CHINESE NEW YEAR

Revelers ring in Chinese New Year

In an IMU celebration full of diversity, the Year of the Pig is ushered in

Sarah O'Brien/The Daily Iowan

Students from the Chinese School of Iowa City perform to the song "Our Motherland is a Garden" on March 3 in the IMU. The elementary students performed as part of the Chinese New Year celebration, which commemorated the beginning of the Year of the Pig.

YEAR OF THE GOLDEN PIG

- The Chinese calendar consists of two cycles: stems and branches.
- The branches represent the 12 animals, while the lesser-known stems consist of 10 numerical divisions.
- The two cycles repeat every 60 years, when the 12th animal (the pig) and the 10th numeral match up.

The crowd cheered wildly as the break-dancers spun on their helmet-covered heads to the booming rap music.

It was yuan-xiao jie, the 15th and final day of festivities in the Chinese Lunar New Year.

Also called the Spring Festival, the Chinese New Year is observed by more than 1 billion people worldwide, and 200 of them did their celebrating in the IMU Ballroom on March 3. The UI Chinese Students and Scholars Association spent roughly three months organizing the annual Spring Festival party, which drew a substantial crowd despite frigid temperatures and the crunch of midterms.

Arguably the night's most popular act was a group of break-dancers from Iowa City and Cedar Rapids. David Saide, an Iowa City resident from the Des Moines-based group Four Spiders Crew, was practicing his moves in the Field House when he caught association Vice President Yangfan Zhang's attention.

Saide, who has been break-dancing for almost four years, contacted friends from the Hi-Cockers and the Distinctive Nobodies — other groups that also performed at the March 3 event.

A revamped voting process and five fewer days to campaign have altered this year's UI Student Government elections, which kicked off early today, providing candidates less time to appeal to students and for organizers to prepare debates.

The debates are one vehicle in which student government candidates explain their goals and views on such topics as tuition and campus safety.

"I think it would have been beneficial to have more debates, but it just seems that there wasn't enough time in the candidates' schedules this year because of the shortened campaign time," said current UISG President Peter McElligott.

In 1857, John Henry Peters stood in the chamber of the Old Capitol, signing his name to the copy of Iowa's Constitution.

A century and a half later, great-great-granddaughter Virginia Carsner watched as roughly 50 people celebrated the sesquicentennial of the historic document in the Old Capitol on Sunday.

"It's humbling to realize that my family history goes back 150 years in Iowa," said Tom Carsner, Virginia Carsner's son. "It's also humbling to know that this document has stood for that many years."

Today marks the 150th anniversary of Iowa's Constitution. Leading the celebration on Sunday were UI interim President Gary Fethke, former UI President Willard "Sandy" Boyd, and Jack Stark, the author of The Iowa State Constitution: A Reference Guide.

Breaches mar UISG race

BY COLIN BURKE

Campaign misbehavior tainted the UI Student Government race over the weekend just before today's voting.

The Student Elections Board found the A-Team and the Labor Party guilty of such infractions as early campaigning on Facebook and premature contact with student-organization leaders. Meanwhile, the College Party committed no violations, student election officials said.

Police investigate graffiti attacks

After officers reported that approximately 15 businesses have been struck with apparently related vandalism, Iowa City police are investigating the "rash" of mischief complaints.

Authorities said that a series of graffiti tags, mostly done in red spray paint, were reported between Feb. 26 and March 1 in Iowa City southwest of First Avenue and Muscatine Avenue. A common thread among the incidents was "Rebels 13," which was painted on several buildings, officers said.

Police reported that the graffiti also had personalized signatures that included, "Apache," "Spooks," "Lil Psycho," and "Playboy."

"The incidents appear to be related and were likely done by the same group of persons," Iowa City police Sgt. Troy Kelsay said in a statement.

Police have asked that any businesses that might have sold red spray paint to minors contact the department. They have also requested that anyone with knowledge about the incidents or knowledge of anyone who might go by the nickname "Lil Psycho," "Apache," or "Spooks," contact Officer Gass at 356-5275.

Woman charged with assault

UI police arrested a 41-year-old woman on March 3, alleging that she attacked her daughter in a UI residence hall.

Officers allege that Pamela Schoephorster shoved and slapped the woman several times on the Slater fourth floor. The alleged attack caused the woman swelling and redness near her left eye, according to a police complaint dated March 3.

Police said the female had lived with Schoephorster during the summer of 2006 and during December 2006 and January 2007. Details about spurred the incident or the female's current condition weren't released on Sunday. The exact time of the incident was not included on the police complaint.

Schoephorster now faces a serious misdemeanor charge of domestic-abuse assault without intent causing injury. If convicted, she could face up to one year in jail and a $1,500 fine.

Wilburn turns down immigration force

In an e-mail released March 2, dated Feb. 27, Mayor Ross Wilburn informed Marion Mayor John Neiland that Iowa City will not take part in a local Immigration and Customs Enforcement task force. An invitation to join the task force was extended by Neiland in early February.

Immigration and Customs Enforcement, a part of the Department of Homeland Security, has recently been involved in several immigration stings across the country, including a controversial sting of Swift & Co. meatpacking plants in December 2006 that spanned six states, including a plant in Marshalltown, Iowa.

To become a task force member in each community, an Iowa City police officer would have had to receive five weeks of specialized training for authorization to perform actions usually reserved for federal authorities — such as investigating immigration offenses in a local jurisdiction. These officers would form a pool of available agents who would then report to a federal agent designated for the area.

According to the e-mail, Wilburn said that if the city feels there is a local immigration problem that needs to be taken care of, the problem will be referred to the federal Immigration and Naturalization Service, which would then conduct its own investigation.

In an e-mail also released March 2, dated Feb. 6, Assistant City Manager Dale Helling said the decision to turn down task force had been made by Wilburn without formal discussion with Iowa City city councilors, adding that discussions of requests such as these do not take place unless interest is shown by three or more councilors.

Police probe reported robbery

Iowa City police are investigating a report of a robbery on early Sunday morning.

Officers said two males approached another man and invited him to a party at Pheasant Ridge Apartments at 3:46 a.m. When he arrived with the two at 2409 Pheasant Ridge, one of the alleged assailants demanded his money, authorities reported. When the man refused, the other alleged attacker grabbed money from his pocket, pushed him to the ground, and fled with the other man on foot "in an unknown direction," police said.

The male was not injured during the reported attack, authorities said.

Police said the first suspect was described as a 130-pound black male with a goatee, between 19 and 25 years old, wearing jeans, and a black hoodie. The second was described as a 185-pound black male between 19 and 25 years old, and wearing a black hat and gray jacket, officers said.

Police have asked that anyone with information about the incident contact the department at 356-5275.

Man charged with burglary, assault

A 54-year-old man could face 25 years in prison after police arrested him for allegedly breaking into a Riverside Court apartment and attacking a woman inside.

Iowa City police reported that John Capuano kicked in the door of a female's apartment while she was at home around 10 p.m. on March 2.

Once inside, he reportedly dragged the woman down stairs by her hair and choked her, according to a police complaint dated March 2. Authorities reported that when they arrived on scene, the woman had "a large area on her back that was bleeding and swollen."

A motive for the attack was not released on Sunday.

Capuano now faces a Class B felony charge of first-degree burglary, an aggravated misdemeanor charge of third-degree criminal mischief, and a serious misdemeanor charge of assault causing injury.

A Class B felony charge is punishable with up to 25 years in prison.

Man faces several charges

Iowa City police have arrested a man they allege attempted to steal money from coin-operated laundry machines on March 3.

Officers contend that Stephen Wakeman, 18, address unknown, was at an Arthur Street laundry around 9 p.m. when he tried to pry open the machines with a hammer.

When they arrived on scene, authorities reported that they discovered Wakeman had also allegedly used the hammer in an attempt to pry open a tool box in a pickup truck. Wakeman was located next to a vehicle with a hammer inside his pocket, according to a police complaint dated March 3.

Wakeman now faces an aggravated misdemeanor charge of possession of burglar's tools, two aggravated misdemeanor charges of third-degree attempted burglary, two simple misdemeanor charges of fifth-degree criminal mischief, and one simple misdemeanor charge of consumption/intoxication.

Regent panel likes sports-medicine proposal

The Board commends the proposed construction of a new complex but stresses the need for further discussion

BY AMANDA BATTAGLIA
THE DAILY IOWAN

A proposed UI facility to treat sports injuries received positive feedback during a state Board of Regents UI Hospitals and Clinics Committee meeting last week, but some regents want additional information before they discuss the project in their May meeting.

"There clearly has been a great deal of careful study given to this," said Regent Robert Downer, the panel's head. "But [the data points] should be fleshed out more."

The proposed $14 million Institute for Orthopaedics,

Sports Medicine, and Rehabilitation would be built west of the Karro Athletics Hall of Fame, just northwest of the Mormon Trek Boulevard and Melrose Avenue intersection.

During the meeting March 2, Downer asked for more specifics on how the expenses of the new building were reached.

In addition, after UIHC officials presented data from

Katen-Bahensky
UIHC director

Downer
regent

Fethke
interim president

the Health Care Advisory Board that showed 53 percent of the total profits for all hospital outpatient branches are provided by sports-medicine services, Downer said health officials should evaluate the proposed center's competitiveness, because hospitals must compete to stay open, just as any other businesses.

Donna Katen-Bahensky, the UIHC director, told regents she had more information but didn't include it in the presentation because it was a shortened version of the data.

"This is a very exciting opportunity for us," she said, noting she would provide regents with that information.

She said the facility would be ideal with the increased demand for immediate access to health care.

"As athletes get injured, they would have a much easier time after the game to just come in there," she said.

The burden of finding parking and navigating the UIHC would be lifted with the easily accessible building, Katen-Bahensky said.

Interim UI President Gary Fethke was pleased with the building's patient-oriented care.

"It's an ideal clinic for where we're located in the state to attract people here," he said.

UIHC Senior Assistant Director Shane Cerone said the goal of the 27,000-square-foot facility would be to provide high-quality patient care in a convenient location.

"In doing so, we will be able to exceed the expectation of our patients," Cerone said.

The combination of services offered to the public in a single location would include on-site imaging and rehabilitation services, orthopedic surgeons in women's health, and primary-care physicians.

"In the past 12 years, it's one of the most exceptional initiatives I have worked with," Cerone said.

Regents plan to discuss the new facility at their May 1-2 meeting in Iowa City.

Panel lists qualities sought in UI president

Hadley's list provides basis for UI presidential qualifications

BY TARYN DEUTSCH
THE DAILY IOWAN

Topping the list of crucial qualities for the next UI president is that he or she be an intellectual leader — someone who has a distinct curiosity for academics and applies that inquisitiveness in guiding the university.

The UI presidential-search committee zoned in on a list of qualities the next university president must possess during its weekly meeting on March 2. The list, created by committee member Leonard Hadley, specified seven characteristics, but English Professor Ed Folsom suggested adding the quality of being an intellectual leader to the list.

"The university presidents who are most respected nationally and in their own institutions are those who articulate an intellectual vision to guide the institution," he said.

Committee head David Johnsen agreed, saying that intellectual leadership will make a prospective president more credible with university administrators and professors.

"This must be at the top of the list," added Linda Maxson, the dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. "That is the No. 1 most important qualification."

Other key attributes include the ability to articulate a compelling vision for the UI, being able to delegate proper tasks, guiding faculty without meddling, exhibiting crisis-management skills, and leading and enjoying fundraising.

This list will guide the committee as it forms criteria to evaluate the candidates, Johnsen said.

Epidemiology Professor Elizabeth Chrischilles said she would like a separate list of values that a prospective president should possess.

"This list focuses on attributes, but I think that it would also be important to make a list of certain values that a future president should have," she said. "We need to differentiate between the two to ensure that the candidates' values mesh with those of the university."

There will be a link to the revised list of attributes on the presidential-search website.

In other business, Johnsen said the committee has received a "very strong" response to its request for recommendations and nominations.

"We are still looking through those but hope to soon be able to disclose an approximate number of candidates," said Johnsen, the dean of the UI dental school.

The panel is still aiming to submit the four names to the state Board of Regents by July 1, he said.

The committee also discussed inviting area lawmakers to a future meeting to participate in the weekly talk. The new committee was impaneled earlier this year to find a replacement for former UI President David Skorton, who left in June 2006 to take the helm at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y.

Constitution fêted

CONSTITUTION

"The event is an opportunity to educate Iowans about significance of state government in an era when the focus is more on specific governmental institutions," Boyd said.

Stark compared the Constitutions of Iowa and Wisconsin to better explain the uniqueness of the Hawkeye State's document. In particular, Iowa's version allows for separation of powers and has a limited reach.

"I don't want to state a preference for control or flexibility," Stark said. "It all depends on what the state needs, and I think that [Iowa's Constitution] is a success."

To close the celebration, the A. Craig Baird Debate Forum re-enacted a debate from the 1857 Constitutional Convention. UI graduate students Niko Poulakos and Jason Regnier sparred over whether

Iowa City should remain the state capital or the capital should move to Des Moines.

David Hingstman, director of the debate program, said this topic was chosen because tensions remain over whether the state capital should have been moved to the more central location.

"We thought that this was a way to make the debate relative to contemporary issues, while still focusing on a historical basis," Hingstman said.

Another important issue concerning Iowa's Constitution was the state's boundary lines and its acceptance of statehood.

This celebration is part of the Cornerstones exhibit, the first exhibition at the Old Capitol Museum since its remodeling following a November 2001 fire. The exhibit emphasizes the importance of the Constitution to the UI because it established Iowa City as the site for the state university.

"Overall, this was a great

FACTS ABOUT THE IOWA CONSTITUTION

- The 1846 Constitution was lost; no copy of it remains.
- Iowa rejected statehood in 1845 because the state lines extended too far north. Statehood was accepted once the 43rd-parallel boundary was established.
- Other states, such as Ohio and Pennsylvania, also moved their state capital to more centrally located cities.
- Iowa's Constitution is missing four main clauses when compared with Wisconsin's Constitution: water, uniformity, event to show students and residents the importance of the 150-year-old document on Iowa," Fethke said. "It is fun to go back and think about similar discussions in this same building 150 years ago."

Hillary: Focus on my qualifications

ZBY TODD DVORAK

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DUBUQUE — New York Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton, just hours from honoring the bravery of America's civil-rights activists, said voters should focus on her qualifications, not her sex.

Asked Sunday night whether America was ready to elect a woman president, Rodham Clinton repeated the question.

"Will we ever elect a woman?" she asked. "I'm not running as a woman. I'm running because I think I'm the best qualified and most experienced person for president."

Rodham Clinton spoke to a crowd of 1,300 people who crowded shoulder-to-shoulder in an atrium and second-floor balcony on the Dubuque University campus.

Earlier in the day, she had joined another Democratic challenger, Sen. Barack Obama of Illinois, in Alabama to honor civil-rights activists who were attacked 42 years ago during a march to protest policies that kept blacks from voting.

During her 45-minute address in this eastern Iowa city, Rodham Clinton touched on her campaign themes of universal health care, bolstering financial aid for college students, and restoring America's good standing abroad.

UISG ELECTIONS

UISG voting begins

UISG PREVIEW

In addition, the voting process for the UISG elections is different from than in previous years.

UI students will be able to vote for their favorite ticket by going to the ISIS website and clicking on a link that will take them to an outside website run by Votenet Solutions, a professional voting website based in Washington, D.C.

"The system was changed because there was a lot of voter confusion and it is a simpler system, because [Votenet] specializes in voting," said Jack Sodak, the Student Elections Board director.

The election board tried an "instant runoff" voting style last year, when students ranked candidates according to preference, Sodak said. But this year, students will go back to the previous method — simply voting for one ticket.

Voting changes aside, candidates this year had less time to garner student support — only 10 days to campaign, as opposed to the usual 15 days. While the presidential hopefuls' feelings varied, the overall opinion was that there are both positives and negatives to shortening the campaign.

"I was prepared for the shorter campaign time, because [Student Elections Board] wanted my opinion because I ran last year," said Atul Nakhasi, UI junior and A-Team presidential candidate. "It worked out well, because it is less of a burden on candidates."

But the College Party would have changed a few campaigning maneuvers if given more time, such as speaking during class lectures, spacing out campaign events, and publicizing its events more.

"I felt like we were at a slight disadvantage, because I was running against experienced candidates," said Barrett Anderson, the College Party presidential hopeful.

Anderson, a UI junior, said he had asked the Student Elections Board if parties were allowed to speak to students in lecture halls but didn't get a response until March 3.

Because voting began today, Anderson said, his party didn't have enough time to speak to students, though his opponents had been doing so all week.

Labor Party leader Mark Anthony Dingbaum said the shorter campaign time was convenient in terms of money, grades, and health issues, but there were setbacks as well.

"It is important that students are educated on issues and know what issues are important to them," the UI junior said. "It is very difficult for students to get to know the candidates in such a short amount of time."

Dingbaum said the shorter campaign time was detrimental to voters, and he will see how it affected students based on voter turnout.

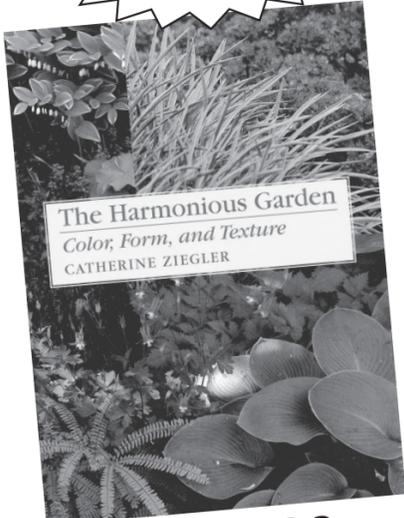

The UISG winners will be announced at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the IMU Hubbard Commons.

A slice of RUSSIA

A taste of Russia is served with a side of Tchaikovsky and culture, but no vodka

Lindsey Walters/The Daily Iowan

Keri George (left) and Erin Vaughn serve borscht (beet and beef stew) during a Russian dinner in the University Capitol Centre on Sunday evening. The dinner taught those in attendance about Russian norms while enjoying a meal with blinchikis (pancakes with cheese), torts krémom (cake with cream), and other Russian food.

BY MATT NELSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

Thickly cut slices of tomato and cucumber are served with blinchiki, a Russian crepe made of pancakes rolled with cheese. To the left of each place setting is a "stolichny salat," or capital salad, made of potatoes, peas, carrots, and hard-boiled eggs.

And at the center of each table is a plate of dark bread, "critical" to the meal, said Diana Davies, the director of UI International Programs. Davies was one of the organizers of Sunday night's Global Etiquette dinner event featuring authentic Russian cuisine and a chance for UI students to partake in Slavic culture.

"If this were a real Russian dinner, we'd be serving vodka," Davies said, laughing. "But we have to use our imagination."

Each table is shepherded through the meal and lessons about Russian culture by a person with knowledge of the country's traditions, coming from the edge of Siberia to the outskirts of Moscow and the eastern part of St. Petersburg.

Sasha Gorbach educated his table on dining customs, inherited from Europe when Peter the Great modernized the nation in an attempt to change Russia's status as "barbarians" in the eyes of Europe.

— Racheal Bland, senior marketing major who organized the Global Etiquette dinner series

Lessons such as never to give a woman a dozen roses — only funerals deserve even-numbered bouquets — are just a few taught to participants, along with the proper way to toast: a shot of vodka downed in one gulp, especially if you're a man, Davies said.

The event also featured the experiences of Charles Crawley, a Texan technical writer who traveled to St. Petersburg for just two weeks but came away with a wealth of experience.

"These Russians know a lot more about us than we know about them," Crawley said, hefting a Russian nesting doll modeled after the Chicago Cubs.

Racheal Bland, a senior marketing major, organized the Global Etiquette dinner series, which started with India on Feb. 25; it will continue with China on March 11.

"I realized that there are so many instances where I graduate where I'll be in cultures I know nothing about," she said, describing her desire to give students a place to experience other cultures both in a formal and informal setting.

The dinners — Sunday's was sponsored by the American Marketing Association and Rockwell Collins — have been well-received by Iowa City and the UI, Bland said.

"We've had people call and want to bring their children to this," she said. "Everyone has shown interest."

ISU groups withdraw from blood drive because of gay ban

AMES (AP) — Some student groups will not participate in an annual blood drive this week at Iowa State University to protest federal rules that prevent some gay men from donating.

Up to 500 blood donations are expected to be lost as a result of the decision by Greek Week officials, said organizers of the Ames blood drive, the largest student-run blood drive in Iowa.

The loss of that much blood comes at a time when Iowa blood banks are already seeing supplies run short because of recent storm-related cancellations of blood drives and fewer walk-in donors.

Student organizers had hoped to get 1,700 usable blood donations in this year's drive.

The blood drive, scheduled to begin today and run through Friday, has in past years awarded points to participating fraternities and sororities. The chapter with the highest participation has received a trophy, said ISU senior Kevin Newman of Roselle, Ill., who is a member of Sigma Pi fraternity.

Organizers of Greek Week decided to stop awarding points for fraternities' and sororities' participation in the blood drive.

Newman said removing support for the blood drive is the wrong way to make a political statement.

"I think it's borderline disgusting," he said. "We've chosen political correctness over the well-being of people who are seriously injured."

Members of Delta Lambda Phi, a year-old fraternity for gay and bisexual men, complained that the federal rules would not allow them to take part in a Greek Week competition, prompting the protest.

College Party right fit for UISG

UI Student Government presidential elections will be decided today and Tuesday by online-only voting through ISIS. The Daily Iowan Editorial Board endorses the College Party's presidential and vice-presidential candidates Barrett Anderson and Carole Peterson by a 4-3 vote.

Our support for the College Party is a result of the realistic ideas Anderson and Peterson put forth as well as their desire to address continued and mounting concerns about the accessibility and transparency of our student government.

The College Party largely touts initiatives that seek to reach students who may be getting lost in the busy university shuffle. One such issue deserving immediate attention concerns keeping the UISG website regularly updated and, more importantly, integrating updates and links with other UI websites, such as that of the IMU, to allow for better access for students.

Recently, the rift in the student senate and the constant internal reforming have given way to concerns that it may be time for new blood. What may be seen as a weakness in the College Party by some — its lack of direct UISG ties — is seen by this Editorial Board as a chance for a fresh start for this embattled position. Both Anderson and Peterson still have numerous other organizational ties on campus, which will serve them well to address a bevy of student interests that need and deserve attention.

The College Party's focus on student life is also an area that impresses us. Decreasing the maximum number of finals in a day from three to two and forming a Student Consultant Corps that would help students navigate university bureaucracy are realistic goals that could positively affect students' experiences at the university.

One of the College Party's top campaign issues, and one that all three parties have aptly targeted as an important issue, is increasing campus safety. Feasible ideas include continued lobbying of law enforcement — both campus and city — for patrols around academic buildings, not just downtown, and using the student liaison to lobby for late-night bus routes.

Finally, we were glad to see that the College Party has a specific platform addressing how it plans to interact with state legislators and, specifically, the state Board of Regents.

Each party's candidates had their faults, but all proved themselves impressive leaders genuinely interested in bringing important issues to the forefront. The Editorial Board hopes that, regardless of the election's outcome, the losing parties will continue to champion student issues, while the winners should plan to absorb many of the great ideas that have come about in this short election season.

Regardless of the candidates you support, it is important for all students to vote and ensure that the party that does emerge victorious recognizes its constituents' active voices and works in the coming year to implement the promises made along the campaign trail.

Legalize 'fair share'

It's great that the issue of paid leave for editorial fathers — a key fairness issue — has been addressed through union negotiations. Great because it results from talks between management and those who will actually be using the leave, it will probably be much more user-friendly than a unilateral management edict.

But let's think about those talks. The costs of negotiating a contract such as this are huge for the union, both in members' hard-earned dues and in the stress on those members elected to sit at the bargaining table, often till 3 a.m., hammering out critical details.

By law, this important benefit would be enjoyed even by the dads who don't pay union dues to help underwrite negotiation costs. Wouldn't the honorable thing be for those fathers to forego the benefit? But they won't. Just like they never refuse to accept the wage increases AFSCME gets for them every year.

You can see why a workforce so divided between those who pay the freight and those who ride free on the freight train might find it hard to be the harmonious team UI leaders want. And you can also see why employers gladly sign off on "fair share" contracts in the 28 states where it is legal to assess nonmembers a fee for the union services they enjoy.

Until fair share is legal in Iowa, I suggest that workers who enjoy union benefits without paying any dues or fair-share fee donate all of their union-negotiated increases back to the union or to low-wage workers elsewhere who would love to have a union negotiate for them.

Roberta Till-Retz
Iowa City resident

Everywhere a 'politics zone'

On Feb. 26, 11 activists, including two Iraq war vets, a former Catholic priest, and me, were arrested in front of Sen. Charles Grassley's office in Cedar Rapids. We came to demand an audience with Grassley and request that he defund the war in Iraq. We would not leave until Grassley spoke with us or the police arrested us.

We participated in a national campaign dubbed "The Occupation Project," in which peace groups across the country are occupying the offices of congressional representatives supporting the occupation of Iraq. We did this because Grassley has used his position to silence discussion of the nonbinding troop resolution and continue pouring resources into a failing strategy in Iraq.

In the article covering the event, Greg Baker, the president of the UI College Republicans, made the statement "No politics goes through that office. They're not really going to be able to do anything there." Who is Baker to declare Grassley's office a no-politics zone? That office is one of the ways for constituents to reach their senator; it exists to serve the people of Iowa. If our senator's office is a "no-politics zone," then we made it one.

Grassley's decision to not debate the nonbinding resolution opposing the troop surge is undemocratic and inexcusable. U.S. citizens are dissatisfied with the handling of the war in Iraq. The once stable country is in the middle of increasing sectarian violence, and our "coalition" allies are pulling out. This country needs a new strategy, and not discussing this is a disservice to Grassley's constituents.

We spent 24 hours in jail, with nothing but orange jump suits, blankets, and cold concrete to sleep on. We put our future careers at risk with trespassing on a federal building no in our police records. We are not done. The UI Antiwar Committee has experienced a "surge" in membership. We have more than 20 members regularly attending meetings. We are sending a bus to a national protest at the Pentagon on March 17, holding our own march here in Iowa City on March 20, and we will have a benefit concert at the Picador today.

We are riding the crest of a growing peace movement and intend to end U.S. occupation of Iraq.

Ryan Merz

Labor Party will work for students

I have been active in student government for the last four years and have served as a senator for two of those years. When I decided to run for another year as senator, I was offered a reputation for many people on the other tickets, I chose the Labor Party.

I made this choice for many reasons, but primarily because Mark Anthony Dingbaum is the only candidate with UISG experience. As executive of the Undergraduate Activities Senate, he has garnered a reputation for motivating and encouraging senators. Under him, we will not only have a good leader, a strong and active senate. He will value the views of senators because he was one. Furthermore, his years of experience mean that the daunting learning curve any new administration faces will be dramatically shorter. He knows the legislative processes and the office work that needs to be done, and he has established working relationships with many of the relevant administrators and UI officials.

Finally, his ideas are realistic and achievable, and they would serve to make the UI a better place. Every year, candidates promise the moon but often times deliver on only a few of the things they ran on. I do not believe that will be the case with this ticket. I think it is likely that the candidates will achieve even more than they promised.

So this year make your vote work hard, support the Labor Party.

Hire the A-Team

There usually comes a time in a person's life when her or his elected representatives are not adequately fulfilling their duties as public servants. We have reached that point in student government. Out with the old, and in with the new.

The current student senate has been in chaos; it needs fresh, real, and sensible ideas to be put forth by truly motivated students, and that is why everyone should hire the A-Team. Offering community-service alternatives in place of PAULAs, creating a student safety escort service, presenting discount taxi services, making a landlord accountability database, and publishing course evaluations are all 100 percent doable. I am in particular amazed at the amount of research and references given for each of the above concerns by the A-Team. The members have done their work.

In the end, if you want a real student government instead of a WHO-ISG, there is only one way to go: Vote A-Team!

Paying the adult price

College, we are told, is our first chance to freely experience the world, away from the prying eyes and overbearing attitudes of our parents. Finally, we can express ourselves in ways we see most fit and construct our lives the way we wish.

As long as we get to live on the parents' dough, of course.

A not insignificant number of college students rely on their parents to pay the way through their first four years of alleged adulthood. The obvious question is, of course: How mature are we if we are not financially independent?

Learning to look elsewhere than mom and dad for a steady money supply is one of the last hurdles to clear before reaching adulthood. For some, it happens sooner — and while they may not recognize it, their parents are doing them a huge favor.

Responsibility is inevitable, and accepting it earlier is a blessing in disguise.

Should we consider ourselves adults if we constantly ask mom and dad for spending money? Surely, immediately and completely separating ourselves financially from the 'rents after setting foot on campus is going a bit far. But how long can we maintain an air of independence if we are not responsible for our own financial situations?

There is certainly a hierarchical system of egregious offenses. Having parents pay PAULA tickets seems the most disgusting to me. I've always felt that if one is to consciously drink underage in a public environment, the consequences should be fully understood. Granted, I'm bitterly opposed to the 19-ordinance (surprise!) and have never received a drinking ticket, so I suppose that makes me a mature — or square — student.

Many college students are training to become alcoholics, and while alcohol abuse is bad enough, subsidizing the growing addiction with your parents' money is worse.

But if your parents are going to be the ones footing the bill, why not bring them along and have them order drinks for you? What's better than doing numerous shots of tequila with mom and dad?

Just for fun: Bringing your parents into bars is creepy. Don't do it. Please.

But the phenomenon of parents paying for drinking tickets is only one symptom of a much deeper disease. Higher education is increasingly taken for granted by the well-off. College, it seems, is basically the inevitable and sequential step after high school for suburban or privately schooled individuals. But for a great many Americans, higher education is not merely "the next step." It takes substantial effort to overcome the roadblocks constructed by America's very real class system.

Receiving a free education because of the comparatively deeper pockets of some of our parents is a mockery of the meritocracy America loves to pride itself on. The youth of wealthier backgrounds appear to believe college, a long and successful career, and a pension large enough to travel the world will be given merely by writing their names on the paper.

Great generations are not made on assumptions.

Financial assistance from the parents is legitimate, to an extent. A college student working part-time at a public library and writing for the campus newspaper (I wonder who that could be) is not going to make enough money to cover living expenses. But at some point, we must all take our finances into our own hands, perhaps by doing our own taxes, taking out loans, or investing in the market.

Most importantly, the recognition that money does not grow on trees is essential for our futures. Money is placed in a new context when it's availability is not certain. Going out four nights a week wouldn't seem nearly as fun if the money spent for that 11th rum and coke were coming out of our own bank accounts.

On second thought, you won't remember it, anyway.

This country no longer asks for sacrifice — and especially not from its youth. It is obvious change will not come from above. Our policymakers are hell-bent on avoiding any action that would cost them votes. Restoring a national work ethic will require acceptance of responsibility and admitting our failures — and we should like it no other way.

And up that $300. ■

Gender-role dancing

BY SUSAN ELGIN
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Two male dancers stand on the stage, clad in ties, Oxford jackets, and slacks. Three women enter wearing tight-fitting shirts and skirts. A sixth dancer appears, wearing an Oxford jacket and skirt. How does the audience react?

That dancer, UI student Christine Hands, is anxious to find out.

The third-year dance major is studying the "gaze theory," a conjecture first developed in the 1960s that quantifies observation into "passive" and "active" roles. Male audience members actively "gaze" at female dancers, who are placed in the "passive" role because they are being objectified. Hands' choreographed dance, which will be presented today at 7:30 p.m. in North Hall's Space/Place, will challenge the theory and, if Hands has her way, even make a few members of the audience squirm.

"[The dance] presents these stereotypical images of masculinity and femininity and breaks them down," she said, pounding her fists on the table to represent aggressive male choreography. "Is this how society really functions, or how we want it to function? We're not ready to face those complications."

Hands' piece, "Tease," is meant to do just that: provoke the audience and challenge current cultural expressions, including dance and cinema, where the gaze theory originated.

"This is perhaps accurate of what we expect but inaccurate of what we really are," the 21-year-old said. "It simplifies gender and doesn't represent how our society functions."

Hands, who has danced since she was 3, said she is surrounded by female dancers, mostly her peers, and male dancers, who typically hold positions of power, such as UI professors. This is then reflected on stage, with the men in athletic, strong positions, while women use "flowy" and suspended movements that reflect femininity. Men are "doers," picking the women up and carrying them around the stage.

"Tease" aims to break through these stereotypes in dance and encourage a looser, shifting definition of gender. Hands challenges gaze theory by staging women peering at other female dancers, and men gazing upon other men — and she hopes, women audience members will actively watch male dancers and be OK with it.

"I'm mixing up who's watching whom," she said. "Do I want to be seeing this? Is this right?"

Rain Ross, a UI graduate student in dance, is studying the gaze theory and the problems inherently presented in it for her thesis project.

"It points out why gender roles are bad, but it negates the female's gaze of desire, and I have serious issues with that," the 29-year-old said. "Women can have an active gaze of desire without having to step into that male role."

Because gender and sexuality are inextricably intertwined, Hands said, there is a fear of presenting homosexuality onstage, and that stigma is reflected in choreography by placing men in ultra-macho positions — a common practice she questions. In "Tease," two men dance together in a sexual and masculine manner — two characteristics the gaze theory states cannot exist as one.

"A guy looking at another guy is emasculating," Ross said. "It doesn't negate homosexuality, but it forces it into preconceived notion of gender roles, and that each relationship must have gender roles."

But Hands contends that society's adherence to strict gender roles is changing, albeit slowly.

"We are still not entirely able to escape the ideas of gender that are presented," she said. "More contemporary dance deals better with it than ballets, but not fast enough."

More than a CHAIN GANG

Probably best known as 'the movie where the chick gets chained up,' Black Snake Moan is actually not as venomous as you might expect

Let's get this out of the way: Samuel L. Jackson is a badass. Of this there is no question. He's been granted the kind of mythical pass that allows him to make movies as terrible as The Man and get away with it, cred intact. Producers green-lighted something called Snakes on a Plane, thanks to his mere name and faith attached to the project.

Now comes Jackson's second serpentine flick, the deep-fried non-romance of Black Snake Moan, which, while not having a fraction of either the buzz or the adrenaline of that other reptile movie, acquits itself fairly well nonetheless. Written and directed by Craig Brewer, most recently of Hustle and Flow, it's a film that has soul, even if it lacks sense every now and then.

Taking place in the flat-out illogical time span of a week, Moan manages to encompass the prospective redemption of several characters, all set around a town supposedly located in Tennessee but really taking place in every Southern caricature since Flannery O'Connor. Rae (Christina Ricci, looking tiny in every respect) is afflicted with a so-called "sickness" causing her to become sexually insatiable — a problem usually solved by her loving boyfriend Ronnie (Justin Timberlake), who has recently departed for Marine Corps basic training.

grizzled) is also dealing with a departure, be it one with a bit less glory attached — his wife has recently left him. That Rae soon washes up on his doorstep is no secret. Nor is the fact that, in order to cure her of what "Laz" sees as a spiritual illness, he takes matters into his own hands and chains her to his radiator.

One more time: He puts a heavy iron chain around her waist and secures her to the radiator. Just so we're clear. OK.

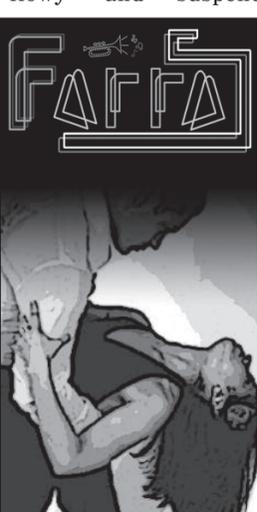

Thankfully, what could have potentially been a groaningly obvious exercise in sexism is avoided, for the most part. Rae certainly makes no secret of her skanky behavior, but the true strength of the film isn't in a half-naked Wednesday Addams but rather in the extraordinarily good supporting work done by John Cothran Jr. and S. Epatha Merkerson. Even the rookie Timberlake turns in an impressive dramatic turn, his one flaw perhaps being that he seems almost too normal in the overstated landscape of things.

Jackson, it's almost beside the point to say, owns every scene he's in. He's truly a magnetic screen presence. Learning to play honest-to-god blues guitar for the role was an astute choice — the scenes in which he cradles the instrument are about as sexualized as Lazarus gets, and it's more than enough. His relationship with Ricci is refreshingly direct and honest, and it's a pity Rae's character is scarcely developed beyond a traumatic childhood and an infantilized nature.

Brewer clearly means to push buttons with Black Snake Moan, despite being somewhat coy about his gender and ethnic notions — some film student in the future will have a field day with the subtext here. Yet Moan never truly ends up making the dramatic statement it seems to be leading up to — the biggest cover-up of all, beneath the chains and the grit, is that it's truly a standard odd-couple tale, complete with heart-tugging and all.

But a recent group e-mail may not have complied with election laws.

An internal message, sent via the listserv of the UI College Republicans on March 3, said the group voted to support the College Party.

The election board's laws allow for student groups to support UISG campaigns but with certain stipulations. A candidate must first submit a copy of the e-mail to the election board along with a Student Organization Certification Letter completed by the group's primary representative.

UI College Republicans Chairman Greg Baker said on Sunday that he didn't fill out that form, but he claimed responsibility for the e-mail.

"I didn't know I broke any rules," he said.

Election-board member Ryan Denman said that although the judicial body has not received the e-mail or a letter from Baker, a complaint must be delivered to his organization to be considered an alleged infraction.

"There's been no complaint filed — thus, there's no alleged violation," he said.

College Party presidential candidate Barrett Anderson said he had no knowledge of the e-mail and was not claiming support from the UI College Republicans.

"UISG should be completely non-partisan," he said on Sunday.

He also emphasized his efforts to maintain a clean campaign, telling other candidates to inform him of any violations by his volunteers.

The other two UISG campaigns were officially cited on March 2 for wrongdoing.

Denman and fellow election-board member Bryce Carlson said the Labor Party was guilty of campaigning prior to official date of 5 p.m. on Feb. 23.

The officials said Mark Anthony Dingbaum's Facebook wall showed someone had written in support of his candidacy for UISG president on Feb. 19 at 11:19 p.m. This qualified as campaign material that supports or opposes a candidate under student election laws, officials said.

Dingbaum did not return calls for comment on Sunday.

Meanwhile, the A-Team was found guilty of e-mailing UI student-organization leaders before the election committee certified the campaign's petition, which requires at least 500 valid student signatures.

Officials said presidential candidate Atul Nakhasi contacted the individuals before Feb. 21, when the petitions were approved. The A-Team was also found guilty of early campaigning, as an event endorsing student senate candidates was posted on Facebook on Feb. 17.

Nakhasi said those are minor infractions and right now, his main focus is on the campaign.

UISG voting started early today.

NEW YEAR

Performer Chuy Renteria said the Spring Festival party was a good example of cultural diversity.

"I like it in Iowa City, to see the different things," the member of Distinctive Nobody said. "I see how much culture there is in Iowa City."

From traditional Chinese opera and tai-chi to an aspiring "American Idol" auditioner belting out one half of "A Whole New World," the event drew a variety of local and non-local talent of all ethnicities and ages.

"The strength is in the interaction between East and West," said Weidong Xu, a UI graduate research assistant who came from Zhejiang province.

"There's mostly Chinese singing, but there are performers from other countries, too."

One such act was UI freshman Hee Won Ryu, who read a piece about improving communication and friendship between South Korea and China.

The event not only gave some international students a reminder of home but also provided the local community a glimpse of the traditions of Chinese New Year, though there was no traditional yuan-xiao — a sweet rice ball stuffed with red bean paste — or dumplings at this year's event.

But the partiers had plenty to digest aside from the delicacies.

Honoring a Chinese culture, the color red — traditionally representing good fortune — was liberally used throughout the event. Chinese calligraphy spelled out "Happy New Year" on red paper, crimson-colored lanterns hung over red velvet stage curtains, and many in the audience wore festive red clothing. Many in the crowd came from outside the Chinese and the UI communities to immerse themselves in the festivities.

"You can see a movie any weekend, but this is once a year," said Iowa City resident Marianne Stratton, who brought her daughter and her friends, who are in seventh grade, to the event. "They're in their own world at seventh grade, so this is something different for them to see."

Peevler, now 20, has competed in both of the team's spring competitions; he finished tied for 66th at Wexford Plantation Intercollegiate on Feb. 27.

In surprising comparison with his team-leading 74.48 scoring average his freshman season, Peevler has recorded only one score below 80 in six rounds this spring — a second-round 79 at the Wexford.

While the men's team is slated to compete at the Mission Inn Collegiate beginning March 10, it is unknown how the charge will affect Peevler's playing status. The Keokuk, Iowa, native has competed in the No. 4 position both events this spring.

EAST LANSING, Mich. — The "Iowa Fight Song" blared at the Big Ten championships, and the Hawkeyes crowned their first individual champion since 2004.

Iowa's Mark Perry claimed the top perch of the 165-pound bracket after winning three matches in a row. The black-and-gold faithful applauded the lanky junior as he stood on the medal stand, marinating in the satisfaction of his crown. Perry is the Hawkeyes' first individual Big Ten champion since Cliff Moore accomplished the feat three years ago. "That's huge for us," Iowa head coach Tom Brands said. "It's huge for Mark Perry and the University of Iowa."

The Iowa wrestling team parlayed a few surprise performances into a jump from fifth to third in the standings Sunday, improving on last year's sixth-place finish. The Hawkeyes finished the tournament with 91 team points. All eight wrestlers who were still alive entering the last session qualified for the national championships, scheduled for March 15 in Detroit.

The Hawkeyes won nine of 12 matches during Sunday's competition but never threatened to take the title, while conference powerhouse Minnesota quickly turned the tournament into a race for second after dominating the field. The Gophers racked up 156 points — 56.5 more than second-place Wisconsin — and crowned four champions.

Minnesota couldn't mask the standout performance of Perry, though. The Stillwater, Okla., native outscored his

All right, fine — maybe it's not a complete resurrection of greatness, but the Hawkeyes' first individual champion in three years and third-place team finish at the Big Ten championships are accomplishments worth howling over.

"I think it snowballed a little bit," said head coach Tom Brands. "When you're winning, people get fired up. Teammates get fired up. It's important for the future of our program; it's important for our young guys. Most important is they're going to the next tournament."

The Iowa baseball team is off to another hot start.

The Hawkeyes scored 12 unanswered runs to earn a 12-8 win over No. 7 Nebraska in eight innings on Sunday at the Stetson Tournament in De Land, Fla. If the Cornhuskers beat Stetson today, Iowa will be the tournament champions after beating Notre Dame, 8-1, on March 3.

"This was a big win for our program," Iowa coach Jack Dahm said. "We just kind of stayed around until we got them into their bullpen, and then we got some momentum and held on to it."

Against Nebraska, with the game tied in the bottom of the eighth inning, Dusty Napoleon hit a three-run double for Iowa's first lead of the game. The Hawkeyes fell behind, 8-0, in the fifth inning, but scored five runs in the seventh and eighth innings to complete the comeback.

For the weekend, outfielder Travis Sweet went 6-for-8 with four RBIs, five runs scored, and a home run. Steve Turnbull (1-0) and Mike Schurz (1-0) picked up the victories for the Hawkeyes.

Iowa (3-1) doesn't play again until March 12 at Fresno State for a three-game set. A sweep would give the Hawkeyes their best start in more than 20 years.

BY DAN PARR
THE DAILY IOWAN

After watching his team's six-point lead shrink to two in a 73-second span, Steve Alford told a referee he wanted a time-out with 52 ticks left on the game clock against Illinois on March 3 in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The Hawkeyes hovered around his white dry-erase board as he sketched the play he thought would secure a victory. It was designed to create an open shot for either Adam Haluska or Tyler Smith — two scorers on a team on which finding a third option is about as easy as picking a new president for the UI.

Alford's plan was subject to some improvisation from Mike Henderson, fitting for a guy whose mother thought he should give up hoops for the piano as a kid.

On Senior Day at packed Carver-Hawkeye, Henderson delivered a knockout punch after the time-out, hitting a short-jumper in the paint while fouled by Illinois center Shaun Pruitt. The Waterloo native connected on the free-throw attempt, placing Iowa ahead by five with 31 seconds remaining. Henderson scored Iowa's final six points in the 60-53 win.

Tony Freeman, Henderson's fellow point guard who tallied 13 points and scored a couple of key 3-pointers late in the second half, was there to scoop him off the ground after the win-sealing shot and gave him a squeeze that seemed to last for close to a full minute.

"That's my boy," Freeman said. "Mike and I are like brothers. When he makes shots, when I make shots, we're happy for each other."

"I told him I loved him. Good shot. I love you, so many times."

Henderson finished with 11 points, and Haluska dropped 21 in the pair's farewell to regular-season play in Carver.

The Hawkeyes improved to 17-13 (9-7 Big Ten) and clinched a fourth-seed and first-round bye at this weekend's Big Ten Tournament in Chicago. Iowa will face Purdue on Friday at approximately 1:30 p.m.

Haluska — who became the first Hawkeye since Andre Woolridge in 1997 to win the Big Ten scoring title — and Henderson were honored after the game with a highlight video on the scoreboard. Both spoke to the Carver crowd.

As Henderson stood flanked by his mother and brother, Haluska fought back tears in his farewell speech. His fiancée, Kendra Bengtson, and grandparents were in attendance, but his parents were

No. 59 Hawks plunk Gophers

BY BOBBY LOESCH
THE DAILY IOWAN

Over .500, undefeated in the Big Ten, and a week away from spring break. So far, so good.

If the 59th-ranked Iowa women's team (5-4, 1-0) wants to replicate or better last season's second-place finish in the conference, it took a step in the right direction on Sunday in defeating 67th-ranked Minnesota (6-4, 0-1) by a convincing 5-2 margin.

"It's going to be more difficult, and there are going to be a lot more close matches," junior Jacqueline Lee said. "But we're a scrappy team, and we're fighters, so I know it can happen."

The Hawkeyes, who ground out a 4-3 road win against Minnesota last season, avoided its typical close-match syndrome by simply taking the Golden Gophers out of the meet before they ever had a chance to be in it. Iowa jumped ahead in doubles play with a 8-3 win by Jacqueline Lee and Milica Veselinovic over Ashley Schellhas and Tijana Kiprivica in the No. 1 spot.

Merel Beelen and Hillary Mintz, Iowa's No. 2 team, complemented each other well in taking the doubles point, 8-4, over Ida Malmberg and Danielle Mosseau, but not without controversy.

Up 7-4, Beelen and Mintz were playing ad-in — one point away from victory — when the match official accused Malmberg of shouting an obscenity. Although Malmberg contested the call, she ultimately lost the argument, and in turn, lost the match because of an automatic point penalty.

"It was one of those things where I can leave saying, 'Well, OK, that never happened before,'" Mintz said.

Kayla Berry and Kelcie Klockenga made doubles a clean sweep with a win over Karina Chiarelli and Lindsay Risebrough in the No. 3 spot.

GymHawk comeback falls short

In its last home meets of the season, the 24th-ranked women's gymnastics team posted an ugly win over Southern Utah, fell into a deep hole to start competition against Iowa State and Minnesota, then failed to send the seniors out with a win

BY DIANE HENDRICKSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa women's gymnastics team has taken advantage of opponents' numerous falls in events this season, including during a win against Southern Utah on March 2. On Sunday, however, No. 10 Iowa State and No. 28 Minnesota benefited from the Hawkeyes' disastrous start on the first event.

The Hawkeyes bounced back after three falls on vault — two from seasoned athletes — to open competition. After falling into the crater of a point deep, the squad posted its highest team scores on floor and beam.

Still, the deficit was too much to overcome. The GymHawks finished third with 194.275 points, more than a point shy of second-place Iowa State.

"I asked them if the meet was over [after vault]," head coach Larissa Libby said. "It looked like they already lost."

She said her team was the victim of "bad karma."

Iowa was aided in its Feb. 24 victory over Minnesota — which was added to the Sunday meet at the last minute because of a weather cancellation of the Gophers' March 2 meet at Iowa State — by three Gopher falls on the beam. This time, Minnesota stayed on every event and won the team title by .025 over the Cyclones.

On vault, Hawkeye Katie Turcotte provided a bright spot with a 9.875 to tie for second. She also scored a personal best of 9.8 on beam to tie for third.

Katie Burke, who finished second in the all-around, won bars with a personal best of 9.875. Jen Simbhudas posted one of her best scores on floor with a 9.9. "We just had to put it behind us," said Ally Zipse, whose 9.7 on bars helped start the Hawkeye upswing. "It's what got us through the meet."

Simbhudas agreed, saying, "We were pretty down, but we knew we needed to pick ourselves up.

We fed off each other." The seniors, in their last meet in the Field House, were pleased with how the rest of the GymHawks responded to the adversity. "I'm so proud of the team for coming back," said senior Beth Dilick, who tied for third on bars with a 9.8. "It's so hard to have three falls in an event. We've struggled with it in the past, but we pulled it back together."

On March 2, however, the GymHawks had less to be happy about.

They won the meet 193.875-192.55, but their low score does not help toward regional qualifying. Three Thunderbird falls on beam and a solid team performance on floor helped the Hawkeyes pull away at the end of the night.

Libby attributed some of the sloppy performances to the weather. The squad didn't know if it was going to compete until five hours before the meet — 34th-ranked Southern Utah didn't get to Cedar Rapids until 1 a.m. — and the stands were half empty.

"They didn't have it tonight," Libby said. "They weren't geared up ... Overall, our team attitude hurt us."

On vault, three Hawkeyes — Burke, Simbhudas, and Turcotte — tied for first with 9.75s. Simbhudas added a personal best 9.775 to finish second on bars and a 9.975 to win floor. Senior Danielle Legeai posted a 9.725 on beam to tie for second.

"We let it go in some areas," Kara Pinjuv said. "Bars and balance beam were not as solid. And we didn't have team spirit."

Despite the tough weekend, the Hawkeyes have nothing but optimism about the rest of the season, including a rematch against Iowa State on March 23 in Ames.

"The nature of the sport has peaks and valleys," Legeai said. "This is the right timing for Big Tens. We'll be ready in time."

opponents 27-5, making the grueling run look simple after fighting off a gimpy knee in session one. In the title bout, Perry beat Michigan's Eric Tannenbaum, 5-2, avenging a loss he vividly remembers to the Wolverine earlier in the season.

This time around, the confident junior fought aggressively to win the championship. He credited the successful strategy to Brands, whom he repaid by slapping the coach's hand so hard following the win that he left a red welt.

"I pretty much made him beat me at what I'm good at, and that's scrambling and riding," he said. "Every match I lost in the past, I was worried about what they were doing and switched to my left leg. Brands pretty much slapped me up side the head after I lost up at Michigan this year and said, 'You're too damn good to be changing your style for somebody else.'"

Perry — who won his first title in three trips to the finals — didn't let feelings of accomplishment linger for long. He gave himself a B-minus for his efforts this weekend and turned his focus toward the nationals. Brands was a little more forgiving, saying Perry's extra work in the practice room brought about his achievement.

"When Mark Perry feels good, I think he's good medicine," the

"When Mark Perry feels good, I think he's good medicine. In order to keep him feeling good, you have to keep him winning. He's deserving, and he's earning — he's doing both. He deserves it, and he's earning it."

first-year coach said. "In order to keep him feeling good, you have to keep him winning. He's deserving, and he's earning — he's doing both. He deserves it, and he's earning it."

While Perry stole the show for Iowa, two other Hawkeyes clinched significant berths in the NCAA match. Mario Galanakis and Phil Keddy both faced must-win situations, and both were victorious in their seventh-place matches.

Galanakis defeated Wisconsin's Zach Tanelli, 8-3, to advance to the national match. The senior avenged a 7-5 loss to Tanelli on Jan. 27, in which he allowed the Badger to come from behind late in the match. Sunday, the attacking Galanakis fought the full seven minutes and dictated the pace of the match.

With the victory, Galanakis will make his second trip to the NCAA championships.

"It's great," the Greenfield, Iowa, native said. "It's what I've been working for all year. This is the end, and it's all that matters."

Keddy accomplished his feat by taking down Indiana's Marc Bennett, 9-5. Brands called the two wins important, especially for the redshirt freshman Keddy, who can build on his experience this year.

"I knew that my record wasn't good enough to where I could get to go," the 184-pound Keddy said. "I knew it was a must-win, and I knew walking out there, there's no way I'm losing this match."

Ryan Morningstar finished his tournament with a win and a fifth-place finish. Alex Tsirtsis and Eric Luedke each took third, while heavyweight Matt Fields ended up fourth.

After a pair of impressive opening-match victories, Charlie Falck dropped Iowa's other championship bout, 12-1, to Jayson Ness. The 125-pounder never got it going, and Ness controlled the match throughout.

Despite the relatively successful second day, Minnesota's dominance reminded Brands just how far his program needs to go. The fiery leader wants to reach the same level the Gophers have acquired this season.

"That's the barometer, guys," he said. "Don't lose sight, that's the barometer of where we want to go."

HAWKEYE ATHLETICS

No new NCAA qualifiers for men

In the Last Chance Meet in Ames on March 3, the Hawkeye men's track team failed to add any new qualifiers for next weekend's indoor NCAA championships.

Senior Micah VanDenend, already a provisional qualifier in the 5,000-meter run, broke the Last Chance Meet record, running 13:56.46 en route to a first-place finish.

VanDenend Iowa track

Shot putters junior Shane Maier and sophomore John Hickey, also provisional qualifiers, finished in second and third in the meet respectively. Maier threw 57-8½, while Hickey reached 56-11½. Sophomore A.J. Curtis followed his teammates in fourth with a 55-0¼.

Iowa's fourth provisional qualifier, senior Adam Hamilton, placed second in the weight throw with a 66-9¼, extending his qualification mark.

Other strong performances for the Hawkeyes included Paul Chaney Jr. (sixth) and Max Milder (seventh) in the 200 meters. The freshman and junior finished in 21.45 seconds and 21.94 seconds respectively. Sophomore Prince Riley placed eighth in the 400 meters in 48.17 seconds.

The qualifying Hawkeyes will head to Fayetteville, Ark., Friday for the national meet.

— by Alex Johnson

Despite the loss, some Hawkeye gymnasts spun outstanding individual performances.

Freshman Jonathan Buese won the all-around competition with a score of 50.95, while junior teammate Jacob Becker took first on the pommel horse with a 9.15.

Closing out the victorious trio was sophomore Geoff Reins, whose 9.35 earned him a first-place finish on the vault.

Hawkeye coach Tom Dunn had mixed feelings about the loss to Illinois, noting that junior Curtis Kleffman was only able to compete in the pommel horse, which affected the team's scoring.

Overall, he felt that the Hawks were not so sharp as they were the previous week against Nebraska.

"We had some really good performances," he said. "But we didn't have enough to call it a great team effort."

Divers to miss NAAs

UI freshmen Deidre Freeman and Michael Gilligan competed at the NCAA Zone C diving qualifiers in Ann Arbor, Mich., over the weekend.

Although both divers made the finals in separate events, neither managed to qualify for the 2007 NCAA championships March 15-17 in Minneapolis.

Freeman made the finals in the 1-meter event, finishing 14th with a combined score of 478.90. The Grinnell native also placed 25th in the 3-meter preliminaries, failing to make the top-18 cut.

Gilligan, who dove to an impressive eighth-place in the platform event at the Big Ten championships, made the 10-meter finals. The Hamilton Township, N.J., native finished 10th with a combined score of 504.55.

Gilligan also finished 22nd in the 1-meter prelims, registering a score of 244.65.

With the diving team not heading to the NAAs, junior Dragos Agache is the only Hawkeye likely to spend his spring break at the University of Minnesota's aquatic center. The breaststroke specialist from Constanta, Romania, broke Iowa records in the 100 and 200 breast at the Big Tens en route to third- and sixth-place finishes respectively.

Agache swam in prelims for both events at last season's NAAs in Atlanta but failed to make the finals.

Softball finishes 2nd

The Iowa softball team battled to a second-place finish during this weekend's Buzz Classic in Woodstock, Ga.

The Hawkeyes lost to No. 24 Georgia Tech, 6-0, after defeating Troy, 10-2, in the opener.

Iowa's leading hitter, Emily Nichols, continued her torrid streak, recording a hit in both contests and running her hitting streak to 19 games to start the season.

Unfortunately, the rest of the squad struggled at the plate against the Yellow Jackets. The only other Hawkeyes to tally a hit were Sami Baugh and Stephanie Ackerson.

Iowa will hit the road again next weekend, traveling to California to play in the National Invitational Softball Tournament.

Men's gymnastics falls to Illini

While one Hawkeye team had great success against Illinois on March 3, another faltered.

The Iowa men's gymnastics team, in Champaign, Ill., fell to the Illini, 214.950-209.500

Armstrong wins mile

Meghan Armstrong won the mile and bettered her provisionally qualifying time for the NCAA meet at the Last Chance Meet in Ames over the past weekend.

Hawks grapple back

Sunday's performance may not have reclaimed Iowa's place at the top of the wrestling mountain, but an overall third-place finish was clearly a climb in the right direction

COMMENTARY

two spots on the final day of the tournament, three total over last year's sixth-place finish. Remember, greatness — such as Dan Gable's coaching career — isn't built in a day (or two in this case).

"It's kind of getting over that hump of beating a really solid kid and finally bringing home some hardware that's worth keeping," said junior Mark Perry, who set the Hawkeye supporters' inner demons free with his victory over top-seeded Eric Tannenbaum. "I didn't wrestle the way I wanted to, but it's just nice to get over that hump."

While the solid showing is a Granby-roll in the right direction, in order to truly make the jump to the next level, Brands said the Hawkeyes need to win by larger margins and not seek out minor decisions. A few more dominating performances would likely have catapulted the squad past Wisconsin, which had no individual champions but many bonus points from major decisions and pins. Brands also emphasized that the Gophers are the standard Iowa plans to reach in the future, and being 65 points out of first and 0.5 from falling to fourth means there is substantial room for improvement.

The Hawks started to reach their potential during the second day of the tournament, on which they won nine of the 12 matches wrestled. The improvement raised a splotchy first day into a glimmering second, marked by a consistency rarely shown throughout the season.

And surprisingly, the group executed the task in the opposite way as it had wrestled all season, with 125-pounder Charlie Falck getting trounced in the finals and heavyweight Matt Fields getting derailed in his bout for third-place, while the middle bunch pounded the competition.

The marked improvement of intensity and energy levels across the board played a huge role in the wins — especially from freshman Phil Keddy and senior Mario Galanakis. Junior Alex Tsirtsis slapped the voters who seeded him No. 6 by defeating Michigan State's third-seeded Andy Simmons — twice. Tsirtsis stayed consistent with his game plan and sustained the tone set by Galanakis and Keddy, making opponents adjust to his kind of match.

"Ultimately, it's you the wrestler who has got the responsibility — the coaches can only do so much," said the 141-pounder. "It's really kind of building momentum off of each other and having the right attitude. If you've got the right attitude, then we've got enough talent on our team to where we can do some good things."

"We've got eight people going to nationals; they've gotta do their job every single time on the mat, not just every other match, and be consistent every time."

As the Hawkeyes prepare for the national championships March 15-17, they understand the stakes increase. As champion Perry said, "We need to brush it off and get ready for the one that counts."

Sounds good, champ. But just remember to polish and show off the gold medal, so you don't forget the invigorating feeling of hard-earned triumph.

stuck back in snowy Carroll, Iowa, after facing the tough reality that the roads were too dangerous to travel.

"You get emotional; you get wrapped up just knowing that it's almost over," Haluska said. "It's one of those things, I love being a Hawkeye; I love my times here. It's going to be sad to see them go. I got the memories.

"I'll always be a Hawkeye, and I'll be coming back as often as I can."

When asked what it will take to get an invited to the NCAA Tournament, Haluska said the only way is to run through each conference opponent at the United Center. If Iowa beats Purdue, which it has done once this year, 78-59, the squad will likely face No. 1 Ohio State on Saturday, barring an upset by Michigan or Minnesota.

"I know this team will fight," Alford said. "We don't what's going to happen. We can't predict what's going to happen, but the one thing I've learned with this group of men is they give you everything they got."

DAILY BREAK

“To think that men and women are serving their country in the most honorable and courageous way possible and all we give them is a dilapidated, rat-infested, run-down building to recover in is a disgrace. My fear is that Walter Reed is just the tip of the iceberg and merely highlights the pervasive and systemic mistreatment of our service members.”
— Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., on the conditions at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, where wounded vets of Iraq and Afghanistan are treated.

ANDREW R. JUHL Advantages the average woman has over me

- Just plain smells better.
  - Doesn't get riled when her best friend says she's "acting like a woman."
  - Rarely — if ever — misses the bowl when peeing.
  - Would be able to look at the massive Georgia O'Keeffe painting of a "flower" in her mother's bedroom without getting so uncomfortable.
  - Could have sex practically any night of the week if she so desired (especially if she lowered her standards and morals).
  - Doesn't really consider the previous ability all that interesting or important.
  - ... and she actually has standards and morals that are possible to lower.
  - Would still look incredibly sexy while carrying an "extra" 20 pounds. Or an extra 40. Or an extra 73. (Lay off me, OK? I NEED MY CARBS.)
  - Knows exactly when and how to use the God-like power of crying.
  - Can — it seems — reach climax simply by eating a good piece of tiramisu.
  - Could slap that man-stealing Kaitlyn square across the face without everyone in Vito's getting all righteous and uppity about it.
  - Doesn't take every advertisement for an all-you-can-eat buffet as an outright challenge.
  - Can correctly separate objects that are ecru from objects that are merely beige.
  - Is supposed to have breasts.
  - Wouldn't freak out her roommates by making French toast in the middle of the night wearing nothing but a Led Zeppelin T-shirt and white cotton panties.
- Andrew R. Juhl wishes he was could justify obvious pathological indecisiveness by calling it "a man's prerogative." E-mail him at andrew-juhl@uiowa.edu.

horoscopes Monday, March 5, 2007 — by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Organization will be what counts if you want to fit as much into your day as possible. You will learn something very important by watching the way others do things. Your passionate nature will attract people who support your efforts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be a little secretive about your comings and goings today. Avoid confrontations. Money issues can be resolved if you speak to an older or more experienced friend about your situation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may have a lot riding on your performance today. You will face criticism, but if you are prepared, you will surpass anyone who tries to be negative. Put time aside for romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If you let your emotions get in the way, you will not get ahead. This is a great day to make a career move and to put yourself on the line for something you believe in. Changes may be difficult, but it will be good for you in the long run.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If you really care about someone from your past or someone you recently met, make an all-out effort to be with this person. If you are already in a relationship, let your passionate side take over. Don't overpend in the process.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What you do today, whether it be learning, doing a great job, or selling yourself at an interview, will surpass your expectations. Don't let personal issues cloud your decisions. A change in your attitude will make a difference.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Nothing can stop you if you take control and do what you say. This is a great time to start an adventure, take a trip, or make plans to move in a new direction. Love is on the rise, so get out, and have some fun.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may feel as if someone or something is holding you back. Get past that, and put your heart and soul into doing what you do best. It's what you accomplish that will count, so don't waste time worrying.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Someone may try to persuade you to go off in a different direction today, but you should stay the course. Love is in the stars; a commitment can be made, but keep in mind that once you put yourself on the line, you must stand by your word.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Financial deals can be made. Buying and selling personal items will bring about a profit. Base your decisions on facts, not an emotional whim. Stick to your original plan, and you won't go wrong.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You have a huge amount of ground to cover, so hop to it. A chance to improve a personal relationship you are in looks promising. Speak from the heart about your intentions and goals.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Not everything will be out in the open for you to consider. Knowing that you don't have all the facts should deter you from making a final decision. Spending time on looking your best will help your attitude and boost your confidence.

'NON SEQUITUR

BY WILEY

THE POLITICAL ZOOLOGY FIELD GUIDE
TODAY'S SPECIMEN: THE TONE-DEAF BLOVIATOR (LIPUS BLATHERUS)

Identifying Characteristic: 90% OF ITS BODY MASS IS COMPOSED OF ITS MOUTH, WHICH IS CONSTANTLY MOVING WITH ENDLESS CHATTER.

Habitat: THIS CREATURE PREFERS A CLIMATE OF HOT AIR AND IS COMMONLY FOUND DEEP IN THE SENATE FLOOR JUNGLE.

Natural Enemy: ITSELF. IRONICALLY, THIS LOUD BIRD CANNOT HEAR ITSELF AND, MORE OFTEN THAN NOT, WILL IMplode FROM ITS OWN INCESSANT NOISE. DESPITE THIS, IT'S NOT IN DANGER OF EXTINCTION. NO ONE KNOWS WHY.
