Dorm false alarms down

By Kurt Hatt

The Daily Iowan

It has probably happened to you by now. You may have been sleeping in your dorm, eating in a US marketplace, or studying. Suddenly the fire alarm goes off, and you see the blinding lights. You’re forced to crawl out of bed, abandon your meal, or set down the exam notes and evacuate the building. But then again, maybe you haven’t been inconvenienced by a fire alarm.

While the data fluctuate from year to year, there have been a decrease in the number of fire alarms triggered in residence halls in recent years. For all 10 residence halls, she estimated that there are fewer than six pulled purposely per year. She added that while there is a problem with students pulling false alarms, the UI and the UI Residence Life, the assistant director of UI Residence Life, has done an adequate job in passing along the responsibility to students, said Low City resident Roger Jensen, referring to the low number of fire alarms triggered in recent years.

Kathleen Fitzgerald, the assistant director of UI Residence Life, echoed Jensen’s comment. “Very rarely does a student pull a false alarm,” she said. For all 10 residence halls, she estimated there are fewer than six pulled purposely per semester.

“The UI is pretty typical,” Jensen said, comparing fire-alarm use at the UI with other colleges. He added the UI and the Fire Department have been proactive in keeping the number of false alarms low.

UI to expand juco-transfer plan

By Matt Sniders

The Daily Iowan

A plan now in place at three community colleges, designed to help transfer students adjust to the UI, will expand to 12 more junior-college districts through-out the state, UI administrators and Monday.

Since September, the 2 Plus 2 Guaranteed Graduation Plan has provided a comprehensive graduation program for community-college students who will attend the UI. Currently, the plan pertains to students at Kirkwood Community College, Iowa Western Community College, Eastern Iowa Community College, and Butler County Community College. But UI officials hope to extend the agreement to include the remaining community colleges in the state.

“We’ll be rolling out to other districts in the next 12 months,” said Tom Bond, the UI associate provost for undergraduate education.

“We want to expand the number of participating dis-tricts as well as the number of majors offered,” Bond said.

Right now, 19 majors, including accounting, economics, psychology, and sociology, are included in the program.

UI Student Legal Services attorney Eric Fisher speaks on Monday during a meeting in City Hall on rental deposited during the fall semester.

The proposal would also change the wording required for the rental deposit. A punitive damage is paid by a landlord when he or she is found guilty of unnecessary charges on tenant deposits. The proposal was introduced to balance the consumers' interests and landlords' rights to their deposits as part of the funding mechanism.

"As college students, we can't be cheated out of a dime of our money," said UI senior Bollman, who was re-elected as the UI student liaison to the City Council. He said that in his three and a half years with Student Legal Services, only one landlord was required to pay the $200 punitive damage fee, though hundreds of students filed grievances against property owners.

"There's an interest in local relations and cracking down on excessive fees to unknowing property owners who charge landlords who practice predatory tactics with rent deposits," Fisher said.

UI offers new languages

Within a year, UI administrators expect every community college in Iowa to participate in a program designed to offer a smooth transition for junior college transfer students to the university.

“Our primary goal in creating programs such as the 2 Plus 2 Plan is to ensure that those who want to earn a four-year degree have access to a quality UI education and then, most importantly, to make sure that they succeed here,” said UI Provost Michael R. Kinnard in a press release.

Students interested in the program can go to http://www.uiowa.edu/2planned for more information or call (800) 555-3100.

The students who participate in either the Turkish or the Bahasa classes can apply for a Fulbright scholarship that funds the TAs, is only for the 2006-07 academic year, officials said.

“Do we know what will happen next year, as this is a new thing we have in the university element,” Henry said. The classes "have been designed so every student can be successful," but there will be consistent work throughout the semester. The Fulbright grant, which funded the TAs, is only for the 2006-07 academic year, officials said.

Firefighting linked to cancer

A University of Cincinnati study reports that firefighters run a higher risk of developing certain types of cancers

By Susan Elgin

In a presentation to the council, Kuemi Morris, a city architectural services and engineering coordinator, said some long-term benefits can be reaped by the increased efficiency of the building's ventilation system. In 1993, the Iowa City Fire Department made a 5-year commitment to improve its ventilation system. Since that time, the city has saved over $1,400 per building, depending on square footage, simply for registering for environmental- design certification. Morris also said that the move towards remodeling projects. The school's natural lighting, geothermal heating systems, and runoff water routed from the parking lot into gardens meet some of the standards for the award.

City considers building ‘green’ fire station

Though a new program will encourage environmentally friendly development, it comes at a price — roughly $1,400 per city building.

By Kelsey Beltrame

Firefighters have high-risk situations daily: confronting flames, smoke and danger to save trapped people, as well as dangers from toxic fumes. Throughout their careers, they are always wearing protective clothing, which can harbor dangerous materials.

“On time to time, our trade magazine put out info on firefighters, who might have saved a firefighter’s life,” said John Lowe, the head of the department’s wellness program.

Rocca said the department has applied for a federal grant. “We’re excited to still be in the running to hopefully be considered for a later award,” Rocca said. “It’s a great feeling to know we save over time,” she said. “Cost is always a consideratation.”

U.N. to aid African Union

The United Nations has pledged $22 million to person- ally roam through every corner to help the African fire had been inspected a ventilation unit until that caught fire behind the Deadwood on Dec. 9, 2004.

In fiscal 2005, 152 different firefighter applications were submitted in Iowa this fiscal year. In the state’s Fire Training Bureau, said his training program management risks associated with back injuries and stress fractures but made little mention of firefighters’ cancer concerns.

The 21-year-old Army Reser- vant, who will fill out department applications soon, said the report wouldn't affect his pursuit of being a firefighter. "Rojo said the report doesn't affect his desire to be a firefighter in Iowa City as it is as high as ever, with nearly 200 applicants submitted in the past three months. The list was shortened to 24 firefighter candidates for no known opening.

THEDAILYIOWAN.COM
On Monday, the Iowa City City Council met with state legislators, kicking off what we hope will be continued open dialogue between the city and state regarding specific issues that must be addressed when the Legislature convenes for the 2007 session in January.

This Editorial Board would like both the city and the state, in particular, to use special attention to three issues we feel are most important in the upcoming year: increasing public safety for a statewide, state-adopted smoking ban in restaurants, and more responsible use of tax-increment financing.

Since Sept. 17, 10 sexual assaults have been reported to Iowa City police, with the latest occurring in the early morning hours on Sunday. Time and time again, we have called for an increase in police patrolling of residential neighborhoods, more funding from the state for public safety, would allow the city to hire more officers and create a wider, more comprehensive watch system for the downtown and residential areas.

The Iowa City Fire Department is also in need of more funding to build a five-story fire station and host additional firefighters to the inadequate number of 17 full-time positions.

The passage of a statewide smoking ban in restaurants should also be a goal for the Iowa City City Council. As of July 2003, Iowa City had resisted its first attempt at a restaurant smoking ban after the Iowa Supreme Court ruled that city-adopted smoking bans were unconstitutional.

The detrimental health effects of secondhand smoke have been proven again and again, and the EPA classifies secondhand smoke as a “Group A carcinogen,” meaning it is a known cause of cancer. It is time for the state to recognize the health consequences of secondhand smoke and ban smoking in restaurants across Iowa.

Finaly the use of TIP money has again become an issue. The City Council approved its use for the Hermitage Square Project, a 13-story residential- and commercial-structure to be constructed on the southeast corner of 18th and Main. The estimated $6.4 million of the estimated $60 million project will be financed by TIFs, and though this is purported to benefit the local economy, this argument doesn’t hold up under scrutiny.

A study by two Iowa State University professors, published in the Dec. 11, “TIP roll call, revealed,” that this project yields “virtually no statistically meaningful economic, fiscal, and social correlation with TIF districts”...the economic benefits do not exceed the costs of this project. In September, Johnson County Supervisor Rod Sullivan also spoke out against using TIF money for the project, meaning there is a need for a new building. It may be a great thing, but we don’t need to offer incentives for something the market can handle.” The decision to use this tax-fund must be made more responsibly in the future.

We feel each of these issues merit immediate attention and hope legislators take action in January to address these important concerns.

U.S. must do more in Gaza

Gaza, in recent days, the Gaza crisis has made headlines around the world. But do you know it is a crisis? I write this note for my friends to have a bit of knowledge about the situation. A new wire has taken place at 10 Palestinian civilians and wounded 55 others, roughly 10,000 people, including children. This crime only one day after the Israeli forces withdrew from Bethlehem to the center of the Palestinian moderate. There is a massive destruction of the city, and the current events is leading to the crisis of a new dangerous level. In the last few months, there have been 347 Palestinians in Gaza — 139 of them females, mostly women and children.

Israel's military offensive on Gaza continued the humanitarian crisis, crippling Gaza livelihood. According to the World Bank, Palestinians are currently experiencing the worst economic crisis in modern history. In the present, unemployment is approaching 40 percent, and as of April, 75 percent of Gazans — including 120,000 children — are living in poverty.

I am sure that our government has taken no action to satisfy the United Nations and the international community in the Gaza case. Gaza is yet another crime, and creating a free Palestinian state is a goal for state lawmakers. In July 2003, Iowa City was forced to rescind a new building. It may be a great thing, but we don’t need to offer incentives for something the market can handle. The decision to use this tax-fund must be made more responsibly in the future.

We feel each of these issues merit immediate attention and hope legislators take action in January to address these important concerns.

U.S. general tells Iraq it must disarm militias

BAGHDAD — The U.S. Central Command chief confronted Iraq's prime minister on Monday over how Iraq's forces would halt rallying violence and signaled a possible future shift in American policy on engaging Iraq and Syria.

The meeting came as sectarian deaths killed at least 90 people throughout Iraq, 46 of them in a single shooting Sunday night in Baghdad, according to senior Iraqi government officials with knowledge of what the two men discussed.

One of the militias, the Mahdi Army, is loyal to anti-American cleric Muqtada al-Sadr. The top U.S. commander in Iraq, Gen. George Casey, recently said it would take 12 to 18 months before Iraq's security forces were ready to control the whole country. In such a series of announcements by coalition officials, the condition of anonymity because of the sensitive nature of that talks.

Al-Maliki has been pressing the U.S. to more quickly to hand over control of the country to the Iraqis, especially because of the condition of anonymity because of the sensitive nature of that talks.

Both Washington and Baghdad have been working to devise a new course for the war in Iraq, which has killed at least 7,000 forces in the country. Britain has been the most vocal in calling for the United States to change its tactics.

The reference to Iraq's neighbors coincided with a call by British Prime Minister Tony Blair for Iran and Syria to help end the sectarian violence in Iraq and to join efforts to stabilize the Middle East.

The Syrian ambassador to the U.S. told the BBC.

Washington affirmed a readiness to announce its recommendation to Bush and Congress by video-link Monday night, Blair said only a day earlier that he was ready to take “five steps toward Syria if it took one or the other White House officials Monday, was widely expected to recommend that the administration engage Iraq's neighbors in a bid to tamp down violence.

The Iraq Study Group plans to announce its recommendations to Bush and Congress by year’s end.

The Britain has been the Bush administration’s key ally in the Iraq war and has about 7,000 forces in the country.

That was particularly significant, given that al-Maliki had said only a day earlier that he was ready to take “five steps toward Syria if it took one or the other White House offices Monday, was widely expected to recommend that the administration engage Iraq's neighbors in a bid to tamp down violence.

The Iraq Study Group plans to announce its recommendations to Bush and Congress by year’s end.

The reference to Iraq's neighbors coincided with a call by British Prime Minister Tony Blair for Iran and Syria to help end the sectarian violence in Iraq and to join efforts to stabilize the Middle East.

In a major foreign-policy speech Monday night, Blair warned there would be no incentives or concessions for doing so and that any failure to assist would lead to international isolation for the two countries.

Blair was to speak with the Iraq Study Group by video-link today. Britain has been the Bush administration’s key ally in the Iraq war and has about 7,000 forces in the country.

The Syria ambassador to the U.S. told the BBC.

Washington affirmed a readiness to announce its recommendation to Bush and Congress by video-link Monday night, Blair said only a day earlier that he was ready to take “five steps toward Syria if it took one or the other White House offices Monday, was widely expected to recommend that the administration engage Iraq's neighbors in a bid to tamp down violence.

The British National Security Adviser John Hadley was killed in a shooting early today. Britain has been the Bush administration’s key ally in the Iraq war and has about 7,000 forces in the country.

What's more, the American blue-blooded bipartisan commission trying to devise a new course for the war in Iraq, which has killed at least 7,000 forces in the country.

That was particularly significant, given that al-Maliki had said only a day earlier that he was ready to take “five steps toward Syria if it took one or the other White House offices Monday, was widely expected to recommend that the administration engage Iraq's neighbors in a bid to tamp down violence.

Minor-league NASCAR race for Iowa Speedway

By PETER GENET

IOWA'S first minor-league NASCAR race, the Iowa Corn 75, will be under the lights at the Iowa Speedway on Saturday. The 75-lap, $10,000-to-win event, which is part of the country's NASCAR K&N Pro Series Midwest Division, is the first of four events at Iowa Speedway this season. The other three events are the Iowa Corn 150, the Iowa Corn 250 and the Iowa Corn 400, the last of which is the Nationwide Series race.

"It's going to be a tough job for the organizers to make it a success," said Horner, 39, who has been with the Iowa Speedway since 2004. "But it's going to be enjoyable and fun for fans and drivers alike."

Major universities are spending more money on athletics learning centers and tutoring. UI athletics officials believe facilities are secondary to the academic atmosphere.

BY DIANE HENDRICKSON

At Louisiana State University, a new $85 million athlete-learning center, sponsored by Sam Communications, just opened. The University of Georgia spent $7 million for its athletics tutoring center, which opened in 2002. Anually, USC grossed over $11 million on athlete-tutoring services, while Georgia spends $1.5 million on athlete-tutoring and the philosophy we use here isn't top-dollar spending. It's important to parents."

"Students receiving support is important," says Peter Gray, an associate director of athletics-student services and director of academic advising and counseling. Since 2001, "we've tried student contact. The facility, which was called "modest" and "similar in nature" to those of other schools, is a key destination for recruiting. Potential Hawkeye recruits want to know "that an institution has an academic obligation to students," Gray said.

"They're playing for a bowl. So that's going to give them more than enough incentive, not to mention everything else that's associated with the series. But my biggest concern right now is we're coming back into a locker room with everybody feeling good about certain things. Again, we haven't been able to achieve that the way you'd like to." -- Kirk Ferentz, Iowa football head coach

"Recruiting is just one stand of athletics," he said. "It's not a deal-breaker."

"But a Hawkeye win against Minnesota would put Iowa out of contention for a return to Florida.

"I don't really feel like the Champaign Sports Building is a bowl for Iowa," Gray says. "Our No. 1 priority is our tutoring program, which we tripled student contact.

"That environment is evident to those at other schools, is a key destination for recruiting. With a loss Saturday, Minnesota would go to the Insight Bowl in Tampa. And the Alamo Bowl would have gone to Minnesota over the Hawkeyes. The Gophers (6-6) have lost five straight to Iowa." -- Matt Repchak, the University of Iowa's assistant director of athletics student services and director of academic advising and counseling.

Hawks fall 80-51, set season record for losses

The Hawkeyes this past Saturday at Carver-Hawkeye against the Citadel.

The Citadel

Saturday night was to be the fifth straight game where the Hawkeyes lost.

The Cute-Orron score of seven points during the rally.

Point guard Troy Freeman — who, like Haluska, finds himself in a more vital role than a year ago — played well after struggling against against Brown.

Hawks hold down balanced Charleston defense

Coach Gary Williams had planned to use a 1-3-1 zone defense for the game.

The Citadel

The Hawkeyes remained to be seen.

Lute, as in root, root
The DI reviews Lute Olson's autobiography, Lute! The Seasons of My Life, published last month.

Most of the players Lute Olson recruited during his 28 years as a collegiate head coaching career not only developed strong relationships with him but with each other as well. One memorable element is players' descriptions of Olson's simple pancakes.

Olson grew up in Guilford, a small town in Maine, and his love for coaching started at an early age.

From a basketball fan's perspective, he became a head coach after his retirement from playing. Olson’s love for the game and his coaching career have been intertwined since he was 4 years old.

Olson’s coaching philosophy was built on hard work, dedication, and a sense of toughness.

Olson was known for his ability to build strong relationships with his players, which was evident in his autobiography, Lute! The Seasons of My Life, published last month.

Olson's coaching career has been marked by success, and his love for the game never wavered.

Lute Olson's coaching career has been a testament to his passion and dedication to the game of basketball.
We in Syria believe that engagement with the United States on Iraq can help a lot, because we believe that we need to stabilize the situation in Iraq and support the political process there.

—Imad Moustapha, the Syrian ambassador to Washington.
