Researchers make AIDS discovery

BY JAY McCOY

From an outside laboratory, a cadre of specialists and graduate students, emerged one of the most exciting and promising findings to date on how to significantly prolong the lives of those infected with HIV/AIDS.

Terry McCoy, Jinsha Xiang, a University of Iowa associate research scientist in internal medicine, and Jack Stapleton, a UI professor of infectious disease, recently found that a benign virus previously called GBV-C, which is occasionally found in HIV-infected patients, may help the colonisation of the HIV virus in cell cultures. GBV-C could prolong the life of the HIV-infected patient as long as 10 years, Xiang said. The researchers made their findings in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

Stapleton's experience with HIV/AIDS runs prior to 1983, when the first U.S. cases were diagnosed. GBV-C was initially seen in patients with transfusion-related Immunodeficiency syndrome, Stapleton said. The two became friends immediately. Stapleton recalls thinking the native of Kunming, China, was very courteous.

Several doctors and researchers believe the GBV-C DNA is a virus and develop workers which as workers for more than 10 years straight. He said he randomly and annually takes a day off from combating the proliferation of AIDS, which is not killed between 2 million and 20 million mostly people worldwide, according to the U.N. Michael Head, director of the U.K. Centre for Sexual Health and HIV, said the virus is not a serious virus, but it could be a potential threat.

But this effort has not come without a price for Xiang, who said he is unable to spend enough time with his 8-year-old daughter.

"I feel a little guilty," Xiang said. "Because that is the age that you want to play with them more." Stapleton, who usually works 60 hours per week on his research, also described the conflict between the time need-ed to complete his work and time with his family. He said he often works, from 7:30 a.m. until 6 p.m. before going home for dinner and then heading back to the office for more work.

"I always try to do my best (to spend time with my fami-ly)," Stapleton said. "Sometimes my family agreed, and sometimes, maybe, they didn't agree.

Still, he said his research holds hope through his daughter. Molly, to assist in the fight against the AIDS virus, the American

Man charged in pot robbery

A Coralville man turned himself in after Tuesday morning after being accused of robbing a bag of marijuana from a person at a local bank in September.

According to Coralville police, the man told they had discovered about 25 THC candy bars in the drug the Pizza Pit night deposit bag that was taken.

"It's not a 'large quantity' of drugs, said Coralville Police Chief Jeff Tronvold.

The owner of Pizza Pit reportedly said that he was robbed at 2:35 a.m. Tuesday, as the person who made the deposit was at the door. A notice was issued for Hilton's arrest on Wednesday night, as an unconfi-rmed report.

The UISG approved the Student Assembly Budget and Allocating Committee plan to allow student groups to get their funding.

BY ASHTON SHURSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

One week after fighting commenced on the Old Capitol steps after a heated Student Government Student Assembly meeting, problems with allocating student funds to student groups have been resolved — for now.

The UISG approved the Student Assembly Budget and Allocating Committee’s recommendations for the 17 student groups at Tuesday’s meeting. It was held on hold since Oct. 17, when different senates disagreed on whether to approve funding.

As a result of the Tuesday vote, student groups will now get their funding, following last week’s meeting in which five groups were left without money.

The Graduate and Professional Student Senate had rejected the proposal, because some senators argued that the budget committee should have posted its minutes before the meeting.

Committee head Laura Westercamp said the confusing minutes were 60 pages long and lacked information. She extended deadlines for student group applications and said the applications were not posted promptly because of time constraints.

Although members have tried to make the committee more transparent to student groups, she said, she still gets many requests to improve the process.

I don’t put my name on anything I don’t feel is 100 percent. If the Student Assembly doesn’t have access to information, how can it make informed decisions?

— Taylor Heim, graduate student and budget-committee member who was the lone “nay” in this week’s approvals

“I was out of a law,” she said. “We have given above and beyond every single mandate and recommendation.

Another problem was a technical glitch preventing informational e-mails from being distributed to all student groups.

After the long meeting, many undergraduate senators had left the senate chambers of the Old Capitol in a fury, arguing that the graduate and professional student senate doesn’t care about student groups.

But Taylor Heim, a graduate student senator and budget-committee member — who did approve the allocations at last week’s meeting — said he was working in the best interest of the groups.

“I don’t put my name on anything I don’t feel is 100 percent,” said Heim, who was the lone “nay” in this week’s approvals. “If the [Student Assembly] doesn’t have access to information, how can it make informed decisions?

Some student-group members thought the disapproval was actually incorrect.

“Not only was it counterproductive to the entire Student Assembly process but it was counterproductive to the university, as a whole, because it basically disabled priority-three organizations from continuing with activities,” said Sri Akella, the president of the UI Indian Student Alliance, one of the largest groups on campus.

The Iowa Base Fishing Club had to self-fund its trips to competitions because the money wasn’t allocated, said the club’s president, Nick Hansen. But it will now be reimbursed because of Tuesday’s approval.

“I am greatly happy it has passed,” Hansen said. “It’s a financial burden off my financial income.”

Increasing funding for private schools a slippery slope

The All Children Matter website stresses that it is not a right-wing organization and states that its goals are to protect the institution of education, to ensure that low-income children are served by high-quality public schools, and to maintain our children’s access to affordable health care.

Public education is a hallmark of American democracy. It remains a key component of our social contract, and it continues to shape the character of the nation.

The public education system serves as the cornerstone of our society. It is the foundation upon which our democratic values are built.

In the United States, the public education system is a fundamental aspect of our democratic society. It provides access to critical resources, such as education, and it helps to ensure the equitable distribution of power and opportunity.

Increasing funding for private schools poses a significant threat to the equitable distribution of educational opportunities. It is crucial that we maintain a strong public education system that is accessible to all students, regardless of their background.

The public education system is essential for the development of a well-informed and engaged citizenry. It helps to ensure that all students have the opportunity to reach their full potential and to contribute to society.

The public education system is a vital component of our nation's social fabric. It provides a foundation for the development of a knowledgeable and informed citizenry, and it plays a critical role in shaping the future of our country.

In conclusion, increasing funding for private schools poses a significant threat to the equitable distribution of educational opportunities. We must work together to protect our public education system and ensure that all students have equal access to high-quality education.

FOR FOUR DECADES, Victor Wooten has been playing the bass. It’s called conversation.

As one of the founding forces of the Dave Matthews Band and the Wooten Brothers Band, Victor Wooten has been known as a bassist, and he’s liked that. "I do know I belong, because I’ve worked hard," he said. "I put things off or cut corners, but I’ve never spent time trying to be something I’m not."

Derico Watson, Victor Wooten’s bassist, and I liked that. "I’m all over that book," he said. "Tons of myself is in the book," Wooten said. "They don’t have much of a chance."

"I felt comfortable doing it, because I didn’t want to do the standard music-lesson book," he said. "Of course, Wooten’s own experiences have influenced many of his students."

The book, "The Bass Player’s Bible," was assigned to him during his high school. The art of bass-instruction basics is modeled after the book, "Tons of myself is in the book," Wooten said. "They don’t have much of a chance."

"I’m not a reading snob," Wooten said. "They’re cheating them — unwritten knowledge."

"I can say that listening to music has allowed me to fit in with my family."

Wooten has been auditioning for music labels, such as one of the best, Atlantic Records. "I've had no desire to do anything else," he said. "Or maybe it’s just me, but I’ve always imagined the voice of God sounding like the over-the-hill actor."

"It’s different from someone who just wants a little bit of knowledge."

Halloween Need-to-Know: Mummies

- A mummy is a corpse whose skin and flesh have been preserved by exposure to chemicals or extreme coldness, dryness, or airlessness. Famous mummies include Tutankhamen, Seti I, and King Imer.

- Egyptian mumification involved many complex rituals such as removing the brain and placing the organ. The brain was considered a valuable and considered useless and discarded, whereas the packed mummy was great with a club sandwich.

- If you've ever been attacked by a mummy, just think: They are thousands of years old, and their bottled head and preserved mummy don't exactly make them formidable foes. It's like being afraid of the Vidas.

- Scientists have dated mummies as old as 5,500 years, and while some bottle-headed and overgrown mogul don't exactly make them formidable foes. It's like being afraid of the Vidas.

- They also have mummies in Central America...or at least they did until the bottle-headed bosses and overgrown mogul don't exactly make them formidable foes. It's like being afraid of the Vidas.

- Some people think that “classic” mummies all carry a curse. To break the curse, they claim, they contain the many mysterious diseases that were considered deadly by ancient Egyptians. Egyptian tomb excavators...often mysteriously disappear from the desert, sometimes leaving only skeletons and bones.

The Daily Iowan continues its In The Spotlight feature this week with a sports psychologist Dawn Stephens, who shares her thoughts on everything from rehabilitating kids to America’s obesity problem to why youth sports should not necessarily build character.

Dr. Stephens is a psychologist different from what most people think it is.

Dr. Stephens is a sports psychologist who has worked with a variety of athletes, from NBA and NFL players to college students. She is known for her work in sports psychology and has published numerous articles on the subject.

In her most recent project, Dr. Stephens has been working with a group of young athletes who are struggling with injuries. She has developed a new program that uses visualization techniques to help these athletes overcome their fears and get back to the game.

Dr. Stephens believes that sports psychology is not just about helping athletes perform better on the field, but also about helping them deal with the stresses of everyday life. She says that sports psychology can be used to help anyone who is struggling with a difficult situation.

Dr. Stephens is currently working on a book about sports psychology, which she hopes to publish in the next year. She is also looking for new clients to work with in the future.

Dr. Stephens is available for consultations and can be contacted via email at stephendsportspsychology@gmail.com.

Both Hawkeye tennis programs make the transition into the new facility. Klotz said the fact that they are all-in-one program is a significant factor in the transition.

Klotz's court innovations weren't limited to indoors. "Outdoors, he made them in parking lots, using asphalt surfaces," Houghton said. "He also used 'Klotzites,' as we affectionately called them." Not sure of every ingredient in his recipe, but I've heard he made his courts out of various materials.

Not only did his recipes involve using clay, which was a popular surface for tennis courts, but he also used asphalt for some of the outdoor courts. The mixture of various materials and the innovative approach were unique to Klotz's methods.

NASCAR driver Ryan Newman tests his car in Newton.

NEWTON, Iowa—One of the top drivers in the V8 stock-car scene, Newman tests a new stock-car design Tuesday at the Iowa Speedway at Newton, Iowa, where he had his inaugural season in 2001.

The newly designed car will run in races next month at the Pennsylvania 500 and the Michigan 400.

Newman said the car is not drastically different from current cars but believes some of the hype over safety features are exaggerated.

“It's a better car. I think a lot of people are making a lot of noise the Tigers caused in this area,” Newman said.

Tigers manager Tony La Russa said he is happy with the new stock-car design that it will be used in all of the Nextel Cup races in 2002.

The car is scheduled to test drive at the Iowa Speedway later in the week.

NASCAR has a five-year project under way to develop a new stock-car design that it says will be safer and less costly for teams to make and tune for various tracks.

The new car design will be used in 2004 and in all of the Nextel Cup races in 2005.
