HAUNTED? Part one: The Legend of Currier of a five-part haunted sites series

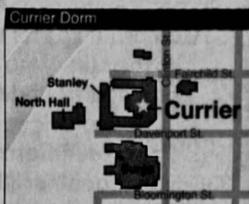

Aaron Hall Holmgren/The Daily Iowan

A member of the Des Moines Iowa Extreme Paranormal Advanced Research Team sweeps for traces of electronic voice phenomena in a fourth-floor room in Currier Hall on Oct. 13. As a story goes, three women living in the room in the 1930s made a pact to kill themselves, and their spirits have remained to haunt the room.

BUSTING CURRIER 'GHOSTS'

BY REBECCA MCKANNA
THE DAILY IOWAN

After finding out they were all carrying on love affairs with the same man, three Currier roommates decided to take their lives together — or at least that is how the story goes. Three roommates living on the fourth floor of Currier Residence Hall in the 1930s decided to make the pact and kill themselves — whether through poison or by hanging themselves, the stories vary. From then on, the women's ghosts have haunted the floor, appearing to bicker roommates.

For Jessica Hoskins, it's more than a story. The UI sophomore was told, along with roommates Leah Zimmerman and Katie Zangerle, that their dorm room was the site of the tragedy. "It freaks me out when I'm alone," she said, saying the closet doors will open and close by themselves, and the television will turn on and off on its own accord. After a search of the University Archives, regional newspaper indexes, and microfilm of The Daily Iowan from the 1930s, there was no information proving that the suicides actually occurred. Because library science failed to prove the story, an expert was brought in to examine the so-called paranormal activity — Joe Leto (a.k.a.: Joe Lafrentz), the founder of the Des Moines Iowa Extreme Paranormal Advanced Research Team.

Before arriving at the hall, Leto, who dressed all in black and resembled Michael Moore, explained he had gotten into paranormal research because his daughter began hearing voices that told her to hurt herself and others. "Either she needed lithium, or I believed her — and I believed her," he said. Leto said he performed an exorcism, and the voices stopped. Laden with a silver brief case, a duffel bag, and a cart chock full of gadgets used to detect paranormal activity, Leto and his team entered Currier Hall. The triple-room certainly didn't look haunted, decorated in bright pinks and greens. Movie posters of Garden State and Closer adorned the walls, along with a sign that said "Go Hawks! Beat Iowa State." "In five minutes, we know if it's haunted," Leto said. He asked Hoskins to turn off the computers, because they could interfere with the readings. Leto did temperature and electromagnetic readings and then set up a laptop to record audio of the room.

SMOKING & THE UIHC UIHC limits smoke spots

BY EMILEIGH BARNES
THE DAILY IOWAN

A smoking ban on UI Hospitals and Clinics premises, effective Nov. 1, will prohibit smokers from lighting up outside three smoking huts on the hospital campus. This ban is a stepping stone on the path to smoke-free air surrounding UIHC facilities. After July 1 next year, cigarette users will be forced across the street onto public property to light up. "It's good, because smoking's bad for your health, and you shouldn't have to walk through it to get to the hospital," said Lynn Mellecker, the adult-services supervisor of UIHC respiratory care. Mellecker, who said she quit smoking cold-turkey in 1992, said she was motivated by the inconvenience of being outside during the winter to smoke. She and UIHC Director Donna Katen-Bahensky said on Sunday that the new ban could be an incentive for UIHC staff and patients to kick the habit. "When it's cold out, it's no good standing outside smoking," Mellecker said. "It's more of a hassle than anything else." The ban was approved partly to help lower the reported risk of exposure to secondhand smoke.

FUNDRAISER Scary run for charity

BY KATHERINE BISANZ
THE DAILY IOWAN

In the distance, a lifesize blue M&M and several four-legged pumpkins bobbed up the steep incline next to the Seamans Center, looking satisfied when they reached the top. Once they reached the apex and finished the race, officials from Iowa City's homeless shelter thanked the event organizers — the UI chapter of American Institute of Chemical Engineers — for "helping them keep their doors open" with the proceeds from the second annual Spooky Sprint on Sunday. Crissy Canganeli, the executive director of the Shelter House, Iowa City's sole homeless shelter, expressed her gratitude to the 25 UI students who organized the race.

Locals hear GOP hopefuls

BY COLIN BURKE
THE DAILY IOWAN

Gubernatorial candidate Bob Vander Plaats, speaking without the aid of a microphone, vowed on Sunday to improve the economy, health care, and public education while emphasizing Iowa's need for new leadership. "The only way we're getting the leadership we need is with a new governor," the Sioux City businessman said to a crowd of hundreds GOP supporters at an afternoon barbecue at the Johnson County Fairgrounds.

The Sioux City businessman touted his myriad experiences, including jobs such as a business teacher and basketball coach at Boone and Jefferson-Scranton High Schools and his current position as president of MVP Leadership, Inc., which specializes in strategic vision and executive leadership for industries, such as businesses and health care. An opponent of further extending the Iowa Values Fund, a funding mechanism for businesses in Iowa,

Fire hits Kmart

A fire broke out at the Iowa City Kmart, 901 Hollywood Blvd., on Oct. 22.
The Iowa City Fire Department responded at 3:24 p.m. The building had safely been evacuated by the time crews arrived on the scene, officials said.
Upon arrival, officials reported light smoke pluming from the southeast corner of the Kmart. An internal inspection of the building determined that the sprinklers had been activated and extinguished most of the fire.

Fire crews doused the remaining flames.
Officials said on Sunday that the cause of the fire is still unknown and under investigation.
No injuries occurred as a result of the blaze.

Man faces weapons charges

A Mount Pleasant man was apprehended by Coralville police on charges of possessing weapons and going armed with intent on Oct. 21.
After being dispatched in response to reports of a man carrying a gun near 210 E. Ninth St., the police found Eli Wibstad, 30, police reports show.
Officers then allegedly found a .32-caliber Colt handgun after searching Wibstad, police said.

When officers inquired why he was in possession of the gun, he allegedly told police he was going to find a man who had sold him fake drugs and "take care of him."
Going armed with intent, a Class D felony, carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $7,500 fine, while carrying weapons, an aggravated misdemeanor, is punishable by up to two years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Man sues U Heights, police officer

A 24-year-old Oxford man is suing a University Heights police officer who reportedly used a Taser on him during the 2004 Iowa-Iowa State football game.
Brian Keith Portwood asserts that Officer Brad Reinhard exerted excessive force. Portwood is suing both Reinhard and the town of University Heights for an unspecified amount of damages.

Portwood contends that on Sept. 11, 2004, Reinhard approached him and a family at a "football game gathering." He then employed "several types of physical force on Portwood, including the use of an electric Taser device."

University Heights police charged Portwood with disorderly conduct, because he was allegedly fighting with another person near 901 Melrose Ave. Reinhard used his Taser after Portwood allegedly refused to obey his orders, according to University Heights police reports. Portwood was found not guilty in November 2004.
Portwood's criminal record does include other simple misdemeanors, such as convictions on two counts of public intoxication and one on a disorderly-conduct charge.

Schumer: Miers faces make or break hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Harriet Miers does not have the votes now in the GOP-controlled Senate to be confirmed for the Supreme Court, and confirmation hearings "will be make or break ... in a way they haven't been for any other nominee," a leading Democratic senator said Sunday.

Harriet Miers
Supreme Court nominee

While Democrats pressed the White House to provide documents from Miers' work as the president's counsel, Republicans said the nomination that has riled conservatives is not in trouble or in danger of being withdrawn.

Sen. Charles Schumer, a member of the committee that plans confirmation hearings beginning Nov. 7, said lawmakers from both parties are concerned about Miers' qualifications, independence, and judicial philosophy.

"I think, if you were to hold the vote today, she would not get a majority, either in the Judiciary Committee or on the floor," said Schumer, D-N.Y.

"I think there is maybe one or two on the Judiciary Committee who have said they'd support her, as of right now," he said.

But the committee chairman rejected the notion that Miers' nomination was shaky. Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said most senators are waiting for the hearings before making up their mind. "There are no votes one way or another," he said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Another committee Republican, Sen. Sam Brownback of Kansas, said he has not seen "anything coming from the White House that says that they're going to pull this nomination."

Brownback, who has been skeptical of Miers and has not announced how he will vote, added, "They're doing everything they can to prepare Harriet Miers for the hearings right now."

Miers, a longtime Bush confidant who has never been a judge, was nominated to replace retiring Justice Sandra Day O'Connor. The nomination has troubled some conservatives, who say it was a risky choice, because Miers was a blank slate on issues such as abortion and gay rights.

Democrats, too, have expressed concerns about whether the current White House counsel could sever her close ties to Bush and rule independently, once she were on the bench.

Presidential spokeswoman Christie Parel said Sunday that the White House looks forward to the hearings and is confident that Miers will be confirmed.

GOP Sen. John Cornyn of Texas, one of Miers' strongest supporters and a committee member, criticized Schumer for trying to predict how senators would vote.

"This really represents a radical departure from the sort of civil and dignified process that we set up" during the hearings to confirm Chief Justice John Roberts, Cornyn said in a telephone interview. "To pre-judge the nominee before she's even had a chance to participate in the hearing just strikes me as unfair."

The end of the road

So it all hit me yesterday. Yes, the 18 hours of straight celebration on Oct. 22 did as well, but that's not what I'm referencing. (Side thought: We're worried about a pink locker room, but no one put up a fuss when they declared it "Black Out Saturday"?)

Anyway, I'm talking about coming to the realization that college is almost over. I can see the end of the road only a handful of months away.

I started growing sad when my flag-football team lost in the playoffs on what was literally and figuratively a gloomy Sunday evening. After huddling with the Fluffy Bunnies (we're winners in my heart, guys) following the game that I like to call "the battle of who was less hungover," I was not only torn up by our 33-32 defeat but at the thought that this would be my last flag-football game ever at the University of Iowa.

And then the thoughts began to snowball. When will be my final late-night trip to Pancho's? My final tailgate? My final parking ticket? It made me think of my favorite college quote by none other than Mr. Tom Petty. "You have four years to be irresponsible here. Relax. Work is for people with jobs. You'll never remember class time, but you'll remember time you wasted hanging out with your friends. So, stay out late. Go out on a Tuesday with your friends when you have a paper due Wednesday. Spend money you don't have. Drink till sunrise. The work never ends, but college does ..."

Now that's poetry. I began thinking about what makes college so special, and because there are so many things, I made a list:

10 a.m. is early.
Saying, "It's only midnight."
Finding random

strangers sleeping on my couch.

Intense debates with neighbors on how big a handful exactly is.

Having pizza-delivery numbers stored in my phone.

Figuring out how my night out went based on my call log.

Having my first class at 2:30.

Why mysteries are solved here.

Because experts across disciplines team up to answer the most complex neurological problems. One example is when neurologists, neurosurgeons, neurointerventional radiologists and other specialists come together to uncover disorders of the spine, neck and head, then treat them with minimally invasive techniques. Working side-by-side, these experts are solving problems that others simply can't. And that's the academic difference. Changing Medicine. Changing Lives.

Risky Gulf real estate drawing developers

Despite coastal experts' warnings about rising sea levels and a record amount of hurricane activity, communities demolished by Katrina are talking of rebuilding 'bigger than ever' along the Gulf Coast

BY BETTINA BOXALL
LOS ANGELES TIMES

Hurricane Katrina's trail of ruin has not dampened the appetite for hazardous real estate on the Gulf Coast, where local communities are talking of rebuilding bigger than ever along the shore, despite experts' warnings that it is time to pull back and curtail federal subsidies that promote beach development.

On the battered Mississippi coast, developers are already courting local officials. "I was on the phone with a condominium investor who is just very, very excited, very anxious to get going right there on that beachfront — actually in one of the lower elevations," Gulfport Mayor Brent Warr recounted a month after Katrina ravaged a third of his city.

Mississippi just adopted legislation allowing the state's multibillion-dollar dockside casino industry to move ashore, and Warr said land values on the demolished coastline "are appreciating every single day." He tells developers they may want to rethink their pre-Katrina plans, because they're probably not grand enough for the new Gulf Coast officials' envision.

Civic leaders say they can rebuild with new codes to improve hurricane resistance. "I don't foresee us not rebuilding businesses on that coastline. They'll just be built smarter," said Kimberly Nastasi Crim, the executive director of the Biloxi, Miss. Chamber of Commerce.

While locals plot reinvention, coastal experts say retreat would be a wiser move in this era of rising sea level and record hurricane activity. "If the Alabama-Mississippi coast doesn't present a case for time to move back, then I don't know what does," said Orrin Pilkey, the director of Duke University's Program for the Study of Developed Shorelines.

He and others complain the federally backed National Flood Insurance Program — which is expecting more than $20 billion in Katrina and Rita claims — is just one way the government encourages risky coastal development.

Billions in federal money also help rebuild highways, bridges, and beaches destroyed in hurricanes, fund low-interest reconstruction loans to homeowners who lack flood insurance, and back tax write-offs for storm losses.

In a paper published last year in the University of Colorado Law Review, Oliver Houck, the director of Tulane University's environmental-law program, analyzed federal spending and subsidies on Louisiana's only inhabited barrier island, Grand Isle. Trashed by Katrina, Grand Isle has been pummeled by 50 major storms in the past 130 years.

New Orleans Mayor Ray Nagin (right), along with Louisiana Gov. Kathleen Blanco (left) and Louisiana Lt. Gov. Mitch Landrieu, answers questions from business leaders about the city's immediate priorities for the hospitality industry on Oct. 20 in New Orleans.

When spending on roads and beach rebuilding was added to home-mortgage deductions and flood-insurance claims, the total federal investment in Grand Isle amounted to $439,000 a home. Subtract the island's vacation houses, and the subsidy jumped to $1.28 million each for its 622 year-round residences.

"The United States is fueling and funding the high-risk, hurricane-prone coastal development," Houck said. "I think we need to cut off the funding to that kind of development, and we ought to be buying up those areas. We need to move people back."

But the value of coastal real estate, local government's reliance on it for tax revenues, and Americans' romance with the beach all conspire against a retreat.

"You know, telling somebody to leave his home and never come back is a dreadful thing — it's a property-rights issue," said Connie Rockco, a commissioner of coastal Harrison County, Miss. While she said there may be some particularly low-lying areas that could be purchased and kept as green spaces, she doesn't think locals are about to pick up and leave their ruined shore.

In neighboring Hancock County, Tourism Development Bureau director Beth Carriere doesn't see that happening either. "It's still America. You cannot keep people from utilizing their own property," she said. "We're mammals; we're drawn to the water."

Carriere, whose family has lived on the Mississippi coast since the 1700s, predicted that moving casinos onshore would free up the waterfront for shops and marinas. "I envision them doing a lot of waterfront development."

With little success, scientists have been arguing against the coastal buildup for more than a decade.

A Start-Up Municipal Electric Utility is Risky Business

Converting Iowa City's electric service to a start-up municipal system exposes the community to rate increases and instability.

Consider these points:

- Iowa City will need to borrow up to $60 million dollars to finance a start-up utility, or $11,800* of debt per owner-occupied home, an obligation that would likely increase the rates customers pay.
- MidAmerican Energy's electric rates have been stable since 1995 and will remain stable through at least 2011.
- Unless the city spends hundreds of millions of dollars to build its own electric generation plants, it will need to buy its electricity on the extremely volatile open market.
- Municipal utility rates are not regulated by the Iowa Utilities Board, which means your rates can be raised at any time and in any amount.

*Sources: Iowa City Community Profile 2004 and Considerations in Governmental Acquisitions Of Utility System Properties, Black & Veatch, May 2003

Vote NO November 8

A start-up municipal utility exposes everyone in Iowa City to higher electric rates, unnecessary public spending and the loss of an Iowa City business with 80 local employees. FOR RELIABILITY, AFFORDABILITY AND SERVICE, VOTE NO NOVEMBER 8.

Center unites services for career, academics

THE DAILY IOWAN

It started out with a donation and a dream.

But on Oct. 21, UI alumnus Marvin Pomerantz saw the results of his $10 million gift to the university.

The philanthropist, the CEO of the Mid-America Group, joined UI officials, students, and alumni for a ribbon-cutting ceremony at the Pomerantz Center, a building bearing its primary donor's name and specializing in academic and career services.

"This is a unique facility, not only on this campus, but, honestly, to my knowledge, throughout the country," UI President David Skorton said at the event. "This is what I call the front door and the back door to the University of Iowa."

The Pomerantz Center, which is located at the corner of Market Street and the T. Anne Cleary Walkway, houses an admission and visitors center, the Career Center, and also provides academic advising services for students.

By centralizing academic and career services, the Pomerantz Center aims to enhance students' educational experiences throughout university and beyond graduation.

"It's an important function," said Pomerantz at the ceremony. "Students start here, and after they complete their education, they stay in touch with the university through this facility."

The Pomerantz Center will also make the transition from university to the career world less daunting for students, said Linda Maxson, the dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts and Science.

"The Pomerantz Center is going to help many — if not all of our students — to integrate career exploration and planning into their total experience here, from day one," she said.

Private donations funded more than 80 percent of the $17.6 million facility.

The dedication concluded with Pomerantz and his wife, Rose Lee, cutting a yellow ribbon in the HNI Auditorium in the building's basement.

"Marvin cares most about his effect on the students who will study in these classrooms, begin their careers in these interview suites, and forge their Iowa futures as they walk through these doors," said Charles Kiersch, the interim president of the UI Foundation.

UI senior Brandelle Slater attended the dedication after having an interview in the Pomerantz Center a few hours before the ceremony.

As a student, she has been inspired by the philanthropic efforts of Pomerantz and other generous alumni.

"There's a wall in the College of Business that has all the donors listed on it," she said. "When I was a freshman, I used to look at that wall. And then when I was a freshman, I also decided I was going to be on that wall."

Hopeful stresses victims' rights

"I've been involved in community and legal groups. I know where we need more work and what problems need to be addressed."

— Janet Lyness, Johnson County attorney candidate

BY PATRICK DAVIS
THE DAILY IOWAN

In an early move to raise community support and campaign funds in her bid for the soon-to-be vacated Johnson County county-attorney position, local prosecutor Janet Lyness said if she is elected, she will continue her history of victim advocacy while increasing courtroom efficiency to save tax dollars.

"It's exciting to get to use the connections I've made in the community and in the Johnson County Attorney's Office," she said at an outreach event on Sunday. "I've been involved in community and legal groups. I know where we need more work and what problems need to be addressed."

Current County Attorney J. Patrick White announced his retirement last spring. Lyness, Jill Smith-Calkins asks Johnson County attorney candidate Janet Lyness a question about drunk-driving offenses while petting her dog, Oreo, in her Iowa City home on Sunday afternoon. When current County Attorney J. Patrick White announced that he would not run for another term, Lyness decided to start her campaign several months before the vote.

who has worked as a Johnson County prosecutor for the past 15 years, said she is launching her campaign well before the June primary election so the community can get to know her.

If elected, she said she plans to revive the position of first assistant attorney and reorganize the way cases are assigned to prosecutors. She contends that her plans will expedite the legal process while saving money.

During her speech, Lyness spoke repeatedly of her history as an advocate for victims' rights as well as fair and rehabilitative treatment for offenders.

On the subject of residency requirements for sex offenders, she emphasized that people shouldn't think of the 2,000-foot restriction from schools and daycare centers as a sufficient safety net for children.

"The law only restricts where those convicted of sex crimes against minors can live, not where they can travel," she said.

Janette Carter, a juror in one of Lyness' old cases, said she remembers the way Lyness conducted herself in the courtroom.

"She was concerned with the jury and took the time to talk with us. It was good to know she cared about the whole process," Carter said. "She explained the process and expressed her frustration with the outcome of the trial after the officer failed to show up in court."

Jill Smith-Calkins, who hosted the event, first met Lyness when Calkins' daughter had a gun drawn on her in middle school.

"I'm excited, because she is a good balance of victim support and accountability," Smith-Calkins said.

When Lyness, a Democrat, was questioned how she would act toward opposing political parties if she were elected, she said she would look at individual cases on their own merits and treat all county citizens equally.

"Patrick White did a good job by being nonpartisan, and I will continue that policy," she said.

Lyness will currently run against Nick Maybanks, a prosecutor in the Linn County Attorney's office, in the June Democratic primaries. There are currently no Republicans in the race.

Vander Plaats criticized the economic-development tool, saying that the government should not be involved in the venture-capital business.

Iowa ranks sixth in the delivery of health care but last in Medicare reimbursements, he said. He also emphasized his plan to place a cap on frivolous lawsuits and non-economic damages.

Limiting the federal government's involvement on the local level is the right way to approach funding methods for public-school systems, the hopeful said. The current solution to the problems of public schools won't have a quick fix, he said.

"You will never cure public schools by merely throwing more money at them," Vander Plaats said.

Gubernatorial candidate Rep. Jim Nussle, R-Iowa, did not attend the event because he was celebrating wife Karen's birthday.

After Vander Plaats' speech, the focus of the event turned onto the crowded race for secretary of Agriculture, which will be left by Democrat Patty Judge, as she pursues the Democratic nomination for governor.

Hopefuls Mark Leonard, Karey Claghorn, and Bill Northey spoke on such topics as renewable energy and their experience in the agricultural field.

Leonard, a banker and cattle breeder from Holstein, Iowa, mentioned the state's potential as a world leader in renewable energy and underscored the importance of agriculture to Iowa's economy.

"Agriculture is over half of the economy in the state of Iowa; it does affect everybody," he said.

Claghorn, currently the executive director of the American Hampshire Sheep Association/Associated Sheep Registries, also addressed the renewable energy issue from the aspect of Iowa farmers.

"Iowa farmers have the ability to break the stranglehold foreign oil has on this country and we can do it with products grown and raised here in Iowa," she said.

Emphasizing the importance of ethanol to Iowa, Northey said the secretary of Agriculture should be someone who can work with a variety of agricultural interests.

"We need a good catalyst — someone who can work with the farm groups, conservation groups, and others on the vision for the next 20 years," said Northey, a corn and soybean farmer from Spirit Lake, Iowa.

Members from UI College Republicans were also on hand to help.

UI senior and group Chairman Christian Goos, who helped plan the barbecue, said the relationship between the UI College Republicans and the Johnson County Republican Party is reciprocal.

"It's good for us to be here and help them out, because they're here to help us out," he said.

The American Cancer Society each year attributes 35,000 to 40,000 of the deaths related to heart disease to secondhand smoke. A 2003 study by the UCLA School of Public Health, however, found no connection between secondhand smoke and disease. Other studies, however, have shown a connection.

"There is proven evidence that secondhand smoke is bad for a healthy person," Katen-Bahensky said. "This will help people who do not want to walk through areas where there is smoke."

The decision to ban smoking came from a recommendation passed down by the Iowa Hospital Association to Iowa having smoking on their campuses. It's not an uncommon thing," Katen-Bahensky said. "I think there are some states where they're probably not as far as Iowa and some states that are probably further ahead."

Current UIHC policy prohibits smoking within 30 feet of hospital entrances.

Katen-Bahensky said educating UIHC staff members will play a vital role in getting the smoking ban underway. She said staff members will help direct patients to smoking huts and also provide information on smoking cessation materials at UIHC.

"I think that's an opportunity for us to say, 'Let's give you some help while you're here,'" she said.

Canganelli made it clear how impressed she was with the engineers who planned and volunteered for the event, while iterating how happy she was to see that kind of mindfulness about community issues at the UI.

"When I was in school, I didn't see anything beyond my own life," she said. "It's great to see this kind of awareness."

UI junior Alex Conway, an event volunteer, said the engineers' group is a national organization that sponsors an annual event to raise money for a charity. All UI chemical engineers are required to participate.

"As engineers, giving back to the community is very important to us," he said. "It's in our code of ethics."

The group of athletes participated to dress up in their Halloween gear, and it attracted more than 100 people from all across Iowa City.

UI senior Jessica Long, who was dressed as a "pumpkin milkshake" — complete with a painted jack-o'-lantern mouth, a bright orange shirt, and spandex pants — said dressing to sprint and to scare at the same time required innovative thinking.

"It's fun dressing up in costumes, because you have to be creative," she said. "It has to be something you can run in, too."

one of the fundraiser's coordinators, said the Feb. 7 fire that displaced 14 residents — mostly women and children — and caused roughly $10,000 in damage to the 331 N. Gilbert St. shelter was a big reason the organization chose to sponsor the Shelter House for the second-consecutive year.

Co-coordinator Leigh Brooks and Swiderski have spent approximately 15 to 20 hours each week on the fundraiser since October 2004, but despite the long hours, both coordinators said that experience paid off greatly in the end.

"The experience was really great," said Brooks, also a UI senior. "We got to know a lot of people from the Shelter House. It was a very rewarding experience."

The Shelter House — originally the Emergency Housing Project — is a nonprofit organization that has provided shelter and other transitional services to men, women, and children, the disabled, and the elderly of Iowa City and other parts of southeast Iowa since 1983.

Wilma races toward Florida

BY DAVID ROYSE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

KEY WEST, Fla. — Rain pounded Key West late Sunday as Hurricane Wilma accelerated toward storm-weary Florida, threatening residents with 115-mph winds, tornadoes, and a surge of seawater that could flood the Keys and the state's southwest coast.

After slowly meandering through the Caribbean to Mexico, Wilma picked up speed and strength Sunday, shooting toward the U.S. mainland as a Category 3 storm.

It was expected to make landfall before dawn today in the state's southwest corner, likely near Naples and Marco Island, National Hurricane Center Director Max Mayfield said.

The core was then forecast to slice across northeast across the peninsula at up to 25 mph.

"I cannot emphasize enough to the folks that live in the Florida Keys: A hurricane is coming," Gov. Jeb Bush said Sunday afternoon.

The entire southern Florida peninsula had been under a hurricane warning since Oct. 22, and an estimated 160,000 residents were told to evacuate, but many in the low-lying Keys island chain stayed.

"They're going to be in deep trouble," warned Billy Wagner, Monroe County emergency-management director.

Forecasters warned of flooding from a storm surge of up to 17 feet on the southwest coast and 8 feet in the Keys, where streets were already running with water Sunday night.

Because the storm was expected to move so swiftly across Florida, residents of Atlantic coast cities were also likely to face hurricane-force winds, nearly as strong as those on the Gulf Coast, forecasters said. At least three tornadoes were confirmed ahead of the storm, near Fort Drum, Kenansville, and Cocoa Beach, and a waterspout was spotted off Key West.

Despite the repeated warnings, fewer than 10 percent of the Keys' 78,000 residents evacuated, Monroe County Sheriff Richard Roth said.

"I'm disappointed, but I understand it," Roth said. "They're tired of leaving because of the limited damage they sustained during the last three hurricanes."

Wilma was Florida's eighth hurricane since August 2004 and the fourth evacuation of the Keys this year.

But the storm had already proved its damaging potential. Wilma battered the Mexican coastline with howling winds and torrential rains, killing at least three people. Thirteen others died in Jamaica and Haiti, and four bodies were found off Cozumel, though it wasn't clear if they were killed by the storm.

Gov. Bush wrote his brother, President Bush, asking that Florida be granted a major disaster declaration for 14 counties. Many of the areas bracing for Wilma were hit by hurricanes in the past two years.

The National Guard was on alert, and state and federal officials had trucks of ice and food ready to deploy.

Leto had said that his team used audio recordings of the room to find paranormal activity. After recording a room, the group plays back the file slowly to find "ghost chatter" or electronic voice phenomena.

"Just carry on normal conversation," he said. "Sometimes the [electronic voice phenomena] come out if there's laughter."

For most of the investigation, Hoskins sat in front of her computer, nervously toying with her cell phone, while friend Jenna Willison watched from the futon as a team member recorded with a parabolic microphone.

Approximately 15 minutes after the group had entered the room, Leto said he had gathered all the information he needed. He packed up the equipment and said goodbye to the women.

"Call me when blood starts dripping from the walls," he said pleasantly, waving goodbye to a slightly green Hoskins.

Once in the elevator, Leto gave his diagnosis.

"My left butt check is more paranormal than these places," he said, adding each site receives a rating, zero to 10 — 10 meaning that blood is dripping from the walls.

Leto gave Currier a one. "We're not easily fooled," he said. "And we don't want to be. We're tough about it. It's all about evidence."

Privatization at public schools?

What do last week's New Yorker College Tour, the Hy-Vee Cy-Hawk Trophy, and the Pappajohn Business Building all have in common? They all signal the growing trend of privatization of public universities. Granted, they all possess admirable qualities — The New Yorker Tour provided us three days of high-quality entertainment at little cost, the Hy-Vee Cy-Hawk Trophy spices up the Iowa-Iowa State sports rivalry, and the Pappajohn Building neatly houses our well-ranked business school. Yet, the rise in influence and power of private parties over public education should be cause for concern.

When a university accepts money from a private party, it tacitly condones the activities of that partner. The partnership between the UI and Coca-Cola has received heaps of bad press on our campus for both the monopolistic power and alleged human-rights abuses of the soft-drink corporation. A University of Missouri endowed professorship in economics is empty after its namesake, Ken Lay, achieved notoriety in the Enron scandal. Missouri also changed the name of its basketball venue from Paige Arena to Mizzou Arena, after allegations surfaced that Wal-Mart heiress Elizabeth Paige Laurie (for whom it had been named) had cheated her way through college.

Schools keep looking for these public-private partnerships, because they have to in order to stay financially solvent. Nationally, funding from the states to public universities as a percentage of the school's total budget fell 10 percent between 1991 and 2004. According to an Oct. 16 New York Times report, funding fell more precipitously between 2001 and 2004 than at any other time in recent history. Rising student tuition has covered much of this difference. Retired University of California-Berkeley Professor Charles Schwartz studied the California state-university system and found that a student's tuition and fees covered the entire cost of an undergraduate education. State subsidization went toward graduate education and research.

Tuition increases have been well-covered both by the DI and in larger media outlets, but the increased influence of private donors and corporations has gone largely unnoticed. More than anything, we have private donors to thank for the new Pomerantz Center, Adler Building, Blank Honors Center, and Kinnick Stadium renovations. For students, it seems unjust to have all these new construction projects while having to pay higher tuition and hearing about budget cuts. The problems of the privatization trend arise when private donors use their money to influence the university in ways that may be detrimental to the overall educational experience.

State universities were initially intended as democratizing institutions that can level the playing field for all of society. We should do our best to recall and hold to the original ideal of the state university: publically controlled institutions of higher learning that are open and affordable for all.

Where speed reading takes you

My comments are in reaction to the Oct. 20 speed-reading story ("Sweeping to swift reading"), but the anecdote is Woody Allen's. He had just completed a speed-reading course, and the class was assigned War and Peace. "I read it," he said. "It was about Russia."

Jim Leonard
Iowa City resident

What general-ed courses give you

Reading some of the letters that have appeared in the past few days regarding gen-ed courses, you'd think that the only possible way someone can become a well-rounded person and a useful member of society is by taking college courses in many different subjects and that the only way you can gain knowledge in a subject is by taking a college course. Both are, of course, not true.

I speak three languages, yet I have never taken a college language course. I am well-read, yet I have never taken a college English or literature course (I'd rather read a good book). I've carried out research in physical chemistry and in rheology, yet I have never taken a college course in any area of chemistry or in rheology (I am a physics major). I am well-informed about the history of Mexico and I have a basic knowledge of the histories of Paraguay, Cuba, Nicaragua, Japan, and several European countries, yet I have never taken a college course in any subject other than physics, mathematics, and astronomy.

In my major and probably in any subject, the best way to learn is by actual practical experience, not by means of courses. I fully sympathize with people who do not like being forced to take courses not required for their major.

who could work well with any of the other three. He is not only knowledgeable about the issues and how city government works, but he is a "team player" who could work out compromises on difficult issues without letting ideology or personality be a stumbling block.

I am not the greatest team player, but I do know one when I see one. Garry Klein is a team player. I urge you to cast your second vote for Garry Klein on Nov. 8.

Look hard at war on terror

The United States will never win the War on Terror, at least under this president. From sexual humiliation by way of forced nudity to the burning of bodies, American soldiers continue to show a complete lack of concern for the culture of the Muslim world. Do they honestly believe these tactics to be beneficial to the supposed fight for global freedom, or is that even of concern to them?

The lack of response from the Department of Defense, Department of State, and even the president is much more disturbing. Unless a hard-line approach is adopted and immediately fully implemented, this hyped-up battle that has traversed boundaries and infringed upon citizens' civil liberties leaving no American unaffected will do nothing to combat the problem and lower the number of foreigners who hate America. These acts only serve to increase anger and hostility toward the United States and will continue to do so, until someone takes action.

It is not enough to simply denounce these damaging practices and quietly pretend and secretly hope that they will disappear. Punishing those who take part and sanction these acts and making efforts to ensure they will never be repeated would be a great act of patriotism for any member of this administration brave enough to intervene.

Alexander Ingham
UI student

Make Klein your second vote

On Nov. 8 we will vote for two candidates in the at-large City Council election. No matter whom your first vote is for, I urge you to think about what sort of person you want for your second vote. That vote should go to someone who could work well with any of the other three candidates. I strongly believe that Garry Klein is the only one of the four

Kinnick energy

For the past couple of days, I've been trying to figure out what is so wrong with the universe that the game on Oct. 22 ended the way that it did. Those of you interested in the latest political conflict, stop reading here: This week, it's about football.

As a member of the Marching Band, I cannot describe in words the intensity I felt coming into Kinnick Stadium, seeing a sea of black and hearing the deafening cheers when the first chord of "Back in Black" rang from the speakers as the Hawks emerged from the tunnel.

Many of my friends who are not football fans have described the morning tailgate crowd as overzealous about an athletics contest that has no real bearing on the state of the world. If this is the case, I am guilty as charged.

My life is quite comparable with that of most college students. Although I love what I study and find gratification in the work I do, I feel that my collegiate experience would be incomplete without the thrill of Hawkeye football.

I suppose I risk blowing things out of proportion. After all, it is just a football game, right? Try telling that to the 70,000 Hawkeye loyal who pack Kinnick Stadium every home game.

Saturday mornings are a ritual in and of themselves. The exclamation "It's game day" evokes an adrenaline rush that rivals the best Universal Studios roller coasters that many of us experienced last January at the bowl game. Although my mornings consist primarily of rehearsals and performances, I try to find a little time to revel in the tailgating scene. From the most superlative RV camps to the more modest student gatherings, there is an intangible element at work here that is unlike any other.

It seemed as if Iowa City was about to explode with an energy that, unfortunately, contrasted bitterly with the silence following the last Michigan touchdown. To a Hawk fan, it was ungodly.

Scholars of group behavior would point to the fact that, of course, the opposing side feels the same way. As a student of political science, I realize that I may be merely an unimaginably small component of a human race that subdivides into groups and fails to see eye-to-eye with "the other" on so many issues — whether it be a football game, a piece of territory, or a grasp on power.

Washington Post columnist George Will depicted the attitude of die-hard football fans when describing an Alabama football fan in need of a heart transplant who posed the question, "If I can't go to Alabama football games, what's the point in living?" I cannot help but feel the same way about the Hawks.

Football tailgates consist of so many unhealthy components, from cheese-sauce-smothered brats to cheap beer. Yet, when I woke up on Oct. 22 and saw how blue the sky was, I could not help but think that I would not rather die of anything but cholesterol and sodium. Yes, that is what I would like my tombstone to say. The happy-go-lucky atmosphere — at least for the fans — contrasts to the hustle and bustle of everyday diets and workloads.

Take a look at the fan forums, and you will see a misappropriation of the outcome of the game on the calls. It is endemic that a loss of this sort will be first attributed to refereeing and not the miscues of our own beloved gladiators. Yet it is obvious that football is a game of inches, and in such hotly contested conflicts such as this, the penalties and missed opportunities make a world of difference.

Regardless of the offensive miscues, life will go on, and the sun will rise for another football game. Sports critics may point to the tragedy that us-versus-them conflicts entail, yet as Mariane Pearl, the wife of murdered Wall Street Journal contributor Daniel Pearl pointed out in At Home in the World, a collection of her husband's work, "The world often seemed to be a mess, but it was our world and somehow our mess." It is indeed our world, a world full of misunderstanding and conflict.

Maybe someday we will overcome this history, but in the mean time, pass the mustard and "Go Hawks!"

Windy City music blows in Offbeat but uneven

BY TONY A. SOLANO
THE DAILY IOWAN

With the recent mainstream success of Fall Out Boy, Disturbed, and Rise Against, Chicagoans Treaty of Paris say this is a ripe season in the urban-Illinois music scene. Despite channeling the sounds of established musical genres and originating from two fused groups, Treaty of Paris aims to forge its own way past cliché-riddled, conventional, utterly commercial crap to the top of the industry.

Chicago band Treaty of Paris will perform today at Gabe's.

and after compiling a long list dozens of monikers long, Kosch and the other members agreed on Treaty of Paris because they found the name funny.

In an effort to distinguish its new identity from its parent bands' old ones, band members are focused on creating new songs. In September, Treaty of Paris released Behind Our Calm Demeanors, which Wade described as an exemplary slice of the range of resonances the band embraces.

"Back on the Bus" is an electric guitar-driven track smacking of everything flannel-clad in the '90s. Chorvat's raspy vocals mirror Nickelback's Chad Kroeger, and "Hello Nurse" and "Rollerskates" are upbeat, harmonic punk tracks that could easily be swapped with Fall Out Boy's songs.

"The music that we're playing right now — we've made a concentrated effort to go in a more pop direction with it," Wade said. "It's still very much rock music, but we've tried to back every song with fun sing-along parts and stuff like that."

While the recent esteem for Chicago musicians hasn't swollen heads, Wade said, more are entertaining the possibility to play big.

"I'm not sure how we fit into the whole picture yet," he said. "My hope is that we can get to a level where we can play on the Warped Tour, or something like that."

A week ago, audiences were subjected to Tony Scott's bizarre and bombastic action flick Domino, whose garish, hyper-kinetic excesses recalled the overblown Natural Born Killers in 1994 (minus the social commentary). But moviegoers need not lose faith completely in genre films yet — Marc Forster's Stay is another commercial movie from a Hollywood studio. And, guess what — its visual audacity, intelligent ambition, and offbeat sensibility rival those of any art film this year.

Stay, however, is not one of the best films of the year, for audacious and offbeat styles alone do not make great films. I admired and enjoyed this science-fiction thriller for what it attempts to do and how much of that it accomplishes. In an age of sequels and remakes and remakes of sequels, there is something exciting about original mainstream films whose goal is not simply to appease their audiences. That said, this is just the type of movie destined for both box-office poison and a potential cult following.

Forster's previous directorial credits include, of all things, Finding Neverland (2004) and Monster's Ball (2001). The film's screenwriter, David Benioff, penned 25th Hour in 2003 (both the script and the novel). When you've got a psychological puzzle film with echoes of The Sixth Sense (1999), these men probably aren't the first filmmakers who come to mind. Still, they team up to evoke a creepily atmospheric and absorbing mystery that, at times, reminded me of Kafka, Hitchcock, Lynch, and Serling.

Ewan McGregor plays Sam Foster, a psychiatrist living with his girlfriend Lila (Naomi Watts), an attractive artist battling suicidal tendencies. His latest patient, in the first of dozens of coincidences, is an art student at a university who threatens to kill himself in three days. Ryan Gosling, who somehow mumbled his way into Rachel McAdams' heart in The Notebook (2004), plays the alienated and guilt-ridden young man, Henry Letham.

As Sam tries to prevent the suicide, he becomes engulfed in another reality, where the recurring presence of key characters — a blind man (Bob Hoskins), Sam's colleague (B.D. Wong), Henry's former psychiatrist (Janeane Garofalo), Henry's mother (Kate Burton), Henry's girlfriend (Elizabeth Reaser) — help navigate him through this maze-like underworld.

Despite keeping us at an emotional arm's length throughout the film, these cast members turn in intensely powerful performances that keep our attention between the series of volatile plot turns.

Stay eventually loses its footing and its focus as it forays into murky existentialism, but it always remains intriguing, challenging, and eager to provoke thought. Most impressive is the film's surreal look, steeped in an endlessly inventive visual orgasm of brilliantly-utilized camera angles and movement, moody art direction, and meticulous editing. I remain ambivalent about the twist at the ending, though, which is far less mind-blowing than the first three fourths of the film would suggest.

Although Forster's experiment is sure to polarize audiences and critics, I'm recommending the uneven Stay as a strong curiosity piece: confident, hypnotic, and surprisingly compelling. Are we plunged into a nightmare? The dark depths of insanity? Or another universe entirely? The ambiguous internal logic may not answer all of these questions upon the first viewing, but arriving at the conclusion is a rare and wild ride.

GLOOMY DOOM DOOMED

FILM REVIEW
by David Frank

Doom

When:

12:00, 2:25, 4:50, 7:15, 9:40 p.m.

Where:

Cinema 6

★★★ out of ★★★★★

On the most primitive level one can enjoy a movie, I sort of liked Doom. Yet, in no way is it a good flick. I could thrash it for hours, but I won't — at least I won't slam it for more than 500 words. Because I can't deny that I left the theater with a slight grin attached to my mug. Occasionally, likable trash comes down the chute.

Based on the first-person shooter video game in which the only goal is to blast the goop out of monsters in claustrophobic corridors, Doom the movie attempts to conjure characters and a story from source material in which those elements are nonexistent, and, in this attempt, dismally fails.

At a research facility on Mars, scientists accidentally create a monster who takes pleasure in playing hide-and-seek before mauling his prey like an Irish wolfhound mauls a baby cardinal. Who do you call for this type of emergency? A group of Marines, led by The Rock.

To define the soldiers as characters would be an insult to one-dimensional, cardboard-thin archetypes typically shoe-horned into these sort of flicks. They're monster food and nothing else.

These martian snacks arrive on the Red Planet, and for a large chunk of the film, they step down barely lit hallways (why does no one pay the lighting bills in these sort of flicks?) and react to distant clangs and thumps. And when the monsters start munching on the food, well, we're kind of happy that the movie's luminosity stays dim, because, even in the shadows, the monsters look like ridiculous muppets slathered in slime. All of this cat-and-mouse malarkey is stolen straight from Aliens, and I'd recommend James Cameron consider litigation and grab some of Doom's inevitable box-office pelf.

By rule of cinematic thumb, movies based on video games are suckfests. Really, really gigantic suckfests. So, with zero expectations, Doom snuck up on me.

The film lacks the obnoxious flash and glitz of the typical video-game adaptation: It isn't scored by death-metal rawkers roaring over the soundtrack nor feels like it was edited by a rabid wolverine tweaking out on meth. Doom streams forward with the simple, yet effective, directness of a second-tier John Carpenter flick (and second-tier Carpenter flicks such as They Live and Vampires aren't too shabby). And while the screenplay mostly resembles the work of a lobotomized chimp with a crayon, the writers deserve credit for incorporating the game's cheat codes in a clever manner and for delivering a rather unexpected twist in the final scene.

Doom is mindlessly entertaining in the same primal way that violent video games are, and that was probably the filmmakers' only ambition. So, do I recommend it? Well, sort of. I'd hope folks would opt to see great films such as the potent North Country or the masterful A History of Violence instead. Yet, I guess, watching crap get blown up real good has its chop-shop value, too.

White Sox 7, Astros 6

CHICAGO (AP) — Scott Podsednik made it two electrifying home runs for the White Sox — and two World Series wins. Podsednik's home run off Brad Lidge in the ninth inning gave Chicago a thrilling 7-6 victory over the Houston Astros on Sunday night and put the White Sox halfway home to their first World Series title in 88 years. "Incredible. What a ballgame," Podsednik said. "I was sitting on a fastball the entire at-bat." After yet another disputed umpiring call, Paul Konerko capped a momentous week with a seventh-inning grand slam on reliever Chad Qualls' first pitch, giving the White Sox a 6-4 lead and sparking the crowd of 41,432 to life on a drizzly, dreary night.

MENS TENNIS

Men's tennis battles

Four Iowa men's tennis players battled a strong field of Big Ten foes and other top Midwest programs at the Oct. 20-23 ITA Regional in Ann Arbor, Mich. The Hawkeyes, all of whom were unseeded, faced numerous ranked opponents from Louisville, Notre Dame, and Ohio State. Christian Bierich and Chaitu Malempati each won singles matches in the 64-team qualifying draw of the tournament and teamed up for the Hawkeyes' lone doubles victory.

Bierich was stellar in his first-round match on Oct. 20, upsetting the No. 3 seed in the qualifying draw (6-4, 6-1). The freshman then overcame a first-set loss to win his second-round match before falling in his final match to reach the main draw. Malempati also cruised to win (6-2, 6-2) in the first round before losing in round two to the No. 7 seed. Bierich and Malempati won their first match in the sole doubles division of the tournament, then lost to the No. 1 doubles team in the field.

Brett Taylor was eliminated from the singles qualifying draw in a grueling 2-6, 6-1, 5-7 first-round loss to a top Notre Dame player. Bart van Monsjou, who was the lone Hawkeye competing in the main draw of the tournament, lost (6-2, 6-2) to the No. 9 seed in the first round. The duo lost 8-2 in their sole doubles match.

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Racette still alive in tourney

After four days of play at the Midwest Regionals, only one Hawkeye on the women's tennis team remains standing. Meg Racette defeated 82nd-ranked Sarah Battay of Indiana (6-1, 3-6, 7-5) to push into the quarterfinals of the singles draw today, where she faces a tough challenge in Northwestern's Cristelle Grier, ranked 11th nationally.

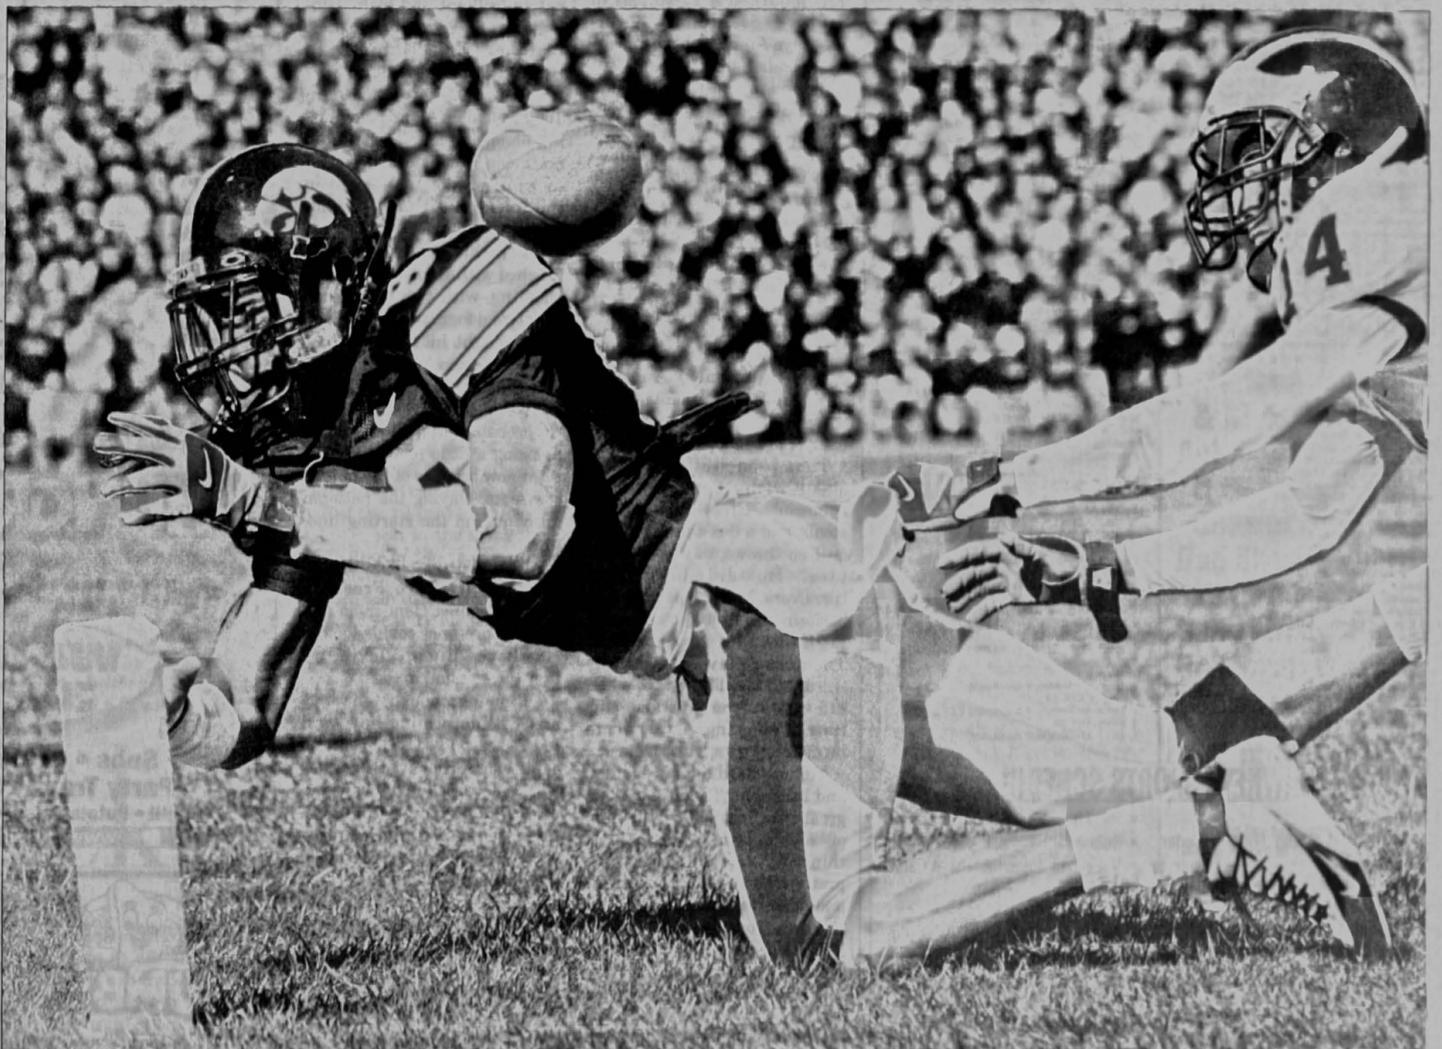

Milica Veselinovic also competed Sunday afternoon, falling to 29th-ranked Catrina Thompson of Notre Dame, 7-5, 6-3.

Jacqueline Lee fought hard for a first-round win in singles play over the weekend before being taken out by No. 3 seed Caitlyn Burke of Wisconsin, 6-1, 6-2, in the second round.

The rest of the weekend brought mixed results for the Hawkeyes, who struggled in doubles play. The duo of Racette and Hillary Mintz was toppled in the second round after a bye in the first. Veselinovic and Lee were also eliminated in the second round, while Kayla Berry and Krissy Dowlin hit a snag and fell in the first.

Clinton Solomon falls out of bounds in attempt to catch a pass from Drew Tate during overtime of the Hawkeyes' game against Michigan on Oct. 22. Iowa, which lost the overtime coin toss and had to drive first, settled for a Kyle Schlicher field goal, and the Wolverine offense then scored a touchdown to win the game, 23-20.

 THE DAILY IOWAN

Spoiled opportunities in regulation and deficient execution in overtime render Iowa's bowl future as distorted as ever.

Michigan junior Jerome Jackson rushed for a 1-yard touchdown on third-and-goal, sealing the Wolverines' 23-20 victory in the first overtime game at Kinnick Stadium — not to mention Michigan's second-straight walk-off victory via a touchdown. Wolverine quarterback Chad Henne, who finished 14-of-21 for 207 yards, whipped a pass to Jason Avant for an 18-yard completion to the 5-yard line. Jackson gained four yards on first down and was stuffed on second before powering through the defensive line for the win.

Iowa (5-3, 3-2) scored a 32-yard field goal from Kyle Schlicher after failing to reach the end zone during its possession to start overtime. A defensive holding penalty against Michigan handed the Hawkeyes a first down at the 14-yard line.

On third down at the 10, quarterback Drew Tate tried to hit Clinton Solomon on an out pattern at the pylon, but the ball was just out of reach of Solomon's outstretched arms and fell incomplete.

"It wasn't a designed play for me, but the way they played their coverage, I knew the ball was coming to me," Solomon said. "I knew Drew was going to throw the ball to me, and I just need to get in place to make a play."

At the end of regulation, Schlicher converted a 32-yard field goal as time expired to send the game into overtime. Tate, who completed 27-of-39 passes for 288 yards, connected with receiver Herb Grigsby on a 30-yard pass down the middle of the field, and Albert Young added a 6-yard run on the next play, giving Iowa the ball at Michigan's 15-yard line with 1:10 remaining.

After a time-out, Iowa ran Young off tackle for a 2-yard gain as the clock ticked down to 33 seconds, when Tate hit Iowa's 22 game home-winning streak was snapped on Oct. 22, as Michigan slipped past the Hawkeyes 23-20 in overtime.

It was Iowa's first home loss since an early loss to Iowa State in 2002.

"It hurts when you invest a lot, like this team did," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "But you have to move on. That'll be our task here, after the bleeding stops."

Hawkeye bubble bursts

It wasn't that Michigan won that's disappointing but how Iowa lost that leaves you shaking your head.

— Nick Richards

Let this one sit for a while. You're going to have to.

With a week off, Iowa will have to let this stew, knowing it lost an elimination game for a shot at a Big Ten championship and a Jan. 1 bowl game.

"You hate to go into a bye week with a loss on your shoulder, because it kind of lingers with you for the whole week," a dejected Jovon Johnson said, following Iowa's 23-20 overtime loss to Michigan.

Instead of a celebration, 70,585 slowly sauntered out of their Kinnick Stadium seats, left to sit with that same dejection, the same sick feeling brewing in their guts. They weren't leaving with a feeling of anger over the loss to the Maize and Blue but of disappointment. You know the "I'm not upset, just disappointed" spiel you get from your parents when you've let them down? That is this game, and it hurts so much more.

Men hoopsters flash their stuff

BY TYSON WIRTH
THE DAILY IOWAN

Mere hours after Hawkeye fans mourned a 23-20 loss in Kinnick Stadium, Carver-Hawkeye Arena gave them reason to smile.

In the Iowa basketball team's annual Black and Gold blowout, Jeff Horner, Greg Brunner, and Adam Haluska's Black bunch predictably squashed the Gold group, 78-65, in front of approximately 500 fans. What did surprise, however, was the inspired play of sophomore swingman Alex Thompson.

"It's almost like he's somebody whose maturing into his collegiate body," Iowa coach Steve Alford said. "And he's building confidence through that; he's going at people now, instead of being passive."

Thompson stuffed the stat sheet with 16 points, nine rebounds, three assists, two steals, and a 6-of-6 performance on free throws, in just 29 minutes. He did have four turnovers, but it was a stellar performance from someone having to learn a new position. Thompson played power forward and small forward, as he did last season, but also saw time at shooting guard, where he matched up against Haluska.

"Adam's hard to play against, and I thought [Thompson] did a great job of really bodying him, of banging him," Alford said. "I think our vets are going to be pretty solid and stable, and if all a sudden we get a good shot in the arm from an Alex, a Doug [Thomas], one of these guys, it's obviously going to help us."

Indeed, the Hawkeyes are a veteran bunch. Just one player, little-used Jack Brownlee, doesn't return from last year's squad that made the NCAA Tournament, and key players Horner, Brunner, Thomas, and starting center Erik Hansen are all seniors. That foursome combined for 38.1 points and 20.3 rebounds a year ago.

Both squads looked alternately brilliant and blah. Joining the big three of Horner, Brunner, and Haluska in Black's starting lineup was Hansen and true freshman Tony Freeman. Alford said playing alongside four starters did not mean Freeman had passed up junior Mike Henderson in the lineup but that Freeman would "definitely" be part of his rotation this winter. Freeman finished with 10 points on 4-of-7 shooting, with two steals, one assist, and four turnovers.

"I thought his first half, he was a little shocked, because all of a sudden it's time to go five-on-five in Carver," Alford said. "It probably hits the freshmen as being a little more bug-eyed right now because of the fans in the seats, playing the national anthem, and the starting line-ups."

Alford added he liked the on-the-ball pressure Freeman showed against Henderson and that his presence could give the Hawkeyes lineup flexibility they haven't had in the past.

Ultimately, though, the veterans will determine how well Iowa's season goes. That means captains Horner and Brunner will have to lead the way, and after Saturday's performance, there's no reason to think they won't. Horner especially stood out, rolling up 23 points, five rebounds, five assists, and six steals. Alford said that's been par for Horner this young season.

"I actually grabbed him in Thursday's practice and told him it was the best practice I've seen him have," Alford said. "And he's had a lot of great ones."

Soccer falls

The Iowa women's soccer team (3-11-4, 1-6-2) lost in heartbreaking fashion on Sunday, 3-2 in overtime, in Bloomington, Ind., against the Hoosiers. Indiana (7-9-1, 3-6-0) opened the scoring in the 30th minute, when Molly Kruger's shot beat Hawkeye goalkeeper Erin MacIsaac for the early one-goal lead. Iowa responded in the 56th minute, when freshman Jackie Kaeding netted her first goal of the season off an assist from fellow-freshman Manon Engelhart.

The Hoosiers took the lead again 12 minutes later, when Lindsay McCarthy found the back of the net. The lead was short-lived however, as Hawkeye Kelly Warner notched her first goal of the year off an assist from Jamie Maltman.

Indiana's Molly Beckwith scored the game-winning golden goal in the sixth minute of overtime.

On Oct. 21, the Hawkeyes garnered their first conference victory of the season when they upset No. 20 Purdue, 2-1, in double overtime in West Lafayette, Ind.

Purdue (10-6-0, 6-2-0) took an early one-goal lead in the 25th minute, when Jill Sarbaugh beat MacIsaac — who tallied a career high 12 saves — for the opening score.

Iowa responded in the 37th minute, when Engelhart took a Kaeding pass and beat Purdue goalkeeper Lauren Mason for the equalizer. The game stayed tied into the second overtime, until Iowa was issued a penalty kick in the 108th minute. Freshman Kelsey Shaw drilled the shot past Mason to give Iowa its first conference road win since 2002.

Field hockey goes extra mile

'Both teams knew what was at stake coming in, and I thought we had a really good week of practice. Our preparation was really specific to Indiana, and I think it's just a huge win.'

— Coach Tracey Griesbaum

BY BRENDAN STILES
THE DAILY IOWAN

Week after week after week, Iowa field-hockey coach Tracey Griesbaum has emphasized to her team that they must play the game for 70 minutes. The No. 11 Hawkeyes finally got the message Oct. 22.

They not only played for 70 minutes against No. 8 Indiana, they took the Hoosiers to overtime. Approximately halfway through the extra 15-minute session, Iowa freshman Caitlin McCurdy showed why she was the reigning Big Ten Offensive Player of the Week.

She scored the game-winning goal on the Big Ten and national Defensive Player of the Week in Indiana goalkeeper Haley Exner, and the Hawkeyes pulled off a 2-1 upset.

"Both teams knew what was at stake coming in, and I thought we had a really good week of practice," Griesbaum said. "Our preparation was really specific to Indiana, and I think it's just a huge win."

Three minutes and 43 seconds into the game, the Hoosiers struck first to make it

1-0, which was the score going into halftime. From halftime on, Indiana only got one shot off, and early on in the second half, Iowa junior Kara Zappone was able to tie the game at 1-1, when she scored off a pass from senior Debbie Birrell.

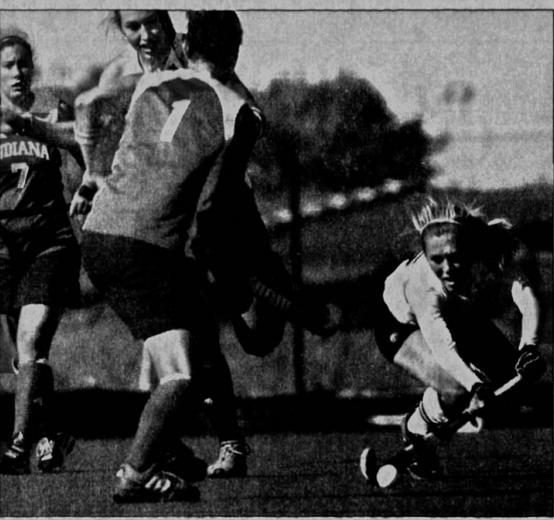

"I think it gave everyone confidence, knowing that we can score on them," Zappone said. "We were down, it tied us up, and it gave us more momentum."

On Senior Day, one would think it would all come down to a senior winning the game for Iowa. In the overtime, Birrell nearly finished off the Hoosiers with a fairy-tale ending.

After McCurdy got upended by Exner as she took her first shot of the overtime, Iowa was granted a penalty stroke shot, which would win the game, had it gone in.

Unfortunately for the Hawks, Birrell's penalty stroke went off Exner's pad, and play continued on.

"I was so excited after that first play when we got the stroke, because that was completely uncalled for by the keeper," McCurdy said. "We knew we were going to have a tough time coming back from it, but we had too many things going for us that I didn't think there was one thing that could stop us.

Hawkeye Kelly Slattery lunges for the ball during the second half of Iowa's 2-1 overtime win over the eighth-ranked Indiana Hoosiers on Oct. 22 at Grant Field. The game-winning goal was scored 8½ minutes into overtime by freshman Caitlin McCurdy, avenging a prior Hawkeye scoring opportunity that was foiled when Indiana goalkeeper Haley Exner came out of the goal and hit McCurdy with a slide.

"This is going to give us a lot of confidence heading into the end of the season and the Big Ten Tournament."

The win puts Iowa at 10-5 overall and 3-2 in the Big Ten. The Hawks have two remaining games this weekend against Michigan and Louisville, in Ann Arbor, Mich., before they host the 2005 Big Ten Tournament.

"Offensively, defensively, regulation, and overtime, it was a complete team effort, and I thought everyone had really good moments to their play today," Griesbaum said.

Young on a delayed shovel pass, resulting in a 2-yard loss. The clock wound down to two seconds before Tate signaled to the official for a time-out.

"We didn't necessarily want a shot at the end zone, but we were playing for a touchdown," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "That being said, we didn't want to take any foolish chances, and you certainly can't take a sack there."

"We did what we thought was best at that time. I assure you of that." Even though the play-calling appeared conservative, the Hawkeyes wanted to end the game in regulation.

"We were thinking touchdown," said Young, who finished with 30 carries and 153 yards — his fourth-consecutive 100-yard game. "You wanted to get out of there. We had the momentum going."

Before Schlicher's field goal at the end of regulation, the Hawkeyes went the last 38 minutes without scoring a point despite numerous opportunities in Michigan territory.

Safety Miguel Merrick intercepted an under-thrown Henne pass and ran for 20 yards to the Wolverine 49-yard line. However, Matt Melloy dropped a pass on third down that would have given the Hawkeyes a first down and potential field-goal position with 2:20 left.

But Iowa forced Michigan to punt after three runs, and Andy Brodell returned the ball to midfield on a 12-yard reverse. With the ball on the 50-yard line with 51 seconds left in the half, Tate was sacked for minus-10 yards on first down, and the half ended without moving the chains.

In the second half, three of Iowa's first five series ended inside Michigan's 35-yard line, without yielding points. Schlicher's 41-yard field-goal attempt late in the third was partially blocked by Michigan's David Harris.

After Michigan and Iowa traded punts, Wolverine receiver Antonio Bass was hit by Abdul Hodge and was called down. But officials overturned the call after consulting the instant replay, giving Iowa the ball on Michigan's 27-yard line.

But a holding penalty on first down and a 6-yard quarterback sack by Prescott Burgess pushed the Hawkeyes back to the Wolverine 32 with a fourth-and-15. Instead of attempting the long-short conversion or a Schlicher 49-yard field goal — albeit into the wind, Ferentz elected for a pooch punt.

"Definitely, I wanted a shot," Schlicher said. "As far as being ready, being prepared, definitely, I was. But the coaches know what they're doing, and we trust the coaches."

Avant scored on the 52-yard pass on the ensuing drive, accounting for more than a quarter of Michigan's total passing yards.

Iowa jumped out to a 7-0 lead on its first series with Tate's 13-yard touchdown pass to Grigsby, capping off a season-best 85-yard drive. Grigsby caught the ball at the 10-yard line near the sideline, ran to the corner, and jumped over the pylon for the score.

Michigan took advantage of a 15-yard penalty for punt interference with a 5-yard pass from Henne to Avant in the back of the end zone. Avant went in motion to the slot position and ran a slant along the goal line, but when Chad Greenway bumped him at midfield, Avant cut straight to the back of the end zone and secured the catch with one foot inbounds.

Iowa quickly responded with an 80-yard drive in which Tate went 8-of-8, including a 4-yard slant to Grigsby in the end zone to give the Hawkeyes a 14-7 advantage.

On Michigan's first drive of the second half, which began at the Iowa 42-yard line, thanks to Brandon Harrison's interception off a ball that hit Solomon in the hands, Garrett Rivas converted a 26-yard kick to cut the deficit to 14-10.

The Hawkeyes, who were in a three-way tie for first-place in the Big Ten entering last weekend, are now tied with Michigan for fifth with three games left and a bye looming. Iowa's remaining opponents have a combined 17-5 record, but Ferentz isn't concerned about the team's immediate future.

"I thought they played with a lot of heart, a lot of effort and played tough," he said. "We'll learn from this one and keep moving. There's a lot of football left."

QUARTER BY QUARTER

1st Quarter

Iowa defended to start a game for just the 10th time under coach Kirk Ferentz but drew first blood when Drew Tate capped an 85-yard scoring drive with a 13-yard strike to Herb Grigsby. Albert Young rushed for 71 yards, and the Hawkeye defense pitched a shutout the rest of the quarter. They still haven't given up a first-quarter point at home in 2005.

2nd Quarter

Michigan tied the game at 7-7 when Chad Henne found wideout Jason Avant in the back of the end zone. Iowa's very next possession chewed up 5:36, as Tate and Young gashed the Wolverine defense for 80 yards. The killing blow came when Tate tossed a strike to Grigsby from 4 yards out. Iowa felt confident going into the break; it was 35-1 over the last four seasons when leading at half time.

3rd Quarter

With Wolverine tailback Mike Hart limited by an ankle injury, the Wolverines turned to their defense and special teams for a lift. Freshman Brandon Harrison sneaked in front of a Tate pass to give Michigan the ball at Iowa's 42-yard line. Nine plays later, Garrett Rivas nailed a 26-yard field goal to close the score to 14-10, and Dave Harris blocked just enough of Kyle Schlicher's 41-yard field goal attempt to force a misfire.

4th Quarter

Bryan Mattison recovered an Antonio Bass fumble at the Michigan 27, but Iowa's offense did zilch and punted. The Wolverines immediately took advantage — Steve Breaston broke a short screen pass for a 52-yard touchdown, and Michigan led 17-14. Iowa maneuvered to Michigan's 14-yard line, and Schlicher's game-tying field goal soared through the uprights as time expired.

Overtime

Schlicher booted a 28-yard field goal on Iowa's possession, but little-used Jerome Jackson bulled his way to the winning touchdown to end the Hawkeyes' 22-game home winning streak. The win was Lloyd Carr's 100th and kept alive the Wolverines' hopes for a conference title.

Kinnick streak ends

some tight games, finally were broken by the Big Ten's all-time winningest program after a back-and-forth game.

"A lot of guys earned that streak," running back Albert Young said. "But this team fought as a team and went down as a team. If we're going to lose on our home turf, we're going to do it as a team."

The Wolverines broke a streak that had been a long time going. It was the third-longest active streak in the nation, behind only USC and Boise State. Iowa was previously 32-1 in games in which it had a halftime lead, before Michigan overcame a 14-7 halftime deficit. And Michigan's 17-14 fourth-quarter lead marked the first time in 46 quarters the Hawkeyes had trailed at home.

"Everybody invested in it — not just this team," said receiver Herb Grigsby. "So it hurts when you put this much on the line and lose."

Since the streak began in 2002, the Hawkeyes have had some close and some not-so-close calls at Kinnick Stadium, including 14 straight wins against Big Ten opponents. The Hawkeyes survived a late rally by Purdue a year ago and held on against Michigan on Homecoming in 2003. But as Jerome Jackson scored from a yard out in overtime, the Hawkeyes, for the first time in a long time, were human at home.

"We missed some opportunities today, whether you want to talk about penalties or turnovers," Ferentz said. "Anytime in conference play those things happen, there's a pretty fair chance that it's going to show up in the end. When those things happen, you've got to keep moving."

An incompleto to Clinton Solomon on third down in overtime was a microcosm of the entire afternoon. Tate led Solomon to the sideline, and the ball sailed just beyond the receiver's reach.

"I got my hands on it, so I feel

I should have caught it," Solomon said.

The Hawkeyes had their hands on 23-straight wins, but after finding a way the last two and half years, they looked lost.

"The slogan around here was to empty our tank," kicker Kyle Schlicher said about the looming bye week. "And we did. It just wasn't enough."

Loss leaves fans subdued

LOSS

USC — is gone, trampled under the new turf by Steve Breaston and Jerome Jackson. Untimely penalties killed Iowa, 11 in all for 94 yards. Dropped passes, none bigger than Clinton Solomon's third quarter carom that led to three Wolverine points and his oh-so-close miss at the end of overtime that would've given the Hawkeyes a third life at the end, did not help.

The fact that this isn't your father's or even big brother's Michigan makes it hard to swallow. The Michigan defense lacks that one big-name guy who can change a game. There's no Charles Woodson or even a Marlin Jackson, and the run defense is porous at best. Michael Hart left the game in the first quarter, recording just 17 yards on five carries. Even stud freshman Kevin Grady didn't shoulder the load in the fourth quarter. Michigan was sitting at 4-3 and 2-2 in conference play, waiting to receive its burial rights from the black-clad faithful. Even the Maize and Blue fans who made the long trek from Ann Arbor were ready to end the Lloyd Carr era. How many chances are you going to get with the above conditions against Michigan? Iowa had that, leading by four in the last stanza, and still couldn't close the deal.

"Anytime you're playing a team such as Michigan, you're going to have to put it away if you expect to win," linebacker Abdul Hodge said. "[If the Wolverines] stay in a ball game, they are a tough team to beat, especially in the fourth quarter. We didn't do a good job of putting them away."

It wasn't that Michigan won that's disappointing but how Iowa lost that leaves you shaking your head. Two forced turnovers, one at the Michigan 27 and the other at midfield, yet no points out of the two drives.

Iowa was the top team nationally in penalty yards, getting yellow-flagged for just 23.1 yards an outing. In conference play heading into the game, the Hawkeyes had been penalized just 11 times for 95 yards. At halftime, Iowa had already been flagged eight times.

"I just feel like there were bogus calls in the game," said Johnson.

Even with the disappointment filling out the Iowa interview room, Albert Young — how good is this guy going to be? — offered hope when it seems hope left the building with Jackson's overtime winner.

"The season's definitely not over," he said. "The way things are going with the conference, it's anyone's league. We still have something to fight for."

Let that stew for a while. E-mail DI reporter Nick Richards at: nicholas-richards@uiowa.edu

QUOTABLES

'It hurts when you invest a lot, like this team did. But you have to move on. That'll be our task here, after the bleeding stops.'

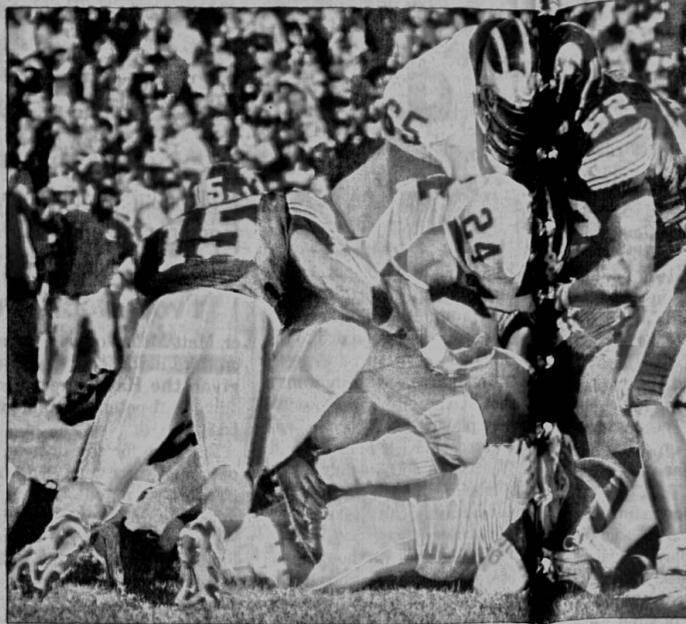

— Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz

'Anytime you're playing a team such as Michigan, you're going to have to put them away, if you expect to win. [The Wolverines] stay in a ball game, they are a tough team to beat, especially in the fourth quarter. We didn't do a good job of putting them away.'

— Iowa linebacker Abdul Hodge

Iowa receiver Clinton Solomon makes his way to the locker room after a 23-20 overtime loss to Michigan on Oct. 22. Solomon caught eight passes for 76 yards, but the effort wasn't enough to fend off the Wolverines and maintain the Kinnick Stadium winning streak, which was broken at 22.

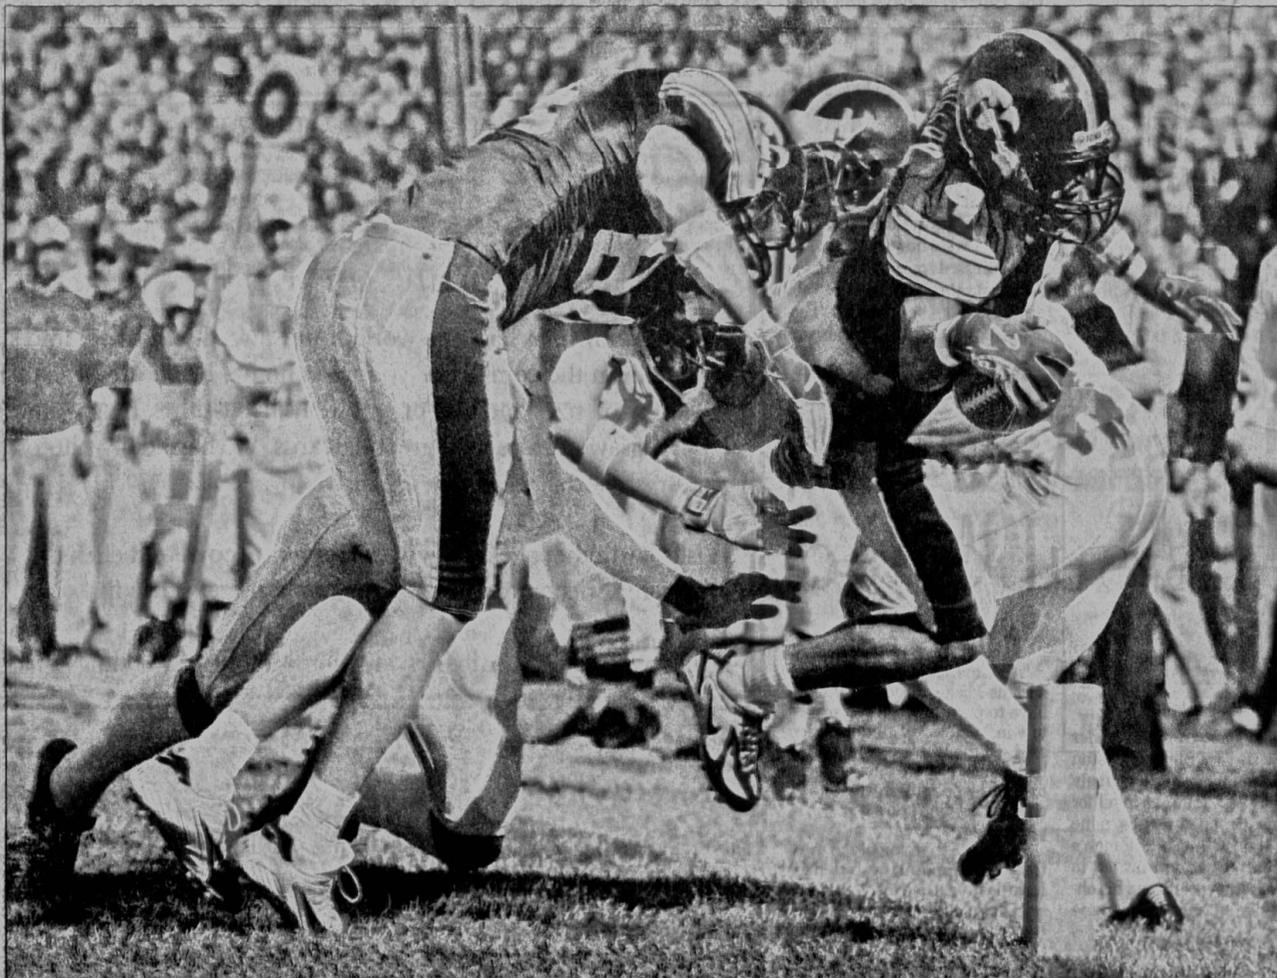

ABOVE: Michigan running back Jerome Jackson fights his way into the end zone for the final touchdown in overtime, propelling Michigan to victory. The close game went into overtime after Iowa hit a field goal in the last two seconds of the fourth quarter.

Herb Grigsby dives into the end zone to score the Hawkeyes' first touchdown on a pass from Drew Tate on the opening drive in the first quarter. Grigsby scored two touchdowns, the second in the second quarter.

BY THE NUMBERS

11

Number of penalties on Iowa, for 94 yards. In their previous four games, the Hawkeyes had 11 penalties for 95 yards.

153

Yards rushing for Albert Young, his fourth-straight 100-yard game and his fifth of the year.

5

Carries for Michigan running back Michael Hart, for just 17 yards, before leaving the game with an injury.

70

Seconds remaining in the game with the ball at the Michigan 15 before the Hawkeyes settled for Kyle Schlicher's 32-yard field goal to tie the game and send it into overtime.

PRIME PLAYS

THUMBS UP THUMBS DOWN

Secondary — The Hawkeyes held Michigan quarterback Chad Henne to 207 yards, and Miguel Merrick intercepted a pass in Iowa territory before halftime. Despite being flagged for three pass-interference penalties, the secondary surrendered the fewest yards that it has in conference play this season.

Iowa decision-making — Eleven penalties and questionable play calling, most notably at the end of regulation, ultimately cost the Hawkeyes the game. With the ball on Michigan's 15-yard line, 1:10 remaining and two time-outs in the bank, Iowa ran two plays netting one yard, melted the clock, and had to settle for a field goal.

LOOK AHEAD

— The Hawkeyes get a much-needed week off to lick their wounds after the tough loss to the Wolverines. The Hawkeyes were told to empty their tanks as if it were the last game of the year, and they'll need to recharge for the last three games, two of which are on the road.

— The next outing for the Hawkeyes is at newly ranked Northwestern. Now No. 21, the Wildcats routed Michigan State, 49-14, in Spartan Stadium; they are ranked fourth nationally in total offense.

Swimmers, divers fall to Gophers

BY CHARLIE KAUTZ AND MICHAEL SCHMIDT
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa swimming and diving team started its first home event of the season with roars of excitement but ended it in disappointment Oct. 21 — eventually falling to Big Ten powerhouse Minnesota by a score of 224-66 on the men's side and 169-131 on the women's.

Hawkeye senior diver Nancilea Underwood had a remarkable performance, setting a school and pool record with a score of 365.78 in the 3-meter competition. Also taking first in the 1-meter dive with a score of 300.90, Underwood broke her own school mark in the 3-meter and helped to keep the women's team within reach of the Gophers until the final few races. Iowa coach Marc Long believes that Underwood's performance motivated many of the inexperienced younger swimmers against Minnesota.

"We are relying on a lot of people who are really just trying to step it up," he said. "This was an intimidating situation, having Minnesota coming in here."

Hosting a dominant program early this season, the women's swimmers responded. It started with senior swimmer Kelly Werner winning the 100 backstroke, 200 backstroke, and 100 butterfly. Leading the swimmers alongside Werner was junior Emmy Haeger, who won both the 100 and 200 breaststroke with times of 1:05.20 and 2:21.24.

"I expected to come pretty close to their breaststrokers," she said. "I definitely surprised myself, and I think everyone is swimming out of her mind right now."

The Golden Gophers' depth helped capture the men's competition. Minnesota won 15-of-16 events in the blowout and had nine 1-2-3 finishes.

"The thing we want to do is just step up and race, regardless of where everybody else was," Long said. "We did have some good swims, relatively speaking, some good personal swims."

Freshman Nick Divan highlighted the Iowa (1-2, 0-2) effort with a victory in the 1,000 freestyle, the lone individual win for the Hawkeyes. The native of San Juan Capistrano, Calif., went basically unchallenged to finish at 9:30.62.

"As a freshman, he came in and took control of the race," Long said. "That's a very difficult race, usually one that a very experienced swimmer excels at."

Divan placed third in the 500 free, but if he had a preference, he would call the 1,000 his spotlight swim.

"That's generally my race," he said. "It's the perfect distance for me. I've generally been good at negative splitting that race."

Iowa's Dragos Agache was runner-up in the 100 and 200 breaststrokes. Hawkeye freshman James Dragon was second in the 100 butterfly, while Trevor Haley had the same result in the 200 individual medley.

The Hawkeyes were short-handed in their matchup with the defending Big Ten champions. Nathan Keeling, a butterfly swimmer, was suspended for the meet for an undisclosed reason, Long said. He was last year's Big Ten meet point-scorer, and he should return for Iowa's next meet Nov. 4 at Kansas.

V-ball improves, but drops 2

BY RYAN LONG
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa volleyball coach Cindy Fredrick witnessed both effort and improvement in her team this past weekend in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The Hawkeyes (13-10, 3-7 Big Ten) fell to No. 3 Penn State (18-2, 9-0 3-0 (15-30, 21-30, 23-30) and were defeated by No. 20 Ohio State (14-5, 7-3) 3-1 (30-27, 21-30, 23-30, 27-30).

"I think we're a little bit disappointed," Fredrick said after the loss to the Buckeyes. "I think we let one slip away tonight that we could have actually had. Last night against Penn State, I think you look at it and say that's a really awesome team."

Iowa allowed the Nittany Lions to control the tempo of the match up front. Penn State provided an extremely balanced attack, featuring 11 kills from Melissa Walbridge, 11 kills from Christa Harmotto, and a match-high 15 kills from Cassy Slayer. Kris Brown controlled the flow of the match by setting up 40 balls. Penn State was nearly attacking at ease, after posting a .420 hitting clip, compared with a .127 attack from the Hawkeyes.

Catherine Smale and Stacy Vitali led the attack for Iowa. Smale posted 14 kills, while Vitali provided eight of her own. Kiley Fister did her part with 30 assists.

"We can win," Vitali said. "Right now, we're just hanging in there, and we just need to push those last couple of points. But, we're a very strong team, and when we're on, we're on. I think if we were on against Penn State, we could have beaten them. So, I think we're learning that we're not at the bottom of the Big Ten."

After capturing game one against the Buckeyes, Iowa again allowed the opponent's attack to display offensive balance for the remainder of the match.

Ohio State hit at a .329 clip, while the Hawkeyes attacked at a .232 mark. The Buckeyes were led by Danielle Meyer, who had a match-high 22 kills. Nicole Britenriker put up 17 kills, Ami Stevens compiled 13, while Amanda Miller did her part, with 11. Marisa Main had a match-high 60 assists and executed 10 kills.

Iowa was led by Vitali, who provided a team-high 21 kills. Smale collected 16, Melanie Meister compiled eight, while Emily Hiza filled in for the injured Tiana Costanzo by posting seven.

Fister displayed steady play with 44 assists, two kills, and two service aces. The freshman setter has been enjoying her experience thus far in Big Ten action.

"I think it's so much fun," she said. "I think it's so awesome to be out there and playing against the best of the best. Especially coming in this year and being able to be a part of what we're doing this year and building up. It's so much fun. It's great to be a part of that, and we only have up to go. So, it's really exciting."

DAILY BREAK

“ [Wilma is] really going to take off like a rocket. ”
— Max Mayfield, the director of the National Hurricane Center, describing the hurricane as it approaches the Florida coast. The storm was expected to hit around dawn today.

the ledge

ERIC FOMON Signs You're Getting a PAULA

- You're on top of the table yelling the words to "Like a Prayer" with two pitchers and one big X on your hand.
- You don't realize that when you play the "Who can steal the officers' pepper spray" game, there are no winners, just losers and court dates.
- While everyone else was on spring break, you were saving up for inevitable night of your first PAULA.
- You didn't realize your popped collar is the perfect handle bar for dragging your passed-out body onto the street.
- Instead of the 10 shots before the bar club, you tried to start your own 25-shots club.
- Your friend sees the cops and shoves his drink across the table to you. Thanks Tim.
- The officer laughs when you try to prove your innocence by asking for a "breat-hick-malizer test."
- You went three years without a PAULA, until last night, so you figure you couldn't possibly get one the day after.
- After winning exactly $294 in a game of backally dice you feel it's your duty to walk up to a police officer and hold a staring contest while swaying back and forth.
- You walk around with your fake-21 stamp, saying to girls "I'm 21, shake your *****"
- You're a UI student under the age of 21 who FAc's like it's your job.

Eric Fomon thinks that an 8 a.m. court date is a beautiful way to start off any Thursday.

horoscopes

Monday, October 24, 2005
— by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Make the atmosphere and your physical surroundings better. The unexpected may surprise you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Romance may be your prime concern today, but don't forget all the work you have to get done. Take action, or you will be sorry you didn't follow through.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get as much done as you can. Progress can be made, and the more creative your approach, the further you will get.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your emotions will probably be hard to contain, but if you focus on the people and the things you enjoy doing most, this can be a very productive day.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may be surprised that someone you thought you could trust is not on your side. Domestic squabbles will develop if you want everything your way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may not have the best luck when it comes to love and romance today, but you will shine when dealing with colleagues and friends. The more you do for others, the more you will get in return.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do something that will make you feel good about yourself and the direction you are heading. You can make a move that will secure your position for the future, but don't burn bridges along the way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A very important piece of information may not be made available to you. Your beliefs and attitudes may be moving in a more spiritual direction.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may have to deal with the property or responsibilities of others. Do so, but don't lose sight of what's going on in your own life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Form partnerships with people who have something to contribute to the cause or the project you want to work on.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may have some big ideas, but you will have difficulties getting anyone to listen or believe in what you are trying to do. Go it alone, but take it slow.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): No matter what you do or say, people will take notice today and think you are pretty amazing.

STANDING GOURD

Jessica Green/The Daily Iowan

Kerry Fear (left) and Rob DuBay select pumpkins at the Colony Pumpkin Patch in North Liberty on Sunday. This is the first year the patch has been open and the only place in the area where people can cut their own pumpkins off the vine.
