21-only creates fissure

Two polarized camps debated the pros and cons of the 21-ordinance.

Ed Bornstein/The Daily Iowan

Bar patrons cut a rug at the Yacht Club on Tuesday. The Roosevelt Institution held a panel discussion Thursday evening in the IMU on the controversial 21-ordinance, which will go before local voters in November.

By Melanie Kucera
 THE DAILY IOWAN

Thursday night's forum about the controversial 21-ordinance was as polarized as ever, with both camps firmly sticking to their positions and agreeing on very little.

The forum, which took place at the IMU, was hosted by the Roosevelt Institution, a national nonprofit student-run organization.

In favor of 21-only: UI senior Phonsavanh Lovan and UI clinical Professor of family medicine Rick Dobyns argued the ordinance is for the greater good, citing the high rate of local binge drinking.

Against: UI junior Atul Nakhasi and Bo-James owner Leah Cohen said the ban would just push the problem elsewhere, specifically to harder-to-patrol house parties.

"Parents do not know what goes on at these house parties," Cohen said, adding that ultimately, we are "throwing these kids to the wolves."

Nakhasi used Iowa City police understaffing as an argument against the ban.

going into residential, less-supervised areas," he asked.

On the other end of the spectrum, Dobyns argued for more nonalcoholic venues. He pointed out the 46-0 ratio between bars who serve alcohol and those who do not.

Dobyns said West Lafayette, Ind., the home of Purdue University, and Madison, Wis., the site of the University of Wisconsin, among others, have 21-ordinances, and they saw a decrease in binge drinking among students.

"The community needs to take the initiative to change the image and atmosphere of being a party school," Lovan said. "What's going to push [the UI] to have these nonalcoholic venues? We're going to keep waiting and waiting."

On Nov. 6, Iowa City voters will decide whether to allow people under 21 in the bars.

Both sides agreed that eliminating 18- and 19-year-olds from the bars could potentially create more danger for students venturing into the house-party world.

But each side had a different spin. "Do I give my patients medicine that can produce negative effects? Yes," Dobyns said. "But they take the medicine for the longer and greater good."

Cohen took the opposite approach, saying the 21-ordinance would result in the "destruction of neighborhoods as well as more drug activity and assaults."

Albright praises Hillary

The former secretary of State says Hillary Rodham Clinton is the best candidate to help re-establish America as an international leader.

By Kelsey Beltramea
 THE DAILY IOWAN

From her Victorian armchair, seated atop the stage at the IMU Ballroom on Thursday night, former Secretary of State Madeleine Albright couldn't watch President Bush address the nation about his plan for Iraq.

But she told the audience of approximately 200 that she had an idea what he might say — and that it wasn't good enough.

"It's the same story in a different package," she said, criticizing the Bush administration for repeatedly announcing substandard tactics.

From her perspective, Albright said it looks as though there isn't "any kind of real plan to end this."

"The thing that worries me a lot is that President Bush's 'Plan B' is to leave this for the next president, and we need a president who can handle that."

For Albright, speaking as a part of her "Restoring America's Leadership Tour," the next president should be Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Albright worked and traveled regularly with the now-New York senator during her tenure in President Clinton's administration,

Judge: Family may take dying son's sperm

A case in the Johnson County Courthouse on Thursday asked whether sperm is eligible for organ donation.

By Samantha Miller
 THE DAILY IOWAN

A 6th District judge ruled on Thursday that a dying man's sperm may be harvested — addressing the issue of organ qualifications and potentially breaking new legal ground.

Judge Martha Beckelman ruled that Daniel Christy's family may use his sperm to later inseminate his fiancée, said UI law Professor Sheldon Kurtz, who wrote an affidavit in support of the family.

The case reached the court after the UI Hospitals and Clinics refused to collect the Bonaparte, Iowa, man's sperm without authorization by the court.

Christy, a listed organ donor, is on life support at the UIHC after a motorcycle accident Sept. 9; he will most likely die soon, say UIHC physicians.

The issue at hand was whether Christy's fiancée, Amy Cruse, could have the hospital's doctors harvest the 23-year-old's sperm to be utilized later for insemination of Cruse.

The hospital denied the family's wish to collect the sperm, citing the law that regulates human-organ donations — the Uniform Anatomical Gift Act — which, according to the UIHC, doesn't pertain to sperm. Kurtz wrote the Iowa measure, and he said in his affidavit that the statute should apply to sperm.

"This is certainly a life-and-death situation," plaintiff attorney Lori Klockau said.

Frosh finds Iowa advantage

An out-of-state student finds his way with the help of UI diversity groups.

By Kelli Shaffner
 THE DAILY IOWAN

UI freshman Ernesto Henderson has never lived in a town with so little diversity.

Welcome to Iowa City. While the population of the non-whites is approximately 13 percent in Iowa City and 6 percent in the state as a whole, according to the 2000 census, Henderson is confident that he will fit in.

The Fort Washington, Md., native was originally attracted to the UI because the university was attracted to him.

His name picked up a few bleeps on the UI radar, including that of the Iowa Bioscience Advantage — a program aimed to identify academically talented undergraduate under-represented minority students with aspirations for a research career.

A pre-med and chemistry major — "for now" — he decided to make the nearly 1,000-mile journey because the UI gave him the most money. Despite his "not up to par" SAT score, the valedictorian secured numerous scholarships that, when totaled, equaled more than the cost of tuition.

He had never even seen the campus before his arrival this fall.

Obama blasts Bush on war

Speaking in Anamosa on Thursday, Barack Obama touted his plan for ending American military involvement in Iraq.

By Christopher Patton
THE DAILY IOWAN

ANAMOSA, Iowa — Continuing his focus on Iraq as he stumped throughout eastern Iowa following a major policy speech earlier in the week, Sen. Barack Obama, D-Ill., on Thursday touted his plan to end the war in Iraq.

The presidential-nomination hopeful also railed against the current political situation in the United States but said the American people are not what's wrong with the country. Rather, he said, blame for the nation's ills rests squarely with the Bush administration.

"George Bush has been a good advertisement for the Democratic Party," he said.

Given recent events — Gen. David Petraeus' congressional testimony about Iraq on Monday, Obama's Iraq speech on Wednesday, and Bush's speech on Thursday — Obama said rather than hold a normal town-hall meeting in Anamosa, he had chosen to first iterate his position on Iraq and then take questions.

"I think it's very important for everybody to get on the record where various candidates stand on the war," he said.

The Illinois Democrat began his remarks on the Iraq war by relating a story about a woman who attended one of his campaign events. The woman broke down and cried as she spoke because her nephew, who is in the military, had to go to Iraq. She said she couldn't breathe and asked him when she would be able to breathe again, Obama said.

"We've been holding our breath over Iraq for five years," he said.

The White House sold the Iraq war to the American people through fear, Obama said, adding that many politicians went along with the war because they were afraid of looking weak.

"Nearly 4,000 American lives have been lost in Iraq," the senator said. "Five times that number have suffered horrible wounds, both seen and unseen."

Obama said these casualty numbers, along with the war's hefty price tag, are together overstressing the military. The only way to relieve this stress and deal effectively with the increased threat of terrorism around the world is to end the Iraq war, he said.

The senator also addressed global warming, calling for increasing fuel-efficiency standards in cars and mandating the use of more cleanly burning fuels. The United States also needs to implement a cap-and-trade system to limit overall carbon emissions, he said.

Anamosa resident Tim Stork said he appreciated Obama's detailed plan for getting out of Iraq. Ending the war in Iraq is one of the most important issues for him this election, Stork said, noting that most of the Democratic candidates would probably do that.

"Whoever the Democratic candidate is, I'll probably follow," he said.

Beverly Hannon, who also lives in Anamosa, said she liked the way Obama talked about renewable energy and the environment. She said she agreed strongly with the senator's statement that each person must do her or his part to combat climate change.

"You don't have to wait for the government," she said. "You can do things yourself, such as buying compact florescent light bulbs."

Employee charged with stealing from Wal-Mart

A Wal-Mart employee allegedly stole more than $15,000 in cash and merchandise from the store and then sold some of the products online, Iowa City police said.

Seth Buns, 24, was allegedly seen taking cash from store registers and pocketing it, according to a Wal-Mart internal investigation.

After investigations, authorities reportedly discovered Buns had also been taking store items and selling them on eBay, police said.

Officers searched Buns' residence and vehicle, reportedly recovering $15,814.52 worth of cash and merchandise. Buns allegedly said he is responsible for stealing between $20,000 and $30,000 from the Highway 1 Wal-Mart.

Stealing $10,000 or more is considered first-degree theft; Buns now faces a Class C felony. If convicted, Buns could spend up to 10 years in prison and be fined up to $10,000. The prison term may be deferred or suspended, because the felony is not classified as a forcible one.

Two charged with forgery

A former UI Sigma Nu member faces a felony charge after allegedly charging more than $1,100 of merchandise to the fraternity without authorization, Coralville police said.

Christopher Agyeman, 22, was charged with forgery and second-degree theft Sept. 5 after allegedly entering the Coralville Hy-Vee on five different occasions and charging $1,167.02 in merchandise to the fraternity, according to police reports.

Agyeman signed the invoices with the name of the Sigma Nu chef. Authorities said he had "no authority from the fraternity or [the chef] to do so."

Police allege that Agyeman admitted to making the transactions and said he did so because he was "short on cash."

In another case, Iowa City police charged Phillip Lunday, 22, with forgery Aug. 15. Lunday allegedly used someone's credit/debit card in July and signed that person's name at Gamers.

When asked, Lunday told employees the card was his girlfriend's, according to reports. The victim was not Lunday's girlfriend and said she didn't know him. She said she had lost her card on the weekend of July 15, police reported.

Both forgery charges are classified as Class D felonies, each punishable by up to five years in prison and a fine up to $7,500.

Schnoor to head climate-change panel

UI engineering Professor Jerry Schnoor, who is the chairman of the UI Energy Conservation Advisory Council, was named the chairman of the new Iowa Climate Change Advisory Council by Gov. Chet Culver on Thursday.

Schnoor
UI engineering professor

Schnoor, also the co-director of the Center for Global and Regional Environmental Research, was appointed as part of the new 27-member council, which was created by a bill Culver signed into law April.

The bill tasks the council with determining the best strategies for curbing greenhouse-gas emissions, as well as collecting data on carbon-emitting facilities in Iowa.

The committee's goal is to develop a report for the Iowa Legislature by Jan. 1, 2008, with plans to reduce the state's carbon emissions presented by September of that year.

Schnoor noted that he would have one advantage on the committee — 11 years ago, he and one of his former students, Richard Ney, who will also work on the council, developed the first greenhouse-gas action plan for Iowa.

"Even way back then, we were thinking about this function we're now supposed to provide for the governor," Schnoor said.

Panel cuts own money to fund groups

Where do student-activity fees go?

By Patrick Larkin
THE DAILY IOWAN

In two years, the UI Student Government's Student Assembly Budgeting and Allocating Committee has cut approximately a third of its own funding.

"The UISG had a bloated budget," said Maison Bleam, who became chairman of the budget committee to address what he labeled "a problem with the entire structure."

Student groups were complaining about a lack of funding, he said, so he pushed for UISG budget cuts in 2005, doling money to student groups instead. UISG has taken smaller portions of activity fees each year since then.

All full-time UI students pay mandatory student-activity fees of $29 per semester per student; part-time students are charged in proportion to the number of credit hours for which they are enrolled. Altogether, the 2007-08 activity fee adds up to approximately $1.5 million in revenue.

This year, the UISG budget panel took $876,554 in funds from the fees for division among more than 400 student groups.

Priority-one groups, which receive nearly 77 percent of the funding and include SCOPE and Student Legal Services, are year-round and expected to have campuswide goals.

Priority-two groups either represent annual events, such as Homecoming, or sub-governing bodies, such as the medical student council.

The remaining 90 percent of student organizations are priority three.

Groups can also apply for an additional $179,939 in funding during four supplementary funding periods throughout the school year.

Funding requests for the first period are due today; the budget committee will assess them on Sept. 18 at 6:30 p.m.

Bleam said 22 requests were received as of Thursday at 5 p.m., and he anticipates an additional 10 or 15. Most, if not all, will be from priority-three groups, he said, noting that priority-three groups usually make event-specific requests.

Approximately $134,024 — or 19 percent — of the budget committee's allocations go to SCOPE, the group that organizes concerts and entertainment for the UI campus. SCOPE budgets $60,000 for a general concert fund, and

UI adviser at home in the world of dragons

When Sarah Prineas isn't working in the Blank Honors Center, she lives amid a Victorian London that never existed.

Wesley Cropp/The Daily Iowan

UI Honors Program scholarship adviser Sarah Prineas loads her miniature trebuchet with a head cut off from a doll in her office at the Blank Honors Center on Aug. 30. Prineas is now in the process of writing the third book of her trilogy of fantasy novels, the first of which will be released in the summer of 2008, called The Magic Thief: Stolen.

By Margaret Poe
THE DAILY IOWAN

Isolated in a new country, newborn son at her side, Sarah Prineas was bored.

First, she passed her days reading Bridget Jones's Diary and Terry Pratchett's wizard-themed novels. Soon she dove into writing her first story — a tale told through the journal entries of a professor of magic.

Seven years later, the UI adviser and occasional teacher is scripting a whimsical alphabet, polishing off the third book in a trilogy, and preparing a pre-publication tour for the first one, The Magic Thief: Stolen, set for release next summer.

Idleness is but a distant memory as sweeping plots of wizardry and magic consume her.

"It's so big, it leaks out of your brain and your ears," she said. "It's really encompassing. It takes over my life."

Much of the writing she did in Germany, where her physicist husband was completing post-doctoral work, landed in the garbage, she said. Yet she learned from those early attempts, and she kept writing when they moved to Iowa City.

"A novel is like a craft. It's not something that's inherent," said Prineas, sitting in her sunny office, a greenhouse-like haven draped in plants and the occasional lurking fire-breathing figurine.

The youthful Prineas, wearing a black sweater, black Converses, and rimless glasses, delights in the fantasy genre — in which a specific series of story lines and tropes coincide with the freedom of magic.

She lives among dragons now — specifically, a fleet of winged serpents transplanted into early Victorian London.

"I just left the Earth as we know it all together, and that's where I am now," she said.

Like most fantasy novelists, Prineas draws her inspiration from the past. She even researched the design of the old London bridge to accurately represent it in her books. The genre contrasts with science fiction, which tends to be forward-looking, said Prineas, who prefers the more character-oriented, storytelling nature of fantasy.

Fantasy also sells a lot better, she noted.

Publishing giant HarperCollins is handling the books, which will be translated into eight languages.

Melanie Donovan, Prineas' editor, said HarperCollins pushed The Magic Thief: Stolen a year ahead of its original publication date. She credited it to Prineas' rapid writing progress — an impressive feat, given her full-time day job as the Honors Program scholarship adviser.

But with the publicity process in full swing, Prineas downgraded to part-time at the Blank Honors Center. Drawing inspiration from 12-year-old daughter Maud, Prineas will help develop a micro-site to promote her work, one of some 500 children's books HarperCollins publishes.

"We have to find ways to draw people's attention to the book and help it find the market it deserves," Donovan said.

Capitalizing on the Internet's legions of fantasy fiends, Prineas is a furious blogger, often engaging in post-after-post dialogues with readers about other writers, her own book's progress, and long walks with her family.

She enters a children's book world eternally rocked by the Harry Potter phenomenon, but Prineas has a confession.

"I'm not sure I should reveal this," she said.

She's never read them.

It's a startling admission, but between publishing 18 stories and writing three novels, Prineas doesn't have much time to spare.

Not that she's complaining. "Every writer dreams of publishing. I have a dream come true, really. It's a lot of work and stuff," Prineas said. "It's also just incredible."

Sperm case may set precedent

SPERM

Thomas Burton-Christy, Christy's father, gave teary testimony at a hearing Thursday.

"I don't understand exactly what's going on here," he said to Beckelman, pleading for her to approve the motion asking for emergency orders to take Christy's sperm. "They are being given a chance now to create a life. I think it could be something very special." He said they needed to have the sperm removed soon, before Christy dies. "My daughter-in-law wants to have a baby," Burton-

A brief history of the case

• A motorcycle accident on Sept. 9 left 23-year-old Daniel Christy in critical condition, which will most likely kill him, UIHC doctors said. His fiancée, Amy Cruse, asked UIHC to harvest his sperm so she could have his baby.

Source: 6th District Court Hearing

Christy said, adding that Christy had expressed a desire to have children before his son's crash. Attorney Lori Klockau said in a case like this, time is of great importance and the judge needed show haste in her ruling because of the Christy's critical state. Burton-Christy said his son was riding his motorcycle down the interstate when he tried to pass a vehicle. During the attempted pass, a car to his left changed lanes and hit Christy, causing him to skid nearly 300 feet across the highway. He is now listed in critical condition at the hospital. "There's no case law on the books for this," Klockau said at the hearing. ## Frosh adjusts to slow life

FRESHMAN

"I think they saw that I came from a deprived school," Henderson said. "And although I may not know everything, I'll try hard to get it." His arrival started with one mishap — a missed flight connection from Minneapolis to Cedar Rapids. Despite the connection error, Iowa Bioscience Advantage members Jodi Linley and Jessica Tellez awaited the arrival of Henderson and his parents, Silvia and Robert. All it took was a 30-minute minivan ride from the airport to know that life was going to be much different from back East, Henderson said. "The D.C. metro area is fast-paced," the 17-year-old said. "People are so concerned, they sometimes forget to stop and look at relationships around them." Linley, the UI assistant director of the Iowa Bioscience Advantage, said she wanted to make sure Henderson and his family weren't overwhelmed when they arrived. Programs such as the Iowa Bioscience Advantage and Iowa Edge — designed to ease the move to the UI for minority students — that contributed to a smooth change, Henderson said. "I was lucky having someone to hold my hand," he said. "It made the transition much smoother." A self-described "social butterfly," he said it hasn't been difficult to start with a fresh slate. Former temporary-housing roommate Dan Magistrelli said Henderson and around 10 friends happily greeted him when he first arrived at their improvised dorm room. "[He's] real friendly," Magistrelli said. "It was cool coming in here first thing and getting a warm welcome." With the many other residence halls he could have ended up in, Henderson said, he enjoys living in Stanley. "I came to like that it's a quiet house; everyone's an upperclassman," he said. "Currier is loud. Burge, dirty Burge." As for Daum? "And I don't want to be a complete bookworm," he said. Even though he does enjoy what he describes as the small communal feeling of Stanley, he misses his family and neighbors' cooking. "Especially pasta," he said. serving as both the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations and as the secretary of State. During that time, Albright said, she observed a very confident, capable leader in Rodham Clinton. "You know, I may be the totally wrong person to talk about Hillary, because I'm so prejudiced about her," Albright said. "She's very smart, very ready, very strong, experienced, and ready to take America to a different level."

Albright, in a question-and-answer session, touted the senator's background several times, noting her work particularly at the Fourth World Conference on Women in Beijing when Rodham Clinton "really electrified the conference." "What she did in a simple sentence was to capture what women's issues are all about," Albright recalled. "She said, 'Human-rights issues are women's issues, and women's issues are human-rights issues.'" When an audience member asked Albright to compare Rodham Clinton's experience with that of other Democratic contenders, she abstained. "I am not going to criticize other candidates," she said. "We have the tendency in the Democratic Party to form our fiery lines in circles, and we burn each other." Instead, her remarks focused on discussing what she called "America's declining reputation." "I don't think we have to be loved, I don't think we have to be feared," she said. "But I think we have to be respected." She said America lost international respect because of humiliations such as those that occurred in Abu Ghraib. Albright noted that the United States has condemned others for breaking the same sort of

UI has electric idea in trucks

As part of its move toward greener technology, the UI is investigating the possibility of using electric vehicles.

By Ben Fornell
THE DAILY IOWAN

Garry Creed's pickup truck is a conversation starter.

It may be because it has no doors, or because its electric engine is nearly silent when he's stopped at a light, but the UI Facilities Management engineer said that students are always asking him what he's driving.

Creed said he thinks of it as a golf cart, albeit one that can haul 1,300 pounds.

"Drives like a golf cart," he said. "That's what I think it is."

Actually, it's a GEM eL XD electric utility vehicle, the first of its kind in the UI fleet and the beginning of a trial run to see how many vehicles could be replaced by electric. Creed works in Facilities Management's mechanical-distribution department, which is charged in part with providing utility vehicles. He is testing the new truck as part of a plan he developed last January to integrate the new technology.

Creed's vehicle arrived on June 5, with four more on their way from GEM expected to arrive later this month. He estimated the annual cost of electricity for the vehicle to be around $75 per year. He said that the cost of gas for a traditional pickup would be closer to $1,500.

The electric utility vehicles cost slightly more than $15,000. Creed said the department plans to use the trucks year-round, installing doors on them for the winter.

"I like it because it's open," Creed said, noting that the wide-open sides of the truck don't make him feel cut off from pedestrians and the world.

Among the questions people ask him, he said, include what the electric utility vehicle is, where they can get one, how fast it will go.

He has not ventured as far out as the Oakdale Campus yet, he said, but the small electric truck could make it.

"At 25 mph, it's a little slow," he said, adding that the vehicle can go 25 to 30 miles on a single charge.

On Wednesday, the vehicle slowed to around 19 mph going up the Grand Avenue hill toward the Field House, but otherwise had no trouble keeping up with traffic during a cross-campus drive. Riding in one is like riding in a convertible, but with a roof.

Creed said he used to drive a loud, diesel-powered John Deere Gator, with a cab and a rear hauling bed just like the new truck. He said one of his favorite features of the new truck is the quiet operation.

"You just hear a little whine, and it's a-goin'," Creed said.

Gonzales: We all make mistakes

By David Pitt
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES — Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said on Thursday he made mistakes but plans to move on after he leaves office next week with a sense of pride that he's served his country.

"We're all human, and all of us make mistakes, and the thing that's important is to identify when those were made, acknowledge the mistakes, correct the mistakes, and then you move on," he said. "And so that's what I've endeavored to do as attorney general."

Republicans and Democrats in Congress had criticized Gonzales and questioned his credibility over the firings of nine federal prosecutors and the Bush administration's terrorist surveillance programs.

He announced last month that he would step down on Monday.

In Des Moines on Thursday to discuss Project Safe Childhood, an Internet predator and pornography law-enforcement project, Gonzales said he leaves proud of the job he's done.

"When you serve in these positions there are tough decisions, there are tough times that occur but I think we did a lot of good things," he said.

Gonzales said he made his trip to Des Moines just days before leaving office to fulfill a commitment he had made long ago.

Gonzales
attorney general

"This had been on my schedule for quite some time, and even though I had decided to leave my position at the end of this week, I didn't want to cancel this visit," he said.

He held a round-table discussion with Iowa's two federal prosecutors and local law-enforcement officials from across the state.

He said Project Safe Childhood has resulted in 1,139 arrests for online child exploitation in the first half of this fiscal year, a 20 percent increase from the same period a year ago.

He said nearly 60 percent of those convicted were sentenced to at least five years in prison. Eleven defendants received life sentences, he said.

He pointed to two cases as examples of the effectiveness of the program.

On May 11, 2006, Terence Scott Edgington, 38, of Osceola was sentenced to 30 years in prison after pleading guilty to production of child pornography.

Edgington acknowledged sexually abusing 23 minor children from 18 months to 12 years old by making and distributing pornographic images of them using the Internet.

Gonzales also mentioned the case of James Bentley, 34, of Cedar Rapids, who was sentenced in June to 100 years in prison for taking sexually explicit photos of Jetseta Gage and a younger child.

A jury convicted him on six sexual-exploitation and child-pornography charges.

Gage was 10 when she was kidnapped and killed in March 2005. Bentley's older brother, Roger Bentley, was convicted of those crimes and sentenced to life in prison.

Bush OKs gradual troop pullouts in Iraq

Charles Dharapak/Associated Press

President Bush shakes hands with Abdul-Sattar Abu Risha (right), the leader of the Anbar Salvation Council — an alliance of clans backing the Iraqi government and U.S. forces — during a meeting with tribal leaders at Al-Asad Air Base in Anbar province, Iraq, on Sept. 3. Abu Risha was killed Thursday by a bomb planted near his home.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rejecting calls to leave Iraq, President Bush on Thursday approved gradual U.S. troop reductions from their highest level of the war and said more forces can come home as progress is made. At the same time, he said Iraq needs “an enduring relationship with America.”

In remarks prepared for a prime-time address from the Oval Office, Bush presented his strategy for reducing U.S. forces. “The principle guiding my decisions on troop levels in Iraq is: return on success. The more successful we are, the more American troops can return home.”

With no dramatic change in course, Bush’s decision sets the stage for a fiery political debate in Congress and on the 2008 presidential campaign trail.

Bush approved the recommendations of Gen. David Petraeus, the top U.S. commander in Iraq, to withdraw at least 21,500 combat forces and an undetermined number of support troops by July.

The White House said 5,700 troops would be home by Christmas, but refused to pinpoint how many would return by summer.

Leading Sunni ally of U.S. assassinated

BAGHDAD (AP) — The assassination Thursday of the leader of the Sunni Arab revolt against Qaeda militants dealt a setback to one of the few success stories in U.S. efforts to stabilize Iraq, but tribesmen in Anbar province vowed not to be deterred in fighting the terror movement.

American and Iraqi officials hoped the death of Abdul-Sattar Abu Risha would not stall the campaign to drive Al Qaeda in Mesopotamia from the vast province spreading west of Baghdad and reconcile Sunnis with the Shiite-led national government.

It was the biggest blow to the Anbar tribal alliance since a suicide bomber killed four anti-Qaeda sheiks as they met in a Baghdad hotel in June. Abu Risha himself had escaped a suicide attack in February. But those attacks and others did not stop the campaign against Al Qaeda in Mesopotamia.

Abu Risha, the head of the Anbar Awakening Council who met with President Bush just 10 days earlier, died when a roadside bomb exploded near his home just west of Ramadi as he returned from his farm, police Col. Tareq Youssef said. Two bodyguards and the driver also were killed.

Moments later a car bomb exploded nearby but caused no casualties. An Interior Ministry spokesman, Maj. Gen. Abdul-Karim Khalaf, said the second bomb was intended as a backup in case Abu Risha escaped the first blast.

Petraeus says Iraqi police don’t need overhaul

WASHINGTON (AP) — The top U.S. commander in Iraq on Thursday rejected an independent commission’s conclusion that Iraq’s national police are so corrupted by sectarian bias that they should be disbanded.

In an Associated Press interview, Gen. David Petraeus acknowledged that some elements of the national police are riddled with problems, but he praised other elements for helping fight the insurgency.

He also revealed that he is looking more broadly for ways to reduce the U.S. force levels in Iraq by trimming support troops from headquarters units. He would not say how many extra troops he’d like to cut beyond the already announced combat brigades, saying the review began just a few weeks ago, and “it’s going to take some time to sort out.”

His Washington appearance came amid escalating calls for an end to the war and a shift in the mission of U.S. forces away from combat roles and into one focused more on training and counterterrorism. The interview followed two full days of grilling by lawmakers on Capitol Hill and a stream of television and media appearances on Wednesday.

Regarding the national police, Petraeus gave no indication that he intended to follow the recommendation of the commission headed by retired Marine Gen. James Jones. Petraeus stressed that he saw a need for immediate corrective action, but he was not specific.

Giuliani accuses Rodham Clinton of ‘character assassination’

ATLANTA (AP) — Republican presidential-nomination contender Rudy Giuliani on Thursday accused Democratic rival Hillary Rodham Clinton of participating in “character assassination” for questioning Gen. David Petraeus about his assessment of progress in Iraq.

Rodham Clinton, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, was one of several Democrats and some Republicans who expressed skepticism with President Bush’s top military general’s more positive outlook on Iraq than recent independent reviews.

Petraeus and U.S. Ambassador Ryan Crocker told Congress Iraq remains largely dysfunctional but said violence in recent months had decreased since the influx of 30,000 additional troops earlier this year.

“The reports that you provide to us really require the willing suspension of disbelief,” Rodham Clinton said Tuesday.

Campaigning in Georgia, Giuliani assailed Rodham Clinton for the second-straight day and tried to link her to a newspaper ad from the liberal antiwar group MoveOn critical of Petraeus. The ad accused Petraeus of “cooking the books” for the White House. “General Petraeus or General Betray Us?” it asked.

Nativist zealots warp American justice

Several years ago, a new kind of vigilante group emerged on the national scene, conducting armed patrols of the Arizona border to search for illegal immigrants. Like those people that they seek to bar from this country, they have moved north.

The Minutemen have made the trek to Iowa. The Minuteman Civil Defense Corps is one of two conservative anti-immigration groups whose members refer to themselves as Minutemen. The controversial organization, whose goal — according to its website — is to assist law enforcement in the apprehension of illegal aliens, has 10 chapters in Iowa, including one in Johnson County. As of yet, the organization has succeeded only in bringing ethnic tension to new heights.

The Minuteman Corps maintains that it is a peaceful and patriotic organization. Craig Halverson, the Minuteman Corps' Iowa director, was adamant in denying that the organization is bigoted.

"We are not racist; we are an organization of laws. We are trying to get our politicians to enforce the laws," Halverson said. "We're trying to educate the populace." But why come to Iowa? The organization is best known for its patrol of America's southern border — not exactly within walking distance of the Hawkeye State. However, according to Minuteman Corps officials, the border is only where the fight begins. "The battle is here; we have businesses here that are abetting illegal aliens," Halverson said. The group has picketed Iowa diversity festivals and political events, according to a report in the Cedar Rapids Gazette.

The presence of illegal aliens in the job market is not the only local issue that the Minuteman Corps intends to fight. The organization maintains that the alleged misconduct starts at the top — with Iowa Gov. Chet Culver.

"Our country was built on the English language," Halverson said. "They decided to go with English, and then Chet Culver goes out and makes Spanish ballots. Spanish is not our way of life; English is."

Suffice it to say, the group has an ardent opposition. Chief among its critics is the Southern Poverty Law Center, a civil-rights group based in Alabama, which runs the Intelligence Project.

Heidi Beirich, a deputy director of the Intelligence Project, says she has thoroughly studied the actions of the Minuteman Corps and its effect on society. She takes strong issue with the "tolerant" self-description used by the group's members.

"They can say that they're not racist, but these organizations have a history of making racist comments and harassing people who appear to be immigrants," she said. "They tend to harass workers at [immigrant] day-labor sites."

This kind of harassment is common among hate groups — not peaceful organizations. The lack of consistency between the claims and actions of the Minutemen has stripped them of all credibility. Their pretense of tolerance and peacefulness are utterly false.

"The Minutemen are a rabidly anti-immigrant vigilante group," Beirich replied when asked about the Minuteman Corps' true nature.

Even in defending themselves, the Minutemen often do more harm than good. Frequently supporting their cause with ridiculous claims — Halverson compared bilingual education to "torture" in a telephone interview with The Daily Iowan — they have little credibility.

According to the Iowa City School District website, foreign-language courses are optional and do not begin until junior high or high school. The classes are approximately 50 minutes long, which, we believe, is legal under both the Geneva Convention and the Eighth Amendment.

The Minuteman Corps has shown its true colors. Frequent reports of its bigoted behavior paint a much different picture from that of the organization's website. The Minuteman Corps attempts to hide its intolerance behind the American flag, but the Minutemen are not patriots. Anyone truly in search of a way to help America would do well to remember the melting pot that founded it — something the Minuteman Corps has clearly forgotten.

Take back sexy

Perched on the windowsill of my sister's sixth-floor studio apartment near U Street, I thumb through the D.C. style magazine Modern Luxury and notice a review of the restaurant Belga Café, where I hosted throughout my spring semester internship. A memorable experience drinking Belgian beer late into the slushy D.C. winter nights and mornings, to be sure, but — unknowingly — I had sipped Abbey Triples with more than just your average wait staff. According to Modern Luxury, "the only thing hotter than that pot of steaming mussels is the waiter who delivers them." Well, damn. If only my middle-school guidance counselor had had the clairvoyance to grace my grinning bowl-cut with such praise, I wouldn't have spent the better half of countless recesses straightening out my birdbath-sized glasses mauled from the shock of a kickball to the face launched off the steady foot of Guy Franko. Rather, knowing that in nine years I would be providing "sultry service" to buttoned-up senators — I probably would have been chillaxin' by the tire swing, swapping Snack Packs for the digits of some wanton lass I sat next to in choir.

The only thing left to ask then is: "John, how did you get to be so damn foxy?" The answer may surprise you. I'm not trying to be a sexy, vainglorious socialite but rather a guide for those of you who feel you hover on the cusp of a life entirely shaped by your own bewitching self.

The Way can be better articulated by the square jaw of the brutally handsome owner and head chef of the Belga Café. In his naturally graceful and flawless Flemish, Chef Bart removes the mystery surrounding his angelic temple of fine Belgian dining. "We are all beautiful, we speak many languages, we are men, women, gay, lesbian, young, old. We are everything. That's what makes us sexy."

Say it to yourself, "We are everything. That's what makes us sexy." Collectivism is the new individualism. The nascent key to unlocking the beautiful you begins in surrounding yourself with other beautiful people. I know the team model of hotness goes against the conventional wisdom of the "lowest common denominator," but trust me: It works. By losing yourself in the sublime magnificence of others, you can be free of the constraints of judgment. In a sense, you create a force-field of aesthetic perfection. I'm not saying that you should try to look, talk, and act like every one else, but rather, bask in your own contribution. Case in point: I am a white, heterosexual, mono-linguistic male with signs of pattern baldness that I haven't addressed until this moment. I am the stereotypical citizen of the West, not some superfreak host. But let's get back to the main point: why I'm beautiful and how you can be, too.

When I think back to Belga, it seems all too clear to me now. Synergy — sure, we servicemen and -women carried the intoxicating scent of Diet Coke-based beef stew and the redolence of boiled seafood, but we did it in a way that charmed even the most crotchety patrons into a smile and a Flaming Samba. This cooperative interaction, involuntary as a heartbeat, allowed our diverse, beddable staff to be the "A" that rose to the top in the bowl of alphabet soup that is the fanciful D.C. restaurant scene.

You must be wondering, then — if being so fine that people try to rip off your clothes like tree bark is a team effort — what do you do when the team has run its course? The answer, my bootylicious readers, is to live in the past until you find another troupe that can lift you up on its coconut-tanned shoulders. Think back to the good 'ol days when being sexified was easy, and in no time flat, you will find your way back to frontline of the pretty parade. The point is this: I didn't go from being the kid who wore jean shirts and overalls in school pictures to this (see photo) by hard work or genetics. I got a job working with hot people. ■

Sororities didn't get fair shake

Although I myself am not always completely supportive of sorority activities, the recent article "Disdaining the stereotypes" (DI, Sept. 12) left me completely perturbed and frustrated with the way it was written. The article gave the impression that it would tame some of the negative images associated with sorority life, but it did the complete opposite. Aside from reaffirming the disdainful stereotypes, it was written in a manner that made the writer seem ultra-superior to the freshman sorority member being interviewed.

The staff writer chose poor quotations and unnecessary descriptors that only added to the harmful stereotypes supposedly being negated. For example, the quotation "We made it when we were supposed to be doing homework" directly gave confirmation that sorority women on campus do not study. I myself have friends in many of the sorority houses on campus, and all have GPAs above 3.0. I am appalled that this article not only made it through the supervising editor, but that the staff writer could have justly thought the sorority image was upheld in a positive way. This piece was not only contradictory, it made it further possible to damage sorority images on campus.

Guest Opinion

Married in Iowa — almost

We were surprised, admittedly stunned, after the Aug. 30 court ruling striking down Iowa's marriage laws limiting marriage to a "man and a woman," thus paving the way for Pam and me to be wed in the Hawkeye State. We didn't think it would happen here in the Heartland, at least not yet. We reread the court decision, and I proposed. It wasn't romantic. But after 20 years, we were past the "tryout stage."

As a former head coach at the UI, a 1984 bronze medalist, and 1988 Olympic-team captain, I had represented Iowans in the national and international athletics arena in a first-class manner. On Aug. 31, Pam and I almost became first-class citizens.

Awake at dawn, we reached a decision: "Let's do this." Knowing a judicial stay was only a matter of time, we Googled an application. The form created our first problem: Who wanted to be the "Groom" and who wanted to be the "Bride?" These were the only choices. Could we cross out "Groom" and each be "Bride?" Would this invalidate the form? Were we really having a discussion about this? OK, flip a coin. Beth is the groom; Pam is the bride.

Now, we needed a witness. At 7 a.m., we called our neighbor: "Hello, Sally, what are you doing this morning?" I asked. "Why?" I didn't hesitate. "Pam and I want to know if you would be our witness for our marriage application. We can't think of anyone else we would rather have." Sally emotionally replied, "I would be honored." Our eyes welled as we realized our marriage was an actual possibility.

"I'm sorry, but the judge's ruling is valid only in Polk County, the local county recorder told us. We exchanged glances. "Let's go." Sally validated our application by signing as a "disinterested" witness, confirming our identities in front of a notary, and my co-workers. We were not sure who was more excited, my co-workers or us. Just as Sally was about to sign, Iris grabbed Meredith's "Welcome Back from Maternity Leave" bouquet, halved it, and handed each of us a floral arrangement. Pam and I traded "Bride" and "Groom" signs while flashbulbs popped.

On the way to Des Moines, we ironed out the invitation list, music, and reception date for friends and family. We were excited about a possibility that had long been closed to us. Imagine having the same legal protections as every other married couple!

Inside the Polk County Administration Building, we traversed a hallway, followed by TV crews and cameras. We signed and notarized our application, and headed to the Courthouse to waive the three-day waiting period, which required a judge's signature. Our plan was to be married in Iowa City by dusk. When we met the judge, Pam and I introduced ourselves, and explained our request. His response was devastating: "I apologize, but the judge just issued an immediate stay, pending appeal to the Iowa Supreme Court. I am so sorry."

We knew this was a possible, even likely, outcome of our marriage attempt. We thought we had steeled ourselves against disappointment. Yet, when it came, it hurt more than we could ever have imagined. Deflated, we left Des Moines with a file-stamped marriage application. It awaits a decision by the Iowa Supreme Court.

Funny, when something isn't legally permissible for a class of individuals to which you belong, you can fool yourself into believing it doesn't matter. However, when something as fundamental as marriage becomes a reality — even for a few hours — it is difficult to return to that state of denial. Marriage matters to us. For 20 years, we have gladly shared in its responsibilities. We had hoped we could finally avail ourselves of its rights.

That afternoon, we went to the same restaurant we dined at two years ago after I was deemed morally fit to become a member of the Iowa Bar. I was, that day, sworn in before some of the same justices who will decide whether I should have the same rights as the Iowans for whom I legally advocate. As we unsuccessfully attempted to blink back our tears, we focused on what we will always remember from this day: our love, and the support of our friends and families. Thank you from the bottom of our broken hearts.

STAFF FAVORITES 5 PARTY SONGS

JARRETT HOTHAN

Finally, the weekend is upon us. Whether your priorities entail watching Moeaki and the boys help send another Iowa State coach to the unemployment line or finally spitting game to that honey dip from your microeconomics class, one thing is for certain: You will eventually need a soundtrack to your festivities. Look no further, for D/reporter Jarrett Hothan presents his top-5 songs to figuratively and literally set the roof on fire at any party:

- "Will2k" — Will Smith
This gem was cruelly buried in time, unearthed by yours truly in order to make you dance like Carlton Banks.
- "Throw Some D's" — Rich Boy
Although this song was the best song of last year, it still works wonders. Rich Boy looks like he should be part of Public Enemy's militant entourage circa 1988.
- "Mad World" — Tears For Fears
Danceable 80's mope-pop at its finest. Search for the hilariously absurd video on YouTube and have fun trying to impersonate the dance moves. Then come battle me in a dance-off.
- "Ignition (Remix)" — R. Kelly
The most sure-fire song available on this countdown, this is a true American classic. Pretending you know all the words is half the fun. Jarrett's challenge to the fellas: Dance with the bare minimum of movement, for it's what true flirts such as R. do.
- "Red Slippers, Red Wheels" — The Ghost
This song by the now-defunct Chicago band should be used sparingly, saved strategically for the climax of the evening. Watch the fun begin, for this pummeling sing-along will send fists and bros flying. Disclaimer: You might want to hide antique furniture, or just break it anyway. That's what Fred Durst would do.

Wizardry with the pens

By Vanessa Veiock
THE DAILY IOWAN

Perched on a low stool, Glen Epstein presses a butterfly pen to a golden sheet of paper. The metal tool scratches across the surface like a rock on cement and juicy red paint splatters without caution. "It doesn't look like I know what I'm doing, but I do — some of the time," the calligrapher muses as he continues to etch away, his strokes appearing less haphazard and more purposeful. Thick lines join with thin ones, and an image of attracting complexity begins to appear. "People think you have to work hard [to make the image], but you just have to find the G spot. You can't be too aggressive," he says and shrugs.

Viewers at a recent artists' reception at the Chait Galleries Downtown, 218 E. Washington St., whisper praises for Epstein, whose work is showing now through Oct. 19 in the gallery's Eclectic Inspiration, Synonymous Execution display.

A charter faculty member of the UI Center for the Book, Epstein presents work untraditionally labeled as calligraphy. "You can really see his character come through in his work," said gallery owner Terri Miller Chait. Prints bounce from simple forms and styles to the more complicated and dense. Straight lines and splashes of color saturate the space between letters, and figures of women twirl across the page. His style remains a work in process, constantly evolving since he started seriously experimenting with fonts after attending the Iowa Writers' Workshop in poetry. "I turned from writing beautiful things to writing things that are beautiful," the Los Angeles native said. Epstein dove headfirst into the craft, teaching himself and practicing eight hours a day. "I started in the dark ages," he said. "There were no teachers, no Internet in the '50s and '60s." Entirely self-motivated, Epstein insists that his skill was waiting to emerge. "It was inside of me, it just needed to come out," he said. Today, after teaching calligraphy at the UI for 24 years, Epstein prevails as one of the best in his skill internationally, with work having been showcased at the Smithsonian, the Getty, and the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Rather than showcase simple typefaces, Epstein's work provokes deeper messages. While he insists, "I'm the least political person I know," much of his work refers to humanitarian crises of the past and present, including the Holocaust. While such events provoke his inspiration, he asserts that being aware of them isn't necessary to derive meaning from his art. "You're not supposed to read it. It's in the name of art," he said. "It's there if you look at it. I try to put a title on the piece to make people's heads go back and forth." With meditations running deep, Epstein believes his work is universal. "[My art] is essentially like music — it can be heard by all people in the world," he said. "People can identify with the human heart; it doesn't have to be read, just as people can listen to music, but they can't tell you what it says — something goes through their body: peacefulness, anxiety, pride, energy." On the white wall of the Chait Galleries, "No No Let Us Play" hangs, tempting interpretation. Creatures and humans speckle multicolored and many-sized letters that point and play in all directions. The work mesmerizes the viewer with an aesthetic appeal that beckons to be watched and provokes an engulfing sentiment — one of curiosity, perhaps even confusion or entrapment. Could Epstein be referencing a craving to escape war for peaceful and good-natured distraction? Or do the jostled lines represent leisure of Epstein's own? Whichever, the answer is open to interpretation, or, perhaps, for those skillful seekers, it's hidden somewhere in the strokes. E-mail D/reporter Vanessa Veiock at: vanessa-veiock@uiowa.edu

A Dominican kid trying to find love

By Kate Casper
THE DAILY IOWAN

Busting out prose with casual ease, lyric street talk and crass edginess, Junot Díaz brings the struggles of an immigrant family — especially those of the awkward, overweight teenager — to life in his long-awaited novel. "I wanted to write a book about a tragic nerd character," he said. Oscar, the story's protagonist, quickly took shape and turned out to be "a geeky, J.R.R. Tolkien-obsessed Dominican kid trying to find love." Entering its second week of publication, The Brief Wondrous Life of Oscar Wao follows in the wake of Díaz's 1996 celebrated short-story collection, Drown. He will read from the novel on Sept. 16 at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St.

Junot Díaz
Reading, fiction
The Brief Wondrous Life of Oscar Wao
When: 6:30 p.m. Sept. 16
Where: Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque
Admission: Free

The book details the journey Oscar's family take back and forth between their native Dominican Republic and their home in New Jersey. Díaz doesn't hide Oscar's faults, nor does he pump up the poor kid's ego. "Our hero was not one of those Dominican cats everybody's always going on about — he wasn't no home-run hitter or a fly bachatero, not a playboy with a million hots on his jock," Díaz writes. But readers still pull for Oscar as he pursues his first real kiss. Díaz said the novel began as a short story, but eventually the story erupted and needed a bigger canvas. Díaz is able to draw parallels between his life and his character's because he immigrated to the United States from the Dominican Republic with his parents at age 6. As a foreign-born citizen, Díaz often writes about issues of ethnicity and immigration. Even though he said his profession doesn't necessitate political engagement, Díaz certainly doesn't shy away from expressing his political beliefs. Life can be frustrating in a country full of paradoxes, said the tenured professor of creative writing at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The United States relies a great deal on its immigrant population, he said, but at the same time, it makes life difficult for them. "The contradictions weigh heavily on you," he said. Despite the difficulty of being an immigrant, Díaz encourages young writers to follow their dreams as he did, noting that they should be ready for some competitive struggles. Even though today's society expects authors to release new work every year or so, Díaz is an example of why taking your time (in his case, 11 years) to create a quality product is worth it. "Take your time, and work hard," he said. "This is a culture that will take as much as it can." E-mail D/reporter Kate Casper at: kate-casper@uiowa.edu

CYCLONE SURVIVAL GUIDE

The Clones are playing their Super Bowl at home this year, meaning thousands of Hawkeye faithful will travel to Ames this weekend. But watch out! This ain't another Chicago road trip. While Iowa State may be the birthplace of the electronic digital computer, a "hard drive" to most ISU students means mudding in a 1982 Ford pickup. The following guide will help Hawk fans cope with the culture shock.

Iowa looks to turn pregame perception into postgame reality against Iowa State.

By Brendan Stiles
THE DAILY IOWAN

It's no secret that Iowa State wants nothing more than to beat Iowa on Saturday.

But it's also clear how important this game is to the Hawkeyes.

When the two Hawkeye State rivals square off in Ames, Iowa looks to keep the Cy-Hawk Trophy in its possession for the second-consecutive year. The Hawkeyes come into this season's battle with a 2-0 record, while the Cyclones enter at 0-2, coming off a 24-13 loss last week at home to Northern Iowa.

The Iowa players believe the Cyclones are better than their record indicates, however, and they expect the best Iowa State has to offer.

"Records really don't count when it comes to Iowa-Iowa State," senior defensive end Kenny Iwebema said. "Once you play Iowa State, you just throw all the numbers out the window. It's a big game for both of us."

In last year's contest in Iowa City, Iowa State jumped out to a 14-10 halftime lead before Iowa came from behind to regain the Cy-Hawk Trophy with a 27-17 victory.

There will be two interesting twists on Saturday. For starters, Iowa State will honor its 1977 Peach Bowl squad by wearing throwback uniforms that resemble what the Cyclones wore 30 years ago. Because the Iowa State uniforms are white, Iowa will wear its home black jerseys on Saturday, even though the contest is in Jack Trice Stadium.

The other more obvious twist involves the Cyclones' coaching staff, with Gene Chizik taking over the program for Dan McCarney, who resigned after 12 years at Iowa State.

Looking for consistency

By Eric Mandel THE DAILY IOWAN

The Big Ten volleyball season feels much like the warning on the side-view mirrors of cars parked outside Carver-Hawkeye Arena — closer than it appears.

Hiza junior

While the Hawkeye volleyball team hosts its second, and final, tournament of the year against Texas Arlington (5-5), Ball State (1-7), and the College of Charleston (4-3) this weekend, the home event marks the last match before Big Ten play.

"We've had a great week of practice, and we've learned a lot from the mistakes we made last week," said junior Emily Hiza. "We've got some good teams coming in — it is a good weekend to prepare for Big Tens."

Iowa is anxious to jump back onto the court after disheartening losses to Iowa State and No. 21 LSU.

After pounding Drake in the first match, the Hawkeyes lacked their usual offensive prowess against the Cyclones, hitting at a mere .147 percent as a team and falling in all three games.

"We need to finish those last points," coach Cindy Fredrick said. "That last kill has to go in, the last dig has to be there, the last pass or last block need to be on the money."

"We've seen streaks of [where we want to be], but we have to see it on a consistent basis."

While losing is never fun, especially to the Cyclones, the Hawkeyes' confidence didn't waver, and they nearly toppled nationally ranked LSU before falling in the fifth game, 19-17. The effort left the squad knowing it can compete with the best.

"It just shows that our team is really resilient, and we're able to recover and move on because you are going to suffer a loss at some point," Hiza said. "You just have to come back from [the losses], and life goes on."

Iowa will continue to lean heavily on its veterans for poise and leadership, but it will receive a boost — junior Catherine Smale, last year's leader in kills per game, is expected back from the leg injury she suffered in the first match of the year.

In Smale's absence, sophomore Megan Schipper tops the team with 104 kills, is tied for the lead with 14 aces, and is second on the team with 70 digs.

Juniors Hiza and Laura Kremer both rank in the top 10 in key Big Ten statistical categories, with Kremer's 46 blocks fifth-best in the conference and Hiza's 132 digs seventh-best.

"We have been so close against some really, really good teams, and I think once we get over that hump, you're going to see improvement in leaps and bounds," Fredrick said. "But we need to get that win instead of coming so close."

McCarney, who was an Iowa assistant under Hayden Fry during the 1980s, as was current Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz, left Iowa State with 56 career victories, more than any coach in Cyclone history. Against the Hawkeyes, his record was 6-6, 5-3 against Ferentz.

Ferentz doesn't see the rivalry being any different coaching against Chizik from what it had been coaching against his former Hawkeye colleague in the last eight seasons.

"I think to me, the series is probably bigger than any individuals involved," Ferentz said. "Whether you're from Iowa or not from Iowa, all of us live in Iowa, both coaching staffs, both rosters full of players. You know, when you have that going, it certainly adds to the mix a little bit."

Prior to arriving in Ames, Chizik had spent the last four seasons as a defensive coordinator with stops at Auburn and Texas. During that stretch, he coached back-to-back undefeated squads that won as many as 29 games in a row between the two schools.

The challenge for Iowa could come mentally this week. Even though Iowa State is one of Iowa's biggest rivals, the Hawkeyes look superior on paper; they also have a trip to No. 7 Wisconsin on the horizon.

Iowa cornerback Charles Godfrey tackles Iowa State's Walter Nickel on Sept. 16, 2006. Godfrey shares the Big Ten lead with two interceptions this season.

With that said, though, the only talk among the Iowa players and coaches this week has been focused on the challenge facing them in Ames.

"They're always going to play tough against us, and regardless of their record, they're a good football team," sophomore quarterback Jake Christensen said. "They're well-coached, and they're going to be very aggressive. We have to be ready to handle it."

FIELD HOCKEY

Griesbaum could get No. 100

Iowa field-hockey coach Tracey Griesbaum has a shot at her 100th win this weekend in Fairfield, Conn.

Griesbaum, who has a 98-76-3 career record, needs a pair of key road victories to reach the milestone. On Saturday at noon, the Hawkeyes will face Sacred Heart, and they are slated to meet Fairfield University on Sept. 16 at 1 p.m.

Going into the weekend, Sacred Heart (2-5) is coming off a 4-2 win on Wednesday against Brown University, but it was on a four-game losing skid before that.

Griesbaum
coach

Sacred Heart goalkeeper Kristen McIntire has the second-most saves in the nation with 17, but throughout the season, the Pioneers have been out-scored, out-shot, and out-cornered by their opposition.

Likewise, Fairfield (1-5) is having problems with winning early this season. The Staggs have only one win, against Saint Joseph's on Sept. 1, and they have failed to score more than one goal in their last five contests.

No. 4 Iowa has been spreading the goals around, with junior forward Lauren Pfeiffer leading the team in goals (four) and juniors Katie Naughton and Lindsey Duffy following closely behind with three each.

"It's a sign we have depth," Griesbaum said. "All these athletes have skill to score."

Soccer looks for 1st win

The Iowa soccer team will play host to Drake at 7 p.m. in the Iowa Soccer Complex.

By Sam Martin

THE DAILY IOWAN

Defense has been Iowa's strength early in the season, with the Hawks holding opponents to just three goals. Unfortunately for the Hawkeyes, they've scored only once, leading to three draws in their first four games.

Iowa will look to buck the trend when it faces off against Drake tonight in the Iowa Soccer Complex. Iowa is 2-0 against the Bulldogs, including last season's 1-0 win in Des Moines.

With the scoring drought stretching past 400 minutes, is there any added pressure to notch that second, elusive goal?

"There's always that little bit of pressure because scoring wins games, and that's what our goal is," said Amanda Martin, a freshman midfielder. "But we've been playing well on defense, we're transitioning, we're shooting in practice ... the goals will definitely come."

Head coach Ron Rainey said he isn't concerned about his team's slow offensive start.

"It's very hard to score goals at the beginning of the year," he said. "What we have to do is keep putting ourselves in a position to finish and a position to score goals.

"Do we want to have eight, nine goals right now after the first four games? Sure, but we don't, so now we just have to keep putting ourselves in a position to score, and [we] will. They'll start going in."

The team's last game, a scoreless draw against Iowa State on Sept. 9, featured an aggressive Hawkeye attack. Senior Kelsie Full nearly netted a goal in the first minute, but her shot glanced off the post. Iowa set the tempo for most of the game and came close several times to scoring the game-winner in overtime.

"I thought we had more chances [against Iowa State], and again, they just didn't go in," Rainey said.

Iowa has been without a pair

Martin
midfielder

of starters for the last two games because of injuries in a Sept. 2 match against Northern Illinois, but it will get one back tonight. Jackie Kaeding, who missed all of last year because of an injury, is expected to start tonight, Rainey said Thursday. The redshirt sophomore midfielder had been slowed by a muscle pull.

Forward Melisa Kaetterhenry remains sidelined with a foot injury. The senior from Middleton, Wis., will be re-examined next week; she hopes to be back in time for the start of Big Ten play later this month.

"This is the first time I've been out with an injury in my whole career," she said. "It's tough, but I'm glad for the perspective it gives me. I'm not so invested in it, so I can be more objective with the way I see how we're playing."

Drake comes to Iowa City with a 1-1-1 record, having knocked off DePaul last week. The Bulldogs also beat Iowa State, 2-1, in an exhibition match last month.

"Drake's a really good team,"

Rainey said. "If you look at [the Bulldogs'] results, they've done an excellent job. We have a ton of respect for them."

Martin, who started in each of the last two games, believes if the Hawkeyes can come out firing, they have a chance at notching their first victory of the season.

"If we just play as a team and connect, I think we can win," she said. "I know [Drake] is a nice, competitive team — it's good, it's physical. If we just play our game and play like we did [against] Navy and get up early, I think we can do it."

Harriers set to fly

The 14th-ranked Iowa women's cross-country team will play host to the Hawkeye Invitational on Saturday.

By Nick Compton
THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa fans take note: Ames might be the epicenter of the Hawkeye Nation on Saturday, but those hoping to root for the Black-and-Gold this weekend need not leave the friendly confines of Iowa City.

There won't be any shoulder-pads or bone-jarring collisions, but there will be plenty of competition on campus Saturday morning, when the Iowa women's cross-country team hosts the Hawkeye Invitational at the Ashton Cross-Country Course. The 4K competition is slated to begin at 8:30 a.m., and it will feature squads from Oregon State, Wichita State, and Northern Iowa.

The Hawks, who capped off a highly successful 2006 season by taking third place in the Midwest Regional meet and 17th place at the NCAA championships, are ranked 14th nationally and third regionally in the United States Track and Field and Cross-Country Coaches Association polls released early this week.

Head coach Layne Anderson said the preseason rankings, which come after most teams have competed, are a fair representation of the field and give the team incentive to work hard. Last season, the Hawks began the season ranked 15th nationally and climbed as high as eighth before finishing 17th.

"We may bounce around in the polls a little," Anderson said. "But hopefully, we get higher than eighth and finish lower than 17th."

While the female harriers sent a limited-squad to participate at the Western Illinois Invite in Macomb, Ill., on Aug. 31, Saturday's event will mark

Robin Svec/The Daily Iowan
Hawkeye runners Diane Nukuri (right) and Jolly Burke check their times during Iowa women's cross-country practice on Tuesday. Iowa will compete in its first home meet of the season, the Hawkeye Invitational, at the Ashton Cross-Country Course on Saturday.

this season's first fully competitive meet for the Hawks.

Anderson expects around 16 Hawkeye runners to compete, of whom the top five will score. Key senior returnees Diane Nukuri and Racheal Marchand will each compete for the first time this season, both hoping to improve on All-American finishes last season. Senior Meghan Armstrong, a 2007 track and field All-American who ran to an eighth-place finish in the mile at last season's NCAA track championship meet, will also compete.

The talented seniors will be aided by experienced sophomores Jolly Burke and Krista Anderson, who both played crucial roles in last year's success, Coach Anderson said.

Competing for the first time as Hawkeyes will be freshman twins Amanda and Lauren Hardesty of Valparaiso, Ind. The twins' high-school success and impressive preseason workouts have caught Anderson's eye, and he says he "expects big things" from the young runners.

Oregon State is ranked 12th in the West region by the preseason coaches' polls, and Wichita State and UNI are ranked sixth and 13th respectively in the Midwest region.

"We'll have our work cut out for us," Layne Anderson said. "It will be a smaller field, but the quality will be there. We'll be able to judge where we're at as a team."

Despite its relatively small size, Saturday's meet is not being treated as just another drop-in-the-bucket, Layne Anderson said.

"Even though it's a small meet, everyone treats it like a professional event," he said. "The course is in fantastic shape, the grass is great, the markers are effective, and now, it will be up to us to capitalize on it all."

Thome sharing chase

By Rick Gano
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Jim Thome's next swing might send the ball over the fence and land him in some exclusive company. When that 500th homer does fly off his bat — and his next chime will come today — Thome will make sure it's not a solo achievement.

He's shared the journey with his family and his teammates, and he hopes to do the same with fans everywhere, because he and his father plan to personally deliver the ball to the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown.

"He's been great with it. He has let everyone in," Chicago White Sox teammate Paul Konerko said.

"I imagine sometimes when guys get into that situation, they're probably not the friendliest guys to begin with, and they go out and make it their own thing, but he's proving again he's a great teammate by letting everyone share with him."

Thome could become the 23rd player to reach 500 and the third this season, joining former White Sox star and current Blue Jay DH Frank Thomas — whose old locker Thome now occupies — and Alex Rodriguez of the Yankees.

Thome hit No. 499 on Wednesday with his dad, sister, wife, and daughter cheering from the seats. And it came against the team he spent most of his career with, the Cleveland Indians.

Affable and approachable, Thome hails from Peoria, Ill., around 2½ hours from Chicago, and he has been able to play closer to home after he was traded to the White Sox from the Phillies before last season. He spent three years in Philadelphia, the last one sidetracked by injuries, after 12 seasons in Cleveland.

Thome said he has a special offer for the fan who catches or retrieves the ball that marks his 500th homer and will reveal it today when the White Sox play the Anaheim Angels and he faces Bartolo Colon, a former Indians' teammate.

"If we're lucky enough, my dad and I are going to take the ball and deliver it to the Hall of Fame," said Thome. "I think for me, the history of the game, I would rather have the ball there. Just because it would mean something and going with my father would be very, very special. It would be a pretty cool thing to take it with him and to see it [hall] would be neat."

Oden to miss season

By Anne M. Peterson
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PORTLAND, Ore. — Greg Oden, the top pick in this year's NBA draft, likely will miss his first season with the Portland Trail Blazers after surgery on his right knee Thursday.

Doctors found cartilage damage during an exploratory procedure, and team physician Don Roberts performed microfracture surgery to repair the damage.

"There are things about this that are positive for Greg. First of all, he is young. The area in which the damage was is small, and the rest of his knee looked normal," Roberts said in a statement. "All those are good signs for a complete recovery from microfracture surgery."

The 7-foot center is expected to be on crutches for up to eight weeks. Full recovery likely will take six to 12 months, the team said.

Oden was the No. 1 pick in the June draft out of Ohio State, where he averaged 15.7 points and 9.6 rebounds.

The Blazers scheduled a news conference Thursday to discuss Oden's situation.

"Certainly, this is a setback, but our future is still incredibly bright," Trail Blazers general manager Kevin Pritchard said. "Is it disappointing? Yes. However, this is a great core of talent and players of strong character and will continue to be."

It was Oden's second health problem since the Trail Blazers drafted him. He had a tonsillectomy in July after struggling in two Las Vegas summer-league games.

Oden recovered, and he had been working out in the Portland area. The MRI was taken Thursday, and Oden refrained from working out over the weekend.

Despite being hampered by a wrist injury at Ohio State, Oden led the Buckeyes to the national-championship game as a freshman. He had 25 points and 12 rebounds in the loss to Florida.

Oden talked about the injury earlier this week in his blog. He said he had a sharp pain about a month ago when he was on vacation.

Daily Break

“The world economy in the last few years has shown to be quite resilient in strong oil prices, but [$80 a barrel oil] is certainly a new territory for crude oil, and if sustained, there is bound to be some impact on the economy.”

—Victor Shum, an energy analyst at Purvin & Gertz.

- I wear underwear whenever I weigh myself at the gym — not because I'm scared to be naked, but so that I can later mentally subtract five pounds for “clothes.”
- I'm a modern guy; I believe men and women should pay equally into a relationship. That's why I'll only pay for that half of a boob job.
- I will, however, always pay for half of a boob job.
- Sometimes when I'm constipated, I just clench my fists real tight and bellow out a loud “Ka-me-ha-me-HA!” It usually gets the job done.
- I almost got married once. I also got a girl pregnant once. As you might have guessed, those two “onces” are related.
- I am unequivocally opposed to men wearing scarves — even in winter. Scarves are the opposite of manly. And they make my calves look fat.
- I don't have any hard evidence to support this, but I'm pretty sure a fat guy invented toffee.
- I wear workout clothes while lounging. If I ever get the mad urge to do lunges during a MythBusters commercial break, I want to be prepared.
- I consider undecided voters to be democracy's greatest threat. Or maybe they aren't. No, they are. Or maybe not.
- If there's one thing I look for in a potential girlfriend, it's me.

horoscopes Friday, September 14, 2007 —by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Think before you speak or make a move. A partnership can alter the way you handle a current project. Love is on the rise, so be open about the way you feel. You can build a stronger, better relationship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may have difficulty deciphering what's actually going on. Don't put yourself in a vulnerable position just to please someone. Face challenges head-on, and you'll be surprised at how well you do.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You won't get away with much at home or in your personal life today. However, if you are a straight shooter and are affectionate, you will turn any negative into a positive. Use your Gemini charm, and you will get what you want, when you want it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Look back at past experiences, and you will find a solution to what you are facing now. Travel or attending a course, seminar, or conference will lead to love, intrigue, and the possibility of a partnership. Opportunities are present if you make a few changes.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Get involved in new activities, interests, and pastimes. Now is the time to cut loose and find your true calling. A little adventure and excitement will boost your spirits and help you build courage.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Focus on what you can do to get ahead. You've got strong opinions and the determination, energy, and creative vision to turn something you think can be profitable into a going concern. A secret affair may tempt you; consider the consequences.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Give yourself a chance to meet new people and experience new activities. You have everything to gain and nothing to lose. Be adventuresome, and before you know it, you'll make new friends and having fun.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep things under wraps. This isn't the time to gossip or meddle in other people's affairs. You'll be the one blamed if you get in the middle of a squabble. Instead, develop a creative idea or talent.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You can make a strategic career move if you tell others what you have to offer. Send out your resumé or talk to people in your industry of choice. No one will know your capabilities if you don't advertise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be careful not to act on hearsay. You can make cash, but only if you do your homework and don't let your emotions get mixed into the equation. Keep your professional, financial, and personal lives separate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may have more to do than you realize. Money is in the picture, so don't be surprised if you find some or someone gives you cash or pays back an old debt. Regardless of how it comes to you, profits are in the stars.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can ride the roller coaster or refuse to play the game. If you stick to what you know and you call things as you see them, you should be able to come out on top. If you let your emotions get involved, expect to meet your match.

ILLUMINATION

Ben Roberts/The Daily Iowan

UI Spanish and Portuguese Associate Professor Denise Filios speaks at the UI Museum of Art on Thursday evening. Her lecture, titled, “Constructing Power: Illuminated Manuscripts in Medieval and Golden Age Spain,” is part of a series of events that coincides with the museum's current exhibit From Monks to Masters: The Medieval Manuscript and the Early Printed Book. It will be on display through Oct. 7.

Once more, unto the rivalry

Hate one, love the other — it's Iowa-Iowa State football, round 55.

By Alex Johnson
THE DAILY IOWAN

Cyclowns, Lames, farm-school, I-S-WHO? — they all sound like music to Iowa football fans' ears. Then another, less-pleasant sound vibrates in the eardrum — the names Bret Meyer, Todd Blythe, and Seneca Wallace. It's as if someone raked the chalkboard with a pointed shovel.

The hate to love, the love to hate — so it is with Iowa-Iowa State. And every year, either school could be headed for a great season, only to have it marred by a mid-September loss to that other Iowa school.

"This rivalry has always been so big that it would really take a lot for it to not be huge, especially for me," Iowa offensive lineman Julian Vandervelde said. "If we didn't play Iowa State, I tell you what, the season wouldn't be half as fun as it is."

This go-round, Kirk Ferentz and the Hawkeyes have more at stake; Iowa's 2-0 and rolling through offensive lines, Iowa State is 0-2, losing to the little brothers of college football.

Historically, the state's biggest rivals have had ways of screwing up otherwise magical seasons.

Any Iowa fan old enough to remember will never forget the Brad Banks-led Orange Bowl Hawkeyes of 2002. The AP Player of the Year engineered a Hawkeye offense that played a major role in the university's winningest football season ever, finishing 11-2.

But there were the Cyclones, led by current Seattle Seahawk Seneca Wallace. Remembered for his ridiculous winding touchdown run against Texas Tech, Wallace and his sensational ability put the lone black mark on the Hawkeyes' regular-season schedule, a Sept. 14 loss in Kinnick Stadium.

In 1977, the Cyclones had what they recognize as their best season ever, finishing 8-4 with an appearance in the Peach Bowl. One of those four losses came at the hands of the dismal Hawkeyes, who finished 5-6 in the midst of a decade of losing.

"Records really don't count when it comes to Iowa-Iowa State," senior defensive end Kenny Iwebema said. "You just throw all the numbers out the window — it's a big game for both of us."

Iowa's scoring defense is tops in the nation at the moment, allowing 1.5 points per game and zero touchdowns. Iowa State lost two home games to

Lindsey Walters/The Daily Iowan

Sophomore tight end Tony Moeaki leaps into the end zone for a Hawkeye touchdown during the third quarter. of Iowa's win over Iowa State last year in Kinnick Stadium on Sept. 16, 2006. Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz is 3-5 against Iowa State in his career.

"This rivalry has always been so big that it would really take a lot for it to not be huge, especially for me. If we didn't play Iowa State, I tell you what, the season wouldn't be half as fun as it is."

— Julian Vandervelde,
Iowa lineman and Davenport native

Kent State and Northern Iowa of the Football Championship Series by a combined score of 47-27.

So, maybe not throw out all the numbers, but Ferentz isn't ready to add one to either side of the 36-18 record Iowa boasts in the series.

"I really think what we've done and what they've done is probably irrelevant," he said. "What happens Saturday is really all that counts. I don't know how to handicap what's happened in the last couple weeks for them or us, how that factors in."

In the last meeting, Dan McCarney led the Cyclones, but the hiring of former Texas defensive coordinator Gene Chizik has given Iowa State a new flavor of defense — similar to the one Iowa saw from the Longhorns in the 2006 Alamo Bowl.

"It's not the whole ball of wax at this point," Ferentz said. "You're seeing the basic skeleton."

One thing's for sure, the Hawkeye secondary is not excited about seeing the Meyer-Blythe combination again. Meyer has hit Blythe's hands 13 times for 191 yards and two touchdowns in three games against Iowa. Now, the pair are juniors with home-crowd advantage, and they are familiar with Iowa's secondary schemes.

"[Blythe is] not only an excellent receiver, he's got great size," Ferentz said. "I guess the good news is maybe we're a little bigger than we've been at corner in years past. But we don't have anybody quite to match up with him just one-on-one that way."

The mismatch in the secondary may still be there, but stopping Meyer may be where the Hawkeyes have redoubled their efforts. Led by the Fab Four on the defensive line, Iowa has recorded eight sacks, rejected two field-goal attempts, and smothered 17 rushes for loss in just two games this season — that kind of pressure could change the way Meyer is able to operate.

"The guys up front are doing a good job," Ferentz said. "They're really working hard and working well."

But even those four defenders aren't taking this matchup for granted.

"Watching film and looking at them on TV and things like that, you could expect a lot more out of them and expect their game to elevate to play with us," defensive tackle Mitch King said. "We know we have to play them harder than we've ever played this year just to be able to beat these guys, because they are a good football team."

It's the love-hate relationship that makes Iowa-Iowa State one of the best rivalries in college sports, two bull-headed brothers, punching each other during family photos.

"They're going to be very aggressive," King said. "We have to be ready to handle it."

THEY SAID WHAT?

“Well, he probably watched the game — he watched our game the last two weeks. If I had watched our games the last two weeks, I might have made the guarantee myself.”

— Notre Dame head coach Charlie Weis, when asked about Michigan running back Mike Hart's guarantee of a victory over the Irish

Iowa-Iowa State matchup marks first trophy game

Of the 15 Big Ten trophy games that are played annually, this weekend's battle between Iowa and Iowa State is the first of the 2007 season. To the winner goes the Cy-Hawk Trophy, which has remained in Iowa City since the Hawkeyes' 27-17 victory over the Cyclones on Sept. 16, 2006. Since the trophy was first awarded in 1977, Iowa has a 20-10 advantage over Iowa State.

Vintage uniforms commemorate magical year for Cyclones

As many Hawkeye fans have heard, the Cyclones will wear vintage uniforms on Saturday to honor the 1977 Peach Bowl team that finished 8-4 overall. Iowa State recorded many key victories three decades ago, including a defining win over then-No. 9 Nebraska in Lincoln, Neb. Lesser known is that one of the four Cyclone losses in 1977 came at Kinnick Stadium, which also marked the first meeting between the in-state rivals since the game was removed from the schedule in 1934. The Hawkeyes won that contest, 12-10, in Iowa City, and they hope to find the same luck against the throwback uniforms this weekend in Ames.

Zero, Zilch, Nada

A stifling defensive performance against Syracuse earned a whole lot of nothing for the Iowa defense, and the number zero carries special significance for the Hawkeyes heading into week three.

The number of first downs earned by the Syracuse offense in the entire first half of its Sept. 8 loss at Kinnick Stadium. The Orange moved backward more commonly than not in the opening 30 minutes, and they did not reach positive rushing yards until the final minute of the second quarter.

The total number of points allowed by the Iowa defense in a 35-0 home victory over Syracuse last weekend. The final score marked the first Iowa shutout since 2005, when the Hawkeyes defeated Ball State, 56-0. Syracuse quarterback Andrew Robinson's struggles played a large role in the dearth of points; the sophomore finished the first half with zero completed passes.

The total number of wins for Iowa State (0-2) in two games this season. The Cyclones are coming off consecutive home losses to Kent State (23-14) and Northern Iowa (24-13), and they enter Saturday's contest with Iowa as the only winless team in the Big 12.

Notre Dame (0-2) at Michigan (0-2)

2:30 p.m., ABC
 Both teams just want to avoid an 0-3 start. Without injured quarterback Chad Henne, expect Michigan to ride All-Big Ten running back Mike Hart, who guaranteed a Wolverine victory on Saturday.

Buffalo (1-1) at No. 12 Penn State (2-0)

11 a.m., Big Ten Network
 Dan Connor continues to prove he belongs in the great linebacker lineage at Penn State. The senior should have no trouble following up his 12-tackle performance against Buffalo on Saturday.

Duke (0-2) at Northwestern (2-0)

7 p.m., Big Ten Network
 Even with starting running back Tyrell Sutton questionable for Saturday's game, expect big numbers from the Wildcat offense. In two losses this season, Duke has given up a combined 69 points.

Pittsburgh (2-0) at Michigan State (2-0)

11 a.m., ESPN
 Outsourcing Alabama-Birmingham and Bowling Green by an impressive 83-35 total, the Big Ten's surprise start has come from the suddenly high-powered Spartan offense.

Illinois (1-1) at Syracuse (0-2)

11 a.m., ESPN
 See: Iowa 35, Syracuse 0. Judging from the Orange's performance last weekend at Kinnick Stadium, head coach Ron Zook and the Illini must be licking their chops heading to the Carrier Dome on Saturday.

No. 10 Ohio State (2-0) at Washington (2-0)

2:30 p.m., ESPN
 A sluggish first half against Akron faded fast, and the Buckeyes now turn their attention to an intriguing matchup with Washington. The Huskies ended Boise State's 14-game winning streak and would love to add a top-10 victory to their résumé.

The Citadel (2-0) at No. 7 Wisconsin (2-0)

11 a.m., Big Ten Network
 The Citadel is coming off a ridiculous 76-0 shutout, but No. 7 Wisconsin will hardly resemble the Bulldogs' opponent in week two — Webber International. A third Badger win would set up a heck of a Big Ten opener against Iowa on Sept. 22.

Central Michigan (1-1) at Purdue (2-0)

11 a.m., ESPN2
 Senior quarterback Curtis Painter's 348-yard, six-touchdown performance against Eastern Illinois earned him Co-Big Ten Player of the Week honors. His encore? A shootout with Central Michigan.

Minnesota (1-1) at Florida Atlantic (1-1)

11 a.m., ESPN360
 Maybe a change of scenery will help Minnesota find consistency. If anything, the Golden Gophers hope for less suspense in week three as they travel to Dolphin Stadium to take on Florida Atlantic.

Akron (1-1) at Indiana (2-0)

1 p.m., Big Ten Network
 Akron showed some early zip in a 20-2 loss to Ohio State, but it needs to make adjustments if it hopes to beat Indiana in Bloomington. The Hoosiers are averaging a cool 46 points per game this season.

A heart as big as a field of dreams

Linebacker Mike Klinkenborg dives for Iowa State QB Bret Meyer to force an incomplete pass during the Iowa's 27-17 win over Iowa State on Sept. 16, 2006. Klinkenborg played in last year's annual intrastate clash despite the death of his father just one week earlier.

By Diane Hendrickson
THE DAILY IOWAN

After last season's Iowa State game, Mike Klinkenborg, with tears streaming down his anguished face, raised the Cy-Hawk Trophy above his head with weary arms. Despite losing his father, Myron, a week before, the linebacker did not sit out of the biggest rivalry game in the state.

Instead, he played in a way that would have made any father proud. With a heart heavier than his 240-pound frame, the Rock Rapids, Iowa, native had eight tackles and assisted the defense in holding the Cyclones to a mere three points in the second half — a tribute to the Hawkeye watching from above.

"I felt like my dad would've wanted me to go out there, and I wanted to be there for those guys as well," Klinkenborg said last month.

The thrill of the double-overtime win against Syracuse — with its unforgettable goal-line stand — quickly evaporated as Klinkenborg learned about Myron's fatal heart attack on Sept. 9, 2006.

Klink returned to practice the day after the funeral, which was attended by a number of players and coaches. Although no one would have faulted him for sitting out the cross-state clash, he helped stifle the Iowa State attack, playing one of his best games in a Hawkeye uniform under the saddest of circumstances. Nationally, he was recognized as the Walter Camp Defensive Player of the Week for his performance.

A year later, facing the Cyclones again, his coaches and teammates still remember his courage.

"You can't imagine going through that," teammate Mitch King said. "I can't, because I've never lost anybody that close. It shows tremendous personal perseverance to go out and do that, to just be there for your teammates in a hard time like that. We thank Mike for doing that because he's a big part of our team. He helps us out, and he helped us win that game."

"We know Mike is a great guy, first of all, and a great football player second. We already knew that he would be that kind of guy to [play against Iowa State], and it just proved it. It just helped us know that he's there for us just as much as we are there for him."

Other defensive teammates agreed his presence in the huddle helped Iowa reclaim the Cy-Hawk trophy after it spent a season in Ames.

"Just having him out there lifted up the whole team," said Iowa safety Devan Moylan. "I think everybody shared his heavy heart and played with him and for him. Having him out there definitely elevated everybody else's game as well."

Iowa head coach Kirk Ferentz can relate to Klink's feelings; he coached the Hawkeyes to a victory over Penn State in 2004 after the death of his own father.

He called his middle linebacker's performance against the Cyclones "inspirational," and he doesn't think the dark anniversary will inhibit Klinkenborg's play this time around.

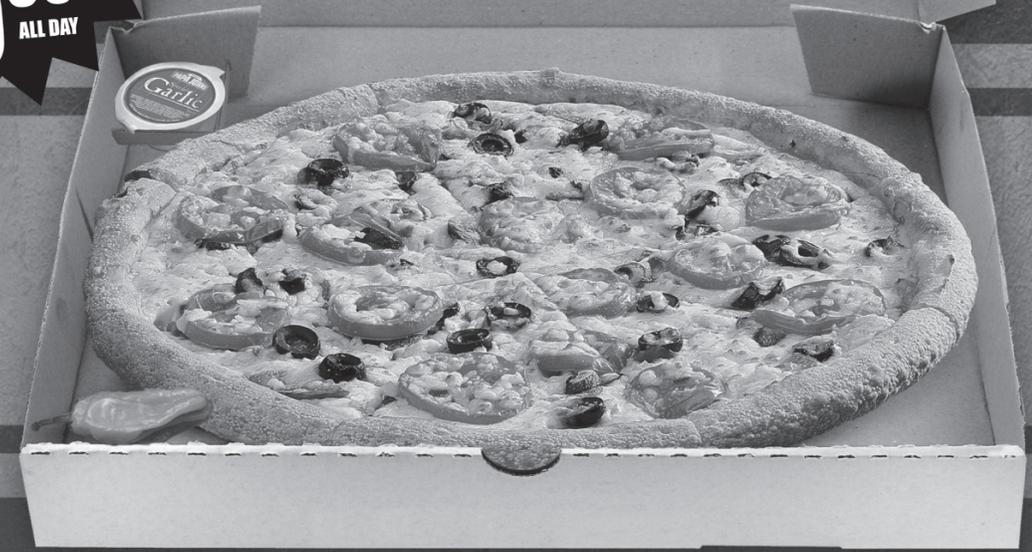

"All you can do when something like that happens is try to continue to live the way your loved one would want you to," Ferentz said. "And I think Mike has done a great job of that."

KRAUSE AMONG GREAT NFL HAWKS

By Brendan Stiles

THE DAILY IOWAN

Notice the Krause Family Plaza outside of Kinnick Stadium.

While it wasn't named in honor of former Hawkeye and Minnesota Viking Paul Krause, he has certainly earned the right to be remembered at the mecca of Iowa football. Krause, who along with Emlen Tunnell, are the only two Hawkeye players in the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio, is arguably one of the best all-around athletes to ever attend the university.

As a Hawkeye, Krause not only played football, he was also a gifted center fielder, as former Iowa football coach Jerry Burns recalled about the Flint, Mich., native.

"He was a very outstanding high-school athlete," Burns said. "He was all-state in football, all-state in basketball, and was a very, very excellent baseball player. He had as much opportunity to go professional in baseball as he did in football."

When Krause played football for the Hawkeyes, he dislocated and separated his shoulder during his junior season, which killed any hopes of a baseball career.

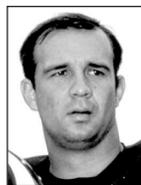

"At that time, they weren't doing the operations on the shoulders that they're doing now in baseball," Krause said. "That ended my baseball career, because I could hit [the ball], but I couldn't throw it."

His senior year, Krause was a co-team captain and played well enough to earn an invitation to the 1964 Senior Bowl, where he was named the game's Most Valuable Player.

His athletic ability got him picked in the second round of the 1964 NFL draft by the Washington Redskins. Right away, Krause made an impact, recording 12 interceptions in 1964 and becoming the first rookie in NFL history to be named All-Pro.

Krause said having played both ways at Iowa made the transition into the NFL easier for him.

"One thing I could recall was that I played defense, and I only played half a game, so I was feeling pretty good," Krause said. "I was never tired or anything, because I was used to playing everything. I was very fortunate. The professional game just came to me."

PAUL KRAUSE started in four Super Bowls for the Vikings and is one of two ex-Hawkeyes enshrined in the PRO FOOTBALL HALL OF FAME.

After four seasons in Washington, Krause was traded in 1968 to the Minnesota Vikings, where he made his ultimate claim to fame. In Minnesota, Krause was reunited with Burns, who joined coach Bud Grant's staff that same year.

During his 12-year stint with the Vikings, Krause started at safety in four Super Bowls. Unfortunately for Krause and the Vikings, Minnesota lost all four contests.

But Krause never looks back and wonders, "What if?" Rather, he is grateful for the chances he had to represent Minnesota on football's biggest stage.

"Whether we won or we lost, they were great experiences," Krause said. "It's a shame that we didn't win at least one of those Super Bowls, because we had teams that were better than a couple of the teams we played. It just didn't happen, but we got there and had those experiences."

After 16 seasons, the eight-time Pro Bowler decided to retire from the NFL, finishing with 81 career interceptions, still an NFL record. Oddly enough, it was Tunnell's record he broke. In 1998, Krause finally made it to Canton, with Burns giving his enshrinement speech.

"When you're in the Hall of Fame, it means you've joined a fraternity of athletes who are basically rated the best of the best," Krause said. "Basically, knowing that I still hold the interception record, I still hold something that no other player has done, and that makes me feel good."

A CLOSER LOOK: ALBERT YOUNG

Healthy for the first time since his breakout sophomore season, Iowa running back Albert Young is discovering new ways to help the offense and having the same luck finding the end zone.

FOCUS

Despite the off-the-field problems that have plagued the Hawkeyes early this season, including the indefinite suspension of starting wide receiver Dominique Douglas, Young keeps his mind far away from distractions and focused on one thing — winning football games. "We just do our job and play," he said. "When you get in that stadium, you've got the crowd, everybody's revved up, and you're not thinking about other things that are going on." And with an injury to sophomore wideout Trey Stross making the depth chart even thinner at receiver, Young will need to keep that steady focus, because he will surely carry a heavier load against Iowa State this week.

HANDS

When it comes to the passing game, Young isn't shy about his ability to catch the ball out of the backfield. "Damian [Sims] and I, we both can catch well," he said. "You're either going to stop us running or receiving. If you want to stack up, linebackers aren't going to be able to cover us man-to-man." A perfect example of that ability came just last week, when Young followed a string of Iowa blockers on a short screen pass before busting down the seam untouched for a 36-yard score. And while Syracuse held the Hawkeyes to under 100 yards rushing a week after Northern Illinois allowed 250, stacking the box surely didn't stop Young from finding the end zone — a situation that could give Iowa State's defense fits come Saturday.

FULL STRENGTH

After a mid-season knee injury kept Young out of two games in 2006 and prevented him from ever really playing at full strength, an outstanding season-opener in 2007 answered any doubts about the senior's health. In the Hawkeyes' 16-3 win against Northern Illinois, Young ran all over Soldier Field and the Huskie defense, totaling 144 yards and a touchdown. "You know you saw him on the field [on Sept. 1], there were very few times last year where he looked like that," Iowa head coach Kirk Ferentz said. "Injuries are tough on everybody, especially a running back when his legs aren't right." Back at 100 percent, it's hard to find anything wrong with the way No. 21 has opened the season.

MEMORY

Traveling back to Ames this week for the first time since 2005, Young knows that the Cyclones' 0-2 record carries little weight in what type of game Iowa can expect this weekend. He was on the field two years at Iowa State, when the then-No. 8 Hawkeyes got down early and fell apart, losing by a final score of 23-3. Young was also on the field last year, when Iowa's exciting 2-0 start finished in a disappointing 6-7 season. "We went 2-6 in the Big Ten last year," said Young, an offensive captain for this week's game. "We're not overlooking anybody for what happened, and nor do we have room for it." "We're not considering that, and I don't really think teams really got us marked off as somebody they need to be worried about."

TOUGHNESS

Perhaps Iowa running-back coach Carl Jackson best described Young's intangibles at the team's media day in early August. "Albert can do it all," Jackson said. "He can run, he can catch, he can block; he's just a tough guy." With sophomore quarterback and first-year starter Jake Christensen lined up under center, Young's toughness and experience certainly haven't hurt the offense this season. If the senior can stay healthy and continue to hang onto the football — his last fumble came week one against Montana in '06 — expect Young's numbers to be among the Big Ten's best at the end of year.

ALBERT YOUNG'S SEASON STATS

Inside Bryan Mattison

This week, the DI speaks with the Iowa defensive end who totaled three sacks last week.

Peter Klopfenstein/The Daily Iowan

Hawkeye defensive end Bryan Mattison sacks Syracuse quarterback Andrew Robinson on Sept. 8 at Kinnick Stadium. Mattison had three sacks and six tackles to lead the Hawkeye defense.

By Brendan Stiles
THE DAILY IOWAN

DI: Describe Bryan Mattison, the football player.

Mattison: I like to have fun out there. I enjoy working hard, I enjoy being part of something bigger than myself, and I enjoy all the guys on the defense. We have fun together.

DI: How about Bryan Mattison, the person away from the field?

Mattison: I'd say I'm relaxed. I like to hang out with my friends, hang out with my girlfriend, or I guess my fiancée now. Just relaxed, I guess.

DI: What's something about you that might surprise people who think they know you well?

Mattison: I own a cow back in Indiana. My fiancée's brother and I bought a cow. They're farmers. It's just a little investment that I have back in Indiana.

DI: Your dad is one of the coaches at Florida, and you got to play against him in the Outback Bowl a couple of years ago. What was that like for you and your family, just knowing that he was on the other side?

Mattison: It was weird. I'm glad I had the opportunity to play against him. I'm not glad that we lost to him, but it was a cool experience. My mom probably is glad that it didn't happen again last year, and she doesn't want it to happen again this year, because she didn't enjoy it very much. I thought it was a cool experience.

DI: What was it like to see your dad be a part of a team that won the national championship last year?

Mattison: It was pretty neat. He had been working a long time in this profession, and it was neat to see him go out and win one. It was real special.

DI: What was the big reason you had for coming to Iowa?

Mattison: It'd be the coaching staff and the type of players who come here.

DI: Where would you rank the game against Syracuse, as far as the ones you have played?

Mattison: I don't know. Somewhere in the middle. There's definitely things that you can do better every week.

DI: I read that you also played rugby in high school. What did you learn from playing rugby that you can bring to the football field?

Mattison: I don't know. A lot of guys play different sports in school, and they take what they can from those sports. I think rugby helped me with tackling and running around. It was fun.

DI: What would you say is your favorite thing about Iowa City?

Mattison: Being on the football team. Saturdays. Our fans are the best. They're with us week in and week out, no matter where we are. I'd say the fans are the best part about Iowa City.

DI: And my last question for you here — what makes being a part of this team special?

Mattison: Just the work that we've put in together. All the time we spend at the complex working, we have fun on Saturdays, and just I guess the teammates and all that.
