UI receives 5th bomb threat

The fifth threat in two months did not prompt UI officials to employ the Hawk Alert system.

By Zhi Xiong

The UI and several other high-profile campuses received bomb threats Monday, drawing varying degrees of response from each school.

Several specific buildings were mentioned in the anonymous e-mails, similar to several previous threats, UI officials said.

Relations Director Steve Parrott said he received word of a threat from Charles Green, the assistant vice president for the UI police, about 5 p.m.

By 7 p.m., a campus-safety official said there was "no official word out" and that investigators had "gone home."

Green could not be reached to confirm if the university received its latest threat. "There's nothing that anybody can do at this time," Parratt said. "No reason to believe it's an imminent threat."

Officials in Kenyon College in Ohio opened four identical e-mails... their fourth bomb threat this semester... at approximately 9 a.m. Monday, though they may have been sent several hours earlier, officials said.

Like Kenyon College, the UI has received numerous threats this year, with safety and administration departments having looked at the necessary levels of response.

The messages did allude to the 9/11 anniversary and prompted swift reactions from the UI and several other universities.

Nonstudents bear brunt of charges filed by UI police

In 2006, 55 percent of the people charged by the university police were not students at the UI.

By Amanda McClure

Visitors to the UI may want to be more careful if they choose to break the law.

A recent release from the UI police shows that 56 percent of the people university officers charged with crimes in 2006 were non-students.

In that year, 113 non-stu- dents were charged at the University of Iowa, including PAULAs, and 238 were charged with public intoxication.

With a first-offense PAULA, officers can issue a court fine, court fees, and public-intoxication fees. With a PAULA, the UI police handed out 54 fines in 2006, totaling $3414. In fines for non-stu- dents.

Although those numbers may surprise cops, officials said the numbers have stayed fairly consistent over the years.

“The fact that visitors are being charged as many as the UI’s convicts isn’t shocking,” said Charles Green, the assistant vice president for the UI police.

“People seem to think that the campus has a protected status, perhaps because there are no cops on campus and no tickets can be cut and not罚,” he said.

Visitors who come to football games or weekends want to party, and they are the majority who pay the price.

Football games alone bring a large number of people to campus. Combined with basketball and wrestling, large masses flock to campus for sports.

In total, UI officers have esti- mated that up to 1 million people visit campus each year. Of that number, the university police said.

Of the charge of filed by the UI police, 1200 criminal charges, approxi- mately 78 percent were related to alcohol and drugs. The previ- ous year, the department filed 1400 criminal charges filed, with around 76 percent tied to alcohol and drugs.

Many of the charges, such as OWIs and possession of drug paraphernalia, have dramati- cally changed, while the num- ber of PAULAs issued has dramati- cally decreased from 97 charges in 2005 to 35 last year.

Drugs charges, such as illegal use of a driver’s license, dropped from 22 charges in 2005 to 19 charges in 2006 in last year.

Green attributed the fluctuation in the statistic to several years.

“There are any number of rea- sons as to why the (number of) charges were lower last year as compared with past years,” he said.

“I should have been fewer people reporting crimes. I know that in 2006, the police department did not decrease staffing, which meant that we got more new officers.

A neighbor allegedly found the children outside of the residence with their mother and her boyfriend were fighting with the door closed.

The domestic abuse assault is classified as a serious misde- meanor, punishable by up to one to two years in prison and a fine of up to $2,500. Child endangerment does not cause injury in an aggra- vated misdemeanor, punishable by up to two years in prison and a fine of up to $1,500.

Man survives after train runs him over

The man was found to be in his 30s, considered a hard worker.

The train was hauling on the tracks when the train “ran over him,” according to authorities.

The man was taken to the UI Hospitals and Clinics to be treated for non-thrusting injuries.

Iowa City police officers and agents, along with the Johnson County Ambulance Service, responded to the scene.

Officers are continuing to investigate.

WASHINGTON — Top military leaders Wednesday urged President George W. Bush to move quickly to bring home U.S. forces in Iraq and end the war, saying stadiums-size crowds of antiwar protesters have undermined the credentials of the commander of U.S. forces in Iraq, Gen. David Petraeus.

Petraeus, who has recommended a gradual withdrawal of U.S. troops, acknowledged his forces were suffering in Iraq as he called for a new strategy to achieve measurable progress toward political stability in the country.

Bush called a meeting today of his war council and said he would make a decision about Iraq in the next few days.

Loebsack said he was concerned that Petraeus' strategy did not go far enough for him, or for the people of the district he represents.

“I have argued we need to disengage,” he said. “I have argued we need to get out of Iraq.”

Loebsack also wants a quicker withdrawal of U.S. forces.

Diverse candidates up for board

Profiles of the three candidates up for election to the Iowa City School Board today.

Gayle Klouda
Gayle Klouda, 56, of Iowa City is the only incumbent candidate. She has served on the board for three years, and she spent 16 years before that volunteering for the district. She holds a master’s in learning disabilities from Northwestern University and a Ph.D. in psychology from the UI.

She said her top priority is “maintaining the level of excellence in educational programming and student achievement that our community has come to expect from its schools.” Klouda also supported passage of the recently enacted 1 percent sales tax to be used for educational infrastructure projects. “I will ensure to work so that the money is spent in a way that optimizes the relationship between facilities and student learning and maximizes equity in facilities across the district,” she said.

Deborah Thornton
Deborah Thornton, 48, of Iowa City moved here five years ago, and she has had six years of experience as a small-business owner in New Mexico. Thornton worked in public policy for nearly a decade, including holding a position in the Occupational Safety and Health Administration in Washington, D.C., the Department of Energy’s Los Alamos National Laboratory, and in the New Mexico state government for both the governor and the state senate.

She received a degree in journalism and political science at Indiana University in 1986 and earned an M.B.A. from the University of Maryland. Thornton is the current chairwoman of the Johnson County Republican Party and she has listed one of her primary qualities being “commitment to focused strategic planning supported by cost-effective fiscal policy, particularly related to the strategic and fair distribution of funds generated” from the new tax.

IOWA CITY SCHOOL BOARD ELECTIONS THE CANDIDATES

The board members will deal with such items as increasing enrollment and using the relatively new local-option sales tax.

The board will face in its upcoming term:

- New funding from the new sales tax

Consider This

Issues the Iowa City School Board will face in its upcoming term:

- Student-enrollment growth
- Proposed curriculum changes
- New funding from the new sales tax

During the year, the board will review test data from the schools and focus on need for at-risk-student interventions. The board will also spend time examining the school facilities.

Because of a recently enacted local-option sales tax, the School District has an increased budget and the board has filed a request for a consultant to study the schools, determining how and where the money should be spent.

“I think [the sales tax] is a wonderful opportunity to develop the educational facilities,” board member Tom Krumm said. “This gives us an opportunity to look at the schools and to make the playing field more level, ensuring that there is equality for all students.”

The UI campus is one of the few university police forces that do not arm their officers but do not expect this to last. Public opinion has begun to swing in favor of campus police being armed. The officers are certificated by the Law Enforcement Academy and have some firearm training in their regular police training. They are as capable of safely carrying firearms as any other division of law enforcement. But some believe they may have benefited from the training. More would feel a heightened sense of security if the UI police had the means of immediately stopping armed assailants. Additionally, the safety of officers and others on campus is protected when someone to person Fire UI police to leave the UI police to have the same legal need to use force. Only if they have made the trip could they mount any kind of retaliatory effect.

Desperately seeking lethality

It is increasingly clear that the good, law-abiding citizens of Iowa are in far greater peril and that only armed officers can protect us. Iowan will publish only one letter per author per month.  decorations and controls. Hurley's second argument is a red herring because the proposed law is not just about the usage of firearms in same-sex couples. Technically speaking, there is no issue of sexual orientation among same-sex couples. Hurley and his colleagues have confused the issue of sexual orientation with the issue of the different rights that can be obtained by different groups of people. Groups of homosexuals who are ruled against are often groups of heterosexuals who support the proposed law.

Hurley's third argument is that the law does not pose a threat to the rights of any person, and that the law is general in nature. Hurley is valid in saying that the law is general in nature. However, the bill is not as neutral as Hurley believes it to be. The bill is not a true amendment to the Constitution. The bill is not a general amendment to the Constitution because it has certain implications that could affect homosexuals in the same way as they affect heterosexuals. I love Paul Sorenson. For karma’s sake, I’m glad at least someone is laughing. In 50 Cent’s single “Struggle to the Top,” he raps, “I got the girl, I got the ring, I got a verse, I got a guitar, and my empire / If I can call them they can’t ever, they don’t need more than one.” I, too, have my empire, but I can barely call them. This, however, is the difference between me and my empire.

Kanye is from the suburbs. He didn’t grow up in the ghetto. He’s not been shot at. Sure, he’s just as vulnerable as the rest of us, and sometimes makes it seem worse than it is, but he has his empire. He has the Money, the fame, and the money and fame gross up for money and fame. The difference is permanence. However, Kanye talks about it in so many humility words, and he lets us know he struggles with it and revs it in, while 50 spouts about the horsepulled triumph he gets with while he cathers.

College Dropout and Late Registration were successful for themselves and we were pleased. We found out that Kanye was like us. He had the same hopes and fears, and he was successful because he followed those feelings. Grousini follows along the same line. Now, Kanye has “The College Dropout,” and he’s under “Underground

Grousini isn’t going to grab hold of you right away, but chances are Kanye is there. He slows everything down, with symbols pointing the pin in most of the songs. He takes over some of the choruses, continually changing the speed between choruses and stanzas, but he never loses his voice. While we’re considering these feelings, we turn to the first release, the single “My Way.” It’s a No. 1 hit. While no one was forecasting it, they had to pay some tribute. It’s not as good as the album, but it’s one of the best. This was their first release, and it’s a hit.

Kanye is famous, rich, and has made a lot of money. He has made it clear that he makes money for money and fame.

Their 10th album is their 10th album, but that’s not the only thing that is new. Their record, which is a full-length album, features a new style of music. The band is known for their work in the indie rock scene, and their new album is a departure from their previous work.

The record plays like a letter to a former love, perhaps left on the deck of a tour bus as the band went on tour. It is a collection of songs that explore the themes of love, heartbreak, and moving on.

The record starts with a song called “Hard Feelings,” which is a hard rock song. The album’s only real success is their second single, “God’s Work,” which is a pop song. The band’s sound is a mix of rock and pop, and it’s a departure from their previous work.

Hawks expect tough game

Despite Iowa State's (0-2) early season struggles, the Hawkeyes (2-0) know that you throw out the records when it comes to an in-state battle with the Cyclones.

By Charlie Kautz

Before Iowa State's surprising 24-13 loss to Northern Iowa, it appeared that the battle for the title of state's best would be in the third week of the season. But after the Cyclones (0-2) were overcome for the second consecutive week at Jack Trice Stadium, this year's renewal of the annual Cy-Hawk showdown doesn't deserve the level of lingo college football.

Rather, it will provide the 24-0 shutout, a much-needed measuring stick after an almost flawless 35-0 victory over Syracuse.

“Any time you play those guys, we expect a battle,” Iowa head coach Kirk Ferentz said. “It’s been that way for five years now that we’ve been involved since I’ve been here. We expect that, and our fans will be the same as this week as any other week. We’ll work on getting better and then also trying to match up against an opponent that will be that tough at the task.”

And while that task appears easier to accomplish given Iowa State’s winless record, recent history shows you can throw out the records when it comes to the way for in-state supremacy.

Though the Hawkeyes have won three of the last four meetings against ISU, including last season’s 27-17 win at Kinnick Stadium, the matchup’s margin of victory hasn’t been greater than 20 points since 1997.

In that same span, six of the contests were decided by 10 points or fewer with Iowa State holding a 6-4 advantage in the last 10 meetings.

Henne's status is still uncertain for the Oct. 6 visit to Wisconsin, where Michigan began the season 3-0. The Wolverines are 20-10 in the last 30 meetings.

AMES — Iowa State coach Gene Chizik has been involved in some college football's biggest rivalries, such as Clemson-Penn State, Oklahoma-Texas, and Ohio State-Carolina, Alabama, Auburn, and Texas-Oklahoma.

He'll get his first taste of some college football's biggest rivalries, such as Clemson-Penn State, Oklahoma-Texas, and Ohio State-Carolina, Alabama, Auburn, and Texas-Oklahoma.

Chizik said on Monday that the Cyclones have been involved in improving themselves than worrying about what other team is, even though the hype surrounding this rivalry will be tough to ignore.

“We’re up at practice, we’re getting better, and getting better at what we do,” he said. “We’re on a quest for making us better. Until we get ourselves better, the opponent doesn’t matter, because everybody we play from now on is going to have to be as good as we are.”

Iowa State's first order of business will be to try to show up in the Starks’ ranking of the Cyclones rank 106th in the nation — and among Big 12 teams — with just 15.5 points a game.

It's been equal opportunity mediocrity for the Cyclones. They rank near the bottom of the conference in both the running and passing game.

The lack of touchdowns all around the way, whether it's passing or running, is a source of frustration for us right now.

We've got to get more points on the scoreboard, and obviously, the head coach is going to need to do that as well, our quarterback Matt Blythe said.

“Our guys are going to have to find a way to score points and make plays. We've got to put up a lot of points to have a chance in this football game.”

Hawk hoops on Big Ten Network

The Iowa men's basketball team will have the benefit of its nonconference home games being televised on the Big Ten Network this winter, the school announced Monday.

In addition, for the first time in school history, 11 Big Ten contests will be televised. The announcement of Iowa's home games televised in addition to its in-conference schedule is the result of a new agreement with Big Ten Networks.

“In addition to our in-conference slate of games, we are now televising two additional Big Ten contests this season,” said Iowa head coach Fran McCaffery.

“With the advent of the Big Ten Network, our fans will have several more chances to watch us, and several more chances to watch us,” McCaffery said.

“This year, we have the opportunity to become a lead network for 11 games. More than 20 years ago, we had the opportunity to be the lead network for just seven games. Those games were the Big Ten regular season games. But now, we will be the Big Ten Network’s lead network during the entire 2007-08 season.”

Bielema: Don’t overlook Citadel

Although Wisconsin snuck by UNLV to win its 1st straight game, Badger coach Bret Bielema knows the team can’t overlook the Citadel.

By Scott Bauer

DI - THE DAILY IOWAN

MADISON, Wis. — Wisconsin coach Bret Bielema didn’t want his players dwelling on the Badgers’ 11-7 win over Nebraska this week.

“When you win a game, it doesn’t mean you’re doing good,” Bielema said Monday. “It’s weird; I guess I’m really glad the week is over.

“My job is to make sure my team is ready to play next week, and we’ve got a good situation here where, if we have a game on Saturday, our offense will be ready to play and our defense will be ready to play,” he said.

Bielema said his team is committed to preparing for every game.

“Every week you’ve got to prepare and you’ve got to be ready and you’ve got to be ready to go because every week is a new ballgame,” he said.

“I don’t want our team to put a lot of emphasis on the last game as much as the next game. So, we’re working towards this week and preparing ourselves this week.”

The Badgers (1-0) are preparing for Saturday’s game at 2:30 p.m. against the Citadel (0-1), which is 0-21 all-time against Big Ten schools.

Bielema broke with tradition for the Badgers’ home opener two weeks ago against Washington State, dressing the players in all red instead of red and white. While the new uniform was a measure to motivate fans, the players loved it, and Bielema said it will be back against the Citadel.

Iowa City, with a capacity of 60,000, will be jammed with fans wearing the football jerseys.

“I think they specifically gave momentum, it will have a huge effect at Camp Randall,” Bielema said.

As this thing hopefully gains in popularity, we’ll be ready to go, too. If the 70-0 thrashing of Weber International was anything to go by, the Badgers have the talent and the depth to win.

“I’d love to walk into Camp Randall and see a lot of red,” Bielema said.

Mainly, he doesn’t want his players dwelling on the win.

“Winning football is not an easy win just because the opponent, the Citadel, will be playing in the Metro Atlantic Football Conference,” Bielema said.

“I don’t want his players dwelling on the win. I want his players dwelling on the next game. ’I’d love to walk into Camp Randall and see red’ is the context of the way we think about it,” Bielema said.

Hawks focus on struggling ISU

After throwing a careless second-quarter interception two years ago, then-junior Hawkeye quarterback Drew Tate tried to tackle Cyclone cornerback Adam Brott in the end zone, but was forced to leave a game with a concussion.

Just one sophomore when Jason Mann stepped in to start for Tate in the 2005 loss, now-senior linebacker James Ihedigbo says offense can find success against the Iowa State defense.

"They have been a consistent problem for us," Ihedigbo said. "We have to find a way to stop them because we come out here to play ball on their turf." Ihedigbo also said he考虑到上海是无法预测的，所以不一定会发生。
I’ve been out here what, 11 years? And to have this many wins, I never could have foreseen that. I exceeded my expectations, and it’s been a fun way to enjoy that, that whole process to get to 60. It’s been a lot of work. There have been some changes along the way. But I think that’s all been great.” — Tiger Woods
