WASHINGTON, D.C. — In the red, 30 issues on a bus didn't seem that long. The overnight ride from Iowa City to Washington, D.C., had practically been forgotten by the time 54 local activists rolled into the nation's Capital.

Crumpled and sleepy, the protesters arrived on Sept. 24 for the largest demonstration against the Iraq war since its beginning. More than 100,000 activists attended, all with their own stories about what led them to oppose a war in which more than 1,900 American troops have died.

One Iowa city resident gathering among the thousands of sign-carrying objective who rallied behind the White House was UI Assistant Professor Brand Grzybuk.

"The presence of that many people — literally — to the strength of the antiwar movement," the UI research assistant said.

What the Iowa City charter unloaded around 10:30 a.m., the city blocks surrounding the White House buzzed with performances artists and activists demanding George W. Bush's impeachment and U.S. withdrawal from Iraq.

Iowa City resident Mary Pat Rea­soner carried a sign in support of Cindy Sheehan, the antiwar mother who held a 36-day vigil outside the president's ranch in Crawford, Texas. Reasoner, who briefly met Sheehan over the weekend, decided to be an activist a year ago.

"I thought, 'What can I do?'" she said.

"If I don't do anything, than nothing will happen," Longtime activist the Rev. Jesse Jackson stood the stage with Sheehan before the afternoon march is led a message to President Bush, who was in Texas and Colo­rado, for the weekend, monitoring Hurricane Bill.

As the crowd chanted, "This is what democracy looks like," some protesters carried cardboard signs and waved them with fake American flags to represent soldiers killed in Iraq.

"We were 30 days ago protesting this golden war," said Ed Beckman, a Vietnam War veteran from New Bedford, N.Y. "I never dreamed I would be here for the same reason.

Iowa City student Elliott Campbell mounted an experimental bicycle bound for Colorado on Sept. 24, intent on making an 800-mile protest ex­perience in an abstract con­cept.

"It looks like a circus tent," he bellowed as he rode. "It's a funky little contemp­ration.

Campbell left Iowa City and has since ridden about 24 miles. He plans to ride a bike in a 25 mile run to downtown Denver. He then planned the last leg to Denver for the Inter­national Carbon Dis­pose Conference which began Sunday.

Cost, the number of parking spaces, and urban design will all be factors officials evaluate when choosing a design for the $100,000-square-foot on-campus recreation center.

Facilities Management, which will negotiate the proposed $55 million facility in making both vertical and horizontal building decisions, said Steve Buckman, the senior architect and project manager. The center will be built at the southwest corner of campus near Madison Streets, across from Haverling from the new Iowa Student Union.

Buckman said another con­sideration for the project was how the layout will match an urban design plan, which places emphasis on taller buildings because of the scarcity of land.

"We have a very non-expansive," said Harry Ostrander, the University's Assistant Services director. He estimated the project cost at $50 million to $10 million more than a horizon­tal building, because of additional stairwells and sup­ports above the entrance and eaves. Ostrander said Recreational Services supports the horizon­tal option, contending that it "fits better. We're not doing something spacelessly above the parks, it's an area was would be easily accessible.

UI graduate student Ellic Campbell mounted an experi­ment on a bicycle in an attempt to pay what he called "carbon costs" for Colorado on Sept. 24, intent on making an 800-mile protest ex­perience in an abstract con­cept.

Harkins secures grant for student research

Sue Hohn, D.O. (she/ih), said she is excited to secure a $2,000 grant from the Iowa Electronic Health Care Center, which will fund her student's research project.

Harkins, an assistant professor in the Department of Family Practice, said the grant will fund the research project of Mollie L. Stiles, a fourth-year medical student.

Harkins said the grant will be used to help fund the project, which will help with funding the project's expenses.

The free-zone areas would include offices, vending areas, and a wellness center accessible without a membership card. A vertical building would then focus on the third floor, Outsider said.

But Rod Lehnertz, the director of campus and facilities planning for Facilities Management, said choosing a design at this point is "premature.

"We are very early in the planning process and are still studying elements of the program," he wrote in an e-mail. "The consultants have and will continue to provide us information that will help to make informed decisions related to how the building best functions, how it looks and relates to the surrounding site, and what cost implications there are with the options to be considered."

David Greay, an assistant provost, also said the outer is still in the programming stage. Construction is more than a year away, he said.

"We're trying to find a solution that best matches the program we've putting together," he said.

"We have to consider things such as land and the extent of the site to make everything fit," he said. The center will be funded primarily with student fees. All students will be automatic members but will pay a fee every semester to use the facility.

Renewable Energy

The people of Iowa City have a clear outlook on energy. By participating in MidAmerican Energy's many energy efficiency programs in 2004, you reduced carbon monoxide emissions in an amount equivalent to taking 7,219 automobiles off our roads. You also wanted a source of renewable energy, and at MidAmerican Energy, we responded by building 207 wind turbines right here in Iowa. In September, we'll complete construction of an additional 80 wind turbines in Iowa and will have the capacity to power 100,000 homes with renewable energy.

Not so pretty in Kinnick pink

BY DANNY VALENTINE

UI President David Skorton has launched a university investigation into threats made against a UI adjutant law lecturer who criticized painting the visitor's locker rooms at Kinnick Stadium pink vs. "normal" and "harmless." Former football coach Hayden Fry first painted the locker rooms pink during his tenure at Iowa as a tactic designed to relax and calm opponents before a Hawkeye home game.

During the Kinnick renovations, the locker rooms were repainted pink — "tennorner" pink is the exact — to commemorate Fry's time as coach. The visitor's locker rooms are now draped in the new-pink shade. But UI adjutant law lecturer Erin Buzuvis condemned the painting of the locker rooms in her blog. Since then, she has received death threats, and the comments on her weblog entry that criticized the pink locker rooms numbered 734.

Buzuvis instantly sorted the directions the threat. "It is so deeply offensive and completely inconceivable that a sexual public discussion about the pink locker rooms at Kinnick Stadium has been degraded by threats of violence," she said in a statement.

A proposed rewrite of the city’s zoning code — the first in more than 20 years — has become a point of contention between city officials and some developers.

The city argues that under the proposed rewrite, allowable house sizes would be reduced, thereby raising the cost of building a house. Some groups, as well as other interested Iowa City citizens, will have the opportunity to better understand the code during tonight’s City Council work session, in which the proposal will be discussed.

Last revisions in 1984, the city council set the goal of making more high-density housing areas available. Under the proposed rewrite, builders would like to create high-density housing areas without undergoing extra paperwork or city approval to build, meaning that more housing could be built within the existing zoning code regulations. The revisions, made as part of the city’s comprehensive plan, would also stipulate that the city’s minimum lot sizes be increased.

In the past, many zoning issues have run through the city council, and some have been controversial. But this could be the first code rewrite in Iowa City since then.

The proposal, which was first introduced by City Councilor Connie Richey at a city council meeting in March, is aimed at making the city achieve the goals set out in its comprehensive plan, said Karen Houser, a Houser,

Karen Houser, an associate city planner. Under the proposed rewrite, the city could allow more high-density housing areas.
DIFFERENTIAL TUITION: WHO PAYS?

The Iowa State Board of Regents are again considering ways to bring university incomes in line with expectations— including different forms of variation in tuition rates. Should tuition be based on a student’s year in school? Editorials writers contest this concept's wisdom.

STUDENTS SHOULD PAY MORE

Iowa students are being asked to pay higher tuition. This plan was announced last week by President James Eaves-Johnson. The plan proposes a four-year sliding scale, where juniors and seniors pay more than freshmen and sophomores. The reasoning behind this plan is to increase revenue for the university, which is facing a budget shortfall due to decreased state funding. The plan would also provide a financial incentive for students to graduate in four years, as they would pay less tuition.

THE PROS

1. Increased Revenue: The plan would generate more revenue for the university, which is facing a budget shortfall.
2. Motivates Graduation: Students who pay more tuition are more likely to graduate in four years, which would reduce the number of students who drop out.
3. Incentive: The plan would provide an incentive for students to graduate in four years, as they would pay less tuition.

THE CONS

1. Inequity: The plan would be unfair to students who are unable to afford higher tuition.
2. Decreased Enrollment: The plan would decrease enrollment, as some students may choose to attend other institutions with lower tuition.
3. Increased Costs: The plan would increase costs for the university, as it would have to invest more in marketing and recruiting.

THE NEXT STEPS

The plan will be discussed at a meeting of the TAMU System Board of Regents. The decision will be made based on the feedback received from the public and students.

Coryne Bride gloriously rises from a dead art form — stop motion animation — to join the ranks of Director Tim Burton's best work (Big Fish, 2003; Ed Wood, 1994; and the Batman films, 1989, 1992). After his eight, disappointing adaptation of Charlie and the Chocolate Factory this summer, his newest sensual non-narrative entity returns to plush form. The film is loosely based on the monsters "Corpse Bride" Sophie, that originated in 2005's graphic novel. As the story goes, anti-social, emo-style 12-year-old Sophie (voiced by Emily Watson) falls in love with a seemingly ordinary boy (voiced by Johnny Depp, star of the Pirates of the Caribbean). He is, of course, a corpse, just returned to life by his late grandmother. Sophie marries him out of love, not understanding the full extent of his deal.

Field hockey drops Big Ten opener

The 10th-ranked Iowa field hockey team improved to 3-0 in the Big Ten and 1-0 in the rankings with a 28-2 win over Indiana on Sept. 23 at the outdoor rink in Iowa City.

"It was a great win," said Iowa head coach Lisa Cellucci. "We were able to control the game from the start and put the pressure on Indiana. The team played well in all areas of the game, and it was a great way to start the season."

Men’s harriers finish third

The Hawkeyes finished third at the Western Flight Conference Meet on Saturday, Nov. 3. The meet was held at the University of Illinois in Champaign, Ill. The Hawkeyes finished with a total of 215 points, placing them behind Wisconsin and Ohio State.

“Overall, we’re really happy with our third place finish,” said head coach Steve Cocco. “Our men’s team had a solid performance, and the women’s team did an excellent job as well.”

Women’s meet

The women’s team also performed well, finishing in fourth place with 223 points. Freshman runner Emily Ferrick led the team, finishing second in the 6,000-meter race with a time of 20:43.58.

“Emily had a great race today,” said coach Cocco. “She ran with a lot of determination and set a personal record. We’re proud of her.”

Freshman runner Sam Ziebell also had a strong performance, finishing third in the 5,000-meter race with a time of 16:48.92.

The Hawkeyes will next compete in the Big Ten championships on November 10, 2018, at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

Soccer fights back, ties two

Iowa’s Kelyn Quinn kicks the ball away from Northwestern’s Danner Church on Sunday afternoon at the Iowa Soccer Complex. The Hawkeyes fell the game, 2-2, with 22nd-ranked Northwestern in two overtime periods.

By Kelyn Quinn

Kelyn Quinn has seen the Iowa women’s soccer team at its absolute worst. That’s why Thursday’s 2-2 double-overtime tie with No. 23 Northwestern was as thrilling as the senior forward from Highland Ridge Club.

“It was really big for us,” she said. “I think we have more confidence right now than we have had in the past few seasons.”

The game started in typical Iowa State fashion—an 18th-minute goal by the Wildcats. The Hawkeyes have scored on a free kick from 35 yards out. The ball hit the crossbar and rebounded down off the back of Iowa goalkeeper Karri Macihack.

“It was a tough shot for us,” Macihack, who was replacing the injured Lindsay Bohl, “I never want to let that happen again, I should have saved it.”

Northwestern (8-3-1) struck again in the 35th minute off of a mishandled cross by Macihack. The ball slipped through her gloves and trickled directly to Alana Lopes, who easily finished the play and gave Northwestern the two-goal advantage.

“After the first goal, I really needed to regroup my confidence,” she said. “I didn’t really know what to do. I just wanted to go.”

Kelyn Quinn set the tone for the Hawkeyes early on.

Iowa’s Kelyn Quinn scores her first goal of the season against Northwestern on Sunday afternoon at the Iowa Soccer Complex.

With just over 12 minutes on the clock, Quinn headed the ball into the goal for the Hawkeyes. In the 35th minute, Quinn also scored the second goal for the Hawkeyes.

“I was a little lucky on that one,” Quinn said. “But I’m really happy with the way we played today.”

The Hawkeyes’ final goal came from a penalty kick, which was awarded to Quinn after she was fouled in the box. She then converted the shot to tie the game.

“It was a great feeling to score the equalizing goal,” Quinn said. “I’m really happy with the way we played today.”

Iowa Hawkeyes quarterback Drew Tate completed 22-of-39 passes, although 11 came in the final quarter.

Hawkeye running back Ben Braxton was the Buckeyes' second leading rushing threat. He finished with 22 yards.

Iowa defensive lineman Matt Keal (left) tackles while trying catch Ohio State quarterback Troy Smith during the first half of play on Sept. 24 in Columbus. Smith was the Buckeyes' second leading rushing threat and one touch away from avenging last year's loss.

Troy Smith and the Buckeyes run one Hawkeye running back and quarterback into the Iowa State defense.

The Hawkeyes are now 2-2; they will play Illinois next.

THUMBS UP THUMBS DOWN
- Iowa's kicking units continue to be impressive. Punter Mike Fenstermaker enjoyed his game with both long punts and excellent hang times, which allowed the kickers to score the kicks. Kyle Schlicher continues to be steady; he has accounted for all nine of Iowa's points on the road.

- The Hawkeyes' defensive play on both sides of the ball has failed to get it. The Hawkeyes can run for minus-9 yards, and they were turned to nowhere for much of the game. Ohio State running attack, which had struggled heading into the game, gave both Smith and Peterson more than 100 yards.

LOOK AHEAD
- Illinois coach Ron Zook has brought enthusiasm to a moribund program, but it might have worn off. The team started 2-0, but it has lost in consecutive weeks to ranked foes California and Michigan State. Since holding a 17-7 halftime lead at Cal, the Illini have been outscored 89-17. The Illini defense is giving up 36.2 points per contest.

- Illinois is coming off a 56-14 rout of Ohio State. The Spartans threw for seven touchdowns — tying Iowa's Big Ten record — and rolled up 705 yards of total offense in the Champaign blowout. The 61 points are the most an Illinois opponent has scored in Memorial Stadium.
