable that the victims offered them money and then ruined their lives by accusing them of being muggers.

Having not attended the recent trial of a former male UI student, I cannot second-guess the jury members. I'm sure they were doing the best they could with the information they were given and the laws we now have. But when a group of young men stand around outside someone's dorm room while an obviously intoxicated young woman is having repeated sex with a male student, which results in her sobbing and trying to defend herself against their taunting, there is something wrong with the picture. The fact that none of those UI students recognized that is a shameful reflection of their attitudes about women.

BREAKING IN BREAKING AWAY

BY ARNA WILKINSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

It's a Friday night, and 19-year-old Chuy Renteria is on the floor, his gymnast-like body contorting into impossible positions. There are looks of admiration and a few shouts from the people around him, barely audible over the incessant beat pounding from DJ Fonix's turntables.

As James Brown so eloquently instructed, it's time to get on the good foot, because break dancers are popping and locking in Iowa City. Renteria, a member of the Distinctive Nobodies crew and UI hip-hop organization PHASE, is one of nine or so b-boys and -girls (as they prefer to be called) who meet every Friday around 6 p.m. at Arts à la Carte, 20 E. Market St.

But this is not just a passing fad. For these b-boys and -girls, break dancing is a way of life that creates an artistic outlet and creates a sense of community.

"For a small town in the Midwest, we have a very close group here in Iowa City. We depend a lot on each other," said Luke Chang, a UI student and crew member. "It's a culture that inspires competition in people, but it also inspires expression. It's very communally based."

They do not sport the trademark tracksuits, Kangol gear, or Adidas shoes. This community is, well, breaking stereotypes about b-boys and -girls while encompassing just about every age and ethnicity. Friday evenings draw not only the regulars but also their younger siblings and mothers who watch on the side. Renteria teaches a class during this time, so the studio is divided between advanced and beginning breakers.

It has not always been this way. The group has struggled over the years to keep the Iowa City break-dancing scene alive. Renteria said it has been difficult to find place to practice and the numbers of b-boys/-girls has fluctuated heavily, a reflection of a nationwide trend since break dancing fell off the mainstream pop-culture radar in the mid-80s.

The Kirkwood College student first started breaking in 2000 on a piece of cardboard in his front yard or garage in West Liberty, influenced by the break dancing brought to the town by the Latino and Laotian communities. Then Renteria heard about people breaking at the UI Field House.

BREAKDANCING WORKSHOP

The Distinctive Nobodies Dance Crew will lead a break-dancing workshop for the UI Hip-Hop Week today at 6 p.m. in the IMU second-floor ballroom. Music will be provided by DJ Ohmatic.

"There were 10 to 15 random people who practiced in Iowa City and a whole lot of people in Muscatine, Davenport, and Des Moines. But everybody else quit at once, right after we got started," he said. "It was one of those things that was hot for a second. But I loved it so much I couldn't quit."

He continued break dancing after the others moved on. The remaining members traveled to competitions in Chicago, Minneapolis, and Lawrence, Kan.,

honing their breaking skills.

Then Renteria and his friends were asked to stop using the main area of the Field House for a practice space because employees said they had received complaints from people about the b-boys' music.

"They are not a recognized student organization at the University of Iowa, and they are not supposed to be on the main deck, because they were playing music without earphones, which is against our code," said Raymond Beemer, the associate director of UI Recreational Services. "I told them to leave a long time ago."

The b-boys had nowhere to go.

They were allowed to practice in the rooms next to the Field House's track as long as no one else was using them, but Renteria said the doors were often locked. He finally got in contact with Arts à la Carte, a local nonprofit dance co-operative that allowed the crew to use the dance studio. With the new space and the classes, break dancing has gained momentum again in Iowa City.

"I love break dancing," said UI senior Kim Nguyen, who was on her fifth lesson. "Whenever I go to shows, people have so much positivity."

Surprise — Britney's pregnant

NEW YORK (AP) — Britney Spears has revealed what might be Hollywood's worst-kept secret: She's pregnant.

In a posting on her website, Spears told fans that she and husband, Kevin Federline, were expecting their first child together. Her publicist, Sonia Muckie, confirmed the singer's pregnancy Tuesday but refused to provide additional details.

"The time has finally come to share our wonderful news that we are expecting our first child together," the singer said. "There are reports that I was in the hospital this weekend, and Kevin and I just want everyone to know that all is well. Thank you for your thoughts and prayers."

The couple married in September. Magazines and tabloids have speculated for weeks that Spears, 23, was pregnant, documenting her expanding waistline and fuller figure, but she remained mum on the subject.

However, she has previously expressed a desire to start a family. In an interview with People magazine last fall, she said: "I want to be a young mom. I can see us as parents."

While this will be Spears' first foray into parenthood, Federline, 27, has two children with his ex-girlfriend, actress Shar Jackson. Spears and Federline met last year when he was a backup dancer on her tour — and Jackson was pregnant with their son.

Spears wed Federline just eight months after ending a 55-hour Las Vegas marriage to her childhood friend, Jason Alexander. Her second marriage has provided endless fodder for tabloids, which have speculated that the union is in trouble — prompting an angry outburst from Spears on her website last month.

China toughens stance on Japan

There has been speculation on the U.N. Security Council that China might use its veto and block Japan from gaining a permanent seat on the council

BY AUDRA ANG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BELJING — In the strongest stand so far against the Japanese bid for a permanent seat on the U.N. Security Council, China's premier told Japan on Tuesday to face up to its World War II aggression before aspiring to a bigger global role.

It was the strongest hint yet that China might exercise its veto as one of the council's five permanent members to block Japan.

"Only a country that respects history, takes responsibility for history, and wins over the trust of peoples in Asia and the world at large can take greater responsibilities in the international community," Premier Wen Jiabao said during an official visit to India.

China, South Korea, and other Asian nations have long accused Japan of not apologizing adequately for invading and occupying its neighbors, and Chinese animosities are aggravated by their rivalry with the Japanese to be the region's dominant power.

Sometimes violent anti-Japanese protests erupted in Beijing and two other Chinese cities over the weekend, sparked by Japan's approval of a history textbook that critics say plays down Japanese military abuses such as the forced wartime prostitution of thousands of Asian women.

"Last century, the aggression war waged by Japan inflicted huge and tremendous suffering and hardships on people in China, Asia, and the world at large," Wen told reporters in New Delhi. He said the protests should prompt "deep and profound reflections" by the Japanese.

Japan's government is campaigning for a permanent Security Council seat in recognition of its status as the world's second-biggest economy, after the United States, which is a permanent member along with Russia, Britain, France, and China.

For Japan to get a permanent seat, the U.N. Charter would have to be amended. That would require approval by the Security Council, so China could use its veto to block any change, although the Beijing regime has avoided explicitly saying it would do so.

Feelings are also high in Japan.

Police said Tuesday that China's consulate in Osaka received an envelope containing a spent bullet and a message threatening to harm Chinese people if anti-Japanese protests continue in China. The envelope didn't identify the sender, and police declined to say where it was mailed.

Japanese nationalists have used similar intimidation tactics in the past.

Japan's trade minister, Shoichi Nakagawa, called China "a scary country" Tuesday and expressed concerns about how the violent demonstrations will affect Japanese business in China.

U.S. troops fight Iraqi militants, smugglers

BAGHDAD (AP) — U.S. troops battled arms smugglers and fighters near the Iraqi town of Qaim along the Syrian border Tuesday, killing an unknown number of foreign insurgents, the U.S. military said. Local hospital officials reported at least nine people killed in clashes in the same area and said they believed the dead were civilians.

The raids came as separate car bombs in two northern cities killed a total of 10 people and as the Iraqi government claimed to have captured a former member of Saddam Hussein's regime at a farm northeast of Baghdad.

Hawks rain on Panther parade

The Hawkeye baseball team comes back in the seventh inning to beat UNI 9-7

Jessica Green/The Daily Iowan

Iowa first baseman Dusty Napoleon catches the ball just before Northern Iowa's Andrew Farmer hits the bag in the fourth inning of the Hawkeye game Tuesday night at Banks Field. The Hawkeyes came from behind to win, 9-7.

BY TED MCCARTAN

THE DAILY IOWAN

In the bottom of the seventh inning with two outs, a runner in scoring position, and Iowa trailing Northern Iowa, 6-5, Nate Price hit a lazy bouncer to the right side of the infield and sprinted down the line. "You gotta beat it," he thought.

The wet dirt knocked the air out of him as he collided with the earth and reached for the bag, but he did. Meanwhile, Ryan Considine scampered home from second and tied the game. It led to two more runs in the same half-inning, and it was the key to Iowa's 9-7 victory at a soggy Duane Banks Field on Tuesday night.

"We started the rally before that, but yeah, that was big for us, and I knew it," Price said, his jersey caked with dirt. "I just burned own the line as fast as I could."

"I thought he hurt his shoulder," Iowa coach Jack Dahm said afterward. "But he just lost his breath. So I walked over there and said,

"You're stealing on the first pitch."

Price did steal second and eventually scored the go-ahead run.

"He got it done," Dahm said. "He's playing as good as anybody around right now."

Pinch-runner Mike Mogart scored a dessert run — the kind that isn't needed but makes you feel better — to give the Hawks some breathing room in the eighth, and ace Luke O'Loughlin pinned down the 9-7 win. And although Iowa relief pitcher Kevin Sunderman threw a wild pitch in the top of the seventh that allowed UNI to regain its lead at 6-5, he was credited with

Spring football ends with a lot of work left for fall

"We have a lot of improvement to make. There are a lot of questions to be answered. I would anticipate a lot of those things will go right through August and possibly into September."

— Iowa head coach Kirk Ferentz

BY NICK RICHARDS

THE DAILY IOWAN

With three practices remaining before the conclusion of spring football, questions remain unanswered for head coach Kirk Ferentz and the 2005 Hawkeyes. "We have a lot of improvement to make," Ferentz said. "There are a lot of questions to be answered. I would anticipate a lot of those things will go right through August and possibly into September."

After losing all four starters from last year's stellar defensive line, that unit must be rebuilt, but injuries have hindered the growth and development of young players in need of experience.

Bryan Mattison, who saw limited action last year but was expected to solidify a starting spot at defensive end by the conclusion of spring ball, had foot surgery April 8 and will likely be out eight weeks. The team has seen limited time from Alex Wilcox and Ettore Ewen, both of whom are recovering from season-ending surgeries last year. Mitch King and Mike Follett have also seen limited snaps on the line after switching positions.

Only Matt Kroul and Kenny Iwebema have possibly cemented a starting spot for next year. The possibility of an incoming freshman, such as Ryan Bain, contributing, is not out of the question and, of course, can't be known until the summer.

"It's really been inconclusive. You'd love to have the whole group out there practicing all 15 practices where you can really

NCAA considers adding 12th football game to season

BY STEVE HERMAN

ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — The NCAA Division I Management Council has backed legislation that would allow Division I-A and I-AA schools to add a 12th football game starting with the 2006 season.

The plan was given tentative approval by the council at its meeting on Monday and will be sent to the NCAA Board of Directors for final consideration April 28.

Division I vice president David Berst said Tuesday he didn't know whether the NCAA board would go along with the council's recommendation, which was opposed only by the Atlantic Coast Conference among I-A conferences.

"I would expect there will be more discussion," Berst said. "The board should have the freedom to make its own decision." There was no discussion of the issue at the council's meeting.

"The various conferences came to the meeting prepared to vote, and we just tallied the votes," Berst said.

Ron Wellman, the athletics director at Wake Forest and chairman of the ACC's athletic directors, said many of the conference's concerns dealt with academics.

The HAWKEYE BASEBALL TEAM takes on Northern Illinois today before heading back into Big Ten action this weekend

— Iowa coach Jack Dahm

BY RYAN LONG
THE DAILY IOWAN

After an in-state battle with Northern Iowa on Tuesday night, the Iowa baseball team will tangle with Midwest Athletic Conference member Northern Illinois today at 6 p.m. at Duane Banks Field.

It will be the Hawkeyes' final nonconference game this week before heading back into Big Ten action with Indiana in a four-game series this weekend. Hawkeye coach Jack Dahm believes that tonight's game against the Huskies may feature a matchup with two squads who mirror one another in terms of their execution.

"Northern Illinois is a program that's really been on the rise, and it's playing very similar to the way that we were playing before this [past] weekend," he said. "They were in position to win a lot of games, and they just couldn't get over the hump. They're very talented but also a younger team, so there's a lot of similarities between Northern Illinois and our program."

Hawkeye junior reliever Tim Gudex realizes it is important not to look past today's game with the Huskies after some early success in Big Ten play.

The Hawkeyes (10-15) are tied for third place in the conference with Penn State.

"We can definitely use this [past] weekend as momentum, but we need to stay focused," Gudex said. "We had a good weekend, and we can't let it bother us. We have to get back to business."

Northern Illinois (8-19) have yet to win in the MAC this season, but the team features some productive bats. Senior Eric Sansouci, senior Jeremy Busch, freshman Kyle Cherney, and senior Mike Santoro are all batting above .300 on the year. Sansouci is hitting .320 with 13 doubles, 16 RBIs, and two home runs. Busch has a .317 batting average, with six home runs and 18 RBIs. Cherney has batted .312 with 16 RBIs, while Santoro has a .301 batting average with 10 doubles, five home runs, and a team-high 24 RBIs.

The Huskies will probably throw Matt Jernstad at the Hawkeyes as their starter, which would be his third of the season. Jernstad has a 5.40 ERA and is 0-1 on the year. He has racked up six strikeouts and eight walks in 15 innings of action.

Austin Seward is scheduled to make the start for the Hawks. The junior is 0-1 with a 6.59 ERA and has struck out 12 and walked 15 in 27½ innings.

MR. TYSON GOES TO WASHINGTON

For his first bout in nearly a year, the FORMER HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION will take on Kevin McBride on June 11 at the MCI Center in the nation's capital

BY HOWARD FENDRICH
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mike Tyson talked about sinking into depression, referred to himself as "Mr. Mom," and called his next opponent "real cute."

Yes, The Mike Tyson Show is headed to the nation's capital. The former heavyweight champion announced Tuesday that he'll fight journeyman Kevin McBride on June 11 at the MCI Center — Tyson's first bout in nearly a year.

"I just hope these people of Washington, D.C., are prepared to handle this," Tyson said. "It's going to be a train wreck."

The 38-year-old Tyson, 50-5 with two no contests and 44 knockouts, lost two of his last three fights. In his most recent outing, in Louisville on July 30, he was stopped in the fourth round by Danny Williams after tearing cartilage in his left knee.

"I know Danny Williams don't think he won that fight," Tyson said.

He had surgery — the knee is fine, Tyson said Tuesday — and he's been training in Phoenix for three weeks.

But he spoke about how down he was after having his operation. "I was in that little square box room, and I was on crutches, and it was a very depressing atmosphere. I just fell into a deep depression," Tyson said. "Once those painkillers wore off, it was horrific. I didn't know what to do. I was just like a little spoiled brat. I was at my worst self."

Then he paused, and added: "I'm just so happy I'm happy again."

The Williams bout was Former heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson (right) and Kevin McBride gesture after a news conference on Tuesday in Washington. Tyson's first fight in nearly a year will be against McBride, a journeyman who came close to being signed for the former heavyweight champion's last bout.

Tyson's first in 17 months — and his first loss in a non-title bout. He's entered the ring just once a year since 2001, earning a technical knockout victory over Brian Nielsen in October of that year, getting knocked out by Lennox Lewis in June 2002, and knocking out Clifford Etienne in February 2003.

McBride, 31, defeated Kevin Monty by technical knockout on March 18 in his last fight. Born in Ireland and now based in Massachusetts, the 6-6 McBride is 32-4-1 with 27 knockouts.

"After I beat Mike, I want to fight for the world title," said McBride, who at least three times vowed: "I'm going to shock the world."

His manager, Rich Cappiello was more succinct.

"Mike Tyson gets knocked out within five rounds," Cappiello said, drawing a laugh from Tyson.

The man once called "the baddest man on the planet" sat on the stage at the Lincoln Theater with three of his children. He held hands at one point with 7-year-old daughter Rayna and later sat napping 3-year-old son Miguel on his lap.

"I feel like Mr. Mom," Tyson said.

the win. Sunderman recorded four outs, gave up only that one run, and was on the mound when Iowa took the lead for good.

The seventh inning comeback was the second of two the Hawkeyes mounted in the game. The first was in the fifth inning, when they found themselves trailing the Panthers, 5-1.

"I didn't think we came out with the intensity and the focus that we needed to," Dahm said. "We fell behind but kept our composure. Even though we were down, in the game our guys did not panic, and that is a sign of having confidence."

The bulk of UNI's early offensive production came in the first and fourth innings, when it scored two and four runs, respectively. UNI catcher Nate Trumm provided the punch, going 3-4 with two RBIs and a run scored.

"Some things went against us, and we're starting to learn to stay a little more even keeled," Dahm said. "And when something goes wrong, we've learned to live through it."

Coming from behind is something the Hawkeyes learned to do last weekend, when they scored 10 runs in one inning late in a game at Michigan. And Dahm knows his team can't rely on the long ball. His coaching staff and players are forced to get a little more crafty.

"We've got to manufacture runs," he said.

And after a disappointing April, Iowa is sitting at a surprising third place in the Big Ten.

"The hustle has always been there — everything has always been there, except for the clutch hits," Price said. "And lately everybody wants to be in that situation right now, and we're all getting it done."

"We believe the season is long enough at 11 games, and we actually enjoy the bye week," he said.

The council also approved legislation for more flexible recruiting calendars in men's basketball and increased the number of scholarships for women in gymnastics, soccer, volleyball, and track and field. It also voted to grant another year of eligibility to players who were academically ineligible as freshmen but had completed 80 percent of their degree requirements after four years.

No action was taken on the length of the season in basketball because of a pending court case, Berst said.

The 12-game proposal in football was among more than 100 items considered by the council.

Currently, Division I football teams play 11 regular-season games except in years when there are 14 Saturdays from the first permissible playing date through the last playing date in November. The 2002 and 2003 seasons qualified for the extra game, but without the new legislation, the next would not be until 2008.

The basketball proposals were submitted last year by the National Association of Basketball Coaches and the Women's Basketball Association. Among the ones approved by the council was one to allow freshmen to play in preseason exhibition games and, as long as they do not play the rest of that season, still have four additional years of eligibility.

The council did not support NABC proposals to allow coaches greater access to players and recruits during offseason workouts and clinics.

"There were a variety of issues related to that, some even related to coaches who were a little bit concerned about what other coaches might really do if they have that opportunity," said Chris Monasch, athletics director at St. John's and outgoing chairman of the management council.

He said many administrators also were concerned about additional pressure on their compliance officers.

"Are we going to have more questions about whether the coach could have a clipboard? And what's the coach really doing? And how do you keep it informal? All of those kinds of issues simply overwhelmed the proposal," Monasch said.

The proposal to allow a fourth season of eligibility for those who have completed 80 percent of their degree requirements by the start of their fifth year of enrollment would become effective Aug. 1 this year and would apply to students already in school as well as incoming freshmen.

The scholarship increases for women would raise the numbers from 12 to 14 in gymnastics and soccer, 12 to 13 in volleyball, and 18 to 20 in track and field.

get a better grasp on things, but we haven't been able to do that," Ferentz said.

Running back will also be an issue, where Marques Simmons, Sam Brownlee, and Damian Sims saw action in the spring. Ferentz threw considerable praise toward Sims, who was thrown into duty last year as a true freshman to fill in after Iowa's well-documented problems at running back arose.

"Damian Sims has improved. He's a bigger, stronger guy than he was, and he's more confident than he was in the fall," Ferentz said.

Even if no starter is named until the fall, help is on the way. Albert Young and Marcus Schnoor will rejoin the action full-speed in the fall after recovering from knee injuries last year.

Tight end and punter are also up in the air. Scott Chandler is in a battle with Ryan Majerus, and Andy Fenstermaker and John Gallery each have been trying to kick the other out of the punting job in trying to replace David Bradley.

"We still have a lot of questions to get answered, a lot of things we need to work through as a football team," Ferentz said. "I'm hopeful our team realizes that, because that's the reality of our situation."

"We all left on great terms," Ferentz said. "I think he'd like to get into athletics administration down the road, and I told him if he wants to come back and work in our office, we'd love to have him. He's a great young man."

Sports are a great diversion, but sometimes they're tragic, too

BY TIM DAHLBERG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

The day was picture perfect, and so was Augusta National. Tiger Woods had just teed off in the final round of a Masters for the ages, and the country tuned in to watch the thrilling outcome amid the brilliantly manicured greens of one of golf's most revered shrines.

About the same time, Al Lucas lay dying on the fake turf inside Staples Center in downtown Los Angeles.

Sports can bring us pleasure and joy, the kind we get from seeing Woods making a magical shot or watching Pedro Martinez pitch a nine-inning gem, as he did on Sunday in Atlanta.

It can also bring heartache and grief. Woods had tears in his eyes Sunday night as he accepted the green jacket and dedicated it to his seriously ill father. About 125 miles away in Macon, Ga., Lucas' family surely was crying, too, over the loss of their son.

Lucas was 26 and trying to make a living in a game he loved when he was fatally injured during what appeared to be a routine kickoff return in the Arena Football League game between the Los Angeles Avengers and New York Dragons.

Before he died, the 6-1, 300-pound lineman was just another athlete playing a fringe version of America's most popular sport.

Though he was the top defensive player in Division I-AA his senior season and played for the Carolina Panthers in 2000-01, even the most dedicated Avengers fan would be hard-pressed to tell you who he was.

Sadly, the few moments of fame every athlete craves came posthumously.

His death allowed us to learn a little about his family — his father was a state representative in Georgia and his mother is on Macon's City Council.

We also found out something about Lucas himself from the guys who played with him. They described him as a deeply religious, fun-loving father of a 1-year-old daughter who never missed the team's weekly Bible study session.

"As great a player as he was, I think he was a better person," Avengers coach Ed Hodgkiss said. "He had a great ability and with that ability came leadership."

Lucas' teammates returned to practice the day after he died because, well, that's what players usually do. They mourned among themselves, spoke about their loss, and talked of winning in his honor.

Those who knew Becky Zerlentes felt the same way.

She died last week in Denver when she was hit by a punch to the head during a Golden Gloves competition.

Like Lucas' death, it didn't make much sense. She was wearing headgear and didn't seem to be in any trouble when she took that hit in the third round, staggered forward, and collapsed in the ring.

We got to know Zerlentes briefly, too, because she was the first woman boxer to die in a sanctioned event and because it was partly a case of life imitating art, as in the movie Million Dollar Baby.

Zerlentes was a 34-year-old college instructor who had a brown belt in taekwondo, organized group walks for charity, rode her bike everywhere, and lived her life to the fullest.

"She was the Energizer Bunny of our campus. She was turbo woman," said Mary Croissant, who taught with Zerlentes at Front Range Community College. "She had a smile and a light in her heart that touched everyone she came in contact with."

Zerlentes and Lucas died competing in sports that are inherently risky. Football players are taught to throw their bodies at an opponent; boxers throw every punch with the intent to injure.

Every year a boxer or two somewhere dies from punches to the head; five died in Nevada alone in the past 20 years. Football players are even more at risk, probably because there are so many more of them.

The National Center for Catastrophic Sport Injury Research, which studies these kind of things, reports that five football players died last year from on-field injuries, and another 10 died from football-related activities. Most were high school students.

Since research began in 1931, there have been 1,642 deaths in football, numbers that can hardly be comforting to parents sending their children off to practice.

Second-place finish | CHRIS DIMARCO
A BRIGHT FUTURE WITH NO GUARANTEES

BY DOUG FERGUSON
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chris DiMarco had a satellite truck parked outside his house and a long list of television and radio interviews to do, the kind of treatment usually afforded a Masters champion.

DiMarco was only the runner-up.

The guy with the green jacket — Tiger Woods — was on the other side of town in Orlando, Fla., meeting VIPs from Accenture, one of his sponsors, for a Monday outing planned long before he won his fourth Masters.

Rarely does second place draw so much attention.

"I went out and shot 68 around here on Sunday, which is a very good round. And 12 under is usually good enough to win," DiMarco said after his playoff loss. "I just was playing against Tiger Woods."

That's what made this runner-up finish so compelling. That's why the loudest cheers were for DiMarco along the back nine at Augusta National and even during the closing ceremony, when Woods paid tribute to "one heck of a competitor out there."

It was almost an afterthought during the final round that DiMarco had been here before — not just in the final group at the Masters but in a playoff at a major. Seven months ago at Whistling Straits, he missed an 18-foot birdie putt on the final hole of the PGA Championship, then lost in a three-way playoff to Vijay Singh.

But that was different.

Justin Leonard should have won the PGA except for a balky putter. DiMarco slipped into contention with a 1-under 71, the only player among the final 11 groups who broke par on a vicious course. The memory of DiMarco from Whistling Straits is that he had a birdie putt on the 18th hole and left it short.

He was the model of grit and determination at the Masters.

DiMarco shot 41 on the back nine Sunday morning to finish his third round, turning a four-shot lead into a three-shot deficit to a player who had never lost the lead in the final round of a major.

No one gave him a chance.

It was a two-man race from the start, and DiMarco never backed down. Despite giving up 80 yards at times off the tee, DiMarco was inside Woods for birdie on all but five holes. He was aggressive, fearless. He tried to make birdies on his last two holes and left himself 6 feet for par, then made both those to force a playoff.

This was quite a change from last year at Augusta National, when he was tied for the lead with Phil Mickelson going into the last round and shot 76 to quickly take himself out of contention.

"I don't think I was ready to win," DiMarco said. "This year, I was ready to win. I really felt like I could win it. And coming out the way I did, I will be ready to win next year."

Next year?

What about the next major?

There already is some thought that DiMarco should move to the top of the list as the "best player to have never won a major," but only because his final round is still fresh.

DiMarco has only won three times in his 10 years on the PGA Tour, none against particularly strong fields. There's a reason for that.

He had at least joined some exclusive company Sunday, even if it's not the kind he wants to keep.

Not since Tom Watson at the 1978 PGA Championship and 1979 Masters has someone lost back-to-back major championships in a playoff. Craig Wood is the only other player with that distinction, having lost in 38 holes in the finals of the 1934 PGA Championship, then in a 36-hole playoff to Gene Sarazen at the 1935 Masters.

Sarazen got into the playoff with a shot that put the Masters on the map — a 4-wood for double eagle on the 15th. Woods ultimately got into a playoff with a shot for the ages. His chip behind the 16th green made a U-turn at the top of the slope, came to a full stop at the edge of the cup, and then got the green light from above, dropping in for birdie.

DiMarco is the first player since Tom Lehman to play in the final group of a major at least two straight years without winning. Lehman was in the last group at four-straight U.S. Opens and had at least a share of the lead in three of them.

Now, DiMarco must be careful to avoid joining the wrong crowd.

"I think I proved to a lot of people that I can play under the heat," the runner-up said.

That wasn't DiMarco, though. Those words came from Bob May after he matched Woods shot-for-shot in high drama at Valhalla in the 2000 PGA Championship, the only other major Woods won in a playoff.

Golf is loaded with players who show their mettle in a major but end their career as just another runner-up. Ed Sneed at the Masters. Mike Donald at the U.S. Open. Brain Watts at the British Open. Mike Reid at the PGA.

Even multiple close calls in a major doesn't guarantee anything, as Colin Montgomerie and Chip Beck can attest.

DiMarco has proved to be a top-rate golfer. He has played in the Tour Championship the last five years. He won a crucial singles match at the Presidents Cup and was the only American with a winning record at the Ryder Cup last fall.

"There is no back-off in him," Woods said.

There is no major championship on his résumé, either — at least not yet.

DiMarco wants to be known for more than giving the No. 1 player in the world the fight of his life on the grandest stage in golf. He is universally respected today. He might be part of a trivia question tomorrow.

Only a major can change that.

URBAN RENEWAL

New Gator coach Urban Meyer is already being called the next great college coach

BY RALPH D. RUSSO
 ASSOCIATED PRESS

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Urban Meyer surveys his squad of Gators as they sprint past, snapping at those who lag behind.

It's the final practice of the spring for Florida and its new coach. Traditionally, the Gators have had a light workout the day before the Orange and Blue scrimmage in "The Swamp."

Not this time. "Another day of work, men," Meyer calls out. "Another day. Another day. Another day."

Nearly three hours later, the Gators are done. Welcome to Urban Renewal at the University of Florida, where optimism abounds, the coach is adored, and the buzz words are honesty and accountability.

Meyer has risen through the ranks of college coaching with head-spinning speed. After two seasons at Bowling Green and two more at Utah, the 40-year-old with the innovative offense and contagious intensity is already being called the next great college coach.

"It's very humbling, and, if you know me, it's extremely uncomfortable," he said.

Leading Utah to a 12-0 season and a berth in the Bowl Championship Series made Meyer the most wanted coach in the country last year.

Florida was first to come calling in search of a replacement for Ron Zook. In three seasons under Zook, Gainesville had become a grumpy place. The Gators, once mighty under Steve Spurrier, were often mediocre for his successor.

"What we went through the last three years was not good," Athletics Director Jeremy Foley said. "A lot of negativity. A lot of divisiveness. It wasn't fun for anybody."

Foley fiddled with the idea of bringing back Spurrier, but the coach decided he wasn't interested in trying to rekindle past glory. Foley then went after Meyer.

Meyer had all but made up his mind to take the Florida job when Notre Dame made its pitch for the former Irish assistant.

He had his pick from two of college football's most prestigious programs.

"I'm Irish Catholic, so I love Notre Dame," Meyer said. "I love that place. I always will. That was more than a tug."

Florida quarterback Chris Leak talks with head coach Urban Meyer after the Orange and Blue game on April 9 in Gainesville, Fla.

But the Florida job was just too good.

"The best academics. The best facilities. The best stadium. The best location," Meyer said.

Just hiring Meyer helped improve the mood in Gainesville. And with every move he's made, the players, many of whom groused when Zook was let go, and fans have become more devout followers.

"We heard him talk and the confidence that he had and the enthusiasm that he had, we just looked at each other like, 'OK, this is going to work,'" linebacker Brandon Siler said.

Meyer has done small things such as bringing the bleachers back to the practice field, so fans could sit and watch the spring workouts. Zook had removed the metal stands.

He's done big things such as creating a leadership committee to make players accountable to each other. The committee of 14 players, chosen by the team, will make decisions ranging from what's served for dinner to the type of punishment doled out to rule-breakers.

"The key word in this whole thing is ownership," Meyer said. "If they think it's a dictatorship, there's much more resistance."

Meyer has been brutally honest when speaking to the media about his players. Early this spring, he said the team wasn't tough. He said defensive tackle Ray McDonald, a two-year starter, didn't always play hard. He called quarterback Chris Leak a poor leader, because while Leak was a model student-athlete, he didn't do enough to make sure his teammates were the same.

Meyer doesn't call it criticism. "I say it's honest evaluation," he said.

And the players don't seem to mind. "Some coaches might hold back because they're scared they might hurt your feelings," safety Jarvis Herring said. "He'll tell you what's on his mind. I love that."

Meyer has reached out to former Gators greats, many of whom grew disenchanted with the program during Zook's tenure. Neal Anderson, Alex Brown, Danny Wuerffel, Chris Doering, and Jack Youngblood were among the dozen or so former Florida players at the Orange and Blue game on Saturday — along with a record 58,500 fans.

"There's a tradition here that's as good as any in the country, especially in the last 15 years," Meyer said. "Those guys need to come back."

Meyer even called Spurrier, "just out of respect."

Meyer's even trying to get the students more involved, visiting the fraternity and sorority houses and encouraging everyone on campus to learn the fight song.

Ultimately, though Meyer will be judged on wins and losses. Foley says he wants Florida to be "in the hunt" for championships again, like it was in the 1990s under Spurrier.

It's a huge jump up the college football food chain for Meyer, from Utah of the Mountain West to one of the flagship programs of the Southeastern Conference.

McCarney: Good defense, not so good offense

AMES (AP) — Iowa coach Dan McCarney feels good about the starters on his 2005 team but has some concerns about the offense.

"We're still trying to find a five combination," McCarney said. "The offensive line. The defense is still going real strong."

McCarney said quarterback Aaron Murray, running back Aaron Brantley, receiver Aaron Brantley, tight end Johannes Egbers, and center Jon Davis have secured positions for the coming season. A number of positions are still up for grabs.

Sophomore Todd Sorenson is expected to start at the receiver position but is recovering from knee surgery. Left tackle Seth Pence and center Seth Pence are projected starters on the offensive line. McCarney said Zehr has secured the tackle, guard, and center positions. McCarney also acknowledged

SLOW STARTS FOR SOME BIG-NAME CLOSERS

'There's really no way that you can simulate the regular season in spring training.'
— Houston closer Brad Lidge

BY RONALD BLUM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mariano Rivera blows two saves against Boston; Keith Foulke gives up a game-ending homer to Derek Jeter.

Cleveland's Bob Wickman wastes a ninth-inning lead against the White Sox, and the very next day, Chicago closer Shingo Takatsu gives up three homers in the ninth against the Indians.

"Those guys are not going to save every game they pitch," said Colorado manager Clint Hurdle, whose bullpen failed to hold a pair of leads against San Francisco last weekend. "And once there's one chink in your armor, it affects your confidence."

While position players and starting pitchers get into game shape during spring training, closers can't really get parallel experience. For them, it's not the innings or pitch count that matter: Their specialty is being able to pitch with no margin for error, needing to get only three outs most of the time.

"There's really no way that you can simulate the regular season in spring training," Houston closer Brad Lidge said. "Right now, maybe the ball isn't bouncing the right way for Rivera and some of those guys, but over the course of the season, it evens itself out. My guess is by the middle of the season, people won't even remember."

There were 39 blown saves in 99 games through Monday, according to the Elias Sports Bureau, up from 35 in the first 102 games of last year.

Rivera, who converted 53 of 57 save chances last year, has blown four straight against the Red Sox, including two in last October's AL Championship Series. Twelve of his 28 blown saves since the start of the 2001 season have been against Boston, and some fans at Yankee Stadium booed him last week after his second failure in a row.

"It's always good or bad," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "If you're a closer, either you do it, or you don't do it. You're successful, or you're a failure."

Texas closer Francisco Cordero has blown two of four save chances, giving up a homer to Anaheim's Darin Erstad on an 0-2 pitch in the ninth inning of the Rangers' loss Monday. Cordero converted 49 of 54 chances last year and allowed just one homer.

Mets closer Braden Loper had 29 saves in 34 chances last year, but right now he has to shed memories from his first appearance this year, when he gave up home runs to Adam Dunn and Joe Randa in a 7-6 loss at Cincinnati. Loper's performance cost Pedro Martinez a win in his Mets' debut and started New York on a season-opening 0-5 slide.

"I've definitely given up my share of whatever you want to call it," Loper said. "But on opening day, it stinks."

Wickman had converted 12-straight chances dating to last season heading into an April 6 game at Chicago. He entered with a 3-0 lead but gave up hits to four-straight batters in a span of eight pitches, including consecutive homers by Paul Konerko and Jermaine Dye, and the White Sox won, 4-3.

Takatsu had a 5-2 lead in the ninth the next day but gave up home runs to Casey Blake, Coco Crisp, and Ronnie Belliard, and the Indians won in 11 innings. On Sunday at Detroit, Wickman gave up an RBI single to Carlos Guillen before retiring Ivan Rodriguez on a grounder to preserve Cleveland's 7-6 win. Wickman admitted the April 6 meltdown remained on his mind.

"I'm thinking, 'Here we go again,' just like everyone else," he said.

McCarney: Good on defense, not so on offense

AMES (AP) — Iowa State football coach Dan McCarney said Tuesday he feels good about the defensive starters on his 2005 team, but he has some concerns about offense.

"We're still trying to find our best five combination," McCarney said of the offensive line. "The competition is still going real strong."

McCarney said quarterback Bret Meyer, running back Stevie Hicks, right tackle Aaron Brant, left tackle Johannes Ebgers, and wide receiver Jon Davis have secured starting positions for the coming season, but a number of positions are up for grabs.

Sophomore Todd Blythe is expected to start at the other wide receiver position but is recuperating from knee surgery. Left tackle Kory Pence and center Seth Zehr are also projected starters on offense, but McCarney said Zehr has played left tackle, guard, and center.

McCarney also acknowledged he is unhappy with many of Iowa State's second-stringers. "We're going to keep the pressure on ... these guys to perform, to show us that we can have more twos to help us win," he said.

Junior Kyle Van Winkle, of Story City, will be the Cyclones' No. 2 quarterback, based on his performance in spring scrimmages. He played on the scout team last fall.

"You want to see those backup quarterbacks get out there in a game-type situation and perform and show us that we do have quality depth at quarterback," McCarney said.

A number of position changes have taken place during spring drills, including Austin Flynn's move from backup quarterback to wide receiver and Adam Carper's move from defensive back to linebacker. McCarney said Carper, a redshirt freshman from Clarinda, is one of the most improved players on the team.

"I think that linebacker position is going to be manned real well the next couple of years," McCarney said.

COLORADO UNIVERSITY

Colorado hires San Diego State AD

San Diego State Athletics Director Mike Bohn has agreed to return home to take the same post within Colorado's troubled department, the university announced Tuesday.

Bohn will be introduced as the replacement for Dick Tharp today.

The 44-year-old Boulder, Colo., native has a tremendous task, repairing the damage done by scandals within the football program that contributed to the departure of Tharp, Chancellor Richard Byrny, and university President Betsy Hoffman.

Bohn, who graduated from Boulder High School and whose mother still lives in Boulder, met with reporters in California on Monday to discuss the possibility that he would leave San Diego State, where he served as AD for about 18 months. He said he wasn't deterred by the problems in the Colorado athletics department.

"In these positions, you look for opportunity for a fit, and the opportunity to be in Boulder, my hometown, and be in the Big 12 and the BCS may never come up again," he said.

Bohn has already worked at Colorado's two other major Division I universities—as an assistant athletics director at Air Force in 1984-92 and as associate athletics director at Colorado State in 1995-98.

Bohn was Idaho's athletics director from 1998-2003 before leaving for San Diego State.

He also worked for the College Football Association in 1992-95, which was run by Chuck Neinas, the consultant Colorado hired to help with the search for Tharp's replacement.

WHY YOU SHOULD BE GLAD YOU ARE STILL IN COLLEGE
— by Nick Narragon

• You don't have to go to budget meetings.

• A business lunch to you is eating at a place of business, not actually conducting any.

• You can jump your skateboard off any floor you want because you are still under your parents' health insurance.

• It is expected of you to drink enough alcohol to sedate Snuffalupagus.

• You can even pass out cradling your Snuffalupagus doll.

• And you don't have to worry about how to spell Snuffalupagus.

• Your parents will still send you gift baskets when they realize you have been surviving on nothing but Fritos and Squirt.

• You get to spend all of that loan money on Frappuccinos and video games rather than pay it all back with your tips from delivering pizza.

• Your grandparents still have some mild respect for you.

• You don't have to worry about where your taxes are going.

quote of the day

“From time to time, you come across a case with unique — even bizarre — circumstances.”

— Nashville police spokesman Don Aaron, in describing a case in which a Nashville man was beaten to death after catching his wife's lover living in a closet in their home. The lover had been there around a month without the husband's knowledge.

horoscopes

Wednesday, April 13, 2005
— by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do something that you enjoy. Go shopping, take a short trip, or visit someone you haven't seen in some time. This is a great day to find love or to do something with that special person in your life.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't let anyone put words in your mouth, especially if it pertains to work and money. You may have to compromise a little to get what you want. If you decide to be stubborn, you can kiss any chance of advancement goodbye.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): It's two steps forward and three steps back today. Emotional matters will stop you from seeing things clearly. Trying to push an idea that is really ahead of its time will be futile.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Consider keeping things low-key today. If you try to persuade others to help, you will be put in your place quickly. This is not the time to take action but rather to formulate what you will do next.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Things are turning in your favor today, so don't skip a beat. Get yourself moving early, and prepare to make some crucial moves toward your future goals. Set up an appointment with someone you know has the power to help you move forward.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may not feel up to par today. Someone you least expect will cause you some grief. Stick to what you do best, and leave the rest for someone else. Strive to be more tolerant and less critical.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It's a new day, so consider taking on a new look. You will be charming and accommodating, and everyone will want to do things with you. The more you give, the more you can expect to receive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take the initiative, and do something that will help you feel better about your health and your financial situation. Reorganize your home so you have a suitable space to exercise or work on a creative project. It's up to you to make positive changes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Romantic encounters are evident if you get involved in a project or community event geared toward reform and helping others. Someone you have known for some time will have an idea for you regarding a personal matter.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't leave your responsibilities in the hands of others today. Get down to business, and follow matters through to the end. If you are hands-on today, you will make fabulous gains.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will have the energy and know-how to turn any idea you have into a work of art. Start a project that will ensure you will feel better about the way you look. The end result will raise your self-esteem.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Not everyone will be on your side. Be careful whom you trust. You will have to manipulate the situation if you don't want to suffer the consequences.
