Device aids heart patient

BY EMILEIGH BARNES
THE DAILY IOWAN

Already saddled with bills for expensive blood thinners and a previous heart bypass, Mount Pleasant resident Irvin White has been handed another expense: a stenting procedure that utilized a machine called TandemHeart in Iowa for the first time.

"Medicare won't pay for all of it," he said. "I don't know what I'm going to do."

White, who said he was a little nervous about the surgery, felt he really did not have a choice in deciding whether to move forward with the Sept. 26 operation.

"They told me it had to be done, or I wouldn't make it," said White, who suffered from a severe coronary artery blockage. "So I just had to make up my mind to do it."

Made by CardiacAssist of Pittsburgh, TandemHeart supports patients undergoing surgery by "taking the load off" the heart during high-risk procedures, said Phillip Horwitz, a UI assistant professor of cardiology, who performed the stent procedure on White with James Rossen, a UI professor of internal medicine.

"If [the patient] becomes unstable, and his blood pressure falls, and the amount of blood to the heart falls, then the machine can support him until he gets fixed," Horwitz said.

The UI Hospitals and Clinics — which had the TandemHeart for several months without any demand for it — used the machine for the first time on White because his body relied almost entirely on the ventricle doctors needed to perform surgery on to supply oxygen to his heart.

Without TandemHeart, the stent would have been a high-risk surgery, Horwitz said.

The TandemHeart takes oxygenated blood from the leg out of the body via a tube, then pumps it back into the main artery during surgery.

WORKING DURING THE GAME

HOME GAMES CAN BE LOCAL WAITRESS' BANE

Some students choose to support the Hawkeyes while at work — making funds and waiting on fans

BY ERIKA BINEGAR
THE DAILY IOWAN

As fans gathered around big-screen TVs before the kickoff on Oct. 15, local food servers had to handle the increased flow of viewers and alcohol, as well as a decrease in patience and manners.

Amy Ellingson, a waitress and seating hostess at Vito's, 118 E. College St., said the restaurant's atmosphere is much different on game days. The establishment opens at 11 a.m. for home football games.

"It's unusual to see so many people your age drinking in the morning," she said.

Likewise, Katie Kalkbrenner, a waitress at Buffalo Wild Wings, Old Capitol Town Center, said the restaurant's crowd of patrons is larger on game days.

"It's busier — more people, more alcohol," she said.

UI junior Ellingson said it's nice to be around a different crowd. However, she said waitresses have more issues to deal with.

"People come in so drunk," she said.

"They've been tailgating all morning."

Half the time the fans are funny, she said, but the other half of the time they are "really angry," adding that people don't seem to understand that when all the tables are full and the waitresses are busy, it may take awhile to get a drink. She said patrons often get mad, occasionally breaking dishes.

"Some people are really fun, and others are just really awful," she said.

Kalkbrenner, also a UI junior, said when it takes awhile for patrons to get their drinks, they tend to snap at the waitresses.

"Lots of people just aren't patient with the system," she said.

Waitresses have to calmly say they are trying their best, Kalkbrenner said. Sometimes the patrons understand, and sometimes they don't.

Ellingson said one of the waitresses at Vito's was threatened by an intoxicated man, who said he was going to hit her. She also said tipping is an issue — some fans tip really well, and others do not tip at all.

"Or they tip really badly because they can't do math in their state of mind," she said.

Seating is another issue waitresses at Vito's have to deal with.

UISG SENATE ELECTIONS

UISG holds senate vote

BY SUSAN ELGIN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Twenty-seven students will vie for 12 UI Student Government senate positions in an ISIS vote starting today and ending Tuesday.

The chosen students will be randomly placed in the Collegiate Senate, which has eight open spots, or the Activities Senate, which has four open spots.

"It is very important that students vote," said Bridget Henry, the director of the Student Elections Board. "These are the people who will make decisions that will affect them."

UISG's $1 million budget funds student groups, so the election is important for anyone involved in campus organizations, she said.

"Student government has power over a huge sum of money, and students need to control who is spending it," said Elections Board member Manish Aggarwal.

The 27 students on the ballot this year is an average number, Henry said. Last year, 32 students ran for senate in the fall special elections. General elections, in which the new UISG president and senators are chosen — except freshmen — are held in the spring.

"If students were not successful in the March or freshman elections, this is a good second opportunity to get involved," Henry said.

Out of the 57 applicants for freshman senators, only 10 were selected. The freshman hopefuls who were not selected can reapply to be elected in this general election.

Ramadan fasting a challenge at the UI

BY MEGHAN V. MALLOY
THE DAILY IOWAN

When Naif Sinada was sitting in class, a classmate began to tear open the packaging to a Reese's Peanut Butter Cup. The sight and smell of the chocolate-peanut butter treat almost caused Sinada to begin salivating, but he was unable to ask for the tiniest nibble, because of his religion.

Sinada, who is Muslim, is observing Ramadan — a holy month in the Muslim faith commemorating Muhammad's receiving the Koran from Allah. Fasting from food and drink between sunrise and sunset is one of the duties of Islam.

Ramadan began Oct. 4., and for many Muslims at the UI, this means a month of daily fasting and prayer. In a society in which people frequently go to lunch and leave religious services for the weekends, Muslims restrain themselves from eating between sunrise to sunset.

Sinada, 20, said although Muslims learn to become accustomed to the fasting after a few days, the practice has been extra difficult for him.

"This has been the hardest year so far," the UI senior said. "You don't notice how much food people eat until you're the one not eating."

The pre-dentistry student, who moved to Iowa City from Saudi Arabia in 2000, said that as a child he would only

Some UI students allege bias against their opinions

"This type of discrimination is a lot more likely to happen in a religion or politics class, rather than an English class."

— Chris Tarbox, former UI student

BY ANGIE MENG
THE DAILY IOWAN

When UI senior Molly Ouren took an ethics course last year, she stopped sharing her opinion in the class because of the instructor's ridicule.

The instructor didn't agree with her opinions, the business and communications major said, and so she'd be mocked.

"I'd write essays, and if I wasn't on the same lines as the professor, I wouldn't get good grades," Ouren said.

Proposed legislation, supported by some Republicans in the House of Representatives, is aiming to protect students from retaliation based on their political or religious viewpoints.

Chris Tarbox, a former UI religion major who transferred to St. Ambrose, said he was often discriminated against in his UI religion classes.

"There were many times that I had to write papers on religion topics, and I'd put my own opinion in it, and the instructors would lower my grade, because they disagreed with my opinion," he said. "This type of discrimination is a lot more likely to happen in a religion or politics class, rather than an English class."

Tarbox said Congress' intention is good, but if the measure was put into action, it would eliminate the point of having discussions in class.

However, Katherine Tachau, a history professor and secretary of the American Association of University Professors at the UI, said she thinks professors rarely lower students' grades because of their different beliefs.

"The teacher's job is to bring students to different perspectives and have them read different materials," she said. "Students don't have to agree with the subjects in the class discussions, and sometimes I think students aren't willing to open up their minds to approach the new ideas, so they feel discriminated in that perspective."

She said she believes the people who are pushing this measure are conservatives who consider campuses to be "too liberal," and those particular conservatives are trying to "silence those who disagree."

"Universities are one of the last places where people are expected to use discussion and reason as a way of getting their opinions crossed," Tachau said.

"Politics and religion aren't like math, where there is a right or wrong answer."

Phillip Jones, the UI vice president for Student Services, agreed that such a measure would discriminate against students' rights to freely express their beliefs and opinions.

"It's a Constitution-basis for universities," he said. "People have the right for free exchange of ideas."

The proposed legislation would go against free speech, and students on campus should be able to express themselves without retaliation from instructors, he said.

A student has the right to complain in terms of discriminating practices, and if the student is correct, "measures could and would be taken," Jones said.

Ouren and Tarbox said they did not file complaints at the UI.

UNI fires under investigation

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa (AP) — Firefighters battled three fires on the University of Northern Iowa campus early Sunday, hours after students celebrated Homecoming.

The fires appeared to be intentionally set, officials said.

The fires were in a building that houses the university's police department and central administration, another that was being used as an emergency command center for homecoming night activities, and a third that was unoccupied.

No arrests had been made as of Sunday, said James O'Conner, a university spokesman.

No one was injured. O'Conner said all the fires appeared to have been started by paper that was ignited in lower-level offices or classrooms.

The state fire marshal's office was investigating.

Police and firefighters working out of Lang Hall first noticed the fire in that building when they smelled smoke, Fire Chief Steve Mitchell said.

About the same time, firefighters responded to a fire alarm at Baker Hall.

A passerby had noticed the Baker Hall fire and went inside to extinguish it, officials said.

"It was very fortunate they came, and he probably saved the building," said Lt. Doug Widen with UNI Department of Public Safety.

The third fire was discovered shortly after 1 a.m. in Gilchrist Hall, university officials said.

Windows in at least two of the buildings were broken. Damage was undetermined.

University officials said Gilchrist Hall will remain closed on Monday, as crews work to clean up damage caused by the fire. Both Lang Hall and Baker Hall will be open for business and classes.

Honken appeals as he moves to death row

IOWA CITY (AP) — Dustin Honken and his legal case are moving to the next level in the federal courts and prison system.

Last week, Honken, 37, was sentenced to death by U.S. District Judge Mark Bennett, closing out the first capital case in the state in more than 40 years.

The former Britt native and methamphetamine dealer was convicted last fall in a 10-week trial for the 1993 drug related slayings of three adults and two children from Mason City. The jury recommended the death penalty for the murders of the children.

In an Oct. 11 hearing, Honken maintained his innocence and criticized the government's fairness in the case. At one point, Honken accused the judge of being on a "death agenda" and said prosecutors manipulated evidence and emotions to win guilty verdicts.

Now, Honken and his appeal efforts are moving to different stages.

Days after the hearing, U.S. marshals transported Honken to the U.S. Penitentiary in Terre Haute, Ind., where prisoners serving federal death sentences are housed. Honken had been serving a 27-year drug sentence in the federal prison in Marion, Ill.

Members of Honken's legal team say they will file a notice of appeal with the U.S. 8th Circuit Court of Appeals later this month. The notice sets in motion a lengthy appeals process — which could take seven years to resolve — that will focus on a variety of issues, including whether Honken received a fair trial, had adequate legal counsel, and whether the judge's rulings were fair.

"The appellate process, in all its twists and turns, can be a long, long road," said Leon Spies, of Iowa City, one of Honken's lawyers.

During the early 1990s, Honken was running a multistate methamphetamine operation, considered by some investigators to be one of the biggest in the Upper Midwest.

He was convicted by a jury in Sioux City in the execution-style slayings of two former dealers turned informants, Greg Nicholson and Terry DeGeus.

He also was found guilty of killing Nicholson's girlfriend, Lori Duncan, and her two young daughters, Kandi, 10, and Amber, 6.

Nicholson, Duncan, and her daughters disappeared in July 1993, just days before Honken was scheduled to plead guilty to drug charges. DeGeus disappeared months later.

Their bodies were found in late 2000, after Honken's former girlfriend, Angela Johnson, scrawled a map of the graves and gave it to a jailhouse informant.

Despite the lack of any physical evidence linking Honken to the murders, the jury found him guilty of planning and carrying out the slayings in an attempt to thwart federal investigators.

Earlier this year, a separate jury convicted Johnson as an accomplice in the slayings and recommended the death penalty. Sentencing is pending a ruling on post-trial appeals.

IC man charged with sexual abuse

Police arrested a 20-year-old Iowa City man this weekend for allegedly sexually assaulting a 12-year-old mentally handicapped boy. Charles Joseph Grendler, 1136 Downey Drive, performed a sex act with a child on Oct. 15, police records allege.

Both the defendant and the victim are clients of Systems Unlimited Inc., a nonprofit organization that helps people with disabilities and other challenges by offering supported living, employment services, and a day program.

Systems Unlimited staff told police the defendant admitted touching the victim's genitals while the boy was naked in his room, police records said. Grendler allegedly admitted to touching him inappropriately and said he knew it was wrong.

Grendler faces a charge of third-degree sexual abuse, which is a Class C Felony punishable by up to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Grendler was released to the Iowa Department of Corrections Sunday morning.

Before the four-hour procedure, White suffered from chest pains and reported being unable to walk around without being short of breath. Following the stent, his chest pain disappeared, and he said he was able to take his dogs out again without having to stop and rest.

"Mr. White did great with this. It was a very difficult procedure, and he really had no problems," Horwitz said. "We're anticipating using this a few times a year."

Horwitz also said the device could be used to support patients whose hearts have already failed, buying time for doctors to prepare more permanent procedures such as transplants.

"It's a great benefit to our patients to be able to provide them with cutting-edge treatments that are not generally available anywhere else," UIHC spokesman Tom Moore said.

"They can benefit their health, especially when other treatments are not helpful."

Although White said he's grateful for the relief, he's worried about how he and his wife will pay for the treatment. On Sunday, he said hospital officials had not yet told him the price.

"It's hard to pay when you're on a low income," he said. "Things are pretty tough all over."

Ramadan fasting at UI

RAMADAN

Although he doesn't strictly follow all the rules placed upon Muslims during the month of Ramadan, he said, he does fast daily and says prayers five times a day.

"My non-Muslim friends have been very supportive," Sinada said. "A few of them are fasting along with me."

UI student Talha Masood, 19, said the physical fasting didn't bother him, but the psychological aspect did. Following the rules for the holy month is more difficult in college than it was in high school, he said.

"You get brain dead faster in college, because the classes are way harder than they were in high school, where you could just doze off," Masood said. Fasting in high school was also rough, however, because he "still had to go to lunch with everyone, and watching them eat was the hardest part."

What he finds most troubling is staying focused when he's sitting through class, he said, rather than thinking about food.

"It's hard to concentrate in lectures," he said. "Most of my studying is done at night now."

The UI Association of Muslims in America will host several events starting today in honor of Ramadan Awareness Week, including a question-and-answer session, an invitation to non-Muslims to support their Muslim friends by fasting with them, and an Iftar — fast-breaking party — at the end of the week.

BALAKOT, Pakistan — Pakistani officials predicted Sunday that many more thousands of dead would be found in earthquake-ravaged Kashmir, as heavy rains in the Himalayan region drenched homeless survivors in mud and misery.

The latest estimate would raise the death toll from the magnitude-7.6 quake in the mountains of northern Pakistan and India to at least 54,000 — a jump of more than 13,000 from the official count of known dead.

A spokesman for the prime minister of the region warned that the cold and wet could cause further deaths among the 2 million or so people believed to be homeless, although the rains receded early Monday, bringing hope that efforts could resume in force to bring aid to the stricken region.

Approximately a fifth of the villages in the quake zone remained cut off eight days after the tremor turned villages scattered across lush mountainsides into death traps, and the bad weather over Kashmir halted aid flights by helicopters.

Two strong aftershocks shook the area early this morning, including one measuring 4.5-magnitude, but there was no immediate report of damage. There have been hundreds of aftershocks since the Oct. 8 quake, and experts say they could continue for months.

Government officials in Islamabad said early Sunday that 39,422 people were confirmed killed in all of Pakistan — at least 26,422 dead in the Pakistani portion of Kashmir and another 13,000 in North West Frontier Province.

But later Sunday, a spokesman for the state government chief in the Pakistani portion of Kashmir said the death toll in that region alone is believed to be "not less than 40,000." This would mean the quake killed more than 53,000 in all of Pakistan.

With another 1,350 deaths reported in India's part of Kashmir, that brings the quake's death toll to more than 54,000.

Locals use Sukkot for Katrina assistance

Nick Loomis/The Daily Iowan

Jonathan Zabner, 12, of Coralville carries lumber outside the Hillel Foundation on Sunday afternoon for the building of the sukkah, a symbolic shelter built in celebration of Sukkot to raise money for Katrina victims. Sukkot is a Jewish holiday in which the temporary shelter is built to commemorate the Israelites' wandering in the desert.

'I really wanted to use the holiday to support the community I left.'

— Alyssa Kaplan, UI transfer student

BY DANNY VALENTINE
THE DAILY IOWAN

For Alyssa Kaplan, a transfer student from Tulane University, Sunday's Jewish Sukkot festival has never had so much personal relevance as this year, in the wake of Hurricane Katrina's destruction.

Sukkot, a celebration in which Jews are obligated to build a temporary hut, is no longer purely symbolic for Iowa City Jewish residents — it also symbolizes the rebuilding of an entire city.

For the first time ever, the Hillel Foundation, 122 E. Market St., will use the event to raise money. Members want to provide help for Hurricane Katrina victims.

"Symbolically, it is really powerful," said UI senior Samuel Platt, who is Jewish.

Several businesses donated gifts, ranging from T-shirts to disposable cameras, to be raffled away.

"I really wanted to use the holiday to support the community I left," Kaplan said.

Even though raffle tickets were sold, Hillel decided to push back the drawing until another event, because most people left without giving their information. Hillel members also couldn't comment on how much money the event raised. For now, it's the thought that counts, organizers said.

"A few businesses came and gave $1 or $2, and this is more important than $100," said Tali Ariav, Hillel's Jewish student-life coordinator.

At Hillel, the building of the traditional sukkah lasted from around 11:30 a.m. until 2:30 p.m.

In traditional sukkah construction, three of the building's sides must be temporary, the roof must be partially exposed, and the building can be constructed out of whatever material is available — in the case of the Hillel Foundation, 2-by-4's.

Jerry Sorokin, the Hillel director, said the sukkah shows Jewish homes are open to the world. Hospitality, he said, is a very important element of the celebration.

Historically, Jews were supposed to eat and sleep in the sukkah for the duration of the festival, but in today's society, the building is mostly just for symbolism, Hillel members said.

Ex-councilor gives $100,000 to dog park

BY COLIN BURKE
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI seniors Kate and Will Lothamer walk their 1½ year old dog Max at least a couple of times a day. As the couple strolls down the path along the Iowa River on a fall Sunday afternoon, they note that it's tough to let Max run free because of his energy and friendly nature.

"He can't be off his leash because he chases everything he sees," Kate Lothamer said.

The couple, like dozens of others in Iowa City, would welcome the possibility of having a dog park in which pooches could run without a leash.

"It'd be nice to let him run free," Will Lothamer said.

Former Iowa City City Councilor Dean Thornberry is donating more than $100,000 to the Johnson County Dog Park Action Committee, which will help the committee to build a dog park on Foster Road near the Peninsula Neighborhood. The 10- to 11-acre park will feature areas for large and small dogs, a pond, and walking trails, among other things.

Thornberry, 64, has been involved in community service for many years. His most significant effort was when he would fly people of lower income status to hospitals, such as UI Hospitals and Clinics, in his Cirrus airplane, which he has since sold because of his health problems.

A former franchisee for Burger King, Thornberry plans to take his Rhodesian ridgeback, named Boulder, to the park. He said the facility is something essential to Iowa City.

"I felt that we needed it, and it was something that I felt I could afford," he said, adding the dog park will benefit the city as well. "Hopefully, this will help other parks not have as many free-ranging animals running around."

Beth Shields, the president of the Johnson County Dog Park Action Committee, said Thornberry's donation is fabulous.

"It's an amazingly generous gift," she said. "We think it does lend more credibility to what we think is an already credible group."

An employee of the Clinical Trials Statistical and Data Management Center of the UI College of Public Health, Shields is the owner of two Dalmatians, named Lily and Rose, and she said she has to take them to the dog park in Cedar Rapids to let them run free.

She said the committee is attempting to get a permit from the Iowa Department of Natural Resources and expects City Council's approval of the park on Tuesday. "We've had a great relationship with City Council all along, and we don't expect this will be a problem," Shields said.

A Start-Up Municipal Electric Utility is Risky Business

Converting Iowa City's electric service to a start-up municipal system exposes the community to rate increases and instability.

Consider these points:

- Iowa City will need to borrow up to $60 million dollars to finance a start-up utility, or $11,800* of debt per owner-occupied home, an obligation that would likely increase the rates customers pay.
- MidAmerican Energy's electric rates have been stable since 1995 and will remain stable through at least 2011.
- Unless the city spends hundreds of millions of dollars to build its own electric generation plants, it will need to buy its electricity on the extremely volatile open market.
- Municipal utility rates are not regulated by the Iowa Utilities Board, which means your rates can be raised at any time and in any amount.

Sex offender charged

A convicted sex offender allegedly violated residency conditions and broke a no-contact order concerning a 17-year-old female

BY MARK BOSWORTH
THE DAILY IOWAN

A convicted sex offender was charged late last week with violating sex-offender residency requirements and following a 17-year-old girl he was barred from contacting.

Jonathan Leroy Hingtgen, 24, was apprehended Oct. 14 by Iowa City police on a Coralville police warrant for allegedly not complying with the residency requirements of the state's sex-offender law.

In 2000, he was convicted of indecent conduct with a female child under the age of 13, according to an online search of the state sex-offender database.

Since August, Hingtgen has resided at 3701 Second St. Apt. 3 in Coralville, which is located within 2,000 feet of a childcare facility, a violation of sex-offender housing limitations, according to police documents.

The convicted sex offender had been previously been warned by Coralville police of the violation and allegedly failed to comply, prompting the warrant, police records show.

At the same time Coralville police were looking into Hingtgen's residency status, Iowa City police were investigating several calls that a "suspicious" person had been spotted in the area near West High.

Hingtgen was later allegedly identified as the suspicious individual, police records show.

Additionally, an Iowa City police investigation reportedly discovered that Hingtgen had violated a no-contact order by initiating contact with a 17-year-old female who is a protected party.

Police allege that Hingtgen had followed, harassed, and made several phone calls to the girl after the order was issued to him on Aug. 25.

After being tipped off that Hingtgen was near the protected girl's home, Iowa City police, with the help of the Cedar Rapids police helicopter, located Hingtgen near the residence.

Police officials could not comment Sunday on why the helicopter unit was needed, nor could they provide additional information on Hingtgen's arrest.

He was being held at the Johnson County Jail on a $20,000 cash-only bail as of Sunday.

Officials ponder high-school changes

District requirements are no longer up to standards with state suggested requirements

BY ERIKA BINEGAR
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa City School Board members and district officials mulled changes to the high-school graduation requirements during a five-hour board retreat Sunday, and some expressed concern about the curriculum and the rigor of course offerings.

In order to graduate from a district high school, a student must have four years of English classes, in addition to two years each of math and science. But state officials suggest that students finish high school with three years each of math and science, and board members proposed to alter district requirements before an eventual state mandate.

"We know it's coming, and we could be ahead of the curve," board member Aletia Morgan said.

One concern is that courses will be "watered down" if graduation requirements are toughened in the district. Meanwhile, district officials worry that the high-school curriculum is not demanding enough, Superintendent Lane Plugge said.

Board member Toni Cilek suggested the district monitor the success of first-year college students as a way to measure the rigor of the district curriculum. The district should seek teachers' input, she added.

"We need to be accountable for how this is happening," she said. "But the last thing we want to do is make people feel defensive at the secondary level."

Plugge will speak with educational partners in an effort to collect suggestions and establish a course of action. In one month, he will present a "rough road map" of a possible starting point.

Board members also discussed the cap on credit for fine arts in high schools. As of now, only 60 credit hours can apply to the total 294 hours required for graduation.

Students may take four years of one music course, such as orchestra, and receive credit, but if they take more than one music class, they receive no credit after their sophomore year, Morgan said.

"I just don't think it's appropriate to single out these courses," she said.

The cap was originally instituted to avoid grade inflation — music students, who earn mostly As and Bs in the courses, would have extremely high GPAs, which could be an advantage over other students.

With the cap, only 20 percent of music students' grades would be from fine arts courses.

"I think the concern is that you could get half your credits in the area of music," Plugge said.

Other board members responded that students would not be able to attain that many music credits because they would need to fulfill other graduation requirements.

In other board business, members discussed reimplementing foreign-language courses in elementary schools, as well as the need to gather data on secondary students who study foreign languages.

Board member Gayle Klouda said it is important to find out exactly what the community wants, and Cilek noted the implications of putting foreign languages back in the elementary schools, which might mean other programs would have to be cut.

Iraqi officials say Constitution will pass

Khalid Mohammed/Associated Press

An Iraqi soldier loads ballot boxes on Sunday so they can be shipped to Baghdad to be counted in the referendum on Iraq's Constitution. Iraqi officials said the Constitution will almost certainly be approved.

BY LEE KEATH
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAGHDAD — Iraq's landmark Constitution seemed assured of passage Sunday after initial results showed minority Sunni Arabs had fallen short in an effort to veto it at the polls. The apparent acceptance was a major step in the attempt to establish a democratic government that could lead to the withdrawal of U.S. troops.

Opponents failed to secure the necessary two-thirds "no" vote in any three of Iraq's 18 provinces, according to counts that local officials provided to the Associated Press. In the crucial central provinces with mixed ethnic and religious populations, enough Shiites and Kurds voted to stymie the Sunni bid to reject the Constitution.

Iraqi President Jalal Talabani issued a decree setting Dec. 15 for Iraqis to vote again, this time to elect a new Parliament. If the Constitution indeed passed, the first full-term Parliament since Saddam Hussein's fall in 2003 will install a new government by Dec. 31. If the charter has failed, the Parliament will be temporary, tasked with drawing up a new draft on which to vote.

But the outcome could further divide the nation, with many Sunnis fearing the new decentralized government will deprive them of their fair share in the country's vast oil wealth. Large numbers of Sunnis voted "No," and some of their leaders were already rejecting the apparent result.

While a strong Sunni turnout in the Oct. 15 referendum suggested a desire among many to participate in Iraq's new political system, there were fears that anger at being ruled under a Constitution they oppose could push some into supporting the Sunni-led insurgency.

"If the Constitution was passed, the attacks will definitely rise against the occupation forces, and the security situation is going to be worse," said Sheik Abdul-Salam al-Kubaisi, a prominent cleric with the influential Sunni Association of Muslim Scholars, which government officials accuse of links to the insurgency.

In a sign of the relentless danger, five U.S. soldiers were killed on Oct. 15 by a bomb in Ramadi, a hotbed of militants west of Baghdad, the military announced. It was the deadliest attack on U.S. troops since a Sept. 29 bomb blast in the same town also killed five soldiers. A Marine was also killed by a bomb Saturday in the town of Saqlawiyah, the military said.

The most recent deaths brought to at least 1,976 the number of U.S. service members who have died since the war began in 2003, according to an AP count.

President Bush congratulated Iraqis on the referendum, which across the country saw few attacks and no deaths of voters in violence.

"The vote today in Iraq is in stark contrast to the attitude, the philosophy and strategy of Al Qaeda and its terrorist friends and killers," Bush said.

The Constitution is a crucial step in Iraq's transition to democracy after two decades of dictatorship under Saddam. Washington was hoping it would pass so Iraqis can form a legitimate, representative government, tame the insurgency and enable the 150,000 U.S. troops to begin withdrawing.

On Sunday, U.S. military helicopters, Humvees and armored vehicles were helping transport the last ballot boxes from polling stations to counting centers in the provincial capitals. Those centers were making initial counts, then were to truck the ballots to Baghdad for the final tallying, which was likely to begin on Monday and to last into Tuesday.

Bush lauds Iraqi vote

BY PETE YOST
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Bush on Sunday portrayed Iraqis' vote on a new Constitution as a victory for opponents of terrorism and a sign that the country was moving toward a democracy.

"The vote today in Iraq is in stark contrast to the attitude, the philosophy, and strategy of Al Qaeda and its terrorist friends and killers," the president said.

Earlier, in London, Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice said violence will continue in Iraq even if the Constitution is approved and that support for the insurgency will wane in the march toward democracy.

"Al Qaeda wants to use its violent ways to stop the march to progress," Bush said upon his arrival at the White House after a weekend at Camp David.

"We believe and the Iraqis believe that the best way forward is through the democratic process," he said. The president did not take questions from reporters.

Bush congratulated Iraqis for successfully completing the balloting, saying that by all indications the turnout — and Sunni participation — was greater than it was in January for election for a temporary government and that there was less violence than last time.

After months of difficult negotiations over the proposed Constitution, the president grabbed the opportunity to speak to what he said is an important step for the Middle Eastern nation.

Rice, ending a weeklong trip to Central Asia and Europe that dealt with Iraq, Iran, and other issues, told reporters before returning to Washington, "I have no doubt that the terrorists are going to continue to try to derail the political process, but they've failed every time they've tried to derail it."

"If we leave prematurely, we will have failed in what our goal is here, which is to have a different kind of Middle East" that is not a source of violent extremism.

On another Middle East issue, Rice ruled out for now any direct negotiations between the United States and Iran over Tehran's nuclear program.

"We're listening to them, but as far as broad-scale U.S. involvement in talks, I don't at this point see that that would be productive," Rice said.

AP diplomatic correspondent Anne Gearan contributed to this report.

'Mom didn't believe it was real. Dad thought it was cool. Grandma predicted I was getting engaged when I told her I had surprising news.'

So this girl with bright pink hair wrote on me the other day. I don't know why, but I just sat there for a half hour letting her color away.

I've taken two showers every day since, and it hasn't even faded. I might just want to live with it forever.

I never planned on getting a tattoo. In fact, I think I can be quoted a handful of times saying, "I would never get a tattoo. Maybe if they could invent one that lasted a year, I'd consider it, but I would never get something so permanent."

Well, never say never. So, I'll answer the question you're likely most curious about — sober.

The minor details — Iowa Tigerhawk. Left shoulder blade. Felt like constant bee stings. Still feels like sunburn, so please don't slap it to be funny. Mom didn't believe it was real. Dad thought it was cool. Grandma predicted I was getting engaged when I told her I had surprising news.

But I warned her it was something more permanent than that. I know there are methods of removal, but because they involved lasers and razor blades, you can safely bet on the fact that it's going with me to the grave.

The idea originated a month or so ago. Then it turned into a strong consideration, then a game plan, then I came home one day to find my friends sitting in my living room wanting me to stop talking about it and get it already. I don't like to let people down, so we marched down the street, discussed which side to get it on, and then I signed my skin away.

Prior to entering the tattoo parlor, I thought getting 3 square inches of ink needled into my back was kind of a big deal. That was prior to entering. I saw the man behind the counter who looked like he had permanent paintballs shot at his face. I flipped through the scrapbook to see pictures of someone with a tattoo of the band Kiss covering his entire backside, someone with the restaurant Baldys tattooed across his bald head, and my personal favorite, someone with the Kool-Aid man tattooed on her arm.

At that point, my mission seemed pretty minor. I felt like the employees were laughing on the inside. "Oh, you're getting that there? And that's all the bigger you want it? How about you do it yourself and come back when you're ready to decorate your entire body with Gene Simmons?"

But sure enough, a half hour later, I walked out a changed man. Well, 3 square inches changed.

POINT/COUNTERPOINT

The iPod's insidious impact?

Apple's newest iPod added video playback to the ubiquitous device's list of features. With us now perhaps in sight of the day when people needn't look at or listen to anything else, DI editorial writers debate the profound ethical and moral implications of our iPod culture.

SOCIETY'S BANE

Last night's episode of "Desperate Housewives": $2. A new, 60-GB iPod capable of playing music, movies, and TV: $399.

Enjoying my day independent of an iPod: priceless.

The iPod has come between man and his world. For iPod users dependent on the little white gadget, even a silent walk to class has become unthinkable. iPod owners are tuning out the simple sounds of life — the satisfying crunch of autumn leaves, the whispers of the breeze, or the bits and pieces of conversation all around.

The iPod has even come between the user and his fellow man. How many times have I witnessed the oblivious white-corded hipster unaware of friends yelling out his name or the bicyclist trying to navigate the sidewalk? The bicyclist falls, because the iPodder only hears Kanye West. For the 81 broken homes of Facebook members who "love their iPod more than they love their families," all I have to say is, I hope you're happy.

But worst of all, the iPod has even come between man and music. There was a time when music inspired emotion in us, when music rendered genuine emotions. But to the iPod owners with surgically attached earplugs, the zombie-like expressions on their faces tell all. Listening to music all throughout the day has desensitized them. Music is no longer an escape when it's a 24/7 escape.

And now, because of the latest capabilities of the iPod, we can cut ourselves off even further from our world by carrying little TVs in our pockets.

Who wants to catch last night's "Desperate Housewives" on a tiny 2.5-inch screen during the few minutes of the day? We don't need to be entertained every single minute of our lives.

Why would I want to pay $400 to disconnect myself from the world? I think I'll stick to bird songs on my next walk to class.

— Shajia Ahmad

JUST MISUNDERSTOOD

iPods are awesome. I love my iPod like I love my mom. Does that make me such a terrible person?

Yes, everywhere you look on campus, people are listening to iPods and not making spontaneous conversation with those around them. But two years ago, people were walking around listening to portable CD players. Twenty years back, people were jamming to Dire Straits on their cutting-edge Walkmans. People just prefer listening to music to talking to other people. Why complain about it?

Are the other auditory options really so attractive? Without the music on my iPod, I would be listening to children squawking, girls yelling into their cell phones, and fratrics comparing their latest conquests. And that's just one Cambus ride.

iPods are not a status symbol — they're a necessity for a music lover. Yes, I'm sure there are people who like to show off those little white earbuds to make sure everyone can see what Mommy and Daddy bought for them. But is that more obnoxious than girls who ostentatiously carry their enormous (and stupid) Louis Vuitton handbags to class?

The newest generation of iPods are cheaper, have longer battery life, and can hold music, photos, and video — much to the chagrin of someone such as me, who paid approximately $1 million for a primitive, outmoded black-and-white version two years ago. MP3 players are becoming less like a plaything for rich people who have money to blow and more like a basic accessory along the lines of a cell phone.

As long as people use basic courtesy (take off the headphones when someone is talking to you, don't blast your music so loud that everyone else can hear it), there's nothing to get riled up over. If iPod opponents such as Shajia just broke down and got one, they would understand how amazing they really are. Come on, Shajia. Drink the Kool-Aid.

Schooling's lessons

Stacey Perk ("On schooling's useless lessons," Oct. 13) misses the whole point of a liberal-arts education. General education courses are a waste of her time? And she wants to be a journalist, of all things.

Journalists don't just write; they write about things. A journalist who has studied nothing but journalism will be able to write intelligently only about journalism; but the journalist who knows her way around politics, economics, history, geography, the sciences, and the arts will be able to open windows for her readers on any subject that comes along. If anyone needs a broad educational background, it's a journalist.

If learning a single skill or trade suits your needs and goals, don't waste your time and everyone else's at a university; go to a community college or a trade school. Specialized job training is their niche. Many of them do it very well and do it more quickly and more cheaply than a university. But if you want an education — preparation for a lifetime of understanding what's going on around you and adapting to changing situations, on the job and off — then a liberal-arts curriculum full of gen-ed courses will set you up much better. The more you learn about what makes the world tick — regardless of your major — the less likely you are to be baffled or blind-sided by things that are new and different. Employers tend to pay people with four-year degrees more, because, thanks to a broad range of coursework, they bring more to the job than just a major.

If you are in it for an education, general-education courses won't waste your time. If gen-ed courses are just in your way, you need to ask yourself whether a university education is really what you want.

Iraq's Constitution

I sincerely wish that passing this Iraqi Constitution will do everything President Bush claims it will. I would love nothing more than to be proved completely wrong on every assumption that has led me for the past two years to look at my newspaper every day and think to myself, "I told you so." I'm willing to give up my pride and my frustration with this administration just to see something that resembles peace happen over there.

I'd also like to win the lottery.

I'm wary, to say the least, because Bush and his supporters have a kind of twisted optimism bordering on willful ignorance that is extremely disturbing. Every little "newsworthy event" like this in Iraq: the "mission accomplished" speech, the large mobilizations, the first vote, the capturing of endless "No. 2 in commands," etc., is just more spin created to boost something in the back of people's minds that maybe, just maybe, things are going to work out after all. The problem is, for the past two years, they have done anything but.

It is all a sham. If anything, Iraq is even closer to civil war now than it was before. The Constitution will only polarize competing factions within Iraq and lead to more violence. Meanwhile, U.S. soldiers will be caught in the fray, still under-supported and poorly led.

GUEST OPINION

Human trafficking as local concern

Imagine finding yourself in a strange country. You are locked in a room, beaten badly, with your passport confiscated. You thought you were coming here to work as a cleaning lady, as your "employer" back home had promised, but, instead, you have been gang raped and told you will now be a prostitute to pay off your "transportation costs." If you fail to comply, you will be beaten again, and your family back home will be harmed as well. You don't speak the language, do not know anyone, and you have no idea where you are or how to escape.

If this sounds like a scenario from a Third World, lawless country, you might be surprised to know that this is happening right here in Iowa. It's called human trafficking, and current estimates, by the Department of Justice, show that 14,000 to 18,000 individuals are trafficked into the United States every year. These statistics do not even take into account individuals trafficked within the country. While human trafficking often involves forcing vulnerable women into prostitution, any transfer of humans for the purpose of forced labor and exploitation can be considered human trafficking by federal law. Recent cases of human trafficking in the United States have involved forced prostitution, forced factory work, domestic servitude, and restaurant service, to name a few.

Human trafficking is a worldwide epidemic arising as a tragic side effect of globalization. In recognition of the problem, the United Nations created the supplemental human-trafficking protocols to the Transnational Crime Convention. In 2000, the U.S. federal government brought into force the Trafficking Victims Protection Act, a sweeping law that increased protection and services for victims as well as penalties for perpetrators. This is good, but with fewer than 2 percent of all trafficking cases in the United States actually brought to prosecution, it is not good enough.

To help fight human trafficking on a more local level, many states have enacted legislation against it. California Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger signed a comprehensive bill into law just last week. Iowa has the opportunity to do the same thing. This spring, a bill will be proposed by State Sen. Maggie Tinsman, R-Davenport, that will make human trafficking in Iowa a crime. In addition to providing a penalty for perpetrators, the bill will also provide services to trafficking victims and allow immunity for victims from crimes committed during their captivity, such as visa violations and prostitution. Finally, and more importantly, the bill will allow for training local law-enforcement officers to help them recognize traffickers, trafficking situations, and their victims. Because law-enforcement officials are often the first to respond to a possible trafficking scenario, having the training to properly identify the problem is key.

Helping Tinsman draft the bill is the Des Moines-based Iowa Network Against Human Trafficking. It is dedicated to passing state human-trafficking legislation in addition to educating the public about what human trafficking is. In addition to the network, the Iowa Human Trafficking Awareness Project is a UI student-led group that aims to educate the university community about the human-rights abuses of human trafficking, along with advocacy for pending anti-trafficking legislation here in Iowa.

While the work of the Iowa Network Against Human Trafficking and the Iowa Human Trafficking Awareness Project is good, it also is not enough. We need a critical mass of students and citizens willing to educate itself and others about the crime of trafficking and willing to speak up for stronger laws and services to protect those vulnerable to trafficking. Speak to your local policy-makers and urge them to pass anti-trafficking legislation. Talk with your friends and classmates about what trafficking is. The more we know, the thinner the veil of ignorance that traffickers hide behind becomes.

Kate Karacay is president and founder of the Iowa Human Trafficking Awareness Project.

Free fallin'

The "Grand Old Party," recklessly conducted by the Bush administration, is engulfed in a sea of scandals and corruption, sending the entire Republican Party in a total free fall with no end in sight. While the GOP scrambles to stop the bleeding, the Democrats are quietly licking their lips at the thought of the 2006 midterm elections.

The Republican Party, traditionally touted for its moral superiority to even Jesus himself, has been recently caught engaging in highly unethical activity. House Majority Leader Tom DeLay, R-Texas, a.k.a. "The Hammer," has been indicted for alleged campaign-funding violations. His offenses tagged to his recent indictment are the latest in his extensive history of ethics abuses.

In 1997, the House Ethics Committee rebuked DeLay because of statements he made linking political access to campaign contributions. He was also reprimanded for his involvement in a 2002 golf fundraiser for an energy company and his 2003 use of the Federal Aviation Administration to pinpoint the location of Texas Democratic House members. The Democrats were protesting the DeLay-supported initiative to redraw the Texas congressional districts to boost GOP representation in Congress.

Karl Rove, the White House deputy chief of staff and GOP hatchet man, also faces the possibility of being indicted. Rove appeared before a grand jury for the fourth time on Oct. 14 to further elaborate on his role in the outing of CIA operative Valerie Plame. Rove's testimony lasted four and a half hours, fueling speculation that he will soon join DeLay on the list of prominent Republican leaders that have been indicted. Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist, R-Tenn., is also facing a possible scandal; he has just been subpoenaed for his involvement in an insider trading case. These scandals have begun to take a toll on the already tainted Bush presidency.

The Bush administration has a lengthy and comprehensive history of manipulating media to advance its political agenda. The White House has invested millions in video "news releases" in which individuals are paid to pose as reporters and praise Bush policy initiatives. The most famous example involved Bush's 2003 Medicare plan. The Bush team has also paid right-wing political pundits to promote Bush policies, including $240,000 to commentator Armstrong Williams to boost public opinion of the No Child Left Behind Act. Last February, White House "reporter" Jim Guckert, a.k.a. Jeff Gannon, received clearance through the White House as a reporter for TalonNews.com, a website run by a Texas Republican operative. After bloggers discovered his real identity and lack of serious journalist credentials, Gannon resigned.

President Bush continued his policy of using the media to mislead the public on Oct. 13, when he participated in a scripted teleconference with U.S. soldiers in Iraq. A live feed of 10 U.S. soldiers and one Iraqi soldier from Tikrit was beamed to the president at the Eisenhower Executive Office Building. The event was scripted and choreographed to match the president's goals for the war in Iraq. The teleconference displayed a perfect mix of Bush's trademark unshakable arrogance and his patented smoke-and-mirrors patriotism we have come to know so well these last four-plus years. Fortunately, Americans are showing signs that they are fed up with Bush's antics.

A poll for the Pew Research Center for the People & the Press found that for the first time since taking office, more people believe the Bush presidency will be judged as unsuccessful rather than as a success. Bush's approval rating among African-Americans: 2 percent, according to new NBC/Wall Street Journal poll. Bush's overall approval rating remains at an all-time low of 39 percent, and only 50 percent of Bush's own party members "strongly support" the president, down from two-thirds right after the election.

The Democrats must take this opportunity to show America they can offer a positive and bold alternative to the GOP. America needs the Democrats to syphon the corruption out of politics and offer better solutions on security, health care, and alternative energy resources, so they can then begin the steps, however small, to repair the unthinkable damage done by this Republican-led government. ■

Today's stories are the first installment in a three-day series for the magazine's Iowa visit

All the news that gives you fits

BY JENNA SAUERS
 THE DAILY IOWAN

The world of Andy Borowitz's satire is strangely familiar in texture: an accused murderer pledges to "find the real killers," government agencies communicate in color codes, and a shyster tells American neoconservatives that yes, a Middle Eastern nation has weapons of mass destruction. Only with Borowitz, the defendant trying to pass blame to his bevy of look-alikes is Saddam Hussein, the colors signal the level of current official apathy ("red means 'severe apathy' — will not cut short summer vacation in Nantucket"), and the huckster takes over the Middle Eastern nation's Oil Ministry.

Oh, wait. Borowitz writes for The New Yorker, Newsweek's online edition, and his own website, www.borowitzreport.com, and is featured regularly on CNN and NPR. His brand of bracing spoof-news has a quality you itch to call accuracy: He combines ripped-from-the-headlines immediacy with pitch-perfect political understanding and expels it in a perfect hologram of AP-style prose.

Growing up in Shaker Heights, a suburb of Cleveland, Borowitz (who attended the same high school as Harvey Pekar) recalls his early interest in comedy was slaked by his father, who would take him to a movie theater that screened classics to see the Marx Brothers, Harold Lloyd, and Charlie Chaplin. Later, he became editor of his high-school newspaper, The Shakerite.

Borowitz writer-comedian

"I really never was a journalist. I never had a notepad," said Borowitz when the DI reached him at his office at The New Yorker. "But I remember really wanting to be the editor of the newspaper just so I could do an April Fool's edition where I could do a lot of fake news stories."

The former Harvard Lampoon editor's parents had encouraged him to follow his father into law — he remembers his mother telling him "that being in law school and being a lawyer was the same thing as being in show business. Just as exciting" — but instead, he was discovered doing standup in Cambridge, Mass., by Hollywood producer Bud Yorkin.

Borowitz moved to Los Angeles three weeks after college graduation and went on to have a 15-year career there as a comedy writer and producer. He co-created the television series "The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air" and produced the Oscar-nominated film Pleasantville before deciding to return to his roots: writing and performing humor.

The high-tension environment of live standup is a habitat Borowitz loves, for the comedic exercise as much as anything else. "We live in a culture where everyone is sort-of expected to be funny. You're supposed to make wisecracks when you're in the elevator or just waiting in line for a train or a bus," he said. "But with standup comedy, I think there is so much craft involved." Borowitz rattles off a list of the art form's, to a non-comedian, daunting requirements: "You not only have to be able to write a really good joke, you have to be able to deliver it, and you also have to know what order to tell your jokes in, and you have to be able to take the right pauses ... and you have to be able to make the right facial expressions."

Being well-practiced — Borowitz has performed in front of thousands in Central Park and in Las Vegas — helps immensely. "Where I'm at now, I feel a real comfort with the audience, that I'm not going to totally disappoint them," he said, then paused for a split-second before changing his tack. "Although I guess it's always within the realm of possibility. Iowa may be my Waterloo. It may be where I pack it up and say, well, it was a nice career for a while, but I couldn't make 'em laugh in Iowa, so forget it."

BENEFIT Higher Ground hurricane benefit concert

When: 8 p.m. today
 Where: Clapp Recital Hall
 Admission: Free but donations welcome
 More info: Those unable to attend who wish to donate may contact the UI School of Music (319) 335-1603.

Dozens of UI musicians will join the ranks of altruistic artists everywhere who have employed their talents to benefit those in New Orleans. But tonight's Higher Grounds concert aims to help the Big Easy's young musicians.

The UI student chapters of the Music Therapy Association and the Music Teachers National Conference organized the concert. Admission to the 8 p.m. Clapp Recital Hall performance is free, but donations will be collected upon entry and after the concert concludes. All money raised will go toward the American Public School Endowment, which will then funnel the funds to the New Orleans Center for Creative Arts.

The lengthy lineup of musicians includes the Maia String Quartet, the UI Pan American Steel Band, the UI Flute Ensemble, the Double Reed Ensemble, and several School of Music faculty members and students.

"We'd done fundraisers in the past for the tsunami," said Joshua Russell, the UI Music Teachers National Conference president. "We found that music is such a good way to reach out to people."

The American Public School Endowment is a Louisiana-based charity that awards grants and funds to schools nationwide. The endowment has focused on repairing local school systems shattered as a result of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita, among other problems plaguing the area.

"Schools in New Orleans were in a mess before the hurricane hit. Corruption was a huge quagmire," endowment President Joseph Abraham said.

But the disaster has afforded the group a chance to make better a devastating tragedy.

"The hurricane has really caused a lot of problems, but it also created a great opportunity to do something," Abraham said.

The nonprofit organization will send the raised money to the New Orleans Center for Creative Arts, an arts and music school. Local public-school students attend the center for half-days and after school to gain exposure to the arts they cannot always find in the traditional public-school environment.

"It offers sorely needed balms," Abraham said. "To be anything of excellence to those kids is a great kindness."

Russell said the two student groups wanted to find an organization local to the areas affected by the hurricanes. Based in Lafayette, La., the American Public School Endowment immediately caught their eye. When Abraham recommended the Center for Creative Arts as the ultimate destination for their money, Russell said the groups were even more pleased their efforts would aid music.

"It's one music organization helping out another," he said.

Shading closer to Dubuque

BY JENNA SAUERS
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Harold Ross said, when pitching the publication he founded to financial backers, that "The New Yorker would be the magazine not edited for the old lady in Dubuque" — but times have obviously changed. This week, the venerable weekly heads, though not directly to the mid-sized Iowa town, in its vicinity.

Three staff writers at The New Yorker, Jane Mayer, Mark Singer, and George Packer, will participate today in the roundtable discussion "Searching for the Story" with moderator and New Yorker features editor Daniel Zalewski.

So, how do investigative reporters at one of the best and best-loved magazines in the country search for stories?

"The challenge is enormous for a reporter in Washington," Mayer said. "No administration has been as secretive as this one — or as closed. At least not in my experience." She has spent 21 years writing about politics, including 11 years as White House correspondent for the Wall Street Journal. "I always think it's a challenge to make the people in power seem like actual people," she said, and even getting access to those in seats of power is problematic under the Bush administration. "They don't return phone calls," she said. "It makes it more challenging and in some ways more interesting, but there are always ways to get stories anyway."

Packer has recently covered the Iraq war for the magazine, making four trips to the country. A successful author, he came to journalism after spending time in the Peace Corps, teaching college writing courses, and publishing two novels (The Half Man, Random House, 1991; and Central Square, Graywolf, 1998). He faced specific challenges working in Iraq, one of the most dangerous places on Earth to be a journalist. "It's just a complicated and dangerous reality to get at," he said.

Mayer's writing often investigates complex policy issues, such as the treatment of detainees at the Guantánamo Bay military camp in Cuba and the CIA's practice of extraordinary rendition (sending terror suspects overseas for interrogation in countries that practice torture). Of the latter topic, she said, "It's hard to make a story like that alive and readable for people and not just sort of a dry disquisition or discussion." Her task as she sees it is to commit to paper stories that are gripping, that have a narrative, and that are readable — stories that breathe. "What I often try to do is to find characters who will bring it alive and a chronology of a particular point in time when something unfolded."

"Good writing requires a character with a voice," said Packer, and the best way to bring those qualities out is simply to spend extra time with the people he interviews. "Usually, the first sound bite is not the whole story."

The Bottom Line Cartoon Caption Contest (for Faculty and Staff)

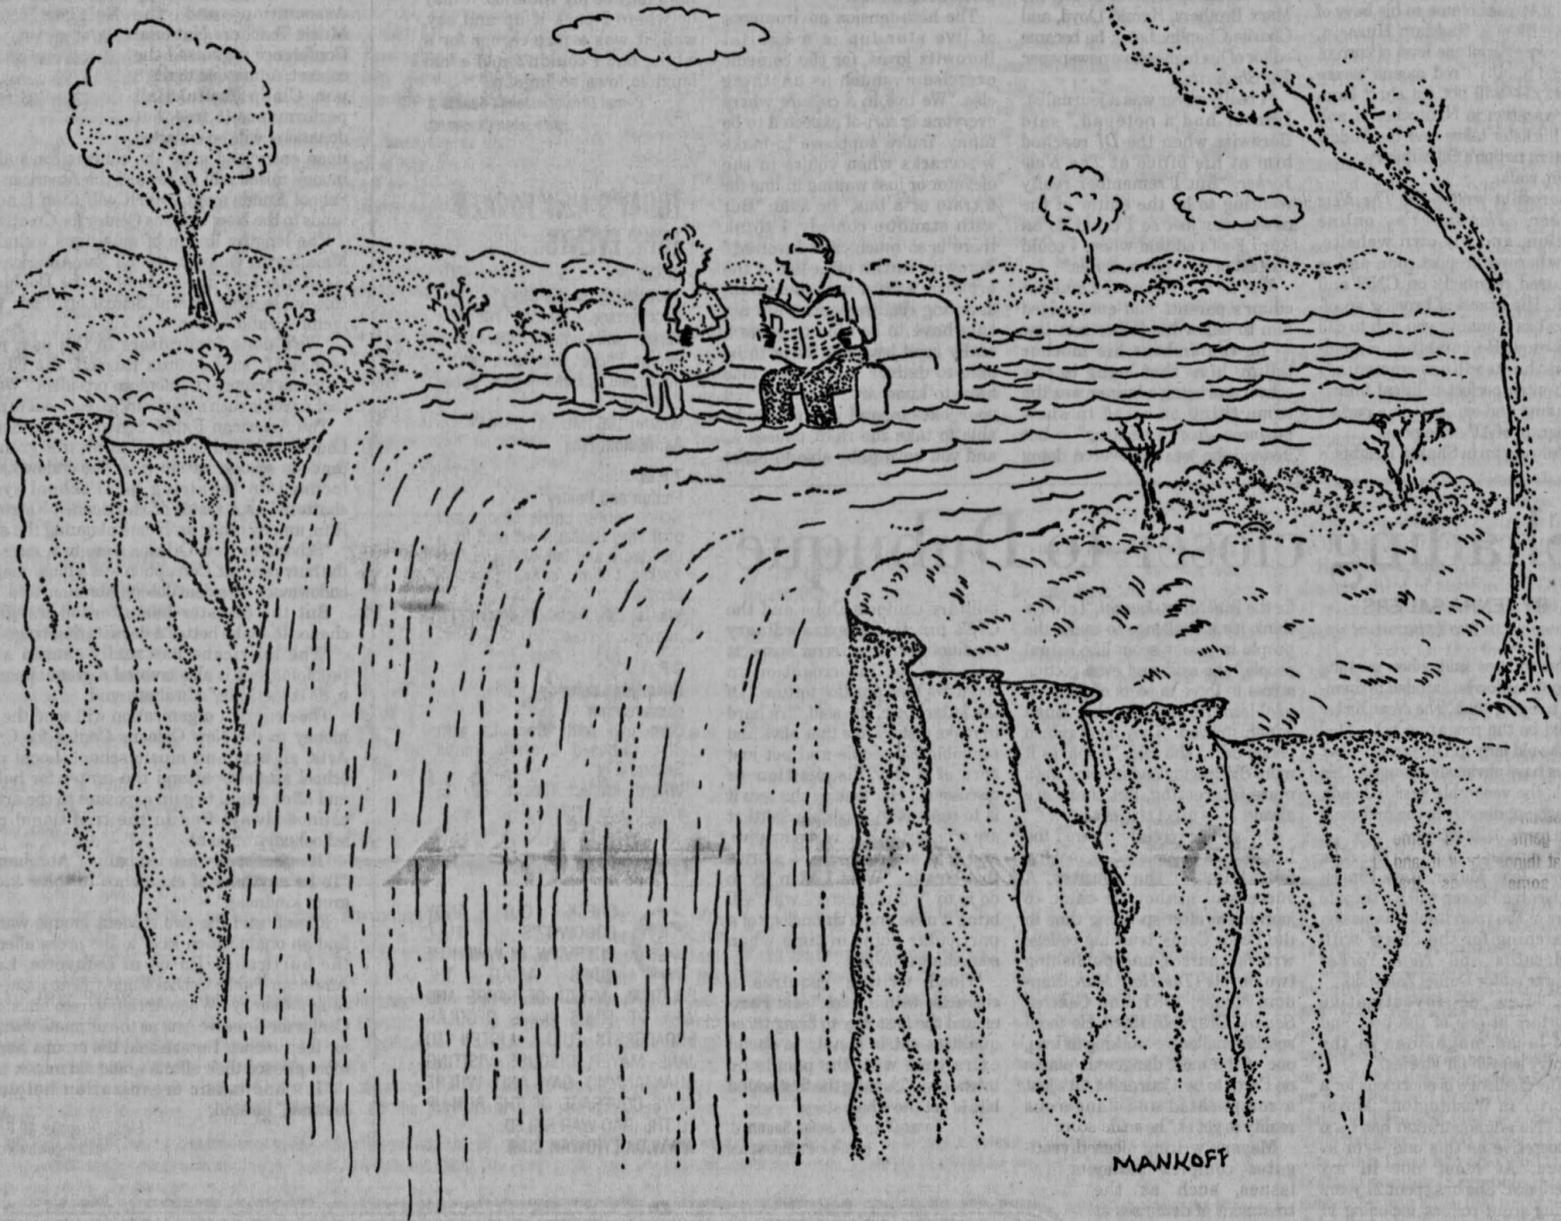

PRESENTED BY

FINANCIAL SERVICES

FOR THE GREATER GOOD™

The bottom line is never more important than in a classic cartoon. Whatever may be going on in the picture, the caption really does say it all. TIAA-CREF invites you to improve on your own bottom line by writing the most brilliantly mordant caption to a captionless cartoon. One university staff winner will receive a framed cartoon prize and "The Complete Cartoons of The New Yorker," a new book and two CDs with every cartoon ever published in the magazine. All contest entrants will receive a complimentary 2006 New Yorker Desk diary (while supplies last).

NLCS

Astros 2, Cardinals 1

HOUSTON (AP) — Poised as can be no matter how tough the task, Astros closer Brad Lidge pulled off another great escape against St. Louis.

Now it's the steaming-mad Cardinals who are in a serious jam in the NLCS.

Defensive replacement Eric Bruntlett started a game-ending double play, Lidge wriggled out of a major mess in the ninth inning, and Houston scratched out a 2-1 victory Sunday in Game 4 to move within one win of its first trip to the World Series.

"For us, it's the best one out of three right now. It doesn't get any easier," manager Phil Garner said. "We're in good position in terms of our pitching, our players, and everything. But the job's still got to get done."

Lidge earned his third save of the series, Jason Lane homered, and Willy Taveras made a saving catch on the center-field hill. Houston took advantage of a critical error by pitcher Jason Marquis — plus the ejections of St. Louis manager Tony La Russa and star Jim Edmonds — to build a commanding 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

"This game, there's some real great things about it, and there's some things that absolutely stink," La Russa said, declining to talk specifically about the umpires.

Any postseason ejection is rare, and the last time a team lost two members came in 1998, when Cleveland pitcher Dwight Gooden and manager Mike Hargrove were tossed.

ALCS

White Sox 6, Angels 3

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Not since Shoeless Joe Jackson have the Chicago White Sox caused this much of a commotion.

World Series, here they come.

After nearly a half-century of ho-hum baseball, the White Sox finally made it back Sunday night. A.J. Pierzynski came out on the right side of yet another umpiring ruckus, Jose Contreras pitched Chicago's fourth-straight complete game, and the White Sox beat the Los Angeles Angels to win the ALCS in five games.

The White Sox will take on either Houston or St. Louis, starting at home Saturday night. It will be Chicago's first World Series since 1959, and the White Sox will get a chance at their first title since 1917.

And it will also give them a shot at some long overdue redemption — they lost the most infamous World Series ever, when Shoeless Joe and his "Black Sox" threw games against Cincinnati in 1919 and gave baseball a black eye.

The 46-year gap between Series appearances is the longest in major league history. Whoa Nellie!

The last time Chicago's South Side team made it this far, it was all about Nellie Fox and his Go-Go Sox.

"We're in the World Series!" White Sox owner Jerry Reinsdorf hollered in his suite after the final out.

Reinsdorf once said he would trade all six NBA titles won by his Chicago Bulls for one World Series championship, and his opportunity is coming.

Hawkeyes finish with a rush

After Indiana pulled within three on Oct. 15 in Kinnick, Iowa responded with some well-grounded football

Iowa running back Albert Young evades Hoosier cornerback Leslie Majors on his way to a 31-yard touchdown run late in the first quarter of the Hawks' win over Indiana on Oct. 15 in Kinnick Stadium. Young scored two touchdowns in the game, tallying his second on a 26-yard run in the fourth quarter.

BY JASON BRUMMOND
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa flinched in the second half, but the jolt wasn't enough to disrupt the Hawkeyes' winning streak.

In a game closer than the score indicates, the Hawkeyes executed crucial plays during critical moments in the fourth quarter in a 38-21 victory over Indiana at Kinnick Stadium, extending the Hawkeye school-record home winning-streak to 22 games.

After leading by as many as 17 points in the third quarter, Iowa's lead fell to 24-21 with less than 10 minutes remaining in the game, and the stagnant Hawkeye offense needed to make a statement.

Quarterback Drew Tate connected with tight end Scott Chandler on a 37-yard pass down the sideline to open the Iowa drive. Three plays later, Albert Young hit on a 26-yard run, extending the advantage to 31-21.

After Indiana went three-and-out,

Damian Sims answered with his only carry of the game — a 30-yard touchdown run off right tackle — to give the Hawkeyes a 38-21 lead with 4:18 left.

The touchdowns, which were preceded by a pair of punts and fumbles on the previous four drives, sealed the victory.

HAWKS HAD 'D' WHEN THEY NEEDED

BY NICK RICHARDS
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Kinnick Stadium turned into Bizarro World against Indiana.

Seven plays in the third quarter. A 2-to-1 time of possession advantage to Indiana — but a 17-point win for Iowa. One hundred and one plays defended, but just 21 points given up. A defense that was dragged, kicking and screaming, up and down the new turf but somehow came up with big plays and big stops.

Just another day with the 2005 Iowa Hawkeyes.

"I think our defense hung in there," linebacker Chad Greenway said after Iowa's 38-21 win. "We subbed some younger guys in on the D-line, and they stepped in and played well. That's a good sign for us, and we just need to keep building and improving."

A pass-happy Indiana team came to Iowa City, with new coach Terry Hoepfner sporting his spread offense he succeeded with at Miami (Ohio). Iowa, with its traditional 4-3 defense stout against the run but susceptible to the pass, used the 3-4 defense on several plays to add another linebacker to the coverage in an attempt to keep Hoosier quarterback Blake Powers goes on the run as Iowa defensive end Kenny Iwebema prepares to pounce in the second half of the Hawkeyes' win over Indiana. Iwebema forced Powers' hand, and one incomplete pass later, the Hoosiers had to punt. The Hawkeyes put the last nail in Indiana's coffin three minutes later, scoring the final touchdown of the game and making the score 38-21.

Indiana's potent passing attack in front of them.

While the Hawkeyes rarely find themselves in a 3-4, it's not the first time. The Hawks used it in their 19-16 win over Texas Tech at the 2001 Alamo Bowl. With games looming against Michigan, a dangerous team in the air, and Northwestern, the Hawkeyes will employ it more in the coming weeks.

"You have two choices — you can rush more than four, and shortchange your coverage a little bit, and try to get that pressure, or you can give up a guy on the rush and try to close down those routes," coach Kirk Ferentz said. "Norm [Parker] probably created that for the Texas Tech game, and it's been our package ever since. It fits our personnel right now on defense."

Receivers step it up

After being plagued by a fractured ankle, mononucleosis, and a quad injury, Hawkeye receiver Matt Melloy had a big part in making up for the loss of Ed Hinkel

BY TYSON WIRTH
 THE DAILY IOWAN

When Drew Tate zipped a pass to Matt Melloy on a slant pattern against Indiana, it meant much more than the eight yards gained.

It meant an early 6-0 lead.

It meant Melloy's first score in more than 400 days.

And it meant the Hawkeyes had a ready replacement for the injured Ed Hinkel.

"After I scored that touchdown, I told him that one was for him," Melloy said. "He's pretty pumped about that. When I told him it was for him, he kind of laughed and chuckled. It was just, 'Get another one; just keep going.'"

Melloy and his teammates did just that. Despite the absence of Hinkel, who broke his right arm against Purdue Oct. 8, the Hawkeyes throttled the Hoosiers, 38-21, pouring on 14 points in a pivotal fourth quarter.

Iowa was on the field for just 19:51 of the 60-minute contest, but it rolled up 425 yards of offense and used huge games from several weapons to compensate for the loss of the wounded wideout.

Tight end Scott Chandler had four catches for a season-high 87 yards, Clinton Solomon added 79 receiving yards and a touchdown, and tailback Albert Young starred with 211 all-purpose yards.

"It was shocking," said Indiana safety Troy Grosfield. "It was just shell-shock to me, because our defense has been real strong."

Women runners 13th of 35 teams

The Iowa women's cross-country team finished 13th out of 35 teams, with a score of 401 points at the Pre-National meet in Terra Haute, Ind., on Oct. 15.

Sophomore Meghan Armstrong was the squad's top finisher in the 6K race. She placed 22nd overall and crossed the finish line at the 20:49 mark.

Rounding out the Hawkeyes' top five were Nikki Chapple (69, 21:40), Racheal Marchand (72, 21:41), Shannon Stanley (99, 21:58), and Molly Esche (139, 22:57).

The group finished fifth among the Big Ten conference teams that competed. The harriers plan on carrying the momentum to their next meet, the Oct. 30 conference championships.

"I can't really find anything to be critical of," coach Layne Anderson said. "We claved and scrapped and never gave an inch."

— by Dan Parr

Men's harriers finish fourth

Final results were true to form when the Iowa men's cross-country team finished fourth in the white race of the Pre-National meet in Terra Haute, Ind., on Oct. 15.

Third-ranked Colorado was the top team with 70 points, followed by No. 7 Notre Dame and No. 13 Florida.

The 14th-ranked Hawkeyes scored 193 points in the 34-team race. Sophomore Eric MacTaggart was Iowa's top finisher, in 22nd-place, with an 8K time of 24 minutes, 17 seconds. Jeff Kent, a native of Valparaiso, Ind., crossed the finish line for the Hawkeyes in 36th with a time of 24:30, while Micah VanDenend was 38th in 24:34.

Iowa's final two scorers were Dan Haut (42nd, 24:36) and Adam Roche (55th, 24:45).

Off this weekend, the Hawkeyes will begin preparation for the Big Ten championships in Minneapolis on Oct. 30.

V-ball splits

The Iowa women's volleyball team put together a split this past weekend at Illinois and at No. 21 Purdue. The Hawkeyes (13-8, 3-5) defeated the Illini (11-8, 2-6), 3-0 (30-27, 30-26, 35-33), and fell to the Boilermakers (16-3, 5-3), 3-0 (30-25, 30-23, 30-23).

Iowa now sits in seventh-place in the Big Ten; Illinois is in ninth, and Purdue is fifth.

The Hawkeyes will return to action Friday, when they host No. 4 Penn State. The match is set for 7 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. They will continue action the following day at 7 p.m. against No. 19 Ohio State.

Field hockey triumphs in Evanston

The No. 12 Iowa field-hockey team was put in a must-win situation on Oct. 14 at Northwestern, and when the Hawkeyes needed to, they came through with a 3-1 victory. The win puts the Hawkeyes at 9-5 overall and 2-2 in the Big Ten.

This was Iowa's second win over Northwestern this season — the Hawkeyes won back on Oct. 4, 4-3 — but last week's game in Iowa City was considered nonconference. The Oct. 14 game in Evanston was a Big Ten game.

Iowa jumped out to a quick 1-0 lead when freshman Caitlin McCurdy scored an unassisted goal 6:52 into the game. McCurdy scored again in the first half to make it 2-0, junior Kara Zappone added a goal with 1:07 remaining, and Iowa went into the half with a 3-0 lead.

"It's always good to get a road win in the Big Ten," Iowa coach Tracey Griesbaum said. "They out-shot us and outcornered us, but we were a little more productive."

Women's golf tied for sixth

The Iowa women's golf team shot a first-round score of 304 Sunday at the Lady Razorback Invitational, putting it in a tie for sixth place with Southern Mississippi. Host Arkansas leads the 16-team event after the first 18 holes, shooting a score of three over-par 291 and holding a seven-stroke advantage over Nebraska.

Hawkeye junior Amy Riepma is in a tie for eighth place individually after round one, shooting a score of one-over par 73 to lead the Hawkeyes. Just behind Riepma is freshman Tyrette Metzendorf, who fired an opening-round 75 to put her in a tie for 15th. Sophomore Jill Marcum and junior Karla Murra are tied for 40th individually, both shooting rounds of 78.

Today's and Tuesday's rounds will mark the final 36 holes of the women's fall golf season. The team is shooting for its third top-10 finish in five events this season.

Lost opportunities sink soccer

BY ANDREW SHANKS
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa soccer team (2-10-4, 0-5-2) had trouble capitalizing on its opportunities on Senior Day on Sunday, and that ultimately led to the team's 4-1 demise at the hands of Michigan.

"We fought hard but didn't produce the results we wanted," freshman forward Stephanie Hyink said. "We had some great opportunities, but, unfortunately, we didn't take advantage of them. Their goalie made some great saves, and we just couldn't finish."

Once again, the Hawkeyes found themselves trailing early on. Michigan (7-6-2, 3-4-0) opened the scoring in the 13th minute, when Melissa Dobbyn — the Wolverines' leading scorer — took a Katelin Spencer pass from 6 yards out and blasted a high shot past Iowa's Erin MacIsaac, who instinctively dove low.

Iowa had its best chances to respond just minutes later, when senior midfielder Natalie Lencioni — one of Iowa's three seniors — played a beautiful ball to the feet of senior captain Katelyn Quinn, who trapped the ball inside the penalty box and flicked a shot that was saved by the Wolverine's Megan Tuura.

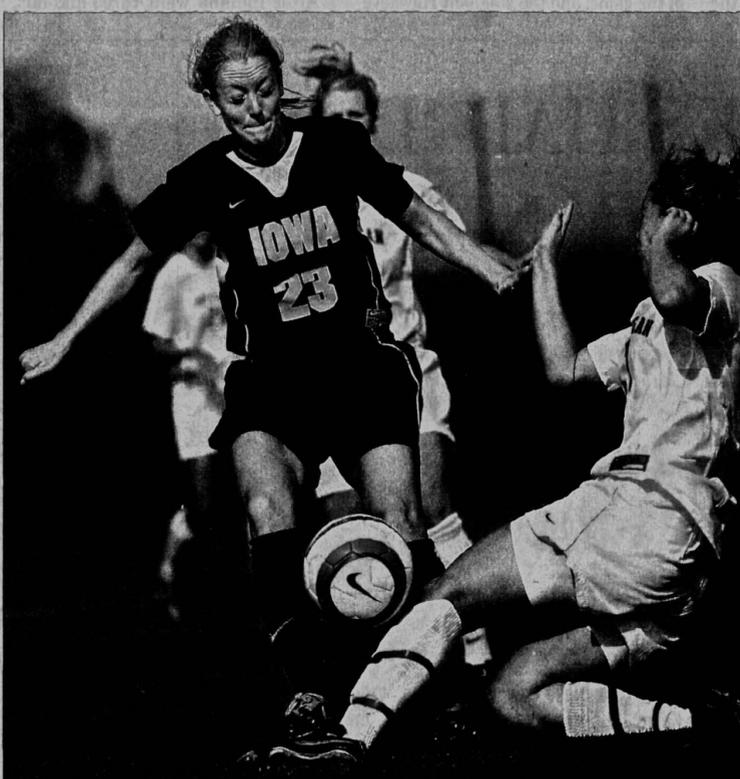

Quinn's relentless attack continued moments later, when she ripped a shot from 18-yards-out that appeared to be a goal. Tuura — who played solid throughout — sprawled to her left to deflect the ball into the crossbar, which caromed downward and landed on the goal line.

"That was a great example of the game of soccer and how things can turn around so quickly," Quinn said. "Getting the equalizer or getting ahead would have shifted the momentum for us, but it didn't happen."

The Wolverines added another goal in the 24th minute, when Judy Coffman was awarded a penalty kick and nailed a shot that beat a diving MacIsaac to the lower right-hand corner.

Michigan scored again in the 58th minute to take a seemingly insurmountable three-goal lead. Therese Heaton played a through-ball to Dobbyn, who beat MacIsaac in a one-on-one for the score.

"What I was most disappointed in was that we never crashed the goal, and when

Aaron Hall Holmgren/The Daily Iowan

Wolverine Erica Gordy spoils Hawkeye Sarah Stephenson's kick during the second half of the Hawkeyes' 4-1 loss on Sunday afternoon. Iowa scored its only goal in the 73rd minute of the game, when sophomore Jamie Maltman found freshman Stephanie Hyink in scoring position.

They did, good things usually happened for them," coach Carla Baker said. "We have a really young team, and that is something that they will have to learn as they get older. We've been OK in goal all year, and we need to battle the entire game to get the results that we want. Unfortunately we didn't do that."

Judy Coffman notched her second goal of the game in the 63rd minute when she received the ball at the top of the box, turned, and ripped a low line drive into the side netting.

Iowa finally got on the board in the 73rd minute, when Hyink crashed the back side of the box to finish off the beautiful cross from sophomore Jamie Maltman. "Jamie crossed the ball, and Quinn went up for it with a defender, and it got by them," Hyink said. "Thankfully, I was following her and was in the right spot at the right time."

Iowa will return to action on Friday at 4 p.m. in West Lafayette, Ind., against Purdue.

"It shows a lot of character," said Tate, who completed 12-of-24 yards for 265 yards and two touchdowns. "I thought we did a good job, as a team, staying with it and responding when we needed to."

Trailing 24-7 with 12:50 left in the third quarter, Indiana responded with the longest scoring drive from an Iowa opponent this season, keyed by the only two plays that went for more than 15 yards.

Midway through the drive, safety Marcus Paschal was flagged for a 15-yard personal foul on a late hit, moving the ball to Iowa's 30. On third down from the 25, quarterback Blake Powers' pass to James Hardy was ruled out of bounds, but instant replay overturned the call, to give the Hoosiers an 18-yard completion to the 7.

On third-and-goal, Powers hit Hardy on a 1-yard touchdown, finishing off an 18-play, 94-yard drive that consumed 7:39.

Sims coughed up the football on the ensuing kickoff return, handing Indiana great field position, at the Iowa 23-yard line. But cornerback Adam Shada, who started in place of the injured Antwan Allen, intercepted the ball in the end zone — maybe the biggest play of the game.

"It was major," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "The way things were going, we badly needed to make a stop and come up with a big play — do something to ignite the crowd a little bit and more importantly, get our defense off the field."

After trading punts, the Hawkeyes took the ball at mid-field and began moving the ball into Indiana territory, but Young fumbled, and Hoosier linebacker Kyle Killion recovered at the 32.

Still, Indiana didn't take advantage, but Iowa couldn't muster a drive when it regained possession, sending the defense back onto the field. With 13 minutes left in the game, Powers hit Hardy on a 66-yard bomb on the first play of the series. On yet another third-and-goal, Powers connected with James Bailey for a 6-yard touchdown in the back of the end zone, when Chad Greenway never saw the ball being thrown on coverage.

But the Hawkeyes added rushing touchdowns on consecutive drives, and the defense caused a turnover on downs, to secure the team's third-straight conference win.

"The bottom line is, when they closed the gap to three, our guys had the proper response," Ferentz said. "I think the way we played in the fourth quarter should give our team even more confidence, because they came back offensively."

Iowa appeared to enter half-time with a 14-7 lead, but a Tate pass to Chandler — originally ruled incomplete — was overturned by instant replay. The 23-yard gain to Indiana's 17-yard line allowed Kyle Schlicher to convert a 35-yard field goal and a 17-7 halftime advantage.

To start the second half, Iowa forced Indiana to punt after three plays and responded with a quick 42-yard touchdown pass from Tate to Solomon. The lanky receiver, who was lined up on the outside — and Herb Grigsby in the slot crossed routes, which mixed up the Hoosier secondary — provided Solomon a 10-yard halo in the end zone.

"It's ironic, because that third quarter started off just perfect," Ferentz said. "We really had some good momentum going, and then — boom — we just hit a wall."

The Hawkeyes jumped out to a quick lead in the first quarter, when Tate connected with wide receiver Matt Melloy on an 8-yard slant when the Mount Pleasant native stretched the football across the goal line before being tackled.

Iowa's 80-yard, six-play ensuing drive was capped off by an impressive 31-yard run by Young — set up by a 28-yard pass from Tate to Solomon.

Powers established a Kinnick Stadium record with 37 completions, topping former Iowa quarterback Scott Mullen's mark during Ferentz's first season in 1999. The sophomore finished with 360 yards and two touchdowns. Hardy, only a red-shirt freshman, lit up the Hawkeye secondary for 12 catches and 203 yards.

Young finished with 26 carries for 125 yards and two touchdowns — his fourth 100-yard game this season, including three-straight contests. Without receiver Ed Hinkel, who is out indefinitely with a fractured arm, Young also caught two passes for 63 yards, including a 51-yard gain en route to Iowa's first touchdown.

And although Young was stopped on six carries for negative yardage, when the game was on the line in the fourth quarter, Ferentz immediately returned to the running attack.

"We just went to our basics, and we came with the run game — just smash-mouth, and that's what we do best," Young said. "The line ... those guys were giving me holes the whole game."

QUARTER BY QUARTER

1st Quarter:

The Hawkeyes went three-and-out and had to punt on the opening drive. However, after holding the Hoosiers, the Hawkeyes cashed in on their second drive — Drew Tate found Matt Melloy for an 8-yard touchdown (his first since opening day 2004). Albert Young had a 51-yard reception to set up the touchdown and later scored on a 31-yard rush down the sideline to give Iowa a 14-0 first quarter lead. Tate was 5-of-7 for 105 yards and a touchdown in the opening quarter.

2nd Quarter:

After exchanging punts to open the quarter, the Hoosiers made it a 14-7 game when Blake Powers led an 11-play, 84-yard drive, capping it off with a 1-yard run. Powers was 12-of-20 for 127 yards in the second quarter. The Hawkeyes snagged three points right before the half when Tate found tight end Scott Chandler down the middle of the field. The play was reviewed and reversed, setting up a 35-yard field goal by Kyle Schlicher to make it 17-7.

3rd Quarter:

Iowa jumped out to a seemingly safe 24-7 lead when Tate found a wide-open Clinton Solomon for a 42-yard touchdown on the first drive of the second half. However, the Hawkeyes then fell into a lull, and the Hoosiers drove 94 yards in just under eight minutes, with Powers finding freshman wideout James Hardy for a 1-yard touchdown, to cut the Iowa lead to 24-14. Damian Sims fumbled the ensuing kickoff, but Adam Shada, starting in place of Antwan Allen, picked off a Powers pass intended for Hardy in the end zone.

4th Quarter:

Young fumbled on the second play of the fourth quarter, and the Hoosier continued to come back. Indiana cut the margin to 24-21 early in the quarter when Powers found Hardy on a crossing route for 66 yards, setting up a 6-yard touchdown pass to James Bailey. Hardy had a career-high 203 yard receiving game. Iowa immediately responded with back-to-back scoring drives, and Young and Sims both found the end zone, Young on a 26-yard sideline scamper, and Sims from 30 yards out, to give the Hawkeyes the 38-21 victory.

Adam Shada started his second game of the year at cornerback for the injured Antwan Allen and, despite having the unenviable task of going one-on-one with Hoosier sensation James Hardy, came away with the biggest play of the game when it mattered most.

With Iowa clinging to a 24-14 lead and having just fumbled a kickoff, Shada — who had been picked on playing against the 6-7 Hardy — intercepted a Blake Powers pass in the end zone to temporarily halt the surging Hoosiers.

"I'm sure they were looking my way a little bit," Shada said. "That's a fun challenge. You don't really go out there hoping they throw away from you. You can't really make a play if they're throwing away from your guy."

The play capped off the strangest quarter of the season for Iowa, who ran only seven plays from scrimmage to Indiana's 28. With Iowa's seven plays also came seven points; the Hawkeyes scored on their second play of the quarter to jump to a 24-7 lead. They then went into a lull that lasted until midway through the fourth quarter, when Indiana had pulled to within three.

The offensive onslaught from Powers and Co. resulted in 101 plays ran by the Hoosiers but just 21 points, leaving a strange feeling of what could have been, had the Hoepner's bunch capitalized.

"It was a strange feeling on the sideline. Then you mix in a couple three-and-outs, and that really made it more unusual or weird," Ferentz said. "It was just one of those days. They had it going pretty good. They were humming."

All week long, fans and media questioned how Iowa would handle life without Hinkel. But as the opening kickoff sliced through October's sharp air toward Young, the tailback said he wasn't focused on how to replace his teammate's production.

"When you're trying to do that, you're trying to play outside your self and not letting the game come to you," the sophomore said. "We definitely miss him, but I sure wasn't out there thinking, 'Oh, we're missing Eddie, and I have to do this and that in his absence.'"

Still, Young did plenty. The Moorestown, N.J., native followed up a career-best 165 rushing yards against Purdue on Oct. 8 with 125 on the ground against the Hoosiers. Twice, he burst through yawning holes on the line's left side for touchdown runs, from 31 yards out in the first quarter and 26 out in the fourth.

But the Hawkeyes' scoring all started with Melloy's first-quarter catch, when he hung onto a bullet by Tate and dragged a defender across the goal line.

"He's had such a rotten year," coach Kirk Ferentz said. "It's a little bit reminiscent of what Ed Hinkel went through in 2003, only Matt started going down early, because he had a terrible spring. It was just good to see him making plays."

Melloy, who in the last six months has suffered an ankle fracture, mononucleosis, and a quad injury, agreed. Thirteen months after last scoring a touchdown, the senior said the end zone wasn't something he'd forgotten.

"It's been a long time, but I still remember," he said. "It feels good. It feels real good."

Hawkeye fan Nate Schellhorn of Cedar Falls hollers in excitement while Ryan Schellhorn and Becca Mincks have a few drinks near a friend's house off Melrose Place before the Iowa-Indiana game.

Running back Damian Sims takes a moment of prayer after a 30-yard touchdown run during the first quarter.

Running back Albert Young trots through the end zone after a 31-yard touchdown run in the first quarter.

BY THE NUMBERS

3 Number of consecutive games in which Iowa running back Albert Young has eclipsed 100 yards.	70-0 Iowa's point margin in the first quarter this year. The Hawkeyes padded that margin with 14 first-quarter points on the Hoosiers.
37 Number of completions by Indiana quarterback Blake Powers, which set a Kinnick Stadium record.	101 Total number of plays run by the Hoosier offense, compared with 57 for Iowa.

PRIME PLAYS

Adam Shada's interception of Indiana quarterback Blake Powers in the third quarter, after Indiana had pulled to 10 back, and Iowa had just fumbled the ensuing kickoff.
— Jason Brummond

Albert Young's 26-yard touchdown midway through the fourth quarter, with Iowa clinging to a three-point lead.
— Nick Richards

IOWA GAME BALL ALBERT YOUNG

The Hawkeye running back had 202 all-purpose yards, including 125 on the ground, the third-straight game he's run for more than 100 yards.

INDIANA GAME BALL JAMES HARDY

The 6-7 receiver caught 12 passes for 203 yards and one touchdown, becoming the fourth receiver in Hoosier history to go over the 200-yard mark.

Tom "Bizzo" Meersman leans back while demonstrating a move from The Matrix, as friend Andrew "Schmitt" Pomatto fires imaginary shots at him with his hand in a yard off Melrose Place before the Iowa-Indiana game. The "Hoosier Daddy?" sign on the house was created for the Indiana game; a new one is placed on the house for each home game.

Ben Roberts/The Daily Iowan
Iowa's Andy Brodell (middle) and Miguel Merrick partially block an Indiana punt during the first half. The Hawkeyes kept up the pressure on special teams.

INDIANA GAME BALL

JAMES HARDY

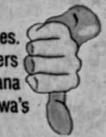

The 6-7 receiver caught 12 passes for 203 yards and one touchdown, becoming the fourth receiver in Hoosier history to go over the 200-yard mark.

THUMBS UP THUMBS DOWN

Iowa running game had struggled throughout the second and third quarters but came alive in the last stanza, when the Hawks needed it most. The Hawkeyes picked up a 26-yard touchdown from Albert Young and a 30-yard score from Damian Sims.

Turnovers. Iowa put the ball on the ground twice at key times. Fortunately for the Hawkeyes, Shada picked off Blake Powers in the end zone after a Damian Sims fumble, and Indiana went three-and-out after Young was responsible for Iowa's eighth lost fumble of the year.

LOOK AHEAD

— Michigan comes into Kinnick Stadium as the top candidate to break Iowa's 22-game home winning streak. The Wolverines sit at 4-3 and are coming off a dramatic come-from-behind win over Penn State in Ann Arbor.

— While the Hawkeyes won two of the last three meetings, Michigan holds a commanding lead in the series. The Maize and Blue hold a 38-10-4 series advantage, and at one time, they won 11 straight.

Glory days return

Notre Dame once again is playing like a champion

BY TOM COYNE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Even in defeat, Notre Dame played like a champion against top-ranked Southern California.

More so than the Fighting Irish did during an 8-0 start under Tyrone Willingham three years ago. More so than when they lost in overtime to No. 1 Nebraska in 2000 on their way to the Fiesta Bowl. More like a champion than any time since beating No. 1 Florida State in 1993.

Charlie Weis couldn't pull out the victory against the Trojans on Oct. 15, losing 34-31, but he pulled out all the stops in waking the echoes. He managed the clock, he managed the crowd, and even in losing, he managed to restore the glory that's been missing from Notre Dame for 12 years.

"They're going to be a real problem for everybody," USC coach Pete Carroll said. "I don't see any way that they're not going to be a really good program."

The Irish (4-2) shined as brightly on a sunny autumn afternoon as the school's Golden Dome, freshly gilded with 23.9-karat gold leaf this summer for the first time since 1988 — the school's last national championship season.

“It's been insane.”

— Dave Daigle, a spokesman for the CDC, which has been getting an average of 447,000 hits a day on its avian-flu information website. And bird flu isn't even here.

ERIC FOMON

THINGS NOT TO SAY TO YOUR GIRLFRIEND

- Why even bother getting your degree? You're just going to end up as a baby factory, anyway.
- Nice outfit, I guess you got a visit from the skank fairy last night.
- Yeah you're cute, but did you SEE the bajangos on her?
- Maybe you should stick with the salad, because bikini season is coming up.
- I think you're mustache is thicker than mine.
- Yeah, I remember when we met. You really gave off that easy vibe, but boy, was I wrong.
- I would put you down as my Facebook girlfriend, but I want to keep you on the DL.
- Isn't it funny how we wear the same size shirt?
- Wow babe, with a butt like that, I'm surprised they didn't make me buy you two movie tickets.
- Is that the makeup you're wearing downtown, or did a plum explode on your face?
- I thought your diet was supposed to make you thin and hot, not whiney and cranky.
-  you  I could have any girl in here.

— Eric Fomon might go crazy, if the kids living above him don't stop jumping up and down on his ceiling.

horoscopes

Monday, October 17, 2005
— by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A love interest from your past is probably worth getting in touch with. Changes regarding your financial picture look promising.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may run into difficulties with peers or your boss if you are too outspoken. You will have to bend a little to keep the peace.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't fear making a mistake — it's highly unlikely. You will be able to finish and resolve anything that has been bothering you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Hold off making any decisions. Things are likely to change drastically, and you will have to rearrange everything.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It's your turn to shine. A little love and romance is in the stars, and a chance to do something different will boost your enthusiasm.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): There appear to be some changes regarding your financial situation. If you are in the middle of a settlement, you stand a good chance of getting what you want.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): This is the perfect day to get serious about the relationships in your life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Everything will depend on how well you get along with the people you work with.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): This is not the time to be indecisive. Act on your gut feelings, and go after your dreams.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You will probably be feeling guilty about everything today. Stress will be your middle name.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Travel about, talking to people and finding out more about how you can make your life better.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your mind will be in overdrive — so many decisions and lots of worry about doing the right thing. You may be called upon to handle some family business.
