HAWKEYE PINK — IT'S THE NEW BLACK

Ben Roberts/The Daily Iowan

Hawkeye fan Chris Hotchkiss (right) of Iowa City chants "Keep it pink" while fellow locker-room supporters Rob Kishiue-Koral (left) of North Liberty and Matthew O'Brien of Cedar Rapids hold up a banner during the second half of the 35-7 Homecoming win for the Hawkeyes. Fans wore pink to Saturday's Homecoming game against Illinois to show their support for keeping the visitor's locker room at Kinnick Stadium painted pink. UI adjunct law lecturer Erin Buzuvis voiced concerns over the locker room's hue, labeling it "sexist" and "homophobic." Neither Buzuvis or Jill Gauldin, a UI associated professor of law who supported Buzuvis, returned phone calls on Sunday evening asking for their opinion on the students who wore pink to the game. Buzuvis did e-mail a response of no comment.

STUTTERING LAWSUIT

Suit given new life

BY JANE SLUSARK
THE DAILY IOWAN

In a 4-3 vote, the Iowa Supreme Court revitalized a multimillion dollar, five-plaintiff civil suit against the state for a 1939 UI research project that psychologically pressured a group of children to begin stuttering.

Denying the state's motion to dismiss the case based on governmental immunity, the court ruled the two victims and three deceased victims' representatives can sue for lifelong suffering caused by the experiment.

GAME-DAY HYGIENE

IT COMES OUT IN THE WASH

BY DANNY VALENTINE

THE DAILY IOWAN

You pee. You flush. You zip. You wash your hands.

Well, maybe not the last part. A nationwide study found that men are significantly less hygienic than women when it comes to washing up after relieving themselves. And a Daily Iowan investigation discovered that Hawkeye fans were no exception.

During the Oct. 1 Homecoming football game, the DI tallied the fans who lathered with soap and water and those who didn't. Situated in the newly built restrooms at the southwest end of the stadium, DI reporters discovered that 62 percent of males failed to wash their hands, while only 8 percent of females fell into the same category.

Nationally, the numbers mirror the Kinnick Stadium investigation. A study by the American Society of Microbiology found that 92 percent of women make a sink stop, but only 64 percent of men do.

The reasons among men for not washing ranged from their distance from the sink to believing their hands didn't get dirty.

And maybe because they downed a few too many beers during tailgating. "Cause I'm drunk. I don't wash

Drunk or not, the national study shows that cleanliness is optional for men.

Within seconds of entering the bathrooms and strategically setting up shop next to a row of urinals and sinks, three males — each decked out in what has now become Hawkeye

Pink — exited without even so much as looking at the faucets.

They were the first three out of 160 that evidently deemed the step unnecessary.

"I think that's gross," said UI sophomore Christine Kenner after scrubbing. "I wash my hands every time I use a public restroom."

Most women saw no excuse for not

DID NOT WASH HANDS

Information collected from an Oct. 1 Daily Iowan investigation in the restrooms at Kinnick Stadium. The numbers are not scientifically rigorous — but it is still interesting.

- Males who didn't wash their hands during the first quarter of the football game — 160/257; 62.3 percent
- Females who didn't wash their hands during halftime of the football game — 6/82; 7.3 percent

Reasons given at Kinnick Stadium for not soaping up:

- "Because I'm watching the game."

being clean. Amid the sounds of flushing toilets and stall doors being slammed was the flow of water pulsating on and off from the five faucets in the women's restroom — a sound foreign in the men's bathroom.

Proper technique includes washing for 20 seconds using soap and warm water, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention website. And don't neglect the fingernails.

"Why would you not wash your hands? There are plenty of sinks," said UI junior Ashley Nation, who was one of 76 women to wash her hands with soap and water.

Robbers hit area

BY MARK BOSWORTH
THE DAILY IOWAN

Only two hours and less than three miles apart, two victims early Sunday morning came face-to-face with a band of robbers who demanded cash and personal items while brandishing weapons and threatening violence.

A police official said on Sunday that he was not sure if Iowa City police believed the two incidents — one on East Fairchild Street and the other near Mercer Park — were connected to each other or to the robbery of a convenience store early last week.

According to police reports:

The first of the two Sunday encounters occurred around 1:10 a.m. in the 1600 block of Bradford Drive. After a group of males approached an unidentified male victim in an area of Mercer Park, one of the group members showed a handgun and demand-

Baker knows City Council

BY ELAINE FABIAN THE DAILY IOWAN

After 18 hours of driving in two days to publicize his latest novel, Larry Baker sat rubbing his blood-shot eyes in a local coffee shop, forcing himself to stay away from his beckoning bed for at least one more hour for an interview.

Larry Baker candidate

Baker — already a teacher, author, husband, and father — wants to re-add one more role in his life: Iowa City city councilor.

The 58-year-old is no stranger to multitasking.

Unfazed about the time commitment required of a councilor, the seasoned local politician juggled a term on the council with writing a novel and teaching classes at Kirkwood Community College.

"In addition, my two kids were still at home then," Baker, who is vying for an at-large council seat, said. They "are now away at college, so I actually have more free time."

With that extra time, he hopes to use his expertise and experience — especially the two previous terms in the past 20 years he has spent as a city councilor — to catapult him back into the council chambers.

He earned his doctorate degree in English from the UI in 1981, and he was first elected to the council two years later.

"When he was on the council before, he seemed quite responsive to citizens' concerns," said John Menninger, an Iowa City resident and one of Baker's longtime supporters.

Shortly after his first term as councilor, Baker left Iowa City for Florida. He returned in 1991, however, to send his son and daughter to better schools.

In 1993, Baker was back on the council. "He has a good sense of humor," said current Iowa City Mayor Ernie Lehman, who served on the council with Baker during his second term.

CITY COUNCIL CANDIDATE LARRY BAKER

- Supports implementing the 21-ordinance
• Supports further exploration on the possibility of public power
• Supports assisted housing
• Helped to push through the enabling legislation on historic preservation, environmental protection, and public art
• Supports student recruitment for boards and commissions

"He is an interesting fellow. He loved to discuss things."

During his second term, Baker said he was the first councilor to actively recruit students for city boards and commissions. He also said he was the only councilor to vote in favor of every assisted housing project that was brought before the council.

When he lost his bid for reelection in 1997, Baker realized it was for the best.

"There is something to be said for stepping back from the issues," he said.

Involved in politics since he was 17, Baker said his talents as an author and teacher have prepared him for the council position by sharpening his communication skills so he is better able to interact with constituents.

Baker first published the novel The Flamingo Rising and then wrote Athens, America — a political story of a small town inspired by Iowa City.

Writing short stories and two books also helped Baker, he said, because it honed his ability to create a narrative.

"Politics is also a narrative," he said. "It is a story you want people to believe and understand."

Baker lives with his wife, UI academic adviser Ginger Russell, with whom he has adopted two children from Korea. Baker also has a 38-year-old son from a former marriage who lives in Seattle.

Correia brings active stance

BY SUSAN ELGIN THE DAILY IOWAN

It was Amy Correia's interest in social work that first brought her to Iowa City.

Amy Correia candidate

It was a job and the "livability of the city" that made her stay.

In her 20 years in Iowa City, Correia — an at-large candidate for the Iowa City City Council — has taken up a variety of roles, including college student, government and university employee, volunteer, and activist.

"I bring different strengths to the pool of candidates," said the 37-year-old. "I have a broad perspective of policy issues."

While at the UI, the Naperville, Ill., native was a member of Sigma Kappa, a now-inactive sorority, a volunteer at Mercy Hospital, and a member of the Social Work Student Organization.

Correia — the first person in her family to graduate from a four-year college — earned a job with the Neighborhood Centers of Johnson County soon after receiving her undergraduate degree in 1989.

The self-described "public-policy activist" and engaged citizen — she has been registered to vote in Iowa City since 1986 and has consistently voted in elections, records show — received her master's degree in social work in 1998.

"I feel I can relate to most people in the community because of my breadth of experiences, which includes students, because I was once a student here," she said. "Iowa City has a good mix of culture, education, and recreation."

A proponent of affordable housing, she served on the Iowa City Housing and Community Development Commission, on which she helped secure funds for projects, such as Longfellow Place and the Shelter House.

In her leadership role as commission chairwoman, Correia led meetings and discussions and presented the board's recommendations to the council.

"Amy was hard-working, organized, tackled tough issues head-on, and listened to all sides of an issue to develop consensus with people," said Mark Edwards, who was a member on the commission with Correia.

Correia also volunteers at the Engert Theatre and is a member of the Johnson County Democratic Party, which has endorsed her for the council elections.

"Amy is a great Democratic activist," said party Chairwoman Sarah Swisher.

Through observations and meetings with current city councilors, Correia said she believed the sitting council is not as proactive as it should be — citing the recent Wal-Mart controversy as an example of when councilors were too reactive.

If Correia is elected this November, she will work with Councilor Ross Wilburn, to whom she used to be married. But Correia said she didn't feel their previous history would pose any problems because she and Wilburn maintain a "respectful relationship."

In her free time, Correia likes to walk her two dogs, Buddy and Raven, watch her daughters play softball, read books by Amy Tan, and garden. Correia lives with her daughters, Jael and Alex, and partner Trish.

State, UI officials dedicate Adler Building

BY COLIN BURKE
THE DAILY IOWAN

Under a white tent in front of the Main Library on Sept. 30, top UI and state officials gathered with faculty, students, and alumni to dedicate the new Philip Adler Journalism and Mass Communication Building.

"A new home for the School of Journalism and Mass Communication was a very high priority for the college for a long time," said Linda Maxson, the dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. The school moved from Seashore Hall in January.

The building was named in appreciation of a $3 million gift from Betty Schermer, a daughter of Philip Adler, and her husband, Lloyd Schermer of Aspen, Colo. Adler had served in various positions at the UI, such as chairman of the UI Foundation Board of Directors and editor of The Daily Iowan.

"It is a joy to dedicate it in his name," Betty Schermer said, adding one of the core values in her family is philanthropy.

The 65,500-square-foot facility is home to the journalism school, the cinema/comparative literature department, and The Daily Iowan, offering students advanced technologies, such as a broadcast journalism lab.

"Electronic media is the campfire of the 21st century," said Iowa first lady Christie Vilsack, a journalism-school alumna. "It's how we're going to tell our stories."

Maxson said the building dedication was "one of the top thrills of my life."

"It's really quite exciting, seeing the realization of all that hard work," she said at the ceremony.

UI President David Skorton also spoke, emphasizing the importance of a free press to democracy.

Bonnie Brennen, the vice provost for faculty affairs at Temple University, who earned a Ph.D. from the journalism school in 1993, spoke at a seminar Sept. 30 called "Journalism Education at a Crossroads."

"It's a new chapter in the history of the school," she said. While studying at the UI, she said, she always had the sense the school was kind of a second-class citizen, but, with the new school, it doesn't feel that way.

Fire causes $45,000 in damages

An early morning structure fire at 340 Highland Ave. caused an estimated $45,000 in damage Sunday.

According to a press release, the Iowa City Fire Department was dispatched to the building at 3:20 a.m. Crews saw smoke coming from the smoke stack and the eaves of the building.

The fire was in the south end of the building, the press release said. Frantz Construction occupied the largest portion of the commercial building, which was built for numerous occupants.

After forcing the south end doors open, crews saw the fire was confined to a work bench area directly inside the door, a spray booth, the loft above the spray booth, and a 1994 Ford Club Wagon van.

According to the press release, firefighters ventilated the building by opening the rest of the doors.

MidAmerican Energy cut electrical power to the building, and the fire was under control by 3:40 a.m. According to the press release, officials remained on the scene for around two hours; no civilians or firefighters were injured.

Man charged with harassment

Iowa City police officers arrested a local man on Sunday after receiving reports that he was armed and making threats in a bar.

Around 1:18 a.m., officers responded to the Speakeasy, 171 Highway 1 W., and charged Jerald Sims, 28, 310 Cherokee Trail, with second-degree harassment.

According to police reports, officers found Sims inside the establishment armed with an air gun, modeled after a .357 caliber handgun, which he had tucked into his waistband.

Sims allegedly had been making threats about harming an unidentified woman. Police reports allege that Sims told the woman that he would blow her head off.

The 28-year-old allegedly had 17 rounds of .38-caliber ammunition in his possession.

Second-degree harassment is a serious misdemeanor punishable by up to a year in prison and a $1,500 fine.

Man pleads guilty to burning car

An Atalissa man has pleaded guilty to a reckless use of fire charge for attempting to ignite his car last June.

Max Lowell Middleton, 57, entered a guilty plea on Sept. 22 in exchange for a $500 fine.

After walking out of the Iowa City American Legion, 3016 Muscatine Ave., on June 22, Middleton was unable to start his 2002 PT Cruiser. He proceeded to beat the car, break its windows, and light a bottle filled with an inflammable liquid on its front seat, according to court records.

Iowa City police said a witness identified Middleton as the man who started the fire in the parking lot.

The plea agreement allows Middleton to avoid a possible one-year jail sentence and a $1,500 fine.

Middleton's past criminal record includes assault, theft, operating while intoxicated, and hit-and-run charges.

Trial in Wal-Mart suit delayed

Community activist Gary Sanders, the head of the Iowa City Stop Wal-Mart Committee, will not go to trial Oct. 12 as originally planned in his battle against city officials to halt the construction of a Wal-Mart Supercenter.

Sanders, who accused the Iowa City Council of illegally allowing the rezoning of then-city property, was granted the trial-date delay at a Sept. 30 hearing, because he and attorney Wally Taylor requested "more time to discover and gather testimony and evidence."

The new trial date has not been scheduled yet.

Sanders asserted at the hearing that Wal-Mart influenced the City Council to rezone the 54 acres by later purchasing it for $3 million. He said his team intends to gather more evidence to support its stance, while using the testimony of citizens who feel the Wal-Mart corporation is damaging to Iowa City and small-town America.

Sarah Holecek, first assistant city attorney, said she has evidence that refutes Wal-Mart's alleged detrimental effect on small communities.

Man to plead guilty in injured infant case

A Coralville man accused of shaking a 2½-month-old infant will plead guilty at an Oct. 5 hearing.

Edwin Paredes, 23, was charged with child endangerment causing serious injury for allegedly shaking a baby boy who was under his care, resulting in a cerebral hemorrhage and brain damage.

Coralville police said they were called to the residence, 2003 20th Ave. Place, on April 24 to respond to an unresponsive infant who was not eating. The baby boy was later diagnosed with the type of brain bleeding common in children who have been shaken or dropped, according to police records.

The infant was in a coma, police reports said, and a doctor predicted he would suffer neurological impairment.

Paredes allegedly admitted to police that he grabbed the infant around the chest and rapidly shook him, so his head moved back and forth repeatedly. Court records indicate the child also suffered two broken ribs.

Couple plead guilty to child endangerment

A Coralville couple charged with smoking marijuana while their children ran near traffic in May each pleaded guilty to child endangerment last week.

Lori Nodel, 23, and Robert Nodel, 26, were arrested on May 9 after their 2-year old daughter was found running near the intersection of 22nd Avenue and 10th Street in Coralville, according to police records.

An officer who witnessed the toddler in traffic later returned her to the Nodel's home. Both Robert Nodel and Lori Nodel, 2119 10th Street Place, admitted to smoking that morning and marijuana was turned over to authorities, records said.

Tests performed on their toddler's hair revealed she was exposed to the marijuana, according to the criminal complaint.

Robert Nodel was sentenced to 90 days in jail, with credit given for time served and 88 days suspended. He was also placed on self-supervised probation for one year and fined $500, which was also suspended.

Lori Nodel's sentencing is set for Nov. 17 at the Johnson County Courthouse.

Academic gap seen among haves, have-nots

'Kids coming from poverty have a tougher time ... Those kids don't have the same opportunities, so they struggle quite a bit.'

— Perry Ross, director of instruction

BY ERIKA BINEGAR
THE DAILY IOWAN

While Iowa City School District students are more proficient in reading when compared with other Iowa students, an achievement gap exists among different ethnicities and socioeconomic status.

Director of Instruction Perry Ross said the size of the gap varies with grade level and subject. The achievement gap has been an on-going struggle, he said, and the district is increasing its efforts to find solutions, adding that the district-wide emphasis on reading in elementary, junior high, and high schools could help.

"We think reading is a key to learning," he said.

He said student achievement varies for many reasons, including poverty.

"Kids coming from poverty have a tougher time," he said. "Those kids don't have the same opportunities, so they struggle quite a bit."

Jan Leff, a School Board member, said another reason for the gap could be the large number of transient students within the district who do not have the continuity of learning with one teacher for an entire school year. For example, she said, more than 50 percent of students who began the 2004-05 school year at Twain Elementary, 1355 DeForest Ave., did not finish the year there.

"If students stay with us over time, they will be successful," Leff said.

Gregg Shultz, the principal of Northwest Junior High, 1507 Eighth St. in Coralville, said the school deals with the achievement gap on a daily basis.

"It's always a concern to us when one group of students performs less well than others," he said.

The district works with government agencies to help students who have impoverished backgrounds, he said. A new federal grant provides tutoring and family counseling for approximately 50 families in the district, he said.

Mentors will tutor students and help them understand the importance of school and explore their interests, skills, and strengths, said Joan Vandenberg, the district's youth and family-development coordinator.

Other efforts at individual schools include tutoring, early childhood development programs, alternative educational programs, training for teachers, and family resource centers. Vandenberg said eight elementary schools in the district have family resource centers, which address the issue of poverty and encourage parents to be more involved in their students' learning.

The Iowa 21st Century Community Learning Centers Program, which is at three elementary schools, extends the school day and year for students, Vandenberg said. The program provides support to improve academic and social skills and opportunities for youth development.

Leff said smaller class sizes and more one-on-one teacher attention would be an effective option if the district had more money.

"I think the one thing that would help even more would be to have more funding, but I don't think that's likely," she said.

Despite the numerous efforts to close the achievement gap between students in the district, the difference remains from year to year.

"I think it's impossible to completely close the gap," Ross said. "But we will forever be trying."

U.S. sweeps in Iraq not a solution

BY ANTONIO CASTANEDA
ASSOCIATED PRESS

HADITHA, Iraq — Periodic U.S. offensives across Iraq's huge western region aim to keep insurgents on the run. But stamping them out completely is another matter: Once the assault ends, the militants usually come back.

Overstretched American forces can't keep a permanent presence in the swath of territory leading to the Syrian border — an area the size of West Virginia — and too few Iraqi forces are on the ground to hold the towns.

The latest operation, launched on Oct. 1 when 1,000 troops, mostly Marines, stormed the village of Sadah near the Syrian border, could end the same way several other offensives have since this spring — with partial control of a spot for only a limited period of time.

The problem, the Marines say, is the lack of Iraqi troops or soldiers to maintain control once U.S. troops have swept through, searching block-by-block for suspects.

"We do maintenance work up and down here ... We just keep sweeping the trash back to Syria," Col. Stephen W. Davis, who commands Marine operations in western Anbar province, said in a recent interview.

Now, with open talk by the top U.S. commander in Iraq of a possible staged American withdrawal next year, the question of the sweeps' effectiveness has become more urgent.

This area could — if substantial Iraqi forces are not added or if U.S. forces are trimmed during a pullout — foretell a future where Sunni tribes with ties to the insurgency rule large parts of Iraq.

Since the U.S.-led invasion in March 2003, successive Iraqi governments have wielded little influence over this long river valley through which foreign militants are thought to pass.

Marines say the key to turning the tide is the introduction of troops — particularly Iraqis — who can remain longer. An example of the effect came when two companies of Iraqi soldiers and Marine outposts were recently installed inside the Anbar town of Hit. Commanders said they received more information from local people after they gained confidence that the Marines were staying and could follow up tips.

"The key is to get more Iraqi troops out there, who everyone says are coming," Gunnery Sgt. Ralph Perrine, an operations chief in 3rd Battalion, 25th Regiment, from Brunswick, Ohio, said. "We need to stop treating them like kids, and train them, and get them protecting their own country."

But just this week Gen. George Casey, the top U.S. commander in Iraq, said only one Iraqi army battalion was prepared to fight on its own, down from a previous U.S. estimate that three were ready. Marines say this area needs hundreds, if not thousands, more Iraqi troops.

Despite that assessment, President Bush said Saturday he was encouraged by the increasing size and capability of the Iraqi security forces.

"All Americans can have confidence in the military commanders who are leading the effort in Iraq and in the troops under their command," Bush said in upbeat remarks that appeared part of a renewed push to win support for the war effort from an increasingly reluctant American public.

In the latest offensive, known as Operation Iron Fist, which was extended to two other towns on Sunday, U.S. troops were largely fighting by themselves without a significant number of Iraqi troops.

At least 21 militants have been killed in the operation so far, the military said Sunday. Sadah appeared calm, suggesting most gunmen had left, but the military reported fighting on the outskirts of the village and a nearby town. There have been no U.S. casualties, the military said.

The region — at the point where the Euphrates River begins snaking through western Iraq from Syria — contains a string of troubled riverside towns and cities, slicing through hundreds of miles of bare desert to Baghdad. Tribal or family ties also serve as protection for some insurgents here.

Commanders acknowledge their job is not to control or rebuild these towns but instead to periodically rush in to capture or kill any insurgents they can find and keep the rest off-balance and unable to establish overt bases.

Hundreds of insurgents have been killed, and even more have been captured in two previous offensives in recent months, Marines say, but the operations have taken a toll on U.S. forces as well. The 3rd Battalion, 25th Regiment suffered 48 deaths during its seven-month tour before beginning to demobilize back to the United States.

The U.S. command, meanwhile, has focused the bulk of its more permanent resources on securing troubled cities closer to Baghdad, like Fallujah and Ramadi.

Video shows carnage in Bali bombing

Attacks blamed on two of South Asia's most-wanted members of group Al Qaeda

BY EN-LAI YEOP
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALI, Indonesia — He wears a black T-shirt as he calmly enters the packed Bali restaurant and strolls by tourists sipping drinks and chatting at candlelit tables. He clutches his backpack, jiggles it a bit, and then disappears behind a pole.

Seconds later, there's a big bang, followed by a bright flash, gusts of black smoke, and terrified screams.

The chilling scene at the Raja café in Kuta district, captured by a tourist's video camera, was being reviewed Sunday by police investigating the attack and two other near-simultaneous bombings the day before that killed 26 people and wounded 101 on this popular Indonesian tropical getaway.

The video — obtained by Associated Press Television News — also shows chaotic post-blast images as the camera-wielding tourist flees to the street, where panicked people in tank tops and shorts mill around in confusion.

Other evidence included the bombers' body parts, said Maj. Gen. Ansyad Mbai, a top Indonesian anti-terror official. All three bombers were believed to be wearing belts of explosives.

"All that is left is their head and feet," Mbai said. "By the evidence, we can conclude the bombers were carrying the explosives around their waists."

The attacks apparently were planned by Southeast Asia's two most-wanted men, who are believed to be connected to an Al Qaeda-linked group, Mbai said.

The alleged masterminds were believed to be Azahari bin Husin and Noordin Mohamed Top, both Malaysians who fled to Indonesia after a crackdown on militants following the 9/11 attacks, officials said.

The masterminds were not among the suspected bombers.

President Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono warned that terrorists could be planning more strikes in the world's most populous Muslim nation as Jakarta's police chief put the capital on top alert, with two-thirds of its police force on standby.

"The terrorists are still looking for soft targets," Yudhoyono said at a news conference after viewing the devastation.

Western and Indonesian intelligence agencies have warned repeatedly that Jemaah Islamiyah was plotting more attacks despite a string of arrests.

Last month, Yudhoyono said the extremist network might strike Jakarta during September or October. He explained Oct. 1 that his warning was based on intelligence that the terrorists had already prepared the explosives.

There were no claims of responsibility for the Oct. 1 coordinated attacks on two packed seafood cafés in the Jimbaran beach resort and the Raja Café noodle and steakhouse in the bustling tourist center of Kuta.

Suspicion for the blasts fell on the Southeast Asian terrorist group Jemaah Islamiyah, which wants to establish an Islamic state across Southeast Asia and has been linked to Osama bin Laden's terrorist network.

Jemaah Islamiyah has been blamed for the 2002 Bali nightclub bombings that killed 202 people, mostly foreigners, and subsequent attacks on the J.W. Marriott hotel and the Australian Embassy that killed 22. The Oct. 1 blasts occurred nearly three years to the day of the 2002 bombings, which also were in Kuta.

Scores of Jemaah Islamiyah suspects have been arrested in Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, the Philippines, and Thailand since 2002, leading some officials to say the group's leadership has been crippled. But analysts say the group appears to have taken on a different form, working with recruits from other organizations or groups.

"The JI is the only group with the intention and capability to mount an attack on Bali on such a coordinated level," said Singapore-based expert Rohan Gunaratna of the Institute of Defense and Strategic Studies.

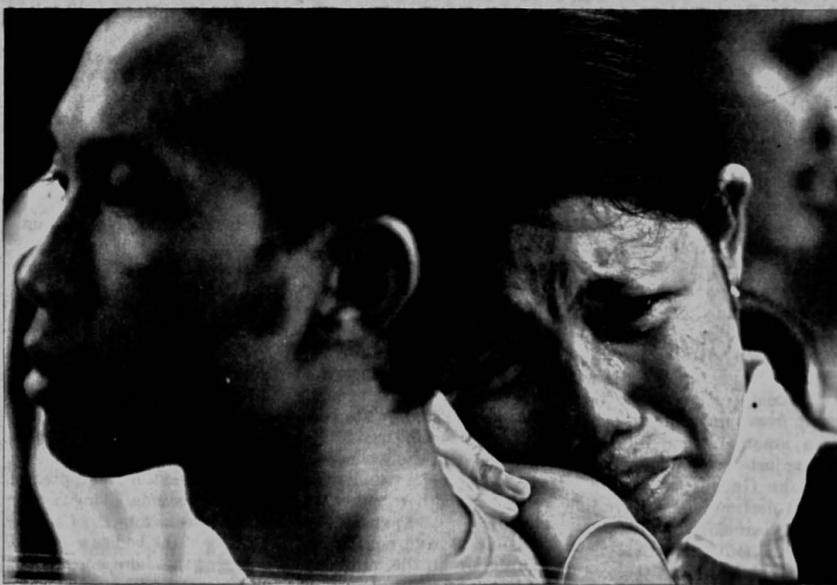

As in 2002, the bombings took place on the busiest night of the week, just as crowds swelled.

The head waiter at the Menega Café in Jimbaran said the bomb went off at his beachside restaurant between the tables of two large dinner parties sitting in the sand. Most of the 120 diners at the restaurant were Indonesian, he said.

"Everyone started screaming, 'Allah! Allah! Help,'" said Wayan Subagia, 23, who suffered leg injuries. "One woman rushed to pick up her child, but the little girl was already dead."

Another blast occurred at the nearby Nyoman seafood restaurant.

On Sunday, Yudhoyono visited Sanglah Hospital, near the island's capital city, Denpasar, where dozens of people, most of them Indonesian, waited in tears for news of friends and relatives missing since the attacks. Several coffins were carried out. One was for a child.

Ed Wray/Associated Press

A woman weeps on Sunday after putting a relative in a coffin at a temporary morgue set up for victims of the Oct. 1 bomb attacks in Bali, Indonesia. Suicide bombers carried out attacks on three crowded restaurants on Indonesia's resort island of Bali, killing at least 25 people and wounding more than a 100, a top anti-terror official said Sunday.

The dead included 12 Indonesians, an Australian, and a Japanese man. Officials were trying to identify the nationalities of the other corpses in the morgue, a hospital statement said.

Bobby Nugroho, an Indonesian whose mother and father were killed, went to collect his parents' remains at the hospital's morgue.

"A witness said that my father was sitting, facing the beach when a man opened his jacket and pulled the trigger in front of him," said Nugroho, a Jakarta-based reporter in his late 20s who works for the Japanese newspaper Nihon Keizai Shimbun.

It was unclear whether the death toll included the three suspected bombers.

The 101 wounded included 49 Indonesians, 17 Australians, six Americans, six Koreans, and four Japanese, officials said.

Associated Press reporters Gillian Wong and Meraliah Foley contributed to this report.

Boat founders; 20 dead

BY CHRIS CAROLA
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAKE GEORGE, N.Y. — A glass-enclosed boat carrying senior citizens on a cruise overturned Sunday on a calm, chilly lake in upstate New York, killing at least 20 people and sending more than two dozen shivering passengers to a hospital.

The accident may have occurred when the boat was hit by the wake of a larger passing vessel, Warren County Sheriff Larry Cleveland said. "We haven't ruled anything out yet," he said.

The boat was carrying a tour group from the Trenton, Mich., area, among others, and was sailing just north of the village of Lake George, a popular tourist destination. With calm waters, clear skies, and temperatures in the 70s, it seemed perfect boating weather.

The 40-foot Ethan Allen capsized around 3 p.m. on Lake George about 50 miles north of Albany in the Adirondack Mountains.

The accident apparently happened so fast that none of the passengers was able to put on a life jacket, Cleveland said.

Adult boat passengers are not required to wear life jackets in New York, but boats must carry at least one life jacket per passenger.

Patrol boats that reached the scene within minutes found other boaters already pulling people from the water.

All passengers had been accounted for within two hours.

Twenty-seven people were taken to a hospital in nearby Glens Falls. Some suffered broken ribs, and others complained of shortness of breath.

Five people were to be admitted, hospital spokesman Jason White said.

Police investigators were at the hospital late Sunday to question survivors.

Dorothy Warren, a resident who said she brought blankets and chairs to shore for survivors, said one passenger told her "she saw a big boat coming close and she said, 'Whoop-dee-doo. I love a rocking boat.'"

Warren said the woman did not know how she got out of the water but said her mother was killed.

Officials gave conflicting information on the number of dead and passengers. Cleveland said there were 48 or 49 people aboard, which was close to the boat's maximum capacity of 50.

Investigators were interviewing survivors to get an accurate count. The National Transportation Safety Board was expected at the lake Monday, the sheriff said.

The captain, the only crew member aboard, survived. Cleveland said he was well known and well liked by law enforcement officials.

Trenton, Mich., Mayor Gerald Brown said the group left Tuesday on a weeklong bus-and-rail trip to see changing fall colors along the East Coast.

The trip was organized through the city's parks and recreation department and arranged through a Canadian company, Brown said.

"We're in mourning," Brown told Detroit television station WJBK.

"It's not a very big community. Many of those people I knew. We're still not sure which ones didn't make it."

The mayor said 14 Trenton residents were among those on the boat. Of those, three were killed, six survived, and the conditions of the other five were unknown.

U.S. Rep. John Sweeney, who talked with survivors at the hospital, said the boat flipped in about 30 seconds, giving victims no time to react.

Many of the bodies were laid out along the shore, and the site was blocked off by police with tarps. A hearse, police vehicles, and several sport utility vehicles later began taking the dead from the scene.

The weather did not appear to be a factor on the lake, a long, narrow body of water that is a popular tourist destination in the summer and quiets down after Labor Day. The water temperature was 68 degrees.

"This was as calm as it gets," said Jerry Thornell, a former Lake George Park Commission patrol officer and a lake enforcement officer for the county sheriff's department.

filed the lawsuit in 2003 along with the estate administrators for Phillip Spieker, Betty Romp, and Clarence Fifer for intentional infliction of emotional distress, fraudulent misrepresentation, and invasion of privacy, among other claims.

Before the 1965 Tort Claims Act, it was impossible for a citizen to sue the state.

Because the study was conducted in 1939, state officials argued the government is immune from legal responsibility.

The state supreme court's decision late last week upheld 6th District Judge Thomas Horan's decision in 2003.

Justice Michael Streit, who wrote the Sept. 30 majority opinion, referenced the state Legislature's decision to repeal the "sunrise" provision in 1969 that stipulated the Tort Claims Act covered claims only after 1963.

"There is no reason why we should judicially re-enact statutory language the Legislature expressly repealed," said Streit, who also referred to the state's attempt to manipulate the judicial interpretation of the verb "to accrue" within the context of the act.

Bob Brammer, spokesman for the Iowa Attorney General's office, said the state may ask for a rehearing.

However, Tom Riley, an area attorney specializing in personal-injury claims, said

There is no reason why we should judicially re-enact statutory language the Legislature expressly repealed.

"the odds are against the state" — unless it can prove there was an error in facts, a rehearing is rare.

The research project, since dubbed the "Monster Study," was conducted by research assistant Mary Tudor and run by the world-renowned speech pathologist Wendell Johnson, the namesake of the UI Wendell Johnson Speech and Hearing Center.

Tudor's five-month experiment gathered 22 children from the Iowa Soldiers and Sailors Orphans Home in Davenport and separated them into a control group, whose members were praised about their speech, and experimental group, whose members were berated for how they spoke and labeled as stutters.

Tudor and Johnson tried to prove parents or peers could psychologically induce speech problems and that stuttering is a learned behavior.

Children who participated in the study were not informed of the nature of the experiment and its effects; in 2001, the San Jose Mercury News finally revealed the truth about the study for the first time.

Nixon's Des Moines-based attorney, Curtis Krull, said she will seek fair and reasonable compensation but would not specify how much in monetary compensation his client would ask for.

"They were subjects of a study that literally created a stuttering condition and a condition they've had to live with their whole life," Krull said.

Riley said the state's counsel faces a heavy burden in the courtroom.

"I would tell [the state] to settle," said Riley, who added "heads would have rolled" if state legislators had known about the experiment during his time in the Iowa Senate and House, between 1961 and 1974.

Krull said the attorneys will meet with a judge in Iowa City within the next 30 days to set a trial date.

ed money from the victim.

The man then gave the robbers cash as well as other personal items.

Irving Harris of Iowa City was apprehended in connection with the Mercer Park incident and was charged with first-degree robbery upon witness identifications. The 15-year-old was allegedly in possession of the weapon used in the incident — a BB gun, police said.

First-degree robbery is punishable by up to 25 years in prison.

The second of the robberies occurred near the 100 block of East Fairchild Street at around 3:14 a.m. The victim, an unidentified male, told police that he was approached by two men, who asked for directions to Johnson Street.

After providing the information to the men, the victim turned to walk away as one of the alleged robbers struck him in the back of his head, knocking him to the ground. The men then demanded money from the victim, which the man turned over to his assailants.

The suspects, who are still at large, are described as black males in their late teens to early 20s, around 6 feet tall, and weighing around 200 pounds, police said. Additional details from police were not available Sunday.

Both incidents are still under investigation. Iowa City police Sgt. Bill Campbell stated he was unsure if the department suspected any connection between the two robberies.

Police labeled the Mercer Park incident as an armed robbery, which is used to describe crimes committed with a weapon, while calling the East Fairchild Street attack a strong armed robbery, which is used to term robberies without weapons, Campbell said.

The description of the suspects in the East Fairchild Street incident are similar to those involved with a robbery at Gasby's, 1310 S. Gilbert St., which occurred Sept. 27 and left a customer injured.

Untethered and alive

BY BRIAN TRIPLETT
THE DAILY IOWAN

Many of you claimed that you would die without your cell phone, after learning that I have been cell-phoneless since Tuesday. How I managed to lose it is neither here nor there (hint: I didn't stay in that night), but I'm pretty certain it is gone forever.

BRIAN TRIPLETT

Well, despite a long weekend, I am still around. I am living proof that you do not in fact pass away when you lose your cell phone.

I will admit it has been strange. Like a recent amputee, I find myself reaching for it in my pocket, even though it is no longer there. I feel naked in a way, but I've learned to be comfortable with it, like Will Ferrell streaking down the street in Old School.

Sure, there are downsides to losing the device that acts as my alarm clock, my camera, my rolodex, and my means of communicating with friends, family, bosses, and love interests. But I have and will continue to stay strong, despite this significant loss.

So far, my lifestyle hasn't changed for the worse. I still know where to find my friends: asleep on my living room couch or at the bars. I get to live out my No. 1 goal in life of waking up when my body says it's time to. And I find out who my real friends are, because they're the ones who show up looking for me to hang out.

I would also like to take up this space and your time by paying tribute to Mark Zuckerberg, who you may know better as the creator of facebook.com.

For those of you not familiar with the Facebook, it is an online directory of college students. For those of you familiar with it who still remain opposed to it, you are missing out. I refused to join at first, but once I signed up, I realized how foolish I had been to wait.

At first I used the Facebook simply as entertainment. But after losing my cell phone, I now use it to survive. All right, so that's going a little far, but it has helped me acquire lost cell-phone numbers, send messages to people to make tailgating plans, and announce to the college world that the reason I am not answering your calls is because I have a better chance of finding Bobby Fischer than my phone.

So the moral of this story is, if you lose your cell phone, don't lose your sanity. And if you aren't on Facebook, go sign up now. We'll see you in a few days.

Random thoughts —

If you have any musical talent whatsoever, (or maybe better if you don't have any) I strongly suggest playing on the Ped Mall some night downtown. After a rare trip to the bars on Wednesday, we took my guitar and temporarily "borrowed" my neighbor's bongo and started a band. We made no money, but seeing people's reactions as they stumbled home drunk from the bars and being called "stupid hippies" made it well worth it.

Why has no one ever begun an effort to organize a tailgate on Saturdays during the football off-season? You know the reason most people love fall Saturdays is because it provides an excuse to drink in the morning. We'll go over the plans as the spring nears.

What was the deal with those motorized scooter things that the Iowa City police officers were riding around at the Homecoming parade? Who are they going to chase down in those things? Well, at least our police officers can focus their energy on ruining 19-year-olds' nights instead of walking.

Bush pondering 2nd court choice

BY DEB RIECHMANN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush is watching his first Supreme Court nominee, Chief Justice John Roberts, take the helm of the high court today while weighing his options for nominating a second justice who also could shape the bench for years to come.

"He's still working," White House Chief of Staff Andy Card said on Sunday about the president's effort to choose a replacement for retiring Justice Sandra Day O'Connor. "Still considering lots of options."

The White House will not disclose who is on Bush's short list or hint when an announcement will be made.

Legal experts who are in touch with administration officials say the president is most likely to choose a woman to replace O'Connor, even though many of the often-mentioned candidates are white men.

There continues to be talk in legal circles that he could pick one of three longtime Bush loyalists: White House counsel Harriet Miers, the first woman president of the Texas State Bar and Bush's former personal attorney; Attorney General Alberto Gonzales, Bush's longtime friend, who would be the first Latino on the court; and corporate lawyer Larry Thompson, who was the government's highest-ranking black law-enforcement official when he was deputy attorney general during Bush's first term.

Other candidates mentioned most frequently in recent days include conservative federal appeals court judges J. Michael Luttig, Priscilla Owen, Karen Williams, Alice Batchelder, and Samuel Alito; Michigan Supreme Court justice Maura Corrigan; and Maureen Mahoney, a well-respected litigator before the high court.

Today, Bush is going to the Supreme Court for a formal ceremony at which Roberts, who was confirmed by the Senate 78-22 and sworn in at the White House on Thursday, assumes the role of chief justice. Following tradition, Roberts will don his robe for the first time and take the center seat last held by the late former Chief Justice William Rehnquist.

The president declined twice on Sunday to say whether he'd made up his mind about a second nominee.

Reporters asked Bush on the South Lawn as he was returning from Camp David. The president, strolling with first lady Laura Bush, just smiled and waved. He was asked again as he left a worship service traditionally held the Sunday before new Supreme Court term begins. This time, Bush ducked into his limousine without replying.

Think horizontal for Rec Center

As the UI considers design plans for the new $55 million recreation center to be built in 2007, we urge university officials to opt for a horizontal design, which would offer more square feet per floor with fewer floors overall. The 160,000-square-foot facility, to be built across from the Main Library at the intersection of Burlington and Madison Streets, should be as open and accessible to students as possible; a proposed vertical design would not help — and may indeed be harmful to that goal.

Openness and accessibility will most likely be achieved with a horizontal floor plan. The vertical plan would push offices, vending areas, and free workout facilities to the third floor, meaning there would be less traffic and less incentive for students to hang out in their new facility. We are strongly opposed to any blueprint that discourages student use, especially when the strongest reason given is “urban design” elements.

So far as we can tell, urban design is the only reason given for the vertical plan. The argument goes that there is only a finite amount of land, so development should go up instead of out. We agree with this concept, but it doesn't apply in this case. The land has already been paved over and developed. We aren't talking about building on Hubbard Park here; the property currently houses the UI police and other university-service offices. The only foreseeable use for the land saved by a vertical design is for parking spots. (Which seems ironic, given the new building's purpose.) There is an opportunity cost in using the land for a horizontal layout, but those concerns can be remedied by solid long-term planning.

Moreover, the proposed vertical arrangement would cost an additional $8 million to $13 million over a horizontal proposal, thanks largely to additional stairwells and supports above the pools. Given the university's persistent financial challenges, this not-insignificant additional price tag should perhaps be enough to kill the idea by itself.

When, in 2003, the UI moved forward with its plan to construct a new recreation center, we applauded the effort. In terms of indoor recreation area per student, the university is far below comparable universities and even further behind Iowa State and UNI. Similar schools have 15.7 square feet per student, while Iowa State has 25.16, UNI 38.14, and the UI a meager 12.2. But square footage isn't everything, and we want the new facility to be as accessible to students as possible.

As the plan for a new recreation center continues to develop, we urge administrators to dismiss the vertical-layout possibility, at least for the location being considered. The additional cost and potential value for increased student use outweigh design elements or a desire to protect some parking spots.

We believe the new recreation center should be flat, just like the abdominal muscles of all UI students once it opens.

Pink embarrassment

I think I have a solution to “the pink debate” that will satisfy both sides. The locker room should be painted light purple. It is a calming color that would still give that psychological advantage, and, at the same time, it is neither homophobic nor sexist.

Wait... I am now being told that purple (especially light purple) is not acceptable because it is also homophobic. I guess we can't paint it blue either, because Viagra is blue, and that would make the visitors insecure in regards to their potency. No matter what color the visitor's locker room is there could be a ridiculous dispute.

In fact, this dispute is ridiculous. The statement that the pink locker room is “sexist” is ridiculous. The fact that Erin Buzuvis received threats of violence for making the statement is even more ridiculous. What is most ridiculous, however, is that everyone who has heard about this controversy nationally is laughing at the UI. There are more important things happening on this campus than “The Pink Revolution.”

The thing that concerns me most about this debate is whether the re-painting will be included in student fees. I will be very angry if I have to put any money into the redecoration of the visitor's locker room. For all I care, we could give some students a bottle of Everclear and a few Sharpies and let them “redecorate” the locker room. I am embarrassed for this university and all the people wearing pink at Kinnick Stadium. I speak for myself and many of my fellow students when I say: This has been taken too far.

Fair! endorsement

Iowa City is fortunate this year to have attracted a large group of candidates for the at-large Iowa City City Council race. After inviting all of these candidates to participate in a questionnaire and forum, the local progressive politics group Fair! has decided to endorse Garry Klein and Amy Correia for City Council. Garry and Amy are strong candidates with an understanding of the issues that face our community — especially issues of economic, environmental, and social justice, which form the basis of Fair!'s local commitment. Voters will be able to cast two votes in the Oct. 11 Iowa City primary and again in the Nov. 8 general election.

We strongly encourage that those votes be for Garry Klein and Amy Correia. They represent the best of progressive politics while understanding the larger context in which those politics must function. Amy and Garry will make excellent members of our City Council.

David Redlawsk
UI associate professor
Chair, Fair!

Klein's quality

The City Council election is coming. It is pivotal that we look at candidates who have a broad vision for our beautiful city, combined with leadership and vision with a humanitarian touch. I am sure all of the candidates will be fantastic, and I wish them well. One candidate who may prove to be a notch above the rest would be Garry Klein.

In the past few years I have known Garry, I could positively count on him to possess all of, if not more than, the qualities and traits listed above.

Woeful ignorance

According to news reports of a recent forum featuring candidates for the City Council (“21-only divides candidates,” Sept. 23), at-large candidate Rick Dobyns characterized at-large incumbent Councilor Mike O'Donnell as “woefully ignorant about the facts.”

In turn, O'Donnell, said of Dobyns, “You are woefully lacking on what it means to be a council member.” It would appear that each of these candidates may have accurately assessed the other.

I have noted with interest that of the seven candidates for City Council, only these two woefully lacking candidates — Dobyns and O'Donnell — will vote “No” on the public-power referendum. All of the five remaining candidates, including unopposed District B incumbent Connie Champion, say they will vote “Yes.” I would urge you to vote “Yes” on the referendum questions. I would also urge you to support those candidates who share your position.

We don't need candidates who are “woefully lacking” of any essential characteristic to making critical choices about Iowa City's future.

An apology

I'm responding to Mr. Jacob Adler (“Apologize,” Sept. 19). Iowa City Police Chief Sam Hargadine didn't offer public comments concerning Joseph Domke. He sent that e-mail to me and trusted me to handle it appropriately; I sincerely apologize to Chief Hargadine.

He was neither “irresponsible” nor “inconsiderate.”

We all say things to acquaintances not intended for the front page of a newspaper. It doesn't mean they haven't thought about the tragic loss of life and how it affects loved ones. Both Hargadine and I have children at universities this fall; it would be impossible to not think about this tragedy in the proper context.

When I received the e-mail, I didn't remember Domke's name, though I did remember the incident. I could have responded, “What was the kid's name?” If I had, and it became front-page news, I would also be accused of being inconsiderate and irresponsible. I didn't write it, but I certainly asked myself the question, as many would have done.

For family and friends, this is a very emotional time. Hargadine would never have sent that e-mail to the newspapers, nor would I. Someone else did, and the newspapers made this public.

Instead of vilifying someone who intended to hurt no one, we all need to give serious consideration to the senseless loss of life and how alcohol contributed to that event. At a recent football game, a young person, “a kid,” passed out with a blood alcohol concentration more than 0.3. We are seeing more people with BACs at dangerous levels; the vast majority are kids.

While I understand Adler's grief, I hope he will use this occasion to campaign against the senseless and dangerous drinking habits of so many of our young people and cease to castigate a man who obviously meant no harm.

Democracy matters

As Americans, we pride ourselves on the importance of living in a free and democratic society. We believe in the virtues of democracy almost as much as we believe in the virtues of the Big Mac. Under the Bush administration, export-grade democracy has become second nature to any country with an open mind and possession of several thousand U.S. occupying troops. With as much effort as the United States expends implementing democracy abroad, citizens of the U.S. should be just as concerned with strengthening our democracy at home.

Citizens of Iowa City will have the perfect opportunity to flex their democratic muscles Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Pomerantz Career Center, when Federal Communications Commission Commissioners Michael Copps and Jonathan Adelstein will speak at a town-hall discussion on the future of our media. The event is free and open to the public, and it will give citizens the chance to read testimony and voice their opinions on the state of local and national media.

BRENDAN FITZGIBBONS

When you hear the words media reform, your initial reaction is probably, “Wait, where are the comics again?” I know improving the media is not the most attractive-sounding cause, but ensuring that there is a diverse marketplace of ideas and information is imperative to attaining a healthy democracy. A September Nielsen Media Research Group report states that during the 2004-05 TV season, Americans watched an average of eight hours and 11 minutes of TV per day, more than any previous television season. As our television consumption continues to rise, we must take the time to thoroughly examine the quality of our programming. And what broadcasters and advertisers fail to mention is that ultimately, we the citizens own the airwaves, not Rupert Murdoch or Snoop Dogg.

Under law, in exchange for using our airwaves, broadcasters are required to serve the “public interest.” Unfortunately, massive media corporations whose gluttonous desire for profits supersedes any concern they may have for the public's interest are clearly violating that agreement. As a result of relaxed FCC media-ownership rules and an intensive drive to de-regulate the media marketplace (Copps and Adelstein have fought against such measures), today, five media conglomerates control 80 percent of what Americans watch. Clear Channel Communications alone owns approximately 1,200 radio stations across the country. The dangers of allowing a single corporation to control a large portion of the airwaves is illustrated in the case of the Sinclair Broadcasting Group.

Iowans for Better Local TV, a group founded by citizens of Cedar Rapids and Iowa City (and co-sponsors of Wednesday's FCC event), is specifically targeting Sinclair. The media giant owns 62 stations nationwide, including local CBS affiliate KGAN. Anyone who followed the 2004 election may recall Sinclair's long laundry list of conflict-of-interest abuses, including attempting to pre-empt regular programming with the anti-John Kerry “documentary” titled “Stolen Honor.”

Sinclair, along with other media giants, also eliminates local voices by employing, as a cost-cutting measure, centralized broadcasts. Broadcasts are recorded from a central corporate headquarters and then are beamed to local affiliates, giving the impression of covering local news. Iowans for Better Local TV argues that corporations such as Sinclair distance themselves from local news, therefore ignoring the needs of the community.

I know many of you are perfectly content with the quality of today's television. I, too, have no problem kicking back and watching people devour hippopotamus rectums on NBC's “Fear Factor” or figuring out who exactly is the biological father on Fox's “Who's your Daddy?” — but the line has to be drawn somewhere. These programs, which allegedly serve as entertainment, are polluting airwaves we desperately need. In exchange for covering substantive issues, such as health care, we are inundated with a 24-hour onslaught of advertisements and programming that tells us that true happiness lies in an erectile-dysfunction pill or in that radioactive beauty cream that dies your skin neon orange.

We, as citizens, have a responsibility to demand more from our media. I hope to see you all at the FCC meeting on Wednesday. I will be there front and center with the words “I Love Democracy” tattooed on my forehead.

A visitor to the UI Museum of Art observes cinema Professor Leighton Pierce's installation Warm Occlusion on Sept. 30. He began to form the project in September 2004, but the installation uses a selection of images he has collected for years.

BY COURTNEY DAVIDS
THE DAILY IOWAN

Out of the darkness, six white columns rise. First pinpricks, then flashes of light and color wash over them, creating moments of recognizable form. A flower. An apple. A woman's face turning away. The sound of flowing water surrounds, and crickets chirp in the corner. Among these overlapping visual and audio elements, an artist makes the final adjustments to one of his largest projects to date.

UI cinema Professor Leighton Pierce's Warm Occlusion, a video and audio installation in the North Gallery of the UI Museum of Art, will be on display through March 12, 2006.

Those who attended the Sept. 30 opening were immediately confronted with a looming screen upon which images slowly shifted, all with a warm and inviting orange luminescence. As the observers step around the screen, the room's darkness swallows them, and all that is visible are the six monoliths glowing with a flurry of video scenes.

"I like the environment it creates. It's very alive," UI sophomore Christina McClelland said.

Although the images represent video Pierce has collected for years, he began to fully focus on the project beginning in September of last year. At that time, he was given a floor plan of the gallery, and he began editing one-minute clips of video that would eventually link together to form the 12-minute 45-second loop featured in the project.

"The room became something I could engage with," the New York native said. "It was like discovering a piano. The challenge became what to do with that instrument." Seizing the chance for creative construction of the space, he hung projectors from the ceiling — two for each column — and aimed them at opposing corners, causing the image to wrap around the pillars. This transformed the two-dimensional images into shifting three-dimensional forms.

Eight channels of sound heighten the piece's immersive quality by surrounding the viewers and pulling them into the piece's realm. Nevertheless, there are very few moments of synchronous sound. Mostly, the space resonates with samples that live independently from the visuals. One might believe this would form a fractured feeling in the piece's presentation, but, Pierce said, "the soundscape brings it together. It puts a blanket around the whole thing."

Sound editing is the portion that Leighton is most passionate about, and it is also how he found his way into filmmaking in 1980. He was making electronic music then and experimenting with "Musique Concrete," an audio art form based on the physical manipulation of audio tape. He began making films to accompany these productions and kept going from there.

"At that time, I was making compositions with recorded sounds, and that's still what I'm doing — but with the addition of video," he said.

"Warm Occlusion" refers to a meteorological phenomenon that occurs when air masses of different temperatures meet, and it also is a fitting way to describe Pierce's editing process. He shot all his images with a mini digital video camera, most of them at a very slow shutter speed to achieve what he describes as a "painterly effect." He then layered these varied visuals to create a composite picture.

"I didn't have a goal, in terms of content," he said. "I responded to the space. I like when people engage with the work, and I get them to start activating their own emotions."

Although the project is in a "phase of doneness," as he says; it is not a static phenomenon. He re-edited the video loop more than 125 times before reaching the current version, and he said he hopes to keep changing it as new associations among the images present themselves throughout the exhibition's 23-week run.

"Now that we have this instrument that we've built and created, I have to keep composing for it," he said.

Not against clarity

BY EVA MCKENDRICK
THE DAILY IOWAN

The eight band members and crew take turns lying on the floor or leaning against the walls of a rank, decrepit van containing only stiff wooden benches and a pair of bucket seats. Far from touring glamorously, punk band Against Me! have called this mobile pit home since Sept. 18.

"It's a van full of stinky dudes," drummer Warren Oakes said. Against Me! began its tour in Connecticut to promote its album Searching for a Former Clarity, released Sept. 6, and the group has had only one day off so far. Tonight, it will play at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., with the Epoxies, Smoke or Fire, and the Soviettes.

"We're pretty shredded right now and sleep-deprived, but we're having a hell of a time," Oakes said.

Against Me!, from Gainesville, Fla., consists of Oakes, James Bowman, and Tom Gabel, both on guitar and vocals, and Andrew Seward on bass and vocals. Their music focuses on honesty and sincerity, whether the topic be political or moral. The band may have its own platform, but its songs call for listeners to come to their own decisions.

"We have no interest in recruiting anybody for a specific cause or agenda," Oakes said. "We just go out there with the hope that people find something for themselves."

With Searching for a Former Clarity, Against Me! has received more public attention than ever before. On Sept. 30, the band was the musical guest on "Late Night with Conan O'Brien," then drove 16 hours straight to its next show in Chicago.

Against Me! also opened for the band Green Day in early September in front of its biggest audience ever. Oakes said there were 50,000 people in an East Rutherford, N.J., stadium, and he estimates that the group played in front of 20,000 to 30,000 people. That was equal to the number of people the group has played to over a period of two or three months on earlier tours.

"Let's just say there was quite a view from that stage," Oakes said.

The bearded percussionist views the band's latest release more as a work of art than any of the previous releases. The album's satisfying reception is the product of taking more time to fine-tune composition and lyrics, he said.

"The record feels more substantial to me," he said.

Oakes remembered his amazement upon seeing how progressive the Iowa City crowd was when he played here last spring.

"I was surprised at how hip it was," he said, adding that he is eager to return to the unpretentious, but nevertheless savvy, local audience.

As for a uniform, Oakes refuses to endorse any manufacturer or, in fact, anything. In true rocker fashion, he chooses from among his nine black T-shirts.

"I want to create a clean slate, with no associations," Oakes said.

Oakes is uncertain whether Against Me! has reached its critical or popular peak, but whenever the band is in the music-listening public's consciousness, it feels good.

"I can't speak for the rest of the band, but the experience of playing shows is so far from the mundane," he said. "It's almost transcendent. It does it for me."

Red Sox earn wild card, Yankees play Anaheim

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox joined the New York Yankees in the playoffs on Sunday and made their rivals' road just a little tougher.

Reigning World Series MVP Manny Ramirez hit a three-run homer and also threw out Derek Jeter from the outfield on Sunday, and Curt Schilling shut the Yankees down long enough for the Red Sox to beat them 10-1 and clinch the AL wild-card berth.

Boston will open the playoffs Tuesday at Chicago. New York's loss meant it will start the post-season Tuesday at Anaheim rather than at home against the Los Angeles Angels.

Schilling (8-8) held the Yankees scoreless for five innings; by that time, the Cleveland Indians had already lost 3-1 to the Chicago White Sox and ensured that Boston would win the AL's last playoff spot. A day earlier, the Yankees celebrated in Fenway Park's visitor's clubhouse after clinching the AL East.

Boston and New York each finished the year 95-67, and the Yankees took the division title because they beat the Red Sox 10-9 in the season series. The Angels also finished 95-67 and earned the home-field advantage against the Yankees, because they won the season series 6-4.

Cleveland's game ended when Jason Varitek was at-bat in the bottom of the fifth. Red Sox management hugged in their box seats next to the field, and owner John Henry passed the word along to the dugout.

By the time this one was over, the starters were out of the game, and the much-anticipated season finale had the look of a spring-training game, except for the chill in the air and the anticipation of a possible playoff rematch, if both can get past their first-round opponents.

WILD CARD

Astros clinch playoff berth

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros clinched the NL wild card on the final day of the regular season — just as they did last year.

Roy Oswalt became the first pitcher since 2001-02 with consecutive 20-win seasons, throwing six innings and driving in a run in a 6-4 victory Sunday over the Chicago Cubs. The Astros completed a remarkable comeback from a miserable start of the season back into the playoffs.

The Astros, 15-30 after a loss to the Cubs on May 24, became the first team since the 1914 Boston Braves to make the playoffs after being as many as 15 games under .500 in the same season.

Houston (89-73) will play Atlanta in a rematch of last year's NL division series, won by the Astros in five games for their first postseason series victory. The Braves were 5-1 against Houston this season, including a four-game sweep in Atlanta, where Game 1 will be played Wednesday.

Hawkeye linebackers Abdul Hodge (52) and Chad Greenway celebrate after stopping Illinois from gaining the end zone during the first half on Oct. 1 in Kinnick Stadium. Iowa won easily over the not-so-Fighting Illini, 35-7.

The Iowa offensive line looked solid, and the running game returned from its hiatus

BY JASON BRUMMOND
THE DAILY IOWAN

Before the Homecoming game, Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz was more concerned about his team's progress than the result.

Check both off. The offensive line looked better, the running game returned, and the defense — though shaky at times — made stops when it needed to in a 35-7 win over Illinois. The Hawkeyes (3-2, 1-1) gained more than twice as many yards as they did the previous week, but Ferentz realizes he's still going up hill.

"We certainly have some things we still need to work on," he said. "That's very evident, but I think we know where the hot spots are, and we just need to be committed to that improvement.

"The good news is that, I think, if we will work hard and stay committed, we'll see improvement short-term, as well as long-term. That's really where our focus is."

Ferentz mixed up the starting offensive line — switching Mike Jones to guard and Marshall Yanda to tackle — and the new combination worked.

After rushing for minus-9 yards against Ohio State last week, the Hawkeyes collected 301 yards and three touchdowns on the ground. Quarterback Drew Tate, who was sacked five times against the Buckeyes, wasn't brought down once against Illinois.

Running back Albert Young rushed for 102 yards on 13 carries, averaging 7.8 yards a run. The sophomore tallied four runs for more than 10 yards, including a 36-yard scamper early in the first quarter.

'It's obviously nice that we can come here and have a great atmosphere to play in. The atmosphere has definitely helped us, and it's something we want to keep going.'

— Ed Hinkel, Iowa wide receiver

BY BRYAN BAMONTE
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa's 35-7 victory over Illinois extended the Hawkeyes' home winning-streak to 21 games, breaking a school record dating to 1923, when the Hawkeyes coincidentally had a 20-game streak snapped by the Illini.

The Hawkeyes' last home loss was a second-half collapse against Iowa State in 2002. Since, home has become the Hawk haven.

"It's certainly exciting for them to be part of that 21-game streak," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "It's a real significant accomplishment, and an awful lot of people invested to make that happen, including our fans.

"I thought our fans were just tremendous, right from the onset. Their loyalty and their support are just fantastic. And all of us really appreciate that — coaches, players, everyone involved with the team. They've been tremendous throughout."

The winning-streak has helped Iowa make consecutive BCS and New Year's Day bowl-game appearances. The streak is the third-longest in the nation, behind only USC (22) and Boise State (26).

"It's obviously nice that we can come here and have a great atmosphere to play in," wide receiver Ed Hinkel said. "The atmosphere has definitely helped us, and it's something

A third Illinois field goal sailed wide, and Iowa kept the Illini off the board in what could have been a 14-9 halftime score.

"We should've had nine points," Illinois coach Ron Zook said. "The two that were blocked, there's no question they were low, and protection was there."

Illinois kicker Jason Reda, who had entered the game 8-of-9 on the year, left all three of his attempts low to the line of scrimmage, making it easier for Iowa's line to get their hands on the ball.

Men golfers head to Memphis

The Iowa men's golf team will compete in the Memphis Intercollegiate today, with 36 holes. The final round is scheduled for Tuesday. The 15-team event will be played at the south course of Colonial Country Club in Memphis, Tenn.

After finishing second at the Wolverine Intercollegiate, Iowa freshman Cole Peever will play in the Hawkeyes' top spot. Currently leading the team in scoring average, he has also recorded the lowest round of the season, with a 65 in the opening round of the Wolverine Intercollegiate.

Juniors Todd Larson, Dan Holterhaus, and Jon Feldick will also compete this week, with senior Andy Tiedt claiming the final varsity spot.

Men runners place third

The No. 10 Iowa men's cross-country team placed third at the Murray Keating Invitational in Orono, Maine, on Oct. 1. Fifth-ranked Stanford was the team champion with 26 points, thanks to its five scorers finishing in the top 10. Defending champion Dartmouth was second with 49.

The Hawkeyes scored 66 points to mark their second consecutive third-place showing at an invitational. Jeff Kent was Iowa's highest finisher, in 11th place, with a time of 24 minutes, 28 seconds. Dan Haut and Eric MacTaggart followed closely behind in 12th (24:32) and 13th (24:32) respectively. Adam Roche (14th, 24:32) and Micah VanDenend (16th, 24:33) rounded out Iowa's scorers.

Soccer drops match to Ohio State

The Iowa soccer team (2-6-4) lost its first Big Ten game this season, 3-0, to Ohio State (4-5-2) Sunday in Columbus, Ohio. The score could have been much worse — the Buckeyes outshot Iowa 27-3 — had it not been for Hawkeye goalkeeper Erin MacIsaac's seven saves.

After a scoreless opening half, Ohio State took the lead in the 47th minute when Lisa Collison scored the first of her two goals. She then scored her second goal just minutes later to give the Buckeyes a seemingly insurmountable two-goal lead.

Women harriers finish 3rd

The Iowa women's cross-country team finished third on Oct. 1 at the Willamette Invitational in Salem, Ore. The Hawkeye harriers combined for 112 points, placing them behind first-place Washington and runner-up Oregon.

Sophomore and Tualatin, Ore., native Meghan Armstrong came in second in the 5K race in 17:04. She shattered her personal record for the event by almost a full minute. Idaho's Dee Olson finished ahead of Armstrong by just three seconds.

"It was by far her best race ever," coach Layne Anderson said. Rounding out the Hawkeyes' top-five finishers were Shannon Stanley, Nikki Chapple, Racheal Marchand, and Molly Esche.

Field hockey staves off Spartans

BY BRENDAN STILES
THE DAILY IOWAN

The No. 14 Hawkeye field-hockey players were coming off a very disappointing loss to Ohio State Sept. 25, and coach Tracey Griesbaum called their Oct. 1 game with the ninth-ranked Michigan State Spartans a "must-win."

After the Spartans came back from a 2-0 deficit to tie the game, freshman Caitlin McCurdy scored with 6:34 remaining to give Iowa a 3-2 lead. The Hawkeyes held on to that advantage and pulled off the upset.

"It's pretty exciting, but it kind of built up from all the efforts everyone made today," McCurdy said. "It was really great to finish it off, after a hard week of practice."

Iowa played a very patient first half, keeping the Spartans in check and not allowing them any big opportunities. In the 21st minute of play, sophomore Kadi Sichel scored on a rebound off a penalty corner to give the Hawks a 1-0 lead, which they took into halftime.

"The quality of practice on Monday will be really crucial to our performance on Tuesday. If we get things going well really early and just get into the flow of things, then we'll be just fine."

— freshman midfielder Caitlin McCurdy

"We wanted to be poised with developing our attack," Griesbaum said. "I felt like against Ohio State, we tried to make everything happen in one second. We emphasized working the ball laterally and not always going forward into the forward space, so that was a way I thought we displayed patience."

"We let the attacking opportunities develop, and we had some real good ones."

In the second half, Sichel scored again off another penalty corner rebound to make it a 2-0 Hawkeye lead. Her role as a tipper on penalty corners was one at which she excelled on Oct. 1.

"My primary job on corners is to rush in," she said. "When it's not a direct shot to me, I'm trying to stay low, stay the play, and get rebounds off the goalkeeper's pads."

"There were balls that came my way, and I was able to tip them in."

Sichel, along with junior Heather Schnepf, not only stood out on Oct. 1, they were also players who Griesbaum said came through when they needed to.

"Heather came up with some unbelievable one-on-one defensive play, and Kadi was instrumental in putting the ball in the net," Griesbaum said.

After Sichel's second goal, Michigan State stormed back, and within seven minutes, the game was tied. Griesbaum elected not to call a timeout after the Spartans evened the score, and she said it was mainly because their goals were soft and that her players could've easily prevented them from taking place.

"It wasn't a matter of anything we needed to adjust but more buckling down and cleaning up our play, so I kind of refrained from the whole timeout situation," Griesbaum said.

As soon as the Hawks were able to control the tempo again, McCurdy came through with her game-winning goal, and the Hawks were able to hold on.

The Hawks' next match is at 3 p.m. Tuesday at Grant Field against Northwestern, meaning Iowa will only have one day of practice.

"The quality of practice on Monday will be really crucial to our performance on Tuesday," McCurdy said. "If we get things going well really early and just get into the flow of things, then we'll be just fine."

Griesbaum hopes that with the short preparation time her team has, they will continue to compete at a high level.

"After this kind of performance, I want to get to playing again," she said. "Every single game in the conference is key, and we're just trying to look at this as something we can build on."

Iowa running back Albert Young pushes off Illinois defensive back Kevin Mitchell during a 36-yard run in the first quarter on Oct. 1. Young averaged 7.8 yards in 13 rushing attempts.

1st Quarter

The Iowa running game purred, thanks in part to yet another offensive line swap, with Mike Jones moving to left guard and Marshall Yanda shifting to right tackle. On the game's first drive, Albert Young had five touches for 59 yards, and Marcus Schnoor capped an 80-yard drive with a short touchdown off right end.

An Illinois punt later, Iowa's Ed Hinkel raced around left end on a 20-yard reverse and leaped for the end zone for a 14-0 Iowa lead. Jovon Johnson's interception at the 2-yard line and Kenny Iwebema's block of a 44-yard Jason Reda field-goal attempt kept the Illini off the scoreboard.

2nd Quarter

Reda's nightmarish afternoon continued in the second period. After a 20-play, 90-yard drive yielded only a field-goal attempt, he missed wide left. Quarterback Tim Brasic maneuvered his offense to the Iowa 14, with just seconds left, but the kicker again booted one into the paws of Iwebema.

3rd Quarter

Iowa's first play, a 17-yard dash by Young, put the tailback over the century mark on just 13 carries. But dehydration put the sophomore on the bench for the rest of the contest, and the keys were turned over to Drew Tate and the passing game.

Tate padded the Hawkeyes' lead to 21 with a 10-yard toss to Hinkel just five minutes into the half. After Illinois got on the board with a 1-yard touchdown catch by E.B. Halsey, Scott Chandler used his frame to pull in a 7-yard Tate toss.

4th Quarter

Damian Sims broke a tackle and unleashed a 66-yard burst on the Hawkeyes' second play of the period, and the Iowa defensive front seven showed improvement in the pass rush by sacking Brasic four times.

Chad Greenway earned two of those, and Iwebema and Bryan Mattison notched one each. Several second-teamers streamed onto the new grass with just minutes left, and the Hawkeyes won easily, 35-7.

"We were taking what Illinois gave us," Tate said. "[The Illini] were doing a good job of sitting on a lot of routes, and our offensive line did a great job as I tried to get out and run. What helped was the play action from the run, so that's what opened things up, really."

Tate connected on 17-of-22 passes for 175 yards and a pair of touchdowns. The first, a 10-yard pass to Hinkel, gave the Hawkeyes a 21-0 advantage midway through the third quarter. At the end of the third, Tate found tight end Scott Chandler in the back of the end zone from seven yards out.

Senior running back Marcus Schnoor, who ran seven times for 38 yards, scored Iowa's first touchdown on a three-yard run to cap off the opening drive. Damian Sims made the most of his six touches, reaching the end zone on a 66-yard run in the fourth.

Even receiver Hinkel ran in a touchdown on a 20-yard reverse that ended in an acrobatic flip into the end zone.

"We came out determined to run the football, and we came out determined to kind of ride the running game and set up the pass with the run," center Brian Ferentz said. "I think we were successful in that."

Illinois (2-3, 0-2), down 14-0 at the break, could have had the lead or at least been within one possession, but the Illini squandered four scoring opportunities on five first-half drives.

Kicker Jason Reda missed three field goals — two of which were blocked by Iowa defensive end Kenny Iwebema — and the Illini couldn't execute in the red zone.

On Illinois' second drive of the game, quarterback Tim Brasic was intercepted by Iowa cornerback Jovon Johnson, who made a nice diving catch at the 2-yard line. The pick was the 16th of Johnson's career, moving the senior two interceptions away from tying the school-record, shared by Nile Kinnick and Devon Mitchell.

On the team's ensuing drive, which started in Hawkeye territory, Reda's 44-yard field-goal attempt was blocked by Iwebema just before the end of the first quarter. The Illini's next possession — a school-record 20-play, eight-minute drive — ended in Reda blowing an easy 21-yard attempt, wide left. Illinois had a first-and-goal from the 5-yard line, but Brasic had consecutive pass attempts dropped in the end zone.

Less than a minute before halftime, following a Tate interception seemingly thrown right to Illinois' Justin Harrison, Reda's 31-yard kick was again blocked by Iwebema.

Although the Illini outgained Iowa offensively in the first half, there wasn't any evidence on the scoreboard.

"Both offenses were going up and down the field. The problem was, their offense was getting points, and ours wasn't getting any," Illinois coach Ron Zook said. "We've got to put the ball in the end zone, and, obviously, we've got to play a lot better on defense."

After a long September, as Kirk Ferentz says, the Hawkeyes are right in the middle of a deep conference, despite a slow start. Iowa wasn't able to do much on the road against Iowa State and Ohio State and didn't play with the desired precision in a win over Northern Iowa.

October and November may go more quickly for Ferentz if both lines continue to improve at the rate they did against Illinois. The Hawkeye defensive line surrendered 100 yards to Pierre Thomas but sacked Brasic four times.

The progress on the offensive line may be the best sign. A strong running attack, coupled with time in the pocket for Tate to find receivers downfield, could unleash the full capability of Iowa's offensive prowess.

"We gave our skill guys a chance to perform, and it starts up front," Ferentz said. "Your lines on both sides of the ball have to set tempo, and I thought our execution was better. It was crisp. We're going to need to continue that to give our guys a chance to execute."

Hawks cite fans for record

HOME RECORD

we want to keep going.

"We probably feel a little more comfortable at home, as any teams does. It's a tough place for teams to come in and play, so we get the best of both worlds."

Everything equal, the Hawkeyes play like Hercules — when they are at home.

"Just to have that streak going for us is something special, and to have a part in it is very special," cornerback Jovon Johnson said. "Regardless of whatever happens on the field, I had a hand in all 21 games."

Ferentz and his players credit the fans for creating a home-field advantage. But there seems to be something else going on, beyond any basic advantage, because it seems pre-determined.

"We just seem to pull through at home, because we know 70,000 people have our back," Johnson said.

The victory last weekend was another example of the Hawkeye hocus-pocus. Illinois matched the Hawkeyes for the most part, statistically speaking, but Iowa won by 28 points.

"They were doing their part to help us today," Ferentz said of the fans. "And they have in all 21 games and a bunch before that. Fan support, to me, that's what makes this whole situation so special."

The record is the best reflection of the renaissance Iowa football has undergone since Ferentz took over. And it's also a reflection of the players who started it and the current Hawkeyes who are hoping not to end it.

"It means a lot to me — but not just me — to the whole organization," linebacker Abdul Hodge said. "And I think it should mean a lot to our fans, because they were a part of it. The fans are always ready to go, and we just want to give them something to cheer about."

attempt, a 44-yarder, with 11 seconds remaining in the quarter, to preserve Iowa's 14-0 lead.

After a spectacular 20-play, 90-yard drive that stalled at the Iowa 3, Reda missed another field goal, again missing low and to the left on a kick that was nearly blocked again.

"I believe I was just in the right place at the right time on both of them," Iwebema said. "One of them was real low. The one that he missed that no one touched was real low. Coach puts you in the right place at the right time in certain occasions, and I was just there."

On the last play of the half, Reda lined up for a 31-yard attempt to try to dent the Iowa lead for a third time. Again, Iwebema stuck his paw up and "That was all fundamental technique on the field-goal block. That just proves that whatever coaches say works."

— Kenny Iwebema

batted down three more Illini points. On each kick, Iwebema did not have to jump to get his hand on the ball.

"That was all fundamental technique on the field-goal block," Iwebema said. "That just proves that whatever coaches say works."

Despite the misses, Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz was quick to praise Reda, a player Iowa recruited but did not take.

"Reda's an excellent kicker. He was a great kicker in high school, a guy we had a lot of strong feelings for," Ferentz said. "It wasn't a fit for us because of our kicking situation with Kyle being young, but he's a tremendous kicker."

Not only did Iwebema get his hands on two field goals, he recorded four tackles and a sack — his fourth of the year. While the defensive line struggled at times with Illinois' running back duo of Pierre Thomas and E.B. Halsey and Zook's no-huddle offense, the Hawkeyes looked up to snuff on other drives. For example, there was a late Illinois drive in which Bryan Mattison and Chad Greenway recorded sacks and had pressure on third down to force a Steve Weatherford punt.

With the individual improvement evident in Iowa's line rotation, consistency will be vital.

"We just have to get it done every play," Iwebema said. "We getting better on every occasion. Every chance we get, we have to get better and better. We have to keep making steps. We can't take steps back."

This year's Homecoming game was the 21st home win in a row for Iowa. The Hawk defense held the Fighting Illini to only 7 points, and the offense improved to beat Illinois, 35-7.

QUOTABLES

'We certainly have some things we still need to work on. That's very evident, but I think we know where the hot spots are, and we just need to be committed to that improvement.'

— Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz

'Both offenses were going up and down the field. The problem was, their offense was getting points, and ours wasn't getting any. We've got to put the ball in the end zone, and, obviously, we've got to play a lot better on defense.'

— Illinois coach Ron Zook

BY THE NUMBERS

16

Number of interceptions Jovon Johnson has in his career after his interception Oct. 1. He now needs two more picks to tie Devon Mitchell's and Nile Kinnick's career record of 18.

21

Games Iowa has won consecutively in Kinnick Stadium, a school record. Iowa's last loss was a 36-31 setback to Iowa State in 2002.

301

Iowa's rushing total against the Illini, up from the minus-9 the Hawkeyes accumulated Sept. 24 at Ohio State.

3

Number of positions offensive lineman Mike Jones has played this year. Jones has played both right and left tackle and started at left guard against the Illini.

ILLINOIS GAME BALL PIERRE THOMAS

Illinois' running back recorded 100 yards on 15 carries, the second-straight week in which Iowa has given up a 100 yards to an opposing player — and the third time this year. Iowa did that twice last year — against Minnesota and LSU.

THUMBS UP THUMBS DOWN

Thumbs Up: Iowa's offensive line stepped up with a solid performance, blowing huge holes in the Illinois defense for Albert Young and company. It also gave Drew Tate time to operate in the pocket, something that had been absent this year. Moving Mike Jones in to guard from tackle solidified the line.

Thumbs Down: Iowa's tackling. Illinois scored just seven points, but missed tackles allowed for room to operate for Illinois' receivers. The tackling will need to improve going into next week's game at Purdue.

LOOK AHEAD

— After a heart-breaking overtime loss at Minnesota Sept. 24, Purdue is coming off its second-straight loss, having been previously blown out by Notre Dame, 49-28, at home. The defense was decimated by Brady Quinn and the Irish offense, allowing 621 total yards — 468 via the pass.

— Despite Purdue's recent struggles, West Lafayette has been a pitfall for Iowa. The Hawkeyes haven't won at Purdue since a 31-21 victory in 1991.

Volleyball struggles

BY RYAN LONG
THE DAILY IOWAN

After defeating Northern Iowa early last week, the Iowa volleyball team struggled to maintain consistency last weekend against the state of Michigan.

The Hawkeyes fell to the Wolverines 3-1 on Sept. 30 and lost 3-2 to Michigan State the next day. Iowa now sits at 1-3 in Big Ten action, and it will be looking to turn these losses into learning experience, in order to return to the team's early season success.

"We just need to come out strong in the beginning," said Hawkeye outside hitter Stacy Vitali. "I think we're a little too hesitant. But I think as we experience more times in the Big Ten, we'll get better and better."

Iowa coach Cindy Fredrick was pleased her team was able to battle back after being down 2-0 to the Spartans, even if the match ended in a loss.

"I think in the past, [with] our kids being down two games, it would have been over in three," she said. "What I like about this group is that they don't quit, and they don't give up."

The Michigan game continued a back-and-forth trend. After losing the first game, 30-21, the Hawkeyes (11-6) displayed resilience by capturing game two, 30-26. However, the Wolverines offensive proved too much for Iowa to handle after the break. Michigan earned victories in game three, 30-23, and game four, 30-27.

The Wolverines were led by Erin Cobler, Lyndsay Miller, and Katie Bruzdinski. Bruzdinski tallied 13 kills, Cobler racked up a game-high 18, and Miller posted 15. Iowa was led by Vitali and Catherine Smale. Vitali had a team-high 17 kills, while Smale did her part with 15.

"I think in the past, [with] our kids being down two games, it would have been over in three. What I like about this group is that they don't quit, and they don't give up."

— Volleyball coach
Cindy Fredrick

Against Michigan State, the Hawkeyes displayed patchy hitting and passing early on. In game one, Iowa hit at a .024 clip compared, the Spartans .310, and the Hawks lost, 30-18. The Hawkeyes came out with more sense of urgency in game two but fell, 30-26, and went into halftime trailing 2-0.

"We went in the locker room, and we knew that this team was beatable," Smale said. "We knew we weren't playing how we knew we could play. Every opportunity we had, we started to get our jobs done."

Iowa captured game three, 30-27, and out-hit the Spartans .244 to .178. The momentum continued in game four, as the Hawkeyes were once again victorious, 30-26, even though they were out-attacked .213 to .205. However, the comeback came to an end in game five, as Michigan won, 15-12.

The Spartans were led by Katie Johnson, Megan Wallin, and Ashley Schatzle, who each amassed 20 kills on the night. Iowa was led by Tiana Costanzo, Melanie Meister, and Smale. Smale had a game-high 21 kills, Meister compiled 10, and Costanzo chipped in with 11.

"We learned a lot," Smale said. "We go to Minnesota and Indiana next week, and those are both really tough teams, and in practice this week, we'll just have to focus on things we didn't do right and make adjustments."

DAILY BREAK

“ For me to talk about the appointment process is a little bit like ... seeing the recipe for chicken à la king from the point of view of the chicken. ”
— Supreme Court Justice Stephen Breyer, when asked if he thought President Bush should appoint another woman to fill retiring Justice Sandra Day O'Connor's spot.

DAUM GOOD FOOD

Aaron Hall Holmgren/The Daily Iowan

UI senior Navindren Hodges and junior James Russell watch the flames dance on the charcoal as they wait to commence a cookout behind Burge on Sunday evening. This was the fourth Sunday in a row that the Daum eighth floor grilled behind the dorms on Sunday, because Burge Marketplace does not serve meals on Sunday nights.

horoscopes

Monday, October 3, 2005
— by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Changes made at home will do you a lot of good. You will have an excellent eye for pulling things together with fabulous results. Your money situation will stabilize, and a real estate opportunity look promising.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Get busy managing any difficult matters at work. You can make a jump from one job to another if you strategically manipulate your move. A unique approach to whatever you do will bring support.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do something for yourself. A new outfit, look, or even a little cosmetic manipulation will help you build your confidence back up. You may want to book your next vacation to an exotic location. Love is looking good.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be careful how you handle personal issues today. Not everyone will see things your way, and chances are very good you will end up doing things alone if you are too pushy. Make changes to yourself instead of trying to change others.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A short trip will lead you in a new direction. You will be able to pick up valuable information that confirms you are doing the right thing. A partnership will turn out to be more unusual than you had imagined.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Everything will depend on what you are doing to earn your living. The more you depend on others, the less likely you are to be able to make changes. You need to move in a direction that will allow you to expand your horizons.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Use your creativity to help you through this rather hectic and confusing day. The more versatile you are, the better you will do. Think outside the box, and you will grab other people's interest.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will have to take a totally different approach in order to get around some of the obstacles you face. It's hard to make people with less vision see things your way. Work quietly behind the scenes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You have to network if you want to get ahead. Career moves will be advantageous. Concentrate on getting ahead in the business world by connecting with people in the industry.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stick to what you know and do best. You will be criticized if you make even the slightest mistake today. Don't get involved in gossip or stretch the truth. Be prepared to defend yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will learn so much today if you listen to people with experience. A love connection can be made with someone who will change your future. Re-evaluate your motives regarding your personal and professional life.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The emphasis will be on money, health, and legal matters today. Take care of any pending problems. A chance to make a financial gain is present. Changes may not be welcome, but they will be good for you.
