Nick Maybanks and Janet Lyness, both Democrats and both assistant prosecutors, are facing each other in the county-attorney race

BY MATT SNYDERS
THE DAILY IOWAN

On paper, county attorney candidates Nick Maybanks and Janet Lyness seem as different from one another as Mary Kate is from Ashley.

After all, both are Democrats, both are staunch advocates of victims' rights, and both cite over-crowded jails and a bogged-down criminal justice system as major concerns for Johnson County.

But despite a similarity in ideology and party affiliation, the two couldn't be more different, in terms of personality and style.

Lyness has been an assistant Johnson County prosecutor since 1990. The 47-year-old graduated from the UI with a degree in psychology and enrolled in the UI College of Law soon after. Aside from prosecuting a plethora of victim-based crimes, she has been involved with various progressive organizations, including the Iowa National Organization for Women and the Rape Victim Advocacy Program.

UI sophomore Jonathan Jackson (far right) visits with potential customers during the final day of the 19th-annual Iowa Arts Festival in downtown on Sunday. The event featured more than 100 artists selling items ranging from jewelry, paintings, and photographs to various home-decor items. Jackson, a studio-art major, said he got the display area at the last minute after another artist canceled. "I couldn't afford a tent," he said. "I'm just glad it hasn't rained."

Hopefuls blitz IC

BY ADAM SALAZAR
AND DEAN TREFTZ
THE DAILY IOWAN

Two days before one gubernatorial primary candidate will emerge as Iowa's Democratic challenger to Republican Jim Nussle, representatives from each campaign — including two of the candidates — blew through Iowa City in a last-ditch effort to garner support in the liberal stronghold.

Upon arriving at Upper City Park at 8 p.m., Rep. Ed Fallon, D-Des Moines, was greeted by approximately 20 supporters, three fiddlers, two guitarists, and one bumper-stickered dog.

"I've been everywhere," Fallon said, listing off roughly 10 cities across eastern Iowa in describing his weekend travel schedule.

Earlier Sunday, Mike Blouin was greeted by cheering supporters at a rally on the Pedestrian Mall, with U2's "It's a Beautiful Day" blaring in the background.

"It has stunned me over and over and over again the support I receive in Iowa City," he said.

Blouin, the former director of Iowa Economic Development, spoke to the crowd about his reform-minded economic proposals for the state.

"All in Iowa, no matter who they are, need to be a part of the Iowa dream and move away from economic hindrance," he said.

The former U.S. congressman also touted his support of the Iowa Values Fund — which current Lt. Governor Sally Pederson recently said will create 50,000 jobs for the state — as proof of his commitment to economic development.

Patty Judge, the running mate of gubernatorial candidate Chet Culver, spoke to approximately a dozen supporters at the Larew law office, 504 E. Bloomington St. Judge, who arrived with husband John and two of her sons, touted the results of a poll released Sunday by the Des Moines Register that showed 36 percent of registered Iowa Democrats supported Culver, 28 percent favored Blouin, and 21 percent supported Fallon. One percent of Iowa Democrats pledged support for Sioux City engineer Sal Mohamed, while a crucial 14 percent were undecided.

IN THIS THERAPY, THE SLEEP GOES ON

BY ASHTON SHURSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

At 7 p.m. June 2, North Liberty resident Ethel Good was a smoker with back pain. By 9:30 p.m., the aching had subsided, and she was confident her nicotine cravings were a thing of the past.

"I was in pain all day," she said. After undergoing a hypnotherapy treatment in Iowa City, "it just vanished," she said.

Good was one of 30 local residents attending a hypnosis seminar at the Quality Inn and Suites hotel, 2525 N. Dodge St., sponsored by the Health Awareness Clinics. While similar events have popped up across the country, physicians continue to debate their effectiveness in treating ailments and stubborn habits.

The seminar employed hypnosis to help people stop smoking, lose weight, and relieve stress. Hypnotist Leslie Reynolds led the group through two sessions.

"You listen to what I'm saying, you'll never smoke again," he said. "You listen to what I'm saying, and you'll never overeat again."

The first part of the seminar focused on relaxing and falling into a "deep sleep," a phrase repeated by Reynolds. The hypnotist then explained his line of therapy cassette tapes, which participants could take home after donating a specified amount of money.

The individuals were later put into a deeper hypnotic state, which focused on their disorder or reason for attending the seminar.

"When you wake up, you'll feel better than you have ever felt before," Reynolds said, as he coaxed the group out of hypnosis. "You'll be ready to win."

"One of the main reasons hypnosis has a high success rate is that it takes will power out of the equation," he said, his deep, booming voice and easy-going manner relaxing the crowd members.

Reynolds contended that hypnosis "is not a belief system; it's a science."

Sebastian Schulz-Stübner, a UI assistant professor of anesthesiology and a hypnosis user at the UI Hospitals and Clinics, says the effectiveness of hypnosis depends on patients' suggestibility. If people believe that the therapy can help, there is a better chance for success, he said. However, hypnotherapy alone will not alleviate a patients' disorders.

"It's a part of a big puzzle. It's not a magic cure," Schulz-Stübner said. "It works in addition to diet and exercise. Hypnosis is one mean to achieve the goal."

Jeanie Kimbel, a training coordinator for the Iowa Tobacco Research Center, agrees that hypnosis can work to help people stop smoking, as long as

Biofuels a hot item in Iowa

BY JASON PULLIAM
THE DAILY IOWAN

Energy independence has emerged as one of the most oft-spoken phrases of the election cycle leading into Tuesday's gubernatorial primary.

As Iowa maneuvers to solidify its position as the nation's leader in ethanol production and to move to the fore of the biodiesel industry, candidates are giving renewable energy prominent standing on their campaign platforms.

When Gov. Tom Vilsack signed renewable-fuels legislation into law last week, it capped an historic legislative session for the biofuels industry.

The Iowa Renewable Fuels Association lauded a $13 million grant program to assist retailers with E-85 and biodiesel pump and storage tank installation and related tax breaks as the "most aggressive renewable fuels bill in the country."

The package will constitute an economic boon for the state, resulting in a $75 million addition to its tax base — and a savings of $50 million annually through 2020 for Iowans — by making lower cost biofuels more accessible, the group says.

Colleagues remember educator

BY MONICA SCHULZ
THE DAILY IOWAN

John Cox was an educator by nature.

Passionate about the fair treatment of students who applied for admittance to the UI, the former associate director of Admissions was a relentless worker who lived by the rules, colleagues of the late UI administrator said on Sunday.

Cox, a father of three and husband of 63 years to wife Hila

Beth, died on May 25 after a short illness at the age of 90.

He began his career as a teacher and coach and served as the superintendent of schools at La Moille, Iowa. During his 27-year tenure in the UI Office of Admissions, which ended in 1984, Cox managed the department and helped develop admissions policy.

Kathryne Bassett, the UI senior associate director of Admissions, who worked under Cox for a year, said he was a challenging boss, supportive mentor, and good friend. She most admired Cox's dedication to helping students understand admission decisions, she said.

"John only admitted students who he thought could do the work, but he was always willing to talk to people who were denied for as long as they needed to feel satisfied with the UI's decision," she said. "At the end of the day, he wanted everybody to feel good about the university."

George Sehl, a friend and fellow member of the Optimistic Club of Iowa City, a volunteer community-improvement group, described Cox as a "caring, hard-working individual who loved his wife." In retirement, Cox was an active club member who regularly participated in volunteer projects.

"He enjoyed charity work," Sehl said. "He was the kind of guy who always wanted to help people out."

Although he was "someone who took work seriously," Bassett said, Cox became animated when the conversation turned to Hawkeye basketball; she recalls a number of times when an excited Cox jumped from his seat and demonstrated a proper defensive stance for his co-workers.

Cox's interest in sports was balanced by his love of fine arts, dancing, and world travel, Bassett and Sehl said. Daughter Caren Cox said she misses a father who took pride in his flower garden and raised English bulldogs.

"He would want to be remembered as a fair man who worked hard and enjoyed his friends and family," she said.

Man charged with sexual abuse

An Iowa City man faces numerous charges for allegedly committing sexual acts with a 12-year-old boy.

Eric Stannard, 47, was charged with third-degree sexual abuse and lascivious acts with a child May 31. According to police documents, Stannard met with the child several times between July 2005 and April in an unattached shed on his property, 2254 S. Riverside Drive Apt. 58. Stannard would reportedly show the boy pornographic magazines and allegedly force the victim to perform sex acts on him.

Stannard also forced the boy to perform sex acts on him in the living room and in a bedroom at his residence while other residents were asleep, police said.

Third-degree sexual abuse is a Class C felony punishable by up to 10 years in prison and a fine of no less than $1,000 and no more than $10,000.

As of Sunday evening, Stannard was being held at the Johnson County Jail on $50,000 cash bond.

President's Awards announced

June 2 marked the second time the UI President's Award for State Outreach and Public Engagement has been doled out to a professor, a staff member, a student, and a student-led group at the UI.

Don Coffman, a professor and area leader in the College of Education's music-education program, was honored for founding the New Horizons Band.

The band, which began in 1995, provides an opportunity for older Iowans to develop musical skills and participate in musical activities.

Aside from the recognition by the UI, Coffman received a volunteer award from Gov. Tom Vilsack this year.

The staff award went to Nancy Kraft, a UI preservation librarian, for her work to maintain historical collections.

Former UI Student Government President Mark Kresowik received the student award for his commitment to environmentalism and civic activism.

The final recipient was the Mobile Clinic, which was started by UI health-studies students. The Mobile Clinic provides easy access to health care for homeless people, migrant workers, and underprivileged populations across the state.

Each recipient or group received a $1,000 grant.

Weston new rights center interim head

The UI Center for Human Rights named Burns Weston as its new interim director, replacing temporary director William Reisinger, the associate provost for academic programs and dean of UI International Programs.

Weston is the Bessie Dutton Murray Distinguished Professor of Law Emeritus in the UI College of Law and is also the founding director of the center.

He is internationally known for his teaching and scholarship in the field of public international law, with an emphasis on international human-rights law.

The new director succeeds Kenneth Cmiel, who died Feb. 4 of an inoperable brain tumor.

Weston will begin the position immediately and will hold it until a permanent director is appointed.

Fallon spoke of his plan to freeze higher education tuition, his strong grass-roots campaign, and his ability to raise as much money as it takes to beat Nussle without using corporate donations.

The staunch universal health-care advocate will cap off his primary bid by making 12,000 get-out-the-vote phone calls. Fallon said he wasn't discouraged by the poll, maintaining he has the support of many independent voters who may not necessarily be represented in Sunday's survey.

Judge, Iowa's current secretary of Agriculture, spoke about alternative economic and energy reforms. "We are No. 1 in ethanol production and second in wind energy," Judge said, acknowledging the need to boost development in the wake of recent or planned plant closures, such as the planned shutdown of Newton's Maytag factory. "We need to think outside of the box instead of building washing machines."

Judge said she and Culver hoped to fix looming post-secondary education problems in Iowa, including high dropout rates among low-income students from low income families, and steadily increasing in-state tuition.

"We need to make certain all Iowa students can go and continue to go to college," she said.

they are enthusiastic about the therapy.

"A powerful factor is if the person attempting to quit is really passionate," Kimbel said. "Studies show [passion] is effective."

However, Kimbel was not aware of any research proving hypnosis an effective option for smoking cessation. Quitline

Iowa, a toll-free smoking cessation help line administered by the center, does not generally recommend hypnosis.

Scott Temple, a UI clinical professor of psychiatry, said there is no scientific evidence supporting hypnosis, but some components overlap with proven stress-reduction tactics.

"You get people coming through at seminars giving testimonials, but I would not accept those as credible evidence," Temple said. "It all goes back to randomized trials."

Reynolds said the Health Awareness Clinics does not conduct randomized controlled trials, but that is not needed, because his organization has more than 10,000 testimonials from people attending the seminars.

Although there are many doubters of hypnosis, he remains confident.

"I want to put them in the front row of my show," he said.

Biofuels gain in Iowa

BIOFUEL

The Iowa Soybean Association expects the demand increase for soy biodiesel — due in part to the renewable-fuels legislation — will result in $61 million in cash receipts for the state's soybean farmers over the next five years.

While there is little disagreement that the cleaner-burning biofuels will nurture Iowa's economy and environment, some feel Statehouse leaders stopped shy of making the renewable-fuels package as good as it could have been.

Michael Ott, the executive director of BLOWA — a consortium formed to stimulate growth in Iowa's bioeconomy — thinks while the Legislature's interest and action on biofuels in recent months has been "extraordinary," much more remains to be done.

"It's a good thing, what [legislators] did, but they had the chance to do something great," he said. "If we really want to keep Iowa as the leader in biofuels production, we really need more [state] investment in research and development."

Such investment will help defray risk and promote venture capitalism, Ott said.

Iowa has some 25 ethanol refineries capable of producing more than 1.5 billion gallons annually and six biodiesel refineries in operation or under construction with a capacity of more than 100 million gallons.

Further beefing up of the state's biofuel industry is regarded as a key component of Iowa's drive for energy independence among industry officials and lawmakers alike.

Groups such as BLOWA have kept close tabs on the renewable-fuels positions of the leading candidates vying to take Vilsack's place at Terrace Hill: Democrats Mike Blouin, Chet Culver, and Ed Fallon, and Republican Jim Nussle.

"The next governor will have a unique chance to push Iowa ahead of the pack, in terms of biofuels production," Ott said. "I hope all of the rhetoric is backed up with action, once the dust has settled, because we're ready for it."

Two vie for prosecutor

COUNTY ATTORNEY

"Working in the County Attorney's Office, I realized I could use my law degree to help victims of violent crime," she said.

Maybanks voiced similar sentiments in describing his path toward his chosen profession.

"I've always been enamored with the idea of fighting for the rights of victims and seeking the ends of justice," he said.

But while Lyness has taken on the role of a well-respected and experienced insider, emphasizing her Johnson County contacts, Maybanks has presented himself as a concerned citizen armed with a fresh vision. A graduate of Loras College and Drake Law School, the 30-year-old Cedar Rapids native emphasized implementing measures to ensure resources go toward prosecuting and incarcerating violent criminals — as opposed to punishing minor offenders, such as those using illicit drugs and drinking underage.

"I've seen far too many low-level offenders, often young people, sucked into the criminal-justice system for minor offenses," said Maybanks, who is a Linn County assistant prosecutor.

While it may be simplistic to paint this election as merely an insider versus newcomer affair, the candidates hope these characteristics will accentuate their differences — and their perceived abilities as the county's top law-enforcement official. When asked what she has to offer over her opponent, Lyness, who has garnered the support of her friends and co-workers, including outgoing County Attorney J. Patrick White, was quick to respond.

"My experience," she said. "I've been in the area 29 years. I know the people. I have a proven track record of getting different groups to work together."

In contrast, Maybanks believes his detachment from the current county attorney is a strength.

"I'm a concerned citizen, not an entrenched insider," he said.

Iowa City Police Chief Sam Hargadine, who stressed the importance of communication and cooperation between Johnson County's prosecutors and police agencies, wouldn't endorse either candidate but expressed confidence in the abilities of both.

"Both of them are definitely capable," he said.

Voters can cast their primary ballots from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesday.

STUDENT VOTING

Laura Schmitt/The Daily Iowan

UI senior Zack Morton places pamphlets for Johnson County supervisor candidate John Schnieder in the Old Capitol Town Center parking ramp on Sunday afternoon. Morton, who describes himself as the "least political person he knows," became involved in the campaign because of the proposed reconstruction of Newport Road. Morton, who lives with his grandparents, would lose nine oak trees from his front yard if the road is widened.

Student politicians stay busy during summer

Working energetically for candidates, some UI students are trying to prove that their demographic is an electoral force to be reckoned with

BY DEAN TREFTZ
THE DAILY IOWAN

It's summer, and hordes of students are sinking into lounge chairs with a beer and a copy of Sports Illustrated, pushing collegiate thoughts to the back of their minds.

Yet as candidates for local and state offices prepare for the Tuesday primaries, this demographic has emerged as a useful asset for political hopefuls.

UI senior Zack Morton, a music-education major, had never been involved with a political campaign before signing on to help challenger John Schnieder try to secure one of two available Democratic Johnson County Board of Supervisor seats. Schneider, along with Larry Meyers, is trying to upset incumbents Mike Lehman and Sally Stutsman to represent the party in the Nov. 7 general election.

Morton got involved with Schnieder's campaign after attending meetings and rallies to fight the proposed widening of Newport Road. Morton distributed fliers during the campaign, and he also attended the unveiling of a giant wooden nickel — a structure symbolizing Schneider's and Meyers' opposition to the Newport project. In addition to students like Morton, the event drew such community members as Mary Ferentz, the wife of Iowa football coach Kirk Ferentz and an active opponent of the Newport Road construction.

"We were keeping up while the nickel was being made, and [when it was finished], we all went out there," Morton said. "It's definitely a unique way of campaigning."

UI students Christian Urrutia and Marae Hart are working for opposing Democratic gubernatorial nominees in Tuesday's primary. Urrutia, a recent UI graduate with degrees in political science and international studies, has aided Chet Culver's campaign for more than six months.

Like many UI students, he is no stranger to competitive politics; he has been active on the UI campus for several years, establishing the group Students for Culver and working for John Kerry's presidential campaign in 2004. A former member of Sigma Nu fraternity, Urrutia describes the political scene at the UI as left-leaning and "very active, very good."

Hart, a junior also concentrating in political science and international studies, decided to help with Iowa House Rep. Ed Fallon's gubernatorial campaign after she worked for the like-minded Rep. Donovan Olson, D-Boone.

"I've always been interested in politics for as long as I can remember," Hart said. "Campaigning is exciting work, and I'm learning a lot."

Office seekers have traditionally found a wealth of campaign help in Iowa City, where a politically minded community mixed with an active college-age population creates a fertile environment for candidate advocacy. The 2006 primaries have proven no exception.

"There's a lot of committed young people, a lot of activism, both on the Democratic and Republican sides," said Larry Ihde, a field representative for the re-election bid of Rep. James Leach, R-Iowa.

Ihde began working for Leach, who represents Iowa's 2nd District, during his 2004 campaign. He said the campaign, known for its moderate appeal, targets the UI College Republicans when trying to garner support on the UI campus. Even during the summer, when numerous students go home, campaign organizers head toward campus.

"One of the first places we look is the UI," Ihde said.

Wal-Mart group still fighting

BY LISA BLUM
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa City Stop Wal-Mart committee head Gary Sanders is continuing his campaign to block the construction of a Wal-Mart Supercenter near the Iowa City airport, even after a judge upheld the city's right to build.

Sanders filed the notices June 2, appealing separate April 10 rulings favoring the Iowa City City Council and the Zoning Board of Adjustment.

Sanders and his group first took legal action against the Supercenter's construction in March 2005, after the City Council voted 5-2 to rezone land for a 21.7 acre store. The $3.1 million proposed project would leave the current Wal-Mart, located off Highway 1, abandoned.

The first suit filed by Sanders' lawyer, Wallace Taylor, was in response to the zoning board's approval of a drive-through pharmacy and gas station for the Wal-Mart. A second suit took aim at the City Council's rezoning of 54 acres of public land for the Supercenter.

This is not the first time the dispute over Wal-Mart construction has hit Iowa City. The first store was built in 1989, when the city still employed referendums to decide zoning. Sanders said he wishes the current project was also subject to a vote by citizens.

"I'm confident we would have won this time, because more people are aware of the negative facts about Wal-Mart than they were in 1989," he said.

He believes that because Wal-Mart has a stranglehold on the retail industry, the company sets standards for everyone else, particularly in regard to low employee wages and lack-luster benefits.

"Wal-Mart is the driving force in this race to the bottom," he said. "This is not the legacy we want to leave for future generations."

Even though 6th District Court Judge Amanda Potterfield ruled against him and his committee in the two suits, a sales agreement for starting the Supercenter cannot be completed until all legal issues are settled, which could spell further delay for construction.

The zoning board also needs another special exception to be approved June 14 for Wal-Mart to build on a flood plain.

The notices of appeal, which were filed June 2 and named Sanders and Richard Byers as plaintiffs, merely pre-empt an official appeal, which will not be filed for months to come. Sanders appeared to be hopeful about the process.

"This is nowhere near over," he said. "I am confident we're going to win on appeal."

JOHNSON COUNTY BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

Bosses of the county

The significance of the Board of Supervisors race remains unaffected by the lack of interest on the part of some constituents

BY BRYCE BAUER
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors race doesn't stir passions among all voters.

But the board's functions — which include collecting and doling out property taxes and county funds — might.

"The buck literally starts and stops with the board," said Chairman Mike Lehman, describing the currently all-Democrat institution. "We are the frontline for the county."

Lehman is among four Democrats and two Republicans hoping to fill the two soon-to-be vacant seats on the board. The first hurdle to clear is the primary election on Tuesday.

In addition to Lehman's seat, the supervisor slot held by Sally Stutsman is also up for grabs. Both are seeking reelection to their $43,500 a year positions — a figure Lehman said would probably increase to $45,000 on July 1.

Many constituents are unfamiliar with the role of the supervisors, he said, an ignorance he deemed "unfortunate." It's a problem that has been partially mitigated by televising weekly meetings, he said.

Supervisor Rod Sullivan, whose term lasts until the end of 2008, said one of the big items the supervisors have been working on is a human-rights ordinance to protect individuals not covered by the state's civil-rights code. This includes protection for gay and lesbian individuals — the lack of which Sullivan called "a glaring omission."

However, the board's work isn't all policy. The supervisors also engage in more mundane activities, such as overseeing county agencies, appointing un-elected officials, and approving their compensation.

"A lot of our work is just being the boss for those folks," said Sullivan, who summarized his job in one sentence as the "direction and managing of county government."

He also said a lot of the supervisors' work involves handling zoning and road issues brought up by constituents, as well as reading over legal documents. The board's website — <http://www.johnson-county.com/supervisors/> — outlines a dozen powers the members hold. An overview of all state and local primary candidates will appear in the Tuesday Daily Iowan.

Voters of each party are allowed to select or write in up to two individuals for the office. Candidates must garner a certain percent of the vote (35 percent for single-candidate offices and a formula-based percentage for multi-candidate offices) or else the parties will hold nominating conventions.

Nominated candidates are then listed with their party in the Nov. 7 elections, competing against any independent or third-party hopefuls who file.

20% surveyed say they injure themselves

BY LINDSEY TANNER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Nearly one in five students at two Ivy League schools say they have purposely injured themselves by cutting, burning, or other methods, a disturbing phenomenon that psychologists say they are hearing about more often.

For some young people, self-abuse is an extreme coping mechanism that seems to help relieve stress; for others, it's a way to make deep emotional wounds more visible.

The results of the survey at Cornell and Princeton are similar to other estimates on this frightening behavior. Counselors say it is happening at colleges, high schools, and middle schools across the country.

Separate research found more than 400 websites devoted to subject, including many that glorify self-injury. Some worry that many sites serve as an online subculture that fuels the behavior — although whether there has been an increase in the practice or just awareness is unclear.

Sarah Rodey, 20, a University of Illinois student who began cutting herself at age 16, said some online sites help socially isolated kids feel like they belong. One of her favorites includes graphic photographs that the site warns might be "triggering."

"I saw myself in some of those pictures, in the poems," she said. "And because I saw myself there, I wanted to connect to it better" by injuring herself.

The websites, recent books, and media coverage are pulling back the curtain on the secretive practice and helping researchers better understand why some as young as grade-schoolers self-abuse.

"You're trying to get people to know that you're hurting, and at the same time, it pushes

M. Spencer Green/Associated Press

them away," because the behavior is so distressing, said Rodey, who has been diagnosed with bipolar disorder.

The latest prevalence estimate comes from an analysis of responses from 2,875 randomly selected male and female undergraduate and graduate students at Cornell and Princeton who completed an Internet-based mental-health survey.

Seventeen percent said they had purposely injured themselves; among those, 70 percent had done so numerous times. The estimate is comparable with previous reports on U.S. adolescents and young adults but slightly higher than studies of high-school students in Australia and the United Kingdom.

The study appears in this month's issue of Pediatrics, released today. Cornell psychologist Janis Whitlock, the study's main author, also led the website research, published in April in Developmental Psychology.

Among the Ivy League students who harmed themselves, about half said they'd experienced sexual, emotional, or physical abuse that researchers think can trigger self-abuse. Repeat self-abusers were more likely than non-injurers to be female and to have had eating disorders or suicidal tendencies, although self-injuring is usually not considered a suicide attempt.

Lyness for prosecutor

Johnson County voters on Tuesday will choose the Democratic nominee for county attorney. Given that Republicans have not found a candidate and the overwhelmingly liberal makeup of Johnson County, it is likely the primary winner will be the next Johnson County prosecutor. Two capable candidates are vying for the position: Janet Lyness and Nick Maybanks. The respective platforms of Lyness and Maybanks are so similar to be nearly irrelevant in Tuesday's vote. The race's decision seems destined to rest upon personal qualifications. After meeting with both candidates, The Daily Iowan's Editorial Board has chosen to back Lyness for the position.

Lyness and Maybanks agree on many relevant issues: Both stress treatment and rehabilitation programs, as opposed to incarceration for minor drug offenses. Alternatives include a variety of diversion programs in addition to examining cite-and-release policies for small amounts of marijuana and potentially creating a drug court and detox center. Both seek to tackle Iowa City's sexual culture by engaging communitywide efforts. Their positions on drinking-assault cases are similar, but Maybanks would advise victims to testify, while Lyness would defer to the wishes of the victims.

However, stark differences remain between the candidates. Foremost among them are Lyness' nearly impeccable qualifications. She has resided in Johnson County for 28 years, at least equal to Maybanks' age, and she spent the last 16 years working in the Johnson County County Attorney's Office. Her long-term commitment to the county gives her numerous connections. Maybanks, meanwhile, has worked for the past six years as a Linn County assistant county attorney. Lyness has handled virtually all types of cases, whereas Maybanks has primarily dealt with misdemeanors: He has prosecuted only two felony cases in his work for the Linn County County Attorney's Office.

Lyness has presented herself as the more mature candidate and has rejected politicization of the race. The same cannot be said of Maybanks. Sadly, he has used the Kyle Marin Linn County homicide case as campaign rhetoric. Marin is charged with killing Katrina Hill and Molly Edmondson on April 23. Maybanks has argued that Marin's guilty plea in a 2004 Coralville willful-injury case should have resulted in jail time: Marin faced up to five years in prison. But given Marin's history and age, his punishment was more than sufficient. Marin received a suspended prison sentence, four years of probation, and he was ordered to stay at a halfway house. Maybanks argues he is not placing blame on the Johnson County County Attorney's Office, but this rhetoric certainly implies that the office is complicit.

Lyness has focused much of his campaign on his outsider status, and he is looking to shake up the system. If he possessed wildly different ideas from those of Lyness, this argument would appear more genuine. But he doesn't. Stressing outsider status in a county-attorney race is absurd: More community-integrated candidates will always be better equipped to fill the position.

Janet Lyness is clearly the more qualified candidate. Therefore, we endorse her for the position of Johnson County county attorney.

Price of debt

As of May 26, the national debt of the United States was listed at $8,348,362,162,627.35.

That's 8 trillion, 348 billion, 362 million, 162,000, 627 dollars and 35 cents.

You might have trouble fathoming that sort of money, so let's put it in perspective. A 30-pack of Old Style is about $15. My calculator tells me our national debt could buy you 5.56 x 10<sup>11</sup> 30 packs of Old Style.

If this is the first time you've seen an amount of beer expressed using scientific notation, join the club. That's around 550 billion 30 packs of the beer some refer to as "dog style."

If you'd prefer to think of that money in other ways, it could also purchase 33,000 Boeing 777 airplanes, 2,000 Nimitz Class aircraft carriers, or ... OK, OK, you get it — it's a lot of money, but nothing you didn't already know though, right?

So why bring up the national debt now, you ask? Not too long ago, Congress "upped" the debt ceiling from $8.17 trillion to $8.97 trillion. If the debt were to actually hit the debt ceiling, different government branches would start closing down until more revenue was taken in by taxes. It would be fair to say the entire infrastructure of the United States is dependent upon the growing national debt.

The governmental agency in charge of the national debt is the Bureau of the Public Debt, an aptly named division of the U.S. Department of Treasury. The good folks of the bureau keep track of all sorts of information regarding the public debt, including neat-to-know things such as the average periodic interest rate for the debt (4.926 percent for April) and the interest payment made for each month (around $19 billion for that month).

Though on a much larger scale, the national debt is just like the debt of any other public or private entity: There are millions of creditors, all of whom have lent money at different times and interest rates.

Many of you are probably creditors of the United States of America. If you are the holder of U.S. savings bonds, you are considered a creditor because your money has gone to the Department of the Treasury with the promise of being paid back at a later date.

Other creditors of the United States are large banks, investing houses, and central banks of other countries. A large share of the U.S. public debt is traded on a daily basis in international markets in the form of T-Bills (which are basically short-term, low-risk holdings of U.S. currency), considered to be a nearly risk-free investment.

The U.S. is considered the 35th-most indebted nation in the world. Debts can be compared by the ratio between a country's national debt and its Gross Domestic Product. This ratio for the U.S. is around 2/3. This is fairly high when compared with a country such as China, whose debt-to-GDP ratio is something like 1/45.

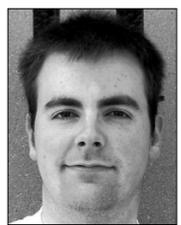

The highest our national debt has ever been comparative to our GDP was during World War II, when the government accumulated a debt equal to 120 percent of the GDP.

After that, the debt fell steadily for a period of 35 years, until the 1980s, when it started increasing again during the heavy military spending of the Reagan era. With a few exceptions, it has been climbing ever since.

So, what does this mean for you? Because this is a country and not a private corporation, a large debt has dramatic effects on the currency issued by that country, and in the past few years, the dollar has taken a fairly large hit against many foreign currencies. When the dollar is weak, trade imbalances are exacerbated, because more U.S. dollars are being shelled out for the same amount of foreign goods — and vice versa.

There are many economists who theorize all the possible ramifications of large and small national debts, and there is no single perfect solution. However, traditional logic would impart to us that an ever-increasing debt could not have many positive ramifications on our current status as an economic and military super-power. ■

Maybanks offers change

Until Nick Maybanks raised the real issues, Janet Lyness was running on her experience working for Pat White and her résumé credentials. Maybanks' website has clearly stated his positions from the outset — his opponent's doesn't. At an early fundraiser she said she'd do things much like White. As a longtime employee, she was in an ideal position to challenge White to make changes long ago — but did not. What does that say about genuine convictions and leadership?

Many Johnson County citizens at some time have been "guilty" of underage drinking, speeding, public intoxication, or marijuana possession. If in college, or their juvenile years, did they all bad kids? No. We need a more forgiving system for victimless crimes, and jail space should be saved for dangerous people.

Maybanks has the courage, intelligence, and willingness to work hard that achieving change requires. His experience and organizational abilities are well demonstrated by his career to date and the quality of his campaign. I believe Nick Maybanks is the best choice for county attorney.

The politics of agriculture

In campaigning for the Republican nomination for Iowa secretary of Agriculture, I have come face to face with the perception that much of the press and public believe the position of representing this state's dominant industry is not important. The misconception that this critical elected office is somehow trivial to Iowans' lives and livelihoods is beyond disheartening.

No other office is more important to our state, save the position of Iowa's governor, than the secretary of Agriculture. Iowa's secretary of Agriculture is responsible for keeping Iowa's environment safe and conserving our precious resources, and he or she should be Iowa's chief economic-development agent.

As an elected official, Iowa's secretary of Agriculture can influence legislation on the state and federal level, advocate for and against administrative rules, and lobby bills that affect rural Iowa.

I hope my candidacy and, with the voters' approval, my service as secretary of Agriculture will reshape Iowa's perception of what we should expect from this very important office.

Mark Leonard
Republican candidate for secretary of Agriculture

Lyness' abundant experience

Real experience counts. That's why we are supporting Janet Lyness for Johnson County county attorney, and we urge our fellow Johnson County residents to do the same.

Janet is an experienced attorney, dedicated public servant, and an active member of the Johnson County community. Her 15 years of legal experience include being the lead attorney in innumerable serious felony cases, including murder. Janet also has extensive civil experience in dealing with the issues facing the county.

Janet has been a tireless advocate for victims and has earned the trust of law enforcement, community leaders, department heads, county employees, and defense attorneys.

Janet will take the lead in finding creative solutions to jail overcrowding and implementing new diversion programs, while keeping the office focused on making sure victims of violent crime are protected. Janet is the only candidate with the experience to make real change.

Sen. Joe Bolkcom, Sen. Bob Dvorsky, Rep. Mary Mascher, and Rep. Vicki Lensing

Meyers brings courage, direction

Larry Meyers gets my vote for county supervisor. He has brains, courage, and a heart, and he will bring these qualities to a board that needs much more of them.

The supervisors have made many failed decisions out of sheer incompetence. They often are in way over their heads but trust no one (sometimes ignoring their own paid consultants) to rescue them. I have seen Larry Meyers size up situations, seek out the best information, ask the right questions, find the right people to answer them, craft a solution, and make a plan to carry it out. He does it daily in his work as a remodeling contractor.

Larry has a heart for those in need. He will ensure that the county will spend all state-allocated money for the mentally ill and developmentally disabled. Larry has the right priorities — he will not spend millions of dollars on road consultants and right-of-way acquisition and then not increase funding to human-service agencies, such as the Shelter House or Crisis Center.

Johnson County yearns to do better. Join me in voting for Larry Meyers and for competence, courage, and compassion in an elected official.

Qualifications make Lyness clear choice

we have an individual to nominate the candidate who would be the best governor for our beloved state — Mike Blouin.

Mike Blouin has a rich breadth of experience in both the public and private sectors. He has a depth of understanding gained from decades of working directly with Iowa's citizens and problems. Mike Blouin favors civil unions, and expanding stem-cell research, and he personally opposes abortion but will veto any change for or against abortion in the current Iowa law. Mike Blouin knows the importance of higher education to our state. He will strengthen funding to the UI and other public universities. Please join me in voting for Mike Blouin.

Jazz Fest looks for help

After this past weekend's Iowa Arts Festival, many in the Iowa City community are now looking to the next big event this summer: the Iowa City Jazz Festival. But the event needs volunteers.

But you might already know that, if you've seen the handful of fliers lining the windows of downtown businesses. The event's organizers have been looking for anyone with enough time and volition to help them put together the 16th-annual festival.

Volunteer coordinator Susan Rogusky says the Jazz Fest isn't facing a John Coltrane-like demise, but event coordinators still need lots of able hands before they can say the show is ready.

"The bottom line is Iowa City is great because of all these festivals. But people need to actually make them happen," she said. "We need lots of setup and teardown, which means brawn."

This muscle work mainly involves dealing with electrical equipment, as well as working with vendors and tents. Volunteers involved with tear-down will be needed about 11 p.m. on July 2 — the last night of the festival — to get everything cleared out.

"Hopefully, we can get it all done by sunrise the next day," Rogusky said.

The volunteer coordinator said the event organizers have always done all the physical labor themselves, but this year, she wants to streamline the event with volunteers. To do so, she has created a new position: someone to work with the hospitality director as an "intermediary" between the city and the performers.

"It's just someone to 'play mom' with the bands and make sure they get familiar with Iowa City ... and get the bands where they need to be," she said.

This volunteer will also get a free room at the Sheraton Hotel, 210 S. Dubuque St., and transportation to and from the airport to accompany the bands.

No experience is required for most of the event's volunteer positions, but Rogusky said she would prefer someone with artist-liaison or similar intermediary position.

The fest also needs "crowd walkers." These people will go through the crowd, asking audience members whether they're enjoying themselves. They will also carry a bucket for donations.

Other volunteers required for the event are T-shirt booth workers, drivers (with vehicles donated by Toyota), backstage security, and side-stage coordinators.

The Iowa City Jazz Festival is part of this year's Summer of the Arts series, which also includes the Iowa Arts Festival, the Friday Night Concert Series, and the Saturday Night Free Movie Series. The Jazz Festival is the only of these events that hasn't yet begun. It will run from June 30 through July 2.

To volunteer for the Jazz Festival, contact Rogusky at volunteer@iowacity.org. The main thing she asks of those who pledge their time: show up.

Breaking up hard to do

THE DAILY IOWAN

Some critics say that if a movie accomplishes its own goals, it is a success. And, within this dubious school of thought, few could argue that The Break-Up doesn't suck.

But how? This is a very difficult question.

The Break-Up has been incessantly promoted as an "anti-romantic comedy." Apparently, America has seen one too many movies with the boy-meets-girl-boy-falls-in-love-and-is-presented-with-humorous-obstacles-to-overcome-in-order-to-prove-said-love formula, so Hollywood has finally decided to invert this cliché.

The film focuses on a 2-year-old relationship that is falling apart and the subsequent battle for the rights to a jointly owned condo.

Gary Grobowski (Vince Vaughn) is the pre-eminent Chicago tour guide, whose distinguishing feature is apparently his Polish heritage. He shares a condo with his girlfriend, Brooke Meyers (Jennifer Aniston), who really has no distinguishing characteristics whatsoever. And for very stereotypical reasons (he plays video games, she nags), they are on the verge of a breakup (hence the title).

Like almost every movie it tries to subvert, the films' writers (Jeremy Garelick and Jay Lavelander) provide Gary and Brooke with a group of friends who diagnose their faults and dispense advice on how they should stay together. The strong supporting cast — specifically Gary's gang (Jon Favreau and Jason Bateman) — and a live performance from alt-country phenom the Old 97's are, at times, the only things that keep this film afloat.

Normally, neither Vaughn nor Aniston is capable of pulling off lead roles. Here, the former returns as the same smarmy character he's been playing since his persona-establishing role as Trent Walker in Swingers. And the latter, well, let's just say she doesn't have enough personality here to get her through an episode of "Friends."

However, the lead characters' shortcomings actually work in this movie's favor; if anyone in the audience cared about either one of them, it would make the film's inevitable conclusion much harder to pull off.

But this serendipitous failure poses yet another problem: Do we really want to see a Hollywood film in which we don't care about the lead characters? If we are going to remain planted in sticky theater seats for 105 minutes, we need some sort of emotional investment in the people onscreen.

As in any romantic comedy, or most action films, you already now how it's going to end before it starts. What really matters is how the movie arrives there and whether the audience gives a damn about the characters who survive. That's why so many romantic comedies are so endearing (John Cusack has made a career out of people's love for Lloyd Dobler), because audiences are presented with characters whom they care about. The Break-Up falters mainly because it doesn't give that to them.

Based on what the filmmakers set out to do — to make an "anti-romantic comedy" — this film is a complete success: It is almost completely devoid of romance. However, is the anti-rom-com really something we need?

If The Break-Up is the finest hour of this "emerging genre," then I'll be the first one out on the front lawn, boom box held aloft, just hoping for the romantic comedy to come back.

horoscopes

Monday, June 5, 2006
— by Eugenia Last

- ARIES (March 21-April 19): The busier you keep yourself, the better. Money may be an issue if you owe or someone owes you. A job or hobby that you haven't been able to finish in the past should be first on your to-do list.
- TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may have plenty of things to do but you will also have to be careful not to make decisions that will affect your personal life adversely. This is not a good time to deal with contractors or to make changes to your residence.
- GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may confuse someone who has an interest in you if you keep changing your mind. Try to stick to what you say you are going to do so your motives aren't questioned. Your ideas are good, and professional change looks positive.
- CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can talk your way in and out of anything today. There is a good possibility you can make positive financial changes because of advancement. Don't wait for things to come to you. If you want something, go after it.
- LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Love, romance, and passion will take you in several different directions today. Once you know where you stand, you can determine your personal direction. Do whatever it takes to get what you want.
- VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Offer your help, but don't let anyone take advantage of you. An emotional problem may crop up if you're torn between what you feel you should be doing and what your responsibilities actually are. Stay organized.
- LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't feel too sorry for negative people telling you sob stories. They will only stand in the way of your own success. Take a unique approach to something you do to earn your living. It will spin into an opportunity to make more money.
- SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't let anyone persuade you to spend or donate to something that you know little about. Instead, invest in yourself or something you truly believe in. Your dedication to what you want to pursue will sway any oppositions.
- SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may feel a little more serious or eager to commit to something or someone today, especially if your emotions are involved. Before jumping in with both feet, consider all your options. It may be wise to hold off.
- CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't let your emotions lead you down the wrong path. You may find it difficult to differentiate between love and friendship. Purchasing a luxury item will not alleviate the stress you are feeling.
- AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do what you can to make your place more comfortable without overspending. You aren't likely to understand what someone is trying to tell you. At the first sign of confusion, ask questions.
- PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The dynamics of a partnership will change if you question your role. Money can be made if you sign a contract or make a proposal today. A change in your personal life will give you something to think about.

Cards avoid sweep

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals had plenty of offense in their first game without Albert Pujols, getting a successful return from Jim Edmonds in a 9-6 victory over the Chicago Cubs on Sunday. Pujols, who is batting .308 with 25 homers and 65 RBI, was put on the 15-day disabled list before the game with a pulled muscle on his right side. Edmonds, limited to one pinch-hit at-bat in the last seven games by an abdominal injury, was 3-for-3 with an RBI double in the fifth and a run-scoring single in the sixth; he also walked and scored in the first after entering the game in a 3-for-29 slump. The eight-time Gold Glove center fielder played first base for only the 45th time in his career to minimize the risk of further injury from running but seemed fine, if under control, on the basepaths.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

Alford lands another

Steve Alford added another highly regarded player to the Iowa basketball team in center Beas Hamga, who orally committed June 3 to play basketball for Iowa. The 7-0, 220-pound center is part of Iowa's 2008 recruiting class. Hamga chose the Hawkeyes over a list of schools that included Indiana, Florida, Syracuse, Texas Tech, Louisville, Miami, and Wake Forest, among others. He was in Iowa City this past weekend to participate in the Iowa Elite Camp, where a number of talented players and some future Hawkeyes, such as 2007 prospect Tyler Smith, were on hand. Hamga has only played basketball for five years and has only been in the United States for 1 and 1/2 years after moving here from Cameroon. He attends Cornerstone Christian School in San Antonio, Texas.

Hamga recruit

Hamga is the second commitment for the class of 2008, joining Iowa City native and City High standout Matt Gatens.

Jones leaves hoopsters for N. Dakota

The opportunity to become a head coach was enough to lure Brian Jones away from Iowa City. The University of North Dakota announced May 19 that Jones will become the head coach of its men's basketball team. Jones, 35, had been on the Hawkeye staff since 1999. He was an administrative assistant for two years prior to serving as an assistant coach for the last five years. Jones oversaw video and scouting reports that helped the Hawkeyes to a 98-64 record during his five years as an assistant. Jones left Iowa for the head-coach position at North Dakota fewer than six weeks after being appointed director of basketball operations by Steve Alford.

Jones associate director

"I'm thrilled about this opportunity," said Jones in a North Dakota press release. "I've trained under the best in Coach Alford, and he has prepared me to lead a program with great tradition in academics and athletics."

No break for some Hawkeyes

A lot has happened since The Daily Iowan last published on May 12. Iowa coaches joined staffs and resigned, players committed while others announced plans to transfer, and entire sports wrapped up their seasons. Here's a rundown of what made the biggest headlines the past three weeks.

Men's track climbs to fourth

The Iowa men's track and field team broke through with a fourth-place finish at the Big Ten outdoor championships on May 12-14. It was the Hawkeyes' highest finish at the meet since they placed second in 1999. Iowa crowned two champions at the Big Tens. Hawkeyes cleared in cell-phone probe

A university investigation cleared four football players of receiving heavy discounts from a Coralville cell-phone provider in exchange for tickets to the 2006 Outback Bowl. Ticket lists showed former Hawkeyes Antwan Allen, Jovon Johnson, and Marques Simmons and senior-to-be Marcus Paschal were involved with providing complimentary passes to Jeremy Reed, the former manager for iPCS Wireless.

Iowa football coach Kirk Ferentz's contract has been restructured, Athletics Director Bob Bowlsby announced on June 2. The new additions to Ferentz's contract, which runs through 2012, includes an immediate, one-time payment of $1.4 million and quarterly payments of $350,000 on March 30, June 30, Sept. 30, and Oct. 30. Also, guaranteed payments are given to Ferentz if his contract is terminated without appropriate cause.

Carney calls it quits

After four short yet successful seasons, Iowa women's head golf coach Bobbe Carney announced her retirement on May 16. She led the Hawkeyes to a sixth-place finish in the Big Ten 2005 championships, while also helping Iowa to four top-five tournament finishes. Iowa also won the Hawkeye Intercollegiate in 2004 and 2005. She helped produce numerous milestones last year, when the team posted a record best 77.1 scoring average and sophomore Tyrette Metzendorf finished with a 75.8 average — good enough for second all-time in Hawkeye history.

However, looking to have some free time in her schedule, Carney decided to call it quits as coach, even with the program seemingly on the rise. Before landing at Iowa, she earned LPGA Midwest Section Coach of the Year honors in 1989.

Iowa offensive lineman Lee Gray will not receive a sixth year of eligibility from the NCAA, head coach Kirk Ferentz said on June 2. The 6-6, 320-pound native of Dallas missed his senior season in 2005 because of a knee injury. "It's unfortunate for Lee," Ferentz said in a statement. "We thought we had a very realistic chance on the appeal, but the NCAA ruled against it."

Women finish eighth

The women's track and field team is facing its final event of the strenuous six-month season. After a flurry of high-quality competition, including the Big Ten outdoor championships and the NCAA Midwest Regional, the NCAA outdoor championships are set for this weekend, June 7-10, in Sacramento, Calif. Competing for the Hawkeyes will be the same trio that advanced to the NCAA indoor championships in March — Kineke Alexander, Meghan Armstrong, and Peaches Roach. ## Ex-Hawk might face time in jail

BY DAN PARR THE DAILY IOWAN

Former Iowa cornerback Antwan Allen could spend up to 30 days in jail and be fined $500 after being found guilty of assault charges for the second time in a year. A magistrate convicted him of domestic assault on May 31, just hours after Allen attended a bench trial on the charge at the court.

The sentencing will take place on June 16. When contacted June 1 at 2:30 p.m., almost 24 hours after the magistrate issued the ruling, Allen said he was unaware of the decision. "I didn't know this," Allen said. "That's crazy." Allen, 23, said he was at the home of the victim of the assault while he spoke with The Daily Iowan.

Baseball team cleared of hazing

BY TYSON WIRTH THE DAILY IOWAN

Busing to Michigan before the start of a May 19 weekend series against the Wolverines, the Iowa baseball team pulled to the side of the road. Not because the gas gauge read "E" or a Burger King sign came into view. The team stopped because coach Jack Dahm had just learned of an online photo depicting Hawkeye baseball players in a possible hazing situation. The picture, which appeared on the student directory Facebook and allegedly contained several team members naked except for hats over their privates, prompted a university investigation that officials announced the results of June 2.

Losses dump softball

BY BRENDAN STILES
THE DAILY IOWAN

Although the 2006 season could be considered a success for the Iowa softball team, the way it all ended wasn't what the Hawkeyes had in mind.

After losing an eight-inning, 5-4 heartbreaker in the Big Ten Tournament to Indiana on May 12, the Hawkeyes received a big surprise from the NCAA: They were among the 16 teams chosen to host a regional site in this year's NCAA Tournament.

But despite earning home-field advantage in its NCAA regional for the first time since 2002, Iowa had an early exit after losing a 10-inning game May 19 to Nebraska, 1-0, and then being eliminated for good the next day by an Illinois State team the Hawkeyes had beaten twice in the regular season.

While Iowa coach Gayle Blevins is disappointed about losing, she's not disappointed with how her team played in front of the Pearl Field crowd on both days.

"The game we lost to Nebraska was a great game," she said. "We played two errorless ball games, so I wouldn't think we were in any downward spiral. "It was exciting

'It would've been great, but only one team gets to come out of every site. Next year, we want to have the pleasure of being one of the eight that gets to go to the World Series.'

— Gayle Blevins, coach and great to be home, and I know the kids wanted to win for their fans."

Iowa freshman Brittany Weil said playing at home really excited her and her teammates, but losing 1-0 to Nebraska may have set the team back too far going into the elimination game against Illinois State.

"It was disappointing," she said in a recent interview. "It took a lot out of us, both physically and mentally. You hate to lose a game like that."

Lack of offense and timely hitting may have proved to be the Hawkeyes' downfall in the NCAA Tournament, especially with both defeats coming by one run.

"We couldn't get enough hits and push in that one run," Iowa sophomore Emily Nichols said. "After we come back, we're a tough team to beat."

Weil, who pitched every inning for the Hawkeyes in both games and held both Nebraska and Illinois State to a combined total of four runs, was surprised the offense wasn't able to come through in either game.

"Our team, all year, has been getting us some runs," she said. "We had our chances. We just didn't come through."

After having time to look back on the year, the players and coaches know they accomplished much but also that they could have done more.

"We played real well at the end of the year," Nichols said. "People were on their 'A' game, but so were we. It was just a couple of calls here and there that didn't go our way."

With the Women's College World Series taking place, the Hawkeyes hope to build off of this season and make it back to Oklahoma City for the first time since 2001, once next spring rolls around.

"It would've been great, but only one team gets to come out of every site," Blevins said. "Next year, we want to have the pleasure of being one of the eight that gets to go to the World Series."

Pujols out indefinitely, Duncan in ST. LOUIS (AP) — This is a much larger challenge for the St. Louis Cardinals: Albert Pujols will be out indefinitely with a strained muscle on his right side.

Rookie Chris Duncan was recalled from Triple-A Memphis in time for Sunday's game against the Chicago Cubs. Duncan, beginning his second stint with the team this season, was batting .272 in 42 games with six homers and 25 RBIs.

Duncan, the son of pitching coach Dave Duncan, appeared in four games earlier in the season and was 2-for-6 with a homer and three RBIs overall. Duncan had a pinch infield hit in the sixth on Sunday.

Pujols, last year's NL MVP and this season's major-league leader in home runs and RBIs, was placed on the 15-day disabled list Sunday.

"Life would be easier with Albert," closer Jason Isringhausen said. "But we've played without our star players before. We'll have to weather the storm."

Last year, the Cardinals soldiered through two Scott Rolen shoulder operations, Reggie Sanders' broken leg and Yadier Molina's broken hand, injuries that did not prevent them from their second-straight 100-win season.

An MRI exam scheduled for today will give the team a better picture how long Pujols, batting .308 with 25 homers and 65 RBIs, will be sidelined. Dr. George Paletta, the team's orthopedic consultant, said on June 3 that he could be out as long as six weeks.

Baseball falls in season finale

BY MATT BECKER
THE DAILY IOWAN

Pitcher Austin Seward walked off the mound for the last time as a Hawkeye after the bottom of the sixth with his team trailing 4-1 against Michigan on May 20. Half an inning later, as the sun gave way to the night sky, so too, did it set on the Hawkeyes' season. Seward said there were no tears, and although coach Jack Dahm addressed the team, he couldn't remember what was said, because the Hawkeyes' chances at postseason play were crushed.

"I remember not being able to say anything to my parents," Seward said. "Every one [on the team] was just real quiet."

After splitting a four-game series with Purdue and losing a nonconference game to Northern Iowa, Iowa entered the final series of the season seventh in the Big Ten (12-16). Sixth-place Purdue was 13-15, and the Hawkeyes still had a chance to be among the top six teams — the only ones to be invited to the conference tournament.

Despite outstanding pitching performances by their senior starters in the first three games, Iowa scored only a total of three runs in four games, and it was swept by the soon-to-be Big Ten champion Wolverines during the weekend of May 19-21.

"We just didn't come up with the timely hit," Dahm said in a recent interview. "In a lot of ways, I felt like we outplayed the Wolverines, but they found a way to win the games, and we didn't."

With the Big Ten Tournament no longer a possibility, Iowa finished the season 20-32 overall, with a 12-20 conference record.

Hawkeye Travis Sweet rounds first base against Ohio State on April 1. The Hawkeyes split a double-header that day, winning 7-1 and losing 6-4.

last year, the Hawkeyes were looking to become a fixture atop the Big Ten standings. But faced with the loss of Casey O'Rourke, their expected No. 2 starter, to testicular cancer, the aftermath of the April 13 twister, and an inconsistent offense, Iowa finished at the bottom of the Big Ten with a .257 team batting average.

"I'm not going to use Casey or the tornadoes as an excuse for this year's team," Dahm said. "We had a lot of obstacles that came up, and we just weren't able to overcome them."

After starting the season with wins in five of its first six games, Iowa proceeded to lose its next four. That streak, coupled with a 1-3 start to the conference slate, never allowed the players to build their confidence, Dahm said. "I don't think we made the progress that we needed to, and the only one I'm going to blame for that is myself... I was disappointed that I wasn't able to get more out of the team," Dahm said.

Center fielder Nate Price, who will depart as this season's team leader in hits (59) and runs (41), disagreed.

"I don't think you can put anything on the coaches," he said. "Say what you want. We were young, but we should have made the Big Ten tourney. We just didn't get it done as a team."

That's not to say that some sunshine didn't peak through the clouds. Tim Gudex was named to the All-Big Ten first team with a 1.96 ERA and six saves during conference play, and Seward made the second team with a 2.05 ERA in eight starts, including complete games in three of his last four outings. In addition, 10 players were named to the academic all-conference team.

Players said despite a losing record, the team battled the entire year.

"I was proud that we stuck through things as a team, and even though we struggled at times, we gave it our best shot," Seward said.

Still, he'd prefer to be representing the Big Ten at the Atlanta Regional right now. "I'd sit on the bench the whole season to win the Big Ten tourney," Gudex said. "I'd love to have that ring."

Gray started 11 games during his junior campaign in 2004. He has finished his academic work at Iowa. "We'll sit down and map out a plan that best suits Lee and his future," Ferentz added.

Also, the coach announced that redshirt freshmen Calvin Bailey and Corey Robertson have left the team and will attend junior college this fall.

Both are running backs. The 6-0, 240-pound Bailey is from Tampa, Fla., while the 6-1, 222-pound Robertson hails from Denison, Texas.

Robertson was arrested for drunk driving in April and then was cited for public intoxication on June 2 by Iowa City police.

"We wish both players the best, and we will follow their progress in the future," Ferentz said.

The university is allowed to issue up to six complimentary bowl passes to each member of the football team.

"At a minimum, I have asked the department to remind student-athletes and coaches of their responsibilities regarding the use of complimentary tickets," said then-President David Skorton in a statement.

INVESTIGATION

"Our investigation found that there was not hazing, that it was not mandatory participation in any way," said Athletics Director Bob Bowlsby. "I attribute it to college kids doing something that was not too bright. The president has accepted their reports and conclusions."

Bowlsby didn't expect any penalties to be assessed against the baseball team. The inquiry turned up positive news on the hazing front, but Dahm said he still regretted that the situation occurred in the first place.

"Sometimes, when there's smoke, there's fire," he said. "So I'm glad the university looked into this right away and was thorough. Our guys made a bad decision, but they didn't haze."

Facebook, from which the picture in question has been removed, is the No. 1 photo site on the web; it sees more than 1.5 million photos uploaded daily, according to the site (www.facebook.com).

Iowa conducted a seminar just two weeks prior to the incident, which sought to instruct athletes and coaches on the dangers of such a public forum.

"It's amazing how much info they can put up about themselves," Dahm said. "They must be careful. It's a learning experience; again, they're representatives of the University of Iowa, of the athletics department."

Yet in a town whose number of bars is only exceeded by its number of computer-literate college kids, unfortunate pictures and posts still find their way onto the Internet.

"They put cell-phone numbers, all sorts of crazy info, and it's something that doesn't go away," Bowlsby said. "The thing is, if they want to someday run for Congress or something, you can bet there might be some crazy Facebook photo that will show up and embarrass them."

Hokies block wrestling transfers

A Virginia Tech appeals committee stymied the hopes of new Iowa wrestling coach Tom Brands to be reunited with five of his ex-wrestlers with the Hokies when it upheld the athletics department's decision in mid-May to deny the wrestlers' transfer efforts.

The five wrestlers — Jay Borschel, T.H. Leet, Dan LeClere, Brent Metcalf, and Joey Slaton — requested a release from their scholarships when Brands became the new leader of the Hawkeye wrestling team.

Brands cannot talk about the wrestlers, though he expressed his concern about the situation through an affidavit released on May 10, stating that Virginia Tech Associate Athletics Director Jon Jaudon had assured him Virginia Tech would in no way hinder an athlete's desire to transfer.

"Before signing my contract with Virginia Tech, Jon Jaudon specifically told me there was an open-release policy at Virginia Tech," Brands stated in the affidavit. Brands quoted Jaudon as saying, "People who don't want to be here don't do us any good, and we will not keep them."

The Virginia Tech athletics department refused comment, citing an April press release stating the wrestlers would be allowed to transfer in 2007 if they still desired to.

Tackle orally commits to Hawkeyes

The Hawkeye football team picked up a commitment on May 20, when Woodstock, Ill., offensive lineman Bryan Bulaga orally committed to play for coach Kirk Ferentz.

Bulaga, who attends Marion Central Catholic, picked the Hawkeyes over offers from 14 schools, including Michigan, Nebraska, Wisconsin, and Purdue. He is projected to suit up at tackle for Iowa.

"He's one of those guys that's a really high-end athlete for his size," Rivals' recruiting analyst Tom Kakert said. "That is what you are looking for in a tackle and the way Iowa builds players. He could put on the weight and get up to 290 or 300 pounds fairly quickly and still maintain his quickness."

Kakert believes that offensive line is one of the positions Iowa will specifically target this year, looking to add up to as many as four players.

Bulaga is the fifth commitment to the class of 2007, joining Iowans Colin Sandeman, Cody Hundertmark, Tyler Nielsen, and last year's grayshirt commitment, Julian Vandervelde.

Field hockey gets new assistant

As the Iowa field hockey team gears up for next season, there will be a familiar face on the sidelines. Hawkeye Hall of Famer Kristy Gleason was hired as an assistant coach on May 18.

Gleason will join head coach Tracey Griesbaum as well as assistant and Iowa alum Lisa Cellucci on the staff. Griesbaum was an assistant at Iowa when Gleason was a player and also joined her as a teammate on the national team.

"They take a lot of pride in their work, and I think we will gel really well as coaches," Gleason said. "I think that's a very important aspect to having a successful program."

Gleason, a four-time first-team all-American at Iowa, led Iowa to a second-place finish in the NCAA Tournament in 1992 and was voted the nation's top collegiate player in 1993. She has competed internationally, winning a bronze medal in the 1990 Pan America Games, as well as being a member of the U.S. World Cup team in 1998.

Racette makes 2nd round in NCAAs

Even though the Iowa women's tennis team was eliminated on May 12 by Florida International in the first round of this year's NCAA Tournament, one Hawkeye did get to taste postseason success.

In her final season on the team, Meg Racette qualified for the NCAA Tournament in singles play. She was the first Hawkeye to accomplish this since current assistant coach Toni Neykova did it in 2002.

Racette made it to the second round by beating UCLA's Alex McGoodwin in three sets in what was the final match played on Stanford's campus on May 24.

"It was tough once the lights came on, but it wasn't bad," Racette said. "I was really excited to win the first match."

She lost the next day to Duke's Daniela Bercek in two sets and finished her 2006 season with a singles record of 28-9, which is among the best single-season records in school history.

"I'm going to miss the girls and the coaching staff, as well as the competition," she said.

Cubs sign, then drop Gudex

On May 23, ex-Iowa closer Tim Gudex signed a professional contract with the Chicago Cubs. But before he could say "deep dish," the North Siders deep-sixed him out of Chicago when the pitcher failed the team's physical.

"Honestly, I still don't know what's wrong with it," said Gudex, who also earned All-Big Ten honors on the day he signed. "They did tell me the Chicago Cubs are one of the most conservative teams with injuries."

Though he's been healthy his whole career and feels no pain when he pitches, the Cubs severed ties with Gudex. The Appleton, Wis., native said he's always been aware of limited mobility in his left arm, which alerted Chicago to his problem, but it doesn't affect him.

He hopes to be selected in the Major League Baseball draft, which will begin Tuesday and conclude on Wednesday.

Allen may face jail

Ben Roberts/The Daily Iowan

Hawkeye Antwan Allen nearly intercepts a pass intended for Purdue's Greg Otron during the first half of a 34-17 victory over the Boilermakers on Oct. 8, 2005. The play was ruled offensive pass interference, and a 15-yard penalty ensued.

"She told them [the police] she wanted to [drop the charges]," he said. "But they wouldn't allow her to."

The assault occurred early on the morning of March 19, according to law-enforcement records. The police responded to a report of assault at 756 Savannah Drive in North Liberty. The woman informed an officer that Allen held her down three times while slapping her face. Allen and the woman are the parents of a young child.

Johnson County Court records show Allen was arrested again for violating a no-contact order that barred him from returning to the scene. An officer noticed Allen's car

'She told them [the police] she wanted to [drop the charges], but they wouldn't allow her to.'

— Antwan Allen, ex-hawkeye parked outside the property on April 3 and found he was sleeping inside the house.

The ex-Hawkeye served seven days in the Johnson County Jail for the offense. The woman told officers she wanted to lift the protective order against Allen, and a judge granted her request on April 20, according to court records.

Allen was found guilty of assault for the first time in September 2005. An associate judge issued a deferred judgment after finding him guilty of assault causing injury; Allen was ordered to serve 100 hours of community service, which he said he spent part of helping the elderly. That charge originated after a November 2004 fight on the Pedestrian Mall where the victim suffered a broken jaw. Allen was punished by the Iowa athletics department and served a one-game suspension at the start of the 2005 season against Ball State.

Allen, who had been hoping to be selected at the NFL draft in April, was not chosen.

Wie tees up, looking for history

After three years of competition, 16-year-old Michelle Wie is looking to make history by becoming the first woman to compete in a major championship

BY DOUG FERGUSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Michelle Wie has played eight tournaments against men, starting at age 13. She shot a 68 in her PGA Tour debut when she was in the ninth grade, and she kept golf fans riveted by reaching the quarterfinals of the U.S. Amateur Public Links last summer in her long-shot bid to get into the Masters.

None of those moments has ramped up the hype over the 16-year-old from Hawaii quite like this.

Wie isn't trying to make the cut today at Canoe Brook Country Club in Summit, N.J. She's trying to make history.

golfer

Wie, who just finished her junior year at Punahou School in Honolulu, is among 153 players trying to get 18 spots available for the U.S. Open, which would make her the first female to compete in any major championship.

No one doubts whether she is capable, although it likely will take two of her best rounds. But the mere prospect of her teeing it up alongside Tiger Woods, Phil Mickelson, and Ernie Els at Winged Foot has drawn media interest from around the world, far more than for anything she has done in a short but entertaining career.

Wie said she didn't feel any differently now from when she first played on the PGA Tour in the '04 Sony Open, where her 68 remains the best score ever by a female competing on a men's tour.

"They're both challenging," she said.

The odds of her finishing in the top 18 after 36 holes at Canoe Brook depend on how you look at them.

Wie's career-best on the PGA Tour is 2 under par, both times at Waialae Country Club — where she often plays. The cut-off for getting into the U.S. Open last year at the Canoe Brook qualifier was 3-under 139. Two years ago, when the New Jersey club hosted one of the larger sectional qualifiers, the 22nd and final spot went to Scott Hend, at 140.

The field includes 135 professionals, four dozen of them members of the PGA Tour. Two of them are major champions (Mark O'Meara and Mark Brooks), while another is No. 10 in the U.S. Ryder Cup standings (Vaughn Taylor).

Wie has never made the cut — top 70 and ties — on the PGA Tour. The closest she came was in 2004 at the Sony Open, when she missed by one shot after shooting 68 in the second round.

Now, she has to finish in the top 18.

"I'd be very surprised if she got through," Brooks said. "You've got to play better than just making the cut on tour to qualify usually. If you went over there and looked at those two courses and said, 'What would the tour shoot here?' If you figure the cut would be 3 under, you'd better shoot 4 or 5 under."

Wie will play at 7:35 a.m. CDT today on the South Course, a par 72 and 7,066 yards. She will be the last to tee off in the second 18 holes on the North Course, a par 70 at 6,632 yards. She will be paired with David Gossett, a former PGA Tour winner who has lost his status because of a deep slump, and Rick Hartmann, a club pro from Long Island who qualified for the 2000 U.S. Open at Pebble Beach.

'You've got to give her credit. She's 16. She's really coming on nicely now. At least this one she's qualifying for; she's not taking a spot from anybody. She's doing all the right things, and, hopefully, she makes it.'

—Ernie Els, golfer

Despite the presence of so many PGA Tour players, the circumstances are different from a regular tour event.

"Some are annoyed that they even have to be there," USGA Executive Director David Fay said. "You have a couple of bad holes, and who knows? That's one way of approaching it. The other thinking is to compare her not with the PGA Tour players but the non-tour players. Each year, a small number of them make it. She only has to be one of them."

Two years ago, when there were 22 spots available at Canoe Brook, a half-dozen players who qualified weren't on the PGA Tour.

"I don't know what the odds are, but if she plays well, I think she's in," said Sean O'Hair, who played a practice round with Wie at Waialae in January.

Wie made it through a 18-hole local qualifying tournament last month at Turtle Bay in Hawaii, another course she knows well. Some of the PGA Tour players, such as Brooks, Vaughn Taylor, and J.J. Taylor, were playing the final round Sunday at the Memorial in Ohio. They had to fly to New Jersey and be ready to tee it up this morning.

Wie arrived at Canoe Brook on June 1, and she has been practicing every day. Her swing coach, David Leadbetter, arrived from Florida and has been fine-tuning her swing to keep it simple.

The intangible is how Wie performs for the crowd, from those in the gallery to those with cameras and notepads. She is comfortable in the spotlight and has a knack for making news. She played in the final group of her first LPGA major when she was 13 and had a chance to win the Kraft Nabisco this year until her eagle chip on the 18th hole ran 10 feet by, and she missed the birdie putt to get into a playoff.

Even in her professional debut last October, she stole headlines when she was disqualified over a bad drop.

Els had his doubts about Wie until they played a practice round together in 2004 at the Sony Open. He said that day he never would have imagined a female having the talent or even getting the opportunity to play with the best in the world. "Give her another couple of years to get stronger," he said.

Now, Els is just as curious as anyone else.

"You've got to give her credit," he said. "She's 16. She's really coming on nicely now. At least this one she's qualifying for; she's not taking a spot from anybody. She's doing all the right things, and, hopefully, she makes it."

Ferentz signs Ohio receiver

BY IAN SMITH
THE DAILY IOWAN

On Feb. 7, 19 players inked their names to play football for Iowa, and many fans expected the signing class of 2006 to already be in the books. Coach Kirk Ferentz knew better, and he continued scouring the country for talent.

Ferentz's hard work paid off June 1, when Ohio athlete Derrell Johnson became the 20th player to sign his letter of intent to play football for the Hawkeyes

next season. Johnson is rated a three-star athlete by Rivals' recruiting service, and he chose Iowa over offers from Michigan, Florida, and West Virginia, among others.

"I am thrilled to death. It is a dream come true to ever play under a guy of Coach Ferentz's stature," Johnson said. "Hopefully, I can produce under him and do some great things to help him win ball games."

Johnson became available for Iowa after he qualified late academically this spring but still could not get into his school of original choice, Ohio State. Although it took a little longer to get his academics in order, he said Iowa was the first school to ever contact him and stuck with him throughout the recruiting process.

Now that he is on board, he will immediately help shore up the Hawkeyes' receiving unit, according to Rivals' recruiting analyst Tom Kakert.

"He's a big-time athlete who kind of got overlooked in the process," Kakert said. "I know the Buckeyes were real excited when they thought they were going to get him, but he got held up by their admissions office and wasn't cleared there. Getting Derrell late is a big coup for Iowa, and it adds another athlete to an already impressive group of athletes coming in next year."

Although Johnson played quarterback for Cardinal Mooney High School, the same school that produced the Stoops brothers, he plans to play wide receiver for Iowa. He also hopes to make an impact on special teams — returning kicks and punts.

"I am just going to play my game, and I am going to be an asset to the team helping out anyway I can," the 6-2 athlete said.

Johnson's commitment could have a direct effect on Iowa's 2007 class. Instead of having to focus on finding a big athletic receiver, the Hawkeyes can look to add another position of need, such as defensive back or defensive line, Kakert said.

He added that Iowa's signing of Johnson only strengthens a trend in which top players from around the country are looking at the Hawkeyes as the same level as such top schools as Florida and Ohio State.

"Before the 2002 season, the Hawkeyes were probably a 'who are they?' " Kakert said. "Now, with the New Year's Day bowls and a couple of Big Ten titles under their belts, they can walk into a living room and compete with anyone in the country — in terms of winning a recruit. They have done it on the field; now they are doing it off the field as well."
