A RAINBOW FULL OF PRIDE

Rainbow-colored umbrellas served a dual purpose this weekend: to block the sweat-inducing 91-degree heat and to trumpet pride as festival-goers celebrated being out and open about their sexual orientation at the 23rd-annual Iowa City Pride Fest.

More than 25 groups stopped traffic on June 16 as they paraded on foot and on float from College Green Park to the Pentacrest lawn, waving their multicolored flags. Several politicians, including Rep.

Dave Loebsack, D-Iowa, and Sen. Joe Bolkcom, D-Iowa City, were present to rally a large crowd of all ages and sexual orientations in front of the Old Capitol.

"Iowa is an open state," said state Rep. Mary Mascher, D-Iowa, to the crowd. "We want you here. We need you here. That diversity is critical."

Each speaker emphasized this year as historic for the gay community because of the passage of anti-school-bullying legislation. This year's Pride Fest also marks the 30th anniversary of the Iowa City Human Rights Ordinance's inclusion of antidiscrimination rules based on sexual orientation, said Iowa City City Councilor Regenia Bailey.

"Iowa City is a real national leader in passing gay and lesbian and transgender rights," she said.

Only 20 states have similar antidiscrimination laws based on sexual orientation, said Brian DiSarro, a UI graduate student in political science who is teaching a course on gay and lesbian politics this summer.

Salsa turns out to be hot

Local salsa maker and farmers' market vendor Tim Palmer of Clover Hill Creations finds success in Iowa City.

BY BRIAN STEWART
THE DAILY IOWAN

Going to the market

Every Monday The Daily Iowan plans to bring the reader an intimate, dare we say, slice-of-the-Iowa-City-Farmer's-Market life, down to the oh-so-good last bite.

A yellow tablecloth studied with images of chili peppers drapes over Tim Palmer's table and under a selection of premium salsas at the Iowa City Farmers' Market every Wednesday and Saturday.

Palmer — who started his business, Clover Hill

Creations, in 2002 — began selling his homemade salsas at farmers' markets in Cedar Rapids before he expanded to Iowa City, where he had to wait for an open slot.

The first time he made the trek down, he managed to come across an open stand.

"I got absolutely mobbed," he said about that night — he sold out of salsa in 30 minutes. "If there were 1,000 people there, probably 900 of them tasted my salsa."

Since that time, Palmer, who lives in Cedar Rapids, has been faithfully selling to a huge clientele at the local produce bazaar and continuing to offer free samples of his various salsas to eager patrons.

Panel favors Furmanski

While the UI presidential-search committee praised all four finalists for the UI's top job, Philip Furmanski of Rutgers University appears to be its favorite.

BY ASHTON SHURSON
THE DAILY IOWAN

Deliberations began Sunday among the members of the state Board of Regents on the UI's next president after the regents received the UI presidential-search committee's final report on the candidates.

The regents went into closed session at 10:30 a.m. after roughly a half hour of talks with the UI panel. David Johnsen, the committee's head, joined the regents in closed session.

After more than three hours, the group adjourned without announcing the name of a new president. All four finalists requested that the regents go into a closed session when speaking about them.

Before heading into the closed session, Johnsen praised every finalist.

"The names come forward with unanimous recommendation of the committee," he told regents Sunday.

The committee's final report primarily favored Philip Furmanski, the Rutgers University executive vice president for academic affairs — the first finalist to visit the UI last week.

Each of the four candidates — Furmanski; Charles Bantz, the chancellor of Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis; Mark Becker, the University of South Carolina provost and executive vice president for academic affairs; and Purdue University Provost Sally Mason — were analyzed in different categories in the eight-page report: Administrative experience, academic reputation, fundraising experience, response of the campus community, external references, and summary evaluation.

AT A GLANCE
Committee's report on the presidential candidates.

Bantz

Praised for his public speaking, fundraising, and solid administrative experience. "But he may require strong internal leaders to provide vision and direction for academic programs."

Becker

Commended for leadership skills and his strategic thinking. "His effectiveness as a communicator varied in different venues."

Furmanski

Applauded for his experience, knowledge, and academic background — and the favorite among the four. Also commended for his views of public universities and higher education.

Mason

Complimented for communication and team-building skills, as well as her views of the changing world of higher education. Noted for her lack of work with the health sciences.

Unraveling the mysteries of the human genome

A study highlighting the use of the human genome investigating seven common diseases by the Wellcome Trust Case Control Consortium was published in Nature on June 7. The study, touting a newly emerging research method called genome-wide association, was conducted in England. Bipolar disorder, coronary artery disease, Crohn's disease, hypertension, rheumatoid arthritis, type 1 diabetes, and type 2 diabetes were chosen for the experiment — 2,000 individuals for each disease were examined, with 3,000 control subjects.

The study found 24 independent association signals, flares in a specific position of a gene, total, with only hypertension yielding no tangible results. These results almost all "reflect genuine susceptibility" to the effects of their respective disease, the report found. By identifying these association signals, the study hopes by sharing the information with the scientific community that new pathways for cures and preventative measures can be found to help with these major diseases.

• Bipolar disorder: Also known as manic depressive illness, includes moods ranging from mania to severe depression with psychotic features such as delusions and hallucinations. One association signal.

• Crohn's disease: a common form of chronic inflammatory bowel disease. Nine association signals.

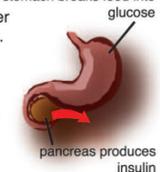

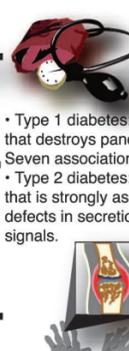

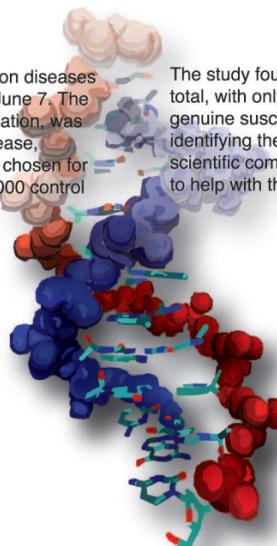

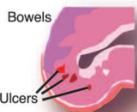

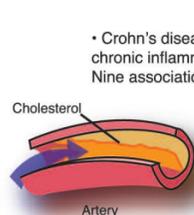

• Coronary artery disease: When the arteries leading to the heart become hardened and narrow, reducing oxygen flow to the heart. One association signal.

• Hypertension: a clinically significant increase in blood pressure that can lead to heart problems. No association signals identified.

• Type 1 diabetes: a chronic autoimmune disorder that destroys pancreas cells that produce insulin. Seven association signals.

• Type 2 diabetes: a chronic metabolic disorder that is strongly associated with obesity from defects in secretion of insulin. Three association signals.

• Rheumatoid arthritis: a chronic inflammatory disease that attacks the joints. Three association signals.

Edwards pushes health-care plan

Presidential hopeful John Edwards visits Iowa City as part of a three-day tour of the state, touting his universal health-care plan as well as his views on other issues.

BY STEPHEN SCHMIDT
THE DAILY IOWAN

On the afternoon of June 16, a packed house awaited the arrival of a behind-schedule John Edwards, a former Democratic senator from North Carolina, for a town-hall meeting in the Johnson County Fair Building.

The gathering combined body heat and humidity to produce a sweltering atmosphere that mocked the four ceiling fans. Classic R&B and country played over the public-address system, rosy-cheeked children shifted anxiously in their chairs, and people chatted in groups, fanning themselves with Edwards' campaign literature.

When he finally arrived, stepping through the crowd in blue jeans and a button-down blue shirt, a cheer — part jubilation, part relief — wafted from the crowd.

The event was just one stop on a three-day flurry of events for Edwards in Iowa, primarily intended to showcase his universal health-care plan.

"I absolutely believe that every man, woman, and child needs to be part of the universal health-care system," he said.

The former senator said he would cap the amount charged for administrative costs by insurance companies to 15 percent, use the power of the government to negotiate better prices with drug companies, and offer drug companies money up-front to develop new drugs in exchange for patent rights.

Edwards also fielded questions on numerous other subjects, such as the war in Iraq, the recent situation in the Gaza Strip, and America's need to break its "addiction" to foreign oil.

On Iraq, he took shots at President Bush's policy.

"I love listening to Bush talk about how he's made us safer," Edwards said. "I can't tell you how strongly I feel that this president has not made us safer."

Brett Slezak/The Daily Iowan

Former U.S. Sen. John Edwards speaks at the Johnson County Fairgrounds on June 16. Edwards focused on his plan for universal health care, and he answered a number of questions from the audience before he left for West Branch.

'I absolutely believe that every man, woman, and child needs to be part of the universal health-care system.'

— John Edwards, presidential candidate

On the situation in Gaza, he argued that support should be given to the more moderate elements of the Palestinian government and said America should become more involved in the region.

"I do believe that Israel is a great ally of America, I do believe that," Edwards said. "I also believe that we cannot impose peace. That doesn't work. Our responsibility is to bring parties together."

Edwards said that the United States' use of "22 million barrels of oil a day" finances many harmful elements globally.

"We have governments in the world that have absolutely no incentive to reform ... because they have oil," he said.

EDWARDS SUPPORTS:

- The creation of nonprofit regional health markets that would offer a choice among competing insurance plans.
- The creation of new tax credit to subsidize the purchase of health care purchased through health markets.
- Requiring insurers to charge "fair premiums" regardless of medical history, age, job, and other characteristics.
- Requiring businesses to cover their employees' health costs, whether through purchases in health markets or comprehensive health plans.

Source: John Edwards Campaign Literature

Even though Edwards connected well with the crowd, garnering applause after many of his points, many in attendance left with the same opinion of the presidential hopeful as they had coming in.

Kathy Huedepohl, an Iowa City resident who has dealt with the effects of cerebral palsy since she was born, said she often thinks of where she would be if government funding didn't help her with the expensive medicine she needs daily.

"Iowa Medicaid is actually pretty good, but I've known people who haven't been as lucky as I have," she said. "Health care in this country should be a right, not a privilege."

Although she said she will probably vote for a candidate whose stance on gay rights she favors more than Edwards' — such as Sen. Chris Dodd, D-Conn., or Rep. Dennis Kucinich, D-Ohio, — Huedepohl said she thinks Edwards' health-care plan is "fantastic" and a step in the right direction.

Barb Miller, an accountant executive from Des Moines, caucused for Edwards the last time he ran for president.

"I really like John Edwards and the inspiration he gives us all to make something better out of our lives," she said.

Police release more info on robbery suspect

Police released more information over the weekend on the man suspected in the robbery of an Iowa City convenience store on June 10.

On June 14, police persuaded suspect Emanuel Myers Jr. to turn himself in connection with the robbery at Gasby's, 2303 Muscatine Ave.

Myers allegedly handed the clerk a threatening note demanding money and then, after the clerk complied, fled the scene with no further incident. According to police reports, investigators were able to identify Myers with the Gasby's surveillance video.

After allegedly connecting Myers with the crime, Iowa City police Det. Bob Hartman was able to contact Myers via e-mail and then negotiate his surrender at UI Hospitals and Clinics.

Police reports show that Myers was also charged with first-degree theft on June 9, saying he stole a rented vehicle, as well as $120, house keys, an Iowa driver's license, and two cellular phones from his wife. Police recovered the vehicle during a traffic stop on June 11.

Woman pleads guilty to arson

An Iowa City woman pleaded guilty Tuesday to second-degree arson and animal neglect in connection with a Jan. 24 incident in which she set her apartment on fire and killed her boyfriend's cat.

Andrea Nicole Paterson, 19, pleaded guilty to the lesser offense of second-degree arson, a Class C felony, after being initially charged with first-degree arson — a Class B felony which could have netted her up to 25 years in prison.

The Iowa City resident was sentenced on June 12 to 10 years in prison, the maximum sentence for a Class C felony. She will also serve one year for the animal-neglect charge, which will run concurrently with the arson prison term.

In the police complaint reports, Paterson said she lighted numerous fires throughout her apartment because she was "upset and angry." The fire caused an estimated $25,000 in damages at the Arthur Street complex.

Pomerantz gives UI $2 million

On June 15, Marvin Pomerantz gave $2 million to the UI to permanently endow the Pomerantz Family Chair in Ophthalmology, according to a release.

The Pomerantz endowment will go to support a senior faculty member in the ophthalmology department at the UI Carver College Medicine, according to the release. Pomerantz noted the endowment is meant to support the department's research.

"With significant financial support, UI physicians' scientific and clinical contributions will advance to an unparalleled level, and we are delighted to be an assistance to their efforts," Pomerantz said in the release.

Pomerantz, a UI graduate, established the real-estate investment and development firm Mid-American Group in 1961. He is also a lifetime honorary director of the UI Foundation Board of Directors and serves on the Tippie College of Business Board of Visitors, the release states.

Pride fills the day

'Iowa City is a real national leader in passing gay and lesbian and transgender rights.'
— Regenia Bailey, Iowa City city councilor and speaker at the event

DiSarro, a festival volunteer, said some people feel the celebration is the wrong kind of visibility because it can often highlight the most extreme elements of the community. Not all gay people feel the same about all issues, he said.

The parade's caboose, and probably the loudest group present, was the UI Antiwar Committee. Members banged drums and called out in unison for an end to the war in Iraq.

Bridget Malone, the head of the Iowa City Pride Committee, thought the presence of the antiwar group was appropriate. "I don't think that all gay Americans are antiwar," she said. "But we're happy to have support from other groups."

The same rainbow-colored umbrellas that blocked the sun's rays earlier in the day shielded festival-goers from the evening rain in Upper City Park.

But rainbow wasn't the only color scheme for the day: Among the food vendors and craft tables, volunteers from several Democratic presidential campaigns were ready to disperse their own red, white, and blue colors.

Supporters campaigned for many of the top presidential-nomination candidates at the festival, and among their colorful buttons, festival-goers also wore stickers to trumpet their support for the candidates.

Carlton Blackburn, the president of Connections — one of the primary sponsors of the Pride Fest — said it was great to see the presidential campaigns reaching out to the gay community.

"I don't think it takes away from our message here," he said. "Instead, it gives gays a change to make political connections."

But Malone said she was disappointed only one party attended the festival.

"It's interesting because we invited everyone, but only the Democrats came — I think that says a lot," she said, adding that she hopes one day the Pride Fest will be celebrated much more widely. "I hope it will leave some sort of positive mark on our culture."

Palmer — who graduated from Iowa State University with a degree in business marketing — moved to Chicago after graduation to manage a restaurant.

It was there that he learned a few things about cooking and held contests to see who could make the best salsa.

"I think I offended some of my employees when I would win," he said.

With his friends' encouragement, he decided to end his 15-year career in the restaurant industry in favor of selling his salsa to the public. Palmer, a father of nine, thought the idea could help finance his children's education. Opting away from going through a company, he set out to sell his product at local farmers' markets and licensed himself with the state as a food producer and farmers' market vendor.

Palmer now gets up at 3 a.m. to make salsa five or six days a week.

"I'm done by 8 or 9 in the morning, package it up, and go to the markets later in the day."

His main ingredient — tomatoes — comes from a food-service distributor, and he supplements them with products from other vendors when in season. Palmer originally used homegrown tomatoes in his gourmet salsas, but his growing demand quickly presented a problem.

"I'd have to be a tomato farmer now just to keep up with what I sell," he joked.

Palmer sells his Clover Hill Creations salsas for $5 a jar at farmers' markets in Cedar Rapids, Hiawatha, Mount Vernon, Iowa City, and Coralville beginning in July. His products will also be available at Hy-Vee and the New Pioneer Co-op after July 4.

His custom salsas vary from "Fire-roasted Chipotle" and "Tequilla-lime" to "Heavenly Habenero" and "Roasted corn and black bean." Palmer also sells homemade root-beer floats and virgin margaritas at his stand when the weather is hot.

He emphasizes customer service and adding extra incentives, such as the drinks, to ensure customer satisfaction.

"When you can start a business, and make friends, and meet thousands of people, that's really rewarding," he said.

"That's a huge benefit to doing this. I almost can't even go in public anymore without customers recognizing me."

UI PRESIDENTIAL SEARCH

Regents remain mum

PRESIDENTIAL SEARCH

"Philip Furmanski has the experience, knowledge, and academic stature to be an outstanding intellectual and administrative leader of the University of Iowa," the committee said in its report.

The campus community preferred Furmanski and Mason, according to the report.

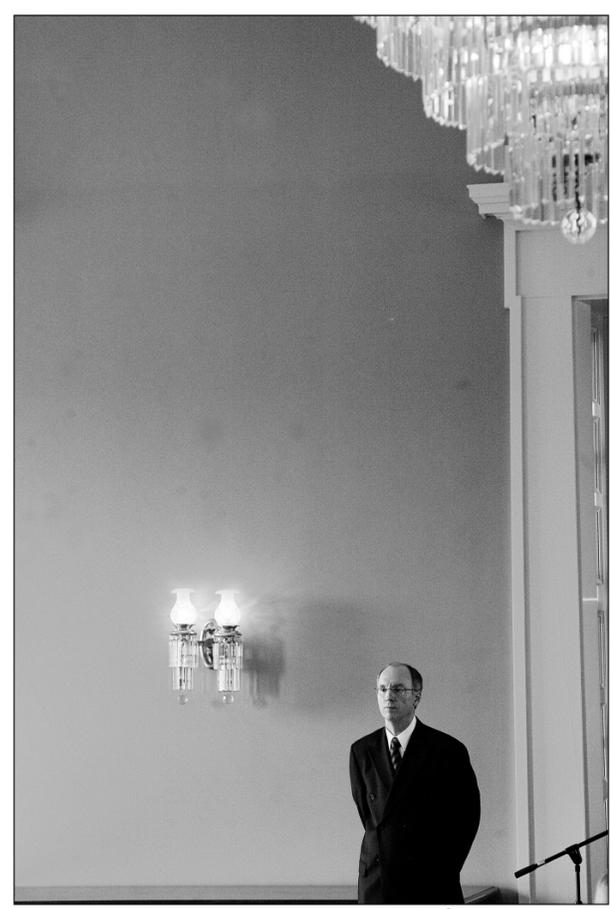

The responses applauded Furmanski for his academic credentials, fundraising experience, approachable and articulate style, and his work with Rutgers' major athletics program. The committee also praised other areas, but the campus evaluations noted he didn't outline specific goals for the UI.

"While Dr. Furmanski projected a clear vision for higher education, he has yet to articulate a specific vision for the University of Iowa," the report said.

The campus and committee also commended Mason for her diversity accomplishments at Purdue, but both entities noted her lack of work with a hospital or college of medicine.

"[Mason] did not, however, display specific knowledge of the particular challenges facing a major health-sciences campus, and some voiced concern about her ability to connect with external constituencies," according to the responses of the report's campus community section.

The committee reported both positive and negative aspects of Bantz and Becker — including Becker's effective changes in a short time at his previous institutions. Yet the campus felt he wasn't as effective when speaking to a large audience. Bantz was also criticized for possibly needing extra internal guidance at the UI "to provide vision and direction for academic programs."

The search for a new president began nearly a year and a half ago when David Skorton accepted a position at Cornell University. The first search panel was disbanded in November after the regents rejected the committee's four finalists.

Since the second search began, there have been open weekly meetings and off-campus interviews. Last week, the final four candidates interviewed with the UI community and the regents in a series of meetings.

Furmanski best choice for UI prez

Nearly one year ago, David Skorton left his post as UI president and, in doing so, indirectly spawned a process that has been heavily scrutinized by the media and the university community. The search committee's website tags the president as the Chief Executive Officer of the university, someone who exists to provide "leadership and direction." Inarguably, this search has led us as a university to learn much about the candidates, but we hope that the process has also helped us to learn about ourselves, both as a community and an institution. Considering the challenges that lie ahead and the needs that face us today, this Editorial Board believes that, of the candidates presented to us by the search committee, Philip Furmanski is the best choice for the presidency.

Sally Mason, the provost and a professor of biology at Purdue University, rightly stated that U.S. Education Secretary Margaret Spellings was hurting U.S. higher education by trying to apply a "one-size-fits-all" approach, the standardization and accreditation practices of which would amount to the college version of No Child Left Behind. Other positives included her openness to change — she spoke of how in her scientific discipline in particular, what was true in the 1970s has been significantly revised or disproved recently — and her commitment to diversity (she noted that at Purdue, the proportion of minority students has spiked during her tenure, and it is now at an all-time high). She also conveyed novel ideas, such as using the newly created Big Ten TV network to highlight programs at universities other than sports, the network's main focus.

Charles Bantz, the chancellor of Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis and Indiana University vice president for long-range planning, showed perhaps the strongest commitment to the arts and humanities of all the candidates: A communications-studies expert, Bantz once dreamed of becoming a poet, and he described the liberal arts as the "center of any campus." As did Mason and Furmanski, Bantz emphasized the growing role of private support in funding higher education (state appropriations nationwide are at all-time lows and declining) and expressed a commitment to keep donors engaged and their much-needed dollars flowing in.

Mark Becker, the executive vice president for academic affairs and provost at the University of South Carolina, was easily the most vibrant and eager of the field. The "rising star" of the candidates, he was not as eager as the others to emphasize the importance of private support of universities, but he made it clear at his open interview that he believes in effective education being a global effort, something that would seem like an ideal fit for our current diversity level.

These candidates are qualified in a wide area of fields, and they all have individual strengths that make them a good fit for Iowa, but given the UI's current status and where we need to go in the future, it appears that Furmanski is the best candidate of the four for the president's post. As Rutgers' executive vice president for academic affairs, he has guided that university through challenges and transitions both necessary and difficult to earn respect as an administrator throughout the academic world. In his forum appearance, Furmanski demonstrated an understanding of the relevance of high-quality undergraduate education at a comprehensive research university and appeared palatable to typical Iowans with his engaging and approachable personality. A cancer researcher with strong references in the arts, his skills and background meld nicely with the overall mission of the university as it exists today. Furmanski should stress growth in numbers by keeping tuition low in hopes of allowing access to more potential students and growth in field diversity by engaging the arts, humanities, and professional careers. Furmanski could focus resources on the sciences but also begin a return to the basics of academia by developing a comprehensive university that is strong in all areas — a renaissance approach. The UI isn't in need of a full-blown restructuring, but we believe Phillip Furmanski can bring fresh ideas to Iowa City, along with a reasonable idea of what has made the UI what it is: commitment to excellence in whatever it does.

The middle ground

I have to come clean. My two favorite presidential candidates are Republicans.

OK, OK: Both candidates, a mayor of New York and a pragmatic governor of a liberal state, are not typical Republicans. Both lean left on social issues and have successfully appealed to moderate and Democratic voters.

It's not what you think. Rudolph Giuliani is arrogant, ignorant, and he was, frankly, a bad mayor. Mitt Romney, for his part, is doing his best to run away from every appealing aspect of his political career.

It's much the same for the rest of the field, on both sides of the aisle.

Besides my on-again, off-again affair with Sen. Barack Obama — his rhetoric makes me swoon — the pickings are rather slim. Sadly, because Iowa has the first caucuses in the nation (in case you haven't heard), we've already been bombarded for months by visiting candidates.

Only seven more months to go.

I return now to the chosen two. Neither of them has been making stops in Iowa, or even New Hampshire. In fact, unlike the field, the golden boys have been working, nonstop, on solving issues that matter to Americans rather than pandering to the bases of both parties. They've sidestepped the partisan bickering and political devolution committed by Washingtonians and have actually demonstrated the ability to work effectively with other people.

Sadly, they seem a bit out of touch with the times.

Indeed, New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg and — get this — California Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger are exactly what America needs.

For 13 years, Washington has slid ceaselessly down a path to irrelevance. Partisanship is not merely the name of the game — it's the only game in town. More Americans' lives are affected by government inaction rather than government action. Contrary to the thinking of zealous libertarians, that's not a good thing.

State and local governments have been forced to clean up Washington's messes. Bloomberg and Schwarzenegger have both been particularly effective in bettering the lives of their constituents, and the larger world.

Their efforts in tackling climate change are commendable. Washington — rather, the Bush administration — has made no substantial attempt to face the problem, let alone take action. As reported by the New York Times, Bloomberg recently announced sweeping changes that would make New York one of the greenest cities on the planet.

His plan calls to cut carbon emissions by 30 percent by 2030, by adding more bike lanes, converting the taxi service to hybrids, and — most impressive — adding a $10 charge on driving within city limits. None of these ideas would make it out of a congressional subcommittee in Washington.

The Governor has taken significant action on climate issues as well. He signed the first cap on greenhouse-gas emissions in the country and put in place the strictest fuel-economy standards for automobiles in the nation.

It would be impossible to list their other accomplishments in this limited space. California, at Schwarzenegger's behest, has funded $3 billion worth of stem-cell research. Bloomberg is going after illegal guns and — this one makes me flutter inside — imposed an overarching smoking ban in the city.

Bloomberg and Schwarzenegger could run as viable choices, not merely as critics of the major parties. A Bloomberg or Schwarzenegger ticket would certainly throw the election one way. But whereas Ralph Nader, among others, has merely played the role of spoiler, either of the aforementioned two could have a realistic shot at the presidency, even with the institutional disadvantages of running a third-party campaign. America is well past ready for a change — reform seems meager compared with the problems in our polity.

Sadly, Schwarzenegger is barred from running for president, because of an arcane clause in the Constitution barring foreigners from the nation's highest office. The rule was created to avoid a foreign usurper claiming hold over America. It is time to allow those Americans who've lived the majority of their adult years in the States the opportunity to serve their adopted country.

A constitutional amendment isn't likely in the near future. But the Constitution is quite vague on the qualifications to serve as vice president. Dream with me: a media mogul and the Terminator on the same ticket?

I can already see their re-election slogan, filtered incessantly through every medium possible.

Change the language, change the debate

In one of the many comments made about our editorial of June 15, one writer stated that the United States should get out of the marriage business. I couldn't agree more with that statement. The biggest issue with civil unions is the separate but equal aspect of the argument.

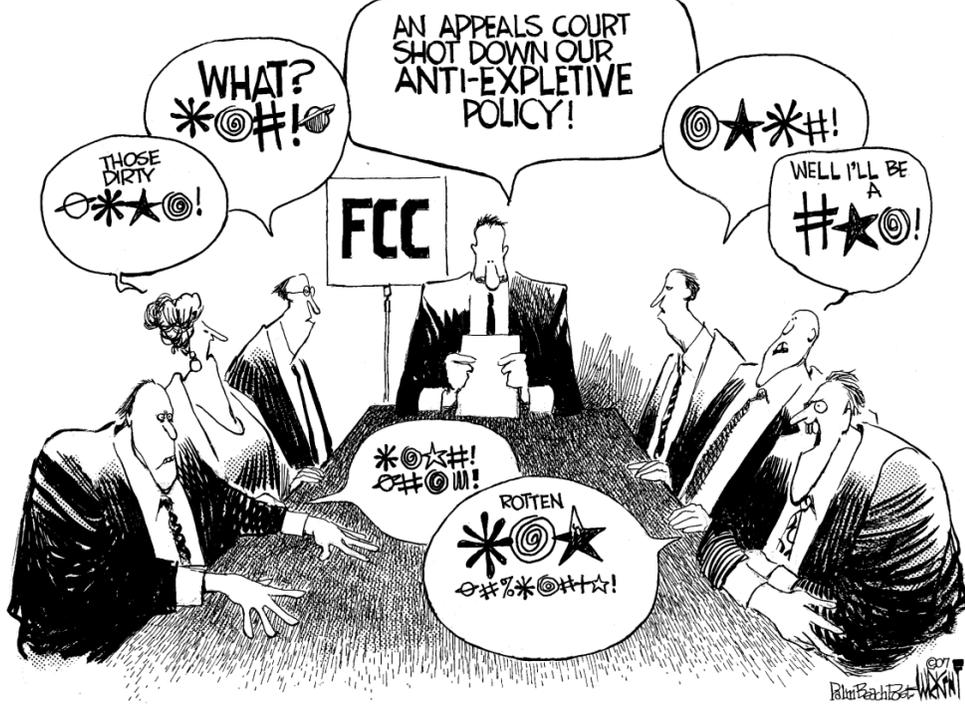

Civil unions are not equal to marriage, nor would they ever be considered so. Imagine a child asking his parents why some people can get married — like mommy and daddy — while others have civil unions. Regardless of what people say about civil unions, you are separating people into groups — again. We've tried this before, notably with ethnicity, and it didn't work.

The differences are clear: Some people are granted marriages (heterosexual partners exclusively), while others are given something ... a little less (our homosexual counterparts.) And again the discrimination continues.

So here's the logical answer: Stop using the word marriage. The word itself carries religious implications, which shouldn't be allowed under our Constitution anyway. When a couple, gay or straight, decide to enter into a legal partnership, they should be granted a civil union by the state in which they live. If said couple wish to include faith and religion into their partnership, they must ask their church, synagogue, mosque, etc., to grant a certificate of marriage. If a particular religion decides that homosexual relationships are sinful and prohibited by the laws of their faith, then no marriage certificate is granted.

But we have to change the language first: civil unions for all, or civil unions for none. If you can't treat people equally, shame on your government's bumper-sticker approach to "Freedom for all."

COMMENTARY

Injustice at the highest level

Keith Bowles was convicted of murder in an Ohio state court and sentenced to 15 years to life in prison. As was his right, Bowles challenged his conviction in federal court. He lost, though the judge and the clerk in the case didn't let him know before the deadline for appealing. When he learned of the ruling, Bowles asked for extra time. The judge agreed — and gave Bowles 17 days. Bowles filed his notice of appeal 16 days later. Trouble was, despite the judge's instructions, the law that sets out the time frame for such actions provides for only a 14-day extension. On June 14, the Supreme Court, splitting 5-4, threw out Bowles's claim, ruling that even though he had complied with the judge's order, he was still too late.

This may not be the most momentous legal issue of the term — unless, of course, you are Bowles — but it is a sad example of miserly jurisprudence. The majority opinion, by Justice Clarence Thomas, insisted that the court was left with no choice but to dismiss the case; these time limits, Thomas said, are "jurisdictional," and failing to comply with them, for whatever reason, divests courts of the ability to hear the claim. In less legalistic language: tough luck.

In fact, as the dissent by Justice David Souter pointed out, the majority was not in any way bound to reach this manifestly unjust result; indeed, it had to ignore and overrule precedents to keep Bowles out of court. In a pair of cases in the 1960s, the court had said that failing to meet statutory filing deadlines could be excused in "unique circumstances." The majority dismissed those cases on the grounds of their "40-year slumber" and said they were wrongly decided in any event.

But as the dissenters argued, federal judges have more flexibility than the majority's overly rigid approach allows. "It is intolerable for the judicial system to treat people this way, and there is not even a technical justification for condoning this bait and switch," Souter wrote. It "certainly seems reasonable to rely on an order from a federal judge," he noted — "unless every statement by a federal court is to be tagged with the warning 'Beware of the Judge.'"

Beware of this court may be more like it.

Pickup lines gone horribly awry

- Do you sleep on your stomach? I'm just asking 'cause I heard that a person can easily die of suffocation that way.
- Have you always been this cute, or did you require a complicated series of painful and expensive cosmetic surgeries to become so? Judging by your nose, I'm gonna go ahead and guess "no" on the surgeries.
- If you and I were squirrels, we'd spend most of our existence fruitlessly questing after various seeds, nuts, and fungi while dodging automobiles and burrowing in preparation for the coming winter.
- I think continuing to wear that shirt is a big mistake. Can I talk you out of it? I mean the act of wearing the shirt, not the shirt itself, of course. I hardly know you, and that would be presumptuous.
- I'm currently fighting the urge to make you the happiest woman on Earth tonight — mostly because it's completely beyond my ability to do so.
- There are 206 bones in the human body. Granted, that's somewhat of a non sequitur, but I've just full of interesting little factoids!
- Do you work for UPS? (No.) Really? You should check it out; it has a great benefits package.
- Is it hot in here, or do you suffer from some weird glandular disorder?

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You have everything in place, so get moving. Your next step should be one that takes you to the next level of whatever you are trying to accomplish. This is your show, your life — so run it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may want to change things in your life, but right now isn't the time. Plan your actions, calculate the outcome, but don't make a move just yet. Preparation is what will help you when the time is right.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): This is a great day to learn something new, so sign up for a class that interests you or spend time with someone who has the experience you long for. Love is in the picture. Someone you care for will respond passionately to your advances.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You must share your ideas, especially if they will help you get ahead. An opportunity to help someone in the know will bring about a favor that should position you well in the future. Proceed with confidence.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Focus on what you can do for others, and you'll get plenty in return. Speak and react from the heart. Your creative input will grab the attention of someone who can play a key role in your future.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You must keep everything to yourself today. Working secretly will bring the greatest effect and results. It's the element of surprise that will capture both personal and professional associates.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Manipulate a situation in order to raise your profile or position yourself positively with people who can help you out in the future. What you do now will count when the chips are down and you need a few favors.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may have great ideas, but getting anyone to pitch in and help is not likely. Do the work yourself, giving it your own personal touch. The people you approach will not do as good a job as you anyway.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You will dazzle everyone you meet with your entertaining and fun-loving approach. Vacation, travel, and excitement are all in the stars. Love is hot; discovering new places, people, and pastimes could lead to a pleasurable encounter.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't get angry — get moving. You will be doing yourself an injustice if you let someone get to you or if you fail to take advantage of an opportunity. Expecting others to bend, compromise, or give in is unreasonable.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You have to be innovative and imaginative today. By doing so, you will win favors, support, and unconditional love. This is a great day to make a commitment, do something special for the one you love, or move to a higher professional level.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may feel like being a quick-change artist, but now is not the time to confuse the people around you. Take a position of strength by being the one to make suggestions, or actually take the initiative to get things going.

UISG not on vacation

Student-government officials work toward summer goals.

Whitney Wright/The Daily Iowan

UISG President Barrett Anderson speaks during a Daily Iowan interview in his office on June 12. UISG members were given the opportunity to interview UI presidential candidates and submit reports to the search committee.

BY RYAN GRESAVAGE
THE DAILY IOWAN

With the upcoming decision on a new UI president, efforts to increase campus security, and adjusting to the separation of UI Student Government, President Barrett Anderson has a full plate of responsibilities this summer.

Though things are a bit more relaxed during the summer months, he said, there's still work to be done.

In the ongoing search for a new UI president, Anderson and a committee of 10 undergraduate students — many of whom are leaders of student organizations — had the opportunity to interview presidential hopefuls over the past several weeks. Anderson said the group will have an input in who takes the helm.

"Differing interests and opinions within UISG [on the UI presidential finalists] have led to a difficult start to the summer," said Bridget Szeluga, the speaker of the senate.

Szeluga and numerous other colleagues were upset that UI Provost Michael Hogan was not interviewed for the job, and they felt that much of his work went unrecognized. But Anderson noted that at this point it's unclear exactly how much influence students will have on the final selection.

Anderson and UISG Vice President Carole Peterson made student involvement in the presidential search a priority during campaigning last March.

Anderson said it's his responsibility to ensure that the College Party follows through with its campaign promises that put him and Peterson in office.

Notable promises included upgrading and integrating UISG's website, decreasing the maximum number of finals a day from three to two, and training student counselors to answer questions for others about UISG and its duties. The College Party also vowed to increase safety downtown.

In an effort to get the word out about UISG, Anderson has been working a booth during Orientation information fairs for incoming freshmen. In addition to providing students with information about student government, Anderson encourages students to "get involved and find a group that fits their interests."

On security, Anderson said UISG officials have been working with police and numerous other groups to add Code Blue emergency phones on campus, as well as to upgrade the phones with video cameras.

"These light poles have

- Delegating new and old responsibilities after student-government split
- Following through on campaign promises proven very effective, and they may soon have cameras mounted on them that record for 60 seconds after the button is pressed," Anderson said.

One of the most difficult challenges UISG faces this summer and during the upcoming year is adjusting to last February's split of UISG into the undergraduate UI Student Government and the Executive Council of Graduate and Professional Students.

"Figuring out responsibilities and the duties of new positions has been a challenge," Anderson said.

Also on the summer agenda is an executive retreat, scheduled for Saturday. The event will focus on setting goals in addition to scheduling UISG events and student senate meetings for the school year.

UI heart-attack study finds black-white gap

For years, some have argued that blacks don't receive the same medical care as whites. Now, there's indisputable proof, UI researchers say.

BY GEORGE SWEENEY
THE DAILY IOWAN

Black heart-attack patients don't get the same treatment as whites, according to a study conducted by UI researchers in conjunction with the Department of Veterans Affairs and released last week.

The study, published in the June 13 edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association, revealed three major findings, said Ioana Popescu, the lead scientist for the report and a UI associate in internal medicine.

At hospitals that do not offer heart bypass or angioplasty operations, blacks are less likely than whites to be transferred to hospitals that do offer the services, the study found; while at hospitals that offer these operations, blacks are less likely to receive them.

And across the board, blacks have a higher mortality rate one year after a heart attack than whites, though they also have a lower 30-day mortality rate than whites.

This lower 30-day mortality rate for blacks could be attributed to any number of factors, Popescu said. As examples, she cited, among others, possible discrepancies in follow-up care during the first year after a heart attack or the lack of immediate trauma that would have been caused by an invasive procedure such as a bypass or angioplasty.

'We are truly uncertain of what causes these differences.'

— Ioana Popescu, UI associate in internal medicine and lead scientist for the study

The study also revealed that the differences occurred similarly in all regions of the country, in both hospitals that offered the operations and ones that did not, in both urban and rural areas, Popescu said.

Differences in care among different regions of the country were not included in the paper when she submitted it to the journal, because the differences were not major, she added.

The study was able, however, to eliminate insurance coverage as a factor, because all subjects were Medicare patients.

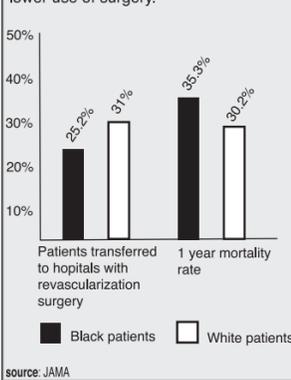

"We are truly uncertain of what causes these differences," she said.

Others, however, were more willing to discuss possible causes.

Dedric Doolin, the head of the Cedar Rapids Branch of the NAACP, said the discrepancies in health care could be attributable to a number of causes, including factors ranging from lapses in communication between doctors and their black patients to a possible difference in ongoing

Heart treatment by ethnicity

Higher long-term mortality rates in black heart-attack patients may reflect the lower use of surgery.

medical care — a factor that the study did not explore.

He also raised another possibility.

"Some doctors are racist; some nurses are racist," Doolin said.

Popescu, however, is not done exploring the issue.

Next, she said, she would like to study clinical data sets with more detailed information about patients and their conditions, which also undoubtedly affect decisions about their care. Such information could include obesity, smoking, and more details about the severity of the patients' conditions, Popescu said.

Biofuel push may affect oil-refinery expansion

BY H. JOSEF HEBERT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A push from Congress and the White House for huge increases in biofuels, such as ethanol, is prompting the oil industry to scale back its plans for refinery expansions. That could keep gasoline prices high, possibly for years to come.

With President Bush calling for a 20 percent drop in gasoline use and the Senate now debating legislation for huge increases in ethanol production, oil companies see growing uncertainty about future gasoline demand and little need to expand refineries or build new ones.

Oil-industry executives no longer believe there will be the demand for gasoline over the next decade to warrant the billions of dollars in refinery expansions — as much as 10 percent increase in new refining capacity — they anticipated as recently as a year ago.

Biofuels such as ethanol and efforts to get automakers to build more fuel-efficient cars and SUVs have been portrayed as key to countering high gasoline prices, but they are likely to do little to curb costs at the pump today or in the years ahead as refiners reduce gasoline production.

A shortage of refineries frequently has been blamed by politicians for the sharp price

FACTS ON REFINERY GASOLINE PRODUCTION AND ETHANOL USE:

- Number of U.S. refineries: 149
- U.S. refinery gasoline production: 136 million gallons a day.
- Gasoline demand: 143 million gallons a day (imports make up the difference)
- Annual ethanol production today: 5 billion gallons.
- Annual ethanol production requirements being considered by Congress: 15 billion gallons by 2015; 36 billion gallons by 2022.

spikes in gasoline, as was the case last week by Sen. James Inhofe, R-Okla., during debate on a Senate energy bill.

"The fact is that Americans are paying more at the pump because we do not have the domestic capacity to refine the fuels consumers demand," Inhofe complained as he tried unsuccessfully to get into the bill a proposal to ease permitting and environmental rules for refineries.

This spring, refiners, hampered by outages, could not keep up with demand and imports were down because of greater fuel demand in Europe and elsewhere. Despite stable — even sometimes declining — oil prices, gasoline prices soared to record levels and remain well above $3 a gallon.

Consumer advocates maintain the oil industry likes it that way.

"By creating a situation of extremely tight supply, the oil companies gain control over price at the wholesale level," said Mark Cooper of the Consumer Federation of America. He argued that a wave of mergers in recent years created a refining industry that "has no interest in creating spare [refining] capacity."

Only last year, the Energy Department was told that refiners, reaping big profits and anticipating growing demand, were looking at boosting their refining capacity by more than 1.6 million barrels a day, a roughly 10 percent increase. That would be enough to produce an additional 37 million gallons of gasoline daily.

But oil companies already have scaled those expansion plans back by nearly 40 percent. More cancellations are expected if Congress passes legislation now before the Senate calling for 15 billion gallons of ethanol use annually by 2015 and more than double that by 2022, say industry and government officials.

DUMP THE PUMP DAY

Thursday, June 21, 2007

The day is dedicated to raising awareness that public transportation helps improve the environment and conserve fuel. It also offers the opportunity for people to beat the high price of gasoline and support public transportation as an important travel option that helps reduce our dependence on foreign oil.

On June 21, public transportation agencies from coast to coast will join together to ask the public to park their cars and ride public transportation instead.

So get on board and Dump the Pump.

Bonds homers, but BoSox win

BY JIMMY GOLEN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — Barry Bonds added baseball's oldest ballpark to his long-ball list and was back on his way to the sport's most hallowed record. The San Francisco slugger hit his 748th career homer in Boston's 9-5 victory over the Giants on Sunday, adding Fenway Park, the Red Sox, and knuckleballer Tim Wakefield to his totals and moving within seven of Hank Aaron's mark. The last time Bonds homered off a knuckleballer was when he hit No. 73 of 2001 off Los Angeles Dodger Dennis Springer to establish the single-season record. Bonds had been hitless in eight at-bats against Wakefield, even joking that the pitches were too slow to hit hard. "I think my age got me slower so I'm more able to time it a bit better," Bonds said with a smile after going 2-for-3 on Sunday. "I tip my cap to him; he came after me in every at-bat. He gave me something to hit."

But his sixth-inning solo shot merely cut Boston's lead to 8-4, and Manny Ramirez padded the lead with his second homer in as many games. Ramirez was 2-for-4 with three RBIs, David Ortiz had a pair of doubles, and Wakefield (7-7) pitched well before faltering in the sixth to help the Red Sox complete the three-game sweep. Wakefield allowed five runs and eight hits with a walk, striking out three in 5 2/3 innings. He allowed a solo homer to Pedro Feliz — his ninth of the season (and the 98th of his career) — while becoming the 441st different pitcher to feed Bonds' home-run habit. Bonds has now homered in 36 ballparks, adding Fenway to the list in his third game at the ballpark that was the first home of the first man to top 700 homers. Bonds passed Babe Ruth and his 714 total last year and resumed his pursuit of Aaron's 755 with 11 homers in his first 76 at-bats this year; he has just three in 91 at-bats since.

"It was never gone," Bonds said of his home-run stroke. "It's the person. It's me. Sometimes you just don't have it. Sometimes you do."

Bonds singled in the second off Wakefield, an ex-teammate from their days with the Pirates, and hit a long — but not threatening — fly ball to center in the third. "When we were in Pittsburgh, we loved him," Bonds said, lamenting that Wakefield didn't pitch the finale of the 1992 NL championship series against Atlanta, when the Braves scored three in the ninth to advance to the World Series. "We're both in our 40s now, and he's still good."

Bonds came up again to lead off the sixth, posing for some pictures while on deck for both Giant and Red Sox fans. After a mixed response, he watched a ball go by and then sent the next knuckler to right, on a line toward the red seat that marks Ted Williams' longest home run. Right fielder J.D. Drew chased after the ball and reached out for it, but it went into the Giants' bullpen.

Padre homers sink Cubs

BY ANDREW SELIGMAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — This time, the big swings came at the plate.

Mike Cameron homered in his first two at-bats, and the San Diego Padres knocked a season-high five in all in an 11-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs on Sunday.

One day after a bench-clearing altercation, the Padres had no trouble connecting against the Cubs. Especially Cameron.

"It came across my mind, but I didn't get a chance to quite do it," Cameron said.

"It" was the possibility of hitting four in the game again, something he did against the White Sox for Seattle in May 2002. He'll take this, though.

Cameron hit a two-run shot to center in the first inning and followed Adrian Gonzalez's two-run drive in the third with a homer off Rich Hill (5-5) that made it 5-1. Khalil Greene added a three-run homer off Sean Gallagher in the fifth, and Rob Bowen hit a solo drive against Michael Wuertz in the eighth.

That was plenty for Greg Maddux (6-3), who allowed three runs and seven hits over six innings in his second start against the Cubs since they traded him to the Los Angeles Dodgers at the deadline last July. He struck out one and did not walk a batter in winning his 339th game.

"It was just one of those where you're kind of lucky that it's your day to pitch," Maddux said. "Sometimes, it's not how you pitch, it's when you pitch."

Gonzalez went 4-for-5 and scored four runs, and Cameron had three hits, drove in three runs and scored three times as the NL West leaders won for the fourth time in five games. The Padres tied a season high for runs.

Hill lasted just three innings, allowing five runs and five hits in his shortest outing this season. The three home runs he allowed tied a career high set at Cincinnati in September, and all those big hits capped another wild weekend at Wrigley Field.

On June 16, Carlos Zambrano took a no-hitter into the eighth and then gave up a home run to Russell Branyan in the ninth as the Padres beat the Cubs, 1-0. San Diego's Chris Young also hit Derrek Lee on the wrist with a pitch in the game, and Lee threw a punch at Young, igniting a bench-clearing altercation.

Lee, Young, Cubs hitting coach Gerald Perry, and Padres pitcher Jake Peavy were ejected, but there was no word from the league on any punishment. Cub manager Lou Piniella said there were no warnings from the umpires before Sunday's game, and there were no obvious signs of lingering ill will once the teams took the field.

"I think we had the mentality that [today] was going to be baseball," Gonzalez said. "I think both managers understood that it wasn't intentional."

That incident came around two weeks after Zambrano got into a fight with Michael Barrett that started in the dugout during a game against Atlanta, resumed in the clubhouse, and ultimately left the catcher with a black eye and busted lip that needed six stitches. A day later, Piniella kicked dirt at an umpire, resulting in a four-game suspension.

The Cubs are 9-6 since Piniella's tirade, but a substantial winning streak is eluding them. "We can't get too down," Lee said. "They just came out and swung the bats well."

Pirates 8, White Sox 7

PITTSBURGH (AP) — This is the way things are going for the Chicago White Sox: Even when they hit a ball that looks like the go-ahead home run in the ninth inning, they still lose.

Jason Bay's game-saving catch robbed Jim Thome of a three-run homer and allowed the Pittsburgh Pirates to escape with a come-from-behind win Sunday afternoon.

Nate McLouth had a career-high four RBIs and Jose Bautista homered and had two RBIs for the Pittsburgh, which finished its interleague home stand 4-2. The White Sox lost for the 17th time in 21 games.

Chicago entered the ninth trailing 8-5. Thome came in as a pinch hitter with two runners on and one out and a run already in before his long drive to left off Matt Capps.

"I think all of us were blowing everything we could to just try to get it out," White Sox third baseman Josh Fields said.

season after transferring to Iowa from Kansas State. However, she performed well during Iowa's trip to Greece this past month.

Graham, who Game Time League veteran coach Adam Kaufman chose with the final pick of round one, averaged 5.1 points, 7.8 rebounds, and 3.0 assists per game during the 2006-07 season.

"Jeneé is a great rebounder and a great defender," said Kaufman.

Four of the remaining five Hawkeye women were selected in the second round. Iowa's Abby Emmert and Kelsey Cermak were chosen first and second in round two, followed by Stacy Schlapkohl (fourth) and Lindsey Nyenhuis (fifth).

The final Iowa Hawkeye player, junior-to-be Nicole VanderPol, was chosen in the third round by Stoermer.

All six coaches shared the same common belief — the league is better when the teams are balanced.

"The league is stronger and more fun for the women when it is kept fair," Stoermer said. "This league is for the women, not for us."

Game Time will play on Tuesday and Thursday nights at the North Liberty Community Center.

Senior-to-be Justin Johnson will also suit up for Wiese/Pelling. Johnson, used primarily off the Iowa bench last season, was second on the Hawkeyes with 45 3-pointers made, shooting 45 percent from behind the arc.

Beisser Lumber coach Ray Swetalla chose David Palmer with his first pick. Palmer red-shirted last season after transferring to Iowa from Seton Hall. In limited minutes, he averaged three points and two rebounds per game for the Pirates during the 2005-06 campaign.

Iowa forward Cyrus Tate will pair with former Drake big man Aliou Keita to form a bruising frontline for coach Dan Ahrens and his Jill Armstrong of Lepic-Kroeger team. Tate, a junior-to-be, averaged 4.2 points and 4.4 rebounds last season for the Hawkeyes.

Asoiya/Hodge Construction coach Randy Larson drafted a pair of fine shooters in incoming Iowa freshmen Jeff Peterson and Jake Kelly.

Peterson, who looks to compete at point guard for the Hawkeyes, averaged 13.5 points and seven assists per game his senior year at DeMatha High in Hyattsville, Md. With UNI center Jordan Eglseider to provide points in the paint, Peterson and Kelly should provide Asoiya/Hodge with some outside shooting.

Larson also added returning Hawkeye guard Dan Bohall and high-school senior John Lickliter, son of new Iowa head coach Todd Lickliter to provide bench support. Bohall played limited minutes for Iowa last season behind a glut of talented guards, but he was honored with a share of the team's 2006-07 Most Improved Player award.

The younger Lickliter, who averaged six points, four assists, and two steals as a junior for Franklin Central High School in Indianapolis, is expected to provide good shooting and aggressive defense off the bench.

ImprintedSportswear/Good-fellow Printing coach Kevin Sanders selected incoming Iowa forward Jarryd Cole third overall and center Seth Gorney to ensure his team had a strong and balanced inside presence.

Cole averaged 20 points, 15 rebounds, and five blocks his senior year at Winnetonka

High School in Kansas City, Mo., earning all-state honors.

Gorney, a senior-to-be, averaged 5.5 points and 3.8 rebounds while splitting time at center last season.

Hawkeye forward J.R. Angle will join coach Joe Gentile's Deli Mart/Iowa City Read Mix team that, while lacking size, is stocked with versatility and shooting.

Angle averaged just 7.4 minutes on the floor last season, but he made the most of his opportunities, draining 47 percent of his shots and shooting 4-for-9 from 3-point range.

Prime Time contests will take place every Monday and Wednesday evening, beginning at 6 p.m.

Cabrera holds off Tiger, Furyk

Gene J. Puskar/Associated Press

Members of the Oakmont Country Club applaud Angel Cabrera after his victory in the U.S. Open at the Oakmont Country Club in Oakmont, Pa., on Sunday. Cabrera won the tournament 5-over-par 285.

OPEN

winning a major when he wasn't leading going into the final round.

Furyk, the 2003 U.S. Open champion who grew up in western Pennsylvania, ran off three-straight birdies on the back nine and was tied for the lead when he opted to hit driver on the 17th, where the tees were moved up. He hit so far and enough left that he had no angle to the pin, and the lie was so deep that he didn't even reach the green. His 8-foot par putt caught the lip and spun away.

Needing birdie on the final hole, Furyk dropped the club after contact, and his long putt never had a chance.

Cabrera, who had two of just eight subpar rounds in the tournament and finished at 5-over 285, was in the clubhouse watching two of the best players in golf try to catch him.

As poorly as Woods hit the ball in the final round, he only needed one birdie over his final three holes to force a playoff. Woods hit 3-wood off the 17th tee into a deep bunker, but he couldn't keep it on the green and had to make a 7-footer for par.

His tee shot on the 18th looked good when it left his club, but hopped along the line of first cut and deep rough, and his approach ran some 30 feet by the flag. His birdie putt was just long and right, and Woods again was the last man to leave the 18th green at a major, no trophy in hand.

Cabrera might not have been the winner anyone expected, especially at Oakmont, which has produced U.S. Open champions of the highest caliber. But he earned his victory against the best.

Cabrera delivered a 1-2-3 knockout during a difficult week. A birdie on his final hole Friday caused second-ranked Phil Mickelson to miss the cut in a major for the first time in eight years, and he was even stronger down the stretch with Woods and Furyk, No. 1 and No. 3 in the world, both poised to catch him.

He blew a chance to win the esteemed BMW Championship in Europe last month by topping a tee shot on the back nine, and Cabrera showed signs of a struggle late in the afternoon when he three-putted for bogey on the 16th and missed the 17th green with a wedge from the fairway to drop into a tie for the lead with Furyk.

"He just kept himself calm," caddie Eddie Gardino said. "He might go and win the British Open, because he knows he can do it."

Furyk went 70-70 on the weekend, and still had to settle for another silver medal for finishing tied for second. A year ago, he missed a 6-foot par putt on the final hole at Winged Foot and finished one shot behind Geoff Ogilvy.

"I had a lot of opportunities," Furyk said. "It just didn't work out."

Aaron Baddeley, who had a two-shot lead over Woods going into the final round, three-putted from 8 feet for triple bogey on the opening hole and wound up with an 80.

It was the third straight year no one broke par at the U.S. Open, the longest streak in 46 years.

That was no surprise at Oakmont, especially on Sunday.

Under steamy sunshine, with final-round pressure on a course reputed to be the toughest in America, every mistake was magnified.

Baddeley might have made the biggest blunder, and it set the tone for his day. He was in the short cut of rough to the right of the first green when he chipped toward the flag instead of the middle of the green, and it zipped by the hole and off the green. He chipped weakly to 8 feet and ran his bogey putt about 4 feet past. Two putts later, he had a triple bogey.

Six players had at least a share of the lead at some point, but not for long.

'[Cabrera] just kept himself calm. He might go and win the British Open, because he knows he can do it.'

— Eddie Gardino, caddie

Stephen Ames opened with a 12-foot birdie and looked strong until he hooked a tee shot into the ditch on the seventh, tried to play out, finally chopped it to the right rough short of the green and walked off with a triple bogey.

Steve Stricker poured in birdie putts on the fifth and sixth holes to join the lead and closed out his front nine with two good pars for a 34. But he pulled his tee shot into a bunker on No. 10, had to play out sideways, then three-putted for double bogey.

Paul Casey was in such bad shape in a bunker on the par-3 sixth that he played backward, away from the green, chipped short of the green and took triple bogey on his way to a 43 on the front nine.

About the only players who didn't make any ugly errors — or many errors — were the players who ultimately contended for this title.

Cabrera traded birdies and bogeys along the front nine, most notably a birdie on the par-3 eighth hole that played 300 yards with the back tee and back pin. He looked as though he might pull away on the back, using his power for short birdies on the 11th and 15th.

Furyk finally stumbled with careless shots on the 11th and 12th, only to run off three straight birdies to get back in the game.

Woods, the best closer in golf, was a mystery.

He couldn't make a timely putt at the Masters. He couldn't find his swing at Oakmont.

WOMEN'S HOOPS

Solverson gets sixth year

Johanna Solverson has cleared yet another major hurdle.

The Lake Zurich, Ill., native will finally lace up again for the Iowa women's basketball team after the NCAA granted Solverson a sixth year of eligibility on June 15. Solverson had missed the previous two seasons for the Hawkeyes after suffering two separate ACL tears in her right knee.

On June 15, coach Lisa Bluder also announced that Solverson has been named Iowa's team captain for the 2007-08 season, a decision agreed upon by both Hawkeye players and coaches.

"I'm thankful the NCAA granted me another year to compete at the NCAA level," Solverson said in a statement. "I'm extremely eager and excited to get back to game action after spending the last two seasons on the sidelines."

"I'm looking forward to being a team leader and helping my teammates on and off the court."

Solverson will be one of five Iowa seniors on the roster next season.

SUMMER BASKETBALL LEAGUES

Primed to play some hoops

Members of the Iowa men's basketball team look to make their presence felt this summer in the Prime Time League.

THE DAILY IOWAN

To succeed in sports, it's important to put in the extra work to improve both one's skills and conditioning.

Eight returning Hawkeyes and three incoming freshmen will suit up for the Prime Time League's 21st summer installment in order to do just that — but helping their teams to a Prime Time title would make the work they put in extra sweet.

Iowa junior-to-be point guard Tony Freeman was taken with the first pick in the June 13 draft; he was the league's MVP in 2006. Ron Nove, who coaches Freeman's McCurrys/Mike Gatens squad, said the guard will provide strong floor leadership for the team.

Freeman, who averaged 7.5 points and one steal per game while leading the Hawkeyes with 116 assists, will team with City High senior Matt Gatens, who orally committed to Iowa after his freshman year.

Averaging 18 points per game in his high-school career to date, Gatens adds another look to the McCurrys/Gatens team's attack as an outside scoring threat.

Dan Wiese Marketing Research/L.L. Pelling coaches Marcus Leloux and Joe Wilcox will rely on Hawkeye senior forward Kurt Looby to defend the basket and clean the boards. Despite averaging just 18 minutes per game last season, Looby led the Hawkeyes last season with 53 blocks and was third with 143 rebounds.

FIELD HOCKEY

8 field-hockey Hawks in tournament

Eight current and former Iowa field-hockey players will represent the High Performance Training Center's Midwest Regional team competing at the women's national championship in Virginia Beach, Va., this week.

Among the eight competitors are current Hawkeyes Kadi Sichel, Caroline Blaum, Roz Ellis, reigning Big Ten Tournament MVP Lauren Pfeiffer, Caitlin McCurdy, reigning Big Ten Freshman of the Year Meghan Beamesderfer, and former Hawkeyes Heather Schnepf, who was named Big Ten Defensive Player of the Year the past two seasons, and Barb Weinberg.

Junior-to-be goalkeeper Lissa Munley was also named as an alternate to the Midwest team's coach for the third consecutive year.

The Midwest squad finished third at last year's tournament.

Game Time set to kick off

As the Game Time League begins play Tuesday, those representing the Iowa Hawkeyes look to offer plenty of excitement for fans this summer.

BY REBECCA SEFTOR
THE DAILY IOWAN

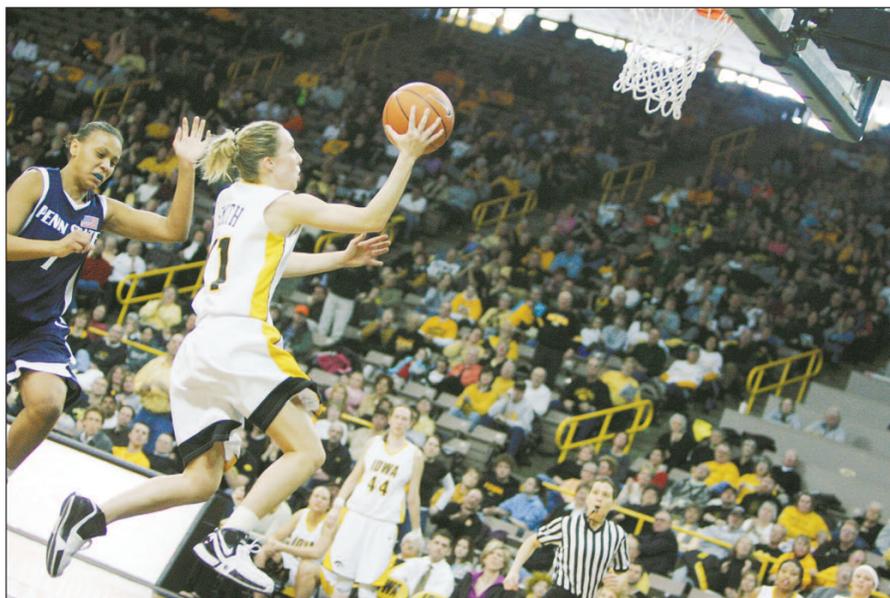

Ten talented members of the Iowa women's basketball team are ready to rumble when the Game Time League kicks off Tuesday night at the North Liberty Community Center.

Six-foot-six Megan Skouby, the tallest woman in Hawkeye basketball history, was the first overall pick in the league's draft on June 14. She was selected by Lucky Pawz/Premier Investment's coach Brendan Unkrich.

The soon-to-be junior averaged 13.2 points and 4.5 rebounds per game and led the Hawkeyes with 37 blocks last season. Skouby earned All-Big Ten honorable mention, and she was the only sophomore named to the pre-season All-Big Ten team.

The second pick in Thursday night's draft was Iowa point guard Kristi Smith, selected by Coralville Hyvee coach Mike Stoermer. One of the two shortest Iowa basketball players during the 2006-07 season, Smith led the Hawkeyes with 13.4 points and 4.1 assists per game along with 49 steals for the season.

Skouby and Smith are set to face off one another at

The first round of the Game Time draft rounded out with former Hawkeye Deb Remmerde, who is now at Northwestern College, being selected third and current Hawkeyes Wendy Ausdemore chosen fourth, JoAnn Hamlin fifth, and Jeneé Graham closing the round.

Ausdemore, who hails from Neola, Iowa, averaged 12.7 points and 4.7 rebounds last season.

The junior-to-be was Active Endeavors/McCurrys coach Randy Larson's first pick. Larson kept her in the back of his head since learning she would be returning to participate in Game Time.

"Wendy just might possibly be the best Iowa player," Larson said.

Cullen Painting/Asoyia coach Ron Breitbach snatched Hamlin for his first pick in round one. Hamlin was forced to redshirt last

U.S. OPEN

An Angel wins devilish Open

BY DOUG FERGUSON

OAKMONT, Pa. — Unlike-ly champion. Familiar scenario.

Angel Cabrera hit all the right shots to hold off Tiger Woods and Jim Furyk by a stroke on a Sunday of survival at the U.S. Open, shooting a 1-under-par 69 at brutal Oakmont and giving Argentina its first major championship in 40 years.

And for the second-straight major, Woods played in the final group and couldn't deliver in the clutch.

Woods squandered birdie chances with his wedge and his putter, and Furyk paid for a risky choice of driver on the 306-yard 17th hole and fell out of the lead with a bogey.

That left Cabrera as the winner, and yes, he signed for the right score.

The only other Argentine to win a major was Roberto de Vicenzo in the 1967 British Open at Hoylake. He was equally famous for signing for the wrong score a year later at the Masters, keeping him out of a playoff.

"It is very difficult to describe at the moment," an elated Cabrera said. "Probably tomorrow, when I wake up with this trophy beside me, I will realize I won the U.S. Open."

Cabrera made his share of mistakes — everyone did on this brutally tough course outside Pittsburgh — but he overcame late bogeys on the 16th and 17th holes with a perfect tee shot and a par that gave him the victory.

Even so, this major will be remembered for gaffes by the guys chasing him.

Woods, a runner-up to unheralded Zach Johnson at the Masters, played the final 32 holes at Oakmont with only one birdie. He missed a birdie putt from 6 feet on the 13th, and the only clutch putts he made on the back nine were for par.

"He put a lot of pressure on Jim and me, and we didn't get it done," said Woods, who closed with a 72 and extended his dubious streak of never

OUCH

It wasn't the way Zach Johnson envisioned this weekend turning out. After winning the Masters in April, the Iowa City native had a far from stellar outing at golf's second major of the season — the U.S. Open. Johnson finished 20-over par during his four rounds of play at Oakmont this past weekend.
