Alford gets 1-year contract extension

BY DIANE HENDRICKSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

Athletics Director Gary Barta announced on Thursday that the Hawkeyes will extend men's basketball coach Steve Alford's contract by another year.

Alford's new deal, which didn't raise his current salary — $500,000 base, approximately $950,000 when endorsements and other guaranteed revenue are tallied — keeps the coach at the university through June 2011.

Former Athletics Director Bob Bowsby had previously added a year to the contract this spring, leaving the possibility open for Barta to further Alford's tenure. The new AD took that opportunity, he said, largely because of the last two years.

"There has been an improvement in recruits, and attendance, and in the overall direction of the program.

Over the long haul, we are going in the right direction," he said, adding, "We talked about things he's done well and what's gone wrong."

That may include Alford's 2002 support in 2002 of former Hawkeye guard Pierre Pierce, who was accused of sexual assault but later pleaded guilty to a lesser assault charge. The coach allowed Pierce to remain on scholarship and suspended him for the season.

In February 2005, Pierce was dismissed from the team after assaulting his girlfriend; he was later convicted of assault with intent to commit sexual abuse, false imprisonment, and fourth-degree criminal mischief and sentenced to two concurrent two-year sentences in October 2005. He will be released after serving 332 days.

Last year, Alford led the Hawkeyes to a 25-9 record, a 17-0 mark at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, and a Big Ten Tournament championship. The 25 wins are the second-most in team history. In Alford's eight seasons, the Hawkeyes have made NCAA Tournament three times, and the coach's overall record at Iowa is 135-92 — but 52-60 in the Big Ten.

"I appreciate the support and confidence Gary [Barta] and the UI administration has shown our program," Alford said in a statement Thursday.

BOOT BATTLE MOVED FOR HOLIDAY

BY MARGARET POE
THE DAILY IOWAN

Neither ceaseless rain nor the bone-chilling fact that it was a "school night" kept fans from flocking to the stadium at West High School on Thursday night.

The Iowa City School District rescheduled the annual Battle of the Boot football game — which pits rivals West High and City High helmet-to-helmet — to Thursday to avoid conflicting with Rosh Hashanah celebrations. But for some fans dripping in green and gold face paint, thoughts of Friday tests loomed in their minds, and they were less than thrilled.

"You can celebrate a Jewish holiday at a football game," said Jeff Reinhard, an eighth-grader at Northwest Junior High. "A football game isn't Christian or Buddhist or anything."

Like several other districts across the state, the School District opted to move the football matchup ahead one day to avoid conflicting with the Jewish celebration.

The clash does not occur with each intra-city rivalry, because the holiday falls on different dates each year, in accordance with the Jewish calendar. Next year, Rosh Hashanah will be celebrated Sept. 13 and 14.

"We have a number of kids who are involved in both [football and Rosh Hashanah celebrations], and in recognition of this holiday, we try to prevent this conflict, if at all possible," West High Principal Jerry Arganbright said on Thursday.

The School District has rearranged the game schedule to accommodate the holiday in the past, he said, but he could not elaborate on when. On one occasion, the district chose not to accommodate holiday celebrations — a decision he regretted, Arganbright said.

Katrina Hawthorne/The Daily Iowan

In the Battle of the Boot, Iowa City West and City High play their biggest rivals — each other — on Thursday at West High's Trojan Field. The game was moved to Thursday night because Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year, will begin at sundown today.

Like Reinhard, Brenda Klemesrud, whose daughter is a West freshman, agreed — Thursday Night Lights aren't the same.

"I just like tradition," she said, her green West High Trojan jacket accessorized with a gold necklace and buttons displaying photos of her children. The mother also worried that students' schoolwork would suffer today after a night of pep songs and victory chants.

West High freshman Chelsea Birt said she could see both sides.

"It's important to people of that religion," she said. "But I think football games are more fun on Friday."

The decision to move the game reflects a greater recognition locally of different religious traditions, said Avremel Blesofsky, the rabbi at the Chabad Jewish Student Association of Iowa City. In cities with larger Jewish populations, event organizers tend to automatically consider major Jewish holidays when scheduling events, he said.

Rec-fund proposal withdrawn

BY RYAN YOUNG
THE DAILY IOWAN

UI interim President Gary Fethke said Thursday that a proposal to finance the new $70 million UI recreation center with general-education funds has been withdrawn because of requests from various officials.

Fethke announced that the center — to be located at the intersection of Burlington and Madison Streets — will instead be funded by a combination of undergraduate fees and additional donations. His general-education proposal drew sharp criticism from faculty members after it was unveiled Sept. 19 during a Faculty Council meeting.

"I think the undergraduates are willing to pay for a lot of it, and they are going to," Fethke said during an open forum Thursday at the UI Center for Disabilities and Development.

Each undergraduate will be charged $200, reduced from the original figure of $292 because of market assumptions of interest rates and eliminating margins. Additional funding is coming from the athletics department and the UI Parents Association, which donated $100,000 within a half hour of when project talks began.

"First, you have to understand that our economic model is being driven by undergraduate tuition," Fethke said.

Confucius says, "He who thinks but does not learn is in great danger."

But with the UI giving "the great educator" a permanent home at the University Capitol Centre, students won't have to worry.

With an inauguration ceremony in the Old Capitol Senate Chambers today at 3 p.m., the UI will join 11 other schools nationwide to host a Confucius Institute to promote the teaching of Chinese language and culture.

"Many Americans do not know much about China, although the need is compelling," said Chuanren Ke, a UI associate professor of Asian languages and literature who will serve as director of the institute. "This project can help that effort."

Mum very much the word for panel

BY DANNY VALENTINE
THE DAILY IOWAN

Now in the process of gathering information and receiving nominations, candidate confidentiality is of utmost importance for the UI presidential-search committee, panel members say.

In order to ensure that no names are released, committee members refer to candidates' names by using numbers or initials in e-mails, conducting interviews out of town, and refraining — in all circumstances — from discussing candidates with friends, relatives, or the press.

Furthermore, most questions regarding the committee's progress are handled solely by committee Chairwoman Teresa Wahlert, a member of the state Board of Regents.

At the UI and other universities around the country, it is common to hold names until the finalists are announced.

Replacements for deans, provosts, and other UI administrative positions are given the greatest degree of confidentiality possible, said Patricia Cain, a search committee member and UI vice provost.

"The best candidates are often times leaders of other institutions," she said on Thursday afternoon.

The current search group was impaneled to replace former UI President David Skorton, who resigned earlier this year to assume the top position at Cornell University, in Ithaca, N.Y. Former UI business Dean Gary Fethke is serving as interim president.

Committee member Katherine Tachau, a UI history professor, said candidates are often content in their current positions and would be viewed as "lame ducks" if word spread that they were applying for a new job.

"We don't want their colleges thinking they are unhappy," she added. "That's bad for morale."

The confidential screening is consistent with previous UI presidential hiring efforts. For example, the five-month submission and interview process to replace former UI President Mary Sue Coleman successfully used many of the same techniques to keep names under wraps.

A recent search to replace the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire chancellor mirrored the confidentiality policy in place at the UI. Releasing names prematurely would result in candidates removing their names, said Robert Hooper, who chaired the search committee.

Tachau
History Professor

He estimated that 10 to 15 applicants would not even have applied if names were to be disclosed.

"Some people are putting their names in to test the waters," he said. "They are trying to see how their name, résumé, and qualifications would fly in this situation."

Committee members did not send e-mails revealing candidates' names, Hooper said, and they stored their search materials on a secure network that he personally monitored.

Although he admitted to being skeptical about the process at first, he said, it enhanced the caliber of candidates applying for position.

"I think it hurts the organization if there is too much publicity," Hooper said.

Man pleads guilty in death of son

An Iowa City man accused of vehicular manslaughter in the 2002 death of his young son, pleaded guilty to a lesser charge Thursday.

As part of a plea agreement, Marvin Rivera-Fuentes, 32, pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter, a second-offense OWI, and driving while barred in connection with the accident. He also pleaded guilty to an unrelated third-offense OWI charge from May and a tampering with records charge from 2004.

According to court documents: Rivera-Fuentes was driving a Toyota 4Runner southbound in the rain on Highway 1 around 11 p.m. on July 5, 2002. He lost control of the vehicle and hit a car traveling north. The Toyota 4Runner went into the ditch, rolled, and ejected 17-month-old Donald Alexandro Rivera-Verdinez and the child's mother, Olga C. Verdinez. The infant died at the scene.

Rivera-Fuentes allegedly smelled of alcohol, had bloodshot, watery eyes, and refused to take a sobriety test. A beer with a broken seal was found in the cooler in the vehicle. Rivera-Fuentes faces a maximum of 11 years in prison for the combined charges; he will be sentenced at a later date.

City to offer heating help

The Iowa City Housing Rehabilitation Office, a division of the Planning and Community Development Department, is offering low- and moderate-income homeowners low-interest loans as part of the Energy Efficiency Program.

The loans are intended to fund purchases of more efficient furnaces and the conversion or modification of heating and furnace systems.

Program organizers hope to help lower the heating bills of homeowners whose gross household income falls below 80 percent of Iowa City's median income.

Homes must be located in Iowa City, be single-family owner-occupied, and have adequate equity in order to be eligible. Income guidelines, eligibility requirements, and applications are available online, at www.icgov.org.

The program began last winter as part of an effort to combat high heating costs. This year's program will last through March 1, 2007.

Credit union robbed

An unidentified man robbed the UI Community Credit Union on Thursday afternoon, demanding an undisclosed amount of cash from a teller and then fleeing on foot, police reported.

The man walked into the business, located at 2525 Muscatine Ave., about 12:30 p.m. and handed a note to one of the tellers, said Jeff Disterhoft, the credit union's president and CEO.

The teller gave the robber cash from the drawer before he fled the scene. Disterhoft said he didn't know how much money was stolen, and the incident was so low-key that, at first, few people knew the robbery happened.

"None of the other employees were even aware the event had taken place," Disterhoft said.

In the past month, the bank updated its security system to digital surveillance, and "we have some wonderful images of the situation," he said.

No weapons were displayed during the incident, and no injuries were reported, police reported.

"These are never good situations, but there are some small silver linings. First and foremost, no one was injured," Disterhoft said, adding that he was impressed with the calm manner in which the employees have handled the situation.

The Iowa Avenue branch of the bank was robbed in December 2003, and the Muscatine site was robbed in December 1997, Disterhoft said, adding that the perpetrators were caught in both cases.

If caught, the robber could face up to 25 years in prison for state charges of robbery, said Iowa City police Sgt. Doug Hart; he said the department is still searching for the identity of the robber.

The credit union remained closed at 3 p.m. on Thursday.

ARTS & CULTURE

All they are asking is, give peace a chance

BY NIKKI SCHNITZLER
THE DAILY IOWAN

During the summer, Iowa City hosted several festivals honoring arts and leisure favorites, such as the arts, jazz, and beer. On Saturday, a festival will offer yet another theme: peace.

In its second year of existence, Peacefest Iowa aims to rally the community to share hope in ending the occupation of Iraq. The festival was created in 2005 by an array of campus activists who became frustrated with the war in the gulf.

The 2005 festival, held on Sept. 11, drew approximately 600 people over eight hours. Several factors, including the muggy 97-degree weather and the large quarters of Hubbard Park, may have contributed to what some thought was a disappointing turnout.

Regardless, the organizing committee, with an array of co-sponsors, saw its potential in upcoming years.

"We learned a lot from last year — both what works and what doesn't," said fest organizer and UI Antiwar Committee member Brian Gryzlak.

The fest's programming

Rachel Mummey/The Daily Iowan

Kathryn Musilek of Skin Club shouts out some politically charged lyrics at Hubbard Park on Sept. 11, 2005, during Peacefest.

includes workshops on such topics as women's rights and immigration, shows performed by such bands as The Humanaires and Jesus Don't Like Killin', and information booths hosted by the Women's Resource Action Center and the Citizens Action Network.

Additionally, Antonia Juhasz, "policy analyst, activist, and author" of such books as The Bush Agenda: Invading the World, One Econ- omy at a Time, will conclude the event with a keynote speech.

The organizing committee, consisting of 12 members, has met since mid-July to pull together the notable speakers and musical groups.

"The thing that is great about this is that we all pitch in, doing a little bit of everything," said two-year member Ralph Siddall. "We were all painting banners last night at

What: Peacefest 2006
When: Noon to 5 p.m. Saturday
Where: College Green Park
Admission: Free

one of our members' houses — none of us is more valuable than the other, really."

Siddall, who previously practiced activism in his weekly KRUI talk show "Caffeinated Opinions," noted that other Peacefest committee members have appropriate credentials, including participation in the UI Antiwar Committee, and some have personal roots in Iraq.

While the organizers hope that the fest's new venue, College Green Park, provides a better venue for Peacefest's intentions, some community members remain ambivalent.

"It's a great idea, but even in the U.S., I just don't see [world peace] happening," said UI senior Stacy Brown. "People have different views on things. People just don't agree in many situations."

Another UI student, sophomore Joseph Cerrone, has similar views. "Ideally, everyone would like to believe that world peace is possible, but given the current state of affairs in the world today, the leadership in our country, and the view of our country throughout the world, it doesn't seem like something that's too possible in the current future."

But despite skepticism, Cerrone and others could still attend Saturday's event.

"You always like to keep that hope alive that it could work out someday," Cerrone said. "The message behind the festival is definitely one that's valid and something to be supported."

As for the chances of Peacefest having a direct effect on the international turmoil, Siddall takes a realistic perspective.

"Tonight, we're having a bake sale on the Ped Mall, and people will come up and ask, 'Do you really think the president is going to pull the troops out?'" he said. "No. I really don't. I don't think George Bush is going to wake up on the 24th and say, 'Wow, these people in Iowa City have a point' — That's not going to happen."

Rather, he stays grounded in the pragmatic.

"To me, Peacefest is a beginning of a way of networking among all co-sponsors, among the people of the community who don't know about all of these varieties of groups," he said. "There are so many groups that are interconnected, and, yet, there's no one central place to find out about them or meet with them."

"Peace is the rubric that we're going to bring you in under, but it's much more than that. The keyword in there is 'community.'"

Even for those who remain unconvinced that a "measly" festival in Cornville, USA, could produce any significant antiwar action, Siddall clarifies the fest's purpose.

"Would I love for the troops to come home tomorrow? Yeah," he said. "But I think it'd be as important if, from this, people can see that everything is connected."

Muslim camp delayed, but coming

Muslim Youth Camps of America is requesting grant money to aid in building a camp in Johnson County.

BY MARK MAGOON
THE DAILY IOWAN

Three years after receiving federal approval to build in Johnson County, officials from the nation's first summer camp for Muslims asked for county money on Thursday to help cover expenses for the long-awaited program.

The Muslim Youth Camps of America asked the county Board of Supervisors for financial support during an informal meeting on Thursday. The group has already requested a $250,000 grant from the state.

In 2003, the group received land north of North Liberty that had belonged to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers on which to build the camp. The land itself has been the primary reason the camp has yet to reach fruition, because it posed a number of problems that have contributed to the delay.

"We have questions about the land's uses, not its purpose," said Johnson County Supervisor Mike Lehman. The board's chairman cited such county expenses as road use, waste disposal, and water management as key reasons behind the camp's three-year delay.

Bob Ballantyne of the Muslim Youth Camps of America stressed that the camp would not be exclusively for Muslim use. Rather, he said, he hoped the camp would be a haven for people of many religions.

A rule mandating that 50 percent of campers be from a religious background other than Islam is also being considered, he said.

"This camp will provide a great step forward in battling misconceptions about Muslims in our community," Ballantyne said, adding that the camp would provide an excellent context for the exchange of cross-cultural information.

In order to garner approval in 2003, camp officials had to reduce their plan for the land by 50 percent to satisfy the Corps' lease requirements. The land is in an area previously used by the Girl Scouts of America.

The supervisors are optimistic about the Muslim camp's future in Johnson County, and they emphasized that their only concern involved land issues.

"Aside from the issues regarding the property, I have no concerns at all," Supervisor Rod Sullivan said. "I'm very happy this is going to happen in our county."

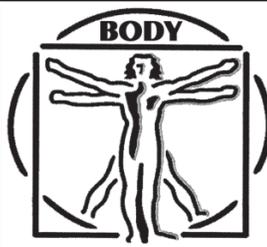

The county's economic-development committee will iron out the land issues before the matter is brought to the full board, Sullivan said.

"I can think of no county that would be a better fit for this camp," Supervisor Terrence Neuzil said. "Johnson County is a leader in racial and religious diversity and will be warm in welcoming this program."

West firehouse may be rebuilt

If the City Council approves the move, the West Side fire station will be torn down and rebuilt, with the Clinton Street Training Station housing the affected firefighters during construction

BY SUSAN ELGIN
THE DAILY IOWAN

Leaking ceilings, crowded rooms, and coed bathrooms may soon be a thing of the past for the dilapidated West Side fire station, officials said on Thursday.

The station, located near the intersection of Melrose Avenue and Emerald Street, needs rebuilding, which preliminary figures show will cost $1.3 million, said Iowa City Fire Chief Andy Rocca.

"After 38 years and 24-7 of use, it's just worn out," he said.

Upon approval from the Iowa City City Council, the station will be torn down and

'When the whole council toured, we were all impressed by the lack of services in the building, when you think of the people living there 24/7 in that space. It doesn't meet what I think is appropriate for our fire fighters.'

— Dee Vanderhoef,
city councillor

rebuilt on the existing site. Rocca hopes to begin construction in the spring and anticipates a roughly 14- to 18-month rebuilding period.

While the station is under construction, the nine firefighters who occupy Station No. 2 will relocate to the city's fire training center, 1001 S. Clinton St.

The proposed new firehouse will have three drive-through bays, which will allow emergency vehicles to quickly enter and exit the building, Rocca said. The current station has two bays, and neither are drive-through.

The building will also install separate facilities for men and women.

The Johnson County Hazardous Materials also houses its equipment at the station, which consumes storage space.

Last year, the council approved $500,000 to remodel the station. But after councilors toured the facility on Aug. 30, many believe it would be best to rebuild the aging firehouse.

City Councilor Dee Vanderhoef

said she will support the rebuilding because, she said, the station needs a new drainage system, more storage space, and separate male and female locker rooms.

"When the whole council toured, we were all impressed by the lack of services in the building, when you think of the people living there 24/7 in that space," Vanderhoef said. "It doesn't meet what I think is appropriate for our firefighters."

Councilor Bob Elliott agreed that something needs to be done, but he is unsure whether remodeling or rebuilding would be the best decision.

"I think we need to know a little more about it, but my impression is that the council's consensus was it favors rebuilding over remodeling," he said. "I would like to look at the figures and relative costs when they are more than just preliminary."

While Elliott plans to approve money to repair Station No. 2, he said his highest priority remains building a new station on the North Side of Iowa City. He feels the facility is badly needed for adequate fire protection, he said, and added that he plans to bring up the issue during budget discussions this winter.

Senator, professor face off on state issues

BY ANDREA WATERFIELD
THE DAILY IOWAN

It's scholar versus senator. In a forum for candidates vying to represent Iowa City in the state Senate, Democratic Sen. Joe Bolkcom, the District 39 incumbent, and independent newcomer and UI business Professor Jay Christensen-Szalanski sparred over state issues in front of a small crowd Thursday.

The forum, sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Johnson County, gave candidates the chance to present their views on such topics as keg-registration proposals, health care, clean air and water maintenance, and funding for recreation trails.

In his opening statement, Bolkcom said he believes in "being informed and involved."

"It is necessary to listen and study the issues," he said. "It is also important to address social-justice concerns."

Bolkcom, serving his second term as a state senator, is pushing for educational investments at all levels, expanding and improving health-care coverage, and creating more renewable-energy production, among other items.

Christensen-Szalanski described his plans for curing ailments that, he said, are hindering the state.

"Money and government only do not cure problems," he said. "Individuals need to help, also."

Christensen-Szalanski, a UI professor of management and organizations, called for cleaner government elections, children's education, and decreasing segregation between Democrats and Republicans. Senate aspirants discussed, amid less-contentious topics, such as "hot-button" issues as gay marriage, abortion, and the rights of sex offenders.

"I believe that it is important for people to make their own decisions," Christensen-Szalanski said, referring to societal benefits, including less promiscuity and monogamous relationships sought by gay couples. "People need to become more educated about both sides surrounding the issue."

Bolkcom agreed, stating that he has "previously stood up for [gay marriage] in the Senate."

On abortion, Christensen-Szalanski responded emotionally, saying people are "doing a disservice when asking if someone is pro-choice or pro-life."

"People are focusing too much on the extremes," he said. "I am the father of four kids, one who has Down Syndrome, and she's a pistol, and I personally believe in other choices than abortion, but I wouldn't vote against first-trimester abortions."

As for Bolkcom, the incumbent said he trusts women's choice and differences of opinion.

"Government shouldn't be involved in this area," he said. "Roe v. Wade is the law of the land, and it should stay that way."

When asked about the rights of sex offenders, Christensen-Szalanski said leaders need to ensure that a neighborhood is notified when a sex offender moves into the area.

"But sex offenders are still citizens, too," he added. "The Bill of Rights must be consistent with everyone."

Bolkcom also criticized Iowa's "2,000-foot rule," which stipulates that registered sex offenders cannot live within 2,000 feet of school grounds or daycare facilities.

"That rule provides a false sense of security for citizens," he said. "Currently, we can't stop sex offenders from driving past or around a school or daycare. And we need to realize that not everyone that gets this title of sex offender is in the same boat."

Diverting academic funds for rec center unwise

According to independent consultants, the UI should have 300,000 square feet of recreation-center space, while the Field House consists of only 150,000. This deficiency is matched only by the university's inability to actually build a new recreation facility. After continuing difficulties and delays, interim UI President Gary Fethke has made a proposal that would divert academic funds, if necessary, to ensure the construction of a new recreation center.

Some background on this fabled project is in order. The new recreation facility is to be located at the intersection of Madison and Burlington Streets. The new facility is to have three pools, three multipurpose gyms, a climbing tower, a wellness center, and ample fitness space, which all sounds very nice and very expensive. It's only going to cost $50 million, maybe $55 million. Or, perhaps $60 million. OK, $69 million, tops. As always, the problem is finding the funds.

Part of the current proposed plan calls for a $200 surcharge for each student. Already discouraging is the effect this facility will have on students, who were expected to pay for the costs, along with a use fee for nonstudents, which has slowly been shifting as the price has gone up. With increasing tuition costs, it will also put the squeeze on those it's intended to attract.

There is a problem with allocating academic funds to a recreation-center project. Granted, such functions and recreational activities that a facility serves are important, but the primary purpose of a university is to be an institution of learning. It's rather odd to take dollars away from a budget-strapped university department and use them for an ancillary use. The plan is to use the money only if it becomes necessary, but looking at the current delays and unexpected price increases so far, it's not very promising.

A previous proposal to build that facility on near Mormon Trek Boulevard and Melrose Avenue shows the kinds of difficulties that can arise — the project was delayed for five years. In the past, funds from the general-education fund had been used to aid in the construction of university facilities, such as the Art Building West, which didn't use those funds, but the art facility serves an academic function.

There needs to be better planning with such projects, as well as some budgetary responsibility. When the university is faced with rising tuition, a constrained general-education budget, and a lack of private donations, there is the very real possibility that an expensive new building, though appealing, is not appropriate at the moment. The university's eyes may have grown too big for its stomach. If worse comes to worse, and officials go ahead with this scheme, we may all be spared by continuing delays and cost increases that seem to plague attempts at building new facilities.

Loebsack will restore leadership

All across the country, citizens are using their votes in House and Senate primary elections to express dissatisfaction with the president and the current direction of the country. Where do the voters of the second-most Democratic congressional district in the nation represented by a Republican stand?

No one can deny that James Leach is an intelligent and honorable man. But, after 29 years, it is clear that he has used his seat in Congress to follow his muse and not the priorities of his constituents. Affordable health care for the tens of thousands of Iowans that go without? Raising the minimum wage so that working Iowans have a better life to build assets and wealth? No, instead we get a proposal by Leach to have former President George H.W. Bush lead a high-level U.S. delegation to North Korea and initiate peace talks. It is an honorable proposal, to be sure, but again, nothing that addresses the needs of working Iowans. In fact, he's established such a strong record on foreign policy that I believe he would be an ideal secretary of State.

But when it comes to his congressman, I prefer someone who will work tirelessly on the issues that affect the well-being of my family and neighbors.

As stakes today as we like him, we can simply no longer afford Leach. The stakes today are just too high. We need a representative who will focus first on our priorities at home. A leader that we can be proud of not only for his intellect and integrity but for his actions to help Iowans build a strong economy with opportunity for all.

Let's thank Leach for his public service. But let's elect Dave Loebsack and restore true leadership to the district.

GUEST OPINION

Ending the economic invasion of Iraq

Following the March 2003 invasion of Iraq, orders were put in place by L. Paul Bremer III, then the U.S. administrator of Iraq, designed to "transition [Iraq] from a ... centrally planned economy to a market economy" virtually overnight and by U.S. fiat.

Those orders were then incorporated into Iraq's new Constitution — and, while so much else spirals out of control in Iraq, the economic restructuring they mandate is well underway.

Laws governing banking, copyrights, business ownership, taxes, the media, and trade have all been changed according to U.S. goals and with little participation from Iraqis. A central component of the Bush economic agenda is foreign corporate access to Iraq's once state-run economy. Thus, an early Bremer order allowed foreign investment in the privatization of all 192 government-owned industries (excluding oil extraction).

Shortly thereafter, Iraq's Ministry of Industry and Minerals fell right in line, announcing plans to partially privatize most of its 46 state-owned companies and open them to foreign investment as part of a plan to establish a "liberal, free-market economy."

Oil is at the heart of the agenda. In April 2004, U.S.-appointed interim Prime Minister Iyad Allawi submitted guidelines to Iraq's Supreme Council for Oil Policy, recommending the "Iraqi government disengage from running the oil sector ... and that the [Iraq National Oil Company] be partly privatized in the future" and opened to international foreign investment. Allawi's proposal mirrored a Bush State Department plan for post-invasion Iraq written in 2002 and 2003.

Plans for a new Iraqi oil law were made public in December 2004 at a news conference in Washington hosted by the State Department. Then U.S.-

appointed interim Finance Minister Adel Abdul Mahdi explained the new law would be "very promising to the American investors and to American enterprise, certainly to oil companies."

A few weeks later, Mahdi became one of Iraq's two vice presidents, and Allawi was elected to the National Assembly. Iraq's new oil law is on track for implementation by the end of 2006. It would grant U.S. oil companies what they were denied prior to the war: contracts for oil exploration and production with unprecedented contractual terms in their favor and to the detriment of Iraq's economic development.

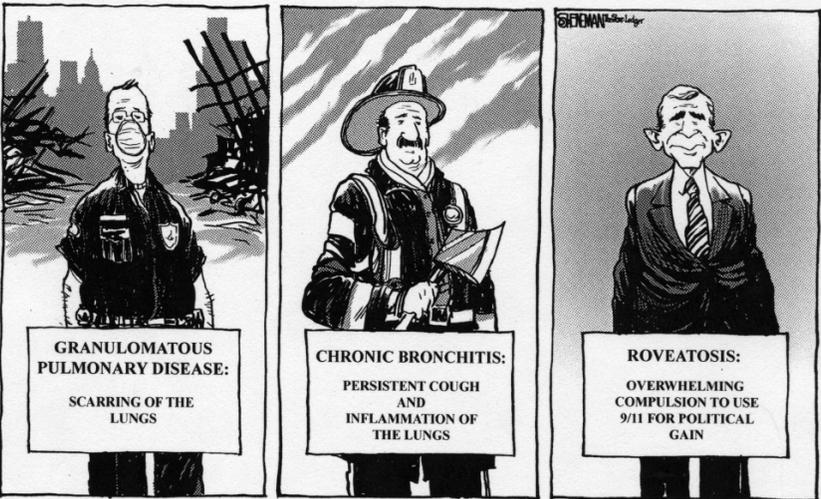

Finally, consider Iraq's reconstruction, which remains largely under U.S. control. One of Bremer's orders denied the Iraqi government the ability to give preference to Iraqis in the reconstruction effort. Instead, more than 150 U.S. companies were awarded contracts totaling more than $50 billion, more than twice the GDP of Iraq.

These contractors answer to the U.S. government, not the Iraqi people, who have regularly engaged in nonviolent public protest against the failure of U.S. companies to provide accessible water, sanitation, electricity, or health care at pre-war levels. Iraqis argue that they have the knowledge, skill, and experience to conduct the reconstruction themselves; what they need is the money and decision-making control they are being denied.

Not only is it time to end the U.S. military occupation of Iraq, so, too, must the economic invasion be brought to a swift conclusion.

Antonia Juhasz is a visiting scholar with the Institute for Policy Studies and the author of The Bush Agenda: Invading the World, One Economy at a Time. She will speak at Prairie Lights today at 7 p.m. and Saturday at PeaceFest Iowa.

Reincarnation revelation

A simple e-mail almost cost me my prized fortune: the vast, useless treasure I've accumulated throughout apartment moves, Polish markets, and Salvation Army thrift stores.

"John," it began, "your father and I think you have a pack-rat problem. Please get help. Here is a website that can help, www.messies.com. We love you."

I was flummoxed. It was clear the brown, solemn-faced chimpanzee wearing a bright red Shriner hat perched above my computer felt the same way. That simian accoutrement, after all, would clearly be worth thousands in a few years. And time will only tell what becomes of the silk tapes-tries I've accumulated.

JOHN LARUE

Some think it's obsessive to hoard my bevy of tchotchkes in dresser drawers and closet shelves. I'm sure the same people will think I'm obsessive when I give them the finger, cruising by in my Ferrari, purchased by the Persian millions in my attic by the Persian billions in my attic.

But even pack rats have a backup plan. If the market for Persian gowns collapses and it turns out that James Dean and Shriner monkeys lose their popularity, unlikely as that may be, I'll move to the wilderness. How will I live? Not to fret, for last May I stumbled across a military-surplus store that was going out of business. That netted me the FM 21-76 U.S. Army Survival Manual, Navy Seal bobble head, Survival Food Tablets, British Military Chemical Suite, and, to top it off, a children's Belgian Gas Mask. With the manual alone, I'll have the capabilities to build a Dakota Fire Hole, an Australian Poncho Raft, and who knows where the bobble head will come in handy. My cross-cultural military-surplus supply could easily keep me alive through any disaster until the next decade.

OK, maybe I do have a problem. Maybe I will check out the website my mom sent me, written by famed messie author Sandra Felton, to help claim that she is "dedicated to helping you bring harmony to your home and life." I click on the beginning link, where I am ambushed by a razor-beaked sparrow used to cajole the reader into thinking about tidy nestbuilding. I read further:

Step one — starting off the day in a clean, happy way — looks easy enough, so I give it a try. "Wake Up — set a time" (five minutes before class should work), "Make Up — don't lie in bed, there's a wonderful world waiting" (I hit the snooze six times), "Make Up — the bed immediately" (I throw the sheets on the floor), "Eat Up — Something Nutritious" (Pop Tarts, Cocoa Crispies), "Wash Up — bathe" (Yeah right ...), "Dress Up — from head to toe, including hair" (Bathrobe, flip flops — check), "Look Up — somewhere during the day you need to turn your heart upward to God" (I'm a souless pack-rat, God has abandoned me).

Let's face it. Sandra whooped my ass in eight steps that Pavlov's dogs could have followed with ease.

I'm not meant to be clean, and I think I know why. Raised a Catholic, it would have been difficult for me to adopt the belief of reincarnation had I not, on more than one occasion, been complimented on my uncanny resemblance to a pharaoh. I suspect now that I am the Pharaoh Khafra reincarnated. Pharaohs, more than any other leaders in history, were recognized for their thrifty, saving nature. Everything was taken to the afterlife, from stuffed cats to piles of gold. While I may not have piles of gold in my modest apartment, I'm sure if I looked hard enough, I could find at least a couple stuffed cats.

Maybe Sandra Felton and her nest-building army of sparrows can help you at www.messies.com, but I have found my own source of light. I've too long defined myself by the antique furniture and vintage clothing I wade through every morning just to get to the bathroom, where I'm greeted by a 2-foot tall concrete pelican stolen from a lakefront mansion. I love my life as a clutter-bug, crap-magget, and will have mercy on you purgers in the afterlife when you're in need of a stuffed cat or Shriner monkey.

Now, if you'll excuse me, I just spotted an abandoned typewriter in the corner of the newsroom that looks like it'd make a nifty candelabrum. ■

Bringing China to the UI, IC

Hosted by UI International Programs, today's ceremony will include a performance of traditional Chinese acoustical music and presentations from Xu Jinzhong, the consul general of the Chinese Consulate in Chicago, and UI alum James Watson, an institute board member and Fairbank professor of Chinese society and professor of anthropology at Harvard.

Launched by the Chinese government's Office of Chinese Language Council International — pronounced Hanban in Chinese — each of the 90 Confucius Institutes worldwide offer language and culture instruction, plus a specialty area that varies from school to school.

At the UI, that area will be teacher training.

"Part of [the institute's] design is to train teachers to speak Chinese," Watson said. "It's important to have a good, solid training program."

Approved on March 15, the Chinese government's $500,000 grant for the institute will be used not only to expand Asian-language programs at the UI but to educate elementary and junior-high students through outreach programs.

The institute will support three programs tailored to specific age groups that will teach beginning Chinese language and culture classes.

The first will expand on classes currently available for UI students. The second program will be called "Challenge Saturday" and will be offered at the Blank Honors Center for junior-high students, and the third is a partnership between the UI and the World Language Program at Hoover Elementary, 2200 E. Court St.

Mercedes Bern-Klug, one of three Hoover Elementary parents who are coordinating the project, said this is a chance to open the world to children at an early age.

"We're giving our kids basic phrases, language, and culture concepts teaching them to communicate," she said. "We're an after-school program, so we're competing with sports and other activities. We're keeping it fun, too."

For the elementary-school project, class sizes will be kept at 10 students; eight have already showed interest. The class costs $195 per year, with two sessions offered per week.

As part of its teaching emphasis, the Confucius Institute will accommodate two doctoral students from China each year who will be acting teaching assistants for various Chinese language and culture courses. Exchange TAs Xuhu Tan and Xinwei Xu arrived last month and began instructing the UI's Beginning Chinese course while assisting the Hoover Elementary program.

"I want my students to master this long-lasting language in the easiest, most fun way," Tan said. "I want them to feel the diversity of this amazing world, which will stimulate their curiosity by exploring a totally different language and culture."

Another extension for Alford

In Barta's second month on the job, the former Wyoming athletics director said he wanted to familiarize himself with the program before he offered the extension and to complete the contract before it "became a distraction during the season."

Alford's extension could add an aura of stability to the program, making Iowa more desirable to top high-school prospects.

Van Coleman, an experienced high-school recruiting analyst and publisher of Future Stars Magazine, said, "Anytime a coach has four years, that's the stability a kid wants to look at."

Barta agrees. "It can't be used against us that coach Alford may or may not be here [when recruits get to the university]," he said.

Coleman pointed out the benefits of occasionally tacking a year or two onto a coach's contract.

"Kids know that the coach is going to be there for the majority of their careers and probably the whole thing," he said. "There's a big, big difference, when you know you'll have a coach for years to come."

Fethke stresses efficiency

"Second, the undergraduate tuition is going into those colleges that have a lot of undergraduates."

His argument for the recreation complex was that undergraduates generate the most revenue, and in order to attract more new students, the UI must be an alluring campus.

"This is not a gym we're talking about," he said. "I'm passionate about this."

Aside from the new proposal,

Fethke emphasized one theme during the hour-long forum — that in order for the UI to function and compete in the world, it must be as efficient and productive as possible.

The former UI business dean can now make decisions that will most benefit his alma mater, and because he doesn't have to weigh the same concerns as a career president, he said, he is in a better situation to judge what is in the university's best interest.

The issue of student debt also emerged as a concern. He noted that roughly 40 percent of UI undergraduates leave with no debt, and the remaining students leave with an average debt of $19,000.

Fethke said that he doesn't favor loading students with debt, and he feels the UI offers one of the best education programs in the world.

"I don't ever believe that we're going to go back to a day where the public universities are supported anywhere near the level they were supported 25 years ago," he said.

Jeff Ebinger, a political assistant at the Center for Disabilities & Development and a school assistant for Nursing Services, asked Fethke about his stance on student debt. He added after the forum that he thought the interim leader was certainly tuned in to the issue.

Debt "is especially cued in the medical school; I do know that," Ebinger said. "It makes [students] nervous to have that much debt, and they start looking at high-dollar specialties to pay it off."

GAME SHIFTS FOR HOLIDAY

ROSH HASHANAH

"It's getting to Iowa later than other communities," he said.

Rosh Hashanah, which commences today at sundown and extends through Sept. 24, celebrates the Jewish New Year and is one of the two holiest celebrations for Judaism. The second is Yom Kippur, which falls on Oct. 1 and 2 this year.

Far from bubbly soirées brimming with champagne and confetti, the Jewish New Year is a solemn affair, Blesofsky said. During Rosh Hashanah, Jews devote the time to prayer, special meals, and an acknowledgment of the past year's accomplishments and plans for the upcoming year.

"We look at it as a birthday — but on a global level," Blesofsky said.

DI reporter Bryce Bauer contributed to this report.

WHAT IS ROSH HASHANAH?

- The Jewish New Year celebration begins today at sundown and lasts through Sept. 24.
- Along with Yom Kippur, it is the most important Jewish holiday.
- The holiday celebrates the anniversary of the creation of Adam and Eve.
- The ceremonial sounding of the shofar — the ram's horn — calls for repentance.
- Eating an apple dipped in honey symbolizes the desire for a sweet year.
- The holiday leads up to Yom Kippur, the day of atonement, which this year falls on Oct. 1 and 2.

WOMEN'S GOLF

Women's golf at Notre Dame

Coming off a sixth-place finish at the Lady Northern Invitational, the Iowa women's golf team will travel to South Bend, Ind., this weekend to compete in the 54-hole Notre Dame Invitational. One of five events on the fall schedule, the Hawkeyes won the inaugural event in 2001; they will compete there for the first time in two seasons.

After leading the team in the first two events this fall, seniors Amy Riepma and Karla Murra hope to continue their strong play on the road.

Sophomores Tyrette Metzendorf and Becky Quinby have a chance to bounce back from a sluggish final round in East Lansing, Mich., where they carded scores of 84 and 80 respectively. Junior Jill Marcum is fresh off a final-round 76 and also qualified to compete this weekend.

The 14-team event is scheduled to begin with a 9 a.m. shotgun start Saturday, with 36 holes to be played on day one and the final round on Sept. 24.

MEN'S XC

Men harriers off to St. Paul

Iowa men's cross-country has its first chance to earn NCAA championship-qualifying points at the Roy Griak Invitational on Saturday. The 8,000-meter competition is at Les Bolstad Golf Course in St. Paul, Minn., and is slated for an 11:20 a.m. start.

The 27th-ranked Hawkeyes finally get to utilize their talented top three runners, along with nine others, to take on Big Ten opponents for the first time this season.

Seniors Micah VanDenend and Jeff Kent, along with junior Eric MacTaggart, are ready to run. "[The three] have been training very well all fall," coach Larry Wieczorek said. "I think they're chomping at the bit to get out there and race."

He is optimistic about the youth influx as well.

"I think it's going to be fun to put everybody together," he said. "To see our young guys perform together with our veterans."

The coach has specific expectations of the group.

"I would like to have three guys under 25 minutes for the course," he said. "And then if we could get a fourth and fifth man to run under 25:30, maybe even a sixth man ... I think we would be in pretty good shape."

SOCCER

Soccer wants to bounce back

The Iowa soccer team looks to erase an embarrassing Sunday performance from its memory when its Big Ten slate opens this weekend with matches at Northwestern and Wisconsin.

Today's match with the Wildcats will start at 4 p.m., while the contest against the defending Big Ten Tournament champions from Madison takes place on Sept. 24 at 1 p.m.

The Hawkeyes saw their three-game winning streak snapped at the Gopher Invitational in an ugly fashion, losing 5-0 to Dartmouth. The Big Green scored four goals in the game's final 15 minutes.

Iowa coach Ron Rainey said there was some relief in knowing that his squad can now focus on its Big Ten schedule, and he is hopeful the Hawkeyes will play their best match of the season today in Evanston, Ill.

"Everything you do leads up to this through the year," he said. "It's very exciting to start comparing yourself with the teams you're comparing yourself with every year."

Hawks mining that Illinois gold

The immigration debate ripples throughout the country, but Iowa football's using some foreign labor of its own. Saturday's Illinois game accentuates the Hawkeyes' open-arm policy toward border jumpers.

Dace Richardson never considered playing college football at Iowa growing up in California. The left tackle preferred the baby blue of the UCLA Bruins and the tradition of the USC Trojans. Even after a move to Illinois and a flood of recruiters' calls that forced him to stop answering his phone, Iowa seemed an unlikely option among his friends at the lunch table.

"They'd say, 'Why Iowa? Who goes to Iowa who has ever been great?'" the Wheaton, Ill., product said. "A lot of people, a lot of coaches, said that to me."

The 6-6, 305-pounder ignored the critics. He chose Iowa, as did five other Illinois athletes in the class of 2005. The sextet — Richardson, Tony Moeaki, Jake Christensen, Ryan Bain, Kyle Calloway, and Dan Doering — averaged four-star rankings from Rivals recruiting service and provided the Hawkeyes their biggest single-state coup in the Kirk Ferentz era.

Not a likely scenario just a few seasons ago. "We really had a hard time recruiting the Midwest, or any Big Ten area, back in '99, 2000, '98, when I got here," Ferentz said. "Because our team really wasn't doing so well on the field."

Iowa went 7-27 — a, well, Illinois-type record — between 1998-2000. The cream of the Midwest, where Ferentz says winning recruiting tug-of-wars is a definite goal, collectively yawned. Then-new assistant Lester Erb, who came to Iowa from Army in 2000, received the job of recruiting Illinois, but he knew no contacts.

"Chicago was a place I'd never been," he said, adding he lost his way more than once early on. "It was a new area, going in cold."

It's never easy replacing a four-year starter on the offensive line, but Iowa will have to this weekend with right guard Mike Jones suspended for breaking team rules. After all the potholes the Hawkeyes have cleared this season, it's more of a tap to the squad's comfort level than a crater-causing blow.

Following a week when the starting quarterback's health was questioned, a linebacker's father passed away, and a wide receiver lost his senior season with a torn Achilles tendon, the suspension of Jones barely causes a sweat as Iowa prepares for its Big Ten opener at Illinois. All head coach Kirk Ferentz is looking for are weekly signs of improvement.

"As you know, we've had our trials and tribulations. We've had them this year, already," Ferentz said. "We're still in that process of trying to get better at practicing."

Field hockey honors ex-Hawk

 THE DAILY IOWAN

Tonight marks the beginning of Big Ten play for Iowa field hockey when it hosts Michigan, but a former player will dominate the thoughts of those in attendance.

The Hawkeyes will pay tribute to former player Nancy Carr, known as Nancy McLinden at Iowa, who was killed in a car accident May 7. She was 32, and she is survived by her husband and two daughters.

Coaches expect more than 40 family members and friends in attendance to honor Carr, who wore black and gold between 1992-94. Michigan is an especially meaningful and emotional game for the tribute. Coach Tracey Griesbaum, an assistant with Iowa during Carr's playing days, said Carr had planned on attending the game with her family.

"Before she was in her accident," Griesbaum said, "one of the last things she talked to her parents about was her coming to this Michigan weekend, and she wanted her parents to come along, too. It was one of the last conversations she had with her dad."

The Hawkeye volleyball team is making a leap to the big time this weekend. The leap isn't the kind one takes from algebra to algebra II. It's the kind taken from addition to calculus.

Or something like that. Iowa has had its way with opposing teams outside the Big Ten so far this season, piling up an 11-1 record and winning three of four tournaments. The record is the best statistical start to a season in the team's history. Iowa has not been playing pushovers, either — two of the Hawkeyes' opponents thus far won their respective conferences last year. But everyone on Iowa's roster knows this weekend will be much tougher.

"I keep reminding them who they are," coach Cindy Fredrick said. "They're in the Big Ten to play like a Big Ten team. It's survival of the fittest."

Enter No. 2 Penn State and No. 12 Ohio State.

Admittedly, this weekend's expectations are a bit different from those of previous weekends, and it's certainly not easy to open with, arguably, the top two teams in a conference that could receive seven or eight bids to the NCAA Tournament.

"I want to see some knock-down, drag-out fighting," Fredrick said in a Wednesday press conference. "The biggest thing to me is to see our kids battle — to have a lot of respect for our opponents but to battle."

The Nittany Lions (12-0) went 20-0 in the conference and finished ranked fifth nationally last season, and Fredrick said second-ranked Penn State could do it again in 2006. The team, which returns five starters, passed an early season test with a sweep (30-21, 31-29, 30-16) of Ohio State Wednesday. In 30 tries, the Hawkeyes have never beaten Penn State.

The Buckeyes, with two All-Americans, are 10-1 (0-1 Big Ten) and favored to take a back seat only to Penn State in the standings.

The Hawkeyes counter with Mel Meister, named the Big Ten Player of the Week after her performance last weekend. Meister, a senior blocker, is averaging 3.3 kills and 1.2 blocks per game.

Sophomore hitter Catherine Smale and senior blocker Jen Barcus are the Hawkeyes' next offensive threats, averaging nearly three kills per game.

Today's game against Penn State and Saturday's tilt with Ohio State both start at 7 p.m.

Hawkeyes turn eyes to talent in Illinois

ILLINOIS RECRUITING

Slowly but surely, the Hawkeyes' compass realigned itself: Wins came more frequently, Erb developed more relationships, and more Illinois helmets turned west to give Iowa City a closer look. After averaging just one Illinois prep per class from 2002-04, the Hawkeyes averaged nearly four from 2005-07. The '07 group, still only half-complete, flashes some of the potential of the '05 bunch — Woodstock, Ill., native Bryan Bulaga is Iowa's top-rated commitment thus far, and Joliet, Ill., linebacker Kevin Rouse is arguably its second.

Hawkeye success in Illinois is nothing new — Hawkeye legends Chuck Long and Duke Slater both hailed from the state — but the rapid rate is Iowa, a state of roughly 3 million, usually needs to look outside its corn fields to pluck enough Division-I talent to field a football team. Illinois, with a population of nearly 13 million, attracted Iowa coaches enough to prompt numerous discussions of assigning two recruiters to the area, Ferentz said. Every time, though, he decided against it.

"Sometimes it's maybe better not to muddy the waters," the coach said. "Sometimes it's better if one guy has ownership in an area."

The Hawkeyes' "one guy" is Erb, a Rivals' finalist for the 2005 National Recruiter of the Year award. The receivers and special-teams coach says he emphasizes Iowa's overall package — including its academics and location — when recruiting. But he doesn't prepare a sales pitch.

"I really just see my job as trying to get guys on campus," he said. "Iowa sells itself."

Richardson, preparing for his first football game in Illinois since high school, agrees.

"I'm happy being here," he said. "I couldn't see myself anywhere else. I see all my friends, when I'm watching TV, at all the other programs they tried to get me to go to."

"And I'm glad I chose Iowa." He's not alone.

Current Iowa assistants Kristy Gleason and Lisa Cellucci both played with Carr as Hawkeyes. Cellucci remembers the intensity Carr brought to the field and her ability to share it with teammates.

"She loved being a part of this program and was such a high energy person," Cellucci said. "She was the kind of person who was so fun to be around, always smiling, always trying to get our teammates pumped up, always having fun — kind of a contagious person to be around."

Gleason echoed those thoughts, saying Carr touched the lives of a lot of people, on and off the field.

"Nancy certainly was a beautiful person," Gleason said. "She's someone who not only the immediate people you would expect miss her, but many, many more. She was the epitome of the All-American girl. Always smiling, always brought her team up. She was a hard-working, dedicated student-athlete."

Carr played key roles in Iowa's three NCAA Final Four appearances and two Big Ten championships as a Hawkeye.

Players have worn home jerseys embroidered with Carr's No. "8" all season. Iowa's honoring Carr each year, beginning in 2006, by presenting a player with the Nancy McLinden Carr Award. It's given to a "student-athlete who most exudes the enthusiasm, energy, and positive attitude Nancy brought to the game of field hockey and life," according to the University.

Tonight is the season's first meeting of Michigan (4-5, unranked) and Iowa (5-4, ranked No. 20), at 7 p.m. Last year, Michigan defeated Iowa in the last regular-season game, as well as in the opening round of the Big Ten Tournament.

On Sept. 24, Iowa will face off against No. 6-ranked Ohio State (6-0) at 1 p.m. The game marks the official rededication of Iowa's Grant Field. Before the contest, the team will reflect on the field's new site, as well as honor Christine Grant, who founded and served as director of women's athletics at Iowa for 27 years. Under her direction, Iowa captured its only field-hockey national championship, in 1986.

Iowa captain Kara Zappone said the team has come together since the beginning of the season and hopes to ride the lightning of the Hawkeyes' win streak through the weekend and beyond.

"We just have to take the momentum from the last four games and keep it going," she said. "There's a lot riding on these games, and we know it, and I think playing our best, and we're really motivated and just excited to get going."

Notes: Some Hawkeyes will play against former teammates in games this weekend. Sophomores Caitlin McCurdy and Lissa Munley played with Ohio State's Lindsay Quintiliani at Crestwood High School in Mountain Top, Pa. Iowa freshman Meghan Beamesderfer played with Michigan's Paige Layton at Warrick High School in Lititz, Pa.

Hawks won't overlook Illini

ILLINOIS PREVIEW

"No matter whom we're playing, that's really what we are thinking about, right now."

While Iowa managed to overcome adversity, Illinois (1-2) has faltered with some of its own. The Fightin' Illini enter Saturday's game eighth in the conference in offense and ninth in defense, a combination that led to a 33-0 loss at Rutgers and a 31-21 loss to Syracuse.

The Hawkeyes beat the Orange in double-overtime Sept. 9, clinching the win with an eight-play goal-line stand, and Ferentz likened that hard-fought win to the situation his team will be faced with on Saturday.

"No question, you can draw a parallel," he said. "I think, maybe, the Syracuse experience will be a help to us. We haven't had an easy game yet. As I said, that Montana score was misleading. We've had to work hard three weeks in a row, and chances are, it's going to be that way this week."

"Chances are, it will be that way all season. That's just the nature of our conference."

Ferentz noted that Illinois returned more starters than most conference teams for this season's campaign but has also played 16 true freshmen already, the second most in Division I-A. The quarterback position, one of the most difficult to master, hasn't been spared from the Illini youth movement.

A controversy brews in Champaign, with senior Tim Brasic and freshman Isaiah "Juice" Williams battling for snaps under center.

Last week, Williams became the first signal-caller in Illini history to throw two touchdown passes of more than 65 yards in one game. Though Brasic is listed as the starter against Iowa, Williams could see the majority of the playing time. Both are able to scramble, a talent the Hawkeyes have had some experience facing. In the first half of last week's game, Iowa State's Bret Meyer gave the defense all it could handle.

"We have to be prepared for both of them," defensive end Kenny Iwebema said. "Every team has good points and bad points, just as we do. You can't take any situation lightly. That's how you get beat. We're not going to do that."

horoscopes Friday, September 22, 2006 — by Eugenia Last

- ARIES (March 21-April 19): Questions will be asked regarding your associations with someone. Your emotional expression will give away your true feelings. Stay in the background, and observe what others are doing. You will come up with the best move.
- TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't get all wigged out because someone isn't being straight with you. Sidestep anyone who may be trying to lead you astray. Stick to what needs to be done, and be professional in the way you handle matters.
- GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Slowly, things are getting better for you. This is a great day to start something new, pamper yourself, or meet new people. You will have a greater interest in more obscure and unusual activities and will see a different approach to the way you can do things.
- CANCER (June 21-July 22): Take a back seat if trouble starts to brew at home. It won't be wise to meddle or get in the middle of someone else's argument. Rely on good friends and family with whom you feel a strong connection.
- LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Position yourself to be in the limelight, and prepare to take a bow. Much can be accomplished if you start things rolling. Give a little extra. You can't go wrong if you are helpful, understanding, and affectionate.
- VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Put your heart into what you do, and you will get the recognition you deserve. You have a unique talent, and whether you realize it or not, you are worth a lot more than you are probably being given credit for. A better opportunity is available. Don't waffle.
- LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Unexpected changes are heading your way, so be prepared to move with the times. You will instinctively know when and how you should proceed, but your inability to follow through could hold you back.
- SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Prepare to step into a position that will allow you to call the shots. You will have to work hard, but sharing and contributing will be what it takes to move forward. Be detailed, organized, and a little bit unpredictable.
- SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The way you see things and the way things really are may not agree. Listen to what others tell you before you decide to take a leap of faith. It's definitely the wrong time to travel in pursuit of a serious connection.
- CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You will be torn in a couple of different directions that will have financial implications. Be very careful how you proceed. Fend for yourself, and don't expect anyone to take responsibility for something that concerns you.
- AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): There are deals to be completed and money to be made. You can make a change that will lead to a brighter future, but be clear about what you can and can't do. Don't contribute to someone else's future; invest in your own.
- PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Partnerships will be up in the air. You may have to do some fast talking to get things back on track. Talk matters through until you come to a workable agreement. If you compromise, you will be able to hold things together.

PREGAME

Northwestern at Nevada

(Friday) 7 p.m. (ESPN 2)
 Three weeks into the season, Northwestern (2-1) still has not established a team identity. There has been little consistency from the Wildcats thus far — they opened the season with an emotional 21-3 win on the road at Miami (Ohio), followed by a 34-17 upset loss to Division I-AA New Hampshire at home and last week narrowly knocked off Eastern Michigan, 14-6. Nevada (1-2) will enter this game with momentum after notching its first win of the season against Colorado State, 28-10. Northwestern's offense isn't going to overwhelm anyone — first year quarterback Mike Kafka has only thrown a Kafkaesque one touchdown all season — so the Cats have to keep the game's score low. Another good rushing performance by Tyrell Sutton, who averages 5.6 yards per carry, will keep Northwestern ahead in the important time-of-possession category.

PREDICTION: Northwestern 20, Nevada 17

Keith Srakocic/Associated Press
Michigan State coach John L. Smith smiles after his team scored a touchdown against Pittsburgh on Sept. 16 in Pittsburgh. Michigan State won, 38-23.

BIG TEN WEEKEND PLANNER

BY DAN PARR
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Michael Conroy/Associated Press
Michigan running back Mike Hart (left) picks up 20 yards in South Bend, Ind., on Sept. 16 against Notre Dame. Hart rushed for 120 yards as Michigan defeated Notre Dame, 47-21.

A 47-21 knockout win at Notre Dame made it clear that the Wolverines are ready to make a run — the first victim from the Big Ten could be Wisconsin (3-0). In the first three games of the season, Michigan has shown a tendency to bury its opponents early, outscoring them 44-7 in the first quarter. The Badgers have been the opposite, posting a 10-10 score thus far in the opening quarter. Wisconsin's defense was expected to be one of the best in the conference, and it hasn't disappointed Badger fans, allowing just eight points per game. But clearly, the offensive weapons of Michigan are several steps above the likes of San Diego State, Western Illinois, and Bowling Green — the Badgers' competition to this point.

PREDICTION: Michigan 27, Wisconsin 17

Minnesota at Purdue

11 a.m. (ESPN 2)
 This game could reveal which of the teams involved is a middle-of-the-pack squad and which is a bottom-feeder. Purdue (3-0) has been able to outscore opponents while allowing an average of more than 400 yards of offense per game, the worst in the Big Ten. Minnesota (2-1) boasts two shutouts this season, beating Kent State, 44-0, and Temple, 62-0 — two lopsided wins over two of the worst teams in Division I-A. The Gophers couldn't keep up with Cal in their only loss, 42-17. The key factor in this game is each team's questionable defense. Forcing turnovers and limiting big plays — things neither team is competent at — will be the deciding factor in a game that is sure to light up the scoreboard.

PREDICTION: Purdue 45, Minnesota 35

Penn State at Ohio State

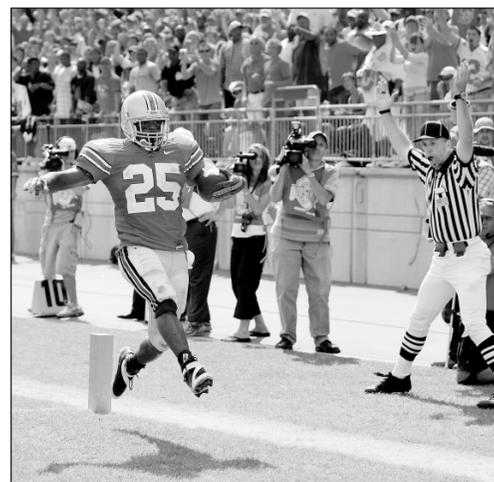

2:30 p.m. (ABC)
 Both of these teams breezed to victories after responding in opposite ways at week two road tests. Ohio State (3-0) is deservedly the favorite in this one. Along with home-field advantage, the Buckeyes haven't shown a flaw, other than a sluggish start in last week's 37-7 win over Cincinnati. Penn State (2-1) responded with a 37-3 win over Youngstown State after losing, 41-17, in a reality check at Notre Dame. The Nittany Lions put themselves in a bad spot in South Bend after first-year quarterback Anthony Morelli committed two turnovers. Notre Dame was able to capitalize on those; Ohio State will find ways to exploit them in an even worse way. Another sign of concern for Penn State has to be Troy Smith's success at throwing to receivers other than Ted Ginn Jr. Defenses can no longer just focus on Ginn — he doesn't even lead the team in receptions. That category goes to Anthony Gonzalez, with 17.

PREDICTION: Ohio State 31, Penn State 20

Connecticut at Indiana

2:30 p.m. (ESPN-plus)
 A difficult week for Indiana (2-1) ended on a sour note. After head coach Terry Hoepfner announced he would be away from the team for a few weeks to recover from surgery to remove a tumor from his right temple, the Hoosiers fell to Southern Illinois in Bloomington, 35-28. Normally, a team such as Connecticut (1-1) wouldn't be much of a challenge to a Big Ten team, but with the condition Indiana finds itself in, anything is possible. This will be the second start for Hoosier redshirt freshman quarterback Kellen Lewis, who appeared to be a natural while guiding his squad to a 24-23 come-from-behind victory against Ball State in week two. Last week's loss diminished that rosy impression. Unfortunately for Lewis, he hasn't had much help from his ground game, which is averaging 3.3 yards per carry. Against Connecticut, Indiana won't need much offense: The Huskies average just 10 points per game.

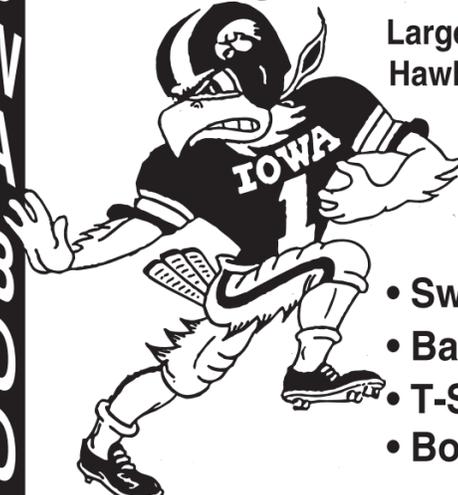

PREDICTION: Indiana 24, Connecticut 16

Amy Sancetta/Associated Press
Ohio State tailback Antonio Pittman runs for a touchdown on Sept. 16 during the Buckeyes' game against Cincinnati in Columbus, Ohio.

CATCHING THE 'ILLS' IN ILLINOIS

BY IAN SMITH
THE DAILY IOWAN

Each week, The Daily Iowan dissects game tape of Iowa's opponent, revealing tendencies and trends. The Hawkeyes will travel to Illinois this weekend to take on the 1-2 Illini. We'll see what Illinois' ugly 31-21 loss to familiar opponent Syracuse offers.

Woeful special teams and penalties: The Illini special teams should have Zook pulling his hair out at this point, especially his punting unit. Against the Orange, punter Kyle Yelton could only muster a net punting average of 27 yards. Two weeks ago, Yelton averaged a 26.4 yard net against Rutgers — including one punt that was blocked for a touchdown. With the emergence of Hawkeye punt returner Andy Brodell last weekend, the Illini should practice doubly hard to improve their punt coverage this week.

Illinois defense struggles: Illinois' defense needs to take a huge step forward heading into Saturday's game with the Hawkeyes if it wants to even keep it close. The Orange ran for 202 yards against the Illini, and that followed a 166-yard performance by Rutgers a week earlier. Syracuse pounded the ball through the middle of the defense, continually getting four or five yards. There were a number of missed tackles throughout the game, which only helped shorten the field for Syracuse. It was so bad that even after Illinois forced a fumble, Orange receiver Taj Smith was still able to pick it up and run for a 41-yard score.

Unfortunately for Illinois, because it has to stack the box to stop the run, the play-action pass becomes a huge weapon for opponents. Perry Patterson found Smith for a 65-yard touchdown off a simple handoff fake early in the second quarter. Later, Patterson connected with Tom Ferron in the corner of the end zone for an easy touchdown. Iowa figures to follow the same approach as the Orange. Scott Chandler, Tony Moeaki, and Dominique Douglas could grab long scoring catches after Illinois is forced to crash the line of scrimmage.

True freshman quarterback steps up: Starting Illinois quarterback Tim Brasic fought inaccuracy throughout the game against Syracuse. The senior was off the mark and also threw an interception. While he was awful last weekend, Brasic did have success against the Hawkeyes in Kinnick Stadium a year ago — he threw for 233 yards on 32-for-44 passing. If Brasic doesn't move the ball early Saturday, Illinois head coach Ron Zook won't hesitate to bring in true freshman Juice Williams.

Williams, who was recruited by Iowa, showed a strong arm and an ability to avoid pressure. The Chicago native entered the game down 21-7 and threw two touchdown strikes in the fourth quarter to make the game respectable. Although, he likely won't have the same success against the Hawkeyes, he could be the spark the Illini need to make this a game.

Protecting the quarterback: Brasic and Williams were bruised following their contest with the Orange. The quarterbacks were sacked a combined five times by Syracuse and got knocked down numerous other times. Penetration by the Orange also forced an Illinois fumble that went the other way for a touchdown. The Illini faced numerous third-and-long situations, and the results were often bad.

Zook must have his stable of talented running backs — Pierre Thomas, Rashard Mendenhall, and E.B. Halsey — gain yards on first and second downs to keep the Iowa defense guessing on third. If the Illini aren't able to accomplish that, Iowa's defensive line pressure likely will result in a few Illinois turnovers.

Nothing reflects more poorly on a coach than an undisciplined team that racks up a ton of penalties. Illinois is currently doing a great job of just that. Last week, 12 penalties hurt Illinois — at one point pushing the Illini out of field-goal range late in the first half. In its first three games, Illinois already has 26 penalties for 199 yards.

After opening the season with an easy victory over Eastern Illinois, the Illini have looked brutal. They've been outscored 64-21 in the last two weeks, and if not for Williams' late heroics against Syracuse, it would have been worse. The Hawkeyes should find a strong contingent of Iowa fans in Champaign, and they should be able to send their fans home with the first Big Ten victory of the season.

Q & A WITH KENNY IWEBEMA

Iwebema tackles DI questions

Each week, The Daily Iowan will venture off the field with a different Hawkeye football player. This week, we chat with junior defensive end Kenny Iwebema, who has 14 tackles, one sack, and one forced fumble this season. He talks up his favorite Quizno's sandwich and what is playing on his iPod.

employees] told me one day that I might like it, and I've been getting them ever since.

DI: What's your favorite class this semester?

Iwebema: If I had to choose one, let me pick a class in which my teacher might be reading this. History of the Western World. It's the history of sports. I never knew that field hockey was that old, but it's really old.

DI: What's the best movie you've seen, recently?

defensive end

Iwebema: I saw V For Vendetta, and I liked the fight scene at the end. That's a good movie. I never saw it in the theater, but I saw the DVD over the summer.

DI: Do you have a favorite Kirk Ferentz saying?

Iwebema: [Laughs]. I like all of them. I don't have a favorite. I couldn't even tell you. You know how people say "if," as in, "if we do that," "if we do this." He said, "If my grandma had balls, she'd be my grandad," or "If my aunt had balls, she'd be my uncle." That one had me laughing. I'm not going to lie.

DI: If you weren't playing football, what would you be doing?

Iwebema: Playing basketball. I used to play. I stopped playing when I started playing football.

DI: What music is on your iPod?

Iwebema: Right now, I'm listening to Lil' Wayne and T.I. And not too many people know about this, out here, but Swisha House. Mike Jones used to be with them, but now, he's with Ice Age. I listen to all that.

DI: Biggest jokester on the team?

Iwebema: [Alex] Kanellis is a funny dude. The funniest guy I deal with is Kanellis.

PREGAME

A SHOCKER ON THE CONSOLE

The Daily Iowan will preview each game in the Iowa football season with a virtual simulation involving Hawkeye football players, who will play as Iowa. This week, receiver Herb Grigsby takes on Pregame Editor Jason Brummond as Illinois.

BY JASON BRUMMOND
THE DAILY IOWAN

Coached by Herb Grigsby, No. 11 Iowa lost in overtime to Illinois, 21-14, at Memorial Stadium. The Hawkeyes were out-scored 18-0 in the second half and intercepted four times in the final quarter and a half. Illinois true-freshman quarterback Juice Williams connected with receiver Derrick McPhearson on the first play of overtime for a 25-yard touchdown, and the Illini intercepted Drew Tate's potential game-tying pass to end the game. In overtime, Tate completed passes to Grigsby and Andy Brodell that nearly went for touchdowns. On fourth-and-two from the five-yard line, Tate was intercepted by safety Justin Harrison in the end zone. At the end of regulation, Illinois kicker Jason Reda botched an easy 18-yard field goal attempt in the closing seconds that could have won the game. With the game tied at 14-14, Iowa had two opportunities in the fourth quarter to take the lead but couldn't move the ball. Tate was intercepted by cornerback Alan Ball midway through the quarter, and the Hawkeyes were later forced to punt with 1:26 left in the game. Leading, 14-6, in the second half, Iowa had an opportunity to increase its lead with the ball on the Illini 26-yard line, but a trick play backfired. A pitch to running back Albert Young turned into a pass play, but Harrison intercepted Young's pass in the end zone.

Four plays later, Illinois scored its first touchdown of the game on a 15-yard scamper from running back Pierre Thomas, who ran for 80 yards on three carries on the drive. The Illini tied the game, at 14-14, with a successful two-point conversion pass from Williams to McPhearson, who made an impressive catch in traffic. The Hawkeyes led, 14-0, at the break, even though Illinois gained 154 yards of offense to Iowa's 125. Early in the second quarter, Young shook off a tackle in the backfield and coasted down the sideline for Iowa's first touchdown. The Illini couldn't penetrate the end zone on their next possession, settling for a 25-yard field goal from Reda. But Iowa scored quickly again with a 25-yard touchdown pass from Tate to Grigsby, who beat the cornerback one-on-one in the flat. Grigsby caught seven passes for 94 yards to earn player-of-the-game honors for Iowa. E-mail D/Pregame Editor Jason Brummond at: jason-brummond@uiowa.edu
